umfasst. Und so stellt er seiner Zeit die Aufgabe, die seitdem das Grundproblem alles geschichtlichen Strebens geworden ist: "Universalgeschichte der Bildung der Welt" Politik, Sitten, Kultur, Kunst, Literatur—alles soll in historischen Zusammenhang gebracht und auf diese Weise anschaulich gemacht werden. Und wenn es das Prinzip der Aufklärungshistoriographie gewesen war, Geschichte ausschliesslich vom Standpunkt der Gegenwart zu schreiben, d. h. die Vergangenheit nur als Vorstufe zur Gegenwart zu betrachten, so tritt hier Herder in scharfen Gegensatz zu dieser Einstellung und wird damit zum Vorläufer des eigentlichen Historismus. Deutlich leuchtet das Prinzip geschichtlicher Individualität aus seinen Worten heraus. Herder will jede Zeit und jedes Volk als eine Totalität erfassen und in allen Zweigen verstehen.⁸⁰ Zwar ist der Gedanke, dass das Studium der Geschichte Weissagungen für die Zukunft möglich mache, noch nicht völlig überwunden,⁸¹ aber das ändert nichts an der Tatsache, dass Herder sich in dem Reisejournal dem Geiste moderner Geschichtsschreibung starker genähert hat als irgendeiner seiner Zeitgenossen. Rankes Forderung an den Historiker zu zeigen, wie es eigentlich gewesen, wird von Herder, wenn auch nicht mit absoluter Klarheit, so doch schon deutlich genug ausgesprochen und aufs energischste verfochten.

Die Wendung zum Historismus und die automatisch darin liegende Abkehr von Rousseau lassen es beinahe erwarten, dass Herder sich gegen den Genfer wendet, um die Weite des Abstandes darzutun, die ihn jetzt von diesem trennt.⁸² Der Gedanke, dass Glückseligkeit im negativen oder positiven Sinne von der Entwicklung der Menschheit abhänge, wird von ihm als ein Fehler erkannt, hervorgerufen durch eine historisch nicht zu rechtfertigende Beurteilung eines vergangenen Zeitalters nach dem Massstabe des eigenen:

⁸⁰ Am deutlichsten findet sich das Individualitätsprinzip formuliert IV, 364

⁸¹ IV, 352

⁸² Der Antirousseausmus des Reisejournals ist schon von Otto Braun (Ztschrift f. Philosophie und Phil. Kritik, CXLIV, 178) implizite ausgesprochen worden, indem er Herders Plan einer Universalgeschichte mit "Darstellungen wie Iselins Menschheitsgeschichte" kontrastiert. Gerade in Bezug auf seine Methode hatte sich aber Iselin ganz in den Bahnen Rousseaus bewegt. Eine ältere Darstellung wie die von Charles Joret, Herder et la Renaissance Littéraire en Allemagne (Paris, 1875), S. 324, sieht dagegen in dem Reisejournal gerade einen unwiderleglichen Beweis für die Kontinuität und Dauerhaftigkeit des Einflusses Rousseaus auf Herder. Der Grund für diese Behauptung liegt vor allem in einer Verwechslung allgemeiner antintellektualistischer Tendenzen jener Zeit (Haym genius epidemicus der Zeit) mit Rousseaus Philosophie. Andererseits darf nicht übersehen werden, dass die pädagogischen Ansichten des Reisejournals tatsächlich mit denen Rousseaus stark in Einklang stehen, doch darf dieser Umstand nicht dazu verleiten, Herders "manière de sentir et de penser," wie sie im Reisejournal zum Ausdruck kommt, mit der Rousseaus gleichzusetzen.

. wir, in dem unsrigen, schweifen aus, wenn wir wie Rousseau Zeiten preisen, die nicht mehr sind, und nicht gewesen sind, wenn wir aus diesen zu unserm Missvergnügen, Romanbilder schaffen und uns wegwerfen, um uns nicht selbst zu geniessen⁸³

Dass er mit diesem Angriff auf Rousseau auch gleichzeitig die Methode verurteilt, die er selber in den Fragmenten angewandt hatte, ist evident, aber sie erscheint ihm jetzt als derartig verfehlt, dass er sich kaum genug tun kann in scharfen Aburteilungen. Er beklagt sich über Rousseaus "unausstehliche, immer unerhorte Neuigkeit und Paradoxie," ein Vorwurf, der sich selbstverständlich in erster Linie auf die spekulative Entwicklungsidee des Philosophen bezieht, und fährt dann, in noch schärferem Tone, fort.

So sehr Rousseau gegen die Philosophen ficht, so sieht man doch, dass es auch ihm nicht an Richtigkeit, Gute, Vernunft, Nutzbarkeit seiner Gedanken gelegen ist, sondern an Grosse, Ausserordentlichem, Neuen, Frappanten. Wo er dies finden kann, ist er Sophist und Verteidiger. Was aber opfert nun nicht Rousseau einer Neuigkeit. auf!⁸⁴

Gewiss, niemand hat weniger Recht, diesen Vorwurf gegen Rousseau zu erheben wie Herder, denn Rousseau hatte genau so ehrlich an die Richtigkeit seiner Entwicklungsidee geglaubt wie der Verfasser der Fragmente, hatte jedoch nicht, wie dieser, das Glück gehabt, früh genug auf die Unschlussigkeit seiner Argumentation aufmerksam gemacht zu werden. Rousseau wurde tatsächlich bald genug eines Besseren belehrt, aber sein Ruf als Primitivist war damals schon zu fest begründet, als dass er seine früheren Auffassungen einfach hatte über Bord werfen können, und so war er gezwungen, auf Umwegen, die häufig schief genug waren, seine Fiktionen mit den Tatsachen auszusöhnen,⁸⁵ während Herder, der wenigstens dem grossen Publikum gegenüber durch die Anonymität der Fragmente geschützt war⁸⁶ und ausserdem persönlich noch nicht so bekannt war, von seinen Jugendwerken leichter abrücken und die verfehlten Theorien darin aufgeben konnte. Wenn er sich trotzdem so scharf gegen Rousseau wendet, so ist das nicht zuletzt der Renegat, der seine Sünden vergessen machen mochte.

Herder fand bald genug Gelegenheit, seinen nunmehr gefestigten Standpunkt des Historismus und Antirousseauismus an einem praktischen Problem zu erweisen. Die Berliner Akademie der Wissenschaften hatte einen Preis auf die Beantwortung des Problems des Ursprunges der Sprache gesetzt und hatte damit einen der strittigsten Punkte der Zeit

⁸³ IV, 364

⁸⁴ IV, 425

⁸⁵ Vgl. das Vorwort zu seiner Komödie Narcisse, v, 99 ff.

⁸⁶ Sie wurde durch die Erklärung im Hamburger Correspondenten vom 20. V. 69 endgültig aufgegeben, vgl. IV, 340 f.

aufgegriffen. Auch Herder hatte sich schon seit längerer Zeit dafür interessiert und hatte, wie ein Brief an den Kriegsrat Scheffner in Königsberg vom 31. Oktober 1767 zeigt,⁸⁷ schon in Riga Lust verspürt, "ein paar Worte öffentlich zur Sprachhypothese zu sagen," sodass die Aussetzung des Preises als ein willkommener Anlass kam, auf diese lang gehegten Plane zurückzugreifen und sie zur Ausführung zu bringen. Im Anschluss an das Altertum hatte sich der Streit um den Ursprung der Sprache zunächst um die Frage θέσει oder *φύσει*⁸⁸ gedreht,⁸⁹ doch hatte Hobbes scharfe Zurückweisung der Lehre von der Schöpfung der Sprache durch willkürliche Vereinbarung das Problem etwas verschoben.⁹⁰ wenn die Vertragstheorie auch noch nicht beseitigt war,⁹¹ so ging doch der eigentliche Streit jetzt darum, ob sich die Sprache natürlich aus tierischen Lauten entwickelt habe oder dem Menschen auf Grund göttlicher Verleihung zuteil geworden sei. Beide Theorien finden sich am schärfsten gegenübergestellt in Warburtons Divine Legation of Moses.⁹² Mit der ihm eigenen Liebe für Paradoxe hatte der englische Bischof beide Theorien zugleich vertreten, indem er einerseits den göttlichen Ursprung auf Grund der unumstößlichen Autorität der Heiligen Schrift verteidigte, andererseits aber die Möglichkeit einer natürlichen Entwicklung der Sprache so überzeugend darzustellen versuchte, dass sein darauf folgendes Bekenntnis zur Offenbarung ironisch anmutet und die Lehre vom göttlichen Ursprung eher lächerlich zu machen als zu verteidigen scheint.

Gerade aus diesem Grunde hatte Warburtons Sprachtheorie, die unter dem Titel Essay sur les Hiéroglyphes von dem übrigen Werke getrennt ins Französische übersetzt worden war,⁹³ im Lande der philosophes erhebliches Aufsehen erregt. Den dort vorgetragenen, wenn auch nachträglich abgelehnten Gedanken des natürlichen Ursprunges hatte der Abbé Condillac aufgegriffen und, unter volliger Auslassung der Offenbarung, ausführlich dargestellt.⁹⁴ Als Ursprache nahm er die animalischen Laute an, durch die das Tier seinen Empfindungen Luft macht und sah in den

⁸⁷ Lebensbild, I, 2, 287

⁸⁸ Ueber die Vieldeutigkeit dieser Begriffe in der Terminologie des Altertums vgl. Steintal, Geschichte der Sprachwissenschaft bei den Griechen und Römern (Berlin, 1863)

⁸⁹ Vgl. hierzu und zum Folgenden Theodor Benfey, Geschichte der Sprachwissenschaft und orientalischen Philologie (München, 1869), S. 283 ff.

⁹⁰ Elementorum philosophiae Sectio secunda, c. 10 (Amstelod., 1668)

⁹¹ Im 17. Jahrhundert vor allem Locke in seinem Essay concerning Human Understanding III, chapter 2, wo die Frage allerdings ganz kurz abgetan wird. Nach Benfey (loc. cit.) gehört auch Maupertuis zu den unentwegten Anhängern dieser Theorie.

⁹² London 1738–41, 4 Bände

⁹³ Paris, 1744

⁹⁴ Essai sur l'Origine des Connoissances Humaines, seconde partie, Œuvres complètes (Paris, 1798), I, 257 ff.

Variationen dieser Laute unter verschiedenen Umständen und gleichmassiger Wiederholung dieser Variationen unter gleichen Umständen den Uebergang zur menschlichen Sprache, indem nach seiner Meinung durch die Fixierung dieser Variationen Worte entstehen⁹⁵ Die vollige Unschlüssigkeit dieser Theorie liegt auf der Hand, Condillac übersieht den Unterschied zwischen einem bloss physischen Laut und dem auf Vernunft und Begriffsbildung beruhenden Wort, und gerade dieses vollständige Verkennen des eigentlichen Problems macht Herders hartes Urteil über diese "hohle Erklärung von Entstehung der Sprache" verständlich⁹⁶ Von Condillac hatte Rousseau das Problem übernommen, der es, sagt Herder, "nach seiner Art in Schwung brachte, das ist, bezweifelte." Herder bezieht sich dabei nicht auf Rousseaus erst posthum veröffentlichtes Essai sur l'Origine des Langues, das ihm noch nicht zugänglich sein konnte, sondern auf die kurzen Bemerkungen, die Rousseau in der Inégalité über den Ursprung der Sprache macht⁹⁷ "Le cri de la nature" sei die erste Sprache gewesen, führt Rousseau dort aus, und mit diesem stark an Condillac erinnernden Anfang versucht er ebenfalls, die Entstehung der Sprache zunächst natürlich zu erklären, wird sich aber im Fortgange seiner Untersuchungen der Problematik dieses Unterfangens so bewusst, dass er schliesslich in den Ruf ausbricht:

Quant à moi, effrayé des difficultés qui se multiplient, et convaincu de l'impossibilité presque démontrée que les langues aient pu naître et s'établir par des moyens purement humains, je laisse à qui voudra l'entreprendre la discussion de ce difficile problème . . .⁹⁸

Zweifellos hatte Rousseau ursprünglich nicht die Absicht gehabt, mit diesem Gedanken zu schliessen,⁹⁹ denn mit der Annahme einer direkten Einwirkung Gottes werden seine vorhergehenden Ausführungen im Grunde überflüssig, und das umso mehr, als bei der damaligen Lage der Dinge dieser eine Ausruf genugte, Rousseau als Anhänger der Theorie vom göttlichen Ursprung abzustempeln. Andererseits war Rousseau zu scharfsinnig, die logische Unschlüssigkeit Condillacs zu übersehen, und so blieb ihm schliesslich nichts anderes übrig, als diesen gordischen Knoten zu zerhauen, anstatt ihn zu lösen

Herder wendet sich nun bewusst gegen alle die bisher erwähnten Theorien, gegen Condillac, gegen Rousseau und mit besonderer Heftig-

⁹⁵ Ibid, S 260 ff, 274 f, 362 ff

⁹⁶ v, 20

⁹⁷ Œuvres, I, 94-96

⁹⁸ Ibid, 96

⁹⁹ Ausdrücklich betont Rousseau seine volle Uebereinstimmung mit Condillac, dessen "recherches toutes confirment pleinement mon sentiment," cf I, 91 Im Essai nimmt Rousseau eine ganz natürliche Entwicklung an, jedoch ist es infolge der Unsicherheit der Datierung schwer zu sagen, ob er hier noch oder wieder mit Condillac übereinstimmt Wenn Wundt Rousseau den Anangern der Naturlauttheorie zurechnet, so gibt er damit wohl den Eindruck des modernen Lesers wieder, vgl Volkerpsychologie, Bd I, Teil II, S 593

keit gegen den deutschen Theologen Susmilch, der gerade kurz zuvor die Lehre vom göttlichen Unterricht von neuem verfochten hatte.¹⁰⁰ Der Anfang seiner Preisschrift scheint sich allerdings zuerst durchaus in der französischen Tradition der Aufklärung zu halten, indem er damit anfangt, den Menschen als ein blosses Tier zu betrachten, und ihm auch schon in diesem Zustand Sprache zuschreibt.¹⁰¹ Soweit diese "unmittelbaren Laute der Empfindung" in Betracht kommen, ist die menschliche Sprache ihrem Ursprunge nach in der Tat tierisch, wie Condillac angenommen hatte. Aber,—und das ist der entscheidende Punkt, den Condillac völlig verfehlt hatte, Rousseau nicht erklären konnte,—diese Naturtöne sind "nicht die Hauptfaden der Menschlichen Sprache Sie sind nicht die eigentlichen Wurzeln, aber die Saftte die die Sprache beleben,"¹⁰² und mit Verwunderung fragt Herder, wie Philosophen jemals dem blossen "Geschrei der Empfindung den Ursprung menschlicher Sprache zu erklären" unternahmen. "Alle Thiere bis auf den stummen Fisch tonen ihre Empfindung; desswegen aber hat doch kein Thier, selbst nicht das Vollkommenste, den geringsten, eigentlichen Anfang zu einer Menschlichen Sprache?"¹⁰³

Herder entfernt sich also von Condillacs Theorie an genau derselben Stelle, an der Rousseau seinen Zweifeln Ausdruck gegeben hatte: weder Rousseau noch Herder ist willens, den Uebergang vom blossen Naturlaut zur Sprache als ein natürlich verständliches und erklärliches Phänomen hinzunehmen. Insofern stimmen sie überein, und wenn Herder gerade daraufhinweist, dass das Bezweifeln Rousseaus Verdienst gewesen sei, so darf man vielleicht annehmen, dass diese Uebereinstimmung nicht rein zufälliger Natur gewesen ist: Rousseau hatte Herder auf den schwachsten Punkt der Naturlauttheorie aufmerksam gemacht und ihn somit auf die Notwendigkeit hingewiesen, die Lösung des aufgeworfenen Problems auf andere Weise zu versuchen. In der Art der Lösung gehen aber die Meinungen der beiden Philosophen auseinander, und Herder steht nicht an, tadelnd Rousseaus "Schwung oder Sprung" für die ihm inkonsequent scheinende Lösung des göttlichen Ursprungs verantwortlich zu machen.¹⁰⁴ Seine eigene Lösung hält sich wieder völlig im Rahmen seines Strebens nach geschichtlicher Richtigkeit, das sich gegen Spekulationen jeder Art, religiöser wie philosophischer, wendet und im Reiche der Tatsachen zu bleiben sucht. Mit klarem Ueberblick sondert er in der Lehre vom Ursprung der Sprache die rein spekulativen und die empirisch haltbaren Elemente, verweist die ersteren aus dem Rahmen seiner Untersuchung und kommt auf Grund der Letzteren zu dem einfachen Resultat, dass Mensch und Sprache zusammengehören. Die Sprache ist

¹⁰⁰ Susmilchs Beweis, dass der Ursprung der Menschlichen Sprache göttlich sey (Berlin, 1766). ¹⁰¹ v, 5. ¹⁰² v, 9. ¹⁰³ v, 17 f. ¹⁰⁴ v, 20

dem Menschen "so wesentlich, als—er ein Mensch ist," d h. man kann sich ein Menschengeschlecht ohne Sprache nicht vorstellen. Wesen, die nicht sprechen, sind eben keine Menschen.¹⁰⁵ Was dem Tier sein Instinkt, ist dem Menschen seine Sprache, eine "Naturgabe," die als solche keiner weiteren Erklärung bedarf.¹⁰⁶

Je weiter ein Zeitalter zuruckliegt, umso schwieriger wird es, es in allen seinen Problemen zu verstehen. Die Verteidiger der gottlichen Entstehung der Sprache, allen voran Hamann, sahen in dieser Erklarung Herders eine Art Kampfansage,—fur uns ist es schwierig, den wesentlichen Unterschied zwischen Herders und Rousseaus Erklarung auf den ersten Blick zu erkennen. Rousseau halt die Schopfung der Sprache durch menschliche Mittel fur unmoglich und in der damaligen Terminologie lag in dieser negativen Behauptung automatisch ein positiver Hinweis auf Gott. Herder halt die Sprache fur eine Naturgabe, aber ob man Natur oder Gott sagt, kommt jedenfalls insofern auf dasselbe hinaus, als in beiden Fallen ubermenschliche Krafte am Werke sind, sofern nicht Gott und Natur in diesem Sinne uberhaupt nur verschiedene Namen fur ein und dieselbe Idee sind. Aber so ahnlich diese Theorien heute scheinen, so waren sie aus dem Geiste jener Zeit heraus grundsatzlich verschieden. Rousseau ging auf Grund einer entwicklungsgeschichtlichen Spekulation von einem wilden Urmenschen aus, der zwar schon die Fahigkeiten des wirklichen Menschen besitzt, sie aber noch nicht ausgebildet hat. Den langsamen Uebergang des Naturmenschen zum Gesellschaftsmenschen darzustellen, stiess im allgemeinen auf keine erheblichen Schwierigkeiten; gerade bei der Behandlung der Sprachentwicklung fuhrten diese Spekulationen jedoch in eine Sackgasse, aus der es nur einen Ausweg gab: die Zuhilfenahme eines gottlichen Eingreifens. In dem Schema der Rousseauschen Entwicklung kann dieses Eingreifen nur so vorgestellt werden, dass Gott zu einem gewissen Zeitpunkt die Weiterentwicklung gesellschaftlicher Verhältnisse, die durch das Fehlen eines geistigen Bandes zwischen den Menschen gefahrdet war, durch die Verleihung der Sprache ermoglichte. Dieser wenig befriedigenden Lehre von dem gottlichen Unterricht, wie sie Rousseau andeutungsweise, Susmilch ausfuhrlich vortragen hatte, ging Herder aus dem Wege, indem er die ganze Idee des spekulativen Naturmenschen abschnitt. An Stelle der tierischen Instinkte und Sinne hat der Mensch eine andere Eigenschaft die Herder zur Vermeidung von Missverständnissen gewöhnlich Besonnenheit, zuweilen aber mit dem üblichen Namen Vernunft nennt, und, so fährt er fort, „ist nemlich die Vernunft keine abgetheilte, einwirkende Kraft, sondern eine seiner Gattung eigne Richtung aller Kräfte: so muss der Mensch sie im ersten Zustande haben, da er Mensch ist“¹⁰⁷ Der Mensch hat Sprache, weil er Vernunft hat,—wie Steinthal es treffend formuliert: „cogito ergo loquor“,¹⁰⁸—und da die Vernunft das entscheidende Wesensmerkmal des Menschen ist, so ist auch Sprache eine unwegdenkbare Eigenschaft des Menschen. Rousseaus Vorstellung, dass der Urmensch blosser Vernunftfähigkeit (réflexion en puissance) gehabt habe, jedoch keine ausgebildete Vernunft, wird von Herder als in sich widerspruchsvoll verworfen.¹⁰⁹ Nur wirklichkeitsferne Theorien können zu der Annahme eines Menschen ohne Vernunft und Sprache führen, wer sich im Rahmen der Tatsachen hält, weiss, dass jedes menschliche Wesen, sei es so primitiv wie es wolle, Vernunft und Sprache hat. Und so kommt Herder zu den Kernsätzen seiner Schrift:

¹⁰⁵ v, 27.

¹⁰⁶ Herder hatte ahnliche Gedanken schon in der zweiten Auflage der Fragmente entwickelt, wo sich auch schon die Polemik gegen Susmilch findet. F. Lauchert (Euphron, I, 758) weist auf Mendelssohns Kritik an den Ausfuhrungen Rousseaus in dem Sendschreiben an den Herrn Magister Lessing in Leipzig hin, das dessen Uebersetzung der Inégalité begleitete. Mendelssohn betont dort, "dass alles natürlich hat zugehen können."

Der Mensch in den Zustand von Besonnenheit gesetzt, der ihm eigen ist, und diese Besonnenheit zum erstenmal frei wirkend, hat Sprache erfunden. . . Erfindung der Sprache ist ihm also so natürlich, als er ein Mensch ist.¹¹⁰

Trotz ihrer gemeinsamen Gegnerschaft gegen die Anhänger der Naturalisttheorie stehen sich also Herder und Rousseau in ihrer Erklärung des Ursprungs der Sprache diametral gegenüber. Das geht an sich aus Herders Ausführungen deutlich genug hervor; aber als ob er befürchtete, jemand möchte seine prinzipielle Gegnerschaft zu Rousseau übersehen, so geht er ausdrücklich auf dessen Schrift ein und legt ihre Fehler dar: „Ein Ding, ohne das er nicht Mensch war, und doch ein Zustand, da er Mensch war, und das Ding nicht hatte, das also da war, ehe es da war, sich aussern musste, ehe es sich aussern konnte u. s. w. —alle diese Widersprüche sind offenbar, wenn Mensch, Vernunft, und Sprache für das Wirkliche genommen werden, was sie sind, und das Gespenst vom Wort „Fähigkeit“ in seinem Unsinn entlarvt wird.“¹¹¹ Dieser Angriff richtet sich zwar zunächst gegen Susmilchs Schrift, doch wird gleich darauf betont, dass derselbe Vorwurf auch Rousseaus Lehre trifft. Seine Hypothese „von Ungleichheit der Menschen“ ist auf „Fälle der Abartung“ gebaut, wie sein „Phantom, der Naturmensch“ überhaupt ein „entartetes Geschöpf“ ist, „das er auf der einen Seite mit der Vernunftfähigkeit abspesiet, . . . auf der andern mit der Perfectibilität und zwar mit ihr als Charaktereigenschaft, und zwar mit ihr in so hohem Grade belehnet, dass er dadurch von allen Thiergattungen lernen könne.“¹¹² Mit voller ¹⁰⁷ v, 31¹⁰⁸ Vgl. H. Steinthal, Ursprung der Sprache (Berlin, 1888), S. 65.¹⁰⁹ v, 32¹¹⁰ v, 34¹¹¹ v, 42.¹¹² v, 44.

Absicht sind daher die abschliessenden Sätze der Schrift einer nochmaligen Betonung dieses grundsätzlichen Unterschiedes zwischen Herder und den Aufklärungsphilosophen, insbesondere Condillac und Rousseau gewidmet. Herder hebt es hier nochmals ausdrücklicly hervor, dass er nicht vielen Hypothesen eine neue habe hinzufügen wollen, denn "wie pflegt man, was die Form einer Hypothese hat, zu betrachten, als wie Philosophischen Roman?" Sein Streben hat wirklicher philosophischer Wahrheit gegolten und deswegen hat er sich beflissen, "veste Data aus der Menschlichen Seele, der Menschlichen Organisation, dem Bau aller alten und wilden Sprachen, und der ganzen Haushaltung des menschlichen Geschlechts zu sammeln."¹¹³ Diese anhaltende Bezugnahme auf Rousseau und die Betonung der wesentlichen Unterschiede von ihm erwecken den Eindruck, als ob die Preisschrift bewusst als eine Schrift gegen Rousseau abgefasst worden sei. Es kann kein Zufall sein, dass in dieser Schrift der Name Rousseau wieder und wieder genannt wird, dass Rousseaus Theorien eingehenden Prüfungen unterzogen werden: offensichtlich ist es Herder darum zu tun, seinen Lesern den prinzipiellen Gegensatz zu Rousseau mit aller nur möglichen Deutlichkeit vor Augen zu führen. Gerade unter diesen Umständen darf man aber nicht übersehen, dass eine Abhängigkeit auch dann vorliegen kann, wenn ein Denker, statt die Ideen eines anderen Denkers zu übernehmen, sich ihnen bewusst entgegenstellt. In der geistigen Entwicklung sind Zustimmung und Widerspruch identische Grossen mit umgekehrten Vorzeichen, und in diesem Sinne ist der Einfluss Rousseaus vielleicht starker in der Preisschrift, wo sich Herder mit ihm auseinandersetzt und ihm auf Grund nachhaltiger Ueberlegungen entgegentritt, als in den Fragmenten, wo er sich seinem Meister ohne eigene Prüfung anschliesst. Herders Wendung zum historischen und empirischen Denken darf in dieser Bedeutung des Wortes als eine unmittelbare Einwirkung Rousseaus angesehen werden, wobei es eine müssige Spekulation bleibt, ob dieser Uebergang sich auch ohne Rousseau hatte vollziehen können.

Es versteht sich von selbst, dass der Gegensatz zu Rousseau und dessen Art der Betrachtung der Vergangenheit mit Herders Interesse am Ursprünglichen und Primitiven nicht in Konflikt steht. Herder hat auch zu jener Zeit wie überhaupt sein ganzes Leben hindurch einen gewissen Hang zum Primitivismus bewahrt; aber während sich dieser Hang zuerst in den von Rousseau gewiesenen Bahnen bewegt hatte, hat jetzt die Rousseau entgegengesetzte Seite in Herders Wesen, sein echtes Interesse an der Vergangenheit, die Oberhand gewonnen, sodass an die Stelle des Grübelns, wie die Dinge gewesen sein müssen, ein wissenschaftliches Interesse an der Geschichte alter Völker und ein ästhetisches Wohlgefallen an ihren Dichtungen tritt. Diese Einstellung macht Herder in seinem Briefwechsel über Ossian und die Lieder alter Völker besonders deutlich, in dem er so enthusiastische Worte für primitive Kunst findet:

¹¹³ v, 147.

Sie lachen über meinen Enthusiasmus für die Wilden beinahe so, wie Voltaire über Rousseau. Glauben Sie nicht, dass ich deswegen unsre sittlichen und gesitteten Vorzüge, worinn es auch sey, verachte. Das Menschliche Geschlecht ist zu einem Fortgange von Szenen, von Bildung, von Sitten bestimmt: wehe dem Menschen, dem die Scene missfällt, in der er auftreten, handeln und sich verleben soll! Wehe aber auch dem Philosophen über Menschheit und Sitten, dem Seine Scene die Einzige ist, und der die Erste immer, auch als die Schlechteste verkennet!¹¹⁴

Die Erwähnung Rousseaus geschieht zwar in diesem Absatz nur wie nebenbei und scheinbar zufällig, doch dürfen wir ruhig annehmen, dass Herder bei der Niederschrift dieser Worte in erster Linie an Rousseau gedacht hat, denn wen anders meint er mit dem Menschen, dem die Szene misfällt, in der er auftreten soll? Herder selber enthält sich jedes Urteils über Zeitalter als solche und beschränkt sich darauf, als unvoreingenommener Betrachter die Jahrhunderte zu studieren, ohne Vergleichen nach mehr oder weniger subjektiven, stets willkürlichen Massstäben vorzunehmen. Dieselbe Haltung kommt auch deutlich in Herders kleineren Schriften zum Ausdruck, insbesondere in den verschiedenen Rezensionen aus jener Zeit. Sie es, dass Herder in den Frankfurter Gelehrten Anzeigen sich über Michaelis beschwert, der "alles nur immer im Geiste unsres Jahrhunderts behandelt, dem guten Moses politische Maximen geliehen, die selbst bei uns doch nur oft loci communes sind, und jenem Volk, jener Zeit, jenem Gesetzgeber wahrhaftig fremde waren,"¹¹⁵ sei es, dass er Sulzer in der Allgemeinen Deutschen Bibliothek ungenügende Berücksichtigung der Geschichte bei der Aufstellung seiner Allgemeinen Theorie der Schönen Künste vorwirft,¹¹⁶ Herders Motiv ist immer dasselbe, es ist die Einsicht in die Bedeutung unvoreingenommener Geschichtsschreibung, die ihm jetzt aufgegangen ist. Und so tragen alle Werke aus dem Ende der Rigaer Zeit und der Reisezeit den gemeinsamen Stempel der Neigung zum echten Historismus, eine Tendenz, die bei Herder nicht über das Stadium eines blossen Programmes wesentlich herausgekommen ist, aber auch als solches von grösster Bedeutung bleibt.

III RÜCKKEHR ZU ROUSSEAU: DIE ÄLTESTE URKUNDE

Die Konsequenz, mit der Herder diese historistischen Gedanken wieder und wieder vertritt, erweckt leicht den fälschlichen Eindruck, dass Herder sich zu einer gefestigten Weltanschauung durchgerungen hat, und wenn es auch bekannt ist, dass dies nicht der Fall ist, so ist man doch ¹¹⁴ v, 168.

¹¹⁵ v, 425.

¹¹⁶ v, 380 f.

häufig geneigt, in der Folgezeit eine grossere Stetigkeit in seinen Anschauungen vorauszusetzen. Gerade aus diesem Grunde findet man häufig die Meinung vertreten, dass Herder nunmehr auch gegenüber Rousseau zu einem abschliessenden Urteil gekommen sei, und diese Meinung muss dadurch umso mehr an Bedeutung gewinnen, als sie auch von einer Autorität vom Range Hayms geteilt wird¹¹⁷ Haym nimmt an, dass Herder dem Bürger von Genf gegenüber eine mehr oder weniger gleichmassige Haltung eingenommen habe, nachdem sich seine erste Begeisterung abgekühlt hatte¹¹⁸ Er beschreibt diese Haltung nicht als eine direkte Gegnerschaft, sondern als eine Art kritischer Zurückhaltung, auf Grund deren Herder allerdings meistens zu einem negativen Urteil kommt, ohne deswegen Rousseaus grosse Verdienste zu übersehen Der Biograph bemüht sich, die grundsätzliche geistige Unabhängigkeit Herders von Rousseau darzutun und fasst seine Meinung schliesslich in den Worten zusammen: "Auch der spätere Herder ist sich in diesem, Lob und Tadel so sicher verteilenden Urteil über Rousseau stets gleich geblieben"¹¹⁹ Nun ist es zwar zweifellos richtig, dass Herder niemals wieder für Rousseau geschwärmt hat, wie er es einst in seiner Jugend getan hat, aber es darf andererseits auch nicht übersehen werden, dass die Einstellung des Verfassers der Ältesten Urkunde und der Geschichtsphilosophie vom Jahre 1774 erheblich von der des Verfassers der Preisschrift und des Reisejournals abweicht Deutlich zeigen sich in den beiden Werken aus der Buckeburger Zeit Gedanken, die unverkennbar an Rousseau anklingen Zwar wird der Name Rousseaus in jenen Schriften nur selten erwähnt, doch finden wir ihn dafür umso häufiger in den Briefen aus der Zeit, die der Abfassung dieser Werke unmittelbar vorangeht, insbesondere in dem Briefwechsel mit Caroline.

Schon in einem Briefe aus der Strassburger Zeit vom 12. September 1770 taucht der Name Rousseau zum ersten Male in der Korrespondenz des jungen Liebespaares auf.¹²⁰ Zwar ist diese erste Erwähnung, die nur in einem kurzen Hinweis Herders auf die Nouvelle Héloïse besteht, verhältnismässig unbedeutend, da sich keine weiteren Konsequenzen an diese Bemerkung knüpfen und eine Verweisung auf diesen Roman jedem jungen Liebespaare nahe liegen dürfte, das sich auf brieflichen Gedankenaustausch beschränken muss. Umso wichtiger sind aber dafür die wiederholten Erwähnungen Rousseaus, die im Frühjahr 1771 folgen, denn sie

¹¹⁷ Haym, I, 341 ff

¹¹⁸ Ähnlich auch Theodor Genthe, Der Kulturbegriff bei Herder (Jena, 1902), S. 14, nach dem Herder "dem ihm zeitlich nahe stehenden Rousseau gegenüber wegen dessen völlig unhistorischer Denkweise mehr und mehr eine ablehnende Haltung einnahm."

¹¹⁹ Haym, I, 343.

¹²⁰ Briefwechsel mit Caroline Flachland, Teil I und II, in Schriften der Goethe-Gesellschaft, Bd. 39 und 41 (Weimar 1926 und 1928), Teil I, S. 41.

sind so häufig und so ausführlich, dass sich aus ihnen ein klarer Einblick in Herders geistige Stellung gewinnen lässt. Auf der Reise von Darmstadt nach Buckeburg wirft Herder "einige Blicke in den Rousseau,"¹²¹ und spätere Briefe zeigen uns, dass er diese Lektüre fortgesetzt hat.¹²² Welche Werke des Genfers Herder in dieser Zeit wieder gelesen hat, lässt sich nicht mit volliger Bestimmtheit sagen. Mitt nur zwei Ausnahmen bezieht er sich in diesen Briefen an Caroline aus dem Jahre 1771 stetes auf den Emile,¹²³ sodass man zunächst annehmen mochte, dass seine "Blicke in den Rousseau" hauptsächlich diesem Werke gegolten haben, jedoch heisst es später in einem Briefe vom 27. und 28. August 1771,¹²⁴ dass er an seinem Geburtstage, d. h. also am 25. August, den Emile neu angefangen habe.¹²⁵ Die erwähnten "Blicke in den Rousseau" aus dem Frühjahr desselben Jahres durften damit also offenbar keine richtige Lektüre des Emile bedeuten, sondern weisen eher auf ein Herumblättern in Rousseaus Werken im allgemeinen hin, unter denen ihm der Emile für Caroline besonders interessant erschien. Man darf es aber als sicher unterstellen, dass Herder, der selber so stark mit dem Entwicklungsgedanken beschäftigt war, die Schriften Rousseaus, die auf diesen Bezug haben, nicht übergangen hat.

Die häufige Erwähnung Rousseaus in den Briefen der Liebenden beruht auf dem Wunsche Herders, Caroline mit den Werken und Gedanken des Genfers vertraut zu machen. Auf Herders Veranlassung lernt sie französisch, nur um Rousseau im Original lesen zu können,¹²⁶ und tatsächlich ist das Resultat ihrer Lektüre durchschlagend, erwähnt sie doch scherzend, dass sie im Hause ihres Schwagers "die ganze Zeit über Rousseau gepredigt" habe, sodass sie schliesslich sogar den Geheimrat Hesse dazu bewegt, den Emile zu lesen.¹²⁷ Ihre Begeisterung für Rousseau kennt keine Grenzen¹²⁸ und der Eindruck, den Rousseau auf sie gemacht hat, wird am deutlichsten aus ihren Erinnerungen offenbar, aus denen sich ergibt, dass ihr die Zeit vor und unmittelbar nach ihrer Heirat völlig im Lichte Rousseaus erscheint.¹²⁹ Gerade wie Herder in seiner Jugend, so schwärmt jetzt Caroline für Rousseau, und Herder, der sich gerade noch

¹²¹ Ibid., 177 ¹²² Ibid., 293.

¹²³ Ibid., 207 und 281, vgl. dazu die Anm. auf S. 467

¹²⁴ Ibid., 293.

¹²⁵ Richard Fester, Rousseau und die deutsche Geschichtsphilosophie (Stuttgart, 1890), S. 51, schliesst aus diesem Brief, dass Herder jetzt den Emile zum ersten Male genau liest—eine Annahme, die in dem Text des Briefes keine Begründung findet. Herder betont ausdrücklich, dass es sich um eine erneute Lektüre handelt.

¹²⁶ Briefwechsel mit Caroline, I, 273

¹²⁷ Ibid.

¹²⁸ Am schärfersten ist der Brief vom 12. August 71: "... für Rousseau thue ich alles, mir ist er ein Heiliger, ein Prophet, den ich anbete", vgl. Briefwechsel, I, 285.

¹²⁹ Caroline Herder, Erinnerungen aus dem Leben J. G. Herders, ed. J. G. Müller (Tübingen, 1820), I, 236.

so ablehnend über Rousseau, über dessen Eitelkeit und dessen Neigung zu Paradoxen ausgesprochen hatte, nennt Caroline sein "braves Mädchen," weil sie "im Rousseau so wacker fortliebt."¹³⁰ Auch Herders Urteil über Rousseau hat sich erheblich geändert, der Beredsamkeit des Genfers zollt er jetzt das höchste Lob, und wenn Herder sich auch darüber klar ist, dass dem Philosophen zuweilen "Vorurtheile und Gewohnheit den Blick Einseitig machen," so bleibt für Herder stets "der Prediger der Menschheit sichtbar," der, wie Herder fortfährt, "durch jedes Lob geschmaht" wird: "Wir müssen ihn nicht loben, sondern thun."¹³¹ "A man in the theory, a child in the practice of life," so heisst es in einem Brief an Merck,¹³² in dem Herder seinem Freunde eine ausführliche englische Charakteristik Rousseaus mitteilt, und mit diesen Worten wird ja gerade Rousseau als Philosoph besonders anerkannt, eine erstaunliche Tatsache, wenn man bedenkt, dass Herder noch vor kurzem gerade von dem Philosophen nicht weit genug abrücken konnte.

Sicherlich, der Verfasser des Reisejournals und der Preisschrift hatte so nicht gedacht, und trotz der gegenteiligen Ansicht Hayms werden wir nicht umhin können, einen ganz unverkennbaren Wandel in Herders Urteil festzustellen. Diese Erkenntnis führt nun auf das Problem hin, aus dessen Lösung allein die Beziehungen Herders zu Rousseau in den folgenden Jahren verstanden werden können. Wie fand Herder den Weg zu Rousseau zurück; was bewirkt den nochmaligen Umschwung, der aus dem ausgesprochenen Gegner und heftigen Kritiker wieder einen Freund und Anhänger macht? Um diese Kernfrage zu beantworten, bedarf es zunächst einer kurzen Erörterung des grossen Wandels in Herders Anschauungen im allgemeinen, der in den ersten Buckeburger Jahren stattgefunden und sich wohl schon vorher angebahnt hat. Herder hatte bisher auf fernem Boden der aufklärerischen Theologie gestanden und hatte in der Religion nur ein Mittel zur Beförderung menschlicher Glückseligkeit gesehen. Der Wolffsche Begriff der Religion als complimentum moralitatis war auch in seinen Ideen dominierend gewesen. In Buckeburg tritt hier ein entscheidender Umschwung ein: glaubiges Christentum und mystische Auffassung der Religion werden Herders Ideal, während er für die rationale Religion der Aufklärung sowie für deren freigeistige Tendenzen bald nur noch Schimpf und Spott hat, selbst wenn sie sich in so feiner Form vorgetragen finden wie bei Spalding. Was war die Ursache dieser plötzlichen Aenderung, die mit dem Wandel in Herders Haltung zu Rousseau zeitlich übereinstimmt und daher wohl in irgendeiner Form mit ihr in Verbindung stehen muss?

¹³⁰ Briefwechsel mit Caroline, I, 293.

¹³¹ Ibid., 297.

¹³² Lebensbild, III, 1, 323.

Der erste bedeutsame Umschwung in Herders geistiger Entwicklung, der aus dem spekulierenden Aufklärer einen beobachtenden Historiker und Empiriker machte, war zum grossen Teil durch aussere Ereignisse veranlasst worden: Die Kritik an den romanhaften Teilen seiner Fragmente hatte ihn zur Besinnung gebracht und dadurch die Annäherung an den Historismus eingeleitet. Auch bei der jetzt einsetzenden Aufgabe des historischen zugunsten des religiösen Weltbildes sind aussere Einwirkungen deutlich erkennbar, und zwar war es diesmal vor allem Hamann, der den seiner Meinung nach abtrünnigen Schuler und Freund auf diese Bahn lenkte. Die Kontroverse, die sich im Anschluss an die Schrift über den Ursprung der Sprache zwischen ihm und Herder entwickelte, ist so häufig dargestellt worden, dass sich eine Wiederholung an dieser Stelle erubrigt.¹³³ Nur darauf sei in diesem Zusammenhang nochmals hingewiesen, dass Hamann Herders Gedanken zweifellos keiner objektiven Würdigung unterzogen hatte. Die Ablehnung der "höheren Hypothese" hatte den Magus so aufgebracht, dass er den grossen Unterschied zwischen Herders Auffassung und den üblichen Theorien der Aufklärung nach dem Muster Condillacs völlig verkannte. Herder hatte im Grunde nicht den Ursprung der Sprache erklärt, sondern nur darauf hingewiesen, dass ein Wesen ohne Sprache kein Mensch sei und dass Sprache einfach als das entscheidende Charakteristikum des Menschen angesehen werden müsse. Die Sätze, mit denen Hamann Des Ritters Rosenkreuz letzte Willensmeinung über den göttlichen und menschlichen Ursprung der Sprache zusammenfasst, stehen demgemäss mit Herders Theorie durchaus nicht in Widerspruch; wenn Hamann sagt: "ganz göttlich . . . und ganz natürlich,"¹³⁴ so ist das völlig mit Herder zu vereinbaren, denn dieser fuhrte zwar die Sprache auf die Besonnenheit des Menschen zurück, ohne jedoch den Ursprung dieser Eigenschaft zu erklären. Dass für einen gläubigen Christen diese Eigenschaft genauso wie jede andere als eine Gabe Gottes gelten muss, versteht sich von selbst, verweist doch Herder selber auf das nicht wegdenkbare Walten einer Vorsehung in den ersten Momenten der Entwicklung des Menschengeschlechts.¹³⁵

Herder war sich über diese prinzipielle Ähnlichkeit seines Standpunktes mit dem des Magus durchaus im Reinen, wie Haym aus seiner Korrespondenz mit Nicolai nachweist,¹³⁶ jedoch wagte er es mit der ihm eigenen Flexibilität seines Charakters nicht, diese Tatsache Hamann selber vor Augen zu führen, vermutlich, um dessen nicht ganz ungefahr-

¹³³ Vgl. Haym, I, 494 ff.; Unger, Hamanns Sprachtheorie (München, 1905), S. 164.

¹³⁴ Vgl. Hamanns Werke, IV, 33 f.

¹³⁵ Die grundsätzliche Übereinstimmung zwischen Hamann und Herder wird besonders von Carl Siegel betont, vgl. Herder als Philosoph (Stuttgart und Berlin, 1907).

¹³⁶ Haym, I, 496.

lichen Aerger nicht noch mehr zu reizen Stattdessen kommt Herder Hamann gegenüber zu einem volligen "pater peccavi" und schwört seine "ketzerischen" Absichten ab Er entschuldigt sich damit, "dass die Leibniz-Aesthetische Hülle ja die einzige Masque war, unter der ich erscheinen konnte," und versichert seinem Freunde, dass er in der von ihm gerade bearbeiteten Schrift, der Ältesten Urkunde, "gerade das Gegentheil" beweisen wolle¹³⁷ So wenig Herder sich über seine Sprachtheorie Vorwürfe zu machen hatte, so wenig hatte er den Mut, sie gegenüber Hamann zu verteidigen, eine eigenartige Tatsache, für die Haym die beste Erklärung gegeben hat: "Er (Herder) fühlte kaum von Weitem die Einwirkung des Letzteren, so zog ihm dieser Magnet starker und starker, zog ihn von dem anderen Pole ab und mit unwiderstehlicher Gewalt zu sich hin"¹³⁸ Und diese magnetische Kraft erstreckt sich nicht nur auf den eigentlichen Gegenstand des Streites, die Sprachtheorie, sondern geht schnell darüber hinaus und wird zu einer volligen Reform an Haupt und Gliedern Auf diese Weise vollzieht sich der radikale Umschwung zu der mystischen Idee eines zwar unbegreiflichen, aber jedenfalls aktiv wirkenden und waltenden Gottes, wie er den Vorstellungen Hamanns entsprach. Mit der ihm eigenen Neigung, von Extrem zu Extrem zu gehen, vertritt Herder jetzt diesen mystischen Gesichtspunkt mit ausserster Scharfe. Die Ideen seiner Preisschrift verleugnet er vollständig, nicht nur Hamann gegenüber, sondern überhaupt. "Was hülfs, wenn die Materie auch noch so aufgeklärt wäre, die Art der Aufklärung verdunkelt mich," so schreibt er sogar an Nicolai, den konsequentesten Vertreter der Aufklärung und enthusiastischen Anhänger seiner Preisschrift¹³⁹ Lavater, der ihm seine Aussichten in die Ewigkeit übersendet, spendet er Lob für die guten Absichten die er mit diesem Werk verfolgt, aber der in Ausführung stört ihn "ein gewisser kalter, nervenloser Ton", Lavater sei zuweilen "nicht mehr Seher, Schauer göttlicher Geheimnisse, sondern willkürlicher Baumeister eigner, oft sehr subalternen, unwesentlichen und kleinen Ideen"¹⁴⁰ Selbst Lavater scheint jetzt Herder zu rationalistisch!

So tiefgreifend dieser Umschwung aber auch ist, er kann als solcher Herders neue Stellungnahme zu Rousseau nicht erklären, dessen Entwicklungsgedanke gerade aus dem Geiste des Rationalismus entsprungen war. Der Schlüssel zu dieser Wendung liegt in einem Briefe, den Herder im Jahre 1768, also noch in Riga, an Hamann schreibt, als ihn zum ersten Mal die Gedanken beschäftigten, die späterhin in der Ältesten Urkunde ihren Niederschlag gefunden haben. Die entscheidenden Absätze dieses

¹³⁷ Brief vom 11. Aug. 72, Briefe an Hamann, S. 65.

¹³⁸ Haym, I, 496

¹³⁹ Von und An Herder Ungedruckte Briefe aus Herders Nachlass, ed. H. Duntzer und Ferd. G. Herder (Leipzig 1861), I, 328

¹⁴⁰ Aus Herders Nachlass, ed. H. Duntzer und Ferd. G. Herder (Frankfurt/M., 1857), II, 12.

Briefes sind wichtig genug, um an dieser Stelle vollständig wiedergegeben zu werden:

In der Reihe unsrer Betrachtungen über die sich aus einander wickelnde Zustände der Menschen finden wir nirgends so sehr eine Lucke, als wie wurden wir aus einem Geschopf Gottes, das, was wir jetzt sind, ein Geschopf der Menschen? Da unser jetzige Zustand doch wahrhaftig nicht der ursprüngliche seyn kann, wie ward er? wie ward das Uebel der Welt?—Sie wissen, was unsre Handwerksphilosophen für weise Sätze annehmen, wie es aus der Natur der Menschen hat entstehen können, und nach der Natur Gottes hat entstehen dorfen? Der eine setzt das Uebel der Welt da—der andre dorthin, nachdem ihn der Schuh drückte und so sann er auch drauf, seinen Wahn, wie er ihn ansah, pro positu corporis sui zu erklären —Rousseau hat hierinn das Verdienst, wenigstens den allgemeinsten Zustand der Menschen, des Menschlichen Uebels, und der Menschlichen Glückseligkeit zu nehmen, vermuthlich weil dieser unglückliche Lehrer der Menschen, der weiseste des Pöbels unsrer Zeit das Uebel und die Menschheit am rechten Ort hat kennen lernen. Allein da selbst seine Anbeter nicht laugnen können, dass er seine Wahrheiten und Wahrscheinlichkeiten nur immer in das schiefe Licht der paradoxen Sätze stellet so ist es mir, selbst da ich noch ein so eifriger Rousseauianer war, nicht gelungen, den Mittelknoten in ihm aufgelöst zu finden “wie ward es, dass der Mensch aus dem Zustande der Natur in das jetzige Uebel der Welt überging? wenn in seiner Natur der verschlossene Schatz von Fähigkeiten, von Neigungen u s w lag, der zu seiner Glückseligkeit verschlossen bleiben musste, warum gab ihm Gott diesen Keim des Irrsals? wie keimte derselbe auf?” Ich erinnere mich, einmal Kant, den grossen Schüler des Rousseau hierüber befragt zu haben, er antwortete aber, wie Onkel Tobias Shandy—

Am besten wäre es, wenn wir hierüber eine Art von Urkunde, von alter Urkunde hatten? und wenn diese mehr als Menschliche Meinungen enthielte, noch besser?—Aber vermuthlich wird sie Orientalisch seyn, da sich der erste Zustand der Menschen wahrscheinlich nach Orient hinschiebt.—Also auch im Orientalischen Styl vielleicht? nach Orientalischer Denkart? Und da wir vorzüglich von Juden solche Urkunden haben—sehen Sie da mein drittes Kapitel aus dem so genannten ersten Buch Mos —Unsre Dogmatiken schimpfen auf die Allegorien über dasselbe von Origenes zu Beverland sie haben Ursache, allein sie allegorisiren ja dasselbe noch mehr—und dazu ziemlich Metaphysische, Nordisch kalte, Dogmatische Allegorien—z E Schlange, Prüfungsbaum für die obern und untern Kräfte der Seele, nackt seyn, Stimme Gottes, die Strafe, der Weibessaamen—es können keine fremdere Allegorien gefunden werden, als man, über eine—alte—orientalische—Poetische, Judische—Urkunde der Nation—anbringt, und unter dogmatischen Schleier, mit verrenktem Genick, verhüllt —¹⁴¹

Als Herder diesen Brief schrieb, befand er sich auf dem Höhepunkte jener Periode seiner Entwicklung, die wir als die des ausgesprochenen Antirousseauismus gekennzeichnet hatten. Diese Haltung spiegelt sich in den angeführten Sätzen deutlich wieder: der Vorwurf der paradoxen

¹⁴¹ Briefe an Hamann, S 40 f

Satze taucht wieder auf, und ausserdem fehlt der Hinweis nicht, dass die Zeit, da Herder selbst Rousseauianer war, der Vergangenheit angehört. So weit steht der Brief mit Herders sonstigen Aeusserungen über Rousseau aus jener Zeit völlig in Einklang, enthält aber andererseits ein Lob, das als neu erscheint: Rousseau hat das Verdienst, ein Problem deutlicher formuliert zu haben, als es andere vermocht haben, und wenn er auch nicht imstande war, dieses Problem zu lösen, so muss doch schon die klare Formulierung dieses Problems als solche anerkannt werden. Dieses Problem ist, in Herders Worten, der Uebergang des Menschen von dem Zustande eines Geschöpfes Gottes zu dem eines Geschöpfes der Menschen, oder, wie es in der Sprache Rousseaus lautet, vom Zustande des état de nature zum état civil. So deutlich Rousseau diesen Uebergang aber auch dargelegt hat, so glücklich er Anfang und Ende dieses Prozesses beschrieben hat, die Ursache dieser Degeneration hat er nicht entdecken können. Herder behauptet nun, sich der Lösung dieses Problems auf der Spur zu finden: sofern sie überhaupt gefunden werden kann, muss sie sich aus der alten orientalischen Urkunde, der Bibel, ergeben. Und das ist die Quintessenz dieses Briefes: die Bibel enthält den Schlüssel zu Rousseau. Rousseau hat es vermocht, das Schloss zu schmieden, aber nicht, es mit einem Schlüssel zu versehen. Nicht der Philosoph ist imstande, die letzten Rätsel zu lösen, sondern die Heilige Schrift, die nach Herder im dritten Kapitel der Genesis eine eindeutige Antwort auf die Frage des Verderbens des Menschengeschlechts erteilt.

Was den Leser dieses Briefes zunächst überrascht, ist die scheinbar innige Religiosität, die in tiefer Skepsis gegen menschliches Wissen auf das einzige Werk verweist, das, wie hier Herder entsprechend der christlichen Glaubenslehre annimmt, "mehr als menschliche Meinungen" enthält. Und ebenso eigenartig mutet auch Herders in diesem Schreiben deutlich zum Ausdruck kommende Anerkennung der bonté naturelle an, gleichgültig ob dieser Begriff philosophischen oder biblischen Ursprungs ist. Der Brief stammt aus dem Jahre 1768, dem Jahre der Arbeit an den Kritischen Waldern, stammt also aus einer Zeit, in dem Herders historisches Interesse gerade seinen Gipfel erreicht hatte. Es scheint unter diesen Umständen kaum glaublich, dass Herder zur gleichen Zeit Ideen gehegt haben soll, die mit dieser seiner so energisch vertretenen historischen Weltanschauung und noch viel mehr mit seinem freigeistigen, deistisch gefärbten Christentum in einem derartigen krassen Konflikt standen. Tatsächlich halt die Religiosität dieses Briefes näherer Prüfung nicht stand, denn Herder ist in Wirklichkeit weit davon entfernt, die Bibel als eine uberirdische Offenbarung anzusehen. Sie ist nach seinen eigenen Worten eine "alte—orientalische—Poetische,—Judische—Urkunde der Nation"; in anderen Worten, die Bibel ist nicht das Wort

Gottes, sondern ein national gebundener Mythos, den Herder mit dem griechischen Nationalmythos Homers in Parallele stellt, wie die Zusammenstellung von Moses und Homer in einer anderen Stelle desselben Briefes anzudeuten scheint.¹⁴² In dem Augenblick aber, in dem die Bibel als ein Mythos erkannt wird, fällt ihr überirdischer Charakter weg, sie wird stattdessen Menschenwerk, sie wird Dichtung, Fiktion, und dies gilt umso mehr, als Herder hier keinen Versuch macht, wie in früheren Schriften zwischen menschlich-poetischer Form und gottlich-religiösem Inhalt zu scheiden,¹⁴³—geht es ihm doch, wie die folgenden Ausführungen zeigen, gerade darum, den Inhalt dieses Mythos zu erklären, d. h. aus dem Geiste der alten Juden heraus verständlich zu machen.¹⁴⁴ Mit dieser Charakterisierung der Bibel verschwindet aber die religiöse Problemstellung völlig; an ihre Stelle tritt ein rein geschichtliches, bzw. mythologisches Problem. Wenn Herder in diesem Briefe ganz bewusst den Anschein erweckt, als ob er sich dem Problem als gläubiger Christ näherte, so ist das eine Einkleidung, die am besten aus der Person des Adressaten zu erklären ist, doch wird die Natur von Herders Gedanken dadurch nicht geändert. Was Herder tatsächlich in dem Briefe programmatisch ausführt, ist nicht eine Erklärung Rousseaus durch die Bibel, wie man auf den ersten Blick annehmen mochte, sondern der Bibel durch Rousseau. Die Ähnlichkeit zwischen biblischem und Rousseauschem Primitivismus muss Herder damals in aller Deutlichkeit aufgegangen sein, und die Erkenntnis dieser Parallele gibt dem Historiker einen deutlicheren Einblick in das Wesen jener alten Urkunde. Gerade die wiederholten Angriffe auf Beverland zeigen Herders eigentliche Absicht: er will genau so wie dieser den biblischen Gedanken der Erbsünde erklären; nur dass er zum Unterschiede von ihm nicht eine rationale Interpretation des Bibeltextes, sondern eine mythologische Erklärung der Legende beabsichtigt. Beverlands Behandlung des Problems hatte in vieler Beziehung Gedanken Rousseaus vorausgenommen, wie z. B. seine abschliessenden Worte in dem Kapitel über die Geschichte der Erbsünde zeigen:

On voit par cette histoire du péché originel, que l'homme avoit été créé pur, chaste, et humble; exempt de toutes les passions, et cependant capable d'être attent de toutes les passions.¹⁴⁵

Klingt diese Stelle beinahe, als ob man Rousseau selber sprechen hörte, so zieht Herder die Konsequenz aus dieser Parallele: Die alte jüdische

¹⁴² Ibid., S. 43

¹⁴³ In seiner damals unveröffentlichten Schrift Versuch einer Geschichte der lyrischen Dichtkunst, Lebensbild, I, 3, I, 98 ff., bzw. Suphan, XXXII, 95

¹⁴⁴ Vgl. Briefe an Hamann, S. 41 Z. 15 bis S. 43 Z. 31

¹⁴⁵ Adriaan Beverland; de peccato originale; hier zitiert in der französischen Uebersetzung von Fontenai (Paris, 1714), betitelt. Etat de l'homme dans le Peché originel.

Dichtung hat die Degeneration der Menschen, bzw. den Sündenfall überzeugender und befriedigender dargetan, als Rousseau es vermocht hat, und diese Tatsache zu beweisen, ist die Aufgabe, die sich Herder in dem Brief an Hamann stellt. Das Lob, das Herder Rousseau in diesem Schreiben spendet, verkehrt sich damit fast in Tadel, indem dem Guten jetzt das Bessere zur Seite gestellt und der von Rousseau unbefriedigte Leser auf die Bibel verwiesen wird, sodass auch hier wieder Herders Antirousseauismus zum Ausdruck kommt. Wenn der Genfer trotzdem verhaltenismässig glimpflich davongekommt, so liegt das daran, dass Herder, ein zweiter Beverland, wie ihn Hamann in ihrer letzten Unterredung geheissen hat,¹⁴⁶ glaubt, Gedanken Rousseaus zu einer seiner Zeit fasslicheren Verdeutlichung der Heiligen Schrift verwerten zu können.

Was in dem Brief an Hamann nur durch sorgfältige Interpretation klar wird, liegt in Herders fragmentarischem Entwurf, betitelt Das Lied von der Schöpfung der Dinge klar zu Tage,¹⁴⁷ das mit dem Brief zeitlich ungefähr übereinstimmt. Die religiöse Einkleidung ist hier völlig verschwunden, stattdessen ist die historische Betrachtungsweise streng durchgeführt. Zum ersten Mal taucht hier der Gedanke auf, dass die erste Genesis (I-II, 3) ein Lied zur Heilighaltung des Sabbats ist, ein Gedanke, dem später in der Ältesten Urkunde besondere Bedeutung zuteil wurde. An die Besprechung der zweiten Genesis (II, 4-25) schliesst sich eine ausführliche Besprechung des 3. Kapitels, das mit dem Sündenfall eines der Herder besonders interessierenden Punkte behandelt. "Eine Urkunde von dem Ursprunge der Muhseligkeiten des Lebens" nennt es Herder und er kennzeichnet es als "den Zweck des ganzen Liedes: den Ursprung der menschlichen Bedürfnisse und veränderten Lebensart zu erklären: Aus Eden und Gartenleben in Ackerbau, Sorge, Sklaverei, Tod." Eine kurze Besprechung der Sintflut und des Turmbaus zu Babel bringt das "Lied" zum Abschluss. So dürftig die Bemerkungen sind, so lassen sie doch Herders Absichten deutlich hervortreten. Es geht ihm um zwei Dinge: er will erstens die Bibel von einem rein historischen Standpunkt aus als einen alten Mythos erklären, indem er auf die zeitgebundene Bedeutung der in ihr zum Ausdruck gelangenden Auffassungen aufmerksam macht, indem er sie aus dem Leben und der Ideenwelt ihrer Schöpfer erklärt, und er will zweitens ihren bislang nicht genügend beachteten poetischen Wert, ihre literarische Schönheit, dem modernen Leser vor Augen führen. Wie sich dieses Streben unmittelbar aus den Fragmenten entwickelt hat, ist von Haym dargestellt worden;¹⁴⁸ wichtig ist in diesem Zusammenhange nur, dass von dem Rousseauismus der Fragmente nichts übrig geblieben ist. Herder arbeitet hier ganz im Geiste der übrigen Erforscher des hebräischen Altertums, im Geiste des ¹⁴⁶ Briefe an Hamann, S. 39 f.¹⁴⁷ xxxii, 163 ff.¹⁴⁸ Haym I, 276 f.

“judischen Montesquieu”¹⁴⁹ Michaelis, im Geiste des Philologen Ernesti und des grossen Kirchenhistorikers Semler. Hatte man bisher die Bibel infolge ihrer religiösen Bedeutung auch nur vom religiösen Standpunkt aus betrachtet, so ist es die Absicht dieser Leute, unbeschadet des göttlichen Gehaltes der Schrift sie zunächst als ein menschliches Werk zu erfassen und es als solches gegen seinen geschichtlichen Hintergrund zu halten, statt es als eine einmalige, überirdische Offenbarung nur in volliger Isolierung zu sehen. Dass diese historische Tendenz mit Rousseau nichts zu tun hat, bedurfte an sich keiner besonderen Betonung, wenn nicht der zitierte Brief an Hamann eine solche Beziehung anzudeuten schiene. Dass diese Beziehung aber zunächst—es sollte sich später ändern,—nur in der Erkenntnis der Gleichheit der Problemstellung beruht, war schon zuvor auseinandergesetzt worden, die Methoden sind diametral entgegengesetzt.

Grundsätzlich dasselbe trifft auch auf die Fragmente zur Archaologie des Morgenlandes aus dem Jahre 1769 zu, in denen die dürftigen Skizzen des Schöpfungsgliedes eine erste, allerdings immer noch unvollständige Ausarbeitung erfahren.

Das ganze Stück ist offenbar nichts als Gedicht, Morgenlandisches Gedicht, was ganz auf den sinnlichen Anschein, auf die Meinungen des Nationalglaubens, so gar auf durchaus falsche Meinungen, auf Irrthümer der Vorstellungsarten des Volks, auf Blendwerke der Einbildungskraft und des Nationalgefühls baute. . . .¹⁵⁰

so heisst es dort und an diese Charakteristik knüpft sich die Mahnung: Jede gesunde Kritik in der ganzen Welt sagt, dass um ein Stück der Litteratur zu verstehen, und auszulegen, man sich in den Geist seines Verfassers, seines Publikums, seiner Nation und wenigstens in den Geist dieses seines Stücks setzen müsse und die Hermenevtik der Christen sagt ebenfalls!¹⁵¹

Der rein historische Charakter der Problems ist also wieder deutlich ausgesprochen, doch wird in der Archaologie zum ersten Mal die Bedeutung Rousseaus im Rahmen dieser ihrem Wesen nach geschichtlichen Abhandlung praktisch dargetan, indem Herder eine poetische Interpretation der ersten Genesis vornimmt. Im Sinne der Bibel wie Rousseaus sieht er den Urmenschen des Paradieses als ein Tier unter Tieren in einem Zustande, der von Herder nicht direkt glücklich genannt wird, aber infolge des pathetischen, sehnsuchtsvollen Tones der Schilderung als solcher erscheint.¹⁵² Auch zuckt hier schon in einer wieder stark an Rousseau gemahnenden Formulierung der Verfallsgedanke auf, indem Herder ganz nebenbei das Ende dieses Zusammenlebens mit den Tieren mit den Worten einleitet: "Endlich, da sich Alles verdarb . . ." ¹⁵³ Deutlich steht dieses erste Alter mit dem âge d'or in Parallele, wie es Rousseau in der Inégalité beschreibt. Diese Rousseausche Terminologie farbt sogar gelegentlich auch auf den historischen Teil der Archäologie ab, so z.B., wenn er gelegentlich auf die Zeit der Schöpfung der ältesten Urkunde als die der "Kindheit der Welt" Bezug nimmt, ¹⁵⁴ doch ist der Ausdruck in diesem Werk noch nicht so zu verstehen, dass eine kontinuierliche Entwicklungsreihe von dem in der Bibel beschriebenen zu dem die Bibel schreibenden Menschenalter angenommen wird. Im Jahre 1769 macht Herder noch eine scharfe Scheidung zwischen Geschichte und Dichtung, und da Rousseau ausschliesslich zur Verdeutlichung der Dichtung herangezogen wird, ohne auf die im Vordergrund stehenden historischen Ausführungen Einfluss zu haben, so ist seine Bedeutung noch verhältnismässig gering. Immerhin zeigt sich an dieser Stelle deutlich der Weg, auf dem sich ein engerer Anschluss an den Philosophen von Genf vollziehen sollte.

¹⁴⁹ So hatte sich Michaelis in seiner Einleitung zum Mosaischen Recht selbst genannt, vgl. ibid., S. 60. ¹⁵⁰ VI, 32 ¹⁵¹ VI, 34 ¹⁵² VI, 26.

Die Vorarbeiten zur Ältesten Urkunde in Verbindung mit dem erwähnten Brief an Hamann lassen also deutlich die Motive erkennen, die in Herder wieder ein grösseres Interesse an Rousseau erweckten und den grossen Antagonisten der unhistorischen Entwicklungstheorie gegen diese Lehrer toleranter stimmten. Hatte Herder in der Zeit nach der Veröffentlichung der Fragmente erkannt, dass Rousseaus Methode historisch nicht haltbar war, so zeigt ihm die Bibel, dass der Primitivismus trotz seiner geschichtlichen Fehlerhaftigkeit einen gewissen Wert haben müsse und sich mit einer Darlegung seiner mangelhaften Begründung vom wissenschaftlich-kritischen Standpunkt nicht abtun lasse. Der Gedanke des Primitivismus und der Entwicklung nach metaphysischen Prinzipien ist keine Erfindung des 18. Jahrhunderts, wie Herder zunächst angenommen zu haben scheint, sondern eine Vorstellung, die seit der ältesten Zeit wieder und wieder zum Ausdruck gebracht worden ist. Handelte es sich nur um eine einmalige philosophische Spekulation, so wurde sie den Historiker kaum interessieren, das ständige Wiederauftauchen dieses Gedankens notigt jedoch auch dem rein geschichtlich eingestellten Menschen Interesse ab und führt ihn zu der Frage, was diesem Gedanken solche Bedeutung gibt. Herders Antwort auf diese Frage liegt offenbar in dem Hinweis auf den Mythos: Die Vorstellung, dass die Welt nicht immer so verdorben war, dass es einst eine bessere Zeit, ein âge d'or, ein Paradies gegeben habe, ist zutiefst im Charakter des Menschen verwurzelt und aussert sich daher wieder und wieder, trotz völliger Unbeweisbarkeit, oder genauer, trotz der Beweisbarkeit des Gegenteils. Der Paradiestraum ist einer jener ewigen Träume der

¹⁵³ VI, 25.¹⁵⁴ VI, 49.

Menschheit, jener Traume, aus denen alle Mythen geboren werden ¹⁵⁵ Rousseau hatte diesem Mythos eine moderne Form gegeben, er hatte ihn seiner Zeit schmackhaft gemacht, und wenn sich der Historiker auch in erster Linie für den alten Mythos interessiert, so bleibt für ihn doch auch dessen modernisierte Form wertvoll, da sie auf die alte Legende Licht wirft. Wenn Herder um das Jahr 1770 herum anfangt, wieder ein so deutliches Interesse für Rousseau zu bekunden, wenn er ihn selber wieder liest und ihn auch seiner Braut nicht genug empfehlen kann, so ist diese Annäherung zweifellos ein unmittelbares Resultat der Erkenntnis, dass Rousseaus Mythos in seinem Kern mit dem der Genesis identisch ist, und das erklärt die eigenartige Tatsache, dass gerade die Heilige Schrift, bzw. deren literaturgeschichtliche Behandlung Herder zu Rousseau zurückführt. Von einem wirklichen Anschluss an Rousseau kann in diesem Stadium allerdings noch keine Rede sein, denn noch ist Herder Historiker und bedient sich Rousseaus nur als eines Mittels, die Bibel in eine dem modernen Menschen gelaufene Terminologie zu übertragen und dadurch Verständnis dafür zu erwecken, was sie ihren ursprünglichen Lesern, dem Publikum, für das sie geschrieben war, bedeutet hatte. Es dürfte daher auch kein reiner Zufall sein, dass Rousseau nur zwei Male in diesen Vorarbeiten zur Ältesten Urkunde erwähnt wird und dass eine dieser Erwähnungen in der Form eines Widerspruches gehalten ist, während die andere nur ein unbedeutendes Zitat darstellt ¹⁵⁶ Zwar hat der Widerspruch an sich nicht viel zu bedeuten, denn er richtet sich nur gegen den berühmten einleitenden Satz des Emile, ohne sich gegen die Entwicklungstheorie als solche zu wenden, doch will Herder mit dieser aburteilenden Erwähnung Rousseaus offenbar ausdrücklich betonen, dass er trotz gewisser Übereinstimmungen ein kritischer Leser des Philosophen sei, mit offenem Blick für dessen Fehler. Diese reservierte Haltung verschwindet erst in der endgültigen Fassung der Ältesten Urkunde, und dieser Wandel ist eine natürliche Folge von Herders Übergang zum mystischen Christentum. Die Bibel ist für Herder als glaubigen Theologen keine bloße Dichtung mehr, sie ist nicht mehr Fiktion, sondern Wahrheit, und daraus ergibt sich eine neue Anwendung des Entwicklungsgedankens als notwendige Konsequenz.

Mehr als alle sonstigen Schriften Herders weist gerade die Älteste Urkunde den Charakter der Überganges, und dementsprechend Uneinheitlichkeit und Fehlen einer geschlossenen Darstellung auf. Haym hat es mit der wünschenswerten Klarheit dargelegt, wie sich in dieser eigenartigen Schrift, die selbst Hamann ein "monstrum horrendum" nannte, die verschiedenartigsten Elemente, Rationalismus, Historismus und Religiosität, aufs sonderlichste mischen ¹⁵⁷ Der historische Standpunkt der Archaologie ist in der Ältesten Urkunde nicht völlig aufgegeben: der Gedanke der "ältesten Urkunde" als solcher bleibt geschichtlich und in diesem Sinne weist Herder wieder darauf hin, dass die Bibel ein morgenländisches Märchen sei und nur als solches verstanden werden könne. Im Gegensatz zur Archaologie wird diese geschichtlich-wissenschaftliche Methode jedoch nicht konsequent durchgeführt, sondern muss häufig mystisch-religiösen Vorstellungen weichen, und wenn das der Fall ist, so wird die Bibel zu einer von Gott gegebenen Offenbarung, deren überirdischen Charakter Herder betont, eine Auffassung, die er schon 1768 Hamann gegenüber angedeutet ("mehr als menschliche Meinungen"), jedoch aus der tatsächlichen Ausführung herausgehalten hatte. In der Archaologie ist die Bibel nichts als ein historisches Dokument, das nur historisch verstanden werden kann, in der Ältesten Urkunde hat sie zuweilen denselben Charakter, erscheint jedoch meistens als Ausfluss übermenschlicher Weisheit, die sich als solche nicht in einen historischen Zusammenhang fügen lässt. Herder, als christlicher Theologe, versucht, aus jener einmaligen göttlichen Offenbarung Nutzenanwendungen zu ziehen, und damit wird aus dem historischen Denkmal, in dem er ursprünglich nur den Schlüssel zu den "origines" der Menschheit suchte, ein Buch mit unmittelbarem Wert für die Gegenwart, und in der Ältesten Urkunde bemüht sich Herder, gerade diesen unhistorischen Gegenwartswert der Heiligen Schrift darzulegen. Lag in der Archaologie der Hauptton auf den historischen Anmerkungen über die Bibel, so tritt jetzt die Auslegung der Bibel in den Vordergrund ¹⁵⁸ Nun hatten wir schon bei den Vorarbeiten zur Ältesten Urkunde festgestellt, dass Rousseaus Bedeutung sich auf den interpretativen Teil beschränkt, dort allerdings auch deutlich wahrnehmbar ist, während er keinen Einfluss auf die eigentlichen historischen Auseinandersetzungen hat. Indem der interpretative Teil in der Ältesten Urkunde auf Kosten des historischen in den Vordergrund rückt, so nimmt auch die Bedeutung Rousseaus erheblich zu. So unhaltbar Rousseaus Gedanken vom historischen Standpunkt waren, vom theologischen waren sie es zweifellos nicht, denn die grundsätzliche Übereinstimmung der biblischen mit der Rousseauschen Entwicklungsidee musste zu einer unwiderleglichen Rechtfertigung der letzteren führen, sobald die erstere als göttlich sanktioniert und somit über jede Kritik und jeden Zweifel erhaben anerkannt wurde.

¹⁵⁵ Auf diese mythenbildenden Traume hatte Herder in der 2. Auflage der Fragmente verwiesen, er spricht dort von den "Kosmogonien, die sich jedes Volk ertraumt"; II, 61.

¹⁵⁶ VI, 152 und 163. An ersterer Stelle findet sich der Widerspruch.

¹⁵⁷ Haym, I, 552 ff

¹⁵⁸ Vgl. über diesen Unterschied zwischen Archaologie und Ältester Urkunde Fritz Strich, Die Mythologie in der deutschen Literatur (Halle, 1910), I, 116 f. Strich weist darauf hin, dass die mythologische Einstellung der Archaologie in der Ältesten Urkunde aufgegeben ist.

Hatte sich die erneute Annäherung Herders gerade während der Arbeiten und zu einem erheblichen Teil gerade infolge der Arbeiten an der Aeltesten Urkunde vollzogen, so ist jedoch der tatsächliche Einfluss Rousseaus auf die endgültige Fassung geringer, als man erwarten mochte, allerdings aus einem rein ausserlichen Grunde. Die älteste Urkunde beschränkt sich in ihrer endgültigen Fassung auf das erste Kapitel der Genesis und damit kam der Hauptanlass zur Erörterung entwicklungsgeschichtlicher Fragen in Wegfall. Das Werk beschränkt sich in erster Linie auf religiöse und religionsgeschichtliche Probleme, während die in den Vorarbeiten angedeutete Entwicklung des Menschengeschlechts in ein anderes Werk, die Geschichtsphilosophie von 74 verwiesen wird, wo ihr eine nähere Ausgestaltung zuteil wird. Gerade die Tatsache, dass trotz dieser Scheidung entwicklungsgeschichtliche Ideen auch in der Aeltesten Urkunde noch eine bedeutsame Rolle spielen, dass ihnen ein nicht unerheblicher Teil des Werkes gewidmet ist, zeigt, was für einen starken Einfluss diese Ideen wieder auf Herder gewonnen hatten. Man hat diese Zunahme der Bedeutung Rousseaus unter Hinweis darauf in Frage gestellt, dass das Schema Uroffenbarung-Entartung, wie es sich in der Aeltesten Urkunde abzeichnet, zwar als "ein Erzeugnis Rousseauscher kulturkritischer Stimmung" begriffen werden könne, dass jedoch in Wirklichkeit das religiöse Element überwiege und somit der Einfluss Rousseaus nur gering angeschlagen werden dürfe.¹⁵⁹ Zweifellos stimmt das insofern, als das Problem als solches religiös ist, aber die Art der Behandlung entstammt dem Geiste Rousseaus. Bibel und Rousseau schlossen sich nicht aus, sondern ergänzen sich in diesem Werk. Zwei Faktoren, dieselben, auf Grund deren wir schon den Einfluss Rousseaus auf die Fragmente hatten feststellen können, dürfen auch hier wieder als Beweis dafür herangezogen werden, dass Herder an seiner schon in dem Brief an Hamann dargelegten Absicht, die Bibel mit Hilfe Rousseauscher Gedanken zu interpretieren, nichts geändert hat, und diese beiden Faktoren sind erstens die Analogie der Entwicklung einer Gruppe, hier des Menschengeschlechts, zum menschlichen Leben, d. h. der vegetative Entwicklungsgedanke, und zweitens die Verwendung des Entwicklungsgedankens zu einer scharfen Anklage der Gegenwart.

Von dem "lebenden, wirkenden Naturmenschen" geht Herder bei der Behandlung der Schöpfung des Menschen aus und zögert nicht, dieses Alter als ein wahres age d'or darzustellen. "Wie mehrere Weisheit! Macht! Gottheit!" findet man in jener Zeit, in der, nach den Worten des Autors, die Ausbildung des Menschen noch von Gott selbst vorgenommen wurde.¹⁶⁰ In dieser unmittelbaren Ausbildung durch Gott scheint

¹⁵⁹ Martin Doerne, Die Religion in Herders Geschichtsphilosophie (Leipzig, 1927), S. 28.

¹⁶⁰ VI, 267 f

nun allerdings eine erhebliche Abweichung von dem Rousseauschen Gedanken der natürlichen Entwicklung zu liegen, doch ist das tatsächlich nicht der Fall, da Herder sich nur einer metaphorischen Redewendung bedient, die stark irreführend ist und wohl auch sein soll. Die "Lehrmethode Gottes" ist, wie wir anschliessend belehrt werden, durchaus natürlich: die Morgenrote ist die "sanfte Lehrerin," die "den Hymnus der Schöpfung, Offenbarung Gottes" in dem von Herder gefeierten "täglchen Morgengesang" beschreibt, und zwar so deutlich, dass Herder in die rhetorische Frage ausbricht:

. . . wem kann er unverständlich bleiben? wer ihn hören und vergessen? wer sein mude werden und vor ihm erblinden?—liebliche, Menschliche, ewige Lehre des Schöpfers . . . ¹⁶¹

"Ein Menschengeschlecht in seiner Kindheit" wird nicht "durch Schlüsse und Abstraktionen," sondern "allein durch Gegenwart und Kraft" belehrt und Gott tut dies, indem er dem unmundigen Menschen die Welt in ihrer Gegenwartigkeit und dem Widerspiel ihrer Kräfte vor Augen führt.¹⁶² Uebersetzt man diese Ausführungen in eine weniger mystische Sprache, so bedeuten sie nur, dass der Urmensch aus unmittelbarer Beobachtung zu lernen und sich zu bilden anfangt, ohne abstrakte Gedanken zu brauchen oder auch nur zu verstehen, und gerade in dieser Beziehung schliesst sich der Urmensch Herders ganz an den Rousseaus an, denn auch Rousseau hatte ja gerade die Priorität des Gefühls vor der Vernunft im âge d'or wieder und wieder betont. Herders Lehrmethode Gottes und Rousseaus Lehrmethode der Natur sind also identisch.

Auf die Kindheit der Menschheit folgt "der Erste furchtsame und muhsame Schritt des menschlichen Geschlechts zur burgerlichen Weisheit, zur Ordnung und Einrichtung der Gesellschaft, zur Kultur!"¹⁶³ Zwar wird auch dieser Wandel mit der Gottheit in Verbindung gebracht, doch vollzieht er sich wieder in natürlichen Bahnen, indem Herder allein auf die Bedeutung der Religion bei der ersten Einrichtung der Gesellschaft verweist.¹⁶⁴ Ueber diesen Punkt wird die Geschichte der Entwicklung nicht hinausgeführt, doch machen es die fortgesetzten Angriffe auf spätere Zeitalter klar, in welcher Richtung sich Herder das Fortschreiten dieser Entwicklung denkt. Rechtfertigte der eben zitierte Satz mit seinem Ausblick auf die entstehende Kultur einen gewissen Optimismus, so belehrt uns Herder bald eines anderen, denn er kann sich nicht genug tun in abfälligen Bemerkungen über das Zeitalter der Zivilisation. Das von der Bibel beschriebene glückliche Zeitalter liegt, wie er sagt,

. . . vor der Klagezeit des Tagelohnerdienstes, des Despotismus späterer Gesell-

¹⁶¹ VI, 267 f.¹⁶² VI, 269¹⁶³ VI, 282 f.¹⁶⁴ VI, 282

schaften und Reiche, vor den verfallnen Religionen, der verdorbenern Moral, dem Zustande und Geschmack der Tragheit, der immer schon eine entnervte, niedergedruckte Seele, so wie einen erschlafften Körper und durch gewaltsame Bande hartangezogene Glieder der Gesellschaft anzeigt, vor alle dieser Holle der Tragheit, in die wir jetzt Orient hineinmalen, lange vorher¹⁶⁵

Er hasst die "burgerliche Weisheit" seiner "politischökonomischen Zeiten," die wir "Kultur nennen und oft vielleicht am besten Frohndienst genannt werden konnte,"¹⁶⁶ er klagt über die allgemeine Neigung zu Abstraktionen, zum vernunftmassigen Zergliedern, zur philosophischen Betrachtung aller Dinge, durch die sich die Menschheit weiter und weiter von der gottgewollten reinen Beobachtung der Naturmenschen entfernt:

Jemehr wir uns durch Abstraktion schwachen, Sinne absondern und vertheilen, mit Erinnerungen und Vernunftgeschäfte unser ganzes Gefühl in kleine Faden auflösen, die nichts mehr ganz und rein fühlen—natürlich muss damit, dieser grosse Sinn "Gottes, des Allgegenwärtigen in der Welt" geschwacht und gestumpft werden¹⁶⁷ so warnt er seine Zeitgenossen, und diese Warnung ist identisch mit der Rousseaus, der ebenfalls die sogenannte Kultur, die Künste und Wissenschaften, für das Uebel in der Welt verantwortlich gemacht hatte. Wie einst in den Fragmenten, so ist auch in der Ältesten Urkunde der eigentliche Zweck des Entwicklungsgedankens in der Polemik enthalten, die sich an ihn knüpft. Verdammung, bzw. Warnung der Gegenwart, wird immer stärker sein letztes Ziel in dieser Schrift, während die Erschliessung der Vergangenheit mehr und mehr zurücktritt. So wird die Älteste Urkunde in ihrer Tendenz wieder den Fragmenten ähnlich und gleicht somit auch Rousseaus Inégalité. Dass mit dieser Verdammung der Gegenwart die Vorstellung, dass Gott die Entwicklung des Menschengeschlechts, wenn auch nicht direkt leite, so doch wenigstens in einer bestimmten Form geplant habe, völlig zerstört wird, ergibt sich von selbst, denn auch die Gegenwart musste ein Teil jenes göttlichen Planes sein; aber Herder lässt sich wieder viel zu schnell von den anklagerischen, primitivistischen Ideen davontreiben, um sich dieses Widerspruches bewusst zu werden. Ein ebenso evidenter Widerspruch zu der Grundtendenz des Gesamtwerkes dürfte darin zu sehen sein, dass Herder in einer ausführlichen Anmerkung einen scharfen Angriff auf die Theorie des Naturzustandes überhaupt vornimmt.¹⁶⁸ In der Archäologie wäre ein solcher Angriff durchaus berechtigt gewesen, denn dort ist ihm die Genesis nur eine historisch interessante Legende, deren Inhalt infolge ihres als fiktiv erkannten Charakters keinerlei Beweiskraft zukommt; in der Ältesten Urkunde dagegen scheint dieser Angriff bedenklich, da die

¹⁶⁵ VI, 283 f.¹⁶⁶ VI, 283¹⁶⁷ VI, 273¹⁶⁸ VI, 307

Genesis jetzt als gottliche Offenbarung gilt. Zwar enthält sie keine Physik,¹⁶⁹ und vielleicht sollte man per Analogie schliessen, auch keine Geschichte, aber was enthält sie nun wirklich, wenn ihre Mitteilungen über die Vergangenheit und die Entstehung der Menschen objektiv unrichtig sind, wenn der von ihr angedeutete Naturzustand "schon an sich so widersprechend zerfällt, als es von allen Historischen Beweisen entblosst ist"¹⁷⁰ Gewiss, auch in der Aeltesten Urkunde ist die Theorie von dem alten Nationalmythos nicht aufgegeben, aber wenn dieser Mythos gottliches Wort, Offenbarung enthält, so musste sie ihrem Inhalt nach mehr sein als blosser Erdichtung. Soll Herders Werk nicht, wie sein Verfasser an Hamann schreibt, "Keim und Morgenrothe zur neuen Geschichte und Philosophie des Menschengeschlechts werden, auf dass Gottes Ruhm bestehe," eine Charakteristik, die durch den folgenden, allgemeiner gehaltenen Satz ergänzt wird. "Glauben Sie, mein liebster Freund, es wird einst werden, dass die Offenbarung und Religion Gottes, statt dass sie jetzt Kritik und Politik ist, simple Geschichte und Weisheit unseres Geschlechts werde"¹⁷¹ Obwohl die Offenbarung also nicht Geschichte "ist," so soll sie es jedenfalls "werden," wie es hier heisst, und wenn auch dieser Begriff des Werdens völlig dunkel ist, so brauchen wir bloss einen Blick in Herders gleichzeitig geschriebene Geschichtsphilosophie zu werfen, um dort den Naturzustand als eine anerkannte geschichtliche Hypothese vorzufinden.¹⁷² Herder hat also keine Ursache, sich über den "Philosophischen Geist" zu beschweren, der diesen Naturzustand eingeführt hat. Herder hatte vielleicht deutlicher als die meisten seiner Zeitgenossen die völlige Unhaltbarkeit dieser Lehre erkannt, aber das ändert nichts an der Tatsache, dass er sich nach aussen hin ebenfalls zu diesem Mythos zu bekennen schien, der durch die von ihm anerkannte Offenbarung den Stempel einer höheren Wahrheit erhalten hatte. Dass es sich dabei um keinen Wechsel in seiner innersten Ueberzeugung handelt, ist sicher; es durfte eher Verzicht auf gewonnene Erkenntnis in maiorem dei gloriam vorliegen wie er damals auf religiösem Gebiet häufig vorgenommen wurde. Intellektuell lehnte er diese Lehre ab, aber man darf andererseits nicht den emotionalen Einfluss des biblischen Mythos unterschätzen, und soweit Herder unter diesem Einfluss stand, mag der Naturzustand für ihn eine Art Wahrheit gewesen sein.

Eine ähnlich zwiespaltige Haltung nimmt Herder in Anbetracht der Sprachtheorie ein, auf die er in der Aeltesten Urkunde wieder eingeht. In einer Anmerkung nimmt er ausdrücklich auf seine Preisschrift Bezug, und wenn er auch nur deren "Bestimmung, Einschränkung und Anwendung" in Aussicht stellt, so bedeuten doch seine Ausführungen zumindestens ausserlich die dem Magus seinerzeit versprochene Ableug-nung der fruher vertretenen Ideen, ein Umschwung, dessen Aufrichtigkeit insbesondere in Hinblick auf Herders Vorrede zu "Des Lord Monboddo Werk von dem Ursprung und Fortgang der Sprache"¹⁷³ zuweilen angezweifelt worden ist.¹⁷⁴ Die Methode der Preisschrift, nur historisch und empirisch erreichbare Tatsachen zu verwerten, gibt Herder auf und wendet sich stattdessen wieder spekulativen Ideen zu. Das von ihm in der Preisschrift erwähnte Phanomen der Besinnung interpretiert er jetzt in ein blosses Vermögen um, eine blosser Anlage zur Sprache, aus der sich die Sprache selber nicht erklären lasse, und erkennt damit gerade den Punkt an, den er seinerzeit am heftigsten bestritten hatte. Ganz ähnlich wie Rousseau, der aus der Schwierigkeit der Sprachentwicklung auf die Notwendigkeit einer übermenschlichen Einwirkung geschlossen hatte, so sagt jetzt auch Herder:

¹⁶⁹ VI, 205¹⁷⁰ VI, 307¹⁷¹ Briefe an Hamann, S. 80¹⁷² V, 477 ff

Mussts also seyn, dass eine fremde Kraft diese Besinnung, die nichts als Vermögen, d i Receptivitat war, weckte, oder sie ware ewig schlafend, dammernd, todt blieben.¹⁷⁵

Allerdings verlegt Herder diese übermenschliche Einwirkung in den ersten Moment des menschlichen Daseins, denn da er nach wie vor daran festhält, dass Vernunft nicht ohne Sprache, Sprache nicht ohne Vernunft möglich ist, so muss die überirdische Erweckung der Sprache mit der Schöpfung des Menschen zeitlich zusammenfallen.¹⁷⁶ Das bedeutet dann aber nichts anderes, als dass der Mensch von vornherein mit Sprache begabt geschaffen wurde, und damit ist Herder dem Resultat, wenn auch nicht der Methode nach, wieder bei seiner ursprünglichen Auffassung angelangt, dass der Mensch immer Sprache gehabt habe. Zwar hutet er sich, dieses Resultat deutlich auszusprechen, und zieht es vor, seine Erörterungen in ein mystisches Dunkel zu verhüllen, aber dass sich seine Ansichten über den Ursprung der Sprache im Grunde nur wenig geändert haben, kann als sicher angenommen werden. Gott "losete ihm (dem Menschen) Sprache und Zunge," so sagt er an anderer Stelle,¹⁷⁷ aber diese theologische Ausdrucksweise kann über die wirkliche Auffassung des Verfassers nicht hinwegtäuschen. Aus diesem Grunde darf auch die Ähnlichkeit mit Rousseau in diesem Zusammenhange nicht überschätzt werden, denn Rousseau geht von dem Gedanken einer Verleihung der Sprache im Laufe der Entwicklung aus, während für Herder Mensch und Sprache untrennbar bleiben. Eine Spracherfindung im eigentlichen Sinne, sei sie natürlich oder ubernatürlich, findet bei Herder nicht statt. Sprache ist ganz menschlich, weil kein Wunder zu ihrer Erschaffung nötig war, sie ist ganz göttlich, weil alles Irdische letzten Endes ein Wunder ist. Soweit hier eine Anlehnung an Rousseau stattfindet, ist sie mehr oder weniger durch die Verlegenheit diktiert, in der sich Herder durch die ihm wenig sympathische Lehre vom göttlichen Ursprung befand, nicht durch wirkliche Gleichheit der Ueberzeugung. Die Formel: göttlich und menschlich bedeutet natürlich eine starke Anlehnung an den Ritter Rosenkreuz, doch findet Hamanns Begriff eines Logos, wie ihn Unger nachweist, bei Herder keine Parallele.¹⁷⁸

¹⁷³ xv, 179 ff¹⁷⁴ Steinthal, Ursprung der Sprache, S. 35¹⁷⁵ vi, 299

¹⁷⁶ vi, 299 f. Herder sagt dort "Da von der Sprache nun aller Gebrauch der Vernunft, und aller Unterscheidungskarakter der Menschheit, wie Ihr selbst bewiesen habt, abhängt! Mensch also nur durch Sprache das Geschöpf seyn konnte, was er seyn sollte—wird und muss ihn nicht diese weckende Kraft vom Ersten Augenblicke des Daseyns belebt, geleitet, geführt haben?"

¹⁷⁷ vi, 286.

IV DIE GESCHICHTSPHILOSOPHIE

Religiöser Uebereifer und historisches Denken hatten Herder bei der endgültigen Fassung der Ältesten Urkunde die Feder geführt, aber diese beiden Elemente waren zu heterogen, als dass aus ihrer Verbindung fruchtbare Gedanken hatten entspringen können. Erfreut uns der Historiker durch interessante Betrachtungen über das jüdische Altertum, so stösst uns im nächsten Augenblick der wetternde Theologe ab, der mit unglaublicher Hartnäckigkeit und Intoleranz auf seiner Meinung besteht, ohne zu bemerken oder bemerken zu wollen, dass zahlreiche innere Widersprüche diese Meinung schlechthin unannehmbar machen. In Herders folgender Schrift, die den sonderbaren Titel führt: Auch eine Philosophie der Geschichte zur Bildung der Menschheit, Beytrag zu vielen Beytragen des Jahrhunderts, ist dieser Uebereifer zum blossen Eifer herabgestimmt,¹⁷⁹ und wenn auch historisches und theologisches Denken nicht zu einem vollständigen inneren Ausgleich gekommen sind, so wirken sie bis zu einem gewissen Grade befruchtend aufeinander¹⁸⁰ und fördern eine der schönsten Schriften Herders zutage. Zwar enthält auch sie grosse Mängel,—und wer den Einfluss Rousseaus feststellen will, muss gerade diesen Mängeln besonderes Interesse zuwenden,—aber mit allen diesen Fehlern versöhnt der Gesamteindruck des Werkes reichlich.

Was Rousseau in der Inégalité in Bezug auf einzelne Nationen ausge-

¹⁷⁸ Hamanns Sprachtheorie (München, 1905), S. 170

¹⁷⁹ Wie sehr sich Herder selber dieses Nachlassens seines religiösen Eifers bewusst war, scheint mir am deutlichsten aus dem Brief an Lavater hervorzugehen, den er der Geschichtsphilosophie beilegt. Herder erwähnt dort Pläne zu einem zweiten Teil, der sich zum ersten wie der Schlüssel zum Schloss verhalten solle. Dieser Schlüssel sollte sein "Religion, Christus, Ende der Welt mit einer glorreichen, seligen Entwicklung." Herder behauptet, nicht zu wissen, ob er diesen Teil je schreiben wird, doch wusste er vermutlich sehr gut, dass er ihn nicht schreiben würde, denn offenbar handelt es sich hier nur um eine Entschuldigung für die geringe Berücksichtigung theologischer Vorstellungen in dem Werk gegenüber dem frommen Lavater, vgl. Aus Herders Nachlass, II, 110.

¹⁸⁰ Bezüglich der religiösen Elemente in der Geschichtsphilosophie sei auf die ausführliche Erörterung bei Dörne, o. c. S. 89 ff. verwiesen.

fuhrte hatte, das will Herder in einem grossen Wurf auf die Welt als solche ausdehnen und ihre Geschichte mit den Begriffen des Heranreifens und Verfallens aus einem einheitlichen Gesichtspunkt erfassen, das ist der Grundgedanke der Geschichtsphilosophie. In diesem Sinne beginnt sie mit der Beschreibung des glücklichen Urzeitalters, "wo ein Menschenpaar unter den mildesten Einflüssen der schaffenden Vorsehung, unter Beistande der erleichterndsten Fugungen rings um sich her, den Faden anspann. . ." ¹⁸¹ Die Vorstellung dieses Naturzustandes ist bei Herder und Rousseau identisch, abgesehen davon, dass ersterer bewusst den Eindruck zu erwecken versucht, als sei er auf Grund einer prinzipiell verschiedenen Methode zur Erkenntnis dieser Urzeit gelangt. Hatte Rousseau ehrlich eingestanden, dass dieser Naturzustand weder empirisch, noch historisch erschlossen sei, ¹⁸² so scheint Herders einleitender Satz darauf hinzudeuten, dass die Erkenntnis der Anfänge des Menschengeschlechts auf dem Wege empirischer Forschung liege:

Je weiter hin es sich in Untersuchung der ältesten Weltgeschichte, ihrer Völkerwanderungen, Sprachen, Sitten, Erfindungen, und Traditionen aufklart: desto wahrscheinlicher wird mit jeder neuen Entdeckung auch der Ursprung des ganzen Geschlechts von Einem. ¹⁸³

Auf den ersten Blick scheint dieser Satz zu bedeuten, dass das goldene Zeitalter bisher nur eine Hypothese sei, jedoch eine Hypothese, die wahrscheinlicher Weise in absehbarer Zeit durch neue Entdeckungen in ein historisches Faktum umgewandelt werden durfte. Es kann dahingestellt bleiben, ob Herder bei der Formulierung dieses Satzes wirklich an die beginnende historische Altertumsforschung dachte wie er andeutet ¹⁸⁴ oder an die Versuche eines Lafitau ¹⁸⁵ und eines Jens Kraffts, ¹⁸⁶ die Urzeit

¹⁸¹ v, 477

¹⁸² Vgl. Oeuvres, I, 83 und 91. I, 85 verspricht Rousseau, den Urmenschen so zu beschreiben, "qu'il a dû sortir des mains de la nature"

¹⁸³ v, 447. Auch Rousseau macht einmal eine Bemerkung, die auf die Möglichkeit einer experimentellen Erkenntnis des Urmenschen hinzudeuten scheint: "Quelles expériences seroient nécessaires pour parvenir à connoître l'homme naturel, et quels sont les moyens de faire ces expériences au sein de la société" (I, 79). Dieser Satz hat mit Herders Ausführungen gewisse Ähnlichkeiten, doch denkt Rousseau dabei tatsächlich nicht an Geschichte, zweifelt er doch selber, ob der Naturmensch je existiert hat, wie er gerade zuvor ausgeführt hat, vgl. Oeuvres, I, 79.

¹⁸⁴ Das einzige Buch, das Herder mit Namen anführt, ist Neueste historische Untersuchungen und Reisen in Asien. Diesem Hinweis auf historische Forschung darf man jedoch nicht zu grosse Bedeutung beimessen; Herder wollte häufig Historiker scheinen, wo er es tatsächlich nicht war.

¹⁸⁵ Joseph François Lafitau, Mœurs des Sauvages Américains comparées aux mœurs des premiers temps (Paris, 1724).

¹⁸⁶ Jens Krafft, Die Sitten der Wilden, zur Aufklärung des Ursprungs und Aufnahme der Menschheit, Deutsche Uebersetzung (Kopenhagen, 1766). Das Buch lehnt sich stark an Lafitau an.

durch einen Vergleich mit den Wilden der Gegenwart zu erschliessen, denn die naturgeschichtliche Einkleidung des Satzes darf uns nicht über die wahre Methode hinwegtauschen: Herder beschreibt den Naturzustand nicht hypothetisch, wie er auf Grund bisheriger Forschung sein konnte, sondern mit absoluter Gewissheit und stellt nur gleichzeitig fest, dass sich auch die empirische Wissenschaft einer Erkenntnis näherte, die er, Herder, schon ohne sie besass. Der hypothetische Charakter des Urzustandes wird nur im ersten Satze erwähnt, verschwindet danach jedoch völlig,¹⁸⁷ in der gesamten weiteren Untersuchung wird er als eine fest gegründete Tatsache hingenommen. Die Quelle für Herders Kenntnis dieses frühesten Stadiums der Menschheit wird uns erst etwas später mitgeteilt:

Die Geschichte der frühesten Entwicklung des Menschlichen Geschlechts, wie sie uns das älteste Buch beschreibt, mag also so kurz und apokryphisch klingen, dass wir vor dem Philosophischen Geist unsres Jahrhunderts, der nichts mehr als Wunderbares und Verborgenes hasset, damit zu erblöden scheinen eben deswegen ist sie wahr¹⁸⁸

Lost man diesen Satz in seine einzelnen Teile auf, so geht Herder in folgender Weise vor: die früheste Geschichte der Menschheit ist in der Bibel mitgeteilt, die Art und Weise, in der sie dort beschrieben ist, scheint uns heute sonderbar, das Sonderbare daran ist jedoch nicht Grund zum Zweifel, sondern Beweis der Wahrheit: credo quia absurdum. In dieser Erfassung des Naturzustandes auf religiösem Wege scheint sich nun Herder wieder ganz von Rousseau zu entfernen, der allein auf Grund rationaler Erwägungen vorgegangen war. In Wirklichkeit liegt die Sache jedoch anders. Macht schon die Übereinstimmung im Ergebnis zweifelhaft, ob Herder wirklich eine grundsätzlich verschiedene Methode anwendet, wie er andeutet, so belehrt uns eine eigenartige Bemerkung, die sich an das credo quia absurdum anschliesst, eines Besseren:

Scheint nicht selbst für das Maulwurfsauge dieses lichtesten Jahrhunderts doch ein längeres Leben, eine stiller und zusammenhangender wirkende Natur, kurz eine Heldenzeit des Patriarchenalters dazu zu gehören, die erste Formen des Menschengeschlechts, welche es auch seyen? den Stammvatern aller Nachkommenschaft ein—und für die Ewigkeit anzubilden?

Sieht man von dem an dieser Stelle nicht gerechtfertigten Angriff auf das lichteste Jahrhundert ab, so enthält der Satz ein rein spekulatives Argument: die ersten Formen des Menschengeschlechts müssen in der angegebenen Weise beschaffen gewesen sein, weil sich vernünftige Ueberlegung eine andere Beschaffenheit nicht vorstellen kann. Es muss so gewesen sein, folglich war es so; das ist die Methode des Rousseauschen Primitivismus, des écarter les faits, und wenn Herder auch seinen ersten Begriff vom Naturzeitalter durch die Bibel erhalten zu haben behauptet, so meldet sich der Rationalist schnell genug, um etwaige Zweifel an der Zuverlässigkeit der biblischen Erzählung zu zerstreuen. Herder bedient sich also zweier grundsätzlich verschiedener Methoden zum Beweis seines Urzeitalters: Als Theologe verkündet er das credo quia absurdum, als Philosoph glaubt er dasselbe, aber nicht, weil es absurd, sondern gerade im Gegenteil, weil es vernünftig ist. Die beiden angewandten Methoden ergänzen sich nicht, sondern schliessen sich gegenseitig aus. Dass dabei der rationalen der Vorrang gebührt, ist offensichtlich, denn wenn dieselbe Behauptung einmal auf die an dieser Stelle nicht ganz sicher scheinende Autorität des ältesten Buches, dann auf vernünftige Ueberlegung gestützt wird, so ist der letztere Beweis überzeugender als der erste, und somit darf man wohl behaupten, dass der in der Geschichtsphilosophie beschriebene Urzustand zwar durch die Bibel angeregt, jedoch nach dem Muster Rousseaus erkannt und ausgebildet ist.

¹⁸⁷ Ein Verfahren, das dem Rousseaus sehr ähnlich ist. Auch Rousseau verwischt häufig die Grenze zwischen Hypothese und Realität.

¹⁸⁸ v, 478

Dies zeigt sich besonders deutlich in seiner näheren Ausgestaltung. Alle wesentlichen Eigenschaften des "Jahrhunderts des Verfalls" existieren in ihm nicht; dem "so oft mishelligen Verhältniss zwischen Kraft und Besonnenheit, Fähigkeit und Klugheit, Anlage und gutem Herzen, die ein Jahrhundert des Verfalls immer bezeichnen,"¹⁸⁹ entspricht zu jener Zeit eine ungetrübte Harmonie im Seelenleben des Menschen, sodass alle seine Neigungen "die natürlichsten, stärksten, einfachsten" sind. Gerade wie für Rousseau, so wird auch für Herder der Naturzustand mit dem Zustande absoluter Vollkommenheit identisch, und beide Philosophen bedienen sich desselben Mittels zur Konstruktion dieses Zustandes: die üblichen Schwächen und Fehler, mit denen Menschen im allgemeinen behaftet sind, sprechen sie ihrem Urmenschen ab und leugnen alle Instinkte und Leidenschaften, die ihn mit andern Vertretern seines Geschlechts in Wettbewerb oder gar Unfrieden bringen konnten. Automatisch ergibt sich aus diesen Vorstellungen die Anerkennung der bonté naturelle: der Urmensch war gut, nicht weil er es sein sollte, sondern weil er nicht anders sein konnte.¹⁹⁰ Und so sieht jetzt Herder den Ursprung der Menschheit in demselben verklärten Licht wie der Verfasser des Emile, der an den Anfang seines Buches den berühmten Satz stellte:

¹⁸⁹ v, 478

¹⁹⁰ Rousseau hatte bekanntlich die bonté naturelle nicht im Text der Inégalité bewiesen, sondern behauptet nur in der berühmten Anmerkung 1, dass er es getan zu haben glaube. "Bewiesen" oder nicht, der Gedanke der bonté naturelle ist eins der Fundamente der Rousseauschen Schrift. Herder erwähnt das Problem als solches nicht, doch enthält S. 479 nichts als den Versuch einer Beschreibung des von Natur guten Menschen.

“Tout est bien, sortant des mains de l'Auteur des choses, tout dégénère entre les mains de l'homme.”¹⁹¹

Von den “heroischen Anfängen der Bildung Menschlichen Geschlechts” lenkt Herder anschliessend den Blick seines Lesers nach dem Orient, um dort den “Trummern der weltlichen Geschichte” nachzugehen.¹⁹² Diese Ausdrucksweise erweckt den Eindruck, als versuche er aus seinen theologischen, bzw. rationalistischen Spekulationen herauszukommen und den Uebergang zur Geschichte zu finden. Soweit der erste Absatz, der dieser Stufe der Entwicklung gewidmet ist, in Betracht kommt, muss dieser Versuch allerdings als vollig misslungen gelten. Zwar behauptet Herder, sich in seinen Ausführungen auf die “Tradition unserer ältesten Geschichte” zu verlassen, und ein Blick auf seine Schilderungen zeigt, dass er sich tatsächlich eng an die Bibel anschliesst und bei seinen Hirten und Patriarchen an Abraham, Jacob und Joseph denkt; aber zweifellos beruht dieser Anschluss an die Bibel ebenso sehr auf der zufälligen Uebereinstimmung der Bibel mit Herders eigenen Gedanken und Absichten als auf bewusster Anlehnung. Was Herder schildert, ist zunächst nichts anderes als das Zeitalter der beginnenden Gesellschaft, nach Rousseau wie nach Herder das glücklichste der Menschheit. Obgleich Rousseau im Anfang des zweiten Teiles der Inégalité die Gründung jeder Gesellschaft, auch der rudimentärsten, verflucht,¹⁹³ ändert er seinen Standpunkt im Fortgange seiner Schrift vollig und sieht den Zwischenzustand des einfachen Wilden, der schon in einer Gesellschaft lebt, aber sich noch die schönsten Eigenschaften des Naturzustandes bewahrt hat, als die goldene Zeit der Menschheit an.¹⁹⁴ Das Glück, das die Menschheit jetzt neu gewinnt, beschreibt er ausführlich:

L'habitude de vivre ensemble fit naître les plus doux sentiments qui soient connus des hommes, l'amour conjugal et l'amour paternel . Un voisinage permanent ne peut manquer d'engendrer enfin quelque liaison entre diverses familles. De jeunes gens de différens sexes habitent des cabanes voisines, le commerce passager que demande la nature en amène bientôt un autre non moins doux et plus permanent par la fréquentation mutuelle . . . le chant et la danse, vrais enfans de l'amour et du loisir, devinrent l'amusement ou plutôt l'occupation des hommes et des femmes oisifs et attroupés . . .¹⁹⁵

Stellen wir einige von Herders Kernsätzen neben diese Beschreibung Rousseaus, so ergibt sich mit volliger Deutlichkeit, wo die wichtigste Quelle für Herders Schilderung des Orients zu finden ist:

Das Hirtenleben im schönsten Klima der Welt, wo die freiwillige Natur den einfachsten Bedürfnissen so zuvor oder zu Hülfe kommt, die ruhige und zugleich

¹⁹¹ Œuvres, II, 3

¹⁹² V, 480

¹⁹³ Œuvres, I, 105

¹⁹⁴ Ibid, 110.

¹⁹⁵ Ibid, 108, 109.

wandernde Lebensart der väterlichen Patriarchenhütte, . . der damalige Kreis Menschlicher Bedürfnisse, Beschäftigungen und Vergnügen . . Gott! welch ein Zustand zu Bildung der Natur in den einfachsten, nothwendigsten, angenehmsten Neigungen!¹⁹⁶

Die Zeit der Patriarchen gilt ihm als "das goldene Zeitalter der Kindlichen Menschheit," und gerade dieser Ausdruck zeigt deutlich, dass Herder wieder in den Bahnen der Entwicklungstheorie gelandet ist. Seine Methode ist genau genommen weder theologisch, noch historisch, sondern schliesst sich in diesem Teil des Werkes an Rousseau an, dessen bestechendes Schema Herder wieder aufgenommen hat

Eine Philosophie der Geschichte hatte Herder versprochen, aber bisher hatte er nur Philosophie und keine Geschichte geliefert. Erst der folgende Absatz soll die wirkliche Verbindung mit der Geschichte bringen, indem sich Herder bemüht, seine Theorie über die glückliche Kindheit der Menschheit im Orient durch historische Daten aus der wirklichen Entwicklung jener Völker nachzuweisen. Abweichend von Rousseau versucht er also doch, sich auf die Zeugnisse der Geschichte zu verlassen, muss allerdings dabei die Erfahrung machen, dass sie, ganz wie Rousseau behauptet hatte, ungewiss, wenn nicht sogar direkt störend sind. Die Verlegung der goldenen Zeit nach dem Orient bringt ihn mit einer der Lieblingsvorstellungen seiner Zeit in Konflikt. Seit dem Ende des 17. Jahrhunderts hatte sich ein lebhaftes Interesse am Orient entwickelt, das im 18. Jahrhundert ständig zunahm, die Marchen aus Tausend und einer Nacht waren zum ersten Mal ins Französische übertragen worden,¹⁹⁷ die Zend-Avesta war gerade kurz vor der Abfassung von Herders Geschichtsphilosophie durch Anquetils Uebersetzung zugänglich geworden,¹⁹⁸ Reisebeschreibungen erschienen in grosser Zahl, und auch die Philosophie hatte sich des Orients bemächtigt, aber in einer Art, die Herders Theorien strikt zuwiderlief. "Le Despotisme Oriental" war eine Art Schlagwort geworden und sozusagen ein Lehrbeispiel für die denkbar schlechteste Regierungsform. Ricaut's Etat de l'Empire Ottoman, Herbelots Bibliothèque Orientale und Chardins Voyage en Perse hatten den Grundstein zu dieser Auffassung gelegt, Montesquieu, im Esprit des Loix, bezieht sich fast stets auf den Orient, wenn er die Auswüchse des Despotismus illustrieren will,¹⁹⁹ Voltaire hatte hauptsächlich aus seiner antireligiösen Einstellung heraus das jüdische Volk in das denkbar schlechteste Licht zu stellen gesucht,²⁰⁰ Helvetius hatte ein vernichtendes Bild der

¹⁹⁶ v, 480, 481

¹⁹⁷ I A Galland, Les Mille et une nuits (Paris, 1704–17)

¹⁹⁸ Anquetil-Duperron, Zend-Avesta, Ouvrage de Zoroastre (Paris, 1771)

¹⁹⁹ Esprit des Loix, II, 5, v, 14

²⁰⁰ Tratté de la Tolérance, Œuvres, xxv, 77 ff.; Philosophie de l'Histoire, Œuvres xi, 110 ff.

sozialen und politischen Zustände des Orients entworfen²⁰¹ und Boulanger hatte im Jahrzehnt vor dem Erscheinen von Herders Geschichtsphilosophie alle diese Auffassungen in seinem grossen Werke Recherches sur l'Origine du Despotisme Oriental zusammengefasst und dabei ebenfalls ein erschreckendes Bild orientalischer Verhältnisse entworfen²⁰² Boulanger hatte dabei besonders darauf hingewiesen, dass dieser Despotismus nicht von heute oder gestern stamme, sondern auf eine lange Geschichte zurückblicke²⁰³ Herder war mit seinen Anschauungen wohl vertraut, schon in seiner Jugend hatte er sich mit Boulangers eigenartigen Theorien auseinanderzusetzen gesucht,²⁰⁴ und gerade diese vollige Einstimmigkeit aller Autoren musste es für ihn umso schwieriger machen, gegen sie alle Stellung zu nehmen Wenn er dabei an sein Publikum die Mahnung richtet, sich "von dem Worte des Fachphilosophen nicht irren"²⁰⁵ zu lassen, so klingt das wenig überzeugend, denn wenn er auch nur verächtlich Fachphilosoph—natürlich mit der Betonung auf Philosoph—sagt, so musste es doch eigentlich Fachmann heissen Nur ein Schriftsteller hatte es gewagt, vor Herder ähnliche Gedanken zum Ausdruck zu bringen, Isaak Iselin, der den morgenlandischen Despotismus "in seiner ersten Anlage" als "eine vaterliche, und . . hirtenthümliche Regierungsform" bezeichnet hatte²⁰⁶ Aber auch Iselins Kenntnis des Orients "in seiner ersten Anlage" stammt nicht aus Forschungen, sondern er schildert den Orient einfach so, wie er ihn zur Aufrechterhaltung der Kontinuität seines Entwicklungsgedankens braucht. Ausserdem hatte Herder bestimmt kein Recht, sich gerade auf Iselin zu beziehen, denn wenn es auch unzweifelhaft ist, dass dessen Geschichte der Menschheit auf Herders Geschichtsphilosophie von erheblichem Einfluss gewesen ist,²⁰⁷ so hatte sich doch Herder bewusst gegen den Schweizer gestellt und ihn zusammen mit den Aufklärungshistorikern Hume und Robertson "und was dem nachhinkt und nachlallet" abgelehnt²⁰⁸ Und war Iselin bei seinen gewagten

²⁰¹ De l'Esprit, 3^e discours, chap. xvii bis xxi, Œuvres (Londres, 1791), 178 ff., mit ausführlicher Darlegung der 4 üblen Folgen des Despotismus

²⁰² Anonym veröffentlicht im Jahre 1761

²⁰³ Recherches, S. 2 Von den Fürsten wird dort gesagt "qu'ils ont toujours été regardés comme des Dieux visibles, devant qui le reste de la terre anéantie devoit se prosterner en silence"

²⁰⁴ Vgl. Herders Zur Geschichte der Wissenschaften aus Boulanger, xxxii, 153 ff

²⁰⁵ Die Warnung vor dem Fachphilosophen bezieht sich nach einer Anmerkung auf "Montesquieu's Schaaren Nachfolger," v, 482

²⁰⁶ Geschichte der Menschheit, II, 101 Vgl. jedoch Iselins abfällige Aeusserungen über den historisch verbürgten Despotismus des Orients auf S. 75

²⁰⁷ Ueber das Verhältnis von Herders Geschichtsphilosophie und Iselins Geschichte der Menschheit haben R. Fester (Rousseau u. d. dt. Gesch. Phil., S. 57) und A. Regli (Iselins Geschichte der Menschheit, eine Vorarbeit zu Herders "Ideen," S. 75) ausführlich gehandelt

²⁰⁸ v, 530 Anmerkung.

Behauptungen immerhin noch mit einer gewissen Vorsicht und Zurückhaltung verfahren, so belehrt uns Herder, dass im Orient ideale Verhältnisse bestanden hatten, ohne auch nur den Versuch zu machen, diese Behauptung durch Tatsachen zu beweisen. Rousseau hatte von vornherein die vollige Unvereinbarkeit zwischen seiner Entwicklungslehre und der Geschichte eingesehen und deswegen die Geschichte konsequent ausgeschieden, Herder schliesst dagegen einen vom historisch-wissenschaftlichen Standpunkt bedenklichen Kompromiss. Er biegt die Geschichte so zurecht, wie er sie zur Stützung seines Entwicklungsgedankens braucht, geht also durchaus nicht anders vor als Iselin, dessen Philosophie er bekämpft. Nicht ohne Grund hat man Herder vorgeworfen, dass er mit "Phantasiefarben" male²⁰⁹ und Posadzy durfte in mancher Beziehung Recht haben, wenn er sagt. "Er (Herder) glaubt stets an der historischen Tatsächlichkeit sich zu orientieren und lebt nur in einer künstlich konstruierten Ideenwelt."²¹⁰ Man darf solche Behauptungen gewiss nicht auf das Werk als Ganzes ausdehnen, aber an dieser Stelle wie an mancher anderen sind sie unzweifelhaft gerechtfertigt. Und gerade bei solchen Ausführungen zeigt sich, wie sehr Herder im Geiste Rousseaus arbeitet, denn wer anders hatte ihm diese Geringschätzung der Tatsachen gelehrt? Obwohl Herder in allen ihm zugänglichen Quellen das genaue Gegenteil fand, sieht er "im Zelte des Patriarchen allein Ansehen, Vorbild und Autorität," sodass der Despotismus unter Herders Händen zur "Vaterautorität, Haus und Hütte zu regieren" wird.²¹¹ Modern Forschung hat in der Tat verschiedene Vermutungen Herders über den Orient bestätigt, insbesondere den patriarchalischen Aufbau der Gesellschaft bei den arabischen Nomaden,²¹² aber das ändert nichts an der Tatsache, dass Herder nicht auf Grund ihm zugänglicher wissenschaftlicher Erkenntnis, sondern im deutlichen Gegensatz dazu zu seiner Auffassung gelangt ist. Niemand ist sich darüber klarer als Herder selbst: Dass die Verhältnisse des Orients, soweit historisch verbürgte Nachrichten vorliegen, seinem Ideal nicht entsprechen, gibt er zu, aber, so fährt er fort, alle das später dahingestellt, und zugegeben. Anfangs unter der milden Vaterregierung war nicht eben der Morgenländer mit seinem zarten Kindesinne der glücklichste und folgsamste Lehrling? Alles ward als Muttermilch und väterlicher Wein gekostet!²¹³

Herders Methode wird durch diesen Satz deutlich: statt sich auf Tatsachen zu stützen, hat er wieder nur Fiktionen herangezogen. Aus dem

²⁰⁹ Friedrich Meinecke, Entstehung des Historismus, II, 434

²¹⁰ Ludwig Posadzy, Der entwicklungsgeschichtliche Gedanke bei Herder (Posen, 1906), S. 57

²¹¹ v, 482 f.

²¹² A. T. Olmstead, History of Palestine and Syria, S. 39.

²¹³ v, 484.

Fehlen von Nachrichten über jene prahistorische Zeit leitet er das Recht ab, die Zustände des Orients so darzustellen, wie sie seinem System am besten entsprechen, und so wird es Herders eigenen Ausführungen schließlich klar, dass er auch bei der Ausmalung der Kindheit der Menschheit nicht mit geschichtlichen Tatsachen, sondern ausschliesslich mit subjektiven Ideen gearbeitet hat ²¹⁴

Rousseau war bei seiner Entwicklungstheorie von der Vorstellung eines doppelten Sundenfalles ausgegangen. Der erste bewirkt den Uebergang vom Naturzustand zu dem der primitivsten Gesellschaft, in der Rousseau die Unabhängigkeit der Menschen voneinander als die Garantie ihres Glucks und ihrer Freiheit angesehen hatte. Der zweite Sundenfall bewirkt den Uebergang zum wirklichen gesellschaftlichen Leben, das als die Ursache aller Uebel erscheint:

... dès l'instant qu'un homme eut besoin du secours d'un autre, dès qu'on s'aperçut qu'il étoit utile à un seul d'avoir des provisions pour deux, l'égalité disparut, la propriété s'introduisit, le travail devint nécessaire, et les vastes forêts se changèrent en des campagnes riantes qu'il fallut arroser de la sueur des hommes, et dans lesquelles on vit bientôt l'esclavage et la misère germer et croître avec les moissons ²¹⁵

Herder teilt Rousseaus Pessimismus nicht vollig, doch gibt auch er zu, dass auf der nächsten Stufe der Entwicklung, dem Knabenalter, wie er es nennt, der "Himmlische Anstrich" der Kindheit des Menschengeschlechtes verloren gegangen ist ²¹⁶. Aegypten ist das Land, in dem sich das Knabenalter entfaltet. Ackerbau löste das Hirtenleben ab, die Industrie kam auf und damit nahm das Leben ernstere Formen an. Auch dies ist wieder ein Anklang an Rousseau, der in der Einführung des Ackerbaus und der Metallbearbeitung den Hauptunterschied zwischen der glücklichen Kindheit und dem fortgeschrittenen Kulturzeitalter gesehen hatte ²¹⁷. In Aegypten entstanden nach Herder Gesetze, die nicht mehr "vaterliche Orakelsprüche der Gottheit," sondern "politische Regeln der Sicherheit" waren. Während der Morgenländer als "ein freies Thier des Feldes" gelebt und gewebt hatte, entwickelt sich jetzt städtische Kultur und politische Organisation. ²¹⁸ Aber auch hier verwickelt sich Herder in Widersprüche, diesmal allerdings nicht so sehr mit den Tatsachen, als mit seinem eigenen Entwicklungsgedanken. Es ist eine hoff-

²¹⁴ Meinecke (Historismus, II, 418) mochte gerade in Herders Behandlung des Orients einen Gegensatz zur Aufklärung erblicken, indem hier "ihre starren Begriffe . . . unter der warmen Sonne einer menschlich liebenden und darum verstehenden Empfindung" zu schmelzen beginnen. Es sei im Gegensatz dazu nochmals betont, dass Herder nur die übliche Phraseologie der Entwicklungstheorie verwendet und nur willkürlich diese Vorstellungen im Orient lokalisiert. ²¹⁵ Oeuvres I, 110. ²¹⁶ v, 488.

²¹⁷ Oeuvres I, 110.

²¹⁸ v, 489.

nungslose Aufgabe, die Jugendlichkeit der ägyptischen Kultur zu beweisen, und doch musste das geschehen, wenn Aegypten das Knabenalter der Menschheit darstellen soll. Aber gerade Aegypten war dazu so ungeeignet wie nur möglich: die Tradition spielte hier eine sonst im Altertum unbekannte, ja ungeahnte Rolle, das Land besass seit undenklichen Zeiten einen hoch entwickelten politischen und religiösen Apparat, eine streng organisierte Bureaukratie und Hierarchie²¹⁹—und dies alles als Knabenalter der Menschheit hinzustellen, scheint allerdings ein mehr als gewagter Schluss, der nicht mit der Behauptung gerechtfertigt wird, dass man "von Europa her die verzogenste Fratze" sahe²²⁰. Doch findet Herder auch in diesem Dilemma einen Weg, die Notwendigkeit von Religion, Furcht, Autorität und Despotismus zu begründen: sie waren das "Vehikulum der Bildung," denn ". . . mit dem Knaben von 7 Jahren last sich nicht, wie mit dem Greis und Mann vernunfteln." Herder scheint es nicht zu bemerken, dass diese Art der Beweisführung mit seinem Grundprinzip, der Analogie zur Entwicklung des Menschen, in diametralem Gegensatz steht und stattdessen auf der Analogie zur Erziehung beruht. Sollten sich nach dem ursprünglichen Plan die politischen, sozialen und kulturellen Einrichtungen der Menschen mit ihrem langsamen Heranreifen von selbst entwickeln, so muss an dieser Stelle die Vorsehung eingreifen, um die Menschen mit den zu ihrer weiteren Bildung notwendigen Einrichtungen zu versehen. Wenn aber die Vorsehung das Schicksal der Menschen leitet, dann bedarf es keiner Geschichtsphilosophie, dann ist die Analogie mit den Lebensaltern ubeflüssig, und an die Stelle derartiger Ueberlegungen muss die Frage nach den höheren Absichten Gottes treten. In dieser Aenderung des ursprünglichen Schemas liegt an sich eine Abweichung von Rousseau, obwohl auch dieser zuweilen, wie bei der Sprachentstehung, seine Zuflucht zur Vorsehung nahm; doch kommt diesem Umstand keine weitere Bedeutung zu, da es sich hier nur um ein Gebot der Verlegenheit handelt: Unfähig, die ägyptische Kultur seiner Entwicklung folgerichtig einzupassen, geht Herder temporär zu dem Erziehungsgedanken über, um mit dieser nicht leicht erkennbaren Inkonsistenz das Schema seiner Entwicklung ausserlich zu retten.²²¹ Im Gegensatz zur Schilderung des Orients darf man aber bei der Schilderung Aegyptens Herder keine Verfälschung der Tatsachen vorwerfen, er verfälscht seine Entwicklungsidee, lasst aber der Geschichte als solcher volle Gerechtigkeit wiederfahren.

²¹⁹ Vgl. James Baikie, A History of Egypt (New York, 1929), S. 186 ff.

²²⁰ v. 490. Derartige Anschauungen finden sich z. B. bei Goguet (De l'Origine des Loix, des Arts et des Sciences et de leur Progrès chez les anciens Peuples, I, 336 ff.), der auf die Unehrlichkeit und Unsittlichkeit der altägyptischen Kultur hinweist. Im allgemeinen scheint man jedoch von Aegypten milder gedacht zu haben, vgl. Voltaire, Philosophie de l'Histoire, Œuvres, XI, 59 ff.; Fénelon, Télémaque, 2. Buch, etc.

²²¹ Posadzy (op. cit., S. 38) weist auf die Verquickung von göttlicher Lenkung mit dem Entwicklungsgedanken hin. Solche Verquickungen kommen zuweilen auch in der Schilderung des Orients vor, vgl. v. 482.

Phonizien, die nächste Stufe der Entwicklung, ist der reine Handelsstaat, durch den die Beziehungen der Völker untereinander zur Ausbildung gelangen. Zum ersten Mal fallen hier Worte, die schon auf einen Abstieg der Entwicklung hindeuten: "Bequemlichkeit, Ueppigkeit und Pracht."²²² Aber das sind bisher nur Vorzeichen eines zukünftigen, erst sehr viel später einsetzenden Verfalls, denn von Phonizien findet der direkte Uebergang zum Junglingsalter der Menschheit statt, zu Griechenland. Obwohl Herder Griechenland stark idealisiert, so halt er sich damit an die zu seiner Zeit allgemein anerkannten Anschauungen, ist sogar in mancher Beziehung kritischer als die Kenner des Altertums, sodass er vom damaligen Standpunkt durchaus historisch vorgeht, wenn er schliesslich ausruft: "Griechenland! Urbild und Vorbild aller Schöne, Grazie und Einfalt! Jugendbluthe des Menschlichen Geschlechts—o hatte sie ewig dauern können!"²²³ Wieder weicht Herder hier vom Schema Rousseaus ab, indem er gewissermassen ein zweites age d'or annimmt. Diese Abweichung von Rousseau ergab sich mit Notwendigkeit aus Herders ästhetischen Neigungen. Das eigentliche Urzeitalter war gut und glücklich, d. h. es war ein goldenes Zeitalter vom sozialen und moralischen Gesichtspunkt aus Griechenland, und insbesondere Athen, an das Herder vor allem denkt, hatte in der Perikleischen Zeit sicherlich nicht diese Eigenschaften eines goldenen Zeitalters dieser Art, nur bei ästhetischer Bewertung erscheint es als eine der glanzendsten Perioden der Geschichte und kann Anspruch auf den Titel eines goldenen Zeitalters erheben.²²⁴ Für Rousseau kam dieser ästhetische Gesichtspunkt nicht in Betracht, sodass er eher dazu neigt, das künstlerisch unproduktive Sparta auf Kosten Athens hervorzuheben,²²⁵ während Herder gerade Athen im verklärten Licht sieht. Griechenland gilt Herder als "die Bluthe einer neuen schönen Natur," als deren Symbol sich ihm ein "edler Jungling mit gesalbten Gliedern, Liebling aller Grazien, und Liebhaber aller Musen, Sieger in Olympia und all "andern Spiele, Geist und Körper zusammen nur Eine blühende Blume" seinem verzuckten Auge darstellt.²²⁶ Zwar zollt er auch den politischen Einrichtungen Athens zuweilen

²²² v, 493²²³ v, 498

²²⁴ Die Bedeutung Griechenlands als ästhetischer Idealzeit untersucht Erich Aron ausführlich, vgl. Die deutsche Entwicklung des Griechentums durch Winckelmann und Herder (Heidelberg, 1929), S. 79 ff.

²²⁵ Diese Tendenz zeigt sich vor allem im Discours sur les Sciences et les Arts; vgl. Œuvres, I, 7.

²²⁶ v, 495.

Lob, jedoch nur, um gleich darauf wieder auf ästhetische Betrachtungen zurückzukommen ²²⁷

Von Griechenland geht Herder auf Rom über, das er als das Mannesalter der Menschheit auffasst. Eine konsequente Weiterführung der vegetativen Entwicklungsidee wurde es notwendig gemacht haben, anschliessend den Verfall der Menschheit zu zeigen. Tatsächlich fand ein Verfall statt, aber aus den Ruinen erhob sich neues Leben und dieses neue Leben liess sich nicht in der geplanten Weise in Herders Plan einfügen. Rousseau hatte sein Schema nur auf einzelne Nationen angewendet und hatte daher an dieser Stelle keine Schwierigkeiten gefunden; sollte jedoch die gesamte Geschichte des Menschengeschlechts in dieses Entwicklungsschema gepresst werden, so hatte sie mit dem Greisenalter zum Abschluss kommen müssen. Die römische Spätzeit wird auch noch ganz in diesem Sinne geschildert:

Alles war erschöpft, entnervt, zerruttet · von Menschen verlassen, von entnervten Menschen bewohnt, in Ueppigkeit, Lastern, Unordnungen, Freiheit und wildem Kriegesstolz untersinkend Die schonen Römischen Gesetze und Kanntnisse konnten nicht Krafte ersetzen, die verschwunden waren, Nerven wiederherstellen, die keinen Lebensgeist fuhlten, Triebfedern regen, die da lagen—also Tod! ein abgematteter, im Blute lgender Leichnam . . . ²²⁸

Aber der auf dieses Zitat folgende Satz: "da ward in Norden neuer Mensch gebohren," zeigt, dass die universalhistorische Erfassung der Entwicklung sich nur auf einen Teil, das Altertum, beschränkt.²²⁹ Die christliche Aera hat an dem den Lebensaltern analog gestalteten Entwicklungsprozess keinen Anteil, ja, die Analogie hat hier überhaupt keinen Raum mehr. Ab und zu taucht zwar ein anderes Bild auf, das des aufstrebenden Baumes, aber es ist, wie gesagt, nur Bild, nicht dominierendes Schema. Um es kurz zu machen · Im zweiten Teil der Geschichtsphilosophie ist der Zusammenhang mit Rousseau erheblich gelockert, da sich dessen Methode auf die christliche Aera nicht anwenden lässt. Historische Erörterungen treten in den Vordergrund, und nur noch gelegentlich finden wir Gedanken, die an Rousseau erinnern wie z B. die Schilderung der Einfachheit und Starke Germaniens, das dem in Ueppigkeit und Wohlleben verfallenden Rom gegenüber gestellt wird,—ein deutlicher Anklang an Tacitus und wohl auch an Rousseau.²³⁰ Solchen vereinzelt Anklängen kommt jedoch nur geringe Bedeutung zu, wesentlich ist allein Herders schon häufig beobachtete Uebereinstimmung mit Rousseau in der standigen Polemik gegen die modern Zeit in diesem Werk, das nach Herders eigenen Worten "Feuer und gluhende Kohle auf die Schadel unseres Jahrhunderts" enthalt ²³¹ Gerade wie die Inégalité und der *Discours sur les Sciences et les Arts*²³² so ist auch der zweite Teil der Herderschen Schrift im Grunde nichts als eine grosse Anklage der Gegenwart, mit der die standige "Rettung" anderer Zeiten Hand in Hand geht. Hatte der erste Abschnitt den Orient und Aegypten gerettet, Griechenland verherrlicht und Rom gepriesen, so bringt der zweite die Rettung des Mittelalters, wahrend Herder uber seine eigene Zeit kein gutes Wort finden kann. Er ist sich dieser feindlichen Haltung durchaus bewusst und verteidigt sich gegen den Vorwurf, dass er "immer die Ferne lobe und uber die Gegenwart klage" mit der Behauptung, dass ihm die Vorzuge seiner Zeit durchaus klar seien ²³³ Dass es ein grosses Jahrhundert der Erleuchtung sei, verkennt er keineswegs, genausowenig, wie Rousseau im Contrat Social geleugnet hatte,²³⁴ dass die Zeit der Gesellschaft der Urzeit vieles voraus habe, aber selbst Herders offenbar ehrlich gemeinte Versuche, die guten Eigenschaften seines Jahrhunderts darzulegen, enden doch nur in umso heftigeren Anklagen, aus denen sich schliesslich ein rational kaum fassbarer Glaube an eine grossere Zukunft herausschalt.²³⁵ Diese grosse Zukunft war auch der Traum und die Hoffnung des Verfassers der Inégalité gewesen, der seine flammende Beredsamkeit nicht nur darum entwickelt hatte, um die Unabwendbarkeit eines gewissen Unterganges darzulegen, sondern um zur Einkehr zu mahnen und so den drohenden Verfall aufzuhalten. Trotz seines uberwiegenden Interesses an der Vergangenheit als solcher hegt Herder zweifellos ahnliche Gedanken und in dieser Beziehung bleiben sich die beiden Kulturphilosophen einig.

²²⁷ v, 495 f. ²²⁸ v, 514 f.

²²⁹ Stadelmann macht darauf aufmerksam, dass die Zweiteilung der Geschichte in Altertum und Neuzeit ungleich wichtiger ist als die Scheidung nach Lebensaltern; vgl. Der historische Sinn (Halle, 1928), S. 87.

²³⁰ v, 514 Tacitus wird dort ausdrücklich erwähnt.

Es sei an dieser Stelle nochmals die Frage nach dem Charakter dieser Uebereinstimmung aufgeworfen. Zufallig ist sie bestimmt nicht, aber ist sie, wie Haym es nannte, blosser "genius epidemicus der Zeit,"²³⁶ oder ist sie mehr als das, ist sie mehr oder weniger bewusste und gewollte Anlehnung? Rousseau wird in der ganzen Schrift nur ein einziges Mal direkt erwahnt, dort allerdings im Tone des Lobes und der Sympathie, als ein Gegenbild zu dem heftig angegriffenen Voltaire,²³⁷ aber aus dieser Erwahnung lassen sich keine Schlüsse ziehen. Bedeutsamer ist eine andere Stelle, in der Rousseau durch Auslassung erwahnt wird, wenn dieses Paradoxon zulassig ist. Am Ende des ersten Abschnittes beklagt sich Herder uber die historischen Zweifler in Frankreich, die in der Weltgeschichte nur ein ewiges Auf und Ab, ein "Weben und Aufreissen, ewige Revolu-

²³¹ Brief an Hartknoch, Von und an Herder, II, 43.

²³² Fester (op cit, S 55) fuhrt ebenfalls aus, dass sich Herders Schrift mit Rousseaus erstem Diskurse in ihrer polemischen Tendenz beruhre ²³³ v, 545

²³⁴ Oeuvres, III, 315

²³⁵ v, 580.

²³⁶ S. o S 753.

²³⁷ v, 583

tion" sehen, jedoch "keinen Plan, keinen Fortgang" darin wahrzunehmen glauben. In einer Anmerkung zu dieser Stelle nennt Herder Montaigne als Urheber dieser Anschauung und erwägt dann "Voltaire, Hume, selbst die Diderots"²³⁸ Rousseau hatte auf Grund seines Kulturpessimismus und seiner Kreislauftheorie in diesem Zusammenhang leicht Erwähnung finden können, die Tatsache, dass Herder ihn nicht nennt, dürfte als Beweis dafür angesehen werden, dass er sich einer gewissen Übereinstimmung mit Rousseau bewusst ist. Aber bewusste Übereinstimmung darf nicht mit bewusster Anlehnung verwechselt werden, und als Beweis für die letztere konnte somit nur wieder auf den Brief verwiesen werden, in dem Herder sechs Jahre zuvor die Grundgedanken der Ältesten Urkunde Hamann zuerst mitgeteilt hatte.²³⁹ Zwar bezieht sich dieser Brief nur auf Vorarbeiten zur Ältesten Urkunde, aber da sich Herders erneute Zuwendung zu dem Entwicklungsgedanken, wie er dann auch in der Geschichtsphilosophie von 74 zum Ausdruck kommt, aus seinem Studium der Genesis ergeben hatte, so dürfen die Vorarbeiten zur Ältesten Urkunde auch als Vorarbeiten zur Geschichtsphilosophie aufgefasst werden, und das berechtigt zu der Annahme, dass das Schema Rousseaus bei der Konzeption der Geschichtsphilosophie von entscheidender Bedeutung gewesen ist. Die Ausgestaltung der Ältesten Urkunde und der Geschichtsphilosophie erstreckte sich aber über mehrere Jahre, Jahre, in denen sich Herders Ideen entscheidend wandelten, und dieser Wandel war gerade in Bezug auf die Geschichtsphilosophie von grosster Bedeutung. So deutlich sich daher das Rousseausche Entwicklungsschema in ihr, oder wenigstens in ihrem ersten Teil abzeichnet, so stark die polemische Grundhaltung an den ewig unzufriedenen Jean-Jacques erinnert, so darf man sich doch nicht darüber täuschen, dass Herders Werk so grundsätzlich verschieden von allem ist, was Rousseau je geschaffen oder geplant hat, dass man von einem eigentlichen Einfluss Rousseaus im Jahre 1774 kaum noch reden kann, sondern nur noch von Anregungen. Die Fragmente waren seinerzeit unmittelbar aus der Schwärmerei für Rousseau heraus entstanden, sie zeigen den Geist des Genfers auf Schritt und Tritt, ohne Zufugung wirklich bedeutsamer Züge, während in der Geschichtsphilosophie von 74 die selbstständigen Zutaten Herders derartig überhand genommen haben, dass die Beziehung zu Rousseau von entscheidender Bedeutung nur noch in der Entstehungsgeschichte des Werkes, nicht in dem Werke selbst ist. Denn wenn sich auch das Schema Rousseaus darin deutlich abzeichnet, so ist es doch mit neuen Inhalten erfüllt, und diese neuen Inhalte sind wichtiger als das alte Schema. Um der Bedeutung Rousseaus die richtige Proportion zu geben, bedarf es einer Erwähnung der Elemente der Geschichtsphilosophie, die über ihn hinausführen. Da es aber gerade diese Elemente gewesen sind, die stets das grösste Interesse hervorgerufen haben, und zahlreiche Behandlungen vorliegen,²⁴⁰ so ist an dieser Stelle eine kurze Zusammenfassung hinreichend.

²³⁸ v, 512²³⁹ S. o S 785.

Man hat Rousseau die Verneinung des Wertes der Geschichte genannt,²⁴¹ und die Richtigkeit dieser Behauptung zeigt sich deutlich darin, dass er die Entwicklung der Welt nicht nur in einigen schematisch skizzierten Altern zu erfassen sucht, sondern darüberhinaus auf die Herstellung einer greifbaren Verbindung zwischen diesen Altern verzichtet. Die Entwicklung vollzieht sich bei ihm ausschliesslich in abstrakten Begriffen: auf die Entstehung folgt die Blüte, auf diese die Reife, auf diese der Verfall. Obgleich Herder sich im wesentlichen an dieses Schema halt, so weicht er doch gerade in diesem Punkte davon ab: er bemüht sich darum, die tatsächliche Entwicklung, d. h. die Uebergänge zwischen den verschiedenen Altern, darzulegen, indem er die Ursachen andeutet, die das Ende des einen und die Entstehung des nächsten Zustandes zur Folge haben. Herder ist darin nicht ganz konsequent und stellt häufig, besonders am Anfang des Werkes schablonenmässig einen Zustand an den anderen, gerade wie es vor ihm Iselin in seiner Geschichte der Menschheit getan hatte,²⁴² doch kommt dafür an anderer Stelle der Gedanke historischer Kausalität umso deutlicher zum Ausdruck. Es ist ihm klar, dass eine Regierungsform wie die der griechischen Republik nicht plötzlich vom Himmel fallen konnte, sondern eine langsame Entwicklung über Despotismus, Landzunft und Aristokratie voraussetzt.²⁴³ Ausdrucklich weist er darauf hin, dass Griechenland bei aller Originalität nur ein Produkt der übrigen Völker ist. Gewiss, "nichts Orientalisches, Phonizisches und Aegyptisches behielt seine Art mehr, es war Griechisch," aber auch als solches bleibt es ein Ergebnis der Wirksamkeit früherer Zeiten und Völker.²⁴⁴ Die menschliche Natur muss "alles lernen, durch Fortgange gebildet werden, im allmählichen Kampf immer weiter schreiten." "Man bildet nichts aus, als wozu Zeit, Klima, Bedürfniss, Welt, Schicksal, Anlass gibt."²⁴⁵ Stadelmann

²⁴⁰ Auf zwei Schriften sei hier besonders hingewiesen: Meineckes Ausführungen im Historismus (II, 416 ff.) und Stadelmann, Herder und der historische Sinn.

²⁴¹ Ernst Troeltsch, Der Historismus und seine Probleme (Tübingen, 1922, S. 18).

²⁴² Soweit das Verhältnis der Herderschen Geschichtsphilosophie zu der Iselins in Betracht kommt, so hat gerade Regli dieses Problem besonders ausführlich behandelt. In der Einfügung des Gedankens der geschichtlichen Kausalität in die schon von Iselin angewandte Entwicklungs-idee findet er Herders bedeutsamste Eigenheit, vgl. op. cit. S. 76 ff. Für Iselin gab es nur Einzelphänomene ohne inneren Zusammenhang, verbunden allem durch religiöse Metaphysik (S. 53). Ob diese Metaphysik allerdings wirklich so religiös war, scheint mir zweifelhaft, denn wenn auch Iselin ein ganz anderes Ziel verfolgt als Rousseau, — er will gerade die Kontinuität des Fortschritts erweisen —, befolgt er doch dieselbe Methode wie Rousseau, beide stehen in dieser Beziehung im Gegensatz zu Herder.

²⁴³ v, 495

²⁴⁴ v, 499

²⁴⁵ v, 505.

hat darauf aufmerksam gemacht, wie verschwommen der Entwicklungsbegriff bei Herder noch ist: er ist zuweilen teleologisch bedingt, dann wieder rein kausal und gelegentlich auch schon deutlich organisch, ohne dass Herder das Verhältnis dieser Begriffe zueinander klar gestellt hatte.²⁴⁶ Entscheidend bleibt jedenfalls, dass Herder über die rein metaphysische Verkettung der einzelnen Stadien hinausgekommen ist und damit den Rousseauschen Entwicklungsgedanken für geschichtliche Zwecke fruchtbar gemacht hat.

Die reale Verknüpfung der einzelnen Stadien lässt auch ihre Schematik in einem milderen Licht erscheinen. Die ersten Stufen dieses Prozesses bleiben trotz aller Versuche, sie historisch zu beleben, noch recht schablonenmassig, insbesondere das Zeitalter der Entstehung und das des Orients sind, wie dargelegt, nichts als Abstraktionen, aber je weiter Herder vorrückt, umso mehr verliert sich diese Schematik, um in der christlichen Ära dann ganz zu verschwinden. Vom Standpunkte eines strengen Historismus ist die Anwendung von Begriffen wie Kindheit, Junglingszeit etc. stets bedenklich, denn auf diese Weise zeigt man nicht, wie eine Zeit wirklich gewesen, sondern verdeutlicht nur, wie sie sich unserm Geiste darstellt. Aber gerade in dieser Beziehung sind wir heute milder geworden. Die Zeiten Rankes sind vorüber und der Begriff geschichtlicher Wahrheit, wie er von diesem grossen Historiker vertreten wurde, ist erschutert. Tatsachen als solche sind tot, um lebendig zu werden, müssen sie sinnvoll gemacht werden, und dieser Sinn, der nicht eo ipso in ihnen vorhanden ist, muss vom betrachtenden Individuum hineingelegt werden. Nicht Nachahmung einer Wirklichkeit, die sich tatsächlich in Worten gar nicht wiedergeben lässt, sondern formende Sinnggebung ist Geschichte. Historische Wahrheit ist nichts Statisches, sondern "intellektuelle Aktivität," ist ein vor allem subjektiv geistiger Prozess, wie die moderne Geschichtsphilosophie lehrt.²⁴⁷ Rousseaus Schema, das mit der Geschichte keinerlei Verbindung hatte, war in dieser Beziehung völlig unfruchtbar. Iselin hatte zwar schon den Versuch gemacht, ein derartiges Schema mit der Geschichte zu verbinden, aber er war dabei rein schablonenmassig vorgegangen und hatte die Geschichte als ein, meistens recht widerspenstiges Beweismittel für seine Theorien angesehen. Indem Herder diese Schematik wenigstens teilweise überwindet, beginnt sein Werk Formen anzunehmen, deren philosophische Berechtigung erst in moderner Zeit erwiesen worden ist. Zwar geht es auch Herder zunächst darum, die Übereinstimmung in der Entwicklung des Menschengeschlechts mit der des einzelnen Menschen nachzuweisen, aber im Verlaufe seiner Ausführungen tritt diese ursprüngliche Absicht mehr und mehr zurück, wah-rend der Geschichte als solcher ein immer starkerer Vorrang gewahrt wird, —hatte er doch schon bei der Schilderung Aegyptens seine Theorie zugunsten der geschichtlichen Tatsachen umgebogen, wenn nicht direkt durchbrochen. Damit treten die theoretischen Ausführungen in ein ganz anderes Verhältnis zu den historischen: Es handelt sich jetzt nicht mehr um Behauptung und deren Beweis, sondern gerade um sinnvolle Gestaltung historischer Tatsachen nach Ideen. Und wenn dabei zuweilen auch die Ideen noch den Sieg über die Tatsachen gewinnen, indem die letzteren etwas zwangsvoll zurecht gestutzt werden,²⁴⁸ so wird doch die Grundtendenz deutlich sichtbar: ideenbeseelte Geschichte, nicht ungeschichtliche Ideen sind sein Ziel. Auch hier hat Rousseau wieder Gedanken angeregt, die ihm völlig fern standen, Gedanken, die sich direkt auf Hegel und weiterhin auf die oben erwähnte moderne Schule fortpflanzen sollten.

²⁴⁶ Stadelmann, op cit S. 69

²⁴⁷ Georg Simmel Die Probleme der Geschichtsphilosophie, S. 59.

Er ergibt sich aus Herders eigenen Worten, dass diese Interpretation seines Werkes im modernen Sinne seinen Gedanken entspricht. Am deutlichsten zeigt sich das in der Bemerkung im Vorwort zu den Ideen, in dem er die Unterstellung zurückweist, dass er mit den Begriffen "Kindheit, Jugend, das mannliche und das hohe Alter" eine Heerstrasse für die Entwicklung des Menschengeschlechts habe aufzeigen wollen.²⁴⁹ Aber auch in der Geschichtsphilosophie von 74 selber betont er, dass niemand "die Schwache des allgemeinen Charakterisirens" mehr fühle als er.²⁵⁰ Da sich dieser Satz innerhalb der Schilderung der Entwicklung der alten Welt befindet, die sich immerhin an Rousseaus Schema anlehnt, so wirkt er zunächst verbluffend, denn selbst bei allem Verständnis für Herders Fehler in seinen geschichtlichen Darlegungen wird man ihm den Vorwurf eines zu allgemeinen Charakterisierens kaum ersparen können. Aber Herder leugnet diese Tatsache im Grunde nicht, sondern verteidigt sein System unter Berufung auf die Notwendigkeit einer Vereinfachung und Beschränkung der historischen Wirklichkeit. Mit wenigen Kernsätzen zeigt er die völlige Unmöglichkeit einer alles umfassenden Charakterisierung. Der Charakter auch nur einer einzigen Nation hat eine solche Tiefe, dass er trotz häufigen Wahrnehmens und Anstaunens "doch so sehr das Wort fleucht." "Das Weltmeer ganzer Völker, Zeiten und Lander" lässt sich nicht "in einen Blick, ein Gefühl, ein Wort fassen," und so bleibt dem Historiker nichts übrig, als sich auf die wichtigsten Züge zu beschränken.²⁵¹ Jeder Mensch, jede Zeit ist bis zu einem gewissen Grade das Resultat aller vorhergehenden Menschen und Zeiten, aber darum dürfen sie nicht als "Quintessenz aller Zeiten und Völker" betrachtet werden, sondern es gilt, die wesentlichen Merkmale herauszufinden.²⁵² In die Sprache der modernen Geschichtsphilosophie übertragen wurde man das von Herder aufgestellte Prinzip als "die Notwendigkeit der engeren Auslese" bezeichnen, "die nicht nur den Gegenstand aus dem Fluss der Dinge herauschneidet, sondern auch innerhalb des Gegenstandes nur die wesentlichen oder charakteristischen Züge, sozusagen das vinculum substantiale, betont."²⁵³ Gerade dieses vinculum substantiale ist es, das Herder mit Hilfe des Rousseauschen Schemas herauszuarbeiten hofft, und deshalb macht er sich ruhig "auf kleinfugige Widersprüche gefasst, aus dem grossen Detail von Völkern und Zeiten."²⁵⁴ Gewiss, diese Gedanken waren damals nichts absolut Neues mehr, schon Voltaire hatte das "malheur aux details" als eine notwendige Voraussetzung jeder Geschichtsschreibung erkannt,²⁵⁵ aber wenn man bedenkt dass zu jener Zeit die Historiographie nach chronologischen und genealogischen Gesichtspunkten noch nicht ausgestorben war,²⁵⁶ dass neben den grossen Ereignissen der Weltgeschichte auch die Feuersbrunst noch eine Rolle spielte, kurz dass dieses Ausleseprinzip damals noch durchaus keine Selbstverständlichkeit dar, so bleibt doch Herders "hingestellt in die Absicht des grossen Folgeganzen" ein Satz, der zum mindesten damals noch nicht voll anerkannte Prinzipien bestätigte und ihnen durch die neuartige Fundierung in dem Rousseauschen Schema endgültig zum Siege verhalf.

²⁴⁸ Posadzy (op cit, 56) hat dies etwas zu scharf formuliert "Herder will die scheinbaren Willkürlichkeiten der Geschichte in eine Gesetzmässigkeit auflösen, aber seine Prinzipien reichen dazu nicht aus" ²⁴⁹ XII, 4. ²⁵⁰ V, 501 ²⁵¹ V, 502

Eine Entwicklung bedarf eines Ausgangspunktes und eines Zieles. Blosser Wandel ist keine Entwicklung; von einer solchen lässt sich erst reden, wenn dieser Wandel eine bestimmte Richtung erhält. Was ist dieses Ziel? Rousseau hatte in dieser Frage geschwankt²⁵⁷ und auch Herder hat sich niemals zu einer festen Ansicht durchringen können. Stadelmann hat seine Haltung treffend formuliert: "Man hat es schwer zu entscheiden, ob Herder eher Aufstiegsoptimist gegen besseres Wissen oder Relativist wider seinen Willen gewesen ist."²⁵⁸ So unsicher Herders Haltung aber auch sein mag, so finden sich doch in der Geschichtsphilosophie einige methodisch ausserordentlich wichtige und fordernde Gedanken über diesen Problemkreis. Gerade die Verbindung mit Rousseau bewahrt ihn davor, gleich Iselin in den Fehler zu verfallen, die Geschichte ²⁵² v, 503²⁵³ Troeltsch, op. cit. S. 39²⁵⁴ v, 504²⁵⁵ Lettre à l'Abbé Dubos, Cirey, le 30 octobre 1738, Œuvres, xxxv, 30²⁵⁶ Fueter (Historiographie, S. 375) rechnet sogar noch Gatterer zu der alten Schule der Historiographie²⁵⁷ Lanson hat sich bemüht, die gedankliche Einheitlichkeit des Rousseauschen Werkes dazutun. Es kann hier dahingestellt bleiben, ob eine solche durch geschickte Interpretation nachweisbar ist, doch ist es unzweifelhaft, dass die einzelnen Werke aus verschiedenen Absichten heraus geschrieben worden sind. Der Discours sur les Sciences et les Arts ist schlechthin unvereinbar mit dem Contrat Social. Vgl. Lanson, Annales Jean-Jacques Rousseau (1912), S. 12²⁵⁸ Stadelmann, op. cit., S. 69.

der Menschheit als einen standigen Fortschritt aufzufassen, während er sich auf der anderen Seite bemüht, den Pessimismus der Rousseauschen Inégalité zu überwinden. Auch er muss sich schliesslich zu einer agnostischen Haltung bekennen: der Sinn des Menschengeschlechtes muss "ausser dem Menschengeschlechte liegen" und so arbeiten die Menschen "zu höhern dir unbekannten Zwecken" an der Fortentwicklung mit ²⁵⁹ Trotz dieses entscheidenden Ignoramus besteht aber Herder darauf, dass die Geschichte nur unter dem Gesichtspunkte des Fortstrebens aufgefasst werden könne, und diesen in der Weltgeschichte sichtbaren "Plan des Fortstrebens" bezeichnet er als sein "grosses Thema."²⁶⁰

Der Aegypter konnte nicht ohne den Orientalier seyn, der Grieche bauete auf jene, der Römer hob sich auf den Rücken der ganzen Welt—wahrhaftig Fortgang, fortgehende Entwicklung, wenn auch kein Einzelnes dabei gewonne! Es geht ins Grosse!²⁶¹

Mit Skepsis und Zweifeln allein lässt sich keine Geschichte schreiben, der Historiker braucht Werte und Massstabe, um dem von ihm dargestellten Teil der Geschichte einen Zielpunkt geben zu können. Der radikale Relativismus, auf den der reine Historismus hindrangt, bedeutet Anarchie der Werte, und nur wer wie Herder ein grosses Fortstreben, das nicht mit Fortschritt verwechselt werden darf, schildert, kann diesem Uebel ausweichen ²⁶² Das bedeutet nichts anderes als eine Bekämpfung des Relativismus durch den Subjektivismus, aber da es keinen anderen Ausweg gibt, so wird das zu einem Problem nach der Art von Scylla und Charybdis. Wer einen alles zersetzenden Relativismus vermeiden will, der muss sich zu einer subjektiven Weltanschauung bekennen und von dieser Grundlage aus der Geschichte ein Ziel weisen. Daher muss nach jeder bedeutsamen politischen Verschiebung die Geschichte der Welt neu geschrieben werden, denn da wir ihr mit dem Wandel unserer Anschauungen neue Ziele setzen, ist die früher geschriebene Geschichte unmodern, man kann fast sagen: unrichtig geworden.

Eine zielbedingte Entwicklung setzt eine Kraft voraus, die sie in der ihr bestimmten Richtung vorwärts treibt. Hinweis auf den Willen einzelner Individuen gewährt in dieser Hinsicht keine befriedigende Antwort, denn wenn auch der eine oder andere grosse Staatsmann dieses Ziel vielleicht selber im Auge gehabt hat, so beruht doch der Gang der Entwicklung in der Hauptsache auf Faktoren, deren Hauptzweck nicht die Forderung dieser Ziele ist. In der Aufklärung hatte sich aus dieser Erkenntnis der beruchtigte geschichtliche Pragmatismus entwickelt.²⁶³ Die

²⁵⁹ v, 559f.

²⁶⁰ v, 511

²⁶¹ v, 513.

²⁶² Troeltsch, Historismus, S. 122 f.

²⁶³ Fueter (Historiographie, S. 342), der allerdings darauf hinweist, dass der Pragmatismus schon vor der Aufklärung existiert hatte und von der Aufklärung nur konsequenter durchgeführt worden war.

grossen Geschichtsschreiber jener Zeit, allen voran Voltaire, fanden ein besonderes Vergnügen darin, grosse historische Ereignisse aus ganz inadäquaten Ursachen zu erklären, wie z B Pascal noch auf den Einfluss der Grosse von Kleopatras Nase auf die Gestaltung der Welt hingewiesen hatte ²⁶⁴ Indem Herder zeigte, dass sich die Entwicklung der Menschheit nach allgemeinen Principien vollzieht, die über dem Individuum stehen, entzog er diesem Pragmatismus den Boden, ohne jedoch die Bedeutung des Individuums in historischen Prozess zu verkleinern. Andererseits bedurfte aber die Frage einer Klärung, wodurch die Verwirklichung dieser überindividuellen Prinzipien gewährleistet sei, und die Antwort darauf konnte nur der Hinweis auf irrationale und unbewusste Kräfte sein. Ganz im modernen Sinne weist Herder häufig auf den Nationalgeist und seine Auseinandersetzung mit andern Nationalgeistern als die eigentlich treibende Kraft der Geschichte hin, häufig nimmt er allerdings zu transzendenten Mächten seine Zuflucht, indem er die Welt zu einem Schauplatz der Gottheit macht ²⁶⁵ Die letztere Ansicht wird von der modernen Geschichtswissenschaft nicht mehr geteilt, aber wesentlich bleibt es unter allen Umständen, dass Herder mit dem Aufklärungsrationalismus in der Geschichte energisch Schluss gemacht hat. Wenn man bedenkt, wie sehr noch ein Historiker vom Range Schlozers alles rational verständlich zu machen sucht, ²⁶⁶ so zeigt sich wieder, wie fruchtbar das Schema Rousseaus für Herder war und wie selbständig er es in einem ganz neuen Sinne fortgebildet hatte Mit Recht darf er trotz aller Anlehnungen an den Genfer seinem Freunde Hartknoch gegenüber behaupten, dass es "wirklich meine Philosophie der Geschichte" sei ²⁶⁷

Aber wenn Herder im Verhältnis zu Rousseau eine solche innere Selbstständigkeit besass, warum lehnte er sich dann, zum mindesten ausserlich, so stark an ihn an? Dass Rousseaus Schema der Entwicklung durchaus unhistorisch ist, war ihm schon bei der Neubearbeitung seiner Fragmente klar geworden; warum übernimmt er des Schema trotzdem wieder, und zwar in einem überwiegend historischen Werke, in dem es infolge seiner Schablonenhaftigkeit letzten Endes doch eher störend wirkt, so fruchtbar es auch im einzelnen gewesen war und so sehr es die Entwicklung seiner neuen Ideen gefordert hatte? Zwei Gründe durften Herder dazu veranlassen haben. Der eine ergibt sich aus der Entstehung des Werkes: es war ursprünglich in viel engerem Anschluss an Rousseau konzipiert worden, ²⁶⁴ Pensées, Teil I, Art. 9, §46.

²⁶⁵ Troeltsch (op. cit. S 46) weist daraufhin, dass die Annahme eines Gemeingeistes "ein Bewusstsein ausserhalb des aktuellen Bewusstseins des Individuums" voraussetzt Auch Herder ist diese Tatsache intuitiv klar geworden und so beruft er sich stets auf die Vorsehung, wenn er mit diesem ihm auf andere Art unlösbaren Problem in Berührung kommt.

²⁶⁶ Vgl. Hermann Wesendonck: Die Begründung der neueren Geschichtsschreibung durch Gatterer und Schlozer (Leipzig, 1876), S. 93. ²⁶⁷ Von und an Herder, I, 43.

und so behalt Herder dieses Schema bei, ohne zu bemerken, dass er ihm teilweise entwachsen ist. Später, bei der Niederschrift seiner Ideen, ist ihm dies klar geworden, und er gibt dies Schema auf, ohne dass diese Aenderung eine entscheidende Umgestaltung des Entwicklungsgedankens nach sich zöge. Aber auch innerhalb der Geschichtsphilosophie als solcher erfüllt das Rousseausche Schema noch einen bestimmten Zweck: Herder verwendet es, um das Wesen der historischen Individualität zu verdeutlichen. Die Geschichte galt ihm einerseits als ein grosses Fortstreben, aber andererseits forderte jeder einzelne Teil dieses Fortstrebens selbstständiges Interesse. Hier wird die Parallele zu den Lebensaltern fruchtbar: Gerade wie die einzelnen Lebensalter des Menschen sowohl Zweck in sich selbst sind wie auch zur gleichen Zeit das nächste Alter vorbereiten, so ist auch "im Reiche Gottes . . . alles Mittel und Zweck zugleich, und so gewiss auch diese Jahrhunderte."²⁶⁸ Die Doppelstellung aller geschichtlichen Erscheinungen wird damit deutlich gekennzeichnet: jede Zeit ist Baustein im Fundament der folgenden, aber sie hat gleichzeitig auch ihren eigenen Sinn und bedarf demgemäss einer selbstständigen Wertung nach ihren eigenen Massstäben.²⁶⁹ Daher ist es sinnlos, die einzelnen Stadien des Entwicklungsganges zu vergleichen, sinnlos zu fragen, welche Nation am glücklichsten gewesen sei, denn jede Nation und dementsprechend auch jede Zeit "hat ihren Mittelpunkt der Glückseligkeit in sich, wie jede Kugel ihren Schwerpunkt."²⁷⁰ Die Verbindung dieses Gedankens der historischen Individualität mit dem des universalgeschichtlichen Fortstrebens zu verdeutlichen, war die Aufgabe, zu deren Lösung Herder sich des Rousseauschen Schemas bediente.

Das "grossartige Grundbuch des Historismus" nennt Stadelmann die Geschichtsphilosophie von 74,²⁷¹ und Meinecke sieht in ihr die "höchste Synthese geschichtlichen Denkens."²⁷² Es ist verblüffend, dass ein solches Werk auch nur in entferntester Verbindung mit Rousseau entstehen konnte, der schlechthin als die Inkarnation unhistorischen Denkens gelten kann, aber gerade deshalb müssen wir Herder umso mehr bewundern, dass es ihm gelang, den weiten Weg von Rousseaus metaphysischer zur universalhistorischen Entwicklungsidee zu finden. Trotz vielfacher Fehler, Halbheiten, Verschwommenheiten und direkter innerer Widersprüche tritt der Entwicklungsgedanke in der Geschichtsphilosophie zum ersten Male in der Art und Weise hervor, wie er sich allein bis auf unsere Tage als brauchbar erwiesen hat. Herder hat recht: sein Werk ist in der Tat "sehr niedlich." Und indem wir Herder somit als bahnbrechenden Neurerer anerkennen, fällt auch ein Teil des Verdienstes an diesen Neuerungen auf Jean-Jacques. Teils im Widerspruch zu ihm, teils in Anlehnung an ihn, stets jedoch in Verbindung mit ihm ist Herder zu den geschichtsphilosophischen Anschauungen gelangt, die ihn zu einem solchen Neuerer machten. Seine ursprüngliche Schwarmerei für Rousseau war schnell genug zusammengebrochen, die Reaktion gegen Rousseau hatte die heilsame Wirkung, ihm eine grossere Ehrfurcht vor den Tatsachen einzuflossen, die Rückkehr zu Rousseau brachte ihm schliesslich zum Bewusstsein, dass sich Geschichte nur mit Ideen schreiben lasse. Und wenn auch Herder seine eigentliche Geschichtsphilosophie keineswegs Rousseau verdankt, so kommt diesem doch schon als blossem Anreger dieser Ideen eine entscheidende Bedeutung für das deutsche Geistesleben zu.

²⁶⁸ v, 527

²⁶⁹ Auf die Verwendung der Lebensalter zur geschichtlichen Individualisierung macht H. Grigenson aufmerksam, vgl. Das Problem des geschichtlichen Fortschritts bei Iselin und Herder (Erlangen, 1913) ²⁷⁰ v, 508 f. ²⁷¹ Stadelmann, op. cit., S. 28.

²⁷² Meinecke, Historismus, II, 440.

HANS M. WOLFF

University of Texas

DIE NAMENGEBUG BEI JEAN PAUL

“Jede Namengebung ist eine Art Belebung, Beseelung, Individualisierung ”

Harry Maync

I. Es gibt meines Wissens noch keine zusammenfassende historische oder theoretische Untersuchung über die dichterische Namengebung. Mir sind ausser kleineren Aufsätzen, die das Thema mehr plaudernd und feuilletonistisch behandeln,¹ nur wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen über die Namen bei einzelnen Dichtern bekannt, z B. bei Aristophanes, Shakespeare, Dickens, Raabe, Fontane. Gelegentliche Bemerkungen und Beobachtungen zu dem Thema finden sich natürlich überall verstreut.² Es wäre sicher eine dankbare, wenn auch schwierige Aufgabe, die Frage, nach welchen Rücksichten und Prinzipien die Dichter ihre erfundenen Personen getauft haben, einmal im weitesten zeitlichen und räumlichen Umfange zu beantworten; die Unterschiede der Zeiten, der Völker, der Sprachen wurden sich in diesem Spiegel klar auffangen lassen.

Wer sich dieser Aufgabe unterziehen wollte, musste allerdings nicht nur über umfassende Literaturkenntnis, sondern vor allem auch über die gründlichste Sprachenkenntnis verfügen. Es gehört eine besonders intime Vertrautheit mit fremden Sprachen dazu, um gerade die Eigenart der Namen richtig beurteilen zu können. Es kommt ja dabei nicht so sehr auf den direkten Sinn und Klang des Namens an als vielmehr auf die mannigfachen Nebentöne, die dabei mitschwingen, auf die näheren oder fernerer Assoziationen, die sich daran knupfen. Wie schwer solche Nuancen für einen mit der betreffenden Sprache nicht ganz und gar Vertrauten richtig zu erfassen sind, erkennt man z B. an den Missgriffen, die manchen Schriftstellern bei der Wahl fremdlandischer Namen untergelaufen sind. Selbst ein so guter Kenner der deutschen Sprache wie Carlyle hat dem Helden seines humoristischen Romans Sartor Resartus den unmöglichen Namen Teufelsdröckh gegeben. In Sinclair Lewis' Roman Samuel Dodsworth, der zum Teil in Deutschland spielt, kommen z B. ein Professor Braut und eine Fürstin Drachenthal vor, Namen, die wohl gelegentlich vorkommen mögen, aber darum nicht minder unpassend erscheinen. In Maupassants Mademoiselle Fifi tragen die deutschen Offiziere sogar sprachlich unmögliche Namen wie Kelweingstein, Farlsberg, Scheunabourg. Vermutlich wird es in deutschen Romanen mit den ausländischen Namen nicht viel besser bestellt sein, E. Th. A. Hoffmanns Balletmeister Legénie (im Meister Floh) oder Raabes Oberst Timotheus Trichinow Resonowsky (im Hungerpastor) durften in französischen bzw. russischen Ohren sonderbar genug klingen, und die Entschuldigung, dass sie eben nur für deutsche Ohren bestimmt seien, ist doch nur eine halbe

¹ Als Beispiele seien nur angeführt die Plauderei von Ernst Eckstein “Wie tauf' ich meinen Helden?” in dessen Essaysammlung Leichte Waare (Leipzig, 1879), S 65-75, und der gehalt- und kenntnisreiche Aufsatz von Harry Maync “Nomen et omen. Von burgerlicher und dichterischer Namengebung” in Westermanns Monatsheften, 62. Jg., 1917/18, S 653-664. (Diesem Aufsatz ist unser Motto entnommen.) Wenig für unser Thema bietet die kleine Schrift von Eduard Boas “Namensymbolik in der deutschen Poesie,” Landsberg a. d. W. 1840.

² Z B. in R. M. Meyers Literaturgeschichte des 19. Jahrhunderts und in Keller-Keiters Theorie des Romans.

Besonderes Augenmerk musste in einer solchen Untersuchung auf die Behandlung sogenannter "redender" Namen in Uebersetzungen gerichtet werden, ein schwieriges, fast unlosbares Problem, mit dem sich die Uebersetzer zu verschiedenen Zeiten sehr verschieden abgefunden haben, worauf ich hier nicht näher eingehen kann.³ Es musste natürlich überall zwischen ernsten und komischen, zwischen idealistischen und realistischen Dichtungen unterschieden werden, und wohl auch zwischen epischen und dramatischen Werken, denn in beiden unterliegen die Namen doch sehr verschiedenen Bedingungen. Auf der Bühne ist der Eindruck, den wir von einer neuauftretenden Person erhalten, in erster Linie von ihrer äusseren Erscheinung und ihrem Gehaben abhängig; der Name spielt dabei im allgemeinen nur eine untergeordnete Rolle, zumal da er oft kaum genannt wird. In der Erzählung dagegen trägt der Name sehr wesentlich dazu bei, von dem Träger eine bestimmte Vorstellung zu erwecken. Das gilt nicht nur für den Leser, sondern sogar für den Verfasser selber. Es ist uns von manchen erzählenden Dichtern, z.B. von Fontane, bezeugt, dass ihnen eine selbsterfundene Gestalt erst recht lebendig und deutlich geworden, wenn sie einen passenden Namen für sie gefunden hatten. So sagt Jean Paul einmal nicht ganz ohne Grund, die Heldinnen und Helden seiner Romane könnten ohne ihre kostlichen Namen gar nicht existieren.⁴

II. Wenn eine solche allgemeine Geschichte der dichterischen Namensgebung einmal geschrieben werden sollte, so musste darin Jean Paul eine hervorragende Stelle zugewiesen erhalten, zum mindesten innerhalb der deutschen Entwicklung. In seiner kenntnisreichen und anregenden Schrift über die deutschen Vornamen bezeichnet Robert Franz Arnold⁵ Jean Paul als denjenigen deutschen Dichter (neben Richard Wagner), der die psychologischen Werte der Namen am tiefsten erkannt und am meisterlichsten ausgenutzt habe, und wünscht daher eine Spezialuntersuchung über seine Namenwahl. Ueber den Geschmack der von Jean Paul gewählten Namen lässt sich gewiss oft streiten, aber das wird man ihnen zugestehen müssen, dass sie auffallen und sich dem Gedächtnis leicht einprägen. Daraus erklärt es sich, dass selbst Leuten, die wenig oder nichts von seinen Werken gelesen haben, doch Namen wie Wutz, Fixlein, Siebenkas, Katzenberger, Kuhschnappel vertraut zu sein pflegen. Bekanntlich ist ja auch einer seiner Ortsnamen zu einer allgemeinen Bezeichnung geworden; denn wenn Krahwinkel auch erst durch Kotzebues Lustspiel Die Kleinstadter (1803) in Aufnahme gekommen ist, so war doch der Name zwei Jahre vorher von Jean Paul zuerst in der Erzählung Das heimliche Klaglied der Manner als Bezeichnung einer klatschsuchtigen deutschen Kleinstadt verwendet worden. Es fehlte nicht viel, so hatte auch der Schauplatz von Siebenkas' Ehestand, Tod und Hochzeit, der Marktflecken Kuhschnappel, als Typus eines deutschen Abdera sprichwörtliche Bedeutung gewonnen.⁶

³ Vgl. darüber Ludwig Tiecks Nachgelassene Schriften, hsgb. von Rudolf Kopke (Leipzig, 1855), II, 66 ff.

⁴ Jean Pauls Sämtliche Werke, historisch-kritische Ausgabe (Weimar, 1927 ff.), I Abt., XIII, 139 — Im folgenden mit S. W. zitiert, wenn keine Abteilung angegeben, ist die erste gemeint. ⁵ Die deutschen Vornamen, 2. Aufl. (Wien, 1901), S. 52 und 58.

Jean Paul ist denn auch einer der ersten gewesen, die sich über die Frage der dichterischen Namenwahl theoretisch geäußert haben. Er sagt darüber in seiner Vorschule der Aesthetik (1804) am Schluss der "Regeln und Winke für Romanschreiber" (§74 der zweiten Auflage):

Sogar die Kleinigkeit des Namen-Gebens ist kaum eine Wieland, Goethe, Musaus wussten echt deutsche und rechte zu geben. Der Mensch sehnt sich in der kleinsten Sache doch nach ein wenig Grund . . . So sucht er im Namen nur etwas, etwas Weniges, aber doch etwas. Torre-Cremada oder Latour brûlée, desgleichen Feu-ardent hießen (kann er versichern aus Bayle) schon über der Taufschüssel zwei Monche, welche die halbe religiöse Oppositionspartei froh verbrannten⁷).—Unausstehlich ist dem deutschen Gefühle die britische Namensvetterschaft mit der Sache,—wozu Hermes früher die hasslichen Proben mit den Herren Verkennt und Grundleger und neuerlich an Herrn Kerker und überall geliefert⁸). Aber ganz und gar nichts soll wieder kein Name bedeuten, besonders da nach Leibniz alle Eigennamen ursprünglich allgemeine waren, sondern so recht in der Viertels-Mitte soll er stehen, mehr mit Klängen als mit Silben reden und viel sagen, ohne es zu nennen, wie z. B. die Wielandschen Namen Flock, Flaunz, Parasol, Dindonette etc.⁹) So hat z. B. der uns bekannte Autor [Jean Paul] nicht ohne wahren Verstand unbedeutende Menschen einsilbig. Wutz, Stuss, getauft, andere schlimme oder scheinbar wichtige mit der Iterative-Silbe

⁶ Vgl. S. W. VI, Einleitung S. XLII

⁷ Auf solche ominösen Namen weist Jean Paul auch sonst gern hin, z. B. auf den des rauberischen französischen Kommissars in der Schweiz Rapinat, s. S. W. XIII, 138, II. Abt., IV, 72.

⁸ In Hermes' Romanen Zween literarische Märtyrer und deren Frauen (1789) und Mutter, Amme und Kind (1809)

⁹ Flaunz in Wielands Geron der Adelige, Parasol und Dindonette im Neuen Amadis. Flock kommt meines Wissens nicht bei Wieland vor.

-er Lederer, Fraischdorfer, einen kahlen, fahlen Fahland, etc.¹⁰ Was die Weiber anlangt, so erstreckt sich das indische Gesetz, dass der Bramine stets eines mit einem schonen Namen heiraten soll, bis in die Romane herüber, jede Heldin hat neuerer Zeiten, wenn auch keine andere Schönheit, doch diese, nämlich eine welsche Benennung statt eines welschen Gesichts.

Hier ist also der Kernpunkt scharf und zweifellos in der Hauptsache richtig aufgezeigt: Der dichterische Name soll "viel sagen, ohne es zu nennen," mehr durch Klang als durch eigentliche Bedeutung wirken. Dieser heute wohl allgemein anerkannte, wenn auch nicht immer befolgte Grundsatz war damals noch weit davon entfernt, sich durchgesetzt zu haben. Es hatten wohl einzelne Dichter gelegentlich instinktiv danach gehandelt, aber weder in der Theorie noch in der Praxis war das Prinzip Gemeingut geworden.

III Vergewärtigen wir uns zunächst einmal, wie es denn zu Jean Pauls Zeit mit der dichterischen Namensgebung, besonders im Roman, bestellt war. Da herrschte z B noch vielfach die alte Sitte oder Unsitte, Personen- und Ortsnamen nur mit einzelnen Buchstaben, meist den Anfangsbuchstaben, oder mit Sternchen zu bezeichnen, was für unser Gefühl besonders storend wirkt, wenn der Name schon im Titel erscheint, z B. in Gellerts Geschichte der schwedischen Gräfin von G, in Pfeils Geschichte des Grafen von P. und noch in Kleists Marquise von O. Dieser Brauch, der aus der Memoirenliteratur stammte und mit der krampfhaft festgehaltenen Fiktion der historischen Wahrheit des Erzählten zusammenhing, über die man ästhetisch doch eigentlich längst hinaus war, fand sich trotz einzelner Proteste¹¹ nicht etwa nur in Romanen, die in höheren Gesellschaftskreisen spielten, wie z B. in Schillers Geisterseher, wo es allenfalls noch gerechtfertigt erscheinen mochte, sondern vielfach auch in bürgerlichen und humoristischen Romanen, z.B. in Musaus' Grandison II und in Hippels Lebenslaufen nach aufsteigender Linie.¹² Bei Jean Paul begegnet man solchen Buchstaben und Sternchen fast nur in seinen frühen Satiren,¹³ einigemal auch noch in ¹⁰ Stuss in Jeans Pauls Paltingenesien, Lederer der betrügerische Konsistorialbote im Jubelsenior, Fraischdorfer der unsympathische Kunstrat in der Geschichte meiner Vorrede zum Quintus Fixlein und im Titan, Fahland der Zensor in Des Luftschiffers Giannozzo Seebuch, 4. Fahrt.

¹¹ Z B von Karl Friedrich Cramer in seiner Uebersetzung von Jens Baggesens Labyrinth, I, 86 ff (1793)

¹² In der 2. Auflage von Musaus' Roman, die 1781/82 unter dem Titel Der deutsche Grandison erschien, sind die Buchstaben zum Teil zu vollen Namen ergänzt. Bei Hippel ist nur eine Nebenperson mit dem Familiennamen bezeichnet, Dr. Saft. Merkwürdigerweise kommt auch in dem Personenverzeichnis von Goethes Hanswursts Hochzeit ein Dr. Saft vor.

¹³ Er nimmt dann aber meist die ersten oder letzten Buchstaben des Alphabets (Dichter

seinem ersten Roman, der Unsichtbaren Loge, aber nur dann, wenn es sich um flüchtig angeführte Nebenpersonen handelt, wie etwa die Soupergäste der Residentin von Bouse.¹⁴ In seinen späteren Werken pflegt er auch solche nur im Vorbeigehen erwähnte Personen mit vollen Namen zu bezeichnen, z.B. im 39. Zykel des Titan die Gäste des Ministers von Froulay. Im Hesperus kommt allerdings einmal ein Graf von O vor; aber das ist hier keine Abkürzung, sondern der ganze Name.¹⁵ Mit der Fiktion der Wirklichkeit, die Jean Paul ja auch noch überall aufrecht erhält, wenn auch meist nur in ironisch-humoristischer Form, findet er sich, wie andere vor und nach ihm, unschwer ab durch die Ausrede, er habe die wahren Namen durch erfundene ersetzt.¹⁶

Auch die von andern, z.B. von dem namenscheuen Goethe, gern angewandte Methode, statt eines Namens nur den Beruf (der Architekt, der Hauptmann, etc.) oder den Familienstand (die Mutter, der Oheim, etc.) anzugeben, hat Jean Paul nur selten und nur bei gleichgültigen Episodenfiguren geübt und dann meist noch mit irgend einer scherzhaften Bemerkung ausdrücklich entschuldigt; "was wird der Leser nach Zunamen dieses Volks fragen!" heisst es etwa einmal in der Unsichtbaren Loge, oder von der Aebtissin im Hesperus: "ihr Name wird mir gar nicht berichtet," oder von einer Dame im Titan: "Hafenreffer [der angebliche Lieferant des historischen Materials] weiss selber nicht, wie sie heisset."¹⁷ Ihm war jede Anonymität, ausser etwa auf Reisen,¹⁸ schon im gewöhnlichen Leben unsympathisch, während Goethe sie liebte. "Wenn ich von einem ungekannten Wesen," schreibt er einmal, "nur den Namen weiss, so ist's mir individueller und meinem Herzen näher als ohne diesen."¹⁹ Im §131 der Levana weist er im Anschluss an Pestalozzi nachdrücklich darauf hin, wie sehr die Namen der Dinge zu deren Erfassung und Unterscheidung dienen: "Durch Benennung wird das Aeussere wie eine Insel erobert und vorher dazu gemacht, wie durch Namengebung Tiere bezahmt werden."²⁰ Er fand es daher hübsch und richtig, dass die alten Ritter auch ihren Pferden und Schwertern Eigennamen gaben. Der Posthund im Hesperus bekommt sogar einen Nachnamen: Spitzius Hofmann.²¹ Wenn er ausnahmsweise einmal einer Person keinen Namen gibt,

A, Kandidat Z etc.), um anzudeuten, dass es sich nicht um bestimmte, sondern um beliebige Personen handelt, s. S.W. I, 102, 156, 205, 209, II, 244. ¹⁴ S.W. II, 257 f.

¹⁵ S.W. III, 149. Der Graf von O, an den Jean Paul denkt, war preussischer Major und im Siebenjährigen Kriege Kommandant der Festung Glatz, er entstammte dem alten französischen Adelsgeschlecht von O. ¹⁶ Vgl. z.B. S.W. V, 281, VIII, 57.

¹⁷ S.W. II, 109, IV, 151, VIII, 183. Vgl. auch XIII, 147. " . . . Jungling, dessen Taufname Ernst uns genügen mag." ¹⁸ Vgl. S.W. XI, 427. ¹⁹ S.W. II, Abt., V, 126.

²⁰ Vgl. Zschokkes Selbstschau (1840), S. 83. "Man kennt nur, was man auch nennen kann."

²¹ S.W. III, 38. Der Name dient später (IV, 4) zu einem satirischen Ausfall gegen den Wiener Spitzel Leopold Aloys Hoffmann.

so erhält sie doch wenigstens irgend eine charakteristische, unverwechselbare Bezeichnung. So nennt er in der Unsichtbaren Loge den herrnhutischen Erzieher des Helden, dessen Herkunft absichtlich in einem mystischen Dunkel bleibt, den Genius, eine Ministerin ebenda, die gern in Ohnmacht fällt, die Défaillante, den Hauskaplan im Kampaner Thal Phylax; der geheimnisvolle Oheim im Titan heisst der Kahlkopf, der unheimliche Nachtwandler im Komet der ewige Jude oder der Ledermann. In der humoristischen Beschreibung des Umreitens der vogtländischen Ritterschaft werden die einzelnen adligen Herren nach der bekannten Regel der lateinischen Grammatik mit Panis, Piscis, Crinis etc. angeführt.²² Die drei unehelichen Söhne des Fürsten von Flachsenfingen werden, entsprechend den Kronprinzen von England, Portugal und Spanien, als der Walliser, der Brasilier, der Asturier bezeichnet,²³ sie selber nennen sich nach den drei Königen aus dem Morgenlande Kaspar, Melchior und Balthasar.²⁴ Dr. SpheX nennt seine drei Söhne nach berühmten Aerzten Van Swieten, Boerhave und Galenus, die Maler im Komet nennen sich entweder nach ihren Meistern (Denner, Potter etc.) oder nach ihren Lieblingssujets (z. B. Ochs, Laus, Bettler, Sauger), und was dergleichen Scherze mehr sind.²⁵

Andre Romanschreiber gaben ihren Personen nun zwar volle Namen, aber sie wählten aus Absicht oder Vorsicht möglichst wenig auffallende und charakteristische, besonders für adlige Figuren, wie etwa Waldheim, Sternheim, Hohenthal, Hohenberg, Blumenthal, Felseneck u. dgl. Auch solchen faden, nichtssagenden Allerweltsnamen begegnet man nicht nur in Romanen des höheren Stils, sondern ebenso in bürgerlich-humoristischen Werken, die sonst auf individuelle Farbgebung ausgehen.²⁶ Der popularste humoristische Romanschreiber vor Jean Paul, Johann Gottwert Müller (Itzehoe), wusste den Titelhelden seines bekanntesten Werkes nicht charakteristischer zu taufen als Siegfried von Lindenberg, ein Name, der eher für den Helden eines Ritterromans gepasst hatte als für einen komischen pommerschen Landjunker, die Heldin heisst nicht

²² S. W. II, Abt., III, 329 ff.

²³ S. W. III, 40. Der Einfall ist wahrscheinlich durch das von Jean Paul exzerpierte Tagebuch eines Weltmannes von dem Grafen von Lamberg (deutsch von F. L. Wagner, 1775) angeregt, wo II, 21 von einem indischen Nabob erzählt wird, dass er seine Kinder Prinz von Wallis, Herzog von Gloucester, von Cumberland etc. nenne. ²⁴ S. W. IV, 34.

²⁵ S. W. VIII, 130, xv, 345, 359, 374. Auch benannten Personen gibt Jean Paul der Abwechslung halber gern noch Spitznamen; so wird Fenk wegen seiner Zopfform der Iltis-Doktor genannt, Matthieu im Hesperus wegen seines Vornamens der Evangelist, Stiefel im Siebenkäs der Pelzstiefel, Wehmeier im Titan der Schachtelmagister. Sich selbst bezeichnet Jean Paul als das Einbein, den Monsieur etc. Sogar Orte bekommen Beinamen, z. B. Pestitz heisst wiederholt die Lindenstadt.

²⁶ Etwas anderes ist es, wenn Fielding seinem Helden den banalen Namen Tom Jones gab, er wollte ihn damit als Normaltypus hinstellen.

minder banal Elise von Wellenthal. Unter den vielen Hunderten von Namen in Jean Pauls Romanen wird man so nichtssagenden nirgends begegnen. Selbst Falkenberg in der Unsichtbaren Loge ist doch nicht ganz so blass, wenn Jean Paul später wohl auch einen ungewöhnlicheren gewählt hatte.

Schlimmer noch als solche nichtssagenden Namen waren die zuvielsagenden, die den Charakter direkt bezeichnen, wie etwa Ohnewitz, Habenichts, Schlauberger, Spurnas, Raufbold, Langfinger, Wagehals, Leichtfuss, Windhund, Schuftig, Saugling, Niedlich, Frohlich, Redlich, Frech, Grob etc. Dahin gehört auch die Benennung von Handwerkern nach ihrem Gerat, z B Schuster Pech oder Pfrieme, Schneider Zwirn, Schulmeister Ruthe, Kaufmann Pfeffer, Apotheker Pille u. dgl. Solche "redenden" Namen, die man sich heute höchstens noch in volkstümlichen Possen gefallen lässt, waren doch damals auch in ernsthaften Romanen noch gang und gabe, selbst bessere Schriftsteller haben sie nicht immer vermieden, man denke nur an Schillers Schuftele, Wurm und Kalb, an Jacobis Biderthal (im Woldemar), an Goethes Mittler (in den Wahlverwandtschaften), an Kleists Licht (im Zerbrochenen Krug). Der oben genannte Muller (Itzehoe), der gelegentlich einmal richtig bemerkte, dass die deutsche Sprache im Gegensatz zur englischen zu ihrer Ehre nicht sehr zu bedeutenden Namen taue,²⁷ verwandte demungeachtet in seinen Herren von Waldheim Namen wie Schleichmann, Krumm, Langfinger. Jean Paul hatte gegen solche redenden Namen schon im wirklichen Leben eine Abneigung, er schreibt einmal: "Ich war . . . von jeher allen Geschlechtsnamen, die etwas bedeuten, feind, z.B. Hofmann, Edelmann, Zimmermann, Seiler, Richter, wie schon hingegen ist einer von gar keiner Bedeutung, z.B. Goethe, Herder, Leibniz, Jacobi, Kant!"²⁸ Sicher hat diese seine Abneigung gegen den eigenen Familiennamen mit dazu beigetragen, dass er seine Werke unter einem Decknamen erscheinen liess. "Hiess' ich Vater oder Kind oder Gutmuths, längst hatt' ich diese Namen abgelegt," sagt er in seinem sogenannten Vitabuch.²⁹ In seinen Romanen hat er derartige Namen möglichst vermieden. Bei ihrer grossen Verbreitung (denn schliesslich haben ja alle Eigennamen wenigstens ursprünglich eine bestimmte Bedeutung gehabt, worauf Jean Paul in der oben angeführten Stelle der Vorschule selber hinweist) konnte er zwar nicht umhin, hin und wieder einmal auch einen solchen redenden Namen zu verwenden; es geschieht dann aber mit ganz vereinzelt Ausnahmen immer so, dass zwischen der Bedeutung und dem Charakter oder Stand des Tragers kein direkter Zusammenhang besteht. Wir kommen darauf später noch zurück.

²⁷ In der zweifellos von ihm herrührenden interessanten Besprechung der Bodeschen Uebersetzung von Fieldings Tom Jones in der Allgemeinen Deutschen Bibliothek, Anhang zum 56. bis 86. Bande, v, 2613

²⁸ S W. VII, 276

²⁹ Wahrheit aus Jean Pauls Leben (1827), II, 99

Wenn Jean Paul in der Vorschule der Aesthetik Wieland, Goethe und Musaus als Muster guter deutscher Namengebung anführt, so kann man das doch nur mit grossen Einschränkungen gelten lassen. Wieland war ja schon durch seine Stoffwahl fast ganz auf fremde Namen angewiesen. Er hatte allerdings zweifellos ein feines Ohr für den Klang der Namen, und wo ihm seine Vorlagen die Freiheit der Wahl liessen, hat er mit charakteristisch klingenden Namen gute Wirkungen erzielt. Sehr glücklich hat er z. B. in den Abderiten lautmalende griechische Namen verwandt, wie Thlaps, Pyrops, Lelex, Damonax, Smilax, Gulleru, Salabanda, Pithokus, Nannion.³⁰ Im Neuen Amadis sprechen die viersilbigen, tanzelnden französischen Namen Dindonette, Blaffardine, Chatouilleuse, Colifichon etc. das leichtfertige Wesen ihrer Trägerinnen gut aus, während die mexikanischen Namen Koxkox, Kikequetzel etc. mehr putzig als charakteristisch klingen. Zu deutschen Namen hat Wieland kaum Gelegenheit gehabt, und die wenigen, die man in seinen Werken findet, sind keineswegs besonders glücklich gewählt, z. B. Bonifaz Schleicher.

Auch Goethes Werke liefern nur eine verhältnismässig sehr geringe Ausbeute an deutschen Familien- und Ortsnamen. Er gibt—ausser in seiner Frühzeit—meist nur Vornamen und Standesbezeichnungen, selbst in einer Dichtung, die so getreu und individuell deutsches Kleinstadtleben malt wie Hermann und Dorothea.³¹ Nur Nebenorte werden zuweilen bei Namen genannt, z. B. im Werther Wahlheim, in Wilhelm Meisters Lehrjahren Hochdorf (II, 3). Die wenigen deutschen Familiennamen sind nicht schlecht, aber auch—im Gegensatz zu den Vornamen—nicht gerade besonders charakteristisch gewählt, merkwürdigerweise sind sie fast alle zweisilbig und auf -er endigend: Werther, Meister, Werner, Mittler, Wagner, Brander, Solter, Sommer, Pumper, Forster. Frau Spritzbierlein (im Ur-Faust), Frau Marthe Schwerdtlein und der Hanswurst Kilian Brustfleck sind vereinzelte glückliche Ausnahmen.

Am ehesten trifft Jean Pauls Lob noch für Musaus zu. Man begegnet in seinen Werken manchen guten deutschen Namen, wie etwa Wacker-mann Uhlfinger, Eberhard Bronkhorst, Egger Genebald, Peter Bloch, Wilibald Lampert, Neunhorn, Druschling, Urlau, auch habschen Orts-

³⁰ Ueber den eigenartigen Reiz der griechischen Mädchennamen auf -on macht Mörike in einem Brief an Hermann Kurz eine hübsche Bemerkung, die H. Maync in dem oben angeführten Aufsatz zitiert. Vgl. Chariton im Titan.

³¹ Dass das nicht etwa nur am Versmass und Stil liegt, sieht man an Vossens Luise, wo der Ort (Grunau) und der Nachname der Heldin (Blum) genannt werden. Auch im Werther erfährt man die Familiennamen von Lotte, Albert, Wilhelm nicht, so wie nicht den Vornamen des Helden.

namen, wie Burgholzheim, Geroldsheim. Aber es kam Musäus dabei im allgemeinen doch mehr auf die altdeutsche Färbung als auf die individuelle Charakteristik an Kurz, einen eigentlichen Vorläufer Jean Pauls in der scharf charakterisierenden Namengebung wüsste ich nicht zu nennen. Man trifft wohl hie und da auf einzelne wohlgelungene Namen; aber das bleibt immer etwas mehr oder weniger Zufälliges. Erst Jean Paul hat sich bewusst und systematisch auf die Findung charakteristischer Namen verlegt.

IV. Diese Besonderheit Jean Pauls hängt natürlich eng mit dem humoristischen Stil seiner Werke zusammen. Er hatte es fruhe schon erkannt und hat es später in der Vorschule der Aesthetik (§35) ausführlich dargelegt, dass der Humor, weil er auf dem Kontrast der Sinnenwelt zur Idee beruht, alles bis ins kleinste hinab möglichst individualisieren muss. Wenn seine Werke in mancher Hinsicht den späteren Realismus des 19. Jahrhunderts vorbereiten und antizipieren, so liegt das nicht daran, dass er einen besonders ausgeprägten Sinn für das Wirkliche gehabt hätte (darin war ihm z.B. ein Goethe entschieden überlegen), sondern an seinem bewussten Streben nach humoristischer Individualisierung aller Personen und Zustände.

Als Hilfsmittel zu solcher Individualisierung dienten ihm grosse Sammlungen, die er sich von fruh auf systematisch angelegt hatte, Verzeichnisse von Berufsarten, Handwerken, Titeln, von Münzen, Massen und Gewichten, von Spezialitäten einzelner Lander und Stadte etc. Das Heilige Römische Reich Deutscher Nation bot ja auf allen diesen Gebieten eine selbst von Jean Paul nicht auszuschöpfende Mannigfaltigkeit an individuellen Eigentümlichkeiten und Absonderlichkeiten. In einem derartigen Sammelheft,³² das wahrscheinlich im Jahre 1789 begonnen worden ist, also in der Zeit, wo Jean Paul von der satirischen Schriftstellerei allmählich zu erzählender und darstellender Dichtung überging, findet sich nun auch eine sehr umfangreiche Liste von Orts- und Personennamen. Sie beginnt mit einem Verzeichnis geographischer Namen, wobei zunächst auch noch kurze Angaben über die Lage, Zugehörigkeit etc. beigelegt sind. Der Anfang sei hier wiedergegeben:

STÄDTE

Land Hadeln, Otterndorf darin—Fürstenthum Ratzeburg, St(adt) R(atzeburg), gehorig dem Herzog von Mecklenburg-Strelitz—Reichsstadt Nordhausen—Aebtissin von Quedlinburg—Ziegenhain in Niederhessen—Hammelnburg³³ im Hochstift Fulda—Waghausel im Hochstift Speyer, ein Bischof—Schuh-flick im Fürstenthum Heitersheim—Herrschaft und Dorf Schadeck—Fürstenthum Veldenz, pfälzisch—Herrschaft Schwabeck im Schwabischen—gefürstete Abtei Korvey, Abt, St. Hoxter³⁴—Grafschaft Holzapfel, d(em) Fürst(en) von Anhalt-Bernburg-Hoym (gehorig)—Abtei Ochsenhausen in Schwaben—die graflichen Linien Zeil-Zeil, Scheer-Scheer, Wolfegg-Wolfegg im Schwabischen—Pfullendorf in Schwaben, Reichsstadt, Buchau, Bopfingen—Ingelfingen am Kocher im Frankischen, Reichsstadt Windsheim und Schweinfurt—die freien Leute auf der Leutkircher Heide in Schwaben haben 39 unmittelbare Reichsdorfer—unmittelbares Reichsdorf Gochsheim in Franken—Vaduz, ein Flecken und Bergschloss im Fürstenthum Liechtenstein—Im Fürstenthum Jauer in Niederschlesien Schreibershau, Querbach, Dorf Krummhübel—St Mazdorf am Popperfluss in Ungarn—See Wuz und der See Kuhpanz bei Liebenwalde in der Mittelmark, worin bei Egsdorf der grosse, mittlere und der kleine Leber-See sind—Dorf Trebatsch im Bees- und Storkowschen Kreis—Dorf Zurl bei Innsbruck—Husten, Flecken im Herzogthum Engern an der Ruhr—Seissenstein, Dorf zwischen Regensburg und Wien, Spitz, Marktflecken (ebenda) usw.

³² Faszikel 10 des in der Preussischen Staatsbibliothek befindlichen Nachlasses.

³³ Diesen Namen hat später Karl Heinrich von Lang zu seinen satirischen Hammelburger Reisen (1817 ff.) verwendet.

Viele von diesen Namen hat Jean Paul in seinen Werken gelegentlich verwertet, mehrere z.B. schon in der Ende 1789 entstandenen Bayerischen Kreuzerkomödie,³⁵ Kuhpanz und Schuhflick in kleineren Satiren der nächsten Jahre,³⁶ andere am Schluss des Hesperus,³⁷ Schadeck im Quintus Fixlein, Vaduz im Siebenkas.³⁸ Man erkennt dabei deutlich, dass er "redende" Namen (wie Hammelburg, Schuhflick, Ochsenhausen, Schweinfurt) zwar nicht ganz ausschliesst, aber doch mit der Zeit immer starker solche bevorzugt, die mehr durch Klang als durch Bedeutung ins Ohr fallen (wie Hadeln, Bopfingen, Vaduz etc.). Später hat er sich dann meist nur noch die blossen Ortsnamen ohne nähere Angaben notiert. Auch hat er versucht, zwischen "guten" und "schlimmen" Namen zu unterscheiden, die ersteren dienten ihm zur Bezeichnung idyllischer Freudenstätten, wie etwa Lilienbad in der Unsichtbaren Loge, Maienthal im Hesperus, Lilar und Blumenbuhl im Titan, Elterlein in den Flegeljahren, Heiligengut im Leben Fibels, die andern wurden für satirisch gezeichnete Residenz- und Kleinstädte verwandt, wie Scheerau, Flachsenfingen, Kuhschnappel, Flätz. Doch ist die Scheidung in der Liste nicht konsequent durchgeführt.

Von Ortsnamen ging Jean Paul dann sehr bald zu Personennamen

³⁴ Vgl. Wilhelm Raabes Erzählung Hoxter und Corvey (1879)

³⁵ S W II Abt., III, 108 (Krummhübel), 111 (Scheer-Scheer, Veldenz, Querbach), 119 (Bopfingen, Leutkircher Heide), 195 (Waghausel, St. Mazdorf). Merkwürdigerweise hat Jean Paul hier den Namen seines künftigen Verlegers Matzdorff antizipiert, wie Thomas Mann in den Buddenbrooks den Namen seines späteren Schwiegervaters Pringsheim.

³⁶ S W II Abt., III, 256 und 335

³⁷ S W IV, 322 (Hadeln, Ziegenhain, Schwabeck, Holzapfel, Schweinfurt, Scheer-Scheer).

³⁸ Ebenda auch Jauer und Husten, S.W. VI, 263

über, wobei von vornherein die "klingenden" Namen die "redenden" stark überwiegen. Das sehr umfangreiche Verzeichnis beginnt so:

Markwerd, Siebenkas, Robisch, Emmerling, Schneizel, Strosner, Falbel, Wenzeslaus, Polykarpus, Blasius, Fridolinus, Heribert, Detlaus, Florian, Stanislaus, Servatius, Karpasius, Thrasibulus, Hartwig, Hoppedizel, Sessen, Gideon, Erdmann, Serapion, Hopassi, Wunibald, Sylvester, Mezner, Gunzler, Kraus, Panzer, Wiedmann, Aufhammer, Schmiedel, Pissel, Saalbaum, Saalpasser, Haberstumpf, Bever, Sappas, Polmann, Jahreis, Freudel, Zindel, Schickfuss, Oelschlagel, Stabius, Stief, Stiefel, Oefel, Oehrmann, Fruhaussen, Kheber, Gobel, Krabler, Kuhlpepper, Zebedaus, Paul, Fenz, Schlohks, Lorenz, Tenzel, Sensel, Koppel, Hus, Schodel, Strobel, Hechtel, Barthel, Benjamin, Schupfel, Zaus, Saus, Scherr, Hoppel, Klosel, Stenz, Lebrecht, Setzmann, Pfinzing, Erkel, Fehnel, Wurzner, Saalbader, Eintarm, Nothnagel, Pet, Pikof, Keppel, Fraser, Kolb, Mausner, Merz, Lederer, Staus, Feinler etc.

Mehrere Namen in diesem Verzeichnis sind durchgestrichen zum Zeichen, dass sie in Jean Pauls Werken Verwendung gefunden haben, so Siebenkas, Robisch (Unsichtbare Loge, 7. Sektor), Falbel, Stiefel (Siebenkas), Oefel (Loge), Oehrmann (Vorrede zu den Blumenstücken), Kuhlpepper (Hesperus), Zaus und Saus (Appendix der Biographischen Bestigungen), Lederer (Jubelseniör). Aber auch von den nicht gestrichenen kommen manche in den Werken vor, z.B. Blasius, Stenz, Stanislaus (Siebenkas), Florian (Falbel), Hoppedizel, Setzmann (Loge), Aufhammer, Krabler, Strobel, Eintarm, Zebedaus (Fixlein), Freudel, Ranz (Freudels Klaglibell), Schickfuss (Jubelseniör), Mezner, Kraus, Schodel (Kreuzerkomödie).

Während hier im Anfang, wie man sieht, Vor- und Nachnamen noch bunt durcheinander stehen, hat Jean Paul später die "Taufnamen" gesondert verzeichnet und nach männlichen und weiblichen getrennt. Wie bei den Ortsnamen führte er dann auch eine Unterscheidung von "guten" und "schlechten" (oder "schlimmen") Namen ein, und zwar sowohl bei den Vor- wie bei den Nachnamen. Dabei hatte er aber wohl nicht nur den moralischen Charakter im Sinne, sondern daneben auch den sozialen Rang, so dass es sich also auch um eine Scheidung von Hoch und Niedrig, von Ernst und Komik handelt, oder wie es Jean Paul in der Vorschule der Aesthetik (§72) ausdrückt, von italienischer und niederländischer Schule. Bezeichnend ist dabei, dass unter den "guten" Namen die ausländischen stark überwiegen; zum Beweis sei nur der Anfang wiedergegeben:

GUTE NAMEN

Machy, Selis, Lorgna, Duchaufour, Ancillon, Almeria, le Baut, Davila, Deneria, Skarpa, Swoboda, Trouillas, Rome de l'Isle, Montoukla, Ciafani, Casati, Hugo,

Saladin, Ledevil, Burja, Fiorillo, Giulia, Agnola, Ida, Cleophea, Casilde etc ³⁹

Dagegen halte man nun den Anfang der Gegenliste:

SCHLIMME

Streichert, Meuseler, Astmann, Stechmann, Banspach, Beez, Franzen, Fokeln, Pfizmann, Paulig, Prahmer, Retticher, Sapel, Scheibler, Scheidenrecht, Schickeltanz, Schipsen, Schillingen, Sessa, Siebenhaar, Sozmann, Statmuller, Steger, Stesser, Faudel, Marzahn, Kreller, Haberland, Mury, Sauerampf, Pitsch, Stelz, Balzer, Schnedermann, Fizau, Friesner, Hassauer, Heck, Polzfuss, Schierstedt, Bindrin, Hey, Pittelko, Flachs, Pippo, Coppo (Jakob), Zenkel, Stenzinger, Egelkraut, Giegold, Fichsel etc ⁴⁰

Auch bei den Taufnamen uberwiegen in der "guten" Liste die fremdlandischen stark, wie die folgende Probe zeigen moge:

WEIBLICHE GUTE NAMEN

Floriana, Konradine, Edmunda, Livia, Raphaela, Eusebie, Maurizia, Hermione, Franzelina, Lotharie, Walpurga, Ludomilla, Blitilde, Georga, Johanetta, Adolpha, Ignazia, Domenika, Nepomuzena, Madelaine, Rita, Alida, Jakobaa, Reynira, Florentina, Adriana, Gobertina, Petronella, Josina, Rosaklara, Ferdinandine, Benigna, Guillemette, Dea, Hieronyma, Adelaide, Nadine, Amine, Junia etc ⁴¹

Spater hat sich Jean Paul dann auch viele "gute" altdeutsche Vornamen aufgezeichnet, worauf ich noch zu sprechen komme. Haufig hat er den deutschen Namen neben den auslandischen gesetzt, z.B.:

Thierry, Dietrich—Everard, Eberhard⁴²—Gilles, Egydius⁴³—Jaqueline, Jakobine⁴⁴—Thiennette, Stephanne⁴⁵—Etienne, Stephan—Alison, Liesichen⁴⁶—Gautier, Walther—Blaise, Blasius⁴⁷—Sebaud, Sebald⁴⁸—Voit, Veit⁴⁹ etc

Schliesslich hat er sich dann auch noch ein nach Landern geordnetes Verzeichnis fremder Personennamen angelegt, das franzosische, englische, ³⁹ Davon sind Le Baut, Giulia und Agnola im Hesperus verwendet. Flamin sollte anfangs Hugo heissen.

⁴⁰ Davon sind verwendet: Streichert, Astmann, Stechmann, Pfizmann im Quintus Fixlein (S. W. v, 63, 124, 163), Meuseler im Hesperus (III, 280), Flachs in den Flegeljahren, Pippo im Titan (VIII, 13), Egelkraut und Giegold im Siebenkas (VI, 23 und 271).

⁴¹ Raphaela heisst eine der Tochter Neupeters in den Flegeljahren (X, 154), Hermine die Gattin Jean Pauls in den Palmgenesen und in der Konjektural-Biographie, Gobertine das Fraulein von Sackenbach im Jubelsenor, Benigna eine Frau in Jean Pauls Briefen (VII, 385), Guillemette die Mutter Lianens im Titan (VIII, 342), Dea (Abkürzung von Alithea) die Pflgetochter im Jubelsenor (V, 394), Nadine die Schwester im Kampaner Thal.

⁴² Verwendet für den "Venner" im Siebenkas (VI, 72). ⁴³ S. W. v, 66 (Fixlein).

⁴⁴ S. W. XII, 215 (Levana) und X, 293 (Flegeljahre). ⁴⁵ S. W. v, 64 (Fixlein).

⁴⁶ Liesichen war für Lenette vorgesehen, s. S. W. VI, Einl. S. XXIV.

⁴⁷ S. W. VI, 43 (Siebenkas). ⁴⁸ S. W. VII, 196 (Palmgenesen).

⁴⁹ S. W. VII, 300 (Jean Pauls Briefe).

italienische, spanische, portugiesische, schweizerische, holländische, dänische, schwedische, polnische, russische und jüdische Namen enthält.⁵⁰

Im ganzen enthält das Heft schätzungsweise 2000 Orts- und Personennamen, von denen natürlich nur ein Bruchteil, einige Hundert, in Jean Pauls Werken Verwendung gefunden hat. Wurde man die Liste einmal vollständig veröffentlichen, so wäre das eine bequeme Fundgrube für heutige Schriftsteller, die nach charakteristischen Namen für ihre Gestalten suchen. Jeder würde da wohl etwas für seine Zwecke Geeignetes finden. Es ist amüsant zu beobachten, wie die Liste manche Namen antizipiert, die von späteren Dichtern verwendet worden sind, wie z.B. Kreisler von E. Th. A. Hoffmann, Gempferlein von der Ebner-Eschenbach, Cleophea, Fiebig, Meuseler von Raabe, Schicketanz, Siebenhaar, Pittelko, Marzahn, Krippenstapel, Rex von Fontane, Semmelmann und Baumhamel (in der niederdeutschen Form Bohmhamel) von Heinrich Seidel, Wunnibald von Ricarda Huch, Spinell⁽¹⁾ von Thomas Mann. Es zeigt sich darin deutlich, einen wie guten Spürsinn Jean Paul für Namen hatte, die durch charakteristischen Klang zu dichterischer Verwendung prädestiniert erscheinen.

V. Woher hat Jean Paul nun alle diese Namen genommen? Es ist des öfteren behauptet worden, er habe sie gossenteils frei erfunden. Gustav Parthey erzählt in seinen schönen Jugenderinnerungen⁵¹ eine lustige Anekdote, die auf dieser Annahme beruht. Danach soll Jean Paul zwar nicht in seinen früheren Werken, z. B. dem Hesperus, wohl aber in den späteren sich etwas darauf zugute getan haben, dass alle darin vorkommenden Personennamen sonst nicht existierten. So habe er auch den Namen Katzenberger für "sonst unfindbar" gehalten. Der mit ihm befreundete Medizinalrat Dr. Langermann habe aber gewusst, dass in Prag ein geschätzter praktischer Arzt dieses Namens lebte, dessen Doktordissertation sogar von irgend einer menschlichen Abnormität handelte, also von dem Lieblingsgegenstand des Jean Paulschen Dr. Katzenberger. Langermann habe sich diese Dissertation zu verschaffen gewusst und sie dem Dichter zugehen lassen mit einem fingierten, sehr gereizten Schreiben des Verfassers, worin dieser sich über den offenkundigen Missbrauch seines Namens bitter beschwerte. Jean Paul sei darüber sehr betreten gewesen, bis ihm schliesslich mitgeteilt wurde, dass es sich um einen blossen Scherz handelte. Er habe sich seitdem aber nie wieder vermessen, seine erdachten Namen für Unica zu halten.—An

⁵⁰ In seinen Werken hat es Jean Paul mit der Nationalität der Namen nicht immer genau genommen, der Lord im Hesperus führt den unenglischen Namen Horion, die Spanierin Linda den portugiesischen Namen Romeiro, die Polin Zablocki den altdutschen Vornamen Wina.

⁵¹ Hsgeb. von Ernst Friedel, Berlin 1907, II, 136

dieser Geschichte mag ein Körnchen Wahrheit sein; es gab wirklich in Prag einen Arzt Dr. Katzenberger, von dem auch Varnhagen in einem Brief vom 5. Juni 1810 an Jean Paul berichtet ⁵² Der eigentliche Witz der Anekdote kann jedoch nicht stimmen, denn Jean Paul wusste ganz genau, dass er seine Namen nicht erfunden, sondern gefunden hatte. Zwischen seinen fruheren und späteren Werken besteht in dieser Hinsicht kein Unterschied. Man braucht nur einmal in den Strassen von Hof oder Bayreuth spazieren zu gehen, so fällt einem alle Augenblicke auf einem Tur- oder Ladenschild ein aus Jean Pauls Werken vertrauter Name in die Augen Und nimmt man sich umfangreiche Namenverzeichnisse, wie etwa das Adressbuch von Gross-Berlin, vor, so wird man darin mit wenigen Ausnahmen alle jene absonderlichen Namen wie Katzenberger, Siebenkas, Egelkraut, Fibel, Falbel, Wutz, Suptitz, Schabacker, Mehlhorn, Kokeritz, Zablocki, Fahland, Harprecht, Wehmeier etc. vertreten finden. Die Namen Hafenreffer, Fraischdorfer, Froulay, Roquairol (samtlich aus dem Titan), die Parthey für erfunden halt, lassen sich alle nachweisen. Hafenreffer ist eine Tübinger Gelehrtenfamilie, Froulay ein altfranzösisches Adelsgeschlecht, dessen z.B. in Rousseaus Confessions gedacht wird, Roquairol hiess der Angehörige einer französischen Rauberbande des 18. Jahrhunderts.⁵³ Im Titan erzählt Jean Paul einmal, er pflege in Kriegszeiten abends in die Soldatenlager zu gehen und sich die beim Appell aufgerufenen charakteristisch klingenden Namen in seiner Schreibtafel zu notieren ⁵⁴ Mag das nun ein Scherz sein oder nicht, sicher ist, dass er jede sich ihm bietende Gelegenheit benutzt hat, seine Namensammlung zu vermehren. Dass diese streckenweise alphabetische Ordnung aufweist, zeigt, dass er zum Teil aus vorhandenen Namenverzeichnissen geschöpft hat. Für die Taufnamen hat er nachweislich den Kalender zurate gezogen, für französische und englische Vornamen auch die Zusammenstellungen in Wörterbüchern oder Grammatiken. Altdeutsche Namen, für die er in seinen späteren Werken grosse Vorliebe bekundet—man denke an Klothar in den Flegeljahren, Theoda und Theudobach in Katzenbergers Badereise, Siegwart und Drotta im Leben Fibels, Liuta in dem Traum einer Wahnsinnigen (1808), Thorismund in der Erzählung Die Elternliebe gegen Kinder (1810), Torold und Torilda in dem Aufsatz Ein deutscher Jungling in der Nacht des 18. Oktobers 1814—, hat er grosstenteils einem im Jahre 1800 erschienenen Buch entnommen, dessen Verfasser selbst einen eigenartigen Namen aufweist: Tilemann Dothias Wiarda, Ueber deutsche Vornamen und Geschlechtnamen. Jean Paul hat über dies Werk im August 1804 in der Zeitung für

⁵² Denkwürdigkeiten aus dem Leben von Jean Paul Friedrich Richter, hsgb. von Ernst Forster (München, 1863), III, 223 f

⁵³ Vgl. S W. VIII, Einl. S. xxxiv

⁵⁴ S W. VIII, 57.

die elegante Welt einen eignen Aufsatz veröffentlicht, worin er den Eltern ans Herz legt, ihre Kinder auf die darin angeführten altdeutschen Namen taufen zu lassen,⁵⁵ gleichzeitig aber den dichterischen Gebrauch derselben sich selber vorbehalt und jeden Autor, der ihm einen davon wegstibitzen sollte, im voraus für einen Plagiator erklärt.⁵⁶ Auch aus Fischarts Werken und aus den Epistolae obscurorum virorum hat er sich einzelne Namen notiert, ohne sie jedoch zu verwenden.⁵⁷ Er hat auch kein Bedenken getragen, Namen von mehr oder weniger bekannten Persönlichkeiten, wenn sie ihm klanglich geeignet erschienen, zu verwenden, und weist dann wohl selber gelegentlich auf die Urbilder hin, z B bei dem Arzt Kuhlpepper im Hesperus auf den englischen Mediziner Culpeper, bei Siebenkas auf den Altdorfer Professor Siebenkees, bei Schoppe auf den Humanisten Scioppius, bei Spener auf den berühmten Pietisten, bei Strykius im Katzenberger auf den Hallenser Juristen.⁵⁸ Die Ortsnamen hat er zum weitaus größten Teil aus geographischen Werken genommen, hauptsächlich aus solchen von Busching und von Fabri,⁵⁹ und auch hier macht er häufig selber auf die "Namensvettern" aufmerksam, meist mit dem stereotypen Scherz, sein Ort dürfe nicht verwechselt werden mit dem gleichnamigen da und da gelegenen.⁶⁰

Wenn es sonach auch keinem Zweifel unterliegen kann, dass Jean Paul sowohl seine Personen- wie seine Ortsnamen—höchstens mit ganz vereinzelten Ausnahmen—der Wirklichkeit entnommen hat, so ist doch zuzugeben, dass er sich zuweilen geringfügige Abänderungen der vorgefundenen Namen gestattet hat. Es geht das schon daraus hervor, dass ⁵⁵ So erhielt auch seine eigene, im November 1804 geborene Tochter den Namen Odile. Sein jüdischer Freund Emanuel nahm später auf seinen Rat den Familiennamen Osmund an. ⁵⁶ S W XIII, 138 f.

⁵⁷ Sonst hat er aus fremden Dichtwerken kaum je Namen entnommen, doch mag erwähnt sein, dass der im Kampaner Thal vorkommende Name Karlson sich auch in Gellerts Geschichte der schwedischen Gräfin von G findet und der ebenda vorkommende Name Nadine in einer Verserzählung von Wieland. Den Namen Natalie im Siebenkas hatte Jean Paul gewählt, bevor er Wilhelm Meisters Lehrjahre las.

⁵⁸ S W. III, 41, VII, 326, VIII, 22, 189, IX, 47, 397, 412, XIII, 177, XIV, 225. Wenn er dabei zuweilen scherzhaft die Möglichkeit einer Verwandtschaft andeutet, so erinnert das an eine Stelle in der Reise nach Braunschweig von Knigge (1792), wo der Verfasser in einer Fussnote erklärt, er wisse nicht, ob das in seiner Geschichte vorkommende Fraulein von Brumbel zu derselben Familie gehöre wie der damals vielgenannte Berliner Theologe gleichen Namens. Jean Paul hatte übrigens den Minister im Hesperus statt Schleunes anfangs Brombel nennen wollen, s W III, Einl S XVIII.

⁵⁹ Von Fabri kommt hauptsächlich die funfbandige Geographie für alle Stände (1786–1808) in Betracht.

⁶⁰ Vgl. S W III, 137 (Kussewitz), VI, 58 (Kuschnappel), X, 36, 39, 61 (Elterlein), 299 (Joditz), XIII, 175 (Potzneusiedl), XIV, 224 (Ziebingen, Diebsfehrla), XV, 10, 12 (Margarethaussen), 267 (Krahwinkel).

sich in seiner Namensliste mehrfach der Vermerk findet. "Unverändert abgeschrieben," während es ein andermal darin heisst: "Ich schreibe hier alle Namen gleich falsch." Vielfach wird es sich dabei wohl nur um orthographische Abweichungen gehandelt haben, wie etwa Siebenkas für Siebenkees, Halss für Hals, Hering für Haring, manchmal aber auch um kleine lautliche Modifikationen. So findet sich der Name von Jean Pauls weimarer Zimmervermieterin Kuhnoldt in den Flegeljahren in der Form Kuhnold, Leibgeber ist wahrscheinlich aus Leitgeb (mhd. lītgebe = Schenkwirt) volksetymologisch abgewandelt, Saalpater (in der Vorrede zum zweiten Band des Komet) aus Saalbader. Zuweilen hat Jean Paul auch wohl selbständig eine Endung angehängt, z B. Knornschild zu Knarnschilder, Falter zu Falterle erweitert.⁶¹ Wesentlich freier als mit Personennamen ist er mit Ortsnamen umgesprungen. Hier hat er nicht nur einzelne Buchstaben geändert, wie etwa Sackingen in Zackingen,⁶² sondern vor allem die stereotypen Vor- und Nachsilben entweder vertauscht oder weggelassen oder hinzugefügt. In seiner Namenliste hat er sich eine ganze Anzahl solcher "Ingredienzien" notiert, z B. Ober-, Unter-, Mittel-, Alt-, Frei-, Kirch-, -berg, -thal, -rode, -hofen, -fingen, -weiler, -hagen, -stetten. So hat er etwa Spitz in Mittelspitz erweitert, Landpreis in Neulandpreis, Lausa in Grosslausau, umgekehrt Kleinpestitz (bei Dresden) zu Pestitz, Luneburg zu St. Lune verkürzt, Altenfluss in Hohenfluss abgewandelt.⁶³ Flachsenfingen ist vielleicht nach dem bei Ansbach gelegenen Flachslanden gebildet, Zehnacker nach dem meiningenschen Dreissigacker.⁶⁴ Auch bei den Ortsnamen ist jedoch die grosse Mehrzahl unverändert der Wirklichkeit entnommen; so Kuhnchnappel,⁶⁵ Hukelum,⁶⁶ Vaduz, Schadeck, Waldkappel, Schwaningen, Hasslau, Elterlein, Pira, Maulbronn, Schraplau und viele andere. Zu Landernamen hat Jean Paul meist Ortsnamen verwendet, z B. Scheerau, Kauzen, Hohengeis, Haarhaar (im Titan) ist wohl aus dem Ortsnamen Haar nach Analogie von Scheer-Scheer gebildet. Gern macht er dabei den stereotypen Witz, er müsse sich wundern, dass die Geographen von diesen Landern noch keine Notiz genommen hätten.⁶⁷ Zuweilen hat er

⁶¹ S W. VI, 49, VIII, 79.

⁶² S W. XIII, 79

⁶³ S W. VII, 455, v, 392, XIV, 261, III, 19, VIII, 8 f

⁶⁴ S W. VIII, 286. Ähnlich hat bekanntlich G. Hauptmann in den Webern den überlieferten Namen des Fabrikanten Zwanziger in Dreissiger abgeändert.

⁶⁵ Wenn Jean Paul S W. VI, 58 in einer Fussnote angibt, der Name sei nach Potschappel (bei Dresden) gebildet, so war das entweder ein Scherz, oder er hatte vergessen, dass es einen Ort namens Kuhnchnappel in Sachsen gibt.

⁶⁶ Nach Büsching war Hukelum der alte Name des Klosteramts Hockelheim an der Leine.

⁶⁷ Vgl. z B. S W. II, 83, v, 149, 433, xv, 266 f. Ein ähnlicher Scherz kommt auch in Musaus' Physiognomischen Reisen zu Anfang des 4. Heftes vor.

auch einen Ortsnamen als Personennamen verwendet, z B Wutz, Lismore, Sackenbach, oder umgekehrt einen Familiennamen als geogra-phischen, z B Scheer-Scheer⁶⁸ Vom namensgeschichtlichen Standpunkt ist dagegen ebensowenig einzuwenden wie gegen die Verwendung von Vornamen als Familiennamen, wie etwa Ottomar, Blasius (Blaise), Cesara, Klothar Bedenklicher erscheint es dagegen, Nachnamen wie Roquairol oder Kraus⁶⁹ als Vornamen zu gebrauchen

VI. Wenn wir nunmehr darangehen, die Eigenart der Jean Paulschen
Namen etwas genauer zu untersuchen, so wollen wir dabei nicht seine Namenliste zugrunde legen, sondern uns an die in seinen Werken vor-kommenden Namen halten Die in der Liste bereitgestellten Namen sind zwar gewiss auch schon für die Besonderheit seines Gefühls und Geschmacks für Namen bezeichnend, aber erst die Auswahl, die er aus ihnen getroffen hat, ist doch entscheidend. Die Zahl der in Betracht kommen-den Namen ist immer noch so gross, dass sich alle wesentlichen Kenn-zeichen unschwer an ihnen aufzeigen lassen

Sieht man sich nun zunächst, um einen Ueberblick über diese Fülle zu gewinnen, nach einem Einteilungsprinzip um, so wird man die Jean Paulsche Unterscheidung von guten und schlechten Namen nicht als geeignet anerkennen können. Sie ist zu allgemein und zu vieldeutig, auch hat er sie selber weder in seiner Liste noch in seinen Werken streng durchgeführt. Es lassen sich ja auch die vielen Gestalten, die er geschaffen hat, nicht einfach in gute und böse einteilen, so wenig wie in ernste und komische oder in hohe und niedrige; überall musste man wenigstens noch eine Mittelklasse aufstellen, so wie er ja auch in der Vorschule bei der Einteilung der Romane (§ 72) neben der italienischen und der niederländischen Schule noch eine deutsche unterscheidet, die in der Mitte zwischen jenen beiden steht. Aber auch mit einem solchen Dreiklassensystem wurde man nicht weit kommen. Als praktischer erweist sich ein scheinbar ausserliches, in Wirklichkeit aber doch sehr wesent-liches Prinzip, das Jean Paul in der oben angeführten Stelle der Vorschule über die Namengebung auch bereits angedeutet und das man z B. auch bei Raabes Namen mit Erfolg angewandt hat, nämlich die Silbenzahl Wie wichtig diese ist, dafür findet sich in Theodor Fontanes Studien zu seinem geplanten Roman Allerlei Glück ein charakteristisches Zeugnis
Der Dichter war sich da noch nicht darüber im klaren, wie er eine seiner

⁶⁸ S W v, 280, 398, II. Abt., III, 111 Wutz kommt zwar auch als Personennamen vor;
Jean Paul nahm ihn aber, wie aus dem oben mitgeteilten Verzeichnis geographischer Namen hervorgeht, von dem Wutzsee bei Liebenwalde Esenbeck (Jubelseniör) und Sup-titz (Komet) kommen sowohl als Orts- wie als Familiennamen vor Dahore (Hesperus) ist möglicherweise nach dem indischen Ort Lahore gebildet. ⁶⁹ S W. II. Abt., III, 165.

Gestalten nennen wollte, nur das stand ihm fest, dass es ein dreisilbiger berlinischer Name mit dem Akzent auf der ersten Silbe sein müsse ⁷⁰ So lässt sich auch bei Jean Paul beobachten, dass er, wenn er den ursprünglich für eine Figur in Aussicht genommenen Namen später abänderte, dabei oft (nicht immer) Silbenzahl und Akzent beibehielt, z. B. hiess Esenbeck im Jubelsenioren anfangs Feuerlein, Wehmeier und Falterle im Titan sollten erst Greineisen und Kofferle heissen — Neben der Silbenzahl ist dann bei Jean Paul auch noch der Endung der Namen besondere Beachtung zu schenken, auf deren Bedeutung er ja auch selber an der angeführten Stelle seiner Vorschule schon hingewiesen hat

Beginnen wir also mit den einsilbigen Namen, die Jean Paul, wie er angibt und seine Praxis im allgemeinen bestätigt, unbedeutenden Personen zu geben pflegte ⁷¹ Ich gebe zunächst eine Zusammenstellung, die übrigens keinen Anspruch auf absolute Vollständigkeit macht, geordnet (aus einem gleich zu erörternden Grunde) nach den Endbuchstaben: ⁷²

Personennamen. Kob, Kolb, Lind, Knef, ⁷³ Lerch, Starch, Fisch, Mensch, Fenk, Peuk, Flol, Graul, Knoll, Spohl, Knor, Spohr, Maus, Saus, Zaus, Schwers, Halss, Stoss, Stuss, Niess, Schiess, Flachs, Hut, Fecht, Hecht, Haft, Prast, Pabst, Fax, Phax, Tax, Max, Fex, Flex, Spheh, Vey, Glanz, Ranz, Malz, Pelz, Stenz, Kenz, Kunz, Matz, Wutz ⁷⁴

Ortsnamen. Hopf, Lauch, Huhl, Heim, Rom, Grems, Flatz, Spitz, Schwenz, Schwortz

Was an dieser Liste auffällt, sind zunächst die häufigen Reime, die zeigen, dass Jean Paul für gewisse Buchstabenfolgen eine besondere Vorliebe hatte, sodann die Häufigkeit des S-Lauts am Schluss, besonders nach vorhergehendem Konsonanten (daher auch das häufige x und z). Jean Paul stellt in der Vorschule (§ 28) einmal die sonderbare Behauptung auf, der Buchstabe S sei lächerlich; er weist auf Wörter wie versessen,

⁷⁰ Vgl. Julius Petersen, Fontanes erster Berliner Gesellschaftsroman (Berlin, 1929), S. 27

⁷¹ Eine Ausnahme macht der ehrwürdige Jubelsenioren Schwers, in dessen Namen aber die Länge des Vokals die Einsilbigkeit sozusagen aufhebt — In J. J. Engels Roman Lorenz Stark (1801) haben alle Personen einsilbige Namen Stark, Herbst, Born, Horn, Specht, Schlicht, Burg, Blum, Lyk, Wrak. Jahn hat diese Namen besonders gerühmt; sie wirken aber doch etwas eintönig und wenig charakteristisch

⁷² Es wurde für den Verfasser wie für den Leser zu ermüdend sein, wenn für jeden der im folgenden angeführten Namen die Stelle seines Vorkommens angeführt wurde. Es kommt in unserem Zusammenhang ja auch meist nicht so viel darauf an, wo der Name sich findet, als wie er lautet. ⁷³ Umkehrung von Fenk, s. S. W. IV, 321

⁷⁴ Jean Paul schrieb diesen Namen ursprünglich, seiner damaligen, die Doppelkonsonanten im Auslaut vereinfachenden Orthographie entsprechend, Wutz, später aber Wutz; wahrscheinlich wollte er ihn kurz ausgesprochen haben. Möglicherweise hatte er später auch Knorr statt Knor geschrieben, doch scheint mir hier die Analogie zu Spohr für die gedehnte Aussprache zu zeugen.

besessen hin.⁷⁵ Es bleibe dahingestellt, ob das allgemein zutrifft; vielleicht konnte man eher von dem Buchstaben P sagen, dass er einen komischen (oft auch unanständigen) Beigeschmack habe. Richtig ist aber jedenfalls, dass das S am Schluss der Wörter, besonders nach einem oder mehreren Konsonanten und wenn die Silbe den Akzent trägt (also stets in einsilbigen Wörtern), eine stark lautmalerische Kraft und meist eine mehr oder minder komische Wirkung hat.⁷⁶ Es sei nur erinnert an die Koseformen der männlichen deutschen Vornamen, wie Heinz, Hinz, Kunz, Fritz, Gotz, ferner an jene pseudolateinischen Namen, wie sie besonders in der Epigrammliteratur von alters her gebräuchlich waren, Stax, Thrax, Vax, Trix, Trux, Stips etc., vor allem aber an schallnachahmende Wörter wie bums, plumps, schwupps, pardauz, Klapps, Klecks u.dgl. Wieland hat in den oben angeführten griechischen Namen seiner Abderiten diesen komischen Klangeffekt geschickt benutzt, ebenso Kortum in dem Namen seines Helden Jobs, vor allem aber Wilhelm Busch, nicht nur in seinen berühmten Schallwörtern, wie rums, perdums, kiewieks, knatteradoms, klingelingelings, und in Namen, wie Schnorz, Schnipps, Gripps, Fipps, Bax, sondern vor allem im Reim, wo die starke Betonung die Wirkung besonders deutlich macht:

Und an Helenens Nase stracks
Klebt das erhitzte Siegelwachs.

Für manchen hat ein Mädchen Reiz,
Doch bleibt die Liebe seinerseits

Entrustet aber wird der Spitz
Infolge eines Seitentritts

Legt's in die Mulde, flach von Holz,
Durchknetet es und druckt und rollt's.

Und dann durchs Tor voll frohen Drangs
Im Rosakleid mit drei Volangs.

Diese Wirkung hat sich also auch Jean Paul vielfach zunutze gemacht, besonders in einsilbigen Namen, aber auch in mehrsilbigen begegnet man ihr häufig, sowohl in der Tonsilbe, z.B. Fixlein, Kelzheim, Vaduz, Kauzen, Pamsen, Trebsen, Fechser, Florzhubel, Flachsenfingen, Kat-

⁷⁵ Vgl. auch den wunderlichen Namen Sessessar (S W I, 556) und den oben angeführten "schlommen" Namen Sessa

⁷⁶ Als besonders widrig-komische Wörter führt Jean Paul gelegentlich die Bezeichnung "Schlauz" für Nachtigall in Krain und den Gottes-Namen Quautz auf der Insel Noatka an, s. S W X, 170, XIII, 195. Vielleicht hängt auch seine bekannte Abneigung gegen das S in zusammengesetzten Wörtern, z.B. Geburtstag, und besonders gegen die Silbe -ungs, z.B. in Erziehungslehre, mit dieser Empfindung zusammen

zenberger, Schmelzle, als auch in der unbetonten Silbendecke, z.B. Mulanz, Kuhpanz, Renovanz, Veldenz, Phylax, Perefixe und in vielen Namen auf -itz.⁷⁷

Bei den zwei- und mehrsilbigen Namen erkennt man sofort, dass Jean Paul für gewisse Endsilben eine Vorliebe hatte. Am häufigsten erscheint die süddeutsche Diminutivsilbe, und zwar sowohl in der vollen Form -lein, wie namentlich in der verkürzten -le und -el.^{77a}

Personennamen Fixlein, Herrlein, Kronlein, Stocklein, Fedderlein.—Bopple, Fautle, Oechsle, Schmelzle, Worble, Falterle —Borstel, Falbel, Fagel, Fibel, Franzel, Freudel, Gobel, Gogel, Kabel, Mendel, Oefel, Peuschel, Purzel, Reuel, Schnabel, Schodel, Stiefel, Strobel, Traupel, Wurfel, Zeddel, Zeusel, Gelbkoppel, Passvogel, Schnorhamel, Vierneissel, Hoppedizel.

Ortsnamen Hoflein, Elterlein —Florzhubel, Holzapfel, Krehwinkel, Krummhubel, Kuhschnappel, Neusattel, Saubügel, Waghausel, Waldkappel, Potzneusiedl

Auch von Vornamen, besonders von weiblichen, braucht Jean Paul gern Kose- oder Kurzformen auf -el, z.B. Justel (Justine), Appel (Apolonia), Regel (Regina), Raphel (Raphael), Sabel (Sabine), Söphel (Sophie), Vronel (Veronika), Nickel (Nikolaus), Attel (Attila)⁷⁸ Zuweilen erscheint die Diminutivsilbe auch im Innern des Namens, z.B. in Matzleinsdorf, Harmlesberg, Meuseler, Hafteldorn, Hukelum, Vieselbach, Pimpelstadt, und mit angehangener lateinischer Endung: Falzelius, Stapelhaselius.—Es ist ja nun ohne weiteres ersichtlich, dass diese Verkleinerungssilbe dem Namen einen gemüthlichen, harmlosen, unheldischen Anstrich verleiht.⁷⁹ Daher gehören fast alle "Helden" von Jean Pauls Idyllen und Humoresken in diese Gruppe. Fixlein, Kronlein, Schmelzle, Falbel, Freudel, Fibel, Vierneissel. Auch der Held der Flegeljahre sollte ursprünglich Tanzel, der des Komet Hoppel heissen. Es sind wohl auch manche unsympathische Gesellen darunter, wie Oefel, Zeusel, Hoppedizel,⁸⁰ aber kein ernsthafter Boscovich. Auffallend ist,

⁷⁷ In der Liste der "schlechten" Namen notiert sich Jean Paul einmal "Namen mit s, z.B. Heinrichs, Lachs"

^{77a} Dass die Endsilbe -el in den folgenden Namen nicht immer die Verkleinerungssilbe ist, darf hier ausser acht gelassen werden, da es für Jean Pauls Sprachgefühl keinen Unterschied ausmachte ⁷⁸ So in Immermanns Munchhausen Agesel für Agesilaus.

⁷⁹ Für einen Räuber ist daher der Name Schufferle auch aus diesem Grunde nicht glücklich gewählt. Von Goethes Namen gehören Spritzbierlein, Schwerdtlein und Bendel (im Ur-Meister) hieher. Besonders häufig sind Namen auf -el bei Wilhelm Busch: Botel, Fibel, Hiebel, Gnatzel, Klecksel, Krokkel, Kummel, Lampel, Pretzel, Schmurzel, Stunkel etc. Buschs längerer Aufenthalt in Süddeutschland hat ja auch sonst in seiner Sprache manche Spuren hinterlassen

⁸⁰ Der Name Hoppedizel kommt in Hof vor. Jean Paul hat ihn zuerst in einer Satire von 1789 verwertet (S.W. II Abt. III, 94), dann in der Unsichtbaren Loge dass die (ursprünglich) mitteldeutsche Diminutivendung -chen, die Jean Paul sonst mindestens so häufig anwendet wie die suddeutsche, in seinen Namen gar nicht vorkommt, ausser vereinzelt in Koseformen, z.B. Bulchen (Pulcheria), Bergelchen (Teutoberga), Nickelchen (Nikolaus) und einmal in der niederdeutschen Form: Mannike⁸¹ Die Endung -i hat er zwar des oftern verwendet, aber anscheinend nicht als verkleinernd, sondern als fremdlandisch empfunden (wie es ja auch meist ist); daher findet sie sich, ausser bei der Schweizerin Zwicki, dem Ungarn Warlimini, dem Italiener Paradisi und dem Polen Zablocki, nur bei Vornehmen: Augusti (der ursprünglich Friderizi heissen sollte), Luigi, Wilhelmi

Fast ebenso häufig wie die Diminutivsilbe verwendet Jean Paul die von ihm nicht ganz zutreffend als "Iterativ-Silbe" bezeichnete Endung -er. Während aber in der vorigen Gruppe die zweisilbigen Namen stark überwiegen, sind in dieser die Dreisilber am zahlreichsten vertreten, und auch die von Wilhelm Raabe so bevorzugten Viersilber fehlen nicht.⁸² Ortsnamen auf -er sind naturgemäss seltener:

Personennamen: Fechser, Flegler, Halter, Jenner, Karner, Krabler, Meiler, Mezner, Metzger, Peisser, Richter, Roper, Schnazler, Schuster, Spener, Strossner, Treiber, Wachser, Aufhammer, Fraischdorfer, Gehrischer, Hahrbauer, Kleinschwager, Knänschilder, Kuhlpepper, Lederer, Leibgeber, Merbitzer, Meuseler, Neupeter, Prielmayer, Saalpater, Schabacker, Schalaster, Scharweber, Schomaker, Steinberger, Stenzinger, Tanzberger, Torsaker, Vogtlander, Wehmeier, Hafenreffer, Katzenberger, Pfeifenberger, Schleifenheimer

Ortsnamen: Scheitweiler, Vierreuter, Zehnacker.

Jean Paul sagt in der Vorschule, er habe solche Namen auf -er "schlimmen oder scheinbar wichtigen" Personen gegeben, und in der Tat sind es mit wenigen Ausnahmen (z B. Spener) unsympathische, ungemütliche, unerfreuliche oder kummerliche Gesellen⁸³ Vielleicht war dies ein Grund mit, dass der prächtige Humorist Leibgeber später in Schoppe und Graul umgetauft wurde⁸⁴ Dass nun aber der harmlosen Silbe -er wirklich eine so abstossende Wirkung innewohnen sollte, wird sich kaum erweisen lassen. Wir haben oben schon darauf aufmerksam gemacht, dass z B. Goethe gerade Namen auf -er liebt und sie auch sympathischen

⁸¹ S W xiii, 166.

⁸² Vgl Raabes Wassertreter, Wolkenjäger, Reihenschläger, Feuchtenbeiner etc. In einer ungedruckt gebliebenen Satire seines Freundes Christian Otto gefiel Jean Paul besonders der Name Herbelsamer

⁸³ Das gilt auch von den Namen auf -ert und -ern Raupert, Eckert, Hasert, Streichert, Ebern, Meyern.

⁸⁴ Vgl S W viii, 421 " . Graul—dieser Name ist viel besser als dein letzter, Leibgeber—"

Personen zuteilt. Es liegt hier anscheinend ein ganz individuelles Sprachgefühl Jean Pauls zugrunde, bei dem möglicherweise die Abneigung gegen seinen eignen Familiennamen im Spiele war, die ihn ja auch (neben anderm) zur Wahl eines Pseudonyms bestimmt hat.

Eine kleinere, aber auch beträchtliche Gruppe bilden die zwei- oder dreisilbigen Namen auf -mann:

Astmann, Erdmann, Eymann, Fassmann, Fuhrmann, Hansmann, Hartmann, Oehrmann, Pfitzmann, Setzmann, Stechmann, Zeitmann, Habermann, Haltermann, Semmelmann, Weyermann.

Hier wird sich ein gemeinsamer Wesenszug kaum feststellen lassen; es sind sympathische und unsympathische, ernste und komische, hohe und niedere Charaktere darunter. Auffallend ist nur die grosse Zahl der Geistlichen: Astmann, Eymann, Hartmann, Setzmann, Zeitmann.

Weniger in Personen- als in Ortsnamen kommt die Endung -itz vor, die Jean Paul aus seiner engeren Heimat vertraut war:

Personennamen. Kokeritz, Suptitz, Wehrfritz (Vgl. auch Hopedizel)

Ortsnamen: Fugnitz, Joditz, Pestitz, Sabitz, Zabitz, Kussewitz, Mittelspitz

Besonders liebt er aber Ortsnamen auf -a und -au, wobei wohl seine Freude an vollen Endvokalen im Spiele war ⁸⁵

Pira, Diebsfehra, Rosana (Fluss), Rosiza, Bienenroda, Hohen-, Mittel-, Niederfehra, Kirschenfelda, Niederschona

Forbau, Grosslausau, Hasslau, Liebenau, Scheerau, Schraplau, Strahlau.

Schliesslich ist noch eine kleine Gruppe von Ortsnamen auf -ingen oder -ungen anzuführen:

Bopfingen, Schwaningen, Zackingen, Ziebingen, Flachsenfingen —Altfladungen.

Von dem altbeliebten Mittel, einem deutschen Personennamen durch Anhängung der lateinischen Endung -us oder -ius komische Wichtigkeit zu verleihen, ⁸⁶ hat Jean Paul fast nur in seinen frühen Satiren Gebrauch gemacht, wo man Namen wie Falzelius, Foppolius, Pompasius, Stapelhaselius begegnet. Damals bediente er selber sich ja auch des Pseudonyms Hasus. Später kommen solche Bildungen nur noch ganz vereinzelt vor: Lausus, Strykius, Musurus.

Aus dem Bisherigen dürfte die Bedeutung der Endsilben bei den Namen Jean Pauls zur Genüge erhellen. Natürlich sind aber daneben auch noch andere Momente für die Klangwirkung massgebend, insbesondere die Vokale der betonten Silben. Man musste, um das im einzelnen nachzuweisen, eigentlich jeden Namen für sich vornehmen. Ich muss mich hier mit wenigen allgemeinen Hinweisen begnügen. Unangenehme Personen haben häufig ein langes Ó in der Tonsilbe, z. B. Oefel, Oehrmann, Oelhafen, Flol, Knor, Kokeritz, Roper,⁸⁷ Schodel, Spohr. Auch langes Á und E haben meist einen ublen Beiklang, vgl. Blaise, Flatz, Schape, Schnazler, Krehwinkel, Lederer, Egelkraut, Esenbeck, Hedasch, Queerbach, Scheerau, und zuweilen (nicht immer) Eu und Ei (die Jean Paul in seiner frankischen Aussprache wohl kaum unterschied), vgl. Schleunes, Zeusel, Peuk, Reuel, Peuschel, Meuseler, Neupeter, Meyern, Meiler, Seirich, Scheinfuss, Fraischdorfer, Heiderscheid, Scheitweiler, Schleifenheimer, Pfeifenberger. Andererseits trägt langes I einen entschieden freundlichen Charakter, z. B. in Siebenkas, Fibel, Stiefel, Dian,⁸⁸ Liane (die ursprünglich Lidie heißen sollte), Lilar, Lilienbad, Liebenau, Idoine, Bienenroda. Langes A und O bezeichnen edle, erhabene Gestalten, z. B. Albano, Cesara, Liane, Beata, Horion, Dahore, Lismore, Ottomar. Was die Konsonanten betrifft, so scheint Jean Paul, wie gegen das auslautende -er, auch gegen das anlautende R seines eigenen Namens eine Abneigung gehabt zu haben; wenigstens gibt er es gern Bosewichtern, z. B. Robisch, Roper, Reuel, Raupert, Renovanz und besonders Roquairol, wo das zweite R und das doppelte O die schlimme Wirkung noch verstärken.

⁸⁵ Vgl. S W XI, 308, XIII, 138 f, XVI, 169 f

⁸⁶ So z B in Nicolais Sebaldu Nothanker. Suurfautenius, Pypsnovenius, Puddewustius; in Raabes Gansen von Butzow Klufautius

Personen der oberen Stände haben bei Jean Paul—wie übrigens in vielen damaligen Romanen und Schauspielen—häufig fremdlandische Namen, auch wenn sie sonst nicht als Ausländer charakterisiert werden, z. B. Blaise im Siebenkas. Die Träger französischer Namen sind durchweg schlimme oder doch leichtfertige Charaktere: die Residentin von Bouse, Le Baut, Blaise, Bouverot, Froulay, Roquairol, Perefixe, Fautle etc.⁸⁹ Dem intriganten Hofjunker von Schleunes im Hesperus und dem ublen Herrn von Meyern im Siebenkas werden wenigstens französische Vornamen aufgehängt, Matthieu und Everard.⁹⁰

⁸⁷ Den Namen des geizigen Kommerzienagenten Roper in der Unsichtbaren Loge, der von weitem an den seines Urbilds, des Kammerrats von Oerthel, anklängt, hat Jean Paul wahrscheinlich aus Bahrds Geschichte und Tagebuch meines Gefangnisses (1790) entnommen, wo ein ubler Denunziant so heisst (S. 41 ff.)

⁸⁸ Dieser Name des Griechen im Titan soll nach Jean Pauls Angabe in den Vorarbeiten auf der ersten Silbe betont werden. In der obigen Namenliste findet sich die Form Thiano. Die Gunderode schrieb bekanntlich unter dem Pseudonym Thian.

⁸⁹ In dem oben erwähnten Aufsatz über altddeutsche Taufnamen führt Jean Paul eine Anzahl besonders hasslicher französischer Namen an: Pépé, Huleu, Bexou, Baif, Ouffie, Grez. (S. W. XIII, 138.)

⁹⁰ Zu dem Namen Meyern ist die Bemerkung in einem Aphorismenheft Jean Pauls (Fasz. 11b des Nachlasses, Heft 11, No. 396) zu vergleichen: "Für mich sind Namen missfällig,

VII Wir haben bisher hauptsächlich von den Nachnamen gehandelt. Da diese unendlich zahlreicher sind als die Vornamen, so geben sie natürlich reichere Möglichkeiten differenzierender Charakteristik an die Hand. Sie haben dafür aber den Nachteil an sich, dass oft charakterlich ganz verschiedene Mitglieder einer Familie ein und denselben Namen führen müssen. So passt z. B. der Name Froulay zwar gut für den hartherzigen Minister, aber gar nicht für dessen engelsanfte Tochter Liane, umgekehrt der Name Fibel wohl für den harmlosen Sohn, aber nicht für den soldatisch-rauen Vater. Die grundverschiedenen Zwillingbrüder Walt und Vult müssen den gleichen Familiennamen Harnisch tragen. In solchen Fällen gewinnt der Vorname besondere Bedeutung, er muss die individuelle Charakteristik verstärken oder ersetzen. Der Nachname wird dann wenig oder gar nicht genannt. So gibt Jean Paul z. B. im Titan ausdrücklich an, dass er den Namen Cesara nur für den Sohn (Albano), aber nicht für den (angeblichen) Vater (Gaspard) gebrauchen werde,⁹¹ und führt diesen Vorsatz auch streng durch. Bei weiblichen Personen erfahren wir zuweilen den Nachnamen überhaupt nicht, z. B. bei Thiennette im Fixlein⁹² und bei Natalie im Siebenkas.⁹³

Jean Paul macht sich in der Vorschule über die damals herrschende Sitte etwas lustig, den Romanheldinnen möglichst wohlklingende, fremdartige Namen beizulegen, eine Mode, der bekanntlich auch Goethe sich nicht entzogen hat (vgl. seine Philine, Aurelie, Natalie, Makarie, Hilarie usw.), die aber auch Jean Paul selbst kräftig mitgemacht hat. Ja er hat an Vielfalt und Ungewöhnlichkeit der weiblichen Vornamen wohl alle seine Mitbewerber übertrumpft, wie die folgende, nicht auf Vollständigkeit ausgehende, bunte Zusammenstellung zeigen mag, zu der alle Sprachen beigesteuert haben, oft ohne Rücksicht auf die Nationalität der Trägerinnen:

Agnes, Betta, Bona, Cara, Dea, Drotta, Eva, Flora, Giulia, Jane, Julie, Justa, Laura, Lea, Linda, Luna, Luzie, Sucky, Wina, Regina, Selina, Severina, Gubernina, Albine, Adeline, Ernestine, Goldine, Hermine, Idoine, Jakobine, Jaqueline,⁹⁴

die das Ursprüngliche mit einem Buchstaben ändern, z. B. Nettelblatt, Schallern, Meiern, Hillebrandt, Michahelles." Dass der Verfasser des von ihm sehr geschätzten Romans Dyana-Sore Meiern hiess, war Jean Paul zur Zeit der Abfassung des Siebenkas wohl noch nicht bekannt. ⁹¹ S.W. VIII, 10

⁹² Fixlein nennt sie einmal das gnädige Fraulein von Thiennette (S.W. v, 119), aber natürlich ist Thiennette (=Stephanie) ihr Vorname

⁹³ Sie ist die Nichte des Heimlichers von Blaise, aber diesen "schlimmen" Namen mochte ihr Jean Paul nicht geben, er lässt es daher offen, wie sie mit Nachnamen heisst

⁹⁴ Nach dieser Gestalt der Levana wurden die Kindergärtnerinnen der Frobelschen Erziehungsanstalt Keilhau "Schakelmen" genannt, wie Georg Ebers in der Geschichte seines Lebens erzählt

Joachime, Nadine, Pauline, Philippine, Samueline, Wendeline,⁹⁵ Zephyrine, Georgette, Guillemette, Lenette, Libette, Ninette, Rabette, Rosinette, Thienette, Agnola, Agata, Agathe, Beata, Benigna, Candide,⁹⁶ Chariton, Elisa, Engeltrut, Gladuse, Helena, Klotilde,⁹⁷ Kordula, Liane, Liuta, Marietta, Mehalla,⁹⁸ Irene, Julienne, Natalie, Sidonie, Theoda, Torilda, Ursula, Alithea, Aquiliana, Apollonia, Eleonore, Engelberta, Eunomia, Isabella, Pulcheria, Raphaela, Rosamunda, Teutoberga, Theodosia, Veronika

Aber auch an ausgefallenen männlichen Vornamen ist kein Mangel:

Achatius, Albano, Alessandro, Alex(ander), Amandus, Attila, Christhelf, Echion, Egidius, Ehas, Emanuel, Eugenius, Everard, Firmian, Flamin, Florian, Frohauf, Gaspard, Giannozzo, Gotthelf, Gottheb, Gottreich, Gottwalt, Guido, Gustav, Henoch, Henrion, Hoseas, Hylo,⁹⁹ Ingenun, Ischariot, Januar (Jenner), Joachim, Jonathan, Josuah, Julius, Leolin, Lorenz, Luigi, Lukas, Maria, Nikolaus, Pollux, Quoddeusvult, Roquairol, Rosa, Sebastian, Sebaud, Siegwart, Stanislaus, Tiberius, Thomas, Tonld, Thorismund, Viktor, Zebedaus

Es kommen daneben, wenn auch nicht häufig, auch einfachere Namen vor, wie Luise, Marie, Sophie, Ernst, Hans, Heinrich, Jakob, Johann, Karl, Peter; aber Jean Paul sucht ihnen dann wenigstens oft durch eine ungewöhnliche Abkürzung etwas Besonderes zu geben, z.B. Gerg für Georg, Helf für Gotthelf, Walt für Gottwalt. Seine Namenfreudigkeit bekundet sich auch darin, dass er gern doppelte Vornamen gibt:

Viktor Sebastian Horion, Firmian Stanislaus Siebenkas, Hoseas Heinrich Leibgeber, Lenette Wendeline Egelkraut, Natalie Aquiliana, Everard Rosa von Meyern, Egidius Zebedaus Fixlen, Peter Gottwalt Harnisch, Johann Alexander Schomaker, Henoch Elias Marggraf, Johann Thomas Seemaus

Im Titan führen Roquairol, Julienne und Liane noch die geheimen Nebennamen Karl, Elisa und (kleine) Linda¹⁰⁰ Diese Mehrheit von Namen gab Jean Paul die Möglichkeit, je nach seinem "prosaischen

⁹⁵ Der "narrische" Name Wendeline kommt schon in einem frühen satirischen Fragment vor, s. S W II Abt., III, 61

⁹⁶ Jean Paul braucht den Namen weiblich, s. S W VIII, 492

⁹⁷ Dieser Name der Heldin des Hesperus (Jean Paul schreibt ihn unrichtig ohne h) kam durch ihn in Aufnahme, wie auch andere Namen dieses erfolgreichsten Jean Paulschen Romans, Viktor, Emanuel, Julius Fontane sagt von dem Namen Klothilde "Er hat etwas Festes, Solides, Zuverlässiges und geht nach dieser Seite hin fast noch über Emilie hinaus" (Cécile, Kap. 13) Jean Paul hat ihn wohl mehr als romantisch empfunden

⁹⁸ S W II Abt., III, 252 Jean Paul nahm den Namen vermutlich aus Gessners Tod Abels (1778) Er geht wohl auf den biblischen Namen Mahalath (1 Mos. 28, 9) zurück

⁹⁹ S W II Abt., III, 252. Nach dem 1803 erschienenen Barden-Almanach (S. IX) ist Hylo der Name einer westfälischen Hirtengottheit Jean Paul entnahm ihn aber wahrscheinlich aus K. Ph. Moritz' Anton Reiser, wo (II, 121) erzählt wird, dass den Helden der gesungene Vers "Hüll, o schöne Sonne" aufs höchste entzückt habe, weil er die beiden ersten Silben für einen geheimnisvollen orientalischen Ausdruck "Hylo" gehalten habe

¹⁰⁰ S W VIII, 192.

Silbenmass" abzuwechseln und zu differenzieren.¹⁰¹ So entspricht z. B. bei dem Helden des Hesperus der dreifache Name gewissermassen den drei Seelen, die in seiner Brust wohnen,¹⁰² Sebastian der humoristischen, Viktor der sentimental, Horion der philosophischen. Jean Pauls fingierte Gattin erhält in der Konjektural-Biographie zu ihrem "romantischen" Namen Hermine noch den für den Alltag brauchbareren Zunamen Rosinette.¹⁰³ Sogar mit Nachnamen gestattet sich Jean Paul solchen Wechsel. Leibgeber, der ursprünglich Kees hiess, sich dann Sevenkees, Siebenkas nannte, bis er diesen Namen mit dem seines Freundes vertauschte, tritt im Titan als Schoppe wieder auf, im Gianozzo als Graul; nebenher heisst er auch noch Lowenskiöld, Mordian, Sakramentier, Huleu.¹⁰⁴ Dieser fortwährende Namenwechsel wird mit des Mannes unstetem Wesen und Reiseleben begründet, auch mit dem Beispiel seines Namensvetters Scioppius, der nach Bayle viele Namen nebeneinander geführt haben soll.¹⁰⁵ Der eigentliche Grund war aber Jean Pauls Bedürfnis, "das Ohr durch Wechsel zu erquickern"¹⁰⁶ und—dürfen wir hinzusetzen—die Fülle seiner Namensammlung möglichst auszuschöpfen.

Die handschriftlichen Vorarbeiten zu Jean Pauls Romanen zeigen, dass er oft lange zwischen verschiedenen Namen geschwankt hat, manchmal noch bis in die Reinschrift hinein, ja in einigen Fällen tauchen die ursprünglichen, später verworfenen Namen sogar im gedruckten Text versehentlich noch auf.¹⁰⁷ Für manche Gestalten findet sich in den Vorarbeiten wohl ein Dutzend Namen neben- und nacheinander, z. B. für den Helden des Titan: Adelhard, Fulgens, Klaudius Romanus, Justus Viktorin, Hubert, Maximilian, Romanus Albanus, Hannibal Alban von Wehrfritz, August, Lothar u. a. Für die Entstehungsgeschichte des betreffenden Charakters oder Werkes sind diese Schwankungen oft sehr wichtig und aufschlussreich. Wenn etwa der Wohnort des Schulmeisterleins Wutz nacheinander Sausenhofen, Bittelbronn, Erlenbach und schliesslich Auenthal genannt wird, so erkennt man deutlich, dass zunächst das satirische Element noch starker betont war und erst allmählich durch das idyllische zurückgedrängt wurde. Oder wenn der Held der Flegeljahre, Gottwalt Peter Harnisch, anfangs Tanzel, dann

¹⁰¹ S W III, 21

¹⁰² S W III, 114

¹⁰³ S W VII, 462 Jean Paul weist bei dieser Gelegenheit darauf hin, dass seine Mutter Rosina hiess (S 465)—Von Frank Wedekind wird erzählt, dass er seine Tochter Anna Pamela taufen liess, damit sie, je nachdem, ob sie eine gute Hausfrau oder eine Kunstlerin wurde, den einen oder den andern Namen verwenden könne

¹⁰⁴ S W IX, 331, 413, 431

¹⁰⁵ S W VI, 356, IX, 412 f

¹⁰⁶ S W VI, 70

¹⁰⁷ So einmal im 32. Kapitel des Hesperus der Name Fraskati für die Insel St. Johannis, in No. 23 der Flegeljahre zweimal der Name Hudo für den Grafen Klothar.

Blitz heissen sollte, so zeigt sich darin, dass er erst mehr als komische Figur gedacht war. Zuweilen geht wohl auch ein Name, der Jean Paul besonders gefiel, von einer Gestalt auf eine andere über, z B im Siebenkas der Name Lenette von der Geliebten des Helden (der späteren Natalie) auf dessen Ehefrau, im Titan der Name Wehrfritz von dem Lieferanten des Materials (dem späteren Hafenreffer) auf den Pflegevater des Helden. Die Wahl des endgültigen Namens kann im allgemeinen als Zeichen dafür angesehen werden, dass die betreffende Gestalt in der Phantasie des Dichters festen Umriss gewonnen hatte, dass, wie er sich selber ausdrückte, der "Fokus" des Charakters gefunden war. Besonders deutlich lässt sich das bei der Gestalt Roquairols verfolgen.¹⁰⁸

VIII. Wir haben oben schon darauf hingewiesen, dass Jean Paul Namen, die eine bestimmte Bedeutung haben, im allgemeinen vermied. Ganz ausschliessen konnte er sie bei ihrer grossen Verbreitung nicht gut, aber sehr selten verwendet er sie so, dass sie eindeutig auf den Charakter oder Stand des Trägers hindeuten. Ich wusste da nur den sanften Zeidler Lind im Hesperus¹⁰⁹ und den Stosser (d.i. Apothekerlehrling) Stoss im Komet zu nennen, allenfalls noch den Pflegesohn Fechsler im Falbel und die arme, kranke Frau Bitterlich in den Flegeljahren.¹¹⁰ Bei dem Schulrat Stiefel dagegen, dem Schulmeister Halss, dem Korrespondenten Fisch, dem Schultheissen Harnisch, dem Fruhprediger Flachs, dem Apotheker Hecht, dem Arzt Dr. Hut, dem Stadtturmer Heering, dem Magister Pelz, dem Buchdrucker Fuhrmann, dem Schuldirektor Wurfel, dem Gastwirt Pabst etc. lässt sich ein Zusammenhang nicht oder doch nur sehr kunstlich aufzeigen. Alle diese Namen sind nicht wegen, sondern trotz ihrer eigentlichen Bedeutung um ihres charakteristischen Klangs willen gewählt worden, zuweilen wohl auch, weil sie im Zusammenhang der Erzählung eine besondere Funktion ausuben, wie etwa Fuchslein, der mit Fixlein verwechselt wird, der Drechsler Metzger, der für einen Metzger gehalten wird,¹¹¹ Fibel, dessen Abc-Buch nach seinem Verfasser benannt wird, wie man ein Bild von Raffael einen Raffael nennt, oder Marggraf, dessen Name zu allerhand Verwechslungen Anlass gibt, die mit dazu beitragen, in seinem Trager den Glauben an fürstliche Abkunft zu bestärken. In seiner Namenliste nimmt sich Jean Paul gelegentlich vor, Tier- und Blumen-

¹⁰⁸ S W. VIII, Einl S xxxiv f

¹⁰⁹ Seltsam ist, dass die keineswegs sanfte "Titanide" den Namen Linda erhielt, von dem Raimund im Barometermacher sagt, dass er "so lind wie eine sammt'ne Schlafhaube" anmüte. Ihr ursprünglicher Name Almada war passender.

¹¹⁰ S W v, 219, x, 361

¹¹¹ S W VII, 276

namen als Personennamen zu verwenden, und notiert sich zu diesem Behuf eine Anzahl Vogelnamen, wie Seidenschwanz, Elster, Brachvogel. Er hat davon aber so gut wie gar keinen Gebrauch gemacht.¹¹² Oft hat er den eigentlichen Sinn eines Namens durch eine angehangte Endung absichtlich verwischt, z B in Lederer, Freudel, Reuel, Schmelzle, Oechsle, Falterle, Fixlein.¹¹³

Wenn nun aber Jean Pauls Namen auch selten direkt "redende" sind, so sind sie doch natürlich oft so gewählt, dass sie gewisse Assoziationen wecken, die in der Richtung des betreffenden Charakters liegen. Er fuhr ja selber in der Vorschule als Beispiel an, dass er einen "kahlen, fahlen" Menschen Fahland genannt habe.¹¹⁴ Mit Wutz wird in Süddeutschland ein Schwein bezeichnet; und so mag man sich denn das vergnügte Schulmeisterlein Wutz als ein quietschvergnügt in seinem Tumpel platscherndes Ferkel vorstellen. Bei der koketten Residentin von Bouse denkt man unwillkürlich an die Rolle ihres Busens, bei dem Kammerherrn Fiou¹¹⁵ an einen Filou, bei Scheerau an Scherereien, bei dem Bussprediger Reuel an Reue, bei dem armen Bergmann Zaus daran, dass er vom Leben arg zerzaust worden ist, bei dem Tanzlehrer Falterle an einen Schmetterlingsfalter, bei dem leichtlebigen Elsasser Flitte an Flitter oder Flittchen. Der grobe Schulmeister Flegler, Fibels Feind und Rezensent, gemahnt an einen Flegel in doppeltem Sinne. Wehrfritz deutet auf Mut und Energie, Schmelzle auf das Gegenteil, Wehmeier (ursprünglich Greimeisen) auf Klaglichkeit, Glanz auf Eitelkeit, Knor und Knoll auf Rauheimigkeit. Ortsnamen wie Auenthal, Lilienbad, Maienthal, Blumenbühl, Lilar, Elterlein, Heim, Liebenau¹¹⁶ sollen natürlich hebliche, idyllische, Ruhestatt und Heilgengut fromme Vorstellungen erwecken. Solche Beispiele liessen sich noch vermehren. Im grossen und ganzen hat aber Jean Paul doch allzu direkte Anspielungen eher vermieden als gesucht, und es wäre verfehlt, etwa in Namen wie Siebenkas, Leibgeber, Oelhafen, Scheinfuss, Graukern, Mehlhorn, Seebass, Seemaus, Kehrstephan, Passvogel, Kuhschnappel, Kussewitz u dgl. bestimmte Hindeutungen auf den Charakter der betreffenden ¹¹² Vgl. Egelkraut, Schalaster S W. vi, 23, 300. Später hat bekanntlich Freytag mit Vorliebe Vogelnamen verwendet. Fink, Specht, Pix (Picus), Hahn etc.

¹¹³ In J. G. Müllers Siegfried von Lindenberg kommt ein Allerweltsgeziehe namens Fix vor. — Dass Fixlein eine Permutation von infelix ist, worauf mich Prof. Graf in Quedlinburg aufmerksam macht, ist gewiss nur Zufall. Hätte Jean Paul dergleichen im Sinne gehabt, so hätte er vermutlich, dem Charakter des Mannes entsprechend, eher Fixle als Permutation von felix gewählt.

¹¹⁴ Die eigentliche Bedeutung von Fahland (Teufel) scheint er nicht gekannt zu haben; sonst hätte er den Namen wohl nicht gewählt. ¹¹⁵ S W. II Abt., II, 252.

¹¹⁶ Vgl. S W. xv, 279. "Nichts hör' ich so gern als Städte und Dörfer mit dem Liebenamen kopuliert."

Person oder Ortschaft sehen zu wollen. Das Ausschlaggebende war für Jean Paul immer der Klang des Namens; die inhaltliche Assoziation trat höchstens sekundär hinzu. So hat er z.B. den Namen Albano gewiss mehr wegen des edlen Wohlklangs als, wie man behauptet hat, wegen seiner Bedeutung (albo = weiss, rein) gewählt.¹¹⁷

Bei komischen Figuren steht der Name zuweilen in absichtlichem Gegensatz zu dem Wesen des Tragers, so wie ja Jean Paul, nach dem Vorbild des gutmütigen Offiziers Onkel Toby, auch Stand und Charakter gern kontrastieren lässt, z.B. bei dem vertraumten Notar Walt und bei dem hasenfussigen Feldprediger Schmelzle. In seiner Namenliste führt er einmal als Paradigma an: "Fuchs, für einen Dummen." So heisst der von Pech verfolgte Amtsvogt Freudel, der weichmütige Walt mit Nachnamen Harnisch.¹¹⁸ Besonders liebt er kontrastierende Vornamen: der feige Schmelzle führt den kriegerischen Vornamen Atilla (in den Vorarbeiten erst Alexander, dann Tiberius und Geiserich), der nichts weniger als lebenswürdige Katzenberger heisst Amandus, der hypochondrische Zuchthausprediger Suptitz Frohauf. Dabei wirkt auch noch die Komik des Gegensatzes zwischen einem hochtonenden Vornamen und einem prosaischen Nachnamen mit, wie sie schon Shakespeare verwendet hat (vgl. Pompejus Bump in Mass für Mass), so z.B. Florian Fälbel, Ischariot Gogel, Raphaela Neupeter, Teutoberga Schmelzle u.a.

Jean Paul hat sich sicherlich auf die sorgfältige Wahl seiner Namen etwas zugute getan; aber er hat es glücklicherweise vermieden, den Leser noch mit der Nase auf das Charakteristische der Namen zu stossen, wie das andere Dichter, z.B. Raabe und Fontane, leider zu tun pflegen. Auch Wortspiele mit Namen kommen verhältnismässig selten bei ihm vor, wie ihm ja überhaupt der reine Wortwitz weniger lag als etwa den Romantikern. Was hatte ein Brentano mit Namen wie Siebenkas, Leibgeber, Kuhschnappel etc. für Unfug getrieben! Jean Paul erklärt in der Vorschule (§ 52) Wortspiele mit Namen für minderwertig; gilt das schon für Witze mit wirklichen Namen, so noch viel mehr, wenn es sich um erfundene handelt, also "das Erstaunen über den Zufall" wegfällt, in dem Jean Paul mit Recht einen wesentlichen Reiz des Wortspiels erblickt. Erst in seinen späteren Werken—etwa von den Flegeljahren an—hat er sich zuweilen kleine Witzeleien mit Namen gestattet, z.B. mit Hut, Katzenberger, Strykius, Fuhrmann, Maus, Schnabel, Pabst.¹¹⁹ Es ist aber zu beachten, dass diese Witze meist nicht vom Erzähler, sondern von einer der mitspielenden Personen gemacht werden, ¹¹⁷ Der Name kommt vor dem Titan schon in der Unsichtbaren Loge vor, S. W. II, 334.

¹¹⁸ Ähnlich wirkt bei Raabes Hungerpastor der Name Unwirrsch.

¹¹⁹ S. W. x, 252, XIII, 100, 177, 278, 499, XIV, 289, xv, 342.

dass also der Dichter die Verantwortung dafür gewissermassen ablehnt¹²⁰ Charakteristisch für ihn sind Namenscherze anderer Art. Wenn er irgendwo las, dass es Menschen namens Mensch gibt, Dorfer namens Dorf, in Frankreich einen Flecken namens Rom und eine Familie d'O, dass ein Bischof von Karthago Quoddeusvult hiess, oder dass die Angehörigen einer frommen Sekte Anfangszeilen von Kirchenliedern als Vornamen führen, so liess er sich dergleichen Kuriositäten nicht entgehen.¹²¹ Echt Jean Paulische Scherze sind es, wenn jemand seinen alltäglichen Namen Schuster durch ein blosses Strichelchen in den interessanter klingenden Namen Sehuster verwandelt, oder wenn der Jude Judas bei der Taufe den Namen des christlichen Apostels Judas (Ischariot) "annimmt," also äusserlich so wie innerlich unverändert bleibt.¹²² Erwähnt sei schliesslich noch, dass Namentausch und Namenverwechslungen in Jean Pauls Werken oft eine wichtige Rolle spielen.¹²³

IX Die ungewöhnliche Namengebung Jean Pauls ist natürlich auch seinen Zeitgenossen schon aufgefallen, hat aber im allgemeinen mehr Anstoss erregt als Beifall gefunden. Der ihm sonst so wohlgesinnte alte Gleim hält sich in einem an Klamer Schmidt gerichteten Gelegenheitsverschen vom 1. Mai 1796 über die "vertrakten" Namen Kuhschnappel, Schnazler, Graukern auf.¹²⁴ Der ursprünglich für den Kantor im Jubelsenioren in Aussicht genommene Name Queerpfeif wurde von Jean Pauls Freund Otto beanstandet und daraufhin in Scheinfuss abgeändert.¹²⁵ Auch mit dem Namen Leibgeber war Otto nicht einverstanden, was wohl mit dazu beitrug, dass Jean Paul ihn später in Schoppe umtaufte. Seiner Freundin Charlotte von Kalb missfiel mit Recht der Name Haarhaar für das Fürstentum, in dem der Titan spielen sollte, Jean Paul hat ihn daher auf das feindliche Nachbarland übertragen und für Albanos Fürstentum den edleren Namen Hohenfliess gewählt. In einem Aufsatz im Journal des Luxus und der Moden vom Juli 1801 heisst es: So sehr ich auch dem Halbgotte Jean Paul . . . ergeben bin, so bin ich mit seiner Namenswahl doch sehr unzufrieden. Denn seiner Helden Namen sind wie eine Folge von unaufgelosten Quintengängen, bei denen das Ohr einen Stich nach dem andern bekommt, und vollends auf den Charakteren, wo sie zu sitzen kommen, ¹²⁰ In der Vorschule (§52) weist Jean Paul darauf hin, dass Shakespeare seine Wortspiele meist Narren und Bedienten in den Mund lege

¹²¹ Vgl. S.W. III, 149, VIII, 245, 436, X, 31, XIV, 225, XV, 10

¹²² S.W. X, 328, XIII, 355

¹²³ S. die Zusammenstellung bei Hanns Dannenberg, Wiederkehrende Motive bei Jean Paul (1913), S. 90 ff

¹²⁴ Die beiden letzteren Namen kommen in der den Biographischen Belustigungen angehangenen Sallatkirchweih von Obersees vor

¹²⁵ Jean Pauls Briefwechsel mit seinem Freunde Christian Otto (Berlin, 1829), II, 14

gleicht die Benennung nicht selten einer Maskerade, wo die sieben Weisen Griechenlands, der eine mit einer Harlekinsjacke, der andere wie ein Postillon, der dritte mit einem Pferdeschweif und einer sogar mit der Hulse des grauen Bibelredners¹²⁶ erschienen

Derartige Vorwürfe waren gewiss nicht ganz unberechtigt. In seiner Freude an auffallenden oder "narrischen" Namen hat Jean Paul zuweilen auf den Charakter des Werkes, in dem er sie verwendete, nicht genügend Rücksicht genommen. Namen wie Kuhschnappel, Egelkraut, Oelhafen wird man sich in einem reinkomischen Werk gefallen lassen, aber nicht in einem doch grossenteils ernsthaften und realistischen Roman wie Siebenkas. In einer schlichten bürgerlichen Idylle wie dem Jubelsenior waren so gesuchte Namen wie Althea, Theodosia, Ingenuin sicher nicht am Platze. Von dem Vorwurf der Gesuchtheit, der sich ja überhaupt gegen Jean Pauls ganze Manier erheben lässt, wird man auch seine Namengebung nicht freisprechen können. Doch muss anerkannt werden, dass sich die schlimmsten Sunden in seinen früheren Werken finden, und dass er sich später mehr Zurückhaltung auferlegt hat. Gegen die Namen der sieben Erben in den Flegeljahren z. B., Glanz, Harprecht, Knoll, Neupeter, Passvogel, Flachs, Flitte, wird sich kaum noch etwas einwenden lassen. Natürlich darf man nicht den Massstab moderner realistischer Romane an seine Werke anlegen, sondern muss sich immer vor Augen halten, dass er, bei allem Realismus im einzelnen, doch schliesslich nur eine romantische Phantasiewelt aufbauen wollte. Berücksichtigt man ferner noch, dass wir es durchweg mit humoristischen Werken zu tun haben, so wird man zugestehen müssen, dass er im grossen und ganzen die Grenzen des Zulässigen kaum überschritten hat. Spätere ausgesprochene Realisten haben sich da manchmal weit mehr erlaubt, z. B. Freytag mit seinem Piepenbrink, Hebbel mit Kotzschнауzel, Fontane mit Sahnepott, Thomas Mann mit Kloterjahn, Lobgott Piepsam, Sesemi Weichbrodt, besonders Raabe mit Namen wie Schlotterbeck, Ulebeule, Feuchtenbeiner, Schlappupp, Krautworst, Klopffleisch, Knackstert etc. In der Hauptsache war Jean Paul mit seiner Namengebung sicher auf dem richtigen Wege und hat wesentlich dazu beigetragen, dass die Irrwege, die im 18. Jahrhundert auf diesem Gebiete noch gang und gabe waren, verlassen wurden. Die grossen Meister der Erzählungskunst im 19. Jahrhundert, z. B. Hoffmann, Gotthelf, Keller, Reuter, Raabe, Seidel, Fontane, Wilhelm Busch, sind da doch alle seine direkten oder indirekten Schüler gewesen.

EDUARD BEREND

Geneva, Switzerland

¹²⁶ Bileams Esel ist gemeint.

NORTHERN AFRICA IN ANDRÉ GIDE'S WRITINGS

FUNDAMENTAL characteristics of André Gide are his acute sense of the diversity of man and nature and his fervent desire to apprehend the infinitely varied manifestations of life which seem to him the essence of reality. Nowhere in his writings are these characteristics more readily perceived than in the works inspired by his contact with the land and peoples of Northern Africa. For Jean Hytier, however, author of an excellent analysis of Gide's art, the sincerity and force of the writer's sympathy with diversity explain a certain lack of provocative, picturesque qualities in his African exoticism, indeed, thinks this critic, "Gide a . . . renouvelé l'exotisme en l'éliminant, à force d'adhérer de tout son cœur, et sans faire la petite bouche, sans discriminations qui rétablissent l'étrangeté, avec précisément une volonté, ou plutôt un don, de ne pas rester étranger."¹

This remark, though suggestive, needs qualification. Significant as it is that Gide has no impulse to hold aloof, it must not be forgotten that for him the charm of other lands—of Northern Africa above all—lies in their strangeness and diversity and that he seeks these qualities with unflagging ardor. He is very explicit on this point in Si le grain ne meurt, where he writes: "l'étrange me sollicite, autant que me rebute le coutumier. Disons encore et plus précisément que je suis attiré par ce qui reste de soleil sur les peaux brunes; c'est pour moi que Virgile écrivait: Quid tunc sz fuscus Amyntas?"² And certainly it is by contrast with his own regions that Africa has had such an appeal for Gide, since after his return from his sixth journey to Algeria he wrote in Le Renoncement au voyage: "Dans l'automne de Normandie je rêve au printemps du désert. . . . La rafale du nord bat ma vitre. Il pleut depuis trois jours—Oh! que les caravanes étaient belles, quand, le soir, à Touggourt, le soleil se couchait dans le sel"³ Normandy and the desert, the cold rainy north and the caravans of the Sahara—these form the two poles, so to speak, of Gide's sensibility. The first corresponds to his puritan upbringing and to his need for order and discipline and restraint in life and art, while the second—with much more compelling attraction—corresponds to his tardily-aroused fervor for life in all its richness and profusion of sensations, to his unquenchable thirst for beauty, strength, and joy.

¹ Jean Hytier, André Gide (Alger: E. Charlot, 1938), pp. 39-40.

² André Gide, Œuvres complètes, édition augmentée de textes inédits établie par L. Martin-Chauffier (Paris: Nouvelle Revue Française, [1932-39]), x, 370-371. Except for the Journal, 1889-1939, all references to Gide's writings in this study are to this splendid edition, in fifteen large volumes, published under the author's own supervision.—The citation from Virgil is from the Tenth Eclogue.

³ Œuvres, iv, 340.

Even before his "discovery" of Africa, Gide had introduced certain exotic notes in his writings. The "thème du départ"—inherited from the Romanticists and the Symbolists—appears discreetly in Les Cahiers d'André Walter and La Tentative amoureuse. And in the symbolistic Voyage d'Urien, where landscapes expressing états d'âme are given the difficult task of replacing both external and inner action, we find completely imaginary descriptions of scenes ranging from the tropics to the polar seas. Finally Gide comes into intimate contact with the sun-drenched land of Northern Africa, on that momentous first journey which no reader of Si le grain ne meurt can forget, and he begins pouring into his writing all the riches of a new and tremendously appealing kind of exoticism.

This exoticism is not the banal and superficial local color and clichés of the Romanticists, nor is it the precise, accurate, plastic description of the painter Fromentin. It is rather the rapt musing of a poet whose sensibility is in close communion with the living reality of a strange new land—a poetic reality which is apprehended by Gide through his extraordinary quality of sympathy and which is then re-created artistically in the medium of imaginative prose. The peculiar quality of this exoticism and its significance in Gide's writings can best be defined by a somewhat detailed examination of Si le grain ne meurt (which belongs essentially to the period of the author's first contact with Africa, even though it was not released to the public until 1926), Les Nourritures terrestres, L'Immoraliste, and the four lyrical compositions which make up Amyntas. After the publication of this last work, in 1906, North African or Algerian exoticism ceased to play an important part in Gide's writings.⁴ Two decades later, of course, with Le Voyage au Congo and Le Retour du Tchad, the author devotes himself to Africa again. But the intense lyrical exaltation which that continent had aroused in the youthful Gide cannot be called back by the sixty-year-old traveler. Then too, French Equatorial Africa and the black tribes appeal to him far less than the desert and the oases of Algeria and the Arab peoples. Besides showing a keen interest in natural science, through his notations on plants, insects, and animals, Gide now pays more attention to social problems, so that the two books become, in large measure, persuasive tracts against abuses in the colonial administration and against the exploiting of the natives by powerful concessionnaires. The author is still responsive to picturesque exotic elements, of course, and sometimes remarks that a certain scene is "très exotique" or—more often—"très peu exotique." When he must make the latter observation, a note of regret is always expressed or implied. Suggestions of another type of exoticism—primitivism—appear occasionally in sympathetic comments on the natives, but Gide is not a Rousseauist and has no illusions about the state of nature.⁵

⁴ For the sake of completeness it may be noted that Paludes (1895), Gide's first book after his "discovery" of Africa, includes a few pages suggesting the significance of that new experience, though in general it deals with the kind of stagnation to which Algeria for Gide was proving such a powerful antidote. Occasional traces of the writer's preoccupation with Africa are apparent in the Lettres à Angèle, the literary chronicles he published in L'Hermite at intervals during the years 1898–1900. In addition, the short "traité" El Hadj (1899) is notable for what Martin-Chauffier calls a sort of "exotisme réfléchi" or "exotisme renversé" (cf. Notices, in Œuvres, III, viii–ix). Among Gide's compositions between the publication of Amyntas (1906) and his two books on French Equatorial Africa (1927–28), La Marche turque (1914) recalls the earlier travel notes because Gide constantly contrasts the sordid actuality of Asiatic Turkey, where land and people seem equally unattractive to him, with the remembered enchantments of his beloved Algeria and the Arabs. The permanent mark that Africa had left upon Gide may even be discovered in certain of his fictions: thus Lafcadio in Les Caves du Vatican (1914) had made "un merveilleux voyage en Algérie" and the book that Édouard surprises little Georges Molinier stealing from the bouquiniste in Les Faux-Monnayeurs (1926) is an old Joanne guide to Algeria. Moreover, it may be added that Gide's Journal, 1889–1939, Bibliothèque de la Pléiade edition (Paris: Nouvelle Revue Française, 1939), contains brief notes on several African trips, including one to Morocco in 1923, one to Algeria as recently as 1936, and a mission to French West Africa in 1938.

All four of the works to be examined here are largely concerned with Algeria, which was for their author a land of enchantment above all others. Many French writers had gone there before Gide, of course—Tailliart takes 676 pages to sum up his painstaking investigation of *L'Algérie dans la littérature française*⁶—and the young man who set out in October 1893 for Northern Africa could have read descriptions of those regions by such well-known predecessors as Gautier, Marmier, Feydeau, Daudet, Flaubert, the Goncourt brothers, and Maupassant. He may already have known Fromentin's Un été dans le Sahara and Une année dans le Sahel, which remain perhaps the finest descriptive works that French literature owes to the inspiration of the land and peoples of Northern Africa. Even if he did not go directly to these men to document himself before beginning his journey, Gide could have found lengthy citations from their writings in the guide books.⁷

Scholars like Tailliart and Lebel, who are interested mainly in works giving precise and accurate information about the African scene and the psychology and mœurs of the natives, dismiss Gide's books as "touristic" diversions composed by a hasty traveler more interested in his Parisian public than in the real nature of the lands and peoples encountered far from the capital. They class his writings among the superficial external descriptions that merely portray strangeness or banal local color with little effort to understand the causes of the charm which the land exerts or to penetrate the native soul, or else they look down on them as lyrical or sentimental rhapsodies in which the author simply displays his own sensibility as it is affected by the scenes which he evokes or describes in subjective colors.⁸ But such summary judgments, based largely upon non-aesthetic criteria, are of little value in a serious attempt to define the quality of Gide's African exoticism and to understand its literary significance. To clear the way, it may be observed at once that our concern here is properly not with what Gide adds to our documentation on Africa but rather with what Africa contributes to Gide's achievement as a creative artist.

⁵ Cf. André Gide, Journal, 1889-1939, Bibliothèque de la Pléiade edition (Paris: Nouvelle Revue Française, 1939), pp. 952-953.

⁶ Cf. Charles Tailliart, L'Algérie dans la littérature française (Paris: Champion, 1925).

⁷ Cf. ibid., p. 325.

Si le grain ne meurt gives us the frankest expression of Gide's introduction to Africa during the memorable journey which was to release him from the inhibitions that had harassed the sentimental and spiritual life of his adolescent years and bring him the psychic escape that his earlier literary activity had not provided.⁹ His reaction to the land and people of Algeria was conditioned by the general moral problem which the conflict between his puritan training and his newly-aroused zest for life posed for him and by the more specific problem posed by the anomaly which Gide refers to as his "penchant naturel." What he sought in setting out was some new experience, some "toison d'or," which would harmoniously resolve the dualism within his body and mind.¹⁰

So certain was the young writer of finding an inner harmony in the south which constituted one of the poles of his sensibility that as he and his companions journeyed toward the unknown land it seemed to them that at every step "peuple et pays devant nous se mettaient en fête, et que la nature même, à notre approche, s'exaltait."¹¹ Gide spends the night on deck as the boat carries him from Marseille to Tunis and he is intoxicated by the emotions aroused within him as he whispers the mysterious word: Africa.¹² Everything is strange, exciting, and enchanting as he disembarks in Tunis—the sight of camels outlined against the sky, golden fish leaping in the water, the people looking like characters out of the Arabian Nights, bazars with their colorful displays, coffee served by an old shop-keeper, the Arab youth who offers himself as a guide.¹³ Once in the open country between Tunis and the mountains, Gide finds his joy without limits and he begins to come under the spell of "ce grand pays monotone, de son vide diapré, de son silence."¹⁴ Then his illness

⁸ Cf. ibid., pp. 656–658, and especially Roland Lebel, Histoire de la littérature coloniale en France (Paris: Larose, 1931), pp. 79–80, 93, 129, 134–135.

⁹ Cf. S. A. Rhodes, "The Influence of Walt Whitman on André Gide," Romanic Review, xxxi (April 1940), 156–157.

¹⁰ Œuvres, x, 348.

¹¹ Ibid., x, 352.

¹² Ibid., x, 353.

¹³ Ibid., x, 353–354.

¹⁴ Ibid., x, 355–356.

makes him press on toward the south, seeking more favorable surroundings. Biskra becomes the scene of his convalescence, and it is this lengthy convalescence amidst the wealth of sensations inseparable from the oasis and desert that enables Gide finally to throw off the shackles from his past and to savor all the delights of the "nourritures terrestres."

Most of the literary fruits of this first sojourn in Biskra are found in other writings, but Si le grain ne meurt includes pages on the Oulad Nail girls and their quarter,¹⁵ on the dancing of these girls in a little café,¹⁶ and on the fascination of the "musique mahométane,"¹⁷ as well as a splendid passage revealing the convalescent's feeling for the country at the approach of spring:

Cependant le printemps touchait l'oasis. Une distincte joie commence de palpiter sous les palmes. J'allais mieux. Certain matin, je risquai une promenade beaucoup plus longue, ce pays monotone était pour moi d'inépuisable attrait: ainsi que lui, je me sentais revivre, et même il me semblait que pour la première fois je vivais, sorti de la vallée de l'ombre de la mort, que je naissais à la vraie vie. Oui, j'entrais dans une existence nouvelle, tout d'accueil et d'abandon. Une légère brume azurée distançait les plans les plus proches, dépondérait, immatérialisait chaque objet. Moi-même, échappé de tout poids, j'avancais à pas lents, comme Renaud dans le jardin d'Armide, frissonnant tout entier d'un étonnement, d'un éblouissement indicibles. J'entendais, je voyais, je respirais, comme je n'avais jamais fait jusqu'alors, et tandis que sons, parfums, couleurs, profusément en moi s'épousaient, je sentais mon cœur désœuvré, sanglotant de reconnaissance, fondre en adoration pour un Apollon inconnu.¹⁸

Well at last and back in France, then in Switzerland, Gide longs for the Africa he had known: "la nostalgie de ce grand pays sans profil, du peuple en burnous blancs, nous avait poursuivi à travers l'Italie, Paul et moi, le souvenir des chants, des danses, des parfums, et, avec les enfants de là-bas, de ce commerce charmant où déjà tant de volupté se glissait captieusement sous l'idylle."¹⁹ In January (1895) Gide embarks again, with the intention of settling in Algiers—which he had not visited on the earlier trip—for an extended stay. But instead of the early spring which he had expected to find there, "un vent glacé rabattait des sommets de l'Atlas ou du fond du désert la fureur et le désespoir."²⁰ Blidah too seems at this season "morne et sans attrait,"²¹ and Gide regrets the charm of Biskra as he had known it the year before. In Algiers he meets Oscar Wilde and Lord Douglas, and the former takes him to a tiny, secluded native café where the young Frenchman savors again the "nourritures terrestres" that had begun to delight him during his convalescence. Soon he goes on to Biskra and finds unalloyed delight in the company of his

¹⁵ Ibid., x, 369-370

¹⁶ Ibid., x, 373

¹⁷ Ibid., x, 373

¹⁸ Ibid., x, 378-379.

¹⁹ Ibid., x, 392

²⁰ Ibid., x, 393

²¹ Ibid., x, 395.

Arab friends and in solitary excursions into the desert where sometimes he waits for dusk, "ivre d'immensité, d'étrangeté, de solitude, le cœur plus léger qu'un oiseau."²² Finally he must return to the north, in despair at the thought of abandoning so much joy and beauty and youth. Leave-taking is prolonged in the "Eden" of El Kantara and in Algiers boat after boat is allowed to sail without him because, as he writes, "à l'idée de quitter ce pays mon cœur se déchirait"²³

Si le grain ne meurt has been considered first, in spite of its date, because it gives the most literal account of Gide's introduction to Africa and reveals the significance of that experience directly rather than in the form of an imaginative creation. Here in their simplest state we find the elements of Gide's African exoticism, with a few details of local color as the unoriginal part and the intense feeling of communion with the spiritual essence of the new land—evoked rather than described—as the original part. It is this feeling, perhaps, that Hytier is attempting to characterize in the remark cited above, but he goes too far in asserting that Gide's whole-hearted adherence to the new scenes destroys their exotic quality. On the contrary it is his apprehension of the exotic that gives such intensity to Gide's feeling, and his exaltation lasts only so long as the scenes retain this quality.

A much more lyrical and imaginative expression of Gide's first reaction to the African scene occurs in that impassioned hymn to the joys and beauties of the physical world which is Les Nourritures terrestres. With all his senses aroused to vibrate sympathetically at the slightest stimuli, Gide writing as a poet in rhythmic prose fills his pages with ecstatic memories of Tunis and of Algerian towns, oases, and the desert, as well as with memories from Normandy, the Midi, Italy, and Syracuse, or with longings for distant lands still unknown to him except in imagination. No precise descriptions, few plastic images are necessary—it is enough for the poet to evoke his emotion by the mention, in musical phrases, of the objects that had produced the original sensations.

Much of the book deals directly with the land that interests us here. We get a glimpse of Tunis—its limpid sky, the night, the gleaming water, and the "néfaste clarté de la lune au désert."²⁴ Memories of gardens that he has seen or imagined come into Gide's consciousness and he apostrophizes the gardens of Blidah as the most enchanting of all: "Ah! douce est l'herbe du Sahel, et tes fleurs d'oranger! et tes ombres! suaves les odeurs de tes jardins. Blidah! Blidah! petite rose!"²⁵ Poetic phrases evoke the gardens of Biskra in the rain, with the people thirsty for the cooling moisture. Each hour brings its subtle changes, and in a few harmonious and rhythmic lines the poet suggests morning, evening, and night in Biskra, with the sounds and contrasting silences that give to the oasis and desert their peculiar quality. Especial attention is devoted to the marvelous effects of sunlight in this clear, dry region, and Gide is remarkably successful in an undertaking which Taillart²⁶ considers forbiddingly difficult: "Tu n'imagines pas, Nathanael, ce que peut devenir enfin cet abreuvement de lumière, et la sensuelle extase que donne cette persistante chaleur. . ."²⁷

²² Ibid., x, 425.²³ Ibid., x, 431.²⁴ Œuvres, II, 100²⁵ Ibid., II, 104.

Sometimes the poet is carried away by the myriad seductions of the oases and he is able to communicate his experience so compellingly that the reader too comes under their spell:

Oasis! Elles flottaient sur le désert comme des îles, de loin, la verdure des palmiers promettaient la source où leurs racines s'abreuvaient, parfois elle était abondante et les lauriers-roses s'y penchaient—Ce jour-là, vers dix heures lorsque nous y arrivâmes, je refusai d'abord d'aller plus loin, le charme des fleurs de ces jardins était tel que je ne voulais plus les quitter.—Oasis! (Ahmet me dit la suivante est beaucoup plus belle)

Oasis La suivante était beaucoup plus belle, plus pleine de fleurs et de bruissements. Des arbres plus grands se penchaient sur de plus abondantes eaux. C'était midi. Nous nous baignâmes—Puis il nous fallut aussi la quitter.

Oasis De la suivante que dirai-je? Elle était encore plus belle et nous y attendîmes le soir.²⁸

These lush charms can be surfeiting, however, and Gide concludes: "Le lendemain je n'aimai plus que le désert."²⁹ Nor was this just a momentary reaction, for Gide again and again expresses his love for the desert, which attracts him above all else in this land of endless fascination. In Si le grain ne meurt he speaks of "cet étrange amour de l'inhumain, de l'aride, qui, si longtemps, me fit préférer à l'oasis le désert."³⁰ In Les Nourritures terrestres he contemplates the caravans arriving or departing and longs to accompany them on their journeys: "O fatigues splendides, immenses, dans l'incommensurable désert."³¹ And he apostrophizes the desert in these impassioned terms:

Que de fois, ah! levé dès l'aube et vers l'Orient empoupré, plus plein de rayons qu'une gloire—que de fois, à la limite de l'oasis, où les derniers palmiers s'étiolaient, la vie ne triomphant plus du désert—comme penché vers cette source de lumière, déjà trop éclatante et insoutenable aux regards, ai-je tendu vers toi mes désirs, vaste plaine de lumière tout inondée—de torride chaleur . . .

Après terre, terre sans bonté, sans douceur; terre de passion, de ferveur; terre aimée des prophètes—ah! douloureux désert, désert de gloire, je t'ai passionnément aimé.³²

²⁶ Cf. Taillart, op. cit., p. 331.

²⁹ Ibid., II, 198.

³⁰ Œuvres, x, 83.

²⁷ Œuvres, II, 191–192.

³¹ Œuvres, II, 201.

²⁸ Ibid., II, 197–198.

³² Ibid., II, 201–202.

Gide cannot speak enough of the desert, so varied in its appeal despite its seeming monotony. He evokes the "désert d'alfa," the "désert de pierre," the "désert d'argile," and finally—most fascinating of all—the "désert de sable," with its shifting dunes, wind, heat, and absence of life: "Je t'aurai passionnément aimé, désert de sable. Ah! que ta plus petite poussière redise en son seul lieu une totalité de l'univers!"³³

The total effect of Africa upon Gide is suggested in a passage of the last book of Les Nourritures terrestres, in which the poet is back in Paris on a June night, dreaming of the land that he had left. Here in rhythmic phrases that convey the subtlest overtones of the poet's emotion, we find that complete absorption in the Algerian scene which gives Gide's exoticism its profound originality and aesthetic significance:

Athman, je songe à toi, Biskra, je songe à tes palmiers,—Touggourt, à tes sables . . . —Le vent aride du désert agite-t-il encore là-bas, oasis, vos palmes bruisantes? De chaleur grenades éclatées, laissez-vous choir vos grains acerbes?

And the poet concludes:

O désir! que de nuits je n'ai pu dormir, tant je me penchais sur un rêve qui me remplaçait le sommeil! Oh! s'il est des brumes, au soir, des sons de flûte sous les palmes, de blancs vêtements dans les profondeurs des sentiers, de l'ombre douce auprès de l'ardente lumière . . . j'irai!³⁴

Si le grain ne meurt is frankly and directly autobiographical and Les Nourritures terrestres is the lyrical and imaginative history of a phase in Gide's inner life. L'Immoraliste, however, despite the author's abundant use of his own memories—memories of sensations of the land and people of Algeria above all³⁵—is an objective work of art in which imagination and invention play a major part. It is of special significance to the present study, since it is the only example of Gide's use of exoticism as an integral element in a piece of creative fiction.

The effect of Africa upon the hero of L'Immoraliste is incalculable, just as was its effect upon Gide himself. Moreover the whole structure of the fiction depends upon the African scene, which—though it is scarcely described at all in plastic terms but only evoked in all its ardent plenitude of sensations—does far more than serve as a picturesque background for the moral drama. The récit cannot even be conceived of apart from the dangerously fascinating oases and desert, for they are as essential to the work as Paris is to Balzac's Comédie humaine. Even when the scene shifts from Algeria to Normandy or Switzerland or Italy, the African land never ceases to exert its compelling attraction for Michel and hence to shape the form in which the fiction has its being.

³³ Ibid., II, 203–204

³⁴ Ibid., II, 216–217

³⁵ Cf. L. Martin-Chauffier's Notices, in Œuvres, IV, viii

In the preface Gide presents L'Immoraliste as "un fruit plein de cendre amère" that is like the "coloquintes du désert qui croissent aux endroits calcinés et ne présentent à la soif qu'une plus atroce brûlure, mais sur le sable d'or ne sont pas sans beauté"³⁶ At the beginning and end of Michel's narrative we are given a suggestive evocation—not a precise description—of the house at Sidi and of the ambiance in which the three friends must listen to their stricken comrade. Discreet notations on the extraordinary clarity of the sky, the exhilarating quality of the air, the house and little garden, are sufficient to make the reader apprehend imaginatively the kind of spell which the land has woven over Michel.

In the story itself we learn of Michel's indifference toward Africa at the time he and Marceline embark for their wedding journey, of the way the powerful new sensations begin to arouse his body and spirit, and then of his illness and slow convalescence at Biskra. Here the magic of the oasis and desert begins to work its spell and to assume the importance in Michel's life and in his dramatic relationship with Marceline that it is never to lose. This magic does not have to be described but is simply suggested by the terms of Michel's own narrative. We find, nevertheless, evocations of the charm of the public gardens in Biskra, of the oasis, the flocks and shepherds and the insinuating tones of the flute playing in the shade of the palms, and—a disturbing note—of the Arab youths whom Michel gets to know during the months of his convalescence. Finally, as Michel has become strong and as the heat is growing too intense in Biskra, he must think regretfully of departure: "Rien ne nous retenait à Biskra—que ce charme qui devait m'y rapeler ensuite"³⁷

The contrast of Algeria and Normandy which results from the juxtaposition of Parts I and II of L'Immoraliste has a symbolic value corresponding to the two poles of Gide's own sensibility but significant apart from that and purely in the context of the fiction, since the two lands affect Michel and Marceline in directly contrary ways. Thus it comes about that after the couple have spent some time at their estate in Normandy, Michel feels compelled to take Marceline away with him to some other land. He believes this necessary to save their love, but the real reason is that he is drawn irresistibly back to the south, back to the oases and desert of Algeria where he, like Gide, had learned to feed upon the "nouritures terrestres." Now it is Marceline who becomes ill and, symbolically, she becomes weaker and weaker as Michel draws her ever southward, while Michel becomes stronger and feels a fierce joy. To her the south is death, to him life, but only after the pathetic outcome does Michel become conscious of this: "Par quelle aberration, quel aveuglement obstiné, quelle volontaire folie, me persuadai-je, et surtout tâchai-je de lui persuader qu'il lui fallait plus de lumière encore et de chaleur, invoquai-je le souvenir de ma convalescence à Biskra . . . Mais étais-je maître de choisir mon vouloir? de décider de mon désir?"³⁸ Despite the gravity of Marceline's condition, Michel cannot help finding this second journey as enticing as the first, and Gide permits him to express his exaltation in lyrical phrases:

³⁶ Œuvres, IV, 5.³⁷ Ibid, IV, 51.

Le souvenir et le désir du Sud m'obsédait . . . Il fait chaud Il fait beau Tout est splendide Ah! je voudrais qu'en chaque phrase, ici, toute une moisson de volupté se distille . . . Tunis . . . Lumière plus abondante que forte L'ombre en est encore emple L'air lui-même semble un fluide lumineux où tout baigne, où l'on plonge, où l'on nage Cette terre de volupté satisfait mais n'apaise pas le désir, et toute exaltation l'exalte.³⁹

In the conflict between Michel's boundless egoism enhanced by the fierceness of the desert and intoxicating charm of the oasis, and the gentleness and weakness of Marceline, the tragic dénouement of L'Immoraliste is inevitable. To the very last, Michel cannot tear himself away from the "nourritures terrestres" to give heed to his love for Marceline, so that she dies a pathetic victim of her husband's excessive concern with himself and of the savagely beautiful land which was as fatal for her as it was dangerously enticing for Michel. Not even her death avails to break the spell by which Africa holds Michel enthralled, so that he must implore his friends at the end: "Arrachez-moi d'ici à présent . . . Rien ne décourage autant la pensée que cette persistance de l'azur. Ici toute recherche est impossible, tant la volupté suit de près le désir. Entouré de splendeur et de mort, je sens le bonheur trop présent et l'abandon à lui trop uniforme. . . ." ⁴⁰

And so we see that from beginning to end, it is Africa that shapes the lives of the protagonists in L'Immoraliste and determines the structure in which the fiction has its being. In masterly fashion Gide creates the poetic reality of an exotic land, not by the use of banal descriptive details of local color but by the imaginative projection of the essential qualities of that land as he himself had apprehended them. Exoticism in this récit becomes something much more profound and subtle than Romantic exoticism; yet even in his ardent sympathy Gide never loses that sense of the diversity of nature and of man without which exoticism does not exist. More important, he communicates this sense to the reader by the power of his vision and the perfection of his art, so that restrained as is the use of details of local color in L'Immoraliste, this work deserves to rank among the masterpieces of exotic fiction. Such a judgment may be paradoxical on a work that contains so few descriptive passages, but it is justified by the importance which Africa has in the fiction and by Gide's success in embodying this exotic element inextricably in the structure and texture of his creation.

³⁸ Ibid., IV, 156.

³⁹ Ibid., IV, 159-160.

⁴⁰ Ibid., IV, 169-170.

With Amyntas, a volume of four travel sketches, we are once again in the realm of lyricism and spiritual autobiography. Gide himself ranks the work among his finest writings, but he believes that most readers misunderstand it and fail to appreciate its true quality because they seek in its pages "des descriptions, du pittoresque, des renseignements sur les pays et sur les mœurs," whereas "On n'y trouve à peu près rien que je n'eusse aussi bien pu écrire ailleurs, en France, n'importe où."⁴¹ This passage should be studied by those who take Gide to task for the lack of picturesque descriptions or precise documentation in his writings inspired by Africa, for it suggests that his aim lay elsewhere. But the statement that Amyntas contains nothing which could not have been written any place at all needs qualification, for as René Lalou quite appropriately observes. "C'est le livre de l'Algérie, de ses villes, de ses oasis, de ses routes, —le livre, avant tout, d'une terre avec ses odeurs, ses musiques et la saveur de ses fruits."⁴² Or to be still more precise, it is the book of Gide's sensibility in contact with this exotic land.

Mopsus, written at El Kantara and first published in May 1899 in L'Hermitage, serves as a sort of Virgilian prologue to the volume. It is a prose poem made up of irregular strophes, and its lyrical phrases sing with the ecstasy of all the poet's senses, with his peace and tranquility in the land of bright sunlight, shadows, music, and palms, of clay-hut villages, cattle, and shepherds, of cafés and dancing, fruits and flowers, of unchanging and beautifully simple ways of living, of the uncomplicated enjoyment of the sensual delights so freely offered, of "le vide nuancé du désert."⁴³ The whole theme of the composition is implicit in these words of Mopsus to Ménalque: "Ici, plus voluptueuse et plus inutile est la vie, et moins difficile la mort."⁴⁴

After the hauntingly beautiful music of Mopsus, we have the varied and colorful Feuilles de route, a poetic account of Gide's journey through Italy and Northern Africa in 1895-96, shortly after his marriage. Even in Italy, especially as he is drawn deeper into the south, Gide cannot forget the real goal of his trip and he feels: "Obsessions d'Orient, du désert, de son ardeur et de son vide, de l'ombre des jardins de palmes, des vêtements blancs et larges—obsessions où les sens s'affolent, les nerfs s'exaspèrent, et qui m'ont, au début de chaque nuit, fait croire le sommeil im-

⁴¹ Journal, 1889-1939, p. 324

⁴² René Lalou, review of Amyntas, in Nouvelle Revue Française, xxvi (May 1926), p. 616.

⁴³ Œuvres, III, 11.

⁴⁴ Ibid., III, 11.

possible."⁴⁵ Reaching Tunis at last, Gide recalls his joy on previous visits and regrets the changes which are beginning to substitute the ugliness of cheap modern "improvements" for the charm of the ancient native scene. Much that delights him still remains, however, and he evokes the colorful "souks," or markets, the tiny cafés with their customers, and the "caracous," which are the obscene native Punch-and-Judy shows

In the oasis town of El Kantara the poet is so charmed by the myriad sensations which come over him that he exclaims: "J'ai senti que j'aimais ce pays plus qu'aucun autre peut-être, mieux que partout ailleurs on y peut contempler"⁴⁶ And at Biskra, the scene of his convalescence, Gide feels new comprehension of the "langue différente" which the land speaks⁴⁷—comprehension which has not destroyed the exotic quality of the desert, however, since it is the infinite variety of the desert's seeming monotony which he expresses most tellingly:

J'aime infiniment le désert. La première année, je le craignais un peu à cause de son vent et de son sable, puis dans l'absence de tout but on ne savait plus s'arrêter et je me fatiguais très vite. Je préférais les chemins ombreux sous les palmes, les jardins de Ouardi, les villages. Mais l'an passé je fis d'énormes promenades. Je n'avais d'autre but que de ne plus voir l'oasis. Je marchais, je marchais jusqu'à me sentir enfin immensément seul dans la plaine. Alors je commençais de regarder. Les sables avaient des veloutements dans l'ombre au versant de leurs monticules où des traces d'insectes restaient, des coloquintes se fanaient, des cicindèles couraient; il y avait des bruissements merveilleux dans chaque souffle, et, à cause du grand silence, le bruit le plus fin s'entendait. Parfois un aigle s'essorait du côté de la grande dune. Cette monotonie étendue me paraissait de jour en jour d'une variété plus précieuse.⁴⁸

Touggourt too means the desert for Gide, and strange music "qui ne se tait pas quand on la quitte" which haunts his memory as the desert itself.⁴⁹ Back in Biskra, Gide comes under the spell of Negro music—the exotic music of drums and rhythmic instruments without melody. His musical feeling and technical knowledge, as well as the musical qualities of his prose, enable the writer to evoke unforgettably these exciting rhythms and the primitive Negro rites to which he gains admittance. The Arabs' music and songs too fascinate the poet, so that he gets his young companion Athman to translate some of the words. Visual images stir his imagination no less, for on seeing Arabs resting with their caravans and then setting forth into the desert he feels the emotion that has filled the heart of countless romantics: "notre âme s'emplissait d'exaltation et de douleur, à ne connaître le but de leur interminable errance."⁵⁰

Four years after the journey described in Feuilles de route, Gide is ⁴⁵ Œuvres, II, 14.

⁴⁶ Ibid., II, 34.

⁴⁷ Ibid., II, 35.

⁴⁸ Ibid., II, 36.

⁴⁹ Ibid., II, 42.

⁵⁰ Ibid., II, 44.

again drawn to his beloved Algeria, and the significant experience of this trip finds artistic form in De Biskra à Touggourt. These pages, written for Gide's personal Journal but taken out for publication in L'Hermitage in 1904, ultimately constitute the third part of the Amyntas tetralogy. Here again the subject is Gide's sensibility in contact with the diverse sensations of the oasis and desert. The strange fascination that lies in the "mortel dénuement"⁵¹ and the monotony of the desert⁵² is treated again with Gide's evocative art, so that the reader comes under its spell. Despite his growing understanding of the Algerian scene, the artist is powerless to describe or state its qualities in precise terms, Gide believes, but these qualities exalt his spirit and offer him lessons of inestimable value to his art.⁵³

In the preface to Le Renoncement au voyage, Gide explains the composition of this final section of Amyntas.⁵⁴ "Obsédé par le désir de ce pays, qui, chaque année, s'exaltait en moi vers l'automne, et souhaitant enfin guérir—je projetai, pro remedio animæ meæ, d'écrire un livre sur l'Afrique." But his memories of the land lack the precision and immediacy that made their value, so that Gide returns for a "last" visit, "sous prétexte de préciser chaque particularité de saveur." He planned to treat the most serious economic, ethnographical, and geographical questions. Once he is back on African soil, however, he cannot fix his attention on such matters. As a result, the notes and impressions which he brings back to Normandy are once more lyrical expressions of his fervent love for the Algerian scene in all its fascinating profusion and diversity of sensations. He publishes these notes—which he compares to "ces sécrétions résineuses, qui ne consentent à livrer leur parfum qu'échauffées par la main qui les tient"—⁵⁵ with scarcely the change of a word, according to his own statement⁵⁶ (but Martin-Chauffier declares that the notes were completely re-written).⁵⁷ The title expresses the desire to break the spell of the enticing land which, after ten years, seemed to be binding the author to his past and limiting his power to realize the myriad untried possibilities of his nature. Thus it comes about that the publication of Le Renoncement au voyage in 1906, in the volume Amyntas, marks the conclusion of the period in which African exoticism is a principal element in Gide's writings.

The work forms a fitting end to this phase of the author's activity, for in it are evoked once again all the sensations which form the unique appeal of Northern Africa, all the poet's fervor and enthusiasm, all the sentiments aroused within his heart as he travels through the towns and oases and desert. The expression consists of lyrical apostrophes and impressionistic notations in simple but musical phrases, along with occasional longer descriptions and rare excited cries. "S'il pend encore à la branche une grenade, j'en ai soif!"⁵⁸

⁵¹ Œuvres, III, 279⁵² Ibid, III, 282⁵³ Ibid, III, 283-284.⁵⁴ Œuvres, IV, 241.⁵⁵ Ibid, IV, 339⁵⁶ Ibid, IV, 242. Cf. Journal, 1889-1939, p. 145.⁵⁷ Cf. Notes, in Œuvres, IV, x.

Throughout Le Renoncement au voyage there is a mingling or juxtaposition of emotions, for on one page Gide is completely under the spell of the exotic sensations which seem as new and exciting as on his first journey, while on the next page we may find a note of disenchantment. "Non, c'est chose inutile. On peut revoir vingt fois le même lieu—jamais plus avec nouveauté. . . l'étonnement ravissant n'y est plus."⁵⁹ Disturbing as these admissions are, with their reiteration of the sadness of one who has learned that "rien ne vaut le premier contact,"⁶⁰ they are counterbalanced by Gide's persistent delight in the innumerable sensations of the Algerian scene. Moreover, the literary expression of these sensations differs but little in intensity from the writings devoted to the poet's first contact with Africa.

More often than in previous writings, Gide here gives us notations on the life of the natives, though there is no attempt to make the work "documentary" in character. In such notations, moreover, the interest lies in the exotic qualities of the native life. Such qualities are closely linked to the land too, as when the tragic fatalism of the Arabs' religion is compared to "la désolation du désert."⁶¹

It is still the sensations of the land itself that attract Gide most—the scent of exotic flowers, the pungent smoke of kief, palm trees waving gently at evening, the infinitely varied effects of sunlight and shadow, the mysterious "chotts" with their mirages, the closed gardens which arouse an intense curiosity about what lies inside, the contrasts of the oases, the equivocal charm and almost hypnotic atmosphere of the native cafés, the streets of pleasure in Biskra with their strange mingling of all types and classes of people, and even the simple scene of a cow drinking water under the watchful eye of a child, which takes on unique interest in "le dénuement parfait d'alentour."⁶² Sometimes Gide expresses that profound mingling of his consciousness with the sensations of nature which recalls pages of Rousseau's Confessions or Rêveries, or he evokes in poetic prose notable alike for its artistry and its plenitude of emotional overtones the delight of an unforgettable night in Biskra:

Et quand j'en aurai dit le parfum, la blancheur, que retiendrai-je de cette nuit que j'aurais souhaité prolonger jusqu'à l'aube?—Une lune échancrée luisait au haut du ciel . . . Et, dans cette nocturne atmosphère, un peuple harmonieux circulait . . .⁶³

⁵⁸ Œuvres, iv, 250

⁵⁹ Ibid., iv, 277.

⁶⁰ Ibid., iv, 302

⁶¹ Ibid., iv, 325.

⁶² Ibid., iv, 268

⁶³ Ibid., iv, 317–319

Once again Gide sings of the desert, for he never tires of trying to express the appeal which lies not in any conventional picturesque beauty but rather in the curious blending of monotony and subtle variety and in the fascinating horror of its desolation. He invokes the "Apollon saharien . . . aux cheveux dorés, aux membres noirs, aux yeux de porcelaine,"⁶⁴ and explains that sensations are keener and the senses more responsive in these regions because "Le vide distendu du désert enseigne l'amour du détail."⁶⁵ An especially happy comparison links his love for the desert with his love for the Arab flute, whose music sings so often in his pages:

Petite flûte à quatre trous, par quoi l'ennui du désert se raconte, je te compare à ce pays, et reste à t'écouter t'ébruiter sans arrêt dans le soir Ah! de combien peu d'éléments est fait ici notre bruit et notre silence! le moindre changement y paraît —Eau, ciel, terre et palmiers. j'admire, instrument léger, quelle diversité subtile je goûte en ta monotonie, suivant qu'insiste en en précipitant le cours, ou que l'endort sous son souffle charmant l'enfant musicien aux doigts souples⁶⁶

And Gide adds a word characterizing the artistic goal of his own writings on Africa: "Je voudrais que, de page en page, évoquant quatre tons mouvants, les phrases que j'écris ici soient pour toi ce qu'était pour moi cette flûte, ce que fut pour moi le désert—de diverse monotonie."⁶⁷

Again and again in Le Renoncement au voyage Gide expresses the feeling that he is experiencing the delights of Algeria for the last time, that he must break the spell which keeps drawing him back. But something within his heart and his senses tells him that he cannot escape the fascination which the land holds for him, try as he will. Thus when the time for departure approaches he suddenly feels helpless against the spell that had drawn him thither: "Parfois et brusquement, telle miette de volupté réveille un arrière-goût si secret que pour m'arracher d'ici je me sens aussitôt sans courage."⁶⁸

Finally, of course, he does tear himself away, but six months later, enjoying the warm August sunshine in Normandy, he finds that something is lacking for his "cœur exigeant, cœur inlassable," and he cries: "Par ces chaudes journées je songe à l'essor des nomades. . . ."⁶⁹ Again on the last page of the book, in the passage cited in part in the second paragraph of this essay, we find Gide powerless to renounce the exotic African land that had held him enthralled so long. Thus the south, which had been struggling against the north for domination of Gide's nature, would seem to have won final victory. Perhaps the victory was a Pyrrhic one, however, since if Africa continued to draw Gide back for many journeys and even attracted him at last to the equatorial forest, it began to play only a slight rôle in his writings after the publication of Amyntas. Gide turned away from the lyrical contemplation of his own sensibility in contact with exotic nature toward the more positive moral, aesthetic, social, and political problems with which his writings since 1906—even Le Voyage au Congo and Le Retour du Tchad—have been chiefly concerned.

⁶⁴ Ibid, iv, 320⁶⁵ Ibid, iv, 330⁶⁶ Ibid, iv, 322.⁶⁷ Ibid, iv, 322⁶⁸ Ibid, iv, 330⁶⁹ Ibid, iv 339.

After this consideration of Gide's principal writings in which Northern Africa plays a leading rôle, it should be easier to grasp the peculiar nature, the originality, and the literary value of his exoticism. Gide goes far beyond his predecessors in this realm, though it is scarcely accurate to say, with Hytier, that the result is to "eliminate" exoticism altogether by his whole-hearted adherence to the new and the strange. He expresses, as earlier exotic writers had done, such things as the "thème du départ," the "nostalgie des pays chauds," and a passionate interest in the strange and diverse. But he penetrates the exotic spirit much more ardently, with much deeper sympathy and comprehension than the Romanticists or the Parnassians had done, and with much more regard for the object than had been shown by the Symbolists. The result is that his African exoticism is characteristically not conventional, fanciful, or banal local color; not impassive documentation on topography, psychology, and mœurs, and not mere emotional effusions of a subjective nature. At its highest level it is rather the rapt musing of a poet whose total faculties are in close communion with the living reality of a strange, infinitely appealing land and people.

Gide's experience of this reality is expressed in lyrical form in most of the writings we have considered, but in one of them it is embodied in the structure and texture of a work of creative fiction. One has only to think of the impoverishment of modern literature which would result from the destruction of these four volumes to realize how much Northern Africa has contributed to Gide's accomplishment. Actually, of course, the land has contributed much more than these writings, in a less direct way, for it is to his first contact with the plenitude and variety of sensations in Algeria and to the experience of his convalescence in the oasis and desert that Gide owes his "discovery" of nature and of himself. Thus in a larger sense all of Gide's works have been influenced by Africa, and so a full understanding of his African exoticism in all its implications is almost equivalent to a complete understanding of Gide the man and the writer in all his diversity and complexity, since this element corresponds to what is perhaps most basic in his nature and its literary expression reveals all of his admirable qualities as an artist.

CARLOS LYNES, JR.

New York, N. Y.

SAMUEL BUTLER'S RISE TO FAME

SAMUEL BUTLER, the author of The Way of All Flesh, consoled himself during his life for his poor success as a writer with the thought that some day he would come into his own.¹ In order to make certain that his books might be read, he annotated and explained his leading ideas carefully and cleared the way for his future readers.² The course of events has shown that he was quite right in expecting his work to interest later generations. He has actually received almost as much attention from critics, students of literature, and readers as the most famous of his contemporaries. At the present time his position among the important writers of Victorian England is assured. What caused this growth of his reputation? Starting at the time of Butler's death, this article will summarize the critical comment on his work up to the point of his greatest popularity in order to supply the material necessary to an explanation of his rise to fame.

I During Butler's life almost the only published notice he ever received was that of the professional reviewers who commented on most of his books as they came out and condemned nearly all of them. Only one book—Erewhon—had been successful, and he had had to pay for the publication of all his books except Erewhon and its sequel, Erewhon Revisited. These facts indicate sufficiently the extent of his lack of success. Apart from professional reviewers' notices there were a short account of his works and life in Harry Quilter's What's What?,³ in which Butler was included because he had contributed to Quilter's Magazine (the Universal Review) and an enthusiastic reference to his biological theories at the conclusion of an article by Marcus Hartog called "Fundamental Principles of Heredity."⁴ This reference is important because it is one of the first expressions of praise for Butler outside of a review, and because it fastens on the aspect of his work which played a leading part in his subsequent rise to fame—his biological philosophy. Hartog was the first to say that Butler's theory of inherited memory was "perhaps the most satisfactory explanation" yet offered of the functioning of heredity.

The obituaries which appeared at the time of Butler's death furnish a good picture of the opinion his contemporaries held of him. With this picture, if we have its chief features in mind, we can later compare the pictures drawn by subsequent generations. Some of the chief differences in estimation will, of course, be due to the fact that later critics had The Note-Books and The Way of All Flesh as well as Butler's other works before them, whereas the earlier writers did not know these important volumes,⁵ but this fact will not entirely account for the wide discrepancy between the earlier and the later estimates of his value.

¹ The Note-Books of Samuel Butler, p. 6. All references to Butler's works in this paper are to the Shrewsbury Edition (London: Jonathan Cape, 1923-25).

² Ibid., pp. 370 ff. ³ (London, 1902), pp. 308-311.

⁴ Natural Science, xi, nos. 68, 69 (October, November 1897), 233-239, 305-316.

The obituaries were neither unkind nor inconsiderate, but they were many degrees below enthusiastic warmth. *The London Times*⁶ gave special attention to Butler's weaknesses which had kept him, in spite of his intelligence and native gifts, from being really important: his quarrelsome spirit and his inability to specialize. It expressed the belief that he would be remembered chiefly as a satirist and as the author of Erewhon and voiced its disappointment over the inadequacy of the rest of his work. A few days after this article had appeared, Canon Joseph M'Cormick, who had known Butler during his college years at Cambridge and had followed the course of his life, wrote a letter to *The Times*⁷ giving a different account of Butler by describing his kindness and honesty and saying that he was a better man than the doctrines he professed. But this writer also found him something of an eccentric, too lonely and too self-willed. The Athenaeum's⁸ obituary was written by Vernon Rendall,⁹ editor of the magazine, who had known Butler well during the last years of his life; it is more complete and sympathetic than The Times' account. Even here, though, is no hint that Butler possessed outstanding qualities. The emphasis, as in the letter to The Times, is on the beauty of his character rather than on the importance of his work. "We who knew him," Rendall concludes, "shall not see his like again, and shall not soon forget him." This is a good illustration of Butler's thesis that perfection of character—unconscious perfection—is the best kind of perfection,¹⁰ for it was perfection of this kind which was first noticed in him and kept the thread of interest going until the importance of his work grew clear. An article by another friend of Butler's, R. A. Streatfeild, in The Monthly Review,¹¹ added to the tradition of praise for Butler as a man by describing his daring and originality and emphasizing the kindness of his nature which made him so different from Swift, with whom he had sometimes been compared.

⁵ The Way of All Flesh was published in 1903 and The Note-Books of Samuel Butler appeared in various numbers of the New Quarterly Review from 1907 until 1910. It appeared in book form in 1912.

⁶ (June 20, 1902), 5, Col. 6.

⁷ (June 27, 1902), 10, Col. 1.

⁸ (June 28, 1902), 819-820.

⁹ See Henry Festing Jones, Samuel Butler, Author of Erewhon (London: Macmillan, 1920), I, xxv.

¹⁰ For this see Life and Habit and The Note-Books of Samuel Butler.

¹¹ VIII, no. 24 (1902), 137-147.

In 1902 even Butler's most enthusiastic admirers would not have dared to prophesy a fame for him of anything like the proportion which he later achieved.

II Those who think of The Way of All Flesh as having started Butler on the road to fame will be surprised to find that when it was published in 1903 almost none of the journals noticed its appearance. The only important magazine to comment on it at any length was The Athenaeum,¹² and this magazine, in spite of its editor's friendliness for Butler, was sharp in its criticism. The formlessness of the novel annoyed the reviewer and led him to treat it casually and with no enthusiasm. The Way of All Flesh is a good example of a book which won its way because readers liked it and because several important authors discovered its value, rather than through any praise from reviews. The Times Literary Supplement did not get around to reviewing it until 1919,¹³ long after it was widely known, and then the reviewer wrote that it had been too original and too much outside the usual categories of the novel to have been understood in 1903.

From 1903 on, however, the rising tide of Butler's popularity began to make itself visible, even if it did not come to full force until just before the war. Paul Meissner makes the generalization that the enthusiasm for Butler began when the reaction against Victorianism was in full swing,¹⁴ but that is not strictly correct. His earliest admirers did not praise his iconoclasm; rather, they felt that he was a discoverer of real and effective truths. Thus Arnold Bennett, when he began to read The Way of All Flesh in 1904, thought that it contained "a vast amount of naked truth" in spite of its weak construction and tendency to moralize. He also admired the effectiveness of the satire and the occasional "sudden sharp effect of pathos."¹⁵ In 1913 he noted that the novel was probably even better than he thought it to be and that there was "very little wrong with the book, even technically."¹⁶

Butler's friends played a distinct part in bringing him before the public eye. But it is a mistake to look upon their work as advertisement or as the conscious creating of a fad.¹⁷ Competent critics like Arnold Bennett, Desmond MacCarthy, Clutton-Brock, and all the rest would not have been won by such tactics. R. A. Streatfeild, Butler's literary executor, had a little volume privately printed in which he gathered together the obituary notices that had appeared,¹⁸ and Henry Festing Jones con-

¹² (May 30, 1903), 683 ¹³ (June 26, 1919), 347

¹⁴ Samuel Butler der Jungere (Leipzig, 1913), p. 174

¹⁵ The Journals of Arnold Bennett (London, 1933), I, 192-193

¹⁶ Idem, II, 76

¹⁷ This is the view taken by Malcolm Muggeridge, Study of Samuel Butler, the Earnest Atheist (London, 1936)

¹⁸ Samuel Butler Records and Memorials (Cambridge, 1903).

tributed a sketch of Butler's life to The Eagle,¹⁹ the magazine of Butler's college at Cambridge. Then Streatfeild followed the publication of The Way of All Flesh by issuing a volume of Butler's essays called Essays on Life, Art and Science.²⁰ This book, like the novel, was almost completely neglected. It was briefly but rather enthusiastically reviewed by only one of the leading reviews.²¹

An article by Desmond MacCarthy in *The Independent Review*²² is the first long discussion of Butler which considers his work as a whole and suggests that everything he did illustrated an important philosophy of life. It is a pioneer in the sort of estimate of him that became increasingly popular as the years went on and has won general acceptance from many competent critics in the last two decades. "Butler," MacCarthy said, "was a frank and consistent hedonist." He emphasized Butler's pragmatic attitude toward truth, and described his heroic waging of war against all artificiality and pretense in any of the fields in which he worked. He insisted that Butler was much more than a clever humorist and satirist. His work, he said, possessed important philosophic, literary, and critical value.

Another important factor in the early growth of Butler's fame, more important indeed than any article or review, was the use George Bernard Shaw made of his leading ideas in Man and Superman, published in 1904. Shaw, like the editor of The Athenaeum, had known and admired Butler during the last years of his life. He had been much impressed by Butler's criticism of Darwinism, and many of Butler's ideas on the subject of evolution became his own.²³ In Man and Superman he made no mention of Butler, but later, when critics began to speculate concerning the origin of Shaw's ideas and to trace them to various foreign sources, he stated his indebtedness quite clearly. This was in the preface to Major Barbara in 1907, and this enthusiastic reference to Butler, calling him "in his own department the greatest English writer of the latter half of the XIX century,"²⁴ has rightly been credited with doing more than any other single thing to increase Butler's popularity.

In 1907 Streatfeild began to publish extracts from Butler's Note-Books in The New Quarterly Review and to reissue some of his books. Then, in 1908, Marcus Hartog (the biologist who had praised Butler's ¹⁹ (December 1902). ²⁰ (London, 1904).

²¹ The Athenaeum (July 9, 1904), 46-47.

²² "The Author of Erewhon," III (September 1904), 527-538.

²³ For Shaw's own statement about this see "Mr. Gilbert Cannan on Samuel Butler," The New Statesman, v (May 8, 1915), 109-110.

²⁴ "First Aid to Critics," John Bull's Other Island and Major Barbara (New York, 1926), p. 172.

work in 1897) and Festing Jones instituted the Erehon Dinners. The number of well-known men who attended to do Butler honor proves that his reputation had already risen far above its position at the time of his death. These dinners were held every year, rising from an initial attendance of about 32 to 160 in 1914. Some of the better-known critics and writers who addressed the meetings were George Bernard Shaw, Johnston Forbes Robertson, Augustine Birrell, Edmund Gosse, Gilbert Cannan, and Desmond MacCarthy.²⁵ The dinners extended, of course, right into the heyday of Butler's popularity in England, and the growth in their attendance is symptomatic of the growth of that popularity.

According to the publisher of Butler's books, one of the very important agents in turning larger numbers of readers to Butler at this time was a full-length discussion in The Times Literary Supplement in 1908.²⁶ The article was written by Clutton-Brock,²⁷ and it was full of praise for Butler's "incessantly alive and stimulating mind," for his positive and constructive ideas, and for his incorrigible honesty. Clutton-Brock admitted that Butler's books were lacking in the finest literary qualities, but he looked beyond their outer form and found great riches within. For him Butler's ability to surprise and puzzle his readers was a sign of his unusual originality.

III Even with the opinions expressed by the first enthusiastic readers of Butler before us, it is no easy matter to determine the precise reason for his popularity in England just before the war. Several critics have maintained that his hatred of the famous Victorians and his rebellion against his own age won an audience for him among a generation that itself rebelled against its parents. But the comments which we possess from those years do not show this to have been the case. Their evidence, on the contrary, is that Butler was admired because he satisfied the need which people felt for a less mechanistic and intellectually determined view of life than that of the Victorian era. Accepting a writer's constructive philosophy of life because of the truth it contains is not at all the same thing as admiring him for his iconoclasm.

Most of the discussions of Butler written during the second decade of the present century stress this philosophic aspect of his work. His suggestions regarding biology and the theory of evolution received widespread attention. A good many writers followed in the path which Mar-

²⁵ These facts about the Erehon dinners are taken from Henry Festing Jones, op cit, II, 418-429.

²⁶ A. C. Fifield, "Samuel Butler and Clutton-Brock," The Times Literary Supplement (January 17, 1924).

²⁷ "Samuel Butler," The Times Literary Supplement, Seventh Year, no. 352 (October 9, 1908).

cus Hartog had laid down. A French writer, in drawing a distinction between Lamarck and Darwin, pointed out that Lamarck's views were teleological and Darwin's mechanical and acknowledged his indebtedness to Butler's work for this distinction.²⁸ Emanuel Rádl included an account of Butler's theories in his Geschichte der Biologischen Theorien.²⁹ W. Bateson, in a volume of essays published in commemoration of the centenary of Darwin's birth,³⁰ called Butler "the most brilliant, and by far the most interesting of Darwin's opponents . . . whose works are at length emerging from oblivion."³¹ He said that the result of investigations since Darwin's time had been to give "irrefragable proof that much definiteness exists in living things apart from Selection,"³² i.e., that the principle of Natural Selection is not the comprehensive factor it was once thought to be, and this is just the view that Butler had argued for so vigorously. Marcus Hartog again expressed his belief that Butler's biological theories were important in an article explaining them and relating them to the theories of the early twentieth century.³³ He discussed the similarity between Butler's views and those of several more recent writers—Richard Semon, Eugenio Rignano, Frederick W. Hutton, and Hans Driesch. In another article³⁴ he continued the discussion and called Butler "perhaps the most versatile genius of the Victorian age."³⁵

A later study of these same matters, again showing how Butler's ideas fitted into an important phase of speculation in the first part of this century, can be found in E. S. Russell's historical account of the science of morphology called Form and Function, published in 1916.³⁶ Russell devoted an entire chapter to "Samuel Butler and the Memory Theories of Heredity" because he felt that the future development of biological thought might "follow some such lines as those which he tentatively laid down."³⁷ He compared Butler with some of the more recent biologists who have worked out theories like his and expressed his belief that, because of his thorough-going Lamarckianism and his panpsychic view of the world, Butler was nearer the truth than later scientists. He called him "one of the most fascinating figures of the 19th century" whose ideas about biological problems were "singularly illuminating."³⁸

²⁸ Felix Le Dantec, "Lamarck et Darwin, les Deux Tendances Biologiques," Revue Scientifique (February 6, 1909) ²⁹ (Leipzig, 1909), II, 449-452

³⁰ "Heredity and Variation in Modern Lights," Darwin and Modern Science (Cambridge, 1910), pp. 86-100 ³¹ Ibid., p. 88 ³² Ibid., p. 100

³³ "The Biological Writings of Samuel Butler and their Relation to Contemporary and Subsequent Biological Thought," Scientific Progress in the Twentieth Century, v (1910), 15-37.

³⁴ "Samuel Butler and Recent Mnemic Biological Theories," Scientia, xv, no. 33 (1914), 38-52 ³⁵ Ibid., p. 38 ³⁶ London, 1916. ³⁷ Ibid., p. 341

³⁸ Ibid., p. 335.

But after a period of speculation along lines which Butler had explored, biology moved away from him and reasserted its allegiance to a narrower scientific outlook. In 1923 Vernon Lee, in introducing Semon's Mnemonic Psychology to English readers, contrasted Butler's views unfavorably with the more scientific views of Semon. She wrote that.

Happening to be a naturalist instead of a fantastic novelist turned amateur evolutionist, Semon naturally never set up heredity as an unconscious racial memory, still less could he dream of the mythological developments which came natural to the author of Erewhon ³⁹

This criticism brings up an interesting point. It is possible that Semon and other biologists were wrong in discarding Butler's "mythological developments" and his "unconscious racial memory." Their work has not, in recent years, kept pace with modern psychology which—under a different influence and taking its suggestions from Kant, Schopenhauer, and Nietzsche—has achieved remarkable results by using concepts very much like Butler's.

In a few cases, however, Butler's influence went further than it did in those just considered. In 1914, when Henri Bergson was visiting in England, A. D. Darbishire, a young biologist who had read Life and Habit with real enthusiasm,⁴⁰ introduced him to Butler's work. Recently Bergson insisted that he had not studied Butler's ideas carefully until late in his life, long after his own views had taken definite shape, and that he was aware of no influence of Butler on him because their views had very little in common,⁴¹ but it is at least possible that through his discussions with Darbishire he learned more from Butler than he realized. Darbishire himself adopted many ideas from Butler and gave clear expression to them in his posthumous book An Introduction to Biology and other Papers.⁴² Like Butler, he felt that biology must study the processes of the living organism and must study them where it knows them best—in man himself. In a recent Terry Lecture, Herbert Spencer Jennings, a leading biologist of our own day, made the same point,⁴³ as also does Alexis Carrel in Man, the Unknown,⁴⁴ it is becoming commoner among scientists, and this subtle change in outlook may have untraceable connections with Samuel Butler.

³⁹ Richard Semon, Mnemonic Psychology, with an Introduction by Vernon Lee (New York, 1923), p. 12.

⁴⁰ A. D. Darbishire, Review of Life and Habit, The English Review, VII (March 1911), 748-749.

⁴¹ Floris Delattre, "Samuel Butler et le Bergsonisme," Revue Anglo-Américaine, XIII (1936), pp. 385-405.

⁴² New York, 1917.

⁴³ The Universe and Life (New Haven, 1933), pp. 1-17.

⁴⁴ New York, 1935.

Like Butler, Darbishire was a Lamarckian and a vitalist, also, like Butler, he was skeptical of ordinary science. In his later writings he adopted and applied Bergson's theory of intelligence and combined it in an interesting way with Butler's suggestion that living organisms were made in much the same fashion as we now make machines. But, like other biologists, Darbishire made no use of Butler's theory of unconscious memory, and thus even here Butler's influence in biology, although very important, remained fragmentary.

IV Butler's influence on a few biologists and on some aspects of biological thought does a good deal, perhaps more than anything else, to account for his rise to fame. But there were other important reasons for his growing reputation. Some critics had begun to feel that his work, taken as a whole, suggested a fresh and important philosophy of life which they could welcome. Robert F. Rattray wrote an article in *Mind*⁴⁵ in which he developed the philosophic implications of Butler's unconscious memory theory and sought to defend them. He was one of the first to discuss the relationship between Butler's biological theories and his other ideas. William Barry, writing in the Dublin Review,⁴⁶ maintained that Butler's philosophy was important and effective because of its basis in fact, Butler sought to explain the phenomena he observed instead of ignoring them as his contemporaries had done. This writer saw Butler primarily as a man who rose above a materialistic outlook in a materialistic age. He summarized his achievements by saying that he had shown the inadequacy of Darwinism and that he first directed attention to "the mysteries of habit, the depths of memory, the exact significance and bearing on action of 'the unconscious'."⁴⁷ By this time Butler had become so generally known that a thesis was written in German in an attempt to trace the outlines of his philosophy.⁴⁸ The writer of the thesis emphasized the strong optimism of Butler's Lebensanschauung which grew out of his having squarely faced a deep and pessimistic skepticism and come off the victor.

From 1910 on the number of discussions which took Butler seriously as a philosopher and studied and criticized his views grew year by year. Some of these studies praised him and some differed with him, but all found what he had to say both important and interesting. Jean Florence Blum wrote the first general discussion to appear in France.⁴⁹ He acclaimed Butler as a great humanist who had a wide knowledge of all the sciences and arts and compared him with Goethe, saying that his work

⁴⁵ "The Philosophy of Samuel Butler," Mind, N. S. xxiii (1914), 371-385.

⁴⁶ "Samuel Butler of Erewton," Dublin Review, clv (1914), 322-344.

⁴⁷ Ibid., 344.

⁴⁸ Gerold Pestalozzi, Samuel Butler der Jüngere, Versuch einer Darstellung seiner Gedankenwelt (Zurich, 1914). My discussion is based on the summary in Meissner, op. cit., p. 180.

⁴⁹ "Samuel Butler," Mercur de France, lxxxvi (1910), 267-281.

made a more definite contribution to knowledge than anything of the German poet's W. H. Salter, in his Essays on two Moderns,⁵⁰ also emphasized Butler's philosophic universality. May Sinclair in her *A Defence of Idealism*⁵¹ devoted a long opening chapter to a criticism of Butler's "pan-psychism" in which, although contending that his philosophy placed a ruinous emphasis upon the value of unconsciousness and attacking his notion of the self, she nevertheless took his ideas very seriously.

These discussions and many more like them show that Butler was highly valued for his clear-sighted outlook. Beginning with his critique of Darwinism and going on to his attack on materialism and his consequent assertion of various spiritual values, his readers were finding more and more material in his works for a picture of life which agreed with what they themselves felt to be true. His very sincere and unpretentious idealism, his refusal to hide behind words and phrases, and his insistence on getting everything clearly and simply stated while at the same time doing more justice to the imaginative implications of the facts of reality than most scientists will do, all these things struck their fancy. Butler had become something of a hero.

The appearance of The Note-Books of Samuel Butler in book form in 1912 touched off a round of applause. The London Times Literary Supplement,⁵² which had ignored The Way of All Flesh in 1903, gave this book a front page review, sketching Butler's character in glowing terms of praise, calling him "a born writer" and explaining his ready wit and his way of twisting his ideas into peculiar shapes by comparing him with a medieval church builder who, because his faith in his work was complete, could adorn a beautiful cathedral with gargoyles without fear of harm. *The Athenaeum*⁵³ said that Butler had at last achieved the immortality for which he longed and blamed the reading public for having ignored him for so many years. *Current Opinion*⁵⁴ compared him as a moral teacher to the Platonic Socrates, and *The Edinburgh Review*⁵⁵ said that The Note-Books defied analysis because of their perfection. *The Bookman*⁵⁶ took the occasion to refer to Butler's other work, calling The Way of All Flesh "a masterly study of modern life" and listing Erewhon and Life and Habit as the other two books of Butler's that would not be forgotten. *The International Journal of Ethics*⁵⁷ praised Butler's style of writing, saying that "never since the eighteenth century was there such consummate ease and simplicity, such point, such nervous energy." Butler's ideas, this journal felt, made a real contribution to ethics and

⁵⁰ London, 1911 ⁵¹ London, 1917 ⁵² No. 569 (December 5, 1912)

⁵³ (November 23, 1912), p. 617. ⁵⁴ LIV (March 1913), pp. 222-223

⁵⁵ (January 1913), 192-196 ⁵⁶ XLIII (March 1913), 326-327.

⁵⁷ XLIII (July 1913), 497-499.

fitted the present age better than "the cruder enthusiasms of Ruskin or Carlyle" Butler was called the father of Pragmatism, and the review concluded by saying that "as a literary figure he represents all that is best and soundest in modern tendencies, and at the same time leads a revolt against our prevailing vices of flabbiness, pretentiousness, and hypocrisy"

V. There were, naturally enough, some dissenting voices among the chorus of praise which greeted *The Note-Books*⁵⁸ But compared with any reception that a book by Butler had had in the past, this was a triumph Another solid evidence of Butler's success is the fact that by 1912 most of the important English encyclopedias had included him among the men they discussed In 1906 Chambers Cyclopaedia of English Literature gave a brief sketch of his life, listed his works and said that he was noteworthy for his "prejudices" and his "anticonventional audacity" The eleventh edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica contained an article on him, as did the second supplement of the Dictionary of National Biography

Although it had not been much discussed, The Way of All Flesh had a marked influence on several English novelists during these years, and a good many books described situations like the one it described and used its technique⁵⁹ Butler was in part responsible for the vogue of the genealogical novel at the beginning of the century⁶⁰ Some critics began to feel that in spite of the philosophic interest of his work, he was most important as a literary artist Thus Orlo Williams, in his little book on the essay published in 1915, discussed him as an important English essayist and said that everything he did was motivated by the sort of love for life which the true essayist possesses⁶¹ The same writer spoke of The Way of All Flesh with enthusiasm in his Modern English Writers, declaring that it showed powers of psychological analysis of the highest order and that it "stands with the greatest English novels of the last century"⁶²

Two book-length critical studies of Butler appeared during the war, one by the novelist Gilbert Cannan⁶³ and the other by John Harris.⁶⁴ Cannan's book has sometimes been called the high-water mark of Butler worship and the culmination of the admiration for him which had been growing since his death. But, as George Bernard Shaw pointed out

⁵⁸ See, for instance, The Dial, LV (October 16, 1913), 293-295 and The Contemporary Review, CIII (June 1913), 892-894

⁵⁹ For a list of the novelists especially affected see Ernest A. Baker, The History of the English Novel, X, Yesterday (London, 1939), p. 247

⁶⁰ A. E. Zucker, "The Genealogical Novel, a New Genre," PMLA, XLIII (1928), 551-560.

⁶¹ The Essay (London, 1915), pp. 17-18

⁶² Modern English Writers (London, 1918), p. 321 In the "Preface to the First Edition" Williams says that the book was written before the war

⁶³ Samuel Butler, a Critical Study (London, 1915) ⁶⁴ Samuel Butler (London, 1916)

in his review of it,⁶⁵ in spite of its praise, it actually makes Butler seem smaller than he was because it ignores his clear-cut philosophic convictions and the part they played in his life and in his rise to fame. It is evidence of a change in the way some people felt about Butler, and one of the first clear signs of his being liked for what Paul Elmer More called his "impishness."⁶⁶ The study by John Harris is truer to the impression Butler had made on the majority of his critics since his death. It is thoughtful and objective and seeks to draw a picture which will take the various aspects of his work into account and fit them together into a pattern. A warm current of admiration can be felt flowing through the book, but there is little evidence of blind hero worship.

By this time Butler's importance was so generally recognized that The Cambridge History of English Literature discussed his work at length.⁶⁷ W. T. Young, who wrote the section on Butler, sided with those who admired him more for his minor good things than for any of his larger undertakings, expressing a preference for Alps and Sanctuaries and deciding that Butler was very good but of secondary importance. He had not "the highest gifts of poetry or emotion," but he was certainly much more than an "undiscriminating wit." He had "a constructive intention, not mockery, but the liberation of the spirit."⁶⁸

Butler was discussed in America a few years later than in England, but those who discussed him there reacted to his work in much the same way as his English critics had. In 1916 Clara Gruening Stillman, his later biographer, wrote an article on his literary and scientific work.⁶⁹ She called him "one of the most original and creative minds of his time" and analyzed his ideas with considerable penetration. Horace Bridges read a paper on Butler before the Chicago Literary Club praising him as a satirist and as a defender of the right of the layman to criticize the man of science.⁷⁰ An article appeared in The North American Review on Butler's idea of God.⁷¹ Other critics and reviewers praised Butler's novel, his sincerity and honesty, and his work in setting men free from the bondage of the past. Louis W. Flaccus, lecturing at the University of Pennsylvania in 1918, subjected Butler's ideas to a careful logical analysis and found them full of interest but not ultimately adequate as a defensible view of the world.⁷²

⁶⁵ See note 23 above. ⁶⁶ Shelburne Essays, Eleventh Series (Boston, 1921), pp. 167-191.

⁶⁷ (Cambridge, 1916), xiii, 499-505. ⁶⁸ Ibid., 505.

⁶⁹ "The Literary and Scientific Work of Samuel Butler," North American, ccrv (August 1916), 270-281.

⁷⁰ "Samuel Butler, the Master Satirist," As I was Saying (Boston, 1923), 52-85.

⁷¹ Felix Grendon, "Samuel Butler's God," ccviii (August 1918), 277-286.

⁷² "Samuel Butler," University of Pennsylvania Lectures 1918-1919 (Philadelphia, 1919), vi, 133-154.

By 1920 Butler had achieved a more extensive fame than anyone could have foreseen at the time of his death. Besides being known in England and America, his works had been discussed in France and Germany and soon most of his books were translated into the languages of those countries and some of them into other continental tongues as well. After 1920 his popularity fell off somewhat from its most enthusiastic peak. The later studies and discussions of his work served chiefly to paint in fuller and more careful detail the picture already present in generous outline. It was some time, however, before many blemishes were found, and only much later did critics begin to tear down what had been completed in order to put a less pleasing portrait in its place.

LEE ELBERT HOLT

Union College

ANALYSIS OF A SOUND GROUP: sl AND tl IN NORWEGIAN

1. THE LITERATURE AND THE PROBLEM

IT has long been known that the distinction between sl and tl, which existed in Old Norse, has been lost in the modern dialects of Norway. In his Norsk Grammatik of 1864 Ivar Aasen wrote:

these sounds generally become one, and are rarely distinguished with any precision. In southeastern Norway [søndenfjelds] sl only is heard, thus esle instead of ella, lisle for lile, Fesling for Felling. In western Norway [vestenfjelds] tl only is usually heard, thus hall for hasl, kvil for kvisl, reilla for reidsla. In northern Norway [nordenfjelds] they coalesce into a special sound, which resembles ltl, ltj, or lsch, but which cannot be otherwise designated with the usual letters.¹

The precision of phonetic formulation which Aasen lacked was supplied by Johan Storm in 1884. The sound loosely described by Aasen as lll etc., was determined as a voiceless l, usually palatalized, and written hʎ.² Storm also pointed out the presence of an area in southeastern Norway where sl and tl became ʃl, a development similar to that which produced German schl- in schlagen.³ Later dialect investigators have further added to our knowledge of this phenomenon, and historians of the language have thrown light on its origin.⁴

But no one has attempted to gather all the available information and present it in systematic form. We still lack all but the most rudimentary attempts at a mapping of the phenomena of Norwegian dialects. Any information on a specific sound or sound change must be dug out from a multitude of monographs dealing with specific dialects. In this study the writer wishes to supply the deficiency for the sound group in question. At the same time he wishes to analyze the development and distribution of the group, and to relate it as closely as possible to its lexical, morphological, phonetic, and phonological background. By drawing in all of these attendant circumstances, it may be possible to reach a fuller conception of the complexity of this linguistic phenomenon than was permitted by the "sound law" formulation of a previous generation.

That linguistic facts are never simple is one of the first discoveries of the maker of dialect maps. The only wholly accurate map would be one that showed the distribution of varieties of a single word, but thousands

¹ Pp. 30-31

² Norvegia, p. 119

³ Ibid., p. 104

⁴ See especially the various monographs of Amund B. Larsen on Norwegian dialects, Hægstad, Vestnorske Måalføre, and Seip, Norsk Språkhistorie.

of such maps would be needed to give any sort of comprehensive picture of the dialects. In practice it is necessary to simplify by grouping words of similar development together, even though it is impossible to predict that any two words will follow the same pattern throughout a group of dialects. In Old Norse sl occurred both initially and medially, while tl occurred only medially. Hence at least two maps are necessary, one for sl in initial position, and one for -sl- and -tl- in medial position, though more would be desirable for certain exceptional words and word forms.⁵

2 SL IN PREVOCALIC POSITION

Initially the cluster sl existed in a considerable number of words from Germanic times. Its functional opposition to st, sm, sn, etc., and to kl, pl, fl, etc., as well as its conspicuous position in the word helped to keep it relatively stable. The s was liable to two changes: (1) assimilation with the l into a voiceless l (ʃ), (2) change to some variety of ʃ. The accompanying map (No. 1) will show the geographical distribution of these changes.⁶

⁵ In addition to the printed dialect monographs, the writer has used the unprinted material in the possession of Rektor dr. Didrik Arup Seip, consisting of theses written by students at the University of Oslo, and the notebooks of Johan Storm, preserved at Universitetsbiblioteket, Oslo. The writer is grateful to Rektor Seip for permission to use the former, and to Stipendiat Olaf Skulerud for assistance with the latter.

⁶ The information on the first two maps was drawn from the following sources: Ross, Norske Bygdemaal, passim; Larsen, Oversigt, Hægstad, Vestnorske Maafløve, Storm, Norsk Lydskrift, Aasen, Norsk Ordbog, Ross, Norsk Ordbog, Torp, Nyn Elym Ordb (Storm's notebooks are cited in the following simply as Storm with the numbers and pages following, see Skulerud in Larsen Festskrift); AKERSHUS Bærum Storm A VIII, Storm & Skulerud, Festskr. Amund Larsen, Nesodden Storm F XIII, Hakadal Storm A VIII, Ullensaker Kolsrud Falk Festskr. 442, Romerike Kolsrud Romeriksmålet, Ås Storm F XIII, Østre Aker, Sørkedal, Asker Storm & Skulerud, Festskr. Amund Larsen. AUST-AGDER Setisdalen Storm, Ordlister, 87, Fjære Mathias Moy, unprinted Hovedopgave 1937, Vegårshei Sigvald Holen, unprinted Hovedopgave. BERGEN Larsen & Stoltz, Bergens Bymål (1912), 90. BUSKERUD Drammen, Røyken, Lier, Hurum, Eiker Storm & Skulerud, Amund Larsen Festskr., Flesberg Tov Flatin, Flesberg-Målet 1923, Gol Storm C VI, D XII, Hemsedal, Hol Storm B VI, C II, Nes Storm C VI, Norderhov Skulerud ANVA 1926, p. 35. Nore, Rollag, Uvdal Storm C II, D XI, Ringerike (Ådal) Skulerud Festskr. Hjalmar Falk, 402, Rollag Bjørset 1902, 7, Ål, Torpo Storm C II, B VI. HEDMARK Alvda Storm A VI, Solør Amund Larsen, VSS 1894 No. 4, pp. 102-103 & Storm F XIV & XV, Eidskogen Storm C V, Elverum Storm A VI, B V, and Johan Hogstad, Elvromsmålets Grammatikk (1906); Engerdalen og Drevsjø Storm A VI, Løten Storm A VIII, Storelvdal Storm A VI, Trysil Paul Gardåsen, Hovedopgave (unprinted) & Storm A VI, Tynnsset Storm Ordlister, Jørgen Reitan Tynnssetmålet (1926); Tyldal Storm C V, Vang Storm A VIII; Rendalen Storm A VI, B I, C I and Ordlister, Åmot Storm A VI, Åsnes Finnskog Norvegia II, 25. HORDALAND Hardanger Storm A IX, B IXa, Chr. Vidsteen, Oplysninger (1885), Røldal Storm C I; Voss Leiv Heggstad, Vosse-målet (1932), Storm A X, B IXa, Chr. Vidsteen Oplysninger (1884), 15, Sunnhordland Chr. Vidsteen, Ordbog (1900),

The cluster is retained unchanged in most of western Norway, along the southern coast, in the Midland valleys, and in certain communities of Nordland (Salten, Gimsøy)

Oplysninger (1882) Møre og Romsdal Aure Storm B VIII (by Am Larsen) also Ross NB 1908, 65, Kristiansund Ivar Hoel (Maal og Minne 1915), Kvernes Trygve Kjøl, Hovedoppgave (unprinted), 1931, Rindalen Eilert Mo, Tonelagstilhøve (1923), Todalen Eilert Moe, Todalsmålet (1922), 8, Sundalen Storm C VI, F XIX, Sande Storm C VI, Sunelven Storm C VI, Surendalen Storm C VI, Tresfjorden Hans Rypdal Romsdalsmål (1929), Volda & Ørsta Ivar Aasen, Søndmørske Grammatik (1851) NORD-TRØNDELAG Indre Namdalen (Grong) Storm C I, Høilandet Storm B VIII (by Amund B Larsen); Mosvikken Storm B VIII (by A B L), Stod Storm B VIII (by A B L), Verran Storm C I NORDLAND Gimsøy Hallfrid Christiansen, Gimsøy-målet (1933), Salten Einar B Skånland, Saltamålet (1933), Vefsn V Riksheim, Ljodvokstren (1921) OPLAND Fåberg Kolsrud, Falk Festskr 451 & Ingvald Doseh, Hovedoppgave (unprinted), 1937, Upper Gudbrandsdal (Lesje, Dovre, Lom, Skjåk, Vågå, Sel), Storm Ordlister & Karl Bjørset, Syd-Lesje og Nord-Dovremaalets lyd- og formlære (1900), Nord-Aurdal Storm A IV, Nord-Fron Storm B VII, Valdres Storm C I, Østre Slidre Ole O Hegge, Utgreiding (1925), Toten Kolsrud, Festskr Falk, 451, Øyer Bjørset 1910, 8-9 OSLO Amund Larsen, Kristiania Bymål (1907) ROGALAND Ryfylke Per Thorsen, Ryfylke-målet (1930) and Målet i Nordaust-Ryfylke (1929); Stavanger Berntsen & Larsen, Stavanger Bymål (1925), 203 SOGN OG FJORDANE Nordfjord Lars E Sjøreide, Nordfjordmålet (1930) and Storm A XII, C I, C VI, Sunnfjord (Førde Storm A XII, C VI, Jølster, Holsen Ross, Norske Bygdemål 1909, 7), Sogn George T Flom The Dialect of Aurland (1915), Amund Larsen, Sognemålene (1922 f) and Storm A XII, C VI SØR-TRØNDELAG Notes on several communities by Am B Larsen in Storm F XIX (Melhus, Tydalen, Stjøren, Orkdal, Budal, Meldalen, Kvikne, Opdal), Hemne P E Sivertsen, Moalet i Hemne (1906), Opdal notes by writer and Ola J Rise, Opdalsmål (1933), Orkdal Storm C VI, Rennebu Storm C V, Røros Jørgen Reitan, Rørosmålet (1932), Selbu Amund B Larsen, Norvegia, II, 243, Tydalen, Ålen, Holtålen, Singsås Storm B VIII, Soknedalen Storm B VIII, Strinda Arne Tilset, Målet i Strinda (1924), Trondheim Storm B VIII (ved A B L); Tydalen & Guldalen, Amund B Larsen, Oplysninger om Dialekten i Selbo og Guldalen (1881), 36, Ålen Jørgen Reitan, Aalens maalføre (1906), 40 TELEMARK upper Telemark Ross, Norske Bygdemål, Bø Storm C II, Gransherad Storm B IVa, Heddal Storm B IVa & CII, Sauland Storm C II; Hjørtedal Storm B IVa & Norvegia I, 92, Tuddal Storm C II & B IVa, Hovin Storm B IVa, Skafså Storm A XII, Mo Storm C II; Mjøsstrondi Storm A IX, Saude Storm B IVa; Neshera Storm C II & B IVa, Tinn Storm, Ordlister & Olaf Skulerud, Tinnsmåalet (1922), Vinje Storm C I, Morgedal Storm A IX TROMS Bardo & Målselv Jørgen Reitan, Maal og Minne 1928, Senja Ragnvald Iversen, Senjen-maalet (1913), 68, Helgøy Storm A VIII, Salangen Jakob Markussen, Hovedoppgave (unprinted) VESTFOLD Tjøme, Tjølling, Tanum, Sem, Andebu, Ramnes, Hedrum, Lardal, Hof, Sande, Skoger, Sandherad, all in Olaf Skulerud, Festskr Amund Larsen Tønsberg Trygve Knudsen, Festskrift Amund Larsen, 138 VEST-AGDER Lyngdal, Valle Am Larsen, Indberetning 1891, 236, Gyland P. Kydland, Gylands-målet (1940), 38; Åseral Seip, Åsøplmålet (1915), 41

Addenda Elverum Lindberg, Opusc Phon. IV, 19; Ål Romcke, Norvegia II, 142, Vest-Agder Hannaas (1925), Snåsa, Frosta, Stjørdalen Storm F XIX (by A B L), Asker, Fet, Hakadal, Nes, Ramnes, Trøgstad, Spydeberg Storm C III; Nordre Land, Vestre Toten, Øyer, Romedal, Løten Storm C IV, Førde, Breim, Hornindal, Riste, Sande Storm F XXV.

As will be seen from the above, the following have been inaccessible to me Kolsrud,

The change to unvoiced l is local and sporadic, being reported from Sogn, Hallingdal, Selbu, and Solør. In some of the eastern communities of Telemark (Bø, Gransherad, Hjartdal, Sauland, Nes) a loose variety of s is reported which may be transitional between regular s and ʃ. The unvoiced l is everywhere in retreat before the other forms.

Map 1 Old Norse sl initially Each circle represents one country community (herred), each square a town Names of communities are entered only when reliable information on this dialect phenomenon is available The boundaries drawn between dialect areas are dotted wherever their exact course is a matter of conjecture The upper left insert contains the upper part of the main map, while the lower right insert is an enlarged map of the three southeastern counties (fylker) Note that the information given for Saltdal (Nordland) should be changed to Salten, on the coast. In the Southwest area it has not been thought necessary to enter all instances of sl.

Endsvollsmaalet (1916), Birger Marteinussen, Maalet i Bø i Vesteraalen (1907), Karl Braset, Sparbu-maalet (1903), Peter Lunde, Maalet i Søgne (1913); Johan Hveding, Tysfjord-maalet (1921).

The change to ʃl is characteristic of Lowland East Norwegian, the valleys of Gudbrandsdal and Østerdal, Nordmøre, Trøndelag, and southern Nordland. The material is too scanty to draw an exact boundary, thus it is uncertain whether part of Romsdal may not use ʃl, likewise parts of lower Buskerud and Telemark. Another difficulty is that a gradual phonetic transition is possible between s and ʃ, and that speech defects may lead to an impure s that can be heard as ʃ. Some of the less precise dialect students fail to distinguish between sl and ʃl, thus obscuring the situation.

Within the eastern area much vacillation is possible, as some dialects and some individuals seem to have maintained or reasserted the sl. The change to ʃl is a mechanical one, affecting all words containing this consonant cluster. No opposition is set up between sl and ʃl in any of the regular country dialects.

The development of initial sl was shared by medial sl after a consonant other than t. The reason appears to be that in such words the syllable division fell between the consonant and the sl, making the latter initial in its syllable. The evidence for this is that sl in this position usually remained sl or ʃl in regions where medial sl normally changed to tl or ll (see below). In some words the preceding consonant was lost, but whenever it was retained, the sl either remained or changed to ʃl. Examples of this development are found after g, k, m, n, ng, and r.⁷ Of these consonants k may be lost in jeksel 'molar' and veksla 'change,' g and m when they follow r, and r in all words except førsle and høyrsla (for which easily recognizable verb stems exist to keep them in line). The loss of r seems to be characteristic of Trøndelag, but the others appear to be more widespread.

In certain portions of the southwest it appears that medial d could have this effect of preserving the following sl, in spite of being lost afterwards At least a certain number of such words are reported from an area where sl normally becomes il ⁸ It is also possible, however, that analogy with corresponding verbs may have retained the original form of these words

⁷ After g bygsel 'rent' byksl Ytre Rendal, bægsel 'hindrance' Nordfjord. After k aksel (ON œxl) 'shoulder' aksl Elverum, Øvre Rendal, oksl Aurland (and Sogn generally), øksl & økkel Leikanger, Lyster, aksel vs aksl Norderhov, aksel Røros; beksl 'bridle' (alternates with ON bezl, see footnote 21), grøksla 'warm bread' Helgeland, jeksel (ON jæxl) 'molar' jæksl Grue, jaksl Røros, jæksl Tydal, jeksel (def. jeksla) Ådal, jeksle Ytre Rendal (but jehle Øvre Rendal), jakedl Aurland, veksla 'change' Sogndal, veksle Fon, veksle & væsle Norderhov, Ådal, veksle Lesje-Dovre-Vågå (but væsle Trysil, va(r)sla Voss, ve(r)sla Hardanger, vesle Møsstrand); dæksle 'window hook' Aurland. After m gøymsla 'hiding' Ryfylke, Voss (note geymhlu in some older documents), skræmsel 'terror' skræmsl Elverum. After n finsleg 'fine' feinsle Aurland, reinsleg 'cleanly' rainsle Aurland, rensl Røros, Solør; rensel 'running' rænsl Elverum, rensl Røros, uansleg 'easy' Ryfylke, ovansl Røros; (but note the two names reported from Hjelmeland, Stentland, Tuntland, with regular t for s in this position) After ng: fængsel 'prison' fængsl Røros, Elverum;

In the position after consonant, the s and l may be separated by an obscure vowel (ə), and in this case the expected change of s to f sometimes fails to develop ⁹

In a small area in the east Norwegian mountains it is reported that s acquires the quality of f before other consonants as well, especially n and t.¹⁰

3 INITIAL /L IN MODERN SLANG

As the city of Oslo, Norway's capital, is located in the midst of a country district where the use of fl for sl is well-nigh universal, it is not surprising that the lower classes in that city should make regular use of it During the nineteenth century the upper classes, with their Dano-literary tradition of elegant speech, attempted to steer clear of this "corruption" of the written image But along with the breakdown of the old bureaucratic upper class, the rise of the bourgeoisie and the proletariat, and the growth of a slang-loving youth came the rapid introduction of many dialect forms into the speech of even educated inhabitants of the capital. One of these was the pronunciation of fl for sl, which has now become practically universal among speakers of Oslo Norwegian in their unguarded moments The pronunciation [ʰoʃlo] (with a very thin f) for 'Oslo' is very common, though it is frowned upon by the cultured ¹¹ hengsl 'lock' hengsl Røros, stengsl 'lock' Hallingdal, Røros, stengsl Solør After r abyrgsla (g usually lost) 'responsibility' aabyrsle Hallingdal, aabyrsle Sunnmøre, aabrygsle Nordhordland (but with loss of r ålbøhl Opdal), byr(g)sla 'supplies' Sunnmøre, børsl(a) Sogn, førsle 'transportation' Romsdal, Sunnmøre, høysla 'hearing' Nordfjord, høssel Røros, ringertla* 'wagtail' rinnhle Øvre Rendal (with loss of r), skørsl (with loss of r) 'baptism' in compounds skitlabadn 'baptismal child' Sogn, skjøllarvatn 'e 'baptismal water' Nordfjord, vermsl (with regular loss of m and frequent loss of r) 'spring' versl Nordfjord, Sunnfjord, verslehol Sogn, værsl Senja, veksl Sunnmøre (but vehl Orkdal and Trøndelag generally, vælt Selbu), ørsla 'dizziness, confusion' Aurland, Ryfylke, Nordmøre, Romerike (but hovetla Sunnhordland)

⁸ Arveidsla 'reprimand' Sunnhordland, breidsla 'spreading' Sunnhordland, Karmt, Ryfylke (but bretla elsewhere), øydsla 'waste' (also øyta), utreidsle 'expense' Nordfjord But reidsla became only rettla.

⁹ E.g. jeksel (but jeksla) Ådal, aksel Trysil, aksel (but aksla) Røros

¹⁰ Tynnset, Tyldal, Soknedal, e.g. hestn, presta, ost, stugu etc In the one word snjo 'snow' the change is reported from Opdal (ʃnø), Sunndal (ʃno), Surendal (ʃnjø), Ytre Sogn and Jostedalen (ʃny) (writer's notes, Larsen Øversigt 57, Sognemålene)

¹¹ Cf. Professor Olaf Bloch in Festskrift Hjalmar Falk (Oslo, 1927), 3 "I fremlyd blir [s] foran [l] i dannet dagligtale praktisk talt gjennemgående supradentalt . . . Inde i ord er

In the course of the transition there was built up a feeling that f was a more vigorous and animated sound than s. Amund B. Larsen was the first to call attention to the existence in Oslo slang of a series of words in which f was used in this way before other consonants than l. He noted that the words svær 'big,' svin 'swine,' and sometimes sne 'snow' and stygg 'ugly' could be pronounced with f instead of s. "One literally takes a mouthful to express greater size"¹²

Prof. Olaf Broch has more recently taken this phenomenon up for detailed discussion, and pointed out that the two sounds alternate in a whole series of such words, "which partly by their own nature, partly within a given expression, have a strong emphasis psychologically, and accordingly, at least to begin with, accentually"¹³ Professor Broch is undoubtedly right in seeking the explanation of the phenomenon in the social situation described above, which associated itself with the sound opposition of sl to fl. This has permitted such slangy expressions as schtelig 'stylish' and schnobb 'snob' to alternate with the original stilig and snobb.

Professor Broch declared, however, that he could not understand why this use of f should be limited to the position before consonants (sl, sm, sn, st, sv occur in his examples), and not be found e.g. in sur 'sour.' The reason for this must be sought in the system of the language. The sounds of the language function in opposition to other sounds to distinguish words from each other. In Norwegian, s before vowels functions differently from s before consonants. Before vowels s is in opposition to ʃ, so that a change from one to the other would confuse many otherwise distinct words, e.g. sur 'sour': Sjur a proper name, sele 'suspender': skjele 'squint' etc. But no such confusion could arise before consonants, for here only s occurred, and the change to f was non-significant.

The same slang phenomenon is reported from two other city neighborhoods of the east, namely Tønsberg and Strinda (the latter near Trondheim). In Tønsberg it is described as "originally (upper class) Oslo-jargon, which also has reached lower class speech"¹⁴ In Strinda it is referred to as "jargon."¹⁵ The only other community from which it is reported is Ålen, where the one word stygg 'bad, ugly' becomes ʃtygg "when one really wishes to express repulsion or contempt for some person or thing."¹⁶ overgangen . . . ikke så gjennomført i mine kredse. Men tendensen synes nærmest å gå i retning av ʃl også her . . ."

¹² Kristiana Bymål, 74. Cf. Sigrid Undset, Samlede Romaner og Fortællinger fra Nutiden V, 7: schwinaktig morsomme landturer; Øverland, Er vårt språk avskaffet? (1940), 10. "Nå schka det bli vanskelig for dom fine å snakke rekti!"¹³ Loc cit

¹⁴ Trygve Knudsen, Festskrift Amund Larsen, 138. "Jargon" in Norway refers to clique or class slang.

¹⁵ Tilset, Målet i Strinda. 10

¹⁶ Reitan, VSS 1906, No. 4, p. 40.

In Ålen the possibility of city influence from the speech of nearby Røros is not excluded

A special interest attaches to this phenomenon because of the nature of the meaning opposition created between the two forms. The forms with s and those with ʃ are distinguished in sense primarily by their emotional overtones. A similar phenomenon has been pointed out by J. v. Laziczius for Hungarian, where lengthening of the vowel is used to make certain words more emphatic.¹⁷ He sets up a special term "emphatikum," to describe a phoneme variant of this kind, one which under given conditions can vary the affective value of a word without changing its intellectual content.

All that it amounts to is this: (1) certain sound oppositions are used to distinguish words, (2) the meaning difference correlated to the sound opposition may vary greatly in kind and degree. One pair of phonically distinguished words may differ in 'intellectual' content only, another in 'emotional' content only. But the great mass of words will differ a little in both, and there neither is nor can be a scale on which the amount of emotional and intellectual difference can be measured.

An example is the word svin 'swine' given above, which differs from ʃvin in its emotional connotation, and is a good instance of the emphatikum opposition of Laziczius. But a closer examination shows that the word "emotional connotation" (or Affektivitat, as L. puts it) involves a number of disparate and incommensurable elements. The simple svin applies primarily to the domestic animal; the emotional ʃvin primarily to human beings whose qualities seem to relate them to the domestic animal. Hence the actual thing referred to is different. More than that: the emotional form is rarely used in any serious accusation against said human beings, it fits best in a humorous, joshing situation. Hence the 'intellectual' distinction, which was supposed to be absent, as well as a genuinely situational difference, are really with us, even though disguised. Or take the word svær 'huge,' which becomes more intense if altered to ʃvær. Most of the people who use the intense form tend to lose the other form entirely. Like other intensives, it soon loses its effect through overuse. Here we are dealing with the germs of a new dialect, and another distinction has come in to cross the supposedly 'emotional' one.

4 SL, TL, AND TSL IN POSTVOCALIC POSITION

The treatment of sl after vowels has been much more complex. Instead of one significant change, there are here three major changes obtaining over well-defined dialect areas. In addition a number of words show individual exceptions from the 'sound law,' so that their forms demand special explanations. This complexity is due in part to the confusion of sl with tl and tsl, in part to its instability when it occurs at the point of word or syllable division, and in part to the nature of the words into which it enters.

¹⁷ "Probleme der Phonologie," Ungarische Jahrbucher XV (1935), 193-208. Kindly called to my attention by W. F. Twaddell.

Map 2. Old Norse sl, tl, zl after vowels.

Throughout Norway regular historical development has led to the confusion of sl, tl, and tsl in postvocalic position. The accompanying map (No. 2) shows the four leading results in the modern dialects:

- (1) sl the Midland valleys from Valdres south and the southern coast from the western border of Vestfold to Cape Lindesnes (the Naze)
- (2) ʃl the southeastern lowlands up to the edge of the mountainous and forested valleys.
- (3) ll the northern half of the country, including Solør, Østerdal, Gudbrandsdal in the east, all of Nordfjord, and a large part of Sunnfjord on the west
- (4) tl the valleys and fjords of the west, from Sunnfjord to the Naze (excepting the community of Hægebostad in Vest-Agder and Herdla in Hordaland)

The chief words exemplifying these changes with any regularity throughout the country are: hasl 'hazel', vesl 'small', lill 'little', ella 'intend', netla 'nettle', beizl 'bit, bridle', veizla 'party', a large number of derivatives formed by the suffix -sl, and all suffixes beginning with l, e.g., -la, -li, -lig, -ling etc. By far the greatest number of these words are secondary formations, resulting from suffixation, syncope, or compounding. The clusters do not seem to have occurred in this position in Germanic.

The four areas here defined will be referred to as areas 1, 2, 3, and 4. They correspond in general to standard Norwegian dialect areas, (1) the Midland dialects, (2) the Lowland East Norwegian, (3) northern Norway, and (4) western Norway. But the northern dialects have encroached strongly on the others, so that the isogloss runs well down into the central mountain region.

Areas 1 and 2 are really parts of the same area, having treated sl alike both before and after vowels. They are distinguished only by the transfer of s in area 2 from the s- to the ʃ-phoneme, a mechanical change. Area 4 is sharply marked off from the rest by associating the s before l with its t-phoneme. The most striking change, however, is that of area 3, in which the dialects have assimilated these clusters into an entirely new phoneme, and completely dissociated them from initial sl.

Within area 1 upper Hallingdal shows sporadic unvoiced l for medial sl and tl, as it did for initial sl. These unvoiced l's are not palatalized as those in area 3 and so are not directly connected with the development there.

Within area 4, the occurrence of sl on the island of Herdla and a few others to the north remains unexplained. It was first explained by Amund Larsen as due to earlier cultivated forms from Bergen; later he regarded it as a coastal phenomenon connected with area 3 to the north. Until a field investigation is made, it is impossible to say why these forms should occur there.

Area 3 shows a remarkable series of transitional forms. In the west, Sunnfjord and Nordfjord and part of Sunnmøre have a confusing variety of phonetic approximations which are variously written by phoneticians.

They include compromise forms with a t-implosion (3b), forms with l plus a spirant [ç or ʃ] (3c), and forms without the l, just a spirant [ç or ʃ] (3d and 3e). In Fårde the rule is tl [tʃ], but the form hʃfə is reported, and the sound [ʃ] from its subdivision, Holsen. In the east, unvoiced l alternates in many border communities with ʃl and is retreating before the latter.¹⁸

In many communities of area 3 sporadic forms have developed with an intrusive t after the unvoiced l. This t occurs only in monosyllables, especially when these are part of a compound. The forms with t are nowhere carried through all words of this type, and the same words frequently occur without t in neighboring communities. It is thus at the present time impossible to determine either a lexical or a geographical extension of this change.¹⁹

The word beizl 'bridle' also shows an unexplained variation in form, which is not clarified by the available material. In a great many communities the word shows an intrusive k, as if it were descended from an ON bexl* (or beixl*)²⁰ Where this form is used, the sl is initial and its forms belong with those appearing regularly after the consonant k (see above p. 882). Where the form without k is used, the tsl is postvocalic and its forms are those shown on map 2. The only exceptions to this are the forms bissel or bessel (Tuddal, Trysil, Røros) which have probably been picked up from standard Norwegian. The information now available shows that the form with k is characteristic of a broad central strip of Norway from north to south, including the eastern lowlands, the lower parts of Telemark and Østerdalen, the valleys of Hallingdal and Gudbrandsdal, and the northwestern coast from Sunnfjord to Møre. Practically no information is available on Trøndelag and Nordland.²¹

¹⁸ In Vang, Hedmark væslə, but sometimes vælt-per; in Solør 'sl seems to be entering from the cultivated language and from other communities', in Fåberg ʃl is gaining, esp. among the young, and in the south.

¹⁹ gjætslegut 'herdsboy' jæhtgut Åmot, Land, Toten, Biri, Vardal, gjætslesvein 'herdsboy' jæhtsvein Gudbrandsdal, Nordmøre, gjætslemark 'pasture' jeltmark Gimsøy, hasl 'hazel' halt Orkdal, Nordmøre, Helgeland, Kvernes, Surendal, Fåberg, haslskog 'hazel woods' håltskog Vefsn, vesleguten 'the little boy' vehltgutn Vågå, Vesle-Per 'little Per' vælt-per Vang (Hedmark), ver(m)sl 'spring' vælt Selbu, ella 'intend' ælt Namdalen, Fosen, Nordmøre, Helgeland, elte Senja; døydsl 'cadaver' døyhlt Fosen, tail (or tasl) 'useless work' tahlt Trondheim, kvisl 'forked branch' kviht Vågå, Sel, Lesje, Dovre (also kviht).

²⁰ Aasen associates it with an Icelandic beygsl 'something bent' or a hypothetical bægsl* 'a hindrance.' The form with k is found in the Faroe Islands also. båksl, cf. Hægstad VNM II, 2, 117.

²¹ Forms with k in area 1—bæks'l Torpo, Ål, bæiks'l Hol (also bæihl), beks'l Morgedal (Telemark), in area 2—*bækse*l Bærum, *bækse*l Asker, *beks*l Norderhov, Ådal, in area 3—*bekse*l South Rendal, bæks'l Sunndal, *beks*l Riste, Sande (Sunnmøre), *beks*l Fåberg, Sel, Vågå, Lesja, Dovre, baksol Lom, Skjåk, *beiks*l Breim, beksl Gloppen, Hornindal, Fårde. Forms without k in area 1—beisl Vest Telemark, Tinn, baisl Valle, area 3—behl Ålen, northern part of Rendal, beitla Sunnmøre, beillar (plural) Nordfjord, area 4—baii'l Voss, betl Lavik, Aurland, beitl Rødal, Nordhordland, baitsl Årdal (?), betl, beitl Ryfylke.

The word lilli 'little' (weak form of ON litill) has in a few communities within area 3 lost the l-quality of the usual sound in that area and substituted a spirant, usually ç. In Hornindalen and Stadslandet this form is one of the transitional forms between ll and tl, but the other communities from which it is reported are quite isolated.²²

Along the southeastern coast some communities report lille 'little,' a form that is characteristic of Danish dialects (see below p. 904).²³ This form may be borrowed from standard Dano-Norwegian, but it is supported by çille 'tickle' from one of the communities (Fjære), and a statement by Seip that "examples of the transition to ll are found in some southeastern dialects, especially on the coast."²⁴ Unfortunately no monographs or other materials are available on the dialects of Vestfold, so that it is impossible to be sure where the line runs between the Danish practice and the Norwegian. If these forms are non-literary in origin, they will require an additional area in the southeastern corner of Norway, where sl and tl remain apart, with tl becoming ll.

5. SEMANTIC AND MORPHOLOGICAL INTERFERENCE WITH THE SOUND CHANGE

Beyond the special developments discussed in the previous section, there remains a body of apparent exceptions to the sound changes in question. Theoretically the cluster sl should have been eliminated in areas 3 and 4, and tl in areas 1, 2, and 3. But a number of words are reported from all of these areas which contain the very clusters eliminated. In the following we shall analyze these exceptions, and make some guesses at the factors that led to their existence. They offer abundant evidence that 'sound laws' do not operate altogether independently of the meanings of the words in which they occur.

a. Syncopated forms. In some words the sl and tl cluster arose as the result of syncope in certain morphological forms. Words ending in -ill or -all in the singular masculine nominative lost the intermediate vowels in most of the other forms, e.g. litill 'little' vs. lillar (plural). In such words three treatments were possible, according to the force of analogy among the various forms: (1) the original alternation between syncopated and unsyncopated forms might be maintained, (2) the word might be leveled with an unsyncopated form, or (3) with a syncopated form.

The first of these is very rare. Only two examples have been found: kvætel 'forked branch' vs. kvihla (plural) in Sunnfjord, Nordfjord, and Sunnmøre, and fetil 'shoulder strap' vs. fasla (plural) Tinn.

²² lissje Hornindalen, likkje Stadslandet, likkj Senja, likkje Ålen

²³ Fjære, Vegårshei, Bjelland (also sl), according to P. Kydland, Gylandsmålet, 38, ll is used in the coastal area south of Gyland.

²⁴ Norsk språkhistorie, 299.

The second is also rare, but a few examples are found in which the singular has imposed its consonant on the plural in defiance of the sound law.²⁵

The third is the usual thing, that the oblique, syncopated forms are dominant and the resulting sl or tl follows the regular sound law. In many cases a new singular has been created.²⁶

The word vetrlidr 'year-old animal' is different from the preceding in that it is nowhere assimilated, not even in Telemark.²⁷

Before the suffix -legr (-ligr) the regular sound change is general, but not invariable.²⁸ In the Midland region a k has been intruded between the s and the l in some of these words.²⁹ The irregular examples are partly the result of borrowing, partly of analogy, but the material is too small to warrant any definite conclusions.³⁰

b Influence of the morphological boundary. When a morphological boundary fell between the first and the second of the two consonants, assimilation frequently failed to take place. The secondary stress of the second morpheme and the analogy of the two parts with other words in the language tended to restrain the assimilation.

Compounds such as husly 'shelter,' lyslett 'light completed,' mailaus

²⁵ eitel 'gland' plural eitla Salta, gvitel 'coverlet' plural gvitla Numedal (similarly kvitel in Upper Telemark and Setisdal), skyttil 'shuttle' plural skyttlar Toten, Land, Gudbrandsdalen, Ringerike; setel 'note,' plural setla Sunnmøre, betel 'bridle' plural betla Sunnmøre (but eihla, kvihla).

²⁶ Area 1 aisl 'gland,' plural aisla Setisdal (aihle, eisle, plural eislar Hallingdal), fasle 'shoulder strap' Telemark, Setisdal, Vegårshei, hasle 'hazel' Setisdal, kasle 'kettle' Telemark, Setisdal, kahle Hallingdal, skusle 'shuttle' Telemark, Nore, kvihle Ål kvissol, plural kvislê Tuddal. Area 2 fassel 'shoulder strap' Ådal, 1 fasle Norderhov. Area 3. ehje 'gland' Ålen, fâhl 'shoulder strap' Opdal, fehle Ålen, skuhl 'shuttle' Salta. Area 4. fatle Bergen Gyland, meitle 'chisel' Hardanger (elsewhere mertel).

²⁷ vetle Romsdal, Innherred, Telemark, vættli Namdalen, vettile Opdal, vættlei Nordmøre, vetidl Aurland, vetli Setisdal, vettile Nord-Rollag, vættile Øyer.

²⁸ With regular sound change. godsleg 'kindly' gotlige Gyland, goothg Lista, ugotlige Ryfylke, skutleg 'mean, offensive' sjusle Tinn, sjihle Opdal, shihle Røros, Salta, skihln Stjørdalen, Fosn, skith Jæren, Ryfylke, lettleg 'lively' lessle Tinn; skjolleleg 'quick' skjösle Telemark, stussleg 'depressing, eerie' stussli Ådal, Norderhov, stuhle Opdal, Dovre, Lesja, stusle Valdres, Hallingdal, ubutleg 'untidy' obuhle Opdal, umatsleg 'unpalatable' omahle Ålen, -i Røros, -en Øvre Rendalen.

²⁹ blidsleg 'kindly' bliskleg Telemark, finsleg 'fine' finskleg Hallingdal; godsleg 'kindly' goskleg Telemark, lettleg 'lively' lesklege Setisdal (and lettlege), reinsleg 'cleanly' reinskleg Setisdal, Telemark, visleg 'wise' viskleg Telemark.

³⁰ blidsleg 'kindly' bleisle Aurland; drilleleg 'perverse' dretli Vegårshei; etileg 'edible' ætle Opdal, godslig 'kindly' goslige Ryfylke, goslege Sunnmøre, gousle Aurland, gosli Elverum; grøteleg 'grievous' grøtle Opdal, koselig 'cozy' kosli Solør (& Tønsberg), passelig 'suitable' passli Trysil passle Kvernes, passle Aurland, stussleg 'eerie' stussli Bardo, Elverum, Fåberg, stussle Aurland, Solund; visleg 'wise' vislege Sunnmøre.

'without food' are rarely assimilated.³¹ Only in one region did assimilation consistently take place in these words, namely the Midland valleys from Valdres to Setesdal and the neighboring Ringerike.³²

The suffix -ling seems to have had no effect on the sound cluster at the boundary, for the words containing it are nearly all regular in form. Some of the most important are felling 'foot on a hide,' kelling 'kitten,' and bysling 'heather,' all regular.³³ In the one word mysling 'pitiful person,' where assimilation does not take place, we may assume that this derivative of mus 'mouse' was formed after the sound change.³⁴

c. New creations. The word mysling just discussed may be an example of a type of formation which seems to have arisen even in fairly recent times. The suffix -la (which will be discussed specially in the next section) has been very productive in this regard, as is clear from the number of verbs with this suffix which occur with unexpected forms. Even if some of these may go back to the time before the sound change, they may have been reformed on the basis of other words existing in the dialect.

This seems the likeliest explanation of the considerable number of verbs with sl in area 4.³⁵

³¹ Examples fallag* 'eating from one dish' Opdal; husly 'shelter' Aurland, kvillett 'blonde' Strinda, Trondheim, Ådal, klæslaus 'without clothes' Ådal, Norderhov, lysllett 'light complected' Norderhov, mallag 'eating together' Strinda, Trondheim, mallaus 'without food' Dovre, Lesja, Vågå, Sel, Øyer, Ådal, Elvrom, Salta, Norderhov, Vegårshei, Hardanger, Saltdalen, Møsstrand, Saude, Morgedal, Nord-Rollag, rettlerda 'direct' Lom, Skjåk, Dovre, Lesje, Vågå, Øyer, Elvrom, Saltdalen, Hardanger, Trondheim, Strinda; skjotleik 'speed' Froland, Tovdal, Åseral, Nedenes, vilþysa 'foolishness' vetlþyse Vegårshei.

³² Examples kvillett 'blonde' gvislett Tinn, mallaus 'without food' maslous Tinn, masslous Hornnes, maslaue Setisdal, molag 'meeting' moslag Setisdal, Telemark, raplågja 'log on which roof rests' rahlei Opdal (Sør-Trøndelag), rettlerda 'direct' resleie Tinn, resleie Nord-Rollag, resleie Setisdal, Valdres, Tuddal, Møsstrand, resleie Ådal, Norderhov (Ross reports resleie, Hægstad resleie, from Sunnfjord, which remains unexplained), rehlest Sunnmøre, skjotleik 'speed' skjouslaik Setisdal, Råbyggelaget, Telemark, ullægr 'outlaw' usløg Telemark.

³³ Area 1 føsling Setisdal. Area 2 fesling, fisling Østlandet; bryslýng Hedmark, Vardal, Valdres, kjesling Setisdal, Hornnes. Area 3 bøhling Gudbrandsdal, fæhling, fæisling Solør, fehling Trondheim, Nordland, kihling Salta. Area 4 fetling Sogn, Sunnhordland, føtling Jæren etc., kjetling Aurland.

³⁴ Reported from Sogn, Voss, Sunnhordland, Ryfylke, Jæren, Dalane, Sunnfjord, and Telemark.

³⁵ susla 'be given to drunkenness' Aurland from susa 'drink'; tasla 'move slowly' from tassa, the same, Ryfylke, kruslunn 'sickly' from krusken, the same, Ryfylke (kroslen Gyland), grisla 'spread out thin' from grisja, the same, Ryfylke, Røldal, Shl Hard Nordl; tisla 'whisper, tattle' from tisa, the same, Ryf Dal Berg, drisla 'drnp' Hard, drusla 'rain in small drops' Hardanger, drysla, the same, Sunnhordland, all related to drusa, drysj and a series of such words, bisla 'gossip' Ryfylke & Jæren, from bisa, the same; vaslast 'get wet' Lista from vass—genitive of vatn, musla 'chuckle' Gyland, from musa, mussa, mysa 'whisper, chatter' Lister.

In the sl areas (1 and 2) only two words are given with tl, and these can be explained in the same way Killa 'tickle,' found in Løten and Tøten, coexisted in the dialect with kjetall 'ticklish,' and kita 'tickle' Tatta 'chew with difficulty, talk monotonously, gossip' (Rbg Gbr Senja) may be a new formation from some such word as tjatra, meaning the same

d Borrowings One small group of words in the dialects of areas 3 and 4 contain an unexpected sl for reasons that appear to lie in their recent introduction into the dialects from the standard language. Among such words may be mentioned pusling 'putterer, insignificant person,' brisling 'herring,' usle 'miserable,' and usling 'scoundrel' ³⁶ The word brisling is derived from Low German brelling, but acquired an East Norwegian form and spread with the herring industry ³⁷ The others are highly expressive words, well calculated to become widely popular

The same is true of a group of verbs in -la which show unexpected sl in areas 3 and 4: fisla 'tattle,' gjødsle 'fertilize,' pusla 'putter,' rasla 'rustle,' rusla 'stroll,' tusla 'putter.' Interestingly enough, in some dialects these coexist with verbs having the expected phonetic form of that region, but having a different meaning. In each of these cases the word with the unexpected sl is identical in meaning with the corresponding word in standard Norwegian ³⁸ The word gjødsle is recent in form, no doubt because of the fairly recent adoption of the practice of fertilizing the soil as a regular practice in Norway (about a century ago) The others have spread by virtue of their delicate expression of emotional and emphatic overtones. In a few cases they have actually succeeded in establishing a new phonetic opposition on the ruins of the old

When proper names occasionally show a tendency to have forms not warranted within the dialect, we can probably see in this, too, the effect of interdialectal movement, or the influence of the written word ³⁹

³⁶ pusling Kvernnes, brisling Stavanger, Aurland, Tønsberg, usle Aurland, usling Salangen, also vesle Aurland (beside vetle), and nesle 'nettle' Tynnset

³⁷ The association with brisa 'shine,' suggested by Aasen, sounds most improbable

³⁸ fisla 'tattle' very general vs fihle 'putter' Nord-Trøndelag, Sør Helgeland, Nordre Gudbrandsdalen, filkje Breim; gjødsle 'fertilize' jøsle Øvre Rendal, jøs Elverum, Solør vs gjøtla 'fatten' Sunnhordland, jøsle Setisdal, gyhle Nordfjord, pusla 'putter' Ryfylke, pusle Troms, Senja etc vs putla 'putter' Ryfylke, pusla 'putter' vs. potla (the same) Gyland, rusla 'stroll' rusle Østlandet, rusla Ryfylke, Hallingdal, Sogn, Lista, Stavanger, rosla Gyland vs rutla 'make a noise like thunder' Ryfylke, Aurland, Sogn, ruhle Hallingdal, rasla 'rustle' Ryfylke, Hallingdal, Dalane vs ratla 'walk slowly' Ryfylke, tusla 'putter' Ryfylke, 'whisper' Lista vs tutla 'putter' Ryfylke, tosla 'make faint noise,' tosling 'good-for-nothing' vs. totla 'putter,' totlen 'puttering' Gyland, note also musla 'chuckle' in Gyland

³⁹ The names Asli and Aslak are found with sl in Ryfylke and Aurland, where tl might be expected, and (apparently) with tl in Øyer, where hl is general.

6 SOME PHENOMENA ASSOCIATED WITH THE L-SUFFIX

A conspicuous proportion of the words containing the sound groups sl and tl are derivatives produced by the common Germanic l-suffix. The Old Norse forms from which the modern forms are derived are -la for the verbs (from -ilon* and -alon*) -li (masculine), -la (feminine), or -l (masculine and neuter) for the nouns, and -linn for the adjectives.⁴⁰

It is a striking fact that the overwhelming majority of the words in question are not attested in Old Norse. Many of those that are attested, seem to have undergone a change in meaning. Although one cannot safely argue from the negative evidence of the Old Norse texts, there seems to be a tendency toward a semantic pattern for words with this suffix, and it appears to have been prolific of new words down to the very present. Since most of these words have no attested Old Norse forms, scholars have had to reconstruct forms on the basis of their supposed etymologies. It is interesting to see that the confusion of sl and tl in the modern dialects has often made it impossible to be certain whether the stem of the word ended in s or t. Except for the small number of words spread by standard Norwegian and the new formations listed above, the phonetic forms of these words are quite regular throughout the country.

Nineteen verbs with the l-suffix have been found in Old Norse lexica. Of these ten are attested in the modern dialects, while nine appear to have been lost.⁴¹ Of those which have survived, fatla, skutla, and ætla are attested from all four dialect areas, while the rest are less widespread. It is clear that the connotations of puttering, iterative action, fooling around, wasting time etc. were present in some of these verbs already in Old Norse times, but these meanings have become more pronounced in the Norwegian descendants. Thus fatla 'tie' has in Jæren acquired the sense of 'bungle'; so have fitla and tutla, husla and skutla in various parts of the country.

In number, too, the verbs with the l-suffix seem to have increased. Practically all of them can be referred to certain typical meanings, ranging in a series from movement and repetition, to diminution and waste. Some of them have several of these meanings and will be listed under each head. The areas from which they are attested with regular phonetic forms are given after each

⁴⁰ This suffix and some others of the same type have been studied by Elof Hellqvist, "Om de nordiska verb på suffixalt -k, -l, -r, -s och -t samt af dem bildade nomina," Ark. f. n. f., xiv (1898), 1-46, 136-194. Hellqvist's lists are far from complete for the Norwegian material.

⁴¹ Survived: dusla 'putter,' fatla 'tie,' fitla 'finger,' húsla 'housel,' kitla 'tickle,' kvísla 'branch out,' skutla 'waste,' sýsla 'be busy,' tutla 'whimper,' vesla 'decrease, waste away,' ætla 'intend.' Lost: eitla 'sharpen eyes,' fetla 'fasten,' geisla 'shine,' gisla 'give hostages,' hasla 'mark out,' hvisla 'whisper,' meitla 'cut with adze,' stirtla 'get up with difficulty,' qsla 'wade.'

- (1) Short, quick movement ⁴² The forms here given are the reconstructed ones, of which ten contain sl, fifteen tl
- (2) Puttering and ineffectual work ⁴³
- (3) Aimless walking, strolling, sauntering ⁴⁴
- (4) Trickling, dripping, squirting ⁴⁵
- (5) Gentle noises ⁴⁶
- (6) Sharp noises ⁴⁷
- (7) Chattering, tattling, gossiping ⁴⁸
- (8) Waste ⁴⁹
- (9) Tickling sensation ⁵⁰

⁴² drasla 'pull' 1, 3, 4, fisla 'wag' 1, fjatla 'wag' 1, 3, 4, frisla 'wag' 3, gretla 'eat greedily' 4, grutla 'work quickly but carelessly' 3, 4, husla 'push aside' 1, kitla 'move slightly' 3, knitla 'chop with quick, short strokes' 4, kritla 'swarm, itch' 3, krytla 'swarm' 4, nasla 'snatch' 4, patla 'walk quickly' 4, pitla 'pluck' 4, also 'take short steps' 4, pjotla 'knit, crochet' 4, skutla 'push forward rapidly' 3, 4, snatla 'snatch' 4, smisla 'smile secretly' 1, smusla 'smile secretly' 1, 2, snusla 'sniff around' 1, 3, 4?, spratla 'jump' 1, 4, spritla 'stir, squirm' 1, 3, 4, strusla 'untwist' 1, tisla 'pick apart' 3, tutla 'press, squeeze'

⁴³ dratla 3, dasla 3, disla 1, 4, duatla 3, 4, fatla 4, fatlast 3, fitla 3, 4, fjatla 1, 3, 4, fjusla 1, 3, 4, fusla 1, 3?, knatla 4, kratla 1, 3, krutla 1, 3, 4, lasla 4, masla 3, mutla 1, 3, 4, mysla 1, 4, njatla 4, nusla 1, 3, pjotla 4, prisla 4, prutla 3, pusla 2, 3, 4, sysla 1, 3, tasla 3, 4, trusla seg 4, tusla 1, 3, 4, vasla 3

⁴⁴ dasla 3, dratla 1, 3, 4, drutla 3, 4, drusla 4?, fjatla 1, 3, 4, fjotla 1, 4, fjötla 4, ketla 3, kratla 1, 3, ratla 1, 3, 4, rusla 1, 2, 3, 4, skjaasla 1, 4, tasla 1, 2?, 3, 4, trasla 3, tusla 1, 2, 3, 4; tvisla 3

⁴⁵ drisla 1, 3, drusla 1, drysla 1, kvisla 1, 3, risla 1, 2?, 3, sisla 1, 2, 4, skrisla 1, skvisla 1, 4, spritla 1, 3, 4, stritla (3), 4, tisla (not localized)

⁴⁶ brutla 'make a faint, distant noise' 3, 4, dusla 'graze' 3, gnatla 'gnaw' 3, gnusla 'snicker' 1, 'sharp noise' 2; knasla 'chew quickly with open mouth and audible sound' 4, 'rattle weakly' 1, knisla 'whinny, snicker' 1, 3, 4, knusla 'rustle with faint sound' 1; kritla 'snicker' 4, krutla 'boil gently' 1, 3, 4, mutla 'chew slowly' 1, 3, natla 'knock gently, chew' 1, 3, nosla 'eat like pig' 3, nusla 'munch' 3, pusla 'boil gently' 4, skvisla 'splash' 1, 4, spritla 'chuckle, squirt' 1, 3, 4, tvasla 'splash' 3

⁴⁷ bratla 'work noisily' 4, dratla 'fall with noise, especially like peas' 4, fratla 'crackle' 3, grisla 'make a racket' 1, kvasla 'rattle', rasla 'fall down with a crash' 3, rusla 'rattle' 3; skratla 'rattle, rustle, creak' 1, 3, 4, skvasla 'splash' 1, 3, 4, skvutla 'splash' 4, susla 'splash, spill, cluck' 1, 3, 4, tatla 'chew with difficulty' 3, trasla 'walk heavily and noisily' 1, 3 (also same as dratla), skrotla 'cry of birds' 4

⁴⁸ bisla (forms irregular) 4, dasla 4, disla 1; fisla 1, 2, 3, 4, but with irregular forms (sl), husla 'joke' 3, jasla 3, 4, rasla (sl forms in 4), skratla 'laugh loudly' 1, 3, 4, susla 3; svisla 3; tatla 1, 3, 4; tjaatla 'talk nonsense' 4; tjatla 'haggle, quarrel' 4; tusla 4?; tvasla 1, 3, 4; vasla 'talk nonsense' 3, øsla 'joke' 1

⁴⁹ husla 'ruin, waste time' 1, 4, kvisla, kvislast 'waste away' 1, 4, skrutlast 'be worn down' 1; skutla 'waste' 1, 2, 3, 4, skvasla 'waste away' 1; træsla, træslast 'waste away' 3; tuslast 'waste away' (sl form in 4); tvislast 'waste away, shrink' 1, 4

⁵⁰ fitla 'itch' 3; kitla 'tickle' 1, 3, 4, kritla 'itch' 1, 3, 4, kutla 'tickle' 4; prisla 'tickle, itch, sting' 4.

For our purposes it will not be of interest to list the nouns and adjectives, which in most instances are derivatives of the verbs given above. Most of them refer to weak, stupid, or ineffectual persons, e.g. krasl 'a puny, stupid person,' musl 'a putterer,' or small, ineffectual things, e.g. brull 'a faint noise,' 'worn out vessels and implements,' mutl 'crumbings, particles.' The rest are the names of the actions described by the verbs, e.g. fill 'puttering around' etc.

A study of the consonant and vowel structure of the verbs listed above reveals that they practically exhaust the consonant possibilities of the Norwegian language, but not the vowels. Each x means that there is a verb having the consonant cluster listed at the left, plus the vowel listed above, followed by either sl or tl.

The non-occurrence of the clusters with j is due to the comparative rarity of these clusters in the language as a whole, while the avoidance of the l-clusters is clearly due to an aversion to two successive l-clusters (as e.g. in a hypothetical slasla* or blatla*). Of the 92 verbs listed, more than three-fourths use one of the three cardinal vowels a, i, or u. In many cases all three are used with the same consonant clusters, e.g. krasla, krisla, krusla or skvasla, skvisla, skvusla. In effect this means that new verbs of this type are easily created simply by taking a familiar consonant at the start and then varying the vowels before the sl or tl ending. But the vowels chosen are those which are most distinct in their formation. Torp suggests 'new ablaut' as an explanation of some, but this is true only in the sense that a free variation of vowel quality can take place here on account of the limited significance of the class as a whole.

Regular efforts to derive these verbs frequently meet with difficulty because of the confusing situation both in the vowels and the following consonants. These words live a life of kaleidoscopic change, in which several words may cross to form a new one which is immediately understood because it is reminiscent in sound to others of its type.

Within the type one may also discern a certain tendency toward distinguishing the vowels on the basis of symbolic value. The i is most frequent in the groups entitled 'short, quick movement,' 'trickling, dripping, squirting,' and 'tickling sensation,' while a and u are more common in the 'sharp noises,' the 'puttering,' and the 'talk.' In such words as this the vowels are not so rigidly governed by adherence to historical precedent; their natural differences in resonance may come into play and produce some of that sound symbolism of which Jespersen writes⁵¹

This analysis of the verbs containing the consonant clusters sl and tl

⁵¹ Cf. pairs like the following drisla—drasla, gnisla—gnatla, krisla—krasla, risla—rasla, skvisla—skvasla.

Verbs in -sla or -lla

Init. Cons Cluster	Accented vowel				Init Cons Cluster	Accented vowel
	a	i	u	other vowels		a	i	u	other vowels
—			x	ø, y	nj	x
b		x			p	x	x	x
br	x		x		pj				o
d	x	x	x		pr		x	x
dr	x	x	x	y	r	x	x	x
f	x	x	x		s		x	x
fj	x		x	o, ø	sj				å
fr	x	x		y	sk			x
gn	x	x			skr	x	x	x
gr		x	x	e	skv	x	x	x
h			x		sm		x	x
j	x	x			sn	x		x
k			x		spr	x	x
kj		x		e	str		x	x
kn	x	x	x		sv		x
kr	x	x	x	y	t	x	x	x
kv	x	x			tj	x			å
l	x				tr	x		x	æ
m	x		x	y	tv	x	x
n	x		x	e, o	v	x	x
					40	25	25	25	17
Total 92

Unexploited initial clusters bj dj fj lj mj slj smj snj spj sprj strj, bl fl gl kl pl skl sl spl, dv sp st, g

Unexploited vowels au ei øy Relatively unexploited vowels: e o y å æ ø.

brings out the fact that there was no real functional burdening of these combinations in Old Norse. There were no words in the language distinguished solely by this opposition, and when new verbs, some derived from s-stems, and some from t-stems, received the l-suffix, their meanings became sufficiently alike so that the consonant before the l assumed less significance, just as did the vowels. In the modern dialects the ending has expanded its use and remained living down to the present, for most of the verbs seem to have been formed since Old Norse times, and some reveal by their phonetic form that they must have appeared after the sound change discussed in this study.⁵²

⁵² Cf. George T. Flom on a similar situation in English dialects, "A list of English dialect

7 ORIGIN AND HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT

Several theories have been advanced to account for this striking sound change. These are based in part on the misspellings of the medieval manuscripts, and in part on general phonetic considerations. Hægstad has found an instance of confusion as early as 1225,⁵³ but otherwise the distinction was well maintained down to 1300. In fourteenth century manuscripts there are numerous examples of confusion and many remarkable attempts at rendering these sounds more phonetically. Unfortunately it is not easy to unravel the significance of these spellings; the spelling tradition of Old Norwegian was still strong, the documents are not always dated, and the scribes are seldom localized.

Hægstad made several suggestions in his great work on the West Norwegian dialects. In documents from Valdres (area 1) he found certain spellings with rp̥ll (for tl, later sl), to explain these he postulated a development from cacuminal s and t to h (tl > pl > sl > hl).⁵⁴ This reasoning is quite unsupported by anything in the old or present-day dialect, which has neither cacuminals nor unvoiced l. In his discussion of the development in area 3 he said simply that sl and tl have coalesced in hl.⁵⁵ In treating the phenomena of area 4 he made two interesting suggestions: that the sibilant quality of s may have been reduced to facilitate the transition to t,⁵⁶ and that sl may first have become hl before it became tl, or in the word kvikl, kl.⁵⁷

Noreen believed that tl became sl by way of tsl, and that hl in area 3 arose from sl.⁵⁸ Amund Larsen also believed that an sl lay between the tl and the hl of area 3.⁵⁹ Seip discusses the change in considerable detail.⁶⁰ He points out that in unstressed position assimilation of tl took place very early, and that the cluster frequently occurred in positions where it was liable to change. He does not postulate any intermediate forms, but classifies the changes according to the articulatory processes involved. He calls the change in areas 1 and 2 (tl to sl) "the first step to an assimilation," in area 3 (tl to hl) "assimilation," and in area 4 (sl to tl) "differentiation." He also finds evidence for a "complete assimilation" to ll in the manuscripts and certain modern SE Norwegian dialects.⁶¹ Manuscript forms with tsl he regards as compromises between speech and traditional spelling.

Verbs with the suffix -l," Dialect Notes, II (1900-04), 404-415. "This l-suffix is a living suffix, generally with the meaning of smallness or frequency, it has been added in comparatively recent times to a large number of verbs, giving to such words a diminutive, iterative, or frequentative significance. The idea of smallness has developed that of the trifling, the insignificant, the worthless."

⁵³ ofgorytlan for ofgoryzlan Hom. See VNM, I, 146.

⁵⁴ VNM, II, 2, p. 45.

⁵⁵ VNM, I, 146.

⁵⁶ VNM, II, 1, p. 125.

⁵⁷ VNM, II, 56-57.

⁵⁸ Altn. Gr. I, 14.

⁵⁹ BBym, 90.

⁶⁰ NSprh., 297-300.

⁶¹ On this see esp. Vestfoldminne II, 208-209.

Grøtvedt describes the change as due to "an effort to find a suitable place of articulation for l without producing complete assimilation with the preceding consonant."⁶²

It may be worth while to try developing these various and in part contradictory suggestions into a coherent theory of the sound changes involved, correlated as far as possible with the spelling errors of the manuscripts. This theory is presented very tentatively and with full awareness that such speculation is liable to many pitfalls.

(1) We are not dealing with several processes here, but with one. It is misleading to say that before l, s became t in one place, while t became s in another. A change from s to t is a priori unlikely. And if these had really been different processes, it would be strange that there are no border areas, or speech islands, in which sl and tl still remain distinct, as they do, for instance, in Danish. One basic change is common to all of Norway (barring the possibility that the Danish development may have extended into the SE corner of Norway): that the distinction between sl and tl is lost.⁶³ Hence it seems most likely that up to the actual confounding of these clusters the phonetic development was roughly the same throughout the country.

(2) A careful study of the spelling errors listed by the above-mentioned scholars suggests further that in the fourteenth-century manuscripts the errors do not markedly follow the dialectal lines of today. In manuscripts from area 1 and 2 we find tl for *sl*⁶⁴ and various compromise forms (lsl, shl, rsl, lhsl, sstl, lstl, þll, etc.) as well as the very common ll or l for both sl and tl. For tl there are also a goodly number of forms with tsl. If tl had become sl without further ado, and if sl had not also been involved in a change, such confusion would seem unlikely. In area 3 the examples are fewer; but they do not seem widely different from those of the other areas. We find tl and ll for zl (>sl), tsl and tzl for tl, and similar compromise forms (lsl, lþl, llzl). In area 4 the situation is similar, the most common spellings are tl for sl, sl for tl, and tsl for both.⁶⁵ Here the compromise forms are: thl, shl, thsl, dzsl.

When Hægstad found forms that did not agree with those of the modern dialects, he attributed them to scribes of other dialects. Seip prefers to regard them as compromises between sound and spelling, or as hypercorrect forms. But it seems clear from the distribution of the forms that ⁶² Lydverket, SNVA 1938. No. 7. Oslo, 1939, p. 105.

⁶³ Note that Seip says "Tendensen har tydelig vært assimilasjon over hele det norske område" NSpr 299. By this he means, however, that the two consonants (s plus l, or t plus l) tended to be assimilated, a tendency which was heroically resisted in area 4.

⁶⁴ sytluman Skien 1308 DN, I, 116, Atleifs Oslo 1355 DN, v, 220, etc.

⁶⁵ ætkuſl AM 71 qto NGL, II, 93 (1320-50); lsls Stavanger 1379 VNM, II, 1, 56, etc.

the spellings of the fourteenth century actually tell us nothing about the dialectal varieties of that day. They only tell us that throughout the country the distinction of $sl/ɹl$ had vanished. To take individual spellings from one area or the other as proof that the change now completed in those areas had already taken place in the fourteenth century, seems decidedly premature.

For complete coalescence of sl , $ɹl$, and zl , only two small phonetic changes were necessary: that zl should have become sl , which happened very early,⁶⁶ and that $ɹl$ by way of tsl should also have become sl . The transition of $ɹl$ to tsl would be a simple case of fractioning, with the explosion of the t and the voiceless beginning of the l combining to make an s .

(3) We cannot assume, however, that the sound arrived at was a pure sl , or that it was everywhere of exactly the same quality. What, then, was its nature?

I think we can find a clue to that by observing the speech islands on the preceding maps, and comparing the sounds there with the manuscript spellings. There are five areas in Norway, in widely different dialectal groups, where unvoiced l is reported as alternating with sl (or $ɹl$).⁶⁷ Storm reports that in Hjartdal (Telemark) initial sl is pronounced with "a loosely formed s , which partly coalesces with hl ."⁶⁸

As suggested by Brøndum-Nielsen, speech islands very frequently represent conservative areas which have resisted a novation.⁶⁹ In my opinion these areas (and perhaps others not yet reported) have preserved a state of things which existed in the fourteenth century throughout a large part, if not all of the nation.

This state may be described as follows: between a pure sl , a marked $ɹl$, and a clear unvoiced l [lll], there may exist a multitude of more or less assibilated sounds. The tongue positions are unstable and easily varied, while the acoustic impressions are similar and difficult to distinguish. Although the l at the end of the cluster probably varied from voiced to unvoiced, its l -quality was never in doubt.⁷⁰ The real trouble lay in the beginning of the cluster.

⁶⁶ Seip, NSpr 183, 186, 297. Cf. vatzbotn > vassbotten, vitskap > visskap (Aasen, from Hallingdal), "Forved s ville t og d blive utydelige," e.g., til Mots, Baats, ytst, slits, læst (Aasen, *Gram*², 41).

⁶⁷ Selbu, Solør, Nes (Telemark), Hallingdal, and Sogn initially, Solør, Nes, and Hallingdal medially. Amund Larsen states that he knows a great number of places in southern Norway where sl and hl alternate 'without visible geographic borderline' (Sognemålene, p. 25). He also makes the very interesting statement that this is in contrast to the distribution of $ʃ$, where there is always a clear borderline "does this signify that the difference between dental and retracted articulation is perceived by us as more marked than the distinction between sl and hl ?" ⁶⁸ Norvegia I, 92. ⁶⁹ Dialekt og Dialektforskning (1927), 40.

⁷⁰ Of the more than 100 misspellings of sl and $ɹl$ only two fail to end in l . Gilstir Gul. VNM, I, 90, abreilz Kinn 1322 DN II, 147.

For the new intermediate sounds there were no symbols. As long as the first sound fell within the range of variation of the s-sound, it was written s. Some sought the expedient of writing þ, r, sh, th, ths, etc. to mark the sound as different from s. Still others recognized that the position of the organs at the beginning of the cluster had ceased to be that of s and had become that of l, so they wrote just plain l, or ll, or combinations beginning with l, such as lsl, lksl, lstl, llzl, lsl, or lþl.⁷¹

This was the state of the clusters sl/ll in the fourteenth century. their lack of functional burdening permitted them to vary back and forth within an articulatory area where they could not easily be associated with other sounds in the language, and therefore had no obvious method of representation. In addition, awareness of the traditional spelling led to compromises with earlier forms.

(4) At this point begin the developments of the modern dialects, which have gradually arrived at various methods of stabilizing the combination. In the mountain valleys of area 1, the pure s was restored (or perhaps had never been affected) except in Hallingdal, area 1 is a conservative area of clear, unassimilated consonants. In area 2 a variety of f-sounds became general; cacuminal assimilation of consonants (esp. of r) is characteristic in this area.

In areas 3 and 4 the combinations remained fl, sl, or hl initially. But medially they lost all s-quality and were ranged with the long dentals. That is, they were recognized as long, unvoiced l's [ll] and correlated to the long, voiced l's [ll̥].

In both areas these dentals were at that time going through certain characteristic changes: their qualities were moving in opposite directions.

In the North (area 3) all long dentals were being palatalized. The isogloss for this phenomenon is drawn on map 1B in Ross, Norske Bygdemaal and it will be seen that it is strikingly parallel to the southern border of our area 3. It includes two small districts that ours does not, namely outer Sogn in the West, and the Lake Mjøsa region in the East. It is clear, however, that the latter was once a part of the hl-region, for the unvoiced l is in retreat, and older sources indicate its existence farther to the south than at present.⁷² One cannot expect such isoglosses to cover one another exactly, and this is not a point at which a great number of ⁷¹ I view with some doubt Seip's theory that the l and ll spellings so common in areas 1 and 2 represent an actual voiced l. They are found impartially for older sl and ll, so they cannot be connected with the Danish development in which only the ll was assimilated to ll (see below). They have left no trace in the modern dialects; the form velle given from Toten by Kolsrud stands too isolated to prove much (Vestfoldminne, II, 209). Such forms as "lille" may either be borrowed from Dano-Norwegian or be connected with the Danish development. The l's of the old manuscripts probably represent unvoiced l's.

⁷² Grøtvedt, Lydverket, 105.

isoglosses happen to run.⁷³ Hence there is seen to be a very definite connection between the palatalization of ll and of ll̥ (as well as all the other long dentals) in this region, while the ll̥ of the other regions remained unpalatalized

In the Southwest, on the other hand, long voiced l (and in part long voiced n and m) was being strengthened by a voiced implosion at the beginning, so that e.g. Old Norse all became adl (and in some districts⁷⁴ sternn became sterdn, barn badn etc.) In this movement the unvoiced long l was caught up and given a corresponding unvoiced implosion, producing ll̥ parallel to dl̥. The evidence for this is primarily the remarkable coincidence between the areas containing these two sounds. We have seen how the northern border of this area corresponds to the northern border of area 4, except for outer Sogn, which has ll̥ along with palatalized ll. The southern limit of the dl̥ is drawn on the accompanying map (No. 3) on the basis of Hans Ross, Norske Bygdemaal, 1909, 76. In its southernmost extension this includes a part of the area in which dl̥ later became dd̥, a phenomenon that extends to the east well into area 2 (as far as Tinn in Telemark). This movement has pushed the line to the east in the mountain valleys, while the counter extension of ll̥ along the coast due to coastwise traffic has pushed the lower part of the line to the west. But the parallel is obvious and striking. No other isoglosses of importance happen to follow this exact course.⁷⁵

While these four processes were generalized throughout large parts of the country, they did not strike all communities nor all words. Along the border between areas 3 and 4 a number of dialects attempted to mediate between the sounds they heard to the north and south of them. By taking part in neither development perhaps they retained some of the forms that had existed in the fourteenth century, at least some of the manuscript forms are strikingly similar to the sounds now heard in Nordfjord. And, as suggested earlier, some conservative communities elsewhere

⁷³ In his Översigt over de norske Bygdemaal (1898) Amund Larsen declared that the lines were identical (pp. 30, 58), but retracted this statement in a footnote on page 80.

⁷⁴ One of the earliest examples of dl̥ for ll̥ is from 1438, cf. Hægstad VNM, II₂ 1, 143.

⁷⁵ Note that Hægstad assumes this very development for Ryfylke in an attempt to explain the spelling Gillæson 1366, VNM, II₁, 56-57. Amund Larsen was apparently the first to point out the parallel between ll̥ and dl̥. In Sognemålene (p. 6) he wrote about the characteristic West Norwegian changes of ll̥ to dl̥, etc.: "this is in some degree—though just how is uncertain—connected with such consonant changes as that of rl̥ to dl̥, rn̥ to dn̥, and more remotely with such changes as fn̥ to bn̥, sl̥ to tl̥, etc. . . ." He believed that the West Norwegian forms were due to an exaggerated care in the preservation of traditional forms, while the East Norwegian were due to "carelessness" and "an attempt to accommodate the inherited sounds to the convenience of the articulating organs."

never gave up that phonemic latitude which permitted s to exist with or without sibilant quality before l.

(5) The substance of this hypothesis may be presented as follows:

In the thirteenth century ʍ and tsl (zl) coincide with sl, becoming a cluster that varied sporadically from sl to ʂl, ʃl, and hl throughout

Map 3 Old Norse ll in southern Norway, as investigated by Hans Ross (Norske Bygdemaal, 1909, page 76).

Norway, a situation still existing in a few scattered dialects.

This is the state which is reflected by the occasional spellings of the fourteenth century, which include traditional, phonetic, and hypertraditional forms, though we cannot now be sure which is which.

Gradually, by 1400 or later, the new sounds were incorporated, rejected, or modified by the various dialects in agreement with the general tendencies of the consonant patterns of those dialects.

The result is that in central Norway sl is found, in southeastern Norway ʃl, in northern and northwestern Norway ʎl, and in western Norway tl, all developed out of phonemically unstable clusters of sibilant-breath-spirant plus l which existed in the fourteenth century.

In tabular form

8 A SCANDINAVIAN PERSPECTIVE

The changes here discussed are not limited to Norway, but are connected with similar phenomena in neighboring Scandinavian countries. Although a complete analysis of the Swedish and Danish parallels is outside the scope of this study, a few notes drawn from the available literature will point the way to a general Scandinavian treatment.

In Iceland and the Faroes sl and tl remained apart, for these dialects missed entirely the assimilatory tendencies of the continent. But tsl (zl) was simplified to sl (beisl 'bridle'), as assumed in the first step of our historical hypothesis.

In Denmark and those parts of Sweden which speak Danish dialects they also remained apart.⁷⁶ The tsl was simplified to sl, along with other ts's (Old Danish giætʒlæ > gæslæ 'guard'). But about the same time as tl and sl were being confused in Norway, every short t after vowels was being voiced in Denmark. This development included t before l, which became d, and was then assimilated with the l into ll. Hence ON litr 'little' became modern Danish lille, kellingr 'kitten' > killing etc. In Sweden this development included the southern provinces—Halland, Skåne, and Blekinge, perhaps a little more.⁷⁷

According to Elias Wessén, some of the dialects in Götaland preserve

⁷⁶ Brøndum-Nielsen, Gammeldansk Grammatik, II, 227–228.

⁷⁷ See e.g. Gustaf Billing, Åsbomålets Ljudlara (Sv. Lm., x, 2) Stockholm, 1890; Nils

the distinction between tl and sl without assimilating either.⁷⁸ Apparently the same is true of Gotland.⁷⁹ This is only what we might expect in a border area. But all the rest of Sweden has partaken in the confusion of sl and tl characteristic of Norway.

Medially both of these sound clusters have become sl, fl, or ll in all the Swedish dialects proper. Swedish historians of the language assume a development identical with the one here postulated for areas 1, 2, and 3 in Norway: $tl > tsl > sl > \frac{sl}{ll}$ ⁸⁰ With the material at hand it is impossible to draw a line between these sound varieties. But it is clear that the Norwegian area 2 finds a continuation immediately to the east in central Sweden: Varmland, Narke, Västergötland, parts of Södermanland and Östergötland, or approximately the so-called "Middle Swedish" dialects (mellansvenska). In these districts the medial sound and the initial are both fl. To the east and south, and sporadically within the same area, sl occurs in both positions: SE Östergötland, Öland, part of Södermanland.⁸¹

North of a line from the Norwegian border at about Elverum or Kongsvinger southeast to Stockholm nearly all dialects have unvoiced l. It is reported in medial position for both sl and tl in every province from Dalarna, Västmanland, and Uppland north. It is reported also from Åland, Finland, and the Swedish dialects in Esthonia. The Norwegian area 3 is thus part of a larger area which includes north-central Sweden (Dalmål and Uppsvenska), and the north and east Swedish dialects.⁸²

In most of this area, however, initial and medial sl are treated very much alike, only in the old Norwegian provinces, Jamtland and Her-

Olséni, Södra Luggudemålets Ljudlara (Sv Lm, vi, 4) Stockholm, 1887; Ernst Wigforss, Södra Hallands Folkhäl (Sv Lm, B 13) Stockholm 1913-18

⁷⁸ Våra Folkhäl (Sth, 1935), 25. See also A. T. Ålander, Konsonanterna i Östergötlands Folkhäl (Upps, 1932), i, 291, ii, 134. Samuel Landtmanson, Studier over Västgötamålets i ock r-ljud (Stockh, 1905), 9.

⁷⁹ Noreen, Fåromålets Ljudlara (Stockh, 1879), 304.

⁸⁰ Cf. Noreen, Allschw Gram ¶44, 2, 334, 290, anm. 1. A. J. Ålander, Konsonanterna i Östergötlands Folkhäl, ii, (Uppsala, 1932), 46. Elias Grip, Skutlungemålets Ljudlara (Stockholm, 1901), 129.

⁸¹ Borgström, Askersmålets Ljudlara (Stockh, 1913), 23, Gjerdmann, Studier over de Sörmländska Stadsmålens Kvalitativa Ljudlara, i (Upps, 1918), 97 f.; Kallstenius, Värmlandsska Borgslagsmålets Ljudlara (Stockholm, 1902), 106, Noreen, Dalbymålets Ljudlara (Stockh, 1879), 189, Ålander, op cit, i, 291, Lundell, in Sv Lm, i, 76, Torsten Ericsson, Grundlinjer till undersökningen av Södermanlands Folkhäl (Stockh, 1914), 136.

⁸² Lundell, Sv Lm, i, 76, Grip, Skutlungemålet (Stockh, 1901), 129, 135, Hagfors, Gamlakarlebymålet (Stockh, 1891), 63, Isaacsson, Om södra Fjärdhundralands Folkhäl (St, 1923), 78, Karsten, Kokarsmålets Ljud- och Formlara (Stockh, 1892), 45, Lindgren, Burtraskemålets Ljudlara (Stockh, 1890-1919), 240, (E.) Noreen, Ärtemarksmålets Ljudlara

jedalen, and their neighbors, Ångermanland and possibly Medelpad, are conditions just like those of area 3, even including some palatalization. On Åland also the initial ʃl is different from the medial ʃʃ, but the ʃ is not the ʃ of the other dialects, for here all s's become ʃ.

Otherwise the use of sl, ʃl, and ʃʃ in Sweden appears to vacillate individually, in the manner we have postulated for fourteenth century Norway. The distance between these three sounds is very small, and the one merges into the other.⁸³

Standard Swedish has followed the dialects of "Middle Sweden," just to the south of Stockholm, in this as in many other features. Thus it uses sl, but with a clear s-pronunciation, in most of these words: nassla 'nettle,' vassla 'whey,' hassel 'hazel.' But in the word lille 'little' the south Swedish and Danish form has established itself, while in kittla 'tickle,' the t has been maintained, likewise in kittel 'kettle.' In betsel 'bridle' even ts has maintained itself, in spite of its general loss among the dialects. In these words we must undoubtedly see the influence of the written language.

Standard Danish is completely in accord with the Danish dialects on this point, having ll for tl, and sl for ʃl.

Literary Dano-Norwegian, a Danish graft on the Norwegian tree, shows a characteristic mixture of Danish and Norwegian practice. It is a matter of course that all sl-words have sl, as this is common to Danish and the southeastern dialects of Norway.⁸⁴ In the cultivated speech of Oslo the pronunciation with ʃl, as previously noted, is making headway, especially in initial position. The words with tl in Old Norse, however, are split between the Danish ll and the Norwegian sl according to their origin. Among the words that were brought in by literary Danish in Norway were lille 'little,' kille 'tickle,' kilden 'ticklish,' killing 'kitten,' nælde 'nettle,' and valle 'whey.' Of these words kille has become kile, kilden > kilen (except in certain phrases: et kildent emne 'a delicate subject'). Killing and valle have become obsolete, being replaced by the Norwegian kattunge and myse. Nælde has given way to the Norwegian nesle. Only lille remains active (as in standard Swedish), but it is under competition from the genuinely Norwegian vesle. The words esle 'intend' and firfisle 'lizard'

(Stockh., 1907), 29, (A) Noreen, Ordlista öfver Dalmålet (Stockh., 1883), 114; Reitan, Vemdalsmålet (Oslo, 1930), Tiseliu, Ljud- och Formlora for Fasternamålet i Roslagen (Stockh., 1902-03); Vendell, Runomålet (Stockh., 1882-87), 36; Tjberg, Rågosvenskan (Stockh., 1940), 333.

⁸³ Vacillation is reported from Gamlakarleby (Finland), Lillhardal (Harjedalen), Fasterna (Uppland), Bargslagen (Varmland), Fryksdal (Varmland), Artemark (Dalsland), Asker (Närke), Södermanland, Västergötland, and Östergötland.

⁸⁴ Includes a large number of words: fisle, gnisle, krisle, krusle, pusle, rusle, risle, sysle, tusle, knussel, hassel, bissel, etc.

are tl-words taken up in modern Norwegian with the east Norwegian sl. Esle was introduced into literature by Henrik Wergeland, and bitterly opposed by many for its 'vulgar' sound. Some preferred to take it up with the tl-form of Old Norse.⁸⁵

Norway's other standard language, New Norse (Landsmål), being the creation of an etymologist, carefully maintains the lost distinction of sl and tl as in Old Norse: etla, litla, fetla, kitta, nella vs. hassel, vesle, pusle, beisel. This was a practical enough expedient, since Norway is split between dialects where these are all sl or all tl (where ll reigned, it would of course be indifferent), hence no dialect could feel slighted, and no dialect was wholly satisfied. In modern practice the tendency has been toward admitting sl for many of the tl-words.⁸⁶

For all of Scandinavia we may sum up the development of these sound clusters under the following heads:

(1) zl (tsl) and sl are assimilated as sl throughout Scandinavia, except in literary Swedish (betsel).

(2) tl is retained unchanged in the Faroes and Iceland, it is voiced to become ll in the Danish area (which includes southern Sweden), it is assimilated to sl in the Swedish and Norwegian dialects (by way of tsl, if our hypothesis is correct), except in a border area in southern Sweden.

(3) The resulting sl/fl in postvocalic position is retained in central Sweden and eastern Norway, varying from one to the other regionally and individually.

(4) North of a line running diagonally across Scandinavia from about 62° North on the Norwegian West coast to 60° North on the Swedish East coast sl has most commonly become ll or lls, especially in postvocalic position.

(5) West of the Norwegian mountains the sl has become tl, possibly by way of lls, a change paralleled by the dissimilation of ll to dl.

EINAR HAUGEN

University of Wisconsin

⁸⁵ Hamsun, Ibsen, see quotations in Norsk Ræksmåls-Ordbok

⁸⁶ The latest orthography (1938) writes firfisle, nesle, but lilla, kitta, and permits both spellings for etla and fetla

THE 1942 ANNUAL MEETING

THE announcements in the end pages of the June issue remain in force except as noted below.

1. Cancellation will occur only on definite advice from the Government that such meetings are undesirable. A committee of the four major national Councils has conferred with the Government in Washington and we been informed that such meetings should proceed according to plan. . . .

In event of late cancellation prompt notice will be sent to all members

2. The meeting will presumably be attended chiefly by Eastern members (primarily from in and reasonably near Greater New York). Western members who are able and interested to attend should avoid arranging large groups on particular trains. The meeting of 1943 is to be in Chicago.
3. The Circular will be omitted, but a headquarters hotel registration card sent out (about November 1). The headquarters hotel will, if it cannot accommodate members, secure nearby rooms.
4. The Program will be reduced by omitting (1) names of committeemen of Sections and Groups (except their Nominating Committees), (2) the Index, (3) MLA books except those of 1941-43.
5. The conflict of the Celtic and Arthurian Groups will be removed.

As our present membership exceeds the 1941 Supplement total, and numbers nearly 2000 in the New England and Middle Atlantic States, a normal attendance is as yet presumable. In 1917 at Yale attendance remained normal.

PERCY W. LONG
Chairman of the Program Committee

PMLA

PUBLICATIONS OF
THE MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA

Issued Quarterly

VOLUME LVII

DECEMBER, 1942

NUMBER 4, PART I

XLVIII

A DRUIDIC PROPHECY, THE FIRST IRISH SATIRE, AND A POEM TO RAISE BLISTERS

CERTAIN writings of antiquity, certain documents of early Celtic ecclesiastical history, and certain of the oldest Irish sagas reveal that the composition of poetry was practiced by the Irish pagans. The stylistic character of the pagan poetry has been rather generally ignored. Not that there is an abundance of specimens incontestably pagan in provenance; nevertheless, a number of poems have survived from Irish paganism, and though few are sufficient to establish the character of at least one style of pagan Irish verse.

One of the most unusual pieces of Irish heathen poetry is a prophecy, purportedly druidic, of the coming of St. Patrick.¹ It is to be found, in seemingly incomplete form, in a manuscript of the Liber Hymnorum,² in the Egerton copy of the Tripartite Life of St. Patrick (p. 34), and in the Leabhar Breac Homily on St. Patrick. An early Latin translation of this prophecy has survived in the Book of Armagh. The differences between this Latin version and the Irish versions are such as to indicate that neither the Irish original of the Latin translation nor the available Irish versions are true originals, since both the Irish and the Latin versions contain lines and phrases not common to the other, and exhibit differences in the sequence of some of their common lines. Here is the Irish version from the Liber Hymnorum, and the Latin version from the Book of Armagh, with translations that bring out their common elements and their differences.

¹ See K. Mulchrone, Belthu Phátraic (Dublin & London, 1939), p. 22, for a possibly complete version.

² The manuscript associated with the Library of the Franciscans, Dublin.

tícfá tal-cend
 dar muir merr-cend
 a brat toll-cend
 a chrand crom-cend
 a mias a n-iarthair a thige huile frigserat [fris gerat] a munter huile
 Amen Amen³

Adze-head will come
 over mad-head sea,
 his cloak hole-head,
 his staff crook-head,
 his table in the west of his house;
 all his household will answer, Amen,
 Amen.⁴

Adveniet asciciput cum suo ligno curuicipite et sua domu capite perforato.
 Incantabit nefas a sua mensa ex anteriore parte domus suæ:
 respondebit ei sua famiha tota, fiat, fiat.⁵

Adze-head will come,
 his staff crook-head,
 and his house hole-head.
 He will chant nonsense at his table from the rear of his house:
 all his family will answer him, amen,
 amen.

The stylistic parallelism of the Irish version should be remarked. This parallelism is exhibited not only in the similarity of the grammatical structure from line to line, but especially in the tendency toward a continuous end-rime and toward parallel assonantal interlacement between consecutive lines. Thus, the first four lines close with -cend, and the last two are knit by a rime on huile. The third and fourth lines are richly interwoven, every vowel sound in the third corresponding perfectly with every similarly-placed vowel sound in the fourth, and the end words—toll-cend and crom-cend—riming perfectly according to Irish rules for rime. Likewise, in the fifth and sixth lines, a thige huile is fairly similar in sound to a munter huile. All six lines contain an alliteration, an assonance, or both. Thus, there is alliteration on t in line one, on m in line two, and on c and ch in line four; and there is assonance on a in every line except the second, and assonance on ia between mias and n-iarthair in line five, and on ui between munter and huile in line six. Nor is the presence of an a sound scarcely unintended in the first word of all six lines; and of an e sound, in the last syllable of all six. Though all the devices of this prophecy are employed in other pagan Irish poems, such as the incantation and the hymn attributed to Amorgen,⁶ and the

³ The Irish Liber Hymnorum, edited by J. H. Bernard and R. Atkinson (London: Harrison and Sons, 1898), I, 100, the gloss to line 21. frigserat, in line 6, above, and in the edited source, should be fris·gerat ⁴ Ibid., II, 181.

⁵ Quoted in ibid., II, 181. Obviously, the Latin version lacks line 2 of the Irish version, and supplies "Incantabit nefas." If the equivalent of this expression should be supplied in the Irish version, the prophecy would possibly be restored to substantially its original form. But see K. Mulchrone, Bethu Phátraíe, p. 22.

⁶ See Owen Connellan, editor, Ossianic Society Transactions, v (1860), 232, 234–236, for an edition and translation of these two poems. The poems attributed to Amorgen occur in prayer to pagan divinities for long life attributed to an Irish bishop,⁷ nevertheless the prophecy combines these devices characteristically, being distinguished chiefly for the continuous assonance on a at the opening of the lines, and on e at their close.

This prophecy is almost certainly older in substance, though not necessarily in language, than that date in the seventh century on which the Latin version was written. There is no a priori objection in the substance to a date before Patrick's coming, since the poem is not directed especially at him, and since the Irish certainly knew of Christianity before Patrick's time, if only because of their trade with Gaul and Britain.⁸ The position of the altar "in the west of the house" is significant of the prophecy's antiquity. It seems plausible, certainly, to regard the prophecy as a bit of pagan propaganda, whatever its age. "Incantabit nefas" would hardly be the words, or their equivalent, of a Christian.

For prosodic purposes, to establish pagan authorship of the prophecy is not really crucial: it suffices to point out that the poem was already old enough to be corrupt in the seventh century and that it was ascribed in that century to the druids, who were by no means extinct at the time. Under these circumstances, it is hardly conceivable that the poetic style of the prophecy was not characteristically pagan. It would have to be at least superficially so to pass muster as the work of a druid, and it certainly was not drawn from Latin models. Indeed, the prosody of the poem is quite as indigenous as that of other early Irish poems of pagan character.

In turning to the "first satire made in Ireland,"⁹ we examine a poem that is not Christian in either substance or technique, though preserved in a gloss in the Bodleian Amra Choluimb Chille:

Cen cholt for crib cernini, cen gert ferbba fora n-asa athrinni, various sources—Book of Ballymote, Book of Leinster, Book of Lecan, Bodleian MS Laud 610. A most useful edition of the two poems mentioned is to be found in R. Thurneysen, Mittelirische Verslehren, in Irische Texte, III, 35–36, 61–62. Thurneysen furnishes, side by side, the versions from Book of Ballymote, Book of Leinster, and Laud 610. The attributions to Amorgen occur in the sources.

⁷ For an edition and translation of this prayer, see Kuno Meyer, Miscellanea Hibernica, University of Illinois Studies in Language and Literature, II, no. 4 (1916), 19–21. The attribution occurs in the source.

⁸ For this trade as well as for cultural relationships, see Heinrich Zimmer, "Über direkte Handelsverbindungen Westgalliens mit Irland im Altertum und frühen Mittelalter," five parts, in Sitz d. k. preuss. Akad. d. Wissensch. (1909 and 1910), and C. H. Slover, "Early Literary Channels between Britain and Ireland," Univ. of Texas Bulletins, nos. 2648 (1926) and 2743 (1927).

⁹ The Bodleian Amra Choluimb Chille, edited by Whitley Stokes, Revue Celtique, XX, 159.

cen adba fir iar ndruba disoirchi, cen díl daimí ríssi,
 ro sain Brisse ¹⁰

Without food speedily on a platter.
 without a cow's milk whereon a calf thrives, without a man's habitation after the staying of darkness, without payment of a band of story-tellers, be that (the fate) of Bress ¹¹

As in the druidic prophecy, a grammatical parallelism is reflected in a parallelism of alliteration, assonance, and rime. The lines of the satire being longer, the poet has more scope for a variety of device. Hence, in addition to almost continuous entrance rime and dissyllabic end-rime, the verse displays a link of alliteration¹² between the last word of each line and the first word, following the entrance rime, of the next; for example, cernini gert, aithrinni adba, disoirchi díl, except that, since there is no entrance rime joining the last two lines, the link in the last line is supplied by the first word of the line. Further, each line except the last, which contains a proper name, has at least one pair of alliterating words. As with the druidic prophecy, all the devices of the first satire are duplicated in other early Irish poems.

The poem written to raise blisters also exhibits the characteristic pagan Irish prosodic devices of an alliterative link between the end and beginning of consecutive lines, and of continuous rime at the beginning and end of grammatical units and verse units. The poem is preserved, in somewhat different versions, in manuscripts of Cormac's Glossary. Its original setting was an old Irish saga.

Maile baire gaire Caieur
 Combeodutar celtra cath Caier
 Caier dibá Caier díra Caier foró fomara fochara Caier.¹³

Evil, death, and short life to Caier,
 May spears of battle slay Caier,

¹⁰ Ibid., 158. This satire has been edited more recently and more fully by Vernam Hull; see his "Cairpre mac Edaine's Satire on Bres mac Eladam," Zeitschrift für celtische Philologie, xviii, 63-69. ¹¹ Stokes, Amra Choluimb Chille, 159.

¹² For a discussion of this device, see Kuno Meyer, "Ueber die Älteste irische Dichtung, in two parts, in Abhandlungen der Königlich Preussischen Akad. d. Wissenschaft, 1913, phil.-hist. Klasse (Berlin, 1914).

¹³ Three Irish Glossaries, edited by Whitley Stokes (London: Williams and Norgate, 1862), p. 24. For another reading (Yellow Book of Lecan), see Sanas Cormaic, edited by Kuno Meyer, Anecdota from Irish Manuscripts IV (Halle and Dublin, 1912), §698.

The rejected of the land and earth is Caier;
Beneath the mounds and the rocks be Caier¹⁴

Notice the use of the name Caier to provide the end-rime in lines one, two, and four, and the entrance rime among the three phrases of line three, and the link between the end of line two and the beginning of line three. Other graces are: (1) alliteration on c joining the end of line one and the beginning of line two, (2) the same sort of link on f between lines three and four; (3) the rich rime in line one—maile baire gaire Caieur; (4) the rich rimes in lines three and four—dibá dīra, fomara fochara; (5) the alliteration in each line. There is not a single word in the four lines that is not linked in one or more ways to corresponding or adjoining words in the same or adjoining lines.

In the saga from which the poem is drawn, the poem actually did raise three blisters on Caier, and thereby caused him to lose his kingly rule, since no one in early Ireland could be a king or a high poet who was not physically perfect. In short, the poem was designed as a magic formula.

The effect of the poet's satire is feared in Ireland to this day.¹⁵ In pre-Christian times and later, certain types of satire were delivered against the victim in an elaborate ceremony, involving an assemblage of the nine grades of poets and a facing toward the four winds. Nor was the execution of a satire the only occasion on which the poets participated in magical proceedings. The ancient Irish practiced Teinm Laeghdha, Illumination of Rimes, in order to identify dead people and animals. This procedure was sometimes accompanied, before the Christianization of the country, by a sacrifice to, or an invocation of, idols. When practiced without idolatry, it was termed Dichetal do Chennaibh; and, in this form, it survived the triumph of Christianity. Specimens of the poetry used in these illuminations have been preserved. One of these poems was composed, so its setting reveals, in order to accomplish the identification of the skull of a dog. Here is one used to identify a man:

Niconruba arduene
niconruba for Luigne contoboing nais conept niconruba torc nī contorgi
nī conarberta lige Lómna¹⁶

¹⁴ Translation of a similar version by Eugene O'Curry in his On the Manners and Customs of the Ancient Irish (London, 1873), II, 218. The translation is, to be sure, partly guesswork.

¹⁵ For the background of this fear, see F. N. Robinson, "Satirists and Enchanters in Early Irish Literature," in Studies in the History of Religions presented to Homer Troy (New York, 1912), pp. 95-130.

¹⁶ Three Irish Glossaries, p. 34. Variant readings in Kuno Meyer, Sanas Cormaic, §1018.

He has not been killed by people
 He has not been killed by the people of Lighne
 He has not been killed by a wild boar
 He has not been killed by a fall
 He has not died on his bed—Lomna¹⁷

Evidently, this poem is related prosodically to the three poems already examined by virtue of its grammatical parallelism and its consequent approach to entrance rime and end-assonance. Otherwise, the linear refinements so pronounced in the others are scarcely present.

From this brief survey, it is possible to suggest the ultimate source of much in the contour and technique of one style, perhaps the oldest, of the verse of the Irish pagans. The basic characteristic uniting all four of the magical or semi-magical poems presented above is simply repetition—of a name, a sound, a grammatical formula. Moreover, this repetition is practiced for magical purposes. It is little more, at root, than the ceaseless repetition of the victim's name, as in much death-dealing magic. On the other hand, the matured satiric, prophetic, devotional style must have been fed from other channels also, and on repetition. The praise of the godhead, in primitive poetry from ancient Egypt to Hawaii, relies for much of its effect on formulas of a repetitious character—formulas that create, through their culminative influence, a sort of hypnotic spell, a sort of trance. The genius of what fragments survive of Irish pagan poetry consists in its systematization of devices that have remained sporadic even among peoples of a relatively high degree of literary culture. We see in the Irish pagan poems of worship, malediction, prophecy, and divination the unique union of an uncontaminated primitive psychology with a degree of artistic or ornamental elaboration unknown to non-Celtic literature. Much the same phenomenon appears in the fields of early Irish illumination and design, although, in illumination, the surviving specimens are Christian in substance.

It would be idle to suppose that we could fully appreciate the power of the early Irish verse, for we should need to become more consistently primitive, and more keen of ear—more sensitive to the magical echoing of a web of harmonious sounds, a web patterned ultimately on the psychology of the primitive mind. But at least we can see the historical significance of this verse: its character obviates the necessity some theorists have felt for discovering the sources of the parallelism and the other devices of early Irish verse in Classical rhetoric, brought to Ireland either as a consequence of a flight of Gaulish scholars in the fifth century

¹⁷ Translated in Eugene O'Curry, On the Manner and Customs of the Ancient Irish, II, 210. This translation must be taken as merely tentative.

(Kuno Meyer¹⁸), or as a consequence of the introduction of Latin Christianity and its learning (Polheim,¹⁹ Wilhelm Meyer²⁰) We assert, for we have shown here, that the Irish pagan poetry preserved in Irish Christian documents displays all the devices attributed by certain theorists to the influence of "rimed prose," and a number of other devices also We further assert—for we trust that our case above is sound—that the devices of one style of the oldest Irish verse are of indigenous origin, and have their source, not in Classical rhetoric, but in primitive magic

JAMES TRAVIS

Tulsa, Oklahoma

¹⁸ Kuno Meyer, Learning in Ireland in the Fifth Century and the Transmission of Letters (Dublin, 1913)

¹⁹ Polheim, Die lateinische Reimprosa (1925), especially on Columbanus

²⁰ Wilhelm Meyer, "Die Verskunst der Iren in rythmischen lateinischen Gedichten," Nachrichten von der Koniglichen Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Gottingen, Phil.-hist. Klasse (Berlin, 1916), 605-644.

ARCHBISHOP WULFSTAN'S COMMONPLACE BOOK

MISS CCCC 190 and 265, Bodley 718 (2632), Junius 121 (5232), Nero A 1, and Bibl. Paris MS Fonds Latin 3182, all from the end of the tenth or beginning of the eleventh century, contain a great many common entries relating to the affairs of a bishop and have been studied with some care by several scholars.¹ Miss Mary Bateson nearly fifty years ago made it clear that the theological and legal material in these MSS really constituted a sort of bishop's commonplace book, and she identified a number of the random excerpts found here in such bewildering confusion. It is my purpose to present some evidence that Archbishop Wulfstan early in his episcopacy at Worcester made extensive use of the material collected here and perhaps directed its assembling as a part of his attempt to regulate the practices of both bishops and lesser clergy under his supervision. To the list given above must be added two other MSS which contain the same excerpts in somewhat the same order—Copenhagen Royal Library Gl. Kgl. 1595,² and Bodleian Barlow 37. It is extremely difficult, if not now impossible, to fix the relationship among these MSS, but it is generally agreed that they represent a collection made at Worcester early in the eleventh century, and in the following discussion I shall deal with what must have been the original collection rather than with the contents of any particular MS.

Though these MSS have been studied in several connections, many of the fragmentary paragraphs and sentences interspersed among the larger works remain to be identified. Miss Bateson sifted out a number of these extracts in CCCC 265 and suggested connections with the other MSS. But until the purpose to which the collection was put is better known, no accurate description of the contents can be given. The principal works here copied are the penitentials of Pseudo-Theodore and Egbert of York, liturgical directions from many sources, extracts from canon law relating to the affairs of a bishop, two letters of Alcuin, the Capitulare Episcoporum falsely attributed to Egbert and now known to be a Carolingian capitulary, perhaps of the Council of Aachen³ (802), Ælfric's pastoral letters for Wulfsige and for Wulfstan, Wulfstan's Latin homily on baptism (Napier iv), chapters from Amalarius of Metz's De Regula Canonicorum, and the Capitula of Theodulf translated as Ecclesiastical Institutes in CCCC 201. In addition to these recognizable works are very many short chapters and sentences interspersed apparently without plan, but most of them relating to episcopal duties. In most cases where they do not so apply, they can be shown, in at least one MS, to have been used by Wulfstan.

¹ Mary Bateson, "A Worcester Cathedral Book of Ecclesiastical Collections Made about 1000 A.D.," English Historical Review, x (1895), 712-731, Roundell, Earl of Selborne, Ancient Facts and Fictions concerning Churches and Tithes (1892), Leibermann, Die Gesetze der Angelsachsen, I, xx ff.; M. R. James, A Descriptive Catalogue of the Manuscripts in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; F. Madan, A Summary Catalogue of Western Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library (Oxford, 1922, 1937), B. Fehr, Die Hirtenbriefe Alfons des Ersten, Bibliothek der angelsächsischen Prosa, IX (1914), x-xxII, J. Raith, Pseudo-Egbert's Penitential, Bibl. der ags. Prosa, XIII (1933), x-xIII.

² I am indebted to Miss Dorothy Whitelock for calling this MS to my attention.

It may be well in the beginning to list the external evidences of Wulfstan's connections with some of these MSS. CCCC 265 opens with a monastic profession which specifically names Wulfstan,⁴ and the evidence of date, both from palaeography and content, makes it certain that Archbishop Wulfstan the homilist is the Wulfstan referred to. The same MS contains penitential letters of Wulfstan issued under the name of Lupus while he was still Bishop of London,⁵ some letters addressed to him as Archbishop by Pope John XVIII, and a letter from him to an unnamed pope.⁶ These letters with one exception appear also in the Copenhagen MS and in Barlow 37. It has long been known that CCCC 265 originated at Worcester, and the profession to monkhood dates the first collecting of this material in Wulfstan's episcopacy.⁷

WULFSTAN'S USE OF THE LARGER WORKS IN THESE MSS

The larger works in these MSS are nearly all from the documents of the Carolingian period, to which the Benedictine reformers went for the regulatory literature they needed.⁸ They consist of canons, laws, penitentials, and expositions of the mass, and are nearly all in Latin, except that the second part of CCCC 190⁹ contains translations into Old English of many of these pieces. It is just such a collection as a reforming bishop ³ See Lord Selborne, op cit., pp. 37-45, 227-245.

⁴ Ego frater N promitto deo omnibusque sanctis eius castitatem / corporis mei secundum (patrum?) decreta et secundum / ordinem mihi (blank above the line, imponendum) seruare, domno / presule wulstano presente. Quoted from James II, 16.

⁵ For the identification of Archbishop Wulfstan with the Wulfstan who was Bishop of London from 996 to 1003, see Dorothy Whitelock, "A Note on Wulfstan the Homilist," E H R, LII (1937), 460-465.

⁶ These are printed by Miss Bateson in the article referred to above, pp. 728-730.

⁷ Liebermann says (p. xx), "erst dem Domkloster Worcester gehorig, um 1025." Since Wulfstan resigned Worcester to Leofsige in 1016 and presumably took up residence at York, the collection must have been made before that date.

⁸ See the list published by Miss Bateson in "Rules for Monks and Secular Canons after the Revival under King Eadgar," E H R, ix (1894), 690-708.

⁹ James divides the book into three volumes, after pp. 294 and 364. His Vol. II contains the translations, and Vol. III is made up entirely of penitentials and is in English.

of the early eleventh century would need, and Wulfstan's use of the works collected here increases the probability that he ordered it made as a guide to his own duties as archbishop. His interest in law and zeal for reform are attested by his authorship of the later edicts of Æðelred's reign, v, vi, vii, viii, ix, x Atr.—the codes issued from Enham in 1008 and those dependent upon them (see Liebermann, III, 168-169)—and by the eagerness with which he followed up the suggestions made to him by Ælfric in the pastoral letters, as well as by nature of his homilies.

1. Theodulf's Capitula, one of the most popular collections of canons in England in the tenth and eleventh centuries,¹⁰ Wulfstan used in his Canons of Edgar and in vii Æðelred.¹¹ Theodulf, Bishop of Orleans under Charlemagne, was not only one of the most learned and humane of Frankish churchmen,¹² but was also an assiduous collector and codifier, and after he became bishop equipped himself with all the canonical literature necessary for the reform of the church and the discipline of the clergy. In a poem entitled "De Libris Quos Legere Solebam et Qualiter Fabulae Poetarum a Philosophis Mystice Pertractentur" he lists the works he has studied and records days and nights spent with the fathers—Gregory, Augustine, Hilary, Jerome, Ambrose, Isidore, and Cyprian the Martyr.¹³ He must have seemed a model to the reforming bishops of a less fortunate age, and it is not surprising that his Capitula should have had so wide a use nor that Wulfstan should have borrowed from his De Ordine Baptismi for his own homily on baptism.¹⁴ The Capitula took the form of a pastoral letter to the clergy and for that reason also was particularly apt.

2. The penitential falsely attributed to Theodore, which is in the Corpus MSS and in Nero A 1, Wulfstan used in the Canons of Edgar.¹⁵ It also is a Frankish compilation of the ninth century which came into use in the late Old English period.¹⁶

¹⁰ See Jost, "Einige Wulfstantexte und ihre Quellen," Anglia, lvi (1932), 293. The Capitula is found in CCCC 201 and 265, an OE translation, which Thorpe published under the title Ecclesiastical Institutes (Ancient Laws, p. 469), is in CCCC 201; a part of the OE version is in Bodley 265, and two homilies in Assmann's Angelsächsische Homilien und Heiligenleben (Bibl. der ags. Prosa, III), pp. 138 and 144, are dependent on the Capitula.

¹¹ Jost, op. cit., pp. 292-294, gives a list of corresponding passages.

¹² Raby gives a brief sketch of him in Christian-Latin Poetry (Oxford, 1927), pp. 171-177. His works, poetry and prose, are in Migne, P. L., cv, and his poetry in M. G. H., Poet. Car., I, 437 ff. ¹³ M. G. H., Poet. Car., I, 543.

¹⁴ Jost, op. cit., proves Wulfstan's indebtedness, first in the Latin excerpts of iv, and then in the English elaboration of them in v. rv had a wide circulation in these MSS, it is in CCCC 190 and 265, in Barlow 37, and in Copenhagen Kgl. S. 1595.

¹⁵ Jost, pp. 288-301.

¹⁶ See T. P. Oakley, English Penitential Discipline and Anglo-Saxon Law in their Joint Influence. Columbia Studies in History, Economics, and Public Law, Vol. cvii (New York, 1923), pp. 31-32 and ch. rv.

3. The short piece in English entitled De Regula Canonicorum found in Junius 121 is a translation of a chapter from Amalarius of Metz's Regula Canonicorum (Migne, P.L., cv, 932), the original Latin of which appears in CCCC 265 and Copenhagen Kgl. S. 1595 in two places, ff. 18–23 and ff. 80–82. Jost, in the article cited above, has shown that Wulfstan himself made the translation that and he used it in both the Institutes of Polity and in Homily v.

4. Ælfric's pastoral letters for Wulfstan are all found in these MSS, in CCCC 265 the two Latin letters, numbered by Fehr 2 and 3; in 190 the same two Latin letters, the letter for Wulfsgie, and the Old English form of 2 and 3, that is, all of Ælfric's pastoral letters, in Junius 121 the letter for Wulfsgie and the second OE letter for Wulfstan; and in the Copenhagen MS the two Latin letters for Wulfstan.¹⁷

5. Wulfstan's Latin homily on baptism, Napier iv, made up of excerpts from Theodulf, Jesse of Amiens, and Amalarius, is in the two Corpus MSS, in Barlow 37, and in the Copenhagen MS

6. The much-discussed Jura quae sacerdotes debent habere, falsely ascribed to Egbert, Archbishop of York in the eighth century, under the title Excerptiones Egberti, forms an important part of six of these MSS—CCCC 265 and 190, Bod. 178, Nero A 1, Paris Bibl. Nat. Lat. 3182, and Barlow 37. Wulfstan may have used this work in the Canons of Edgar.¹⁸ The appearance of this piece in CCCC 265, Bod. 718, and Nero A 1 engaged the attention of Lord Selborne, and he discussed the MSS with care in connection with the history of tithes; for the tripartite division of tithes entered English practice through this work, and Selborne was concerned to prove that it could not have been the work of Egbert but identified it as a part of the Frankish Capitulare Episcoporum, laws for the clergy drawn up at a synod held under Charlemagne in the early years of the empire.¹⁹ Miss Bateson, in the article cited, described the relation of the version in 190 with those in 265 and in Nero A 1. The authorship of the Canons of Edgar, which arises in this connection, has only recently been settled. Lord Selborne, believing the work really dated from Edgar's reign, attributed it to Oswald, a nephew of the celebrated Bishop Oswald, and Stubbs thought Dunstan the author,²⁰ but these were mere guesses, and Jost²¹ has produced strong evidence that the author was Wulfstan.

¹⁷ See Fehr, Die Hirtenbriefe Ælfrics, pp. x–xxxii, apparently he did not know of the existence of the Copenhagen MS.

¹⁸ Selborne, p. 217. The question turns upon the authenticity of the version of the Canons of Edgar in Junius 121.

¹⁹ See Pertz, M.G.H. : Legum, i, 87; and Boretius, M.G.H. : Cap. Reg. Franc., p. 105.

²⁰ Memorials of St. Dunstan, Rolls. Series (London, 1874), p. cvii.

²¹ "Emige Wulfstantexte," pp. 288–301.

7. Another possible connection between the major works in these MSS and Wulfstan's writings is with the selection found in 190, pp. 205-212, and in 265, p. 194, entitled "De Officiis Diurnalium siue Nocturnalium" from the second book, "De Officiis et Orationibus Canoniarum Horarum" of Rabanus Maurus' De Institutione Clericorum. This is the work translated into Old English as the Benedictine Office in CCC 201, pp. 1-8.²² Feiler thinks Wulfstan the author of the shortened Old English form, and the stylistic similarities are considerable. If so, he found the Latin text in the material at Worcester and had it incorporated into the original of these MSS.

WULFSTAN'S USE OF SCATTERED EXCERPTS

The use of these larger works in his writings, however, does not prove that Wulfstan ordered this collection made, nor that he worked from something resembling these very MSS. More telling is the evidence from some of the random sentences and smaller excerpts scattered through the collections which found their way into Wulfstan's work.

In CCC 265, p. 7, in CCC 190, p. 173, and in Barlow 37, p. 34, is a letter from Alcuin to Archbishop Æðelhard which contains this sentence:

Legitur vero in libro Gildi Brettonum sapientissimi, quod idem ipsi Brettones propter rapinas et avaritiam principum, propter iniquitatem et iniustitiam iudicum, propter desidiā et pigritiam praedicationis episcoporum, propter luxuriam et malos mores populi patriam perdiderunt. Caveamus, haec eadem nostris temporibus vitia inolescere, quatenus benedictio divina nobis patriam conservet in prosperitate bona, quam nobis in sua misericordia perdonare dignata est.

On p. 140 of CCC 190 the first sentence quoted above stands alone under the rubric "De Interitu Brittonum." In Wulfstan's "Sermo ad Anglos," Napier xxxiii, p. 166, note, he says:

An þeodwita was on Brytta tidum, Gildas hatte, se awrat be heora misdædum, hu hi mid heora synnan swa oferlice swyðe god gegræmedon, þæt he let æt nystan Engla here heora eard gewinnan and Brytta duguðe fordon mid ealle.

Alcuin is saying to Æðelhard that the sufferings of the English during the viking raids of his day (790-803) were due, like those of the Britons that Gildas described, to the sins of the people, and that is exactly Wulfstan's point in the "Sermo ad Anglos" about the ravages of the Danes in the eleventh century. The apt reference to Gildas was almost certainly suggested to him by this passage in Alcuin's letter, and the separate sentence here copied out without any apparent reason becomes understandable if we regard these excerpts as collected by Wulfstan for his own uses. Furthermore, in the next sentence he translates Alcuin's own list of evils, transposing and rearranging, as is his custom in making translations, for the sake of the rhythm of the sentence:

²² It was edited by Emil Feiler, "Das Benediktiner-Offizium ein altenglisches Brevier aus dem 11. Jahrhundert," Anglistische Forschungen, iv, (1901). See also Zupitza in Herrig's Archiv, lxxxiv, 1, Miss Bateson in EHR, ix (1894), 707, and Fehr, "Das Benediktiner-Offizium und die Beziehungen zwischen Ælfric und Wulfstan," Eng. Stud., xlv (1913), 337-346.

propter luxuriam et malos mores populi and þæt wæs geworden, þæs he sæde, þurh gelæreda regolbryce and þurh læwedra propter rapinas et avaritiam principum propter lahbryce, þurh ricra reafiac and ðurh gitsunge wohgestreona, þurh leode iniquitatem et iniustitiam iudicum propter desidiam et pigritiam unlaga and ðurh wohdomas, ðurh bisceopa asolcennesse and unsnotornesse praedicationis episcoporum and ðurh lyðre yrhðe godes bydela

Just before these sentences and immediately following the so-called Excerptiones Egberti is a short piece headed "De captivitate iudeorum" which is on the same subject as the sentences from Alcuin's letters, namely, a disobedient people being punished by God by wars and defeat at the hands of foreign invaders. This was one of the ways of Providence of which Wulfstan never tired of finding examples, and he has not neglected this one. Homily II, which is a brief survey of Hebrew history through the life of Christ, is based on Ælfric's "De Initio Creature" (Thorpe, C.H., I, 8-28), which Wulfstan follows fairly closely in outline, though he condenses some material and omits some. On p. 14²⁻⁹ is a statement that, on account of their sins, in the days of King Zedechiah God permitted the Jews to be taken captive by heathen people and their leaders to be slain. There is no mention of Zedechiah in Ælfric's homily, but this short passage in CCC 190 says:

Vere priusquam pagani deuastauerunt totum regnum iudeorum / domino permittente pro peccatis populi. ad ultimum uenerunt in / hierusalem ubi erat rex sedechias & omnes principes eius et / capta ciuitate occiderunt duos filios sedechie regis & / omnes principes regni occiderunt gladio coram rege & ipsum / regem excecauerunt & secum duxerunt captiuum in babyloniam.

Wulfstan had apparently collected passages on this subject, as one takes notes on passages pertinent to the subject on which one is writing, and when he found a place for this sentence in his homily he worked it in.²³

Another passage containing apparently random excerpts has been used

²³ Ælfric has another survey of the Old and New Testaments in the letter to Sigward called by the MS "Libellus de ueteri testamento et nouo" (ed S J Crawford, EETS 160 [1922]), and it contains a reference to Zedechiah. But there is no other connection between this work and Wulfstan's homily, and the verbal correspondence between Wulfstan and CCC 190 is much closer.

by Wulfstan On p 2 of CCCC 190, under the rubric "Incipit de Initio Creature," following passages taken from Genesis are the ten commandments. The statement of them is identical with Wulfstan ix, 60¹¹ 61³, and this is significant, because both forms shorten Exodus xx 2, omit 4 and 10, and give the version in Deut. v 21, for 9 and 10,²⁴ Jost found the same form of the Decalogue in MS Boulogne-sur-Mer No 63,²⁵ to which Fehr had called attention in his edition of Ælfric's pastoral letters, and Jost remarks upon the significance of finding this source for Wulfstan's homily in a MS containing material Ælfric used as a source and containing also Ælfric's private letter to Wulfstan.²⁶ The Boulogne-sur-Mer MS has two other items in common with this group, the passage from Isidore's De Ecclesiasticis Officiis and the excerpt called De Septem Gradibus Ecclesiasticis, both of which Ælfric used in the pastoral letters. What the relation of this MS is to what must have been originally compiled at Worcester it is impossible to say without further investigation. Its connection with Wulfstan's work appears to be limited to this passage and one other sentence, and CCCC 190 has many more parallels.

CCCC 190 begins, according to a rubric at the bottom of p 2, with the Penitential of Theodore.²⁷ Actually the Penitential of Pseudo-Theodore here indicated begins on p. 12 and is interrupted at p. 94 with the insertion of completely irrelevant material. A rubric reading "In Nomine Domini" introduces a short sermon on the necessity of Christian unity and the transitory nature of worldly power.²⁸ The first sentences in it read:

Primo omnium admonemus omnes homines ut super / omnia unum deum omnipotentem toto corde. tota anima / & tota mente diligant & ut fideliter credant unum / deum in trinitate & trinitatem in unitate esse colendam / Deinde ortamus ut proximos suos tamquam se ipsos dili / gant. ac deinde ut certa precepta domini diligenter / custodiant, Petimus quoque. ut predicatoribus sancte dei ecclesie / humiliter obediant. ita ut sit pax & concordia & una / nimitas cum omni populo cristiano

Wulfstan's Homily ix, De cristianitate, 64³⁻⁷, reads:

²⁴ There are the following small scribal variants MS loquaris for loqueris, proximum tuum falsum for proximum falsum, and preceptum moysi for moysi preceptum.

²⁵ "Enige Wulfstantexte," pp. 278-279

²⁶ See Fehr, pp 190-192, and pp 222-227 For contents of the MS, pp x-xrv

²⁷ The rubric reads "Penitenciale Theodori Archiepiscopi." Mr. Neil Ker pointed out to me that "Theodori" has been written over "Egberti." The rubric has no relation to what immediately follows.

²⁸ This homily appears to be made up of passages chosen from different sources, for while it has a certain unity of subject, it has none of style. There is a long ubi sunt passage in it, rather poetic in feeling, sentences of which are taken from Defensor's Liber Scintillarum, Bk. lxxix (Migne⁸⁸).

Credite ergo, karissimi, patrem et filium et spiritum sanctum, unum deum in trinitate et trinitatem in unitate, et diligite eum semper et colite ex toto corde sed et proximos uestros diligite, sicut et uos metipsos, et prout uultis, ut faciant uobis homines, ita et uos facite illis

These sentences in IX are among the few for which Jost found no source in his study of the homily, and it seems to me clear that Wulfstan was adapting them from this excerpt in MS 190. This is made more likely by his further borrowing from the same short sermon. Two sentences down occurs this passage:

deus pater noster est & ecclesia mater nostra quos debemus / semper honorare & super omnia diligere, A cristo enim / cristiani sunt nominati nam spiritaliter deus pater noster est et aeclesia mater nostra, quos debemus semper honorare, and the first sentence of IX is, "A Cristo enim cristiani sunt nominati." The first of these sentences Jost found in the Boulogne-sur-Mer MS, but for the second he has no exact source.²⁹

Wulfstan IX, 61¹¹⁻¹³, reads:

This short homily ends at the top of p. 96 of the MS, after which there is a blank space for a rubric, then an excerpt filling almost two pages which deals with the sin of despoiling the church and cites examples of powerful people who have come to evil by so doing. The first part of it is taken from the third part of De Pressuris Ecclesiasticis Libellus of Atto of Vercelli (Migne CXXXIV, 87ff.), though the sentences are rearranged and the whole organization changed. Sometimes the sentences are rewritten entirely, and the latter part of the excerpt has no model in Atto's chapter. The first sentences agree word for word³⁰ with Wulfstan IX, 61¹³⁻¹⁹, "ecclesia enim . . . lacerant ecclesiam."

Further down in the MS is this sentence:

omnis enim qui ecclesiam dei expohat. & eius predia uel do/naria inuadit sacrilegi reus existit.

Wulfstan IX, 61¹⁹⁻²⁰, reads:

Omnis itaque, qui aeccliam dei expohat uel in aliqua re nocuerit, sacrilegi reus existit.

Then follows in the MS citations from the canons of the punishment due those who alienate church property, with examples of evil-doers, and this Wulfstan sums up in the sentence (61^{20-62¹}), "inimicus enim Cristi efficitur omnis, qui ecclesiasticas res iniuste usurpare conatur." Then comes in Wulfstan's homily the sentence with which this excerpt in the MS closes, "de quo et Gregorius dicit:³¹ si quis aecclesiam dei³² denudauerit uel sanctimonia uiolauerit, anathema sit, ad quod respondentes omnes dixerunt amen." In Homily x, where Wulfstan is translating and elaborating the passages in ix, he quotes Gregory's statement (67²²⁻²⁴) and translates it:

²⁹ Pp 277, 279

³⁰ Except that the MS reads "et ideo" and the homily "ideoque" (l 14).

se ðe godes cyrican, he cwæð, rype oððe reafige oððe halignessa grið brece, a he forwyrðe, and Romana witan him andwyrðan sona and anmodlice cwædon, amen, calle

The words "Romana witan," for which there is no source in the Latin, he probably took from p. 96 of the MS which quotes "canon romanus dicit, nemo au/deat nudare ecclesiam cristi." There is no case in which either ix or x stands closer in phraseology to Atto's chapter than does the MS excerpt.

What the foregoing citations show is that almost all the material for ix, 60⁶-62³, is found in these scattered pages (1-2, 94-97) of CCCC 190, inserted without apparent reason at the beginning and into the middle of Pseudo-Theodore's Penitential. Some are the very passages for which Jost did not find an exact source, and they are not mentioned in the index of the MS. It looks very much as if Wulfstan had had added to the substantial large works which he found in the library at Worcester short excerpts of this kind which he planned to use in his sermons, and that the scribe of the MS, who also made the index, not recognizing them and not being able to make anything of them, simply omitted them from the index.³³ The foliation shows them to have been part of the original MS.

Less significant than the other cases but perhaps worth mentioning is the entry in 190, p. 162, 265, p. 3, Nero A 1, f. 126, called in the Corpus MSS "Incipit admonitio spiritalis doctrine" and in Nero A 1 "De pastore & predicatore," which is a collection of patristic and biblical passages, identical with many that Wulfstan uses, on the obligation of priests to teach, rebuke, and urge to repentance.

No one of these borrowings would of itself establish the fact that the original from which all these MSS come served as a sort of notebook for Wulfstan in which he had collected both the large works and small separate items of which he had need as archbishop and homilist; but the number of them is impressive, especially since it is Wulfstan's use of the materials that gives to the entries on pp. 1-2, 94-97, and 139-140 their unity and their meaning.

³¹ 190 has "gregorius quoque ait" ³² 190, "cristi"

³³ This is not the only discrepancy between the index and the actual contents. See Miss Bateson, E.H.R., x, 717

There are two other connections between Wulfstan's work and this group of MSS. Adso's Libellus de Anticristi, most popular of all treatments of a popular subject in England in the tenth and eleventh centuries, and one of the sources of Ælfric's statements about Antichrist in the introduction to his first series of homilies (Thorpe I, 2-6), and through that and directly in one place the source of Wulfstan's eschatological homilies, appears in CCC 190, p. 281, as "Epistola Adsonis Monachi ad Gerbergam Reginam De Anticristo"³⁴

Finally, among the liturgical material which makes up a large part of the collection in these MSS is a section on the offices for Ash Wednesday which includes a sermon by Abbo of St. Germain under the rubric (190), "Qualiter Penitentes in Cena Domini in ecclesiam introducuntur." The Latin sermon is in CCC 190, pp. 253-259, Nero A 1, f. 159^b; Copenhagen Kgl. S. 1595, ff. 26-30,³⁵ and there is a translation into Old English in CCC 190, pp. 353-359, entitled "Sermo in Cena Domini ad Penitentes." The translation is the most literal rendering of a Latin text into Old English that I have ever examined. It is quite unlike any of Wulfstan's translations of which we have any knowledge, and there is no reason to suppose that he had anything to do with it except to order it made, for he did rewrite the Old English version in the form that appears in Napier xxxii. The case for Wulfstan's authorship of xxxii has never been carefully examined. The homily was attributed to him by Becher in Wulfstans Homilien (Leipzig, 1910), pp. 13-18, and by Miss Whitelock in Sermo Lupi ad Anglos (London, 1939), p. 14, "on stylistic grounds." I wish to offer further proof of its authenticity.

A comparison of xxxii with the Old English version in the MS and with the Latin yields evidence of Wulfstan's customary method of dealing with a text. The familiar leofan men replaces mine gebroðru ða leofestan of the OE and fratres karissimi of the Latin. In one place in the MS (p. 358, l. 18) mine gebroðru is glossed above the line by a scribe who evidently knew for whose use the translation had been made, "I ð men" —the abbreviation for "vel leofan men." Familiar tautological elaborations occur as follows:³⁶

³⁴ The only other pre-Conquest English MS containing Adso's work is also connected with Wulfstan. It is Vespasian D II which contains on f. 28^b Wulfstan's Latin homily on Antichrist (xi), and on f. 29 under the rubric "De Die Iudicii Sermo" a shortened form of the same.

³⁵ It is also in Vitellius A 7, f. 65^b. See Fehr's Hortenbriefe, p. 248. It has been edited by d'Achery in Spicilegium, I, 337, and is in Migne 132, 764.

³⁶ In the comparison of phrases I list the form in Napier's xxxii with page and line number, the OE in 190, and the Latin original from the same MS.

	XXXII	OE in MS	Latin
153
12	gescop and geworhte	gesceop	fecit
15	lærde and faste bebead	bebead	commendat
16	habban and healdan	to habenne	habere
20	on ealre myrhðe and on ealre mærhðe	ealne wuldor	omnem gloriam
22	næfre he ne swulte ne deað ne þolode ne sar ne sorge næfre ne gebide	næfre he ne swulte	numquam moreretur
154
4	sarig and sorhful	besarigende and be- hreowsiende	dolens et penitens
17	laþjað and logjað	lædað	mittimus
21	godes lare and lage	godes willan	voluntatem dei

Wulfstan's favorite georne occurs without any model in OE or Latin on p. 153¹⁵, 155⁸, 155¹⁶, swiðe georne, 155²², 155²⁷. Oft and gelome, a very common phrase in Wulfstan's homilies, is on p. 155¹⁰. The customary admonition to virtue at the end of his homilies, usually phrased, Eala, leofan men, utan do swa us þearf is,³⁷ as characteristic of his style as his fondness for intensifying adverbs, appears at the end of this homily in this form (155²⁸⁻³¹): eala leofan men, utan don ealle, swa swa us þearf is, utan helpan ure sylfra, and utan anmodlice eallum mode gebugan to Criste and earnjan his miltse, swa we geornost magon—every phrase of which can be paralleled in Wulfstan's known work.

Likewise indicative of Wulfstan's authorship is the condensation this version shows as compared with the other, the greater freedom of sentence structure resulting in a more idiomatic English than that of the MS version, which copies Latin structure rather slavishly,^{37a} and the independent conclusion.

Wulfstan's fondness for the first person and direct address appears here also, and there are several cases of we lærað, the phrase which introduces the sections of the Canons of Edgar (Thorpe, A.L., pp. 395-402).

³⁷ See II, 19¹⁸⁻²⁰, III, 28¹⁹⁻²⁰, V, 40²⁸⁻²⁴, X, 75²¹⁻²², XIV, 90¹⁰⁻¹¹, XV, 94¹⁰ XXXII, 112¹, XXXIII, 166¹.

^{37a} For example, the sermon begins Vere, fratres karissimi, hoc debetis scire unde fuit inceptum hoc exemplum ut episcopi peccatores homines eicerunt de ecclesia in capite ieiunii. The translator renders it Mine gebroðru ða leofestan, ge sculon to soðon ðis witan hwanon wære ongunnen ærest þeos bisne þæt biscopas ut adrifon of cyrcan sinfulle men on þam wodnes dæge þe we hatað caput ieiunii. Wulfstan's more idiomatic sentence is Leofan men, ic wille cyðan eow eallum and þam huru, þe hit ær nystan, hwanan seo bysn ærest aras, þæt biscopas ascadað ut of cyrcan on foreweardan lenctene þa men, þe mid openan heafodgyltan hy sylfe forgyldað.

Since the OE version of the MS is so very close to the Latin it is almost impossible to tell whether Wulfstan worked from the Latin or English version. His vocabulary is not remarkably like the English, but that is not proof that he was not working from the English text. And there is only one clear case of his having taken a word from the Latin text, his use of "paradyso" (153²⁰) instead of OE "neorxnawange," a word never found in his genuine works.³⁸ There is one case in which Wulfstan's diction is less accurate than the MS version. The Latin says, "nos episcopi sumus uicarii domini nostri iesu cristi in hoc mundo," which the English version translates as "we bisceopas beoð ures drihtnes hælendes cristes speliendas on þisum middanearde." Wulfstan says (154¹¹⁻¹²): "bisceopas syndon to þam gesette on þisre worulde, þæt hy georne sculon be Cristes bysene." "Bysene" is not so accurate a word as "speliendas," for it means "model," "example," which is inapplicable here.

Fehr, when editing Ælfric's pastoral letters, became impressed by the amount of material in MS 190 connected with Ælfric, and more especially by the fact that the compilation of material from Isidore, Amalarius, Rabanus Maurus in the liturgical section (pp. 201-264) agrees so closely with Ælfric's compilation from the same sources in the pastoral letters. He decided that Ælfric had made the selections in 190 and had sent them to Wulfstan, who had them incorporated into CCCC 265.³⁹

Fehr may be right. It is certainly true that nearly all the larger works collected here—Pseudo-Egbert's Excerptiones, Egbert's Penitential, Bede's Penitential, Pseudo-Theodore's Penitential, and Amalarius' Regula Canonicorum—furnished Ælfric with material for his letters, and it is entirely likely that Ælfric, who was by far the more learned man, introduced Wulfstan to these works, as well as to other canons with which the latter was at first unfamiliar. Indeed, it is necessary only to read Ælfric's reply to a personal letter from Wulfstan written early in Wulfstan's episcopacy⁴⁰ to see upon what elementary matters the archbishop needed teaching. Wulfstan's borrowings from Ælfric, moreover, are by no means limited to this legal and liturgical matter, for Homilies II, VII, XIII, and XVI draw upon Ælfric's earlier writings. There is therefore no doubt that the Abbot of Eynsham contributed a great deal to the training of his superior, and MS 190 may well offer further evidence of his tutoring. Wulfstan's readiness to learn is proved by the diligent study of the canons his own *Canons of Edgar*⁴¹ and Institutes of Polity reveal, and by the competent use of Latin models his sermons on the elements of the Christian faith show (Homilies v, vi, and x). The assembling of all the material in these MSS, moreover, shows how Wulfstan worked to provide for himself the necessary guides for his multifarious duties as archbishop.

³⁸ Wulfstan's use of Paradise to mean the Garden of Eden antedates the first citation in the OED, which is from the Lambeth Homilies. The word is used in the West Saxon Gospels, Luke 23, 43, to mean heaven. "To-dæg þu bist mid me on paradiso." Wulfstan makes a distinction between these uses. He takes over "paradyso" in 153²⁰ and 154²⁷, where it means the Garden of Eden, but substitutes "þære heofonlican cynican" for the same Latin word in 154,⁸ where Christ takes Adam to heaven from hell. The MS English version has "neorxnawang" in every case.

³⁹ "Das Benediktiner-Offizium und die Beziehungen zwischen Ælfric und Wulfstan," Eng. Stud., XLVI (1913), 337-346.

⁴⁰ Die Hirtenbriefe, pp. 221-227.

Though it is hard to say in what relation these MSS stand to each other, it looks as if CCC 190 were closer to the original collection than any other, though at least three of the others can be more definitely located at Worcester. CCC 265 has Wulfstan's name at the beginning, Junius 121 is signed by Wulfgeat, the famous Worcester scribe, and Nero A 1 is generally supposed to have had a Worcester model if it did not originate within that cloister. Volume III of CCC 190 (pp. 365-420) written in one hand is the "scrift-boc on englisc" sent by Leofric to Exeter.⁴² But none of these MSS except Bodley 718, which contains merely the penitentials as they existed at Worcester in the tenth century, antedates Wulfstan's incumbency there, and possibly only the beginning of 265 is contemporary with him. The particular volume that Wulfstan ordered made may be lost, but I believe that we get the best idea of it from 190 because this MS contains the fragments which Wulfstan worked into his homilies. On the other hand, the letters found in 265, the Copenhagen MS, and Barlow 37 must have formed a part of the original collection, and from other evidences of content also it appears that 265 bears a closer resemblance to Nero A 1, the Copenhagen MS, and Barlow 37 than does 190.

Phonology does not help much here, because the question is not the age of this particular MS, though the accuracy with which it represents a collection made before 1016 is somewhat related to date. But it is interesting to see that Anderson in a recent article has placed 190 on linguistic grounds a quarter of a century earlier than Junius 121.⁴³

A careful study of the sources of the Canons of Edgar and the Institutes of Polity will almost certainly reveal more evidence on how Wulfstan used a collection of this kind, and probably on the relation of these MSS.

⁴¹ If Jost is right that V Æðelred borrows from the Canons of Edgar—and the parallel passages indicate that this is true—then C of E must have come before 1008, or within five years of Wulfstan's elevation to the archbishopric.

⁴² See James's account.

⁴³ G. K. Anderson, "Notes on the Language of Ælfric's English Pastoral Letters in Corpus Christi College 190 and Bodleian Junius 121," J EGP., XL (1941), 5-13.

Until such a study is forthcoming, we may accept these parallels as some evidence of Wulfstan's hand in the ordering of the work.

APPENDIX

There is another MS with the ordering of which Wulfstan has been connected. It is Vespasian A 14, which contains laudatory verses to Wulfstan (f. 70) intended to accompany a volume he had had drawn up, and on the basis of which Stubbs says:

"The MS Vespasian A 14 is a very miscellaneous volume, great part of it consisting of theological scraps, put together under the patronage of Wulfstan, archbishop of York, early in the eleventh century."⁴⁴

This MS is really composed of three volumes, the first containing principally the lives of Welsh saints (ff. 1-105^b), the second selections from Bede's Ecclesiastical History and an essay on the Holy Ghost addressed by the Abbot of Westminster to Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury (ff. 106-113^b), and the third letters of Alcuin, verses and a letter to Wulfstan, and canons of three ecclesiastical synods. It is only with the third volume that Wulfstan could have had anything to do, since the first two deal with people who lived after his death. Even so it is not certain that the verses form a part of the MS for which they were originally intended, though there is nothing to forbid such a supposition,⁴⁵ the same letters of Alcuin found in Corpus MSS are present here, and there is also a private letter to Wulfstan as Bishop of London (f. 177) which likewise has to do with these matters. It is written in very florid Latin from some unknown person who styles himself "famulus supplex" and who may have been one of the clerical members of the bishop's familia for whose education the bishop was responsible. He is apologizing for not having translated some secret matters into Latin as Wulfstan had asked him to do and pleads his inability in comparison with Wulfstan's skill.⁴⁶ It looks as if Wulfstan had had some experience before he became Bishop of Worcester in directing the very sort of activity MS CCCC 190 gives evidence of. His relation to Vespasian A 14 needs separate examination which will probably not be possible until the war is over, but the lines of the poem apply equally to 190:

*Praesule Wlfstano hoc opus est consente paratum.
Pollice quod docto impressit subtilis aliptes*

DOROTHY BETHURUM

Connecticut College

⁴⁴ Memorials of St Dunstan, p. liv.

⁴⁵ See Whitelock, "A Note on Wulfstan the Homilist," EHR, LII (1937), 462-464

⁴⁶ Stubbs printed the letter, with a wrong reference to the MS, op. cit., pp. 404-405

THE ROMANCE DESIDERATIVE SE

THE Dantean formulas with desiderative se have recently attracted the attention of several reputable scholars and have given occasion to a lively discussion. Nicholson in Romania, LXI (1935), 3 ff., proposed to abandon the traditional etymology Ital. se < Lat. sī, and suggested Ital. se < Lat. sīt. Among those who accepted Mr. Nicholson's conclusion are: E. C. Armstrong, MLN, LI, 68, K. McKenzie, Italica, XIII, 70, who closely examined the passages of Dante, and finally Miss Lograsso, Italica, xv, 152. He was strongly opposed, on the other hand, by E. B. Place, Hisp. Rev., v, (1937), 259, to whom he replied in the same journal, vi, 250 ff., and finally by L. Spitzer, Romania, LXV (1939), 290 ff., who defended the old etymology Ital. se < Lat. sī. Having read the arguments of both camps, and having arrived at the conclusion that this usage of Dantean se cannot be explained either by Lat. sī or by sīt, I venture to express my opinion on the subject.

G. Nicholson, Rom., LXI (1935), 10, observes with full reason, I think, that Lat. sī is not apt to explain Romance sentences¹ like Deh se riposi mai vostra semenza [. . .] solvetemi quel nodo, Dante, Inf., x, 94, or oyd mesnadas si vos vala el Criador, Cid, 3128, which are frequent, as we shall see later on.

The explanation of Gaspary, ZRPh., XI (1887), 137 and of Spitzer, Romania, LXV (1939), 300, 311,² who compares Plautus, Miles, 571 ne tu hercle, si te di ament, linguam comprimis, seems weak to me, first because some manuscripts have amant instead of ament, which changes completely the picture; secondly, because such an expression is totally iso-

¹ For Italian this has been very well pointed out by McKenzie in Italica, XIII, 69 et seqq., who writes (p. 70) "So obvious is the inappropriateness of interpreting se in the formula of adjuration as 'if,' that some authorities distinguish it from se 'if,' and derive it from Lat. sic, in spite of the fact that the phonetic obstacle is as great as in the case of si. Thus Cappuccini, Vocabolario della lingua italiana, asserts that it is an obsolete adverb equivalent to così, 'augurando e deprecando,' and derived from sic, he quotes Inf., xx, 19. On the other hand, Zingarelli in his Vocabolario, after stating that se "esprime sempre una condizione, sia in una frase schiettamente dubitativa o ipotetica, sia nella concessione, sia nella limitazione, sia nel desiderio," gives as one definition 'o così fosse,' adding 'si fa risalire a sic, ma anche si aveva questo uso.' "

Cf. anche Meyer-Lubke, Gramm. rom., I, 539 et seq., §613, 3, 632, §562 ("si avec une voyelle surprenante [i]").

² I can attribute no importance, of course, to the two passages from Italian humanists of the 14th and 15th centuries quoted by Gaspary, ZRPh. XI (1887), 137 and by G.-G. Nicholson, Rom., LXI, 11.

lated in the whole Latin language,³ and whatever may be our veneration for the manuscript tradition of Plautus, a slight suspicion as to the authenticity of that si can by no means be suppressed (see below).⁴

But Nicholson's idea—that this desiderative se, and even the conditional se, si, să of all Romance languages, should represent Lat sit—seems quite improbable to me, for the reasons which Spitzer has expressed in his excellent article Rom., LXV (1939), 289 ff, and which I need not repeat here.⁵ I think the problem can be solved only by the method

³ I was fortunate enough to find, in the library of Princeton University, the Zeitschrift für die Altertumswissenschaft, XII (1854), 236, which Spitzer was not able to see (Rom., LXV, 300, n. 1). The sentence si me Deus adiuuet, non habeo nihil is found in W. Grimm, Altdeutsche Gesprache, publ. in Abh. der Akademie der Wiss. (Berlin, 1851), p. 238. This text is the Latin translation of some Old High German phrases of the ninth century (see Abh. 1849, 415). The German text reads: sam mir got helfe, ne habem ne tropfon, so that the correction of si to sic, proposed by Pott, Zeitschr. f. Altert., XII, 236, is quite obvious.

O H G sam (or sama) is translated 'so,' 'ebenso,' 'sic,' 'aeque,' 'similiter,' by O. Schade, Altdeutsches Wörterbuch, 2d ed., 740.

I may also remark that the passage se m'anti Iddio (io il vi credo) is not in Brunetto Latini, as Spitzer says (p. 309), but in Boccaccio's Decamerone (Giorn. IV, nov. ix, 8).

⁴ The original desiderative meaning of the (conditional) Lat si is denied by Blase, Glotta, XI (1921), 145 et seqq. — o si (o mihi praeteritos referat si Iuppiter annos Virgil) of course is comparatively frequent (see Blase, Hist. Gramm., p. 134) and has given Italian oh se, but this is something quite different.

⁵ I only wish to reinforce Spitzer's criticism on one point.

I do not see great semantic difficulty, as Prof. Nicholson does (Rom., LXI, 6 et seqq.), in drawing from the conditional Latin si the Rumanian să with the sense of purpose (Lat. ut), in sentences like that quoted by Meyer-Lubke, Grammatik, III, 641 and by Nicholson himself, Rom., LXI, 10. Duce-mă-voiu țărări într'altă cetate, să propovoduesc cuvântul lui Hs 'je veux m'en aller de nouveau dans une autre cité, pour annoncer la parole de Dieu.' I completely agree with the explanation which Tommaseo-Bellini, Dizionario, s. u. se, p. 735, n. 3 gives for quite similar Italian cases. 'Talora innanzi al se si lascia per sottinteso il verbo necessario. Ell[issi] evidente e efficace. Fior. S. Franc. 112 (M) Viene il demonio [. . .] per sos pingerlo quindi giuso. Di che Santo Francesco, non avendo dove fuggire [. . .] di subito si rvolse con le mani e col viso e con tutto il corpo al sasso [. . .] brancolando colle mani, se a cosa nessuna si potesse appigliare (cioè cercando se . . .), e 147 Corse [. . .] per tutta la città, se per ventura la potesse trovare, Boccaccio, Giorn. II, Nov. 4, 2. A quella (tavola) s'appiccò, se forse Iddio, indugiando egli l'affogare, gli mandasse qualche aiuto allo scampo suo; [. . .] Vit. S. M. Madd. 77. Pensomi che tornassono un poco dentro alla porta [. . .] in luogo più onesto, che si poteva, tuttavia se si potesse vedere o udire alcuna cosa, Vit. S. Gir. 4. Andarasi (il leone) discorrendo per la foresta forse se per ventura potesse rinvenire lo compagno suo. Cf. also the Dizionario degli Acc. della Crusca, s. u. se, §1, vol. 5, 117.

Before the se in all of these sentences we may supply a purpose clause (per vedere se); sometimes we might, almost without changing the meaning, substitute a purpose clause for the se-clause so e.g. in Vit. S. M. Madd. 77 per vedere o udire alcuna cosa (or per tentare di vedere o udire alcuna cosa), or in Fior. S. Franc. 112 per appigliarsi ad alcuna cosa (or per tentare di appigliarsi [. . .]). Similar sentences are also found in Modern Italian, particularly in the familiar speech cf. e.g. Collodi, Pinocchio, chapt. 24: Allora il burattino employed by McKenzie in his admirable article: "a collection of examples, as complete as possible, and a careful examination of the material" I therefore take the liberty of treating the problem at somewhat greater length.

The Italian passages have in great part been gathered by Prof. McKenzie.⁶ the first type is that represented by Deh se riposi mai [] solvetemi, where an imperative follows the desiderative sentence, which constitutes a kind of captatio beneuolentiae, usually called the adjuration formula.⁷

I present here his material, amplified by other sources:

Inf, x, 82 et seq

E se tu mai nel dolce mondo regge (redeās), dimmi []

Inf, x, 94 et seq

"Deh, se riposi mai vostra semenza" prega' io lui, "solvetemi quel nodo []"

Inf, xiii, 85 et seqq

Perciò ricominciò "Se l'uom ti faccia liberamente ciò che il tuo dir priega spirito incarcerato, ancor ti piaccia di dirne come l'anima si lega in questi nocchi, e dinne, se tu puoi, s'alcuna mai di tai membra si spiega"

[] si pose a guardare di qua e di là se per caso avesse potuto scorgere su quella immensa spianata d'acqua una piccola barchetta con un omino dentro

I should approach very nearly the meaning of the Rumanian sentence quoted by Prof. Nicholson, If I were to say in colloquial Italian Voglio andarmene di nuovo in un'altra città (per vedere) se annuncio la parola di Dio

See also Bourciez, Eléments de linguistique romane, 279, §254b, 600 et seqq, §§508 et seq, Meyer-Lubke, Gramm, 3, 667, §590.

Rumanian until the sixteenth century had să (<să<si) in the conditional sense (Bourciez, 602, §508) and according to Tiktin, Ruman Elementarbuch, 143, §377 has it now in unreal conditional sentences (he quotes an author of the late nineteenth century, Cosbuc, 178, cf. the note at p. 179)

For the other functions of să (se) in Rumanian, cf. Meyer-Lubke, Gramm, 3, §§18, 117-119, 340, 387, 562, 567, 569-570, 573-575; 582, 643-644; 669, 673, 679

⁶ Italica, xiii (1936), 69 et seqq I add one example from Diez, Rom. Gramm, 5th ed., iii, 357, one from Spitzer, Rom, lxxv, 309, one from Miss Lograsso, Italica, xv, 152, n. 6, two from L. G. Blanc, Grammatik der italienischen Sprache (Halle, 1844), p. 585, seven from the Vocabolario degli Acc. della Crusca (Verona, 1806), s. u. se, v, 117, four from Tommaseo-Bellini (s. u. aiutare, ajutare, salvare) The remaining ones which I quote below (and particularly all those of the Filostrato) have been indicated to me by the inexhaustible kindness of Prof. McKenzie

⁷ This distinction between 'adjuration' and 'asseveration' (or 'protestation') is quite correctly indicated by McKenzie, p. 70; but then his expression on p. 69, line 5 from the bottom, is not quite exact.

Inf., xvi, 82 et seqq.

Però se campi d'esti luoghi bui
e torni a riveder le belle stelle, quando ti gioverà dicere 'I' fui', fa che di noi alla gente favelle

Inf., xvi, 64 et seqq.

"Se lungamente l'anima conduca le membra tue" rispuose quelli ancora,
"e se la fama tua dopo te luca, cortesìa e valor di' se dimora nella nostra città []"

Inf., xx, 19 et seq.

Se Dio ti lasci, lettor, prender frutto di tua lezione, or pensa per te stesso []

Inf., xxvii, 55 et seqq.

Ora chi se', ti priego che ne conte non esser duro più ch'altri sia stato, se il nome tuo nel mondo tegna fronte.

Inf., xxix, 88 et seqq.

dinne s'alcun Latino è fra costoro che son quinc'entro, se l'unghia ti basti etternalmente a cotesto lavoro

Inf., xxix, 103 et seqq.

Se la vostra memoria non s'imboli nel primo mondo da l'umane menti ma s'ella viva sotto molti soli, ditemi voi chi siete e di che genti

Inf., xxx, 34 et seqq.

"Oh" diss'io lui" se l'altro non ti ficchi li denti a dosso, non ti sia fatica a dir chi è pria che di qui si spicchi "

Purg., v, 85 et seqq.

Poi disse un altro: "Deh, se quel desío si compia che ti tragge all'alto monte, con buona pietate aiuta il mio!"

Purg., viii, 112 et seqq.

"Se la lucerna che ti mena in alto truovi nel tuo arbitrio tanta cera quant'è mestiere infino al sommo smalto" cominciò ella "se novella vera di Val di Magra o di parte vicina sai, dillo a me, che già grande là era"

Purg., xi, 37 et seqq.

"Deh, se giustizia e pietà vi disgrievi tosto, sí che possiate mover l'ala che secondo il disío vostro vi lievi mostrate da qual mano inver la scala si va piú corto, e se c'è piú d'un varco quel m'insegnate che men erto cala, []"

Pur, XIII, 88 et seqq.

se tosto grazia resolvable le schiume di vostra coscienza, sí che chiaro per essa scenda della mente il fiume ditemi, ché mi fia grazioso e caro, s'anima è qui tra voi che sia latina, [. . .]

Purg, XXVI, 61 et seqq.

Ma se la vostra maggior voglia sazia tosto divegna, sí che il ciel v'alberghi ch'è pien d'amore e piú ampio si spazia ditemi, acciocché ancor carte ne verghi, chi siete voi, e chi è quella turba che se ne va dietro a' vostri terghi.

Petrarch, Trionfo d'Amore, II [IIA, or IV], 25 et seq.:

"Or dimmi, se colui'n pace vi guide," e mostrai 'l duca lor, "che coppia è questa?"

Fazio degli Uberti, Il Dittamondo, in Manuale della letteratura italiana of D'Ancona and Bacci (Florence, 1911, 556).

Se quel che tutto regge ancor vi presti tanto di grazia per la sua pietate che degli antichi onori vi rivesti fatemi ancora tanto di bontate ch'io oda, come in vostra giovinezza foste cresciuta in tanta degnitate [. . .]

Boccaccio, Filostrato (Bari Pernicone, 1937), II, st 110

disse "Deh, Pandaro mio, se in quieto stato ti ponga Amore, abbi rispetto alquanto a me, non pure al giovinetto."

Scala dei Claustri (o "del Paradiso") in the volume Trattati morali di Bono Giamboni (Florence Piatti, 1836), 447.⁸ O anima, dimmi, se Dio ti salvi, or che ti vale, or che ti giova la continua lezione, e che ti giova occupare lo tempo e perderlo, leggendo le Sacre Scritture? (cf. Tommaseo-Bellini, s. u. salvare)

Orl Fur, VI, St 30.

Ma non restar però, che non risponda chi tu sia, ch'in corpo orrido ed irto con voce e razionale anima vivi, se da grandine il ciel sempre ti schivi

Orl Fur., XXXIV, St 9

Il duca stupefatto allor s'arresta

* This work is attributed by Francesco Tassi (in the Lezione preceding the text, p. 407) to the "celebre e dotto Frate Agostino della Scarperia, che fioriva sul declinare della metà del secolo decimoquarto." It is an imitation of a Latin treatise De vita contemplativa composed by "Guigo Quinto Priore della Certosa Maggiore."

e dice all'ombra: "Se Dio tronchi ogni ala al fumo sí, ch'a te piú non ascenda, non ti dispiaccia che 'l tuo stato intenda;

e se vuoi che di te porti novella nel mondo su, per satisfarti sono "

This use may be due to Aristo's imitation here of Dante. The last example I know is very late (sixteenth century) and quite isolated, it is the translation of the Aeneid (III, 944 et seqq) by Annibal Caro (1507-1556), and I owe it to courtesy of Prof. Attilio Momigliano.

Oh, se le stelle
se gli Dei, se quest'aura onde spiramo generosi e magnanimi Troiani servin la vita a voi, quinci mi tolga la pietà vostra, e vosco m'adducete ove che sia, ché mi fia questo assai [. . .]

In two cases, the imperative (dimmi, or the like) is not expressed, the information is demanded otherwise, but the type of construction is absolutely the same (cf. McKenzie, 72 et seq.):

Purg., XXI, 112 et seqq.

E "Se tanto labore in bene assommi" disse "[dimmi] perché la tua faccia testes un lampeggiar di riso dimostrommi?"

Straparola, Notte X, fâv 5, ed. G. Rua, II, 196. Io, se Dio ti salvi ed abbia misericordia dell'anima tua, intenderei volentieri la causa di questa mutazione.

I ask the reader now to compare the following Latin passages.⁹

⁹ No instance of this use of sic is found before Catullus, hence it is quite possible that it did not exist in Old Latin. Ch. E. Bennett, Syntax, I, 111 considers the sic-sentence with future in Terence, H. T., 463 sic me di amabunt, ut me tuarum misertumst, Menedeme, fortunarum as desiderative, but this appears to me to be very doubtful, cf. Sjogren, Zum Gebrauch des Futurums im Alllateinischen, p. 73—See, however, what is said below on the passage of Plautus, Miles, 571.

On the other hand, we find no examples after Apuleius (2d cent. A.D.), although the temptation is great to correct si ualeas to sic ualeas in Hist. Apollonii, vii, p. 11, 3 (MS AP) indica [dic other MSS] mih, si ualeas, quae est haec causa, quod ciuitas ista in luctu moratur? Cf. W. Kroll, Glossa, VII (1916), 80, Hofmann, Lat. Gramm. p. 772, at the beginning of the page. The Historia Apollonii belongs perhaps to the sixth century A.D. Cf. also W. Kroll, La sintaxis científica en la enseñanza del latín (Madrid, 1935), p. 92 n. 1, who quotes, as proof of the existence of the formula of adjuration sic ualeas, the quite vulgar inscription CIL, IV, 6641 (Pompeii) cacator sic ualeas ut tu hoc locum traseas[s]. We must never forget how incomplete is our knowledge of Vulgar Latin!

It is also possible that in the sixth century the pronunciation si instead of sic was so common, that it crept into the text of Hist. Apoll.; si ualeas would then represent the spoken form of sic ualeas and should not be touched. This pronunciation is attested for the Vth

Catullus, xvii, 5 et seqq.

sic tibi bonus ex tuā pons libidine fiat in quo uel Salisubili sacra suscipiantur, munus hoc mihi maximū da, Colonia, risus

Horace, Odes, i, iii, 1 et seqq.

sic te diua potens Cypri sic fratres Helenae, lucida sidera, uentorumque regat pater obstrictis alius praeter Iapyga nauis, quae tibi creditum debes Vergilium, finibus Atticis reddas incolumem, precor, et serues animae dimidium meae

Horace, Odes, i, xxviii, 25 et seqq.

at tu, nauta, uagae ne parce malignus harenae ossibus et capiti inhumato particulam dare, sic, quodcumque minabitur Eurus fluctibus Hesperus, Venusinae plectantur siluae te sospite, multaue merces, unde potest, tibi defluat aequo ab Ioue Neptunoque sacri custode Tarenti.

Vergil, Ecl, ix, 30 et seqq.

sic tua Cyrneas fugiant examina taxos sic cytisos pastae distendant ubera uaccae incipi, si quid habes et me fecere poetam
Pierides, sunt et mihi carmina, me quoque dicunt [. .]

Vergil, Ecl, x, 4 et seqq.

sic tibi cum fluctus subterlabere Sicanos
Doris amara tuam non intermisceat undam, incipi sollicitos Galli dicamus amores [. .]

Vergil, Aen, x, 875

sic pater ille deum faciat, sic altus Apollo, incipias conferre manum.

Propertius, iii, vi, 1 et seqq.

dic mihi de nostrā quae sentis uera puellā sic tibi sint dominae, Lygdame, dempta iuga.

Tibullus, ii, vi, 29 et seqq.

parce, per inmatura tuae precor ossa sororis.
sic bene sub tenerā parua quiescat humo

Tibullus, ii, v, 121 et seqq.

adnue, sic tibi sint intonsi, Phoebe, capilli sic tua perpetuo sit tibi casta soror.

Ovid, Metam, viii, 848 et seqq.

sic mare compositum, sic sit tibi piscis in unda credulus et nullos, nisi fixus, sentiat amos.

century by the grammarian Consentius before following c-(people used to say si custodit) instead of sic custodit G. L. Keil, V, 395, 11 ff., but hi for hic is already found in Pompeii (CIL. iv, 2048) before 79 A.D., cf. also E. Richter, Beih. ZRPk, vol. 82 [1934], 74 note with more material).

quae modo cum uili turbatis ueste capillis litore in hoc steterat (nam stantem in litore uidi) dic ubi sit [. . .]

Ovid, Metam, xiv, 761 et seqq :

[] quorum memor, o mea, lentos pone, precor, fastus et amanti iungere, nymphe, sic tibi nec uernum nascentia frigus adurat poma, nec excutiant rapidi florentia uenti.

Ovid, Epistulae, iii, 135 et seqq :

nunc quoque—sic omnes Peleus pater impleat annos, sic eat auspiciis Pyrrhus ad arma tuis—respice sollicitam Briseida, fortis Achille, nec miseram lentā ferreus ure morā aut, si uersus amor tuus est in taedia nostri, quam sine te cogis uiuere, coge mori

Ovid, Epistulae, iv, 147 et seq :

tolle moras tantum properataque foedera iunge qui mihi nunc saeuit, sic tibi parcat amor.

Ovid, Epistulae, iv, 167 et seqq :

per Venerem parcas, oro, quae maxima mecum est, sic numquam, quae te spernere possit, ames, sic [. . .] adsit [. . .] sic faueant [. . .] et cadat [. . .] sic tibi dent Nymphae [. . .]

Ovid, Epist, xv, 280.

parce datum fatis, Helene, contemnere amorem, sic habeas faciles in tua uota deos.

Ovid, Tristia, iv, v, 17 et seqq :

quod licet (et tutum est) intra tua pectora gaude meque tui memorem teque fuisse pium, utque facis, remis ad opem luctare ferendum dum ueniat placido mollior aura deo, et tutare caput [. . .] teque praesta [. . .]
sic tua processus habeat fortuna perennes sic [. . .] non egeas [. . .] sic aequet [. . .] diligat [] sic iuuenis [. . .] sic natus [. . .] et agnoscat sic faciat [. . .] nec det
[. . .]

Ovid, Tristia, v, ii, 51 et seqq .:

sic habites terras et te desideret aether sic ad pacta tibi sidera tardus eas parce, precor, minimamque tuo de fulmine partem deme, satis poenae, quod superabit, erit

Ovid, Tristia, v, iii, 35 et seqq :

fer, bone Liber, opem, sic altera degrauet alium uitis et incluso plena sit uua mero, sic tibi iuuentus adsit [. . .] et non taceare [. . .] sic sint [. . .] uacet [. . .] sic [. . .] uincat [. . .] huc ades et casus releues [. . .]

Seneca, Troades, 691 et seqq.

[. .] ad genua accido supplex, Vluxe, quamque nullius pedes nouere, dextram pedibus admoueo tuis miserere matris et preces placidus pias patiensque recipe, quoque te celsum altius superi leuarunt, mitius lapsos preme misero datur quodcumque fortunae datu..
 sic te reuisat coniugis sanctae torus annosque, dum te recipit, extendat suos Laerta, sic te iuuenis excipiat tuus et uota uincens uestra felici indole aetate auum transcendat, ingenio patrem miserere matris unicum afflictae mihi solamen hic est

Petronius, LXI, 2 oro te, sic felicem me uideas, narra illud quod tibi usu uenit Petronius, LXXV, 1. "Rogo" inquit "Habinna, sic peculum tuum fruniscaris, si quid perperam feci, in faciem meam inspue."

Martial, VII, lxxxix, 3 et seq.

[. .] quas tu nectere candidas, sed olim, sic te semper amet Venus, memento

Martial, VII, xciii, 8 et seq.

sed iam parce mihi nec abutere, Narnia, Quinto, perpetuo liceat sic tibi ponte frui.

Silius Italicus, v, 179.

"sic in Apollineā semper uestigia prunā inuiolata teras uictorque uaporis ad aras dona serenato referas sollemnia Phocho, concipe" ait "dignum factis, Aeque, furorem, uulneribusque tuis"

Apuleius, Metam, VIII, 201 per fortunas uestrosque genios, sic ad meae senectutis spatia ualidi laetique ueniatis, decepto seni subsistite meumque paruulum ab inferis ereptum canis meis reddite¹⁰

CIL., IV, 2776 (Pompeii, in uentre uasis) presta mi sinceru(m), sic te amet quae custodit ortu(m) Venus

Carm. epigr. 1067:

sic tibi contingat feliciter ire, uiator, immatura meo perlege fata loco.

Carm. epigr. 1467 (orig. lost; hesitatingly integrated by Buecheler)

¹⁰ I cannot well understand why Blase, Hist. Gr., p. 134, considers this passage of Apuleius as 'merkwürdig', nor why he says that 'es fehlt der zu erwartende Imperativ und der Wunschsatz ist einem imperativischen Satze koordiniert.' Of course, we must put a comma after Genios—as e.g. the edition of Giarratano (Paravia, 1929) and the Loeb do—and join directly per fortunas uestrosque Genios with decepto seni subsistite, then 'der zu erwartende Imperativ' is subsistite, and the whole sentence is identical with the others, and by no means 'merkwürdig.'

sic] tibi praeterito redeat felicior annus sem] per et ex facili uita regatur ope hos?] durae [?] mortis sacratos laedere Manes par]ce: monent leges et leuis umbra rogi
 Carm. epigr. 1468.

sic tibi perpetuo sint, lector, uota secunda parce pios Manes sollicitare manu

The case is evidently the same in the three following passages, although the imperative (dīc 'tell me') is not directly expressed:

Horace, Sat., II, III, 300 et seqq.

Stoice, post damnum sic uendas omnia plures
 [dīc] quā me stultitiā insanire putas? [. .]

Tibullus, I, IV, 1 et seqq.

sic umbrosa tibi contingent tecta, Priape, ne capiti soles, ne noceantque niues, [dīc] quae tua formosos cepit sollertia? certe non tibi barba nitet, non tibi culta comast etc

Martial, IX, XLII, 1 et seqq.

campis, diues Apollo, sic Myrinis sic semper senibus fruarere cygnis doctae sic tibi seruiant sorores nec Delphis tua mentiatur ulli, sic Palatia te colant amentque bis senos cito te rogante fascēs det Stellae bonus annuatque Caesar.

See, e.g., Blase, Histor. Gramm., III, i, 133

The identity of the Latin and the Italian type is absolute. first the speaker expresses a wish in favor of the interlocutor by the means of a sentence constructed with sic; se and the present subjunctive,¹¹ then, in exchange, he asks or begs something from the same interlocutor by means of an imperative (or its equivalent: an exhortative subjunctive); very often, a verb meaning "I pray you," "I beg you" is also found (Lat. orō, precor, rogō; Ital. prego, pregai; the deh! of Inf. x, 94 has of course the same meaning). Very frequently (in all cases in Dante, except one) the imperative is a verb meaning "to tell," "to answer," "to speak," "to say," "to inform," "to explain," "to show" etc.¹² (Lat dīc, incīpe, narrā; Ital dī, dimmi, dillo, ditemi, or equivalent formulas: non esser duro [before ti priego che ne conte], solvetemi quel nodo, non ti sia fatica a dir chi è; con buona pietate aiuta il mio [desio]; non restar che [tu] non risponda, non ti dispiaccia che[io]l tuo stato intenda etc., etc.)

¹¹ As Prof. McKenzie (p. 71) correctly observes, se with the present subjunctive is extremely rare, we could almost say irregular, in Italian, outside of these formulas of adjuration. The se mai continga che il poema sacro [. .] of Par., XXV, 1 et seqq. is interpreted as being half desiderative by Prof. Spitzer (p. 303, n. 1) which is probably right (cf. the use of contingat in CIL, VIII, 1070, 4-5 [c] ita tibi contingat quod uis, ut hoc sacrum non uiolēs; Carm. Epigr. 1067 (Rome) sic tibi contingat feliciter ire, uiator/immatura meo perlege fata loco; 1287 opto meae caste contingat uiuere natae; Itala, Genesis, 44, 7 [Lugd.] non contingat pueris tuis facere hoc uerbum [μὴ γένοιτο LXX])

But similar sentences—with si, se, expressing a wish, in one member, and the imperative in the other—are also found in the other Romance languages (I draw my material in part from Diez, Gramm., 5th ed. [1882], III, 357):¹³

Spanish¹⁴ Poema del Cid, 1115, 1646, 3045.

oyd, mesnadas, si el Criador vos salve

Poema del Cid, 3139 (cf Cornu, Rom, x, 87):

oyd, mesnadas, si vos vala el Criador

Fern Gonz, 203

oytme, sy Jesucristo vos perdon

Appoll, 173

Dixo "si Dios te faga a tu casa tornar que me digas el nombre que te suelen llamar "

Bibl de autores españoles, Rivadeneyra, x, 1b (probably fifteenth century).

Abrasmé las puertas, mora, si Alá te guarde de mal.

Provençal: Raynouard, Choir de poésies, III, 410:

perdonatz me, sim sal lo filh sancta Maria

Old French. Huon de Bordeaux, p. 106

Car me le di, se t'ame ait ja salu

Am et Am, 3345

Ce dist Gautiers. se Dex vos beneie

Seignor baron, nel me celez vos mie

Erec, 1203:

Mais ce me di, se Dieus t'aït,

Coment as non?

R Charr., LIV, 10

Menez m'i, se Dex vos eist.

Percev, 596:

Biaus amis, se Dieus vos ament,

De vos noveles nos contes.

¹² For Old Italian, this has been pointed out with reason by Prof McKenzie, Italica, XIII, 71 et seqq. Some of the Old French examples which I quote in the text are of the same kind (Huon de Bordeaux, p. 106, Am et Am., 3345, Percev, 4028, 1490, 596), as are also one Portuguese and one Spanish example (Appoll, 173).

¹³ The connection between the Italian and the French "desiderative" se, denied by Foulet, is strongly asserted by Spitzer, Rom., LXV, 309 "une interprétation intra-française est donc exclue et il ne reste que l'interprétation 'interromane' de Diez et de Gaspary."

¹⁴ For Spanish, more material (also of the "asseverative" type) may be found in Menéndez Pidal, Cantar de mio Cid (Madrid, 1908), I, 372.

Percev , 1490:

Vallet, se Dameldex t'aît,
Se tu me ses dire noveles
Des chevaliers et des puceles [. . .]

Percev , 4028:

Amis, se Dameldex t'aît,
Fait li rois, dy moi venté

Percev , 8974

Car sejoynés, se Dex vos gart,
Hui et demain et plus encore

Portuguese Diez, Ueber die erste port Kunstpoesie, Bonn, 1863, 79, 12

Dizede me, se Deos vos perdon

For Rumanian, where să (se) regularly introduces all desiderative sentences, cf Meyer-Lubke, Gramm rom , 3, 148 et seqq , §§118 et seq , 428, §387, 667, §590

Examples of desiderative *sic*¹⁵ of the asseverative type are rather rare in Latin: I know only the following:

Tibullus I, vii, 53 et seq .

sic uenias hodiernae, tibi dem turis honores liba et Mopsopio dulcia melle feram

("so may you come today, as it is true that I am willing etc.")

¹⁵ I do not include in my enumeration the instances of correlative sic-ut, because the type is somewhat different, hence they may not be so well compared with the Italian passages. The examples most nearly resembling the "imperative" type is evidently CIL , iv, 6641 cacator sic ualeas, ut tu hoc locum traseas [s] (cf W Kroll, La sintaxis científica en la enseñanza del latín [Madrid, 1935], p 92, n 1, compare also, with ita, CIL , viii, 1070 ita tibi contingat quod uis ut hoc sacrum non uoles).

Instances of the "asseverative" type are Catulus, xlv, 13 et seqq .

"sic", inquit, "mea uita, Septumille, huic uni domino usque seruamus, ut multo mihi maior acriorque ignis mollihus ardet in medullis"

Here the character of "asseveration" is clearly indicated by the translation of F E. Cornish in the Loeb Classical Library (New York, 1914) 55, who considers it necessary to add the words "I swear".

"So, my life, my darling Septimius, so may we ever serve this one master as (I swear) more strongly and fiercely burns in me the flame deep in my melting marrow."

Propertius has (I, xviii, 11).

sic mihi te referas leuis, ut non altera nostro limine formosos intulit ulla pedes

This usage of sic is very frequent in Ovid, whose style is relatively popular Epist , xv, 25:

[Cytherea] perstat et ut pelagi, sic pectoris adiuuet aestum deferat in portus et mea uota suos

Metam., viii, 866 et seqq.. quoque minus dubites, sic has deus aequoris artes adiuuet, ut nemo iandudum litore in isto me tamen excepto, nec femina constitit ulla.

Tibullus, II, v, 63 et seq.

uera cano, sic usque sacras innoxia laurus uescar, et aeternum sit mihi uirginitas

Propertius, xv, 1 et seq.:

sic ego non ullos iam norim in amore tumultus nec ueniat sine te nox uigilanda mihi ut mihi praetexti pudor est uelatus amictu et data libertas noscere amoris iter, illa rudis animos per noctes conscia primas inhuit, heu!, nullis capta Lycinna datis

(Transl. Paganelli, ed. Belles Lettres [Paris, 1929] "Ah puisse-je ne plus connaître les tourments de l'amour, ne plus passer de nuits à veiller loin de toi comme je dis la vérité (!) j'étais encore revêtu de la prétexte" etc etc)

In the Ibis there is an abundance of these clauses vv 64 et seq., 273 et seq., 315 et seq., 331-337, 339 et seq., 341, 343-348, 421-424, 235 et seq. (with tanquam instead of ut), 469-476, 521 et seq., 549 et seq., 569 et seq., 583 et seq.; 591, 601 et seq., 603-606, 621-626 (double) Total 21, in a little poem of 644 verses! More material in the other works of Ovid can easily be found, I believe, with the help of the excellent Ovidian concordance published by Deferrari, Barry, and McGuire (Washington, 1939)

Ital. così, Spanish así, Old French sì, French ainsi also are used exactly the same way for Spanish I may quote Cervantes, Quijote, II, 1:

Así Dios me dé ventura
como es el novio galón

More material is in R. J. Cuervo, Diccionario de construcción y régimen de la lengua castellana, I (Paris, 1896) s. u. así [6], 698 et seq.

For Italian, we can read, e.g., Orl. Fur., XXVIII, st. 13.

Così mi sia questo cammin felice come tornar vo' fra due mesi almanco.
né mi faccia passar d'un giorno il segno se mi donasse il re mezzo il suo regno

But they are used in optative sense also without the correlative como, come. For Spanish I may quote the sapphic ode of Estéban Manuel de Villegas (1596-1669) indicated to me by the kindness of Prof. Américo Castro, see Menéndez Y Pelayo, Las cien mejores poesías de la lengua castellana (Buenos Aires-Madrid, no date), p. 145:

Así los dioses con amor paterno así los cielos con amor benigno nieguen al tiempo que feliz volares nieve á la tierra.

More material of this type for Spanish may be found in R. J. Cuervo, Diccionario, s. u. así (5), pp. 699 of s. q., and in the Diccionario of the Academia Española, I (Madrid, 1933), s. u. así (8) 841, col. 2, for Italian see Tommaseo-Bellini, s. u. così, nn. 15 and 18, 1781, col. 3.

For French, see e.g. Godefroi, vol. 1, 181, vol. 7, 415 seq. (sic m'aist Deus etc., ainsi m'aist Dieux) and the Grand dictionnaire universel of P. Larousse, I, s. u. ainsi, 160, col. 1 (Malherbe, Bossuet, Fénelon, etc.). ainsi puisse la France être toujours prospère!

I know of no other cases of desiderative sic in the whole Latin language, outside of the two types examined in this paper, the adjurative and the asseverative type (both with ut and without ut).

Propertius, iv [v], vii, 51 et seqq :

iuro ego fatorum nulli reuolubile carmen tergeminusque canis sic mihi molle sonet me seruasse fidem si fallo, uipera nostris sibilet in tumulis et super ossa cubet

Silius Italicus, ii, 301 et seqq .

[. . .] haud Tiryntia tecta
—sic propriā luat hoc poenā nec misceat urbis fata suis—nunc hoc, hoc inquam, tempore muros oppugnat, Carthago, tuos teque obsidet armis

Silius Italicus, iv, 505 et seqq

“at tu, donatā tela inter Martia luce, infelix animae, sic, sic uiuasque tuoque des iterum hanc laudem nato, nec fine sub aeu oppetere in bello detur, cum fata uocabunt pugnantem cecidisse meum est ” Haec personat ardens

This type also exists in Old Italian constructions with se, it is the type of sentence which McKenzie calls of ‘protestation’ or ‘asseveration’: “the se-clause,” as he explains very well (Italica, xiii, 73), “simply strengthens a statement:” I know of the following examples:

Brunetto Latino, Il Tesoretto (Florence: Zannoni, 1824), p. 59, Strassburg, ed. B. Wiese, p. 35, vv. 667 et seqq):

E l'om, se Dio mi vaglia, creato fu san faglia
la piú nobile cosa,
e degna, e preziosa
di tutte creature.

Ibid , p. 13, vv. 42 et seqq (ed. Zannoni, p. 103, ed. Wiese, p. 51, vv. 1224 et seqq):

Ma rícontar non oso
ciò ch'io trovaí, e vidi, se Dio mi guardi [porti R], e guidi.

Guittone d'Arezzo (ed. Pellegrini), 15 et seq :

Se Deo m'aiuti, amor, peccato fate se v'allegrate de lo malo meo.

Ibid , 203 et seqq .

Eo non posso appagare
a dir, Donna, de voi l'animo meo, che, se m'aiuti Deo, quanto piú dico, piú talento dire.

Ibid., 217 et seqq :

Amore meo, se Deo m'alongi noia
e gioia in voi me dia,
a la stagion ch'eo foi talentoso de voi, lo tempo mio sí picciul era, non m'è viso fiore amor, che de voi pria nulla cosa vedesse

 ni poi, che me tenesse [Val] in tal desio de servire e d'amar¹⁶

Dante, Inf, xvi, 127 et seqq

ma qui tacer non posso, e per le note di questa comedia, lettor, ti giuro, s'elle non sien di lunga grazia vote, ch'io vidi per quell'aere grosso e scuro venir notando una figura in giuso maravighiosa ad ogni cor sicuro;

Purg, ii, 16 et seqq.

cotal m'apparve, s'io ancor lo veggia, un lume per lo mar venir sí ratto che 'l mover suo nessun volar pareggia

Purg, viii, 127 et seqq :

e io vi giuro, s'io di sopra vada, che vostra gente onrata non si sfregia del pregio della borsa e della spada.

Par, xxii, 106 et seqq :

S'io torni mai, lettore, a quel divoto trunfo per lo quale io piango spesso le mie peccata, e il petto mi percuoto tu non avresti intanto tratto e messo nel foco il dito, in quanto io vidi il segno che segue il Tauro e fui dentro da esso

Boccaccio, Giornata iv, nov. 2 Io vi diceva ben, frate Alberto, che le mie bellezze eran celestiali, ma, se Dio m'aiuti, di voi m'incresce, ed infino da ora [. . .] io vi perdono

Giornata iv, nov. ix, 8 "Se m'aiuti Iddio, "disse il Cavaliere, "io il vi credo, né me ne maraviglio, se morto v'è piaciuto ciò, che vivo più che ogni altra cosa vi piacque "

Giornata v, nov. 10 Se Dio mi salvi, di così fatte femmine non si vorrebbe aver misericordia.

Giornata viii, nov. vi, 7. Tu mi faresti dar l'anima al nemico: io dico che tu non mi credi, se io non sia impiccato per la gola, che egli m'è stato imbolato.

Giornata viii, nov. vi, 8: Se Iddio mi salvi, questo è mal fatto, se vero è.

Giornata ix, nov. 10: Se m'aiuti Iddio, tu se' povero; ma egli sarebbe mercè, che tu fossi molto più

Giornata x, nov. x, at the end, Canzone, stanza 5:

¹⁶ The Italian paraphrase of the ed Pellegrini, p. 220, reads "Amor mio, se Dio mi tenga lungi ogni danno e mi conceda gioia in voi, io vi attesto [!], o amore, che nel tempo in cui dapprima fui desideroso di voi, la mia età era sí picciola (ero così giovane) che non mi sembra d'aver giammai visto né prima né dopo di voi donna alcuna, che più suscitasse il mio desiderio di servirla e d'amarla."

Se io non sia svisata
pianger farolle amara tal folha

Filostrato, Proemio (Bari ed Pernicone, 1937), 4 Dico adunque, se Iddio tosto coll'aspetto del vostro bel viso gli occhi miei riponga nella perduta pace, che poscia che io seppi che voi di qui partita eravate []

Filostrato, II, stanza 39

A cui ella rispose "Non ancora piú d'un che d'altro, se io non sia morta "

Filostrato, II, stanza 94.

A ciò Pandaro disse "Se ti piace fa' quel ch'io dico e me poi lascia fare che, se Amor mi ponga in la sua pace, io te ne credo risposta arrecare di sua man fatta [. .]"

Filostrato, III, stanza 56.

tu m'hai d'inferno messo in paradiso amico mio, se io non sia ucciso

Filostrato, IV, stanza 18

Poscia ch'io seppi la trista novella del traditor del mio padre malvagio se Dio mi guardi la tua faccia bella nulla giammai sentí tanto disagio quant'io ho poi sentito, come quella ch'oro non curo, città né palagio, ma sol di dimorar sempre con teo in festa ed in piacere, e tu con meco

These expressions may be compared with such Old French sentences as:

Percev , 9750:

Et il respont "se Dex me gart autrui n'aloie jou querant "

R Charr , LXXXI, xxvii, 2926-27:

Et cil dist "Se je soie saus ja mes de toie n'arai pitié des qu'une foiz t'ai respitié."

Leg., CCLVII, 8

Se Dieu plest n'en mentirai.

Past., CLXXVIII, 101:

Naie, se Dieu plaist, autrui n'amerai

Ren , v, 18:

Et cilz li dist "Se Diex me voie, joie aurai je quant je vous voi "

Ren., III, 68.

li autre dist: "Se Dex me saut, ainz vaut bien quatre a bon marchié."

Material is very abundant and may be found in Diez, Gramm, III, 357, Ed. Matzner, Syntax der neufranz Sprache, 2d ed (Berlin, 1845), 43 et seq, K. Tholle, Das Betheuern und Beschworen in der altromanischen Poesie, Diss. Göttingen (Erlangen, 1883), 57, Fr. Bischoff, Der Coniunctiv bei Chrestien (Halle a S.), 11, L. Foulet, Rom, LIII (1927), 304 et seqq; J. Merk, ZRPh, Beiheft 41, 267 et seqq, Tobler, Mitt, 1, 29, Godefroy, Dict, vol. 1, 181, col. 2, vol. 7, 415.

In Provençal we have (cf. Meyer-Lubke, Grammatik, III, 692):

B Born, XXI, 80
 assi 'm podetz ric far e mon dan restaurar
 si Dieus e sains m'ampar

In Spanish we have:

Arcepreste de Hita, Lib. de buen amor (Madrid: Cejador, 1913), I, 181, v. 487
 Dyz la mujer entre dientes "Otro Pedro es aqueste, mas garçon e mas ardit, que el primero que ameste el primero apost déste non vale más que un feste, con aqueste e por este faré yo, si Dios me preste " ibidem, II, 45, v. 984.

Díxel yo "Estó de priesa, si Dios de mal me guarde."

In Portuguese there is:

Graal 92.

se Deos m'ajude, eu ho vingarey a meu poder

I also find a Genoese example in Rambaut de Vaqueiras (quoted in the Manuale of F. Torraca, ed. 1913, I, 11):

Jugar, to proenzalesco, s'eu aja gauzo de mi,
 non prezo un genoi.

The sentences in Inferno, XVI, 128 et seq and Purg, VIII, 127 et seq. (ti giuro, vi giuro) may be directly compared with Propertius IV [v], VII, 51: iuro ego, the se m'avuti Deo, se m'arti Iddio of Guittone and Boccaccio with the Portuguese se Deos m'ajude (Gaal, 92) and the Old French si m'aist Dex etc. (with si, cf. note 15); the se Dio mi vaglia of B. Latino and the Spanish si vos valva el Criador (Cid, 3139), with Lat. sic. valeas, sic uiuas (Sil. It.), sic te amet Venus etc.

From the phonetic point of view, it is true that Lat. sic has given Old Ital. sí, O. Fr. sí, Port. sim, Rum. și. But there is no difficulty in admitting that, with a different meaning and consequently with a different intonation, it has given at the same time se (să) in the same languages.

The case is exactly the same as with Lat. magis, which has given Ital. ma and mai, Port. mas and mais. It is, in any case, not more difficult to derive Ital., O. French se from sic than from sī. That sic in the Romance languages was weakening in stress, is proved by the modern forms. Ital. così, Fr. ainsi, Sp. así, Cat. assí, Engad. aschia, Port. assim, Rum. asa, Lomb. mśí, Prov. enaisi, Log. gar (= eccu-hāc-sic*), etc. Cf. the linguistic atlas of Italy by Jaberg, and Jud, map 631.

An exact parallel to this supposed split¹⁷ of Lat. sic into the two forms si(m), se (sǎ) in French,¹⁸ Italian, Portuguese, and Rumanian,¹⁹ is given by the German so, which also has two functions and a different stress in each function: and it is precisely the function corresponding to the Romance desiderative se (sɪ) which has the lighter stress (sǒ), whereas the function corresponding to sic (ita) 'this way' has the heavier (sō). The German process has been carefully examined by L. Spitzer (Rom, LXV [1939], 309), who quotes so mir Gott helfe as well as Schiller: Hier Schwore ich [Lat. uīrō, Ital. giuro], und so speye die Natur mich aus ihren Grenzen in eine bosartige Bestie aus, [. . .].

My interpretation of this type of Romance se as sic seems to be confirmed by the obvious German translation of se in all the passages quoted above, which is so; cf. e.g. Diez, 4th ed., II, 233: "Daher [Conjunktiv] salt, conselt in den gewonlichen Betheuerungsformeln se dex me salt 'so Gott mich behute,' se dex me conseut 'so Gott mir rathe'." In English, likewise, the obvious translation of se, sɪ, in all the passages quoted above would be so, so may God help you, protect you, etc., etc., and the Italian word se is in effect correctly given in so in most English translations of Dante (see McKenzie, Italica, XIII, 73, at the end of the page). Spitzer observes the same for German (Rom, LXV [1939], 299 et seqq., 309).

From the purely formal point of view, the method of geographic linguistics, codified by Bàrtoli in his well-known Introduzione alla neolinguistica (Geneva, 1925), indicates that the Sardinian and Spanish sɪ should be older than the Italian and French se for two reasons: (1) because both Sardinia and Spain are "aree isolate" with relation to Northern France and Italy, and even to Provence and to Rumania (Bàrtoli, 3 et seqq.; 19, cf. also 26, 66); (2) because both of them, being colonies, are "aree seriori" with relation to Italy, which was the metropolis (Bàrtoli, 13 et seqq.). And, if, approaching the problem from another side, we apply Grober's "chronological" theory (ALL., I, 211 et seqq.), we note that it fits ¹⁷ There is little doubt, I think, that both Old Italian desiderative and conditional se are stressless (pretonic). For Old French se < sic, see Rydberg, Geschichte des französischen (Upsala, 1907), I, 855 et seqq.; also Gailhéron, Abeille, 283 et seqq.

As for the fall of final -c, cf. e.g. Fr. là, It. là, Sp. allá < Lat. illāc, It. lì, Sp. allí < Lat. illīc. Cf. also note 9, at the end, and note 22.

¹⁸ The oldest Provençal texts show sí, not se. See Place, Hispanic Review, v, 262. Did se come later from Northern France?

¹⁹ Old Rumanian has se, exactly as Italian, French, and Portuguese, cf. Meyer-Lubke Gramm. rom., 3, 639, §567. Modern Rumanian has să, derived from se, and thus from sī(c)*.

perfectly with our case, for the older form sīc (or sī) is preserved in all the ancient colonies (Sicily, Sardinia, Venetia, Spain, Provence), whereas the more recent colonies (Northern Gaul, Lusitania, Rhaetia, Dacia) and the metropolis, Italy, have the shortened form 'sī (cf. the just cited linguistic Atlas, map 1278). So the Vulgar Latin passage of sīc (or sī) to 'sī in Italy must have occurred slightly before Caesar's conquest of Gaul, which ended in the year 50 B C with the organization of Northern Gaul into provinces, Lusitania and Rhaetia became provinces in 15 B C, Dacia in 108 A D. Cf. also Bruch, Glotta, 26 (1938), 173 (on the distribution of auricula and ōricula in the Romance countries).

About the Aragonese, Leonese and Asturian form se, see also E. B. Place, Hispanic Review, v (1937), 259, 261. As for Catalan, either if we consider it as a Provençal or as an Ibero-roman dialect, its sī tallies perfectly with both Grober's and Bàrtoli's theories.

A very interesting detail concerning the Latin use of the sīc construction which we have just examined is that it is almost exclusively poetical. Of the prose writers, only two, most characteristic ones, have it—Petronius twice and Apuleius once. It will also be noted that it is more frequent in the elegiac and epigrammatic style than in the epic. W. Kroll explains this in Glotta, vii (1916), 80:

Dasz es sich dabei um volkstümliche Ausdrucksweise handelt, zeigt z. B. Catull, xvii, 5 sic tibi bonus ex tua pons libidine fiat; CIL. iv, 2776 presta mi sinceru(m): sic te amet [. . .] Venus. Wir dürfen also ein in der Umgangssprache gebräuchliches sic ualeas [cf. Hist. Apolloni 7 S. xi, 3] annehmen, auch wenn es vielleicht nicht überliefert ist.²⁰

It is evident that the presence of this sīc in such prose writers as Petronius and Apuleius—and its complete absence in all the others—only confirms Kroll's opinion: it was a popular expression, common in colloquial Latin, but avoided by good authors. As for the coincidence between the poetical and the popular speech in Rome, other interesting examples could be cited.²¹ The psychological reasons for this coincidence are presented, as usual, in a masterful way by Fr. Ruckdeschel in his excellent dissertation Archaismen und Vulgarismen in der Sprache des Horaz (Munich, 1910), 5:

²⁰ In La sintaxis científica (Madrid, 1935), p. 92, n. 1 he adds CIL. iv (Pompeii), 6641. cacator sic ualeas, ut tu hoc locum traseas[s], the vulgar character of which no one would deny. Cf. also with the CIL. viii, 1070, 4-5 (c). ita tibi contingat quod uis, ut hoc sacrum non uiolēs.

²¹ E.g. the so-called "poetical plurals" of the type gaudia > French joie; see Bonfante, Emerita, iv (1936), 245, G. Devoto, Storia della lingua di Roma (Bologna, 1940), 173; 238. See also the use of gŷrus instead of circulus (Bonfante, Emerita, v [1937], 24 et seq., Devoto, 334, 337).

Selbst in den Oden höheren und höchsten Stils begegnet uns hie und da Volkstümliches und wir dürfen uns daran nicht stoßen. Volks- und Dichtersprache sind eben keine absoluten Gegensätze, sondern stehen einander in mehrfacher Hinsicht nahe. Beide entspringen aus lebhafter Phantasie, aus warmem, oft überquellendem Gefühl, beide denken plastisch anschaulich, lieben daher die bildliche Ausdrucksweise und vermeiden alles Abstrakte, rein Gedankliche. Darum kann man auch bei unseren besten Lyrikern die Spuren der Volkssprache oft genug wahrnehmen.

Like so many other phenomena of popular and vulgar Latin, our sic-construction faded away for some centuries from our texts, only to reappear later in the new form of spoken Latin: Romance.

If we consider attentively the material which I have presented above, I believe that we may conclude that in the passage of Plautus, mentioned at the beginning of this paper, Miles, 571: ne tu hercle, si te di ament, linguam comprimes (in case we wish to preserve the subjunctive ament) the correction of si to sic is very likely, particularly if we compare (following Hofmann, Lat. Gramm., 771 et seqq.) Amphitruo 597: neque, ita me di ament, credebam. But the following observation of Hofmann seems to me not to correspond to the facts: he writes:

doch scheint die unmittelbare Gleichsetzung [?] dieses si mit sic als Einleitungsform von Wunschsätzen (oft seit den Augusteern, s. Kroll, Glotta, VII, 80 und Wiss. Synt., 80, dazu Gnomon, 2, 760) an der fast regelmässigen [!] Nachstellung dieser sic-Sätze zu scheitern.

Cf. also Harper's Dict., 1 (2d ed., 1907), 1691, 3, v, 1.

Now, of the 38 examples quoted above, 19 (Catullus, xvii, 5, Horace, Odes, I, iii, 1, Sat, II, iii, 300 et seq.; Tibullus, I, iv, 1 et seqq.; I, vii, 53 et seqq.; Propertius, xv, 1 et seqq., Vergil, Ecl., ix, 30, x, 4 et seqq., Aen., x, 875, Ovid, Metam., viii, 848 et seqq.; Tristia, v, ii, 51 et seqq.; Seneca, Troades, 689 et seqq.; Petronius, lxi, 2, lxxv, 1; Martial, ix, xlii, 1 et seqq.; Silius Italicus, v, 179 et seqq., Carm. epigr. 1067, 1467, 1468) have the clause with sic preceding the other sentence; in 12 cases (Horace, Odes, I, xxviii, 25 et seqq., Tibullus, II, v, 63 et seqq.; II, v, 121 et seqq., II, vi, 29 et seqq., Propertius, III, vi, 1 et seqq., Ovid, Metam., xiv, 761 et seqq.; Epist., iv, 147 et seqq.; iv, 167 et seqq.; xv, 280; Tristia, iv, v, 17 et seqq.; Martial, vii, xciii, 8 et seqq., cii., iv, 2776) the sic-clause follows the other sentence; in one case (Ovid, Tristia, v, iii, 35) one imperative sentence precedes (fer) and two follow (ades, releues); in another (Silius Italicus, iv, 505 et seqq.) the sic-sentence is split by the other one, while in the 5 remaining instances the sic-clause divides the other one in two parts (Propertius iv [v], vii, 51 et seqq.; Ovid, Epist., III, 135 et seqq., Martial vii, lxxxix, 3 et seqq.; Silius Italicus, II, 301 et seqq.; Apuleius, Metam., viii, 20). We see, therefore, that in the majority of the instances the desiderative sic-sentence precedes the other one, as is the case in Old Italian, where the se-clause precedes the other one in 30 cases, follows it in 7, and splits it in 9

If what I have tried to demonstrate above is true—viz. that se, si in the Romance formulas of adjuration (and asseveration) comes from Lat. sic—I think the strongest pillar of Nicholson's construction is destroyed. Romance se, si (both adjurative and conditional) may come from an intermingling²² of Lat. sic and sī, or perhaps even from sic alone, but sī has nothing to do with the matter.

* * *

The main idea which I defend in the present article was first expressed, I think, by Cornu, Rom, x (1881), 87, then by Gaston Paris in the same journal, xii (1883), 628:

"car, malgré ce que dit Diez [trad. fr., iii, 328], dans ces formules [romanes d'invocation et de serment] il faut certainement reconnaître sic et non si, et les formes italiennes, portugaises, provençales et françaises se ne proviennent que d'une confusion postérieure."

Cf. also L. G. Blanc, Gramm. der Italian. Spr., 585, Tommaseo-Bellini, Dizionario della lingua ital., s.u. se, xxxiv, 737, Menéndez Pidal, Cantar de mio Cid, (Madrid, 1908), i, 372 et seq.; L. Foulet, Romania, LIII (1927), 303. But none of these scholars has examined the problem in detail, although the exact meaning of the latin sic in these constructions is correctly indicated by L. Foulet (p. 303) commenting on Horace sic te diua potens; "Je fais des vœux pour que Vénus [. . .] les vents [. . .] dirigent ta course, ô navire, en revanche amène Virgile [. . .]" (italics mine).²³

Princeton University
June, 1940.

G BONFANTE

²² The relation between sī and sic was originally a very close one, cf. e.g. W. Kroll, La sintaxis científica p. 91 et seqq., Ernout-Meillet, s.u. sī; Hofmann, Lat. Grammatik, p. 771 et seq. (with bibl.) There were once the same word, sic being nothing more than sī-ce* (sei-ce*).

In any case, sic and sī confused largely in late Latin—see on this subject Hofmann, Lat. Gramm., p. 772 at the top of the page, Rydberg, Geschichte des französischen, (Upsala, 1907), i, 215 et seq.; 236 et seq., with material and bibliography. About the weakening of sī to sī > se, see the same work, i, 224 et seqq., about sic > se, ibidem, 855 et seqq. Then Gilliéron, Abeille, p. 283 et seqq. and see above notes 9 and 17.

About sī > si in Latin, see Bourciez, Éléments de ling. romane, 3d ed., 282, §257 "il faut observer qu'en latin vulgaire l'ī s'y était abrégé dans des combinaisons sī quis, sī quidem (Ovidé), Fast., 4, 603), d'où une forme romane se (sauf en espagnol où le classique si a été conservé, et en français où il a été rétabli vers le XVe siècle)." Cf. also Leumann, Lat. Gramm., 102 §87 A 4.

²³ I wish to express here all my gratitude to Prof. McKenzie, who not only gave me excellent advice during the redaction of this paper, but also generously placed at my disposal his Old Italian material, fruit of his patient and personal investigation.

THE FOUR DAUGHTERS OF GOD IN THE GESTA ROMANORUM AND THE COURT OF SAPIENCE

THE medieval version of the Four Daughters of God which exerted a wider influence than any other recension of Saint Bernard's famous allegory¹ has been overlooked in literary investigations of the theme.² For the sake of convenience one might refer to this work in Latin prose as the Rex et Famulus. At the end of the volume containing one of its manuscripts, an ascription in a hand of the fourteenth century assigns the authorship of the entire collection to one Peter of Poitiers, whom Hauréau identifies as a monk living at Saint-Victor at the beginning of the thirteenth century.³ Since three contemporary medieval writers are known to have borne this name, I shall refer to the supposed author as Peter of Saint-Victor.⁴

I The allegory was transcribed by Hauréau in 1884 from MS Latin 14886 Bibliothèque Nationale,⁵ and again in 1891 from a better text, MS

¹ In Annunthione B. Mariae, Migne, Patr. Lat. CLXXXIII, 383-390, see especially cols 385-390.

² For previous literary studies see R. Heinzel, "Vier Geistliche Gedichte," ZfdA, xvii (1874), 43-56, especially p. 49, W. Scherer, "Die Vier Töchter Gottes," ZfdA, xxi (1877), 414-416, L. Bourgain, La Chaire Française au Deuxième Siècle, Paris, 1879, pp. 214 ff., Hope Traver, The Four Daughters of God (Bryn Mawr, 1907), and Miss Traver's later study, "The Four Daughters of God: A Mirror of Changing Doctrine," PMLA, xl (1925), 44-92; C. F. Buhler, Sources of the Court of Sapience (Leipzig, 1932), A. Långfors, "Notice des Manuscrits 535 et 10047," Notices et Extraits de la Bibliothèque Nationale, xlii (1933), 172-182. G. R. Owst mentions the version in a note, Literature and Pulpit in Medieval England (Cambridge, 1933), p. 91, but evidently confuses Peter of Saint Victor with Peter of Poitiers, the Chancellor of Paris, since it is the Chancellor who wrote the Summa or Sentencebook, cf. P. S. Moore, The Works of Peter of Poitiers (Washington, 1936), pp. 26-27. Jean Rivière in his theological analysis in Le Dogme de la Rédemption au Début du Moyen-Âge (Paris, 1934), pp. 342-346, discusses the Rex et Famulus as a poetic treatment of doctrine, giving only casual attention to one or two of the literary aspects. This list is selective.

³ B. Hauréau, "Notice sur le Numéro 8299 des Manuscrits Latins de la Bibliothèque Nationale," Not. et Extr., xxxi (1884), 303-304. Despite the ascription, the authorship is obviously uncertain.

⁴ The first Peter of Poitiers was the Prior of Cluny, and is not known to have written any prose, the second was the Chancellor of Paris, and, as a secular, would not have been called Brother, the third, because he was a monk at Saint-Victor, would have been given this title, and for this reason Hauréau favors his identification with the writer of the Rex et Famulus. To appreciate the possibilities of confusion, see L. Deslisle, Le Cabinet des Manuscrits de la Bibliothèque Nationale (Paris, 1874), II, 221, and F. Bonnard, Histoire de l'Abbaye Royale de Saint-Victor de Paris (Paris, 1907), I, 122-123. For the best discussion of identity, see P. S. Moore, The Works of Peter of Poitiers (Washington, 1936), pp. 21-24.

⁵ Not. et Extr. xxxi, 301-303. The exact foliation is not given. Hauréau does not discuss the sources nor the influence of this work.

Latin 5556, folio 64.^a The extent to which medieval preachers, poets, and dramatists used the Rex et Famulus leads one to conjecture that numerous manuscripts once existed, some of which might still be found in the inaccessible libraries of Europe. Instead of the text of a manuscript, one regrets the necessity of printing here for readiness in reference Hauréau's transcription of MS 5556 and variant readings from his text of MS 14886. The variant readings are noted just after the text.

Misericordia et veritas obviaverunt sibi, etc. Fuit quidam paterfamilias, scilicet rex quidam potens, qui quatuor habuit filias, quarum prima^a vocabatur Misericordia, altera Veritas, tertia Pax, quarta Justitia,⁷ de quibus dictum est Misericordia et veritas, etc. Habebat etiam filium sapientissimum, cui nemo in omni scientia poterat comparari. Habebat etiam famulum suum, quem exaltaverat, quem sublimaverat,^b quem multo honore ditaverat, utpote quem ad imaginem et similitudinem fecerat, etiam nullo suo merito praecedente. Dominus vero, uti mos est hujusmodi dominorum sapientium, voluit mores cognoscere et explorare fidem famuli sui utrum esset famulus fidelis erga se, necne. Dedit ei leve praeceptum vel mandatum, dicens "Die quacumque comederis fructum scientiae boni et mali, morte morieris, istud mandatum si bene^c custodiens, amphori honore donaberis,^d sin autem, morte pessima^e morieris." Famulus, suscepto mandato domini sui haud mora transgressus est id mandatum. Quid plura? quid verborum vos laciniis demorabor? Dominus, transgressio cui non latuit, adfuit et causam transgressionis quaesivit.^f Famulus superbus, turgidus, contumeliosus, inflatus, totam culpam retorsit in dominum suum. Cum enim dixit, "Mulier quam dedisti mihi ipsa me decepit," totam culpam impegit in auctorem. Dominus vero, non tam pro transgresso mandato quam pro illata contumelia offensus, quatuor vocavit tortores saevissimos, uni illorum praeciens ut, ligatis manibus et pedibus, superbum transgressorem incarcerationet, alteri ut vivum^g decoriaret,^h tertio ut eum jugularet,ⁱ quarto ut eum devoraret.

⁶ Notices et Extraits de Quelques Manuscrits de la Bibliothèque Nationale, III, 260-263.

⁷ It is not significant that the third daughter is Peace and the fourth Justice, the reverse of the order in the other allegories. This seems to have been inadvertent, for later when the daughters plead, Justice is called "tertia soror," and Peace speaks last, cf. Manuscrits Latins, III, 262.

⁸ Literally decorare would mean "to skin" or "to peel." Later, when the servant is in prison, the Son "vidit enim eum exoriatum," thus, either "skinned" or "stripped." Some medieval translators therefore interpret decorare "to flay" while others interpret it "to deprive or rob of everything." Because of the connotations of vivum, I interpret the phrase "to flay alive," although it might also mean "to strip of everything" or "to skin" in the figurative sense.

⁹ The broader meaning "to slaughter" for jugulare is preferable to the restricted meaning "to cut the throat" because in some versions the Son takes on himself the same torments inflicted on the prisoner.

Variant readings from MS 14886 ^a una ^b quem sublimaverat, om ^c bene, om.
^d honoraberis ^e pessima, om ^f Demum transgressam non tantum affectu, sed causam transgressionis quaesivit ^g uni illorum praeciens ut eum incarcerationet alteri ut vivum decollaret

crudeli poena. Posthac autem, cum occasio se obtulerit, hos quatuor tortores propriis designabo^a nominibus et^b eorundem effrae natam insaniam in caput famuli enucleabo Tortores igitur, sua saevitia domino placere studentes,^c arreptum miserum omnibus poenis afficere coeperunt Has autem famuli poenas audiens una de filiabus regis, scilicet Misericordia, veloci cursu cucurrit ad carcerem et intro aspiciens vidensque famulum incarcerationum^d tortoribus nequam mancipatum, poenis affectum, non potuit non misereri, quia proprium est Misericordiae misereri, et laceratis vestibus et complosis manibus sparsisque^e per colla capillis, ululans et clamans recurrit ad patrem et ingenuculata ante paternos pedes, coepit simplici et gemebunda voce dicere "Heul pater carissime, numquid ego sum filia tua Misericordia et non diceris misericors? Si misericors fueris, famuli tui miserearis, et si famuli tui non miserearis, misericors non eris Si misericors non fueris, me^f Misericordiam filiam non habebis" Taliter illa ante patrem argumentante,^g advenit soror ejus Veritas, et cur Misericordia fleret quaesivit a patre. Cui pater "Ista, inquit, soror tua vult ut ego^h miserear illius superbi transgressoris cui poenam indixi." Veritas, haec audiens, admodum stomachata, torvisqueⁱ oculis intuens patrem, sic ait "Numquid ego sum filia^j tua Veritas et non diceris verax? Nonne verum est quod ei poenam injunxisti et per mortem tormenta promisisti? Si verax fueris, verum persequaris Si verum non persequaris, verax non eris. Si verax non fueris, Veritatem filiam non habebis" Et ecce Misericordia et Veritas obviaverunt sibi. Has lites, has contentiones, has rixas, has causas audivit tertia soror, scilicet Justitia, et, clamoribus earum accita, coepit a Veritate causam querelae quaerere, et Veritas, quae non poterat nisi vera dicere, ait. "Ista, inquit, soror nostra Misericordia, si soror dici debet,^k quia nobis non consentit, vult ut pater noster misereatur illius superbi transgressoris." Tunc Justitia, inflammato vultu,^l versans in corde dolorem, sic ait ad patrem "Numquid ego sum filia tua Justitia et non dicens esse justus? Si justus fueris, in transgressorem justitiam excercebis, si justitiam non exercueris, non eris justus. Si justus non fueris, me Justitiam filiam tuam non habebis. Ecce Veritas et Justitia hinc, illinc sola Misericordia;

Et virgo caede madentes,
Ultima coelestium terras Astraea reliquit,¹⁰ scilicet Pax fugit in regionem longinquam^m Ubi enim lis est et contentio ibi non est pax, et quanto major est contentio tanto magis pacis elongatio. Pace igitur amissa et tribus filiabus regis in gravi dissensione positus, quid pater faceret, cui parti tutius cederetⁿ difficillime diffiniebat Si enim Misericordiae cederet, Veritatem et Justitiam offenderet. Si vero^o Veritati et Justitiae cederet, Misericordiam filiam non haberet, et tamen necesse erat ut misericors esset et justus et

¹⁰ Ovid, Metamorphosis, lib I, v. 149

Variant readings from MS 14886: ^a Postquam autem occasio se obtulit hos quatuor tortores propriis nominibus vobis designat, eorundem effraenatam insaniam in caput famuli enucleabo
^b nominibus et, om. ^c domino placere, om. ^d incarcerationum, om ^e expansque
^f in me ^g arguente ^h ego, om. ⁱ que, om ^j et filia
^k debeat ^l et Justitia, inflato vultu, ^m scilicet Pax fugit de regione longinqua ⁿ audiret ^o vero, om.

pacificus et verax Propterea consilio opus erat Advocans itaque filium suum^a sapientissimum, super hoc negotio eum consuluit Cui^b Filius "Committite mihi,^c pater, praesens negotium prosequendum, et ego tibi de transgressore vindictam faciam, et quatuor filias tuas reducta pace tibi restituam." Cui pater ait. "Magna sunt quae promittis, nec vocem facta sequentur Si dictis facta compensas, faciam quod hortaris." Suscepto igitur mandato regali, filius sumpsit secum Misericordiam, sororem suam, et, saliens in montibus et transiliens colles, pervenit ad carcerem, et, respiciens per fenestras, prospiciens per cancellos vidit famulum incarceratum et positum in calamitate praesentis vitae, vidit enim eum excoriatum, jugulatum, devoratum, quia ex quo homo moritur vermibus esca datur, et per ipsum mors intravit in mundum, et quoniam occasio se obtulit, dicamus nomina quatuor tortorum Primus tortor tortorum qui eum incarceravit est carcer et exilium^d praesentis vitae, de quo dictum est "Heu mihi! quia intus la" in Pro. Secundus, qui eum decoriavit,^e miseria est mundi quae nos omnes poenis et miseriis afficit Tertius, qui eum jugulavit, mors est, quae nos omnes jugulat et occidit Quartus, qui eum devoravit, vermis est, quia,^f sicut dixi, ex quo homo moritur vermibus esca datur et vermes ad corrodendum eum suscipiunt Quatuor, inquam, tortores isti, videlicet carcer huius exilii et miseria huius mundi et mors et vermis, isti, inquam, tortores a primo homine usque ad novissimum, per totam successionem, primi transgressoris poenas exigunt. Carcer enim nos detinet, miseria mundi nos curciat, quatenus miseriis omnia mala infert, mors nos jugulat, vermis nos rodit Videns igitur filius patris-familias his quatuor tortoribus famulum suum mancipatum, non potuit non misereri, quia Misericordiam comitem habebat,^g et, intro saliens in carcerem,^h morte sua mortem devicit, et alligato forti, id est diabolo, ejus vasa rapuit et spolia distribuit, et, cum copiosa praeda ascendens in altum, captivam duxit captivitatem deditque dona hominibus et famulum duplicato honore ad patriam reduxit, dans ei stolam immortalitatis.ⁱ Hos videns Misericordia non habebat unde conqueretur, quia vidit famulum duplicato honore reversum, et stola immortalitatis indutum. Veritas non inveniebat causam querelae, quia pater inventus fuerat verax, nam^j famulus omnes poenas exsolverat Justitia, soror, jam nil conquerebatur, quia in transgressore fuerat justitia comprobata, et, si revixit, perierat et inventus in [morte?] Videns itaque Pax sorores suas concordantes, reversa est et eas pacificavit Ecce misericordia et veritas obviaverunt sibi, justitia et pax osculatae sunt. Sic igitur per mediatorem Dei, hominum et hominum et angelorum, scilicet Christum Jesum, pacificatus et reconciliatus est homo et ad ovile Dei ovis centesima reducta est. Ad quod ovile nos perducatur Jesus Christus, cui est honor et gloria Amen.

II. Like most versions of the Four Daughters of God dealing with vicarious redemption, the Rex et Famulus was inspired by Saint Bernard's first sermon on the Annunciation.¹¹ Bernard's allegory interprets Psalm eighty-four, verse eleven of the Vulgate, "Misericordia et veritas obvia-

¹¹ P. L. CLXXXIII, 383-390, especially cols 385-390

Variant readings from MS 14886 ^a suum, om. ^b cui, om. ^c mihi, om. ^d car-cer exilii ^e decollavit ^f et ^g habuit ^h incarcerationem mortis ⁱ honore reversum, stola immortalitatis indutum ^j jam verunt sibi, justitia et pax osculatae sunt," as a strife of the four attributes—Mercy, Truth, Justice, and Peace. Mercy and Peace, as two sisters, plead with their father, the King, on behalf of man who has offended Him, their sisters Justice and Truth insist that man be condemned. The four virtues are united when the Son of the King offers to satisfy the demands of each by becoming Himself the redeemer. Thus, at first, obviaverunt sibi is interpreted in its hostile sense,¹² and later as a friendly meeting or reconciliation. Since the text of the sermon is easily accessible, and since Miss Traver has already summarized it conveniently, I shall not pause longer over the details.

Jean Rivière, the learned French soteriologist, in making a theological analysis of the Four Daughters of God, has already pointed out several departures of the Rex et Famulus from the sermon of Saint Bernard.¹³ When differences of a more literary character are added, the principal points of divergence would be five:

- (1) Bernard mentions the paternity of the King, but does not emphasize it, thus in his allegory each daughter does not protest to the King that she cannot remain his child unless he yields to her request.¹⁴
- (2) In Bernard's version, Peace does not take flight.
- (3) The Rex et Famulus represents Adam and God as servant and King, not simply as God and man.
- (4) In Bernard's sermon, Adam does not become an exile nor a prisoner of the King's enemy as he does in the Rex et Famulus.
- (5) Bernard does not mention the four torturers described in the later allegory: the first, the Exile of Earthly Life, who casts the servant in prison; the second, the Misery of Life, who flays him alive; the third, Death, who slaughters him; and the fourth, Corruption, who devours him.

Despite these differences, the frequent verbal parallels and the striking similarities in theme make the dependence of the Rex et Famulus on Bernard's sermon obvious enough. It seems, too, that the author may have known the version of the allegory by Stephen of Tournai (1128–c. 1203),¹⁵ because the episode of the four torturers appears for the first ¹² The hostile interpretation of this verb was not uncommon. Although Miss Traver says that Bernard did not interpret the word in this sense, the text proves that he even emphasized the vehemence of the debate by exclaiming, "Grandis controversia, fratres." Cf. P. L., CLXXXIII, 388.

¹³ Le Dogme de la Rédemption au Début du Moyen-Âge (Paris, 1934), pp. 324–329.

¹⁴ Miss Jessie Murray, Le Chateau d'Amour (Paris, 1918), p. 72, says, "En parlant des quatre vertus, ni Hugues, ni Saint Bernard ne les appelle directement les Filles de Dieu, bien que cette relation soit suffisamment mise en évidence par le contexte." I find nothing in Hugo to establish this relationship. In Bernard's allegory one reads, "Aut Misericordia, utquid me genuisti pater citius perituram?" P. L., CLXXXIII, 388.

¹⁵ For a list of the MSS of this allegory see L. Bourgain, La Chaire Française au XII^e Siècle (Paris, 1879), pp. 51–52. Rivière makes an analysis from MS. Latn 14935 Bibliothèque Nationale, fol. 6^r–8^r, in Le Dogme de la Rédemption au Début du Moyen-Âge, pp.

time in this redaction. Yet, because the torturers in Stephen's allegory are Stupor, Furor, Error, and Dolor, and also because of many other differences, direct dependence seems extremely doubtful. Since the versions of the allegory by Peter of Blois¹⁶ and Innocent III¹⁷ contain no points of contact with the Rex et Famulus other than those common to the tradition, their relationship to the history of the motif need not be considered.

Strangely enough, the five differences distinguishing the Rex et Famulus from Bernard's allegory are those which characterize nearly all of the later versions. No less than twelve literary recensions show probable direct contact with this source, while several others exhibit the influence of the tradition it established. A number of these recensions are too highly complicated with another major motif to be dealt with satisfactorily here. In a separate study which I am now preparing for publication, it will be possible to reconstruct from literary and historical data the genealogies made by Traver, Buhler, and Långfors,¹⁸ and to prove that the versions by Saint Bernard and Hugo of Saint-Victor owe their origin to two widely different traditions. Without injury to the pattern, two of the less complicated versions, that in the Gesta Romanorum and the Court of Sapience, can be lifted from the general motif as independent studies.

III. Before considering the sources of the Four Daughters of God in the Gesta Romanorum, one should distinguish clearly between the Latin text of the earliest printed editions¹⁹ and the English translation of the fifteenth century in MS. Harley 7333.²⁰ Each is based on a version differing materially from the other, and the failure to recognize this has led to some confusion in the problem of sources. Miss Traver, in speaking of the Gesta, has in mind only the Latin version of the Vulgartext edited by Oesterley, and does not take into account the English redaction, which in itself would constitute another variant.²¹ Buhler, evidently accepting 354-358. A summary in translation is given in Miss Traver's later study, PMLA, xI, 73-74. Rivière dates this work in the last quarter of the twelfth century, op. cit., p. 354, note 3.

¹⁶ P. L., ccvii, cols. 750-755. While this allegory touches on vicarious redemption, it does not properly belong to the type we have been considering.

¹⁷ Sermo I, Dominica I Adventus Domini, P. L., ccxvii, 318-320.

¹⁸ For a convenient summary of these conclusions, see the graph at the end of Miss Hope Traver's monograph The Four Daughters of God, C. F. Buhler's Sources of the Court of Sapience, pp. 22-25; A. Långfors, "Notice des Manuscrits 535 et 10047," Not. et Extr., xlii (1933), 196-205.

¹⁹ Ed. H. Oesterley, Gesta Romanorum (Berlin, 1872), from the Vulgartext containing 181 chapters first printed by Ulrich Zell at Cologne between 1472 and 1475. For the allegory of the Four Daughters, see pp. 350-355.

²⁰ Ed. S. J. H. Herrtage, Gesta Romanorum, E. E. T. S. 33 (1879), 132-136. This work will be referred to hereafter as English Gesta. See also The Old English Versions of the Gesta Romanorum, ed. F. Madden (London, 1838), pp. 112-115.

²¹ Four Daughters, pp. 114-115. See also Miss Traver's later study, "The Four Daughters of God. A Mirror of Changing Doctrine," PMLA, xI (1925), 83-90.

Miss Traver's theory of sources for the Gesta, and identifying the Latin with the English, does not cite from the Latin text on which Miss Traver based her conclusions, but from the English version, which does not translate it. Because of this he is obliged to make a new classification of types, since such episodes as that of the four torturers are not to be found in Miss Traver's Latin source, and were not, therefore, considered.²²

The tales in the original Latin Gesta are generally believed to have been compiled in England toward the end of the thirteenth or at the beginning of the fourteenth century.²³ Finding its way to the Continent, the original Anglo-Latin collection was altered and enlarged. Three editions of the augmented compilation were printed between 1472 and 1475.²⁴ Because of the changes made in the continental version, the printed tales differed greatly from the Anglo-Latin on which they were originally based. Thus the allegory of the Four Daughters of God contained in both compilations represents two entirely different versions.

It is only in the form preserved in the Vulgar text or continental version that the Gesta is accessible in printed editions today.²⁵ Nevertheless, the tales in the English translation of the Gesta which date from the reign of Henry VI were not based upon the Vulgar text but on the Anglo-Latin versions thought to have been the original, which now exist in manuscript only. Although I have not seen the allegory of the Four Daughters of God in the original Anglo-Latin Gesta, I am certain not only from the translation but from inferences drawn from Madden's notes²⁶ that the author had before him a copy of the Rex et Famulus.

²² Sources of the Court of Sapience, pp. 22-25.

²³ For detailed discussions of this problem, see Oesterley, pp. 257, 266-269; Herrtage, pp. xvii-xix. More recent studies add nothing new to these conclusions, cf. Miss Ella Bourne, "Classical Elements in the Gesta Romanorum," in Vassar Medieval Studies, 1923, pp. 345-376.

²⁴ One hundred and fifty or one hundred and fifty-one tales were printed at Utrecht by Ketelaer and De Leempt, a second edition appeared at Cologne. A third edition of one hundred and eighty-one chapters was printed at Cologne by Ulrich Zell, cf. Oesterley, Gesta, p. 267. A copy of the Cologne edition in the Quadragesimal type of Robert de Licio (1473) is in the Rare Book Room of the Yale Library. See especially cap. 55, fol. 39-41.

²⁵ It was Oesterley's opinion that the early printed text of the two enlarged compilations not only supplanted the manuscripts, but usurped the place of the original collection in Anglo-Latin, so that the versions altered and printed on the Continent came to be considered the original Gesta Romanorum. It is thus that he explained the fact that none of the manuscripts of the original Anglo-Latin Gesta were ever printed, and are extant in manuscript only, while no manuscript exactly corresponding to the printed Vulgar text has survived, cf. Gesta, pp. 266-269.

²⁶ Madden (p. 513) notes only two departures in the translation "to helde him qwyke," for which the Anglo-Latin has ut vivum excoriaret, and "yuglythe" for the Anglo-Latin jugulavit. Cf. Herrtage, English Gesta, p. 470. These forms both occur in the Rex et Famulus. If these are the only deviations in the English version, it may be assumed that the transla-

To give a summary of the version as it appears in the English Gesta would be only to present in translation the allegory attributed to Peter of Saint-Victor. In the English Gesta, the emperor bears the name Agios, the servant is given "a contree" to keep instead of a commandment, and the functions of the tormentors are slightly varied. The explanation in the Rex et Famulus is paraphrased in the "Moralitee" of the Gesta. Aside from these differences, the translation is almost literal. A fair specimen is offered in the passage describing the feelings of Mercy when she beholds the suffering servant. The English Gesta says of her that he myght not but have pyte,—for hit is þe propirte of mercy to have pite & compassion & so she Rente of the clothinges of hir body, & of hir hede, and pulld of hir heer, and yellid, and cride, and ranne with alle hir myght to hir fadir, the Emperour, and knelid to him, and seide, 'Alas! my dere fadir, am I not thi owter, and art þow not mercyfulle?'²⁷

The corresponding passage in the Rex et Famulus reads:

Miseriordia . . . non potuit non misereri, quia proprium est Misericordiae misereri, et, laceratis vestibus et complois manibus sparsisque per colla capillis, ulans et clamans recurrit at patrem et ingeniculata ante paternos pedes, coepit mplici et gemebunda voce dicere: 'Heu! pater carissime, numquid ego sum ia tua Misericordia et non diceris misericors?'²⁸

The version in the Latin Vulgartext, on the other hand, although apparently based on the Anglo-Latin copy of the Rex et Famulus,²⁹ departs from it to a notable degree. The pleas of Mercy, Justice and Truth are similar to those in the original Gesta. Peace has no speech, but takes her ght instead. This continental Latin version is unique, however, in that the human soul is not represented by the servant, but by a beautiful woman who is the daughter of the King of Jerusalem. Another King wooses her to be the wife of his Son. After her marriage, the wife is seduced by the Son's servant (the devil), and, when her unfaithfulness is discovered, he presents her with a bill of divorce and sends her away. Then he sees her reduced to such a state that she is obliged to beg for read, he is moved to compassion and sends a messenger asking her to turn. Through fear she cannot do this and begs him to come himself to give her.

followed his copy faithfully and that any departures from the Rex et Famulus were made by the author of the Anglo-Latin version and not by the English translator. Where the translator follows literally the Latin of the Rex et Famulus, therefore, the author of the Anglo-Latin Gesta must have copied it word for word from this version.

²⁷ Herrtage, English Gesta, p. 133.

²⁸ Hauréau, Manuscrits Latins, III, 261.

²⁹ It seems that the Vulgartext was based on the copy in the Anglo-Latin Gesta rather than directly on the Rex et Famulus because the explanation at the end resembles the style of the "moralitee" more than the explanation in the Rex et Famulus.

When the King hears what has taken place, he calls a council. It is decided that a wise man will be sent to reclaim the wife of his Son, but none who is willing can be found. When the Son himself offers to go, the King consents. Justice is angry and protests that she cannot be his daughter if he does this, since the banishment is just. Mercy and Truth make similar threats, the one in begging compassion for man, the other in urging his condemnation. Truth and Justice draw their swords and demand that the young wife be slain. Mercy snatches the swords away and says that it is time for her to rule. After Mercy has promised the Son that if his wife be penitent she will forgive her even if she should fall again, he goes forth, declares a war on the enemy, conquers, and brings her back. The usual application then follows.

It seems extremely unlikely that this continental Latin allegory in the Vulgar text was based on the Anglo-Norman Le Chateau d'Amour, for the only points of resemblance which have been pointed out between the two versions are those which both have in common with the Rex et Famulus.³⁰ Like the other tales in the printed continental Gesta, the allegory of the Four Daughters of God was ultimately based on the Anglo-Latin version. The tale in this Anglo-Latin Gesta was certainly a copy of the Rex et Famulus as the English translation of the Anglo-Latin plainly shows. Neither the allegory in the continental or English versions is based on Grosseteste's poem as has previously been supposed. Both come in the following order from the Rex et Famulus:

So different is the continental version from the Anglo-Latin that the question of departures is an interesting one. When the allusions to the Canticle of Canticles are compared, much of the difficulty disappears. In the Rex et Famulus when the Son takes his sister Mercy with him to the prison, he hastens over the hills and mountains, and looking through the bars, sees the prisoner. The passage reads:

Suscepto igitur mandato regali, filius sumpsit secum Misericordiam, sororem suam, et, saliens in montibus et transiliens colles, pervenit ad carcerem, et respiciens per fenestras, prospiciens per cancellos vidit famulum incarcerationem.³¹

³⁰ Cf. Traver, Four Daughters, pp. 114-115; cf. p. 123.

³¹ Hauréau, Manuscripts Latins, III, 262. The italics are mine.

Although in view of the context one would translate cancellos "prison-bars," the passage is obviously taken from the Vulgate version of the Canticle of Canticles which describes the quest of the beloved. After the pursuit He beholds her through the lattices:

Vox dilecti mei, ecce iste venit sahens in montibus, transiliens colles . . . respiciens per fenestras, prospiciens per cancellos En dilectus meus loquitur mihi Surge, propera amica mea, columba mea, formosa mea, et veni ³²

This passage, since it is literally translated in the English Gesta, must have been taken over from the Rex et Famulus by the author of the Anglo-Latin version. It suggested, no doubt, the alteration in the continental Vulgartext. The unique feature of this version is the substitution of the faithless wife for the servant. Commentators very frequently applied the passages on the bridegroom and the bride to Christ and the human soul. Saint Bernard brought this type of exegesis to its highest development. Because the author of the version in the Vulgartext refers twice to Bernard, it should not be surprising to find that he elaborated upon those passages which Bernard had greatly enriched.

Conclusive proof for the indebtedness of the Vulgartext to Bernard is found in the allusion to the opening verse of the Canticle of Canticles, "Osculetur me osculo oris sui. quia meliora sunt ubera tua vino." Bernard in his interpretation says that God, in order to restore peace between Himself and His people, sent His prophets as messengers. The people, dissatisfied, demanded His own kiss instead. Thus, one cried out to the messengers of peace, "Osculetur me osculo oris sui, sicque in signo pacis faciat de pace securum."³³ In the Vulgartext when the Son sends the messenger to make peace with the wife, she desires instead "quod veniret dilectus meus ad me et osculetur me osculo oris sui, tunc sum secura, quod recipiet me in gratiam suam."³⁴

The Vulgartext contains nothing which cannot be accounted for by the Anglo-Latin Gesta taken from the Rex et Famulus, and by the commentaries of Saint Bernard which this version suggested. The version in the Vulgartext became in its turn the inspiration of Jean Gualohe's dramatized allegory, L'Amour Divin,³⁵ which was licensed to be printed at Troyes, July 26, 1601. Its influence is obvious also in the earlier Moralité de Nature et Loy de Rigueur.³⁶ The Rex et Famulus, therefore, and not Grosseteste's poem was also the ultimate source for these plays.³⁷

³² Cant cant II 8-10

³³ Sermones in Cantica, P. L., CLXXXIII, 791.

³⁴ Oesterley, Gesta, p. 351

³⁵ This play has not been edited. Miss Travers gives a detailed summary from MS fr 9306, Bibliothèque Nationale; cf. Four Daughters, pp. 116-119

³⁶ Ed. F. Michel in Recueil de Farces, Moralités et Sermons Joyeux (Paris, 1837), III, no.

3 Miss Traver, Four Daughters, p. 120, points out the resemblance to the Gesta.

³⁷ Miss Traver gives Grosseteste as the ultimate source. Ibid., pp. 113, 123

In so far as *Le Laz d'Amour*³⁸ was dependent on the continental Gesta,³⁹ it was also indebted to the Rex et Famulus.

IV The anonymous Court of Sapience,⁴⁰ first rejected from the Lydgate canon by MacCracken,⁴¹ and later by Spindler,⁴² was written very probably between 1450 and 1475.⁴³ Since Miss Traver and Professor Spindler have both given excellent summaries of the version of the Four Daughters utilized here,⁴⁴ I shall limit this section to the sources of the allegory. Even here, a further limitation must be made, excluding the influence of pseudo-Bonaventure and Guillaume de Deguileville.

Buhler, after accepting Miss Traver's theory of the direct dependence of the Court on Grosseteste's poem, aims to show more precisely which passages in the Court had been borrowed from Le Chateau d'Amour.⁴⁵ The inquiry results in the discovery of fourteen stanzas.⁴⁶ The first, stanza 26, which introduces the "dowtefull prynce," his daughters, and the Son, although common to the tradition, owes its origin to the Rex et Famulus. The second, stanza 27, has no parallel in Grosseteste:

'Fowre tormentours the kyng clepyd to hym, 183
Bad oone hym put in bytter pryson sowre,
Another shuld quyk fle hym, lythe and lym,
The thryd kil hym, the fourth shuld hym deuoure .'

One will immediately recognize in these lines a close translation of the Latin version. The same may be said of the next example, stanza 28, which describes the emotions of Mercy on seeing the prisoner:

'She lokyd downe in to the pryson depe, 190
Her louyd seruant she sy sytting there,
For whom her hert gan bothe to blede and wepe,
Dystylling teares disteyneth all hyr chere,
She gan vnase her tressyd sonnysh here,
Naked her brest, and for compassyoun,
Before her fadyr on knees fyll adoune!

This passage, lacking in Le Chateau d'Amour, reads thus in the Rex et Famulus:

Has autem famuli poenas audiens una de filiabus regis, scilicet Misericordia, ³⁸ This play was "nouvellement imprimé" by Thomas Laisnec in 1500. I have not seen this work, and have been obliged to depend on Miss Traver's summary, cf. Four Daughters, pp. 120-123.

³⁹ I suggest an influence conditionally only, because as Miss Traver points out, ibid, pp. 122-123, the play is only slightly suggestive of the Gesta Romanorum.

⁴⁰ The Court of Sapience, ed. R. Spindler (Leipzig, 1927).

⁴¹ H. N. MacCracken, The Minor Poems of John Lydgate, Part I, E. E. T. S. Extra Series 107 (1911), xxxiv-xxxv. ⁴² Court, pp. 46-88. ⁴³ Ibid, pp. 80-83.

⁴⁴ Four Daughters, pp. 152-158; Court of Sapience, pp. 38-45.

⁴⁵ Sources of the Court of Sapience (Leipzig, 1932), p. 18. ⁴⁶ Ibid, p. 19.

veloci cursu cucurrit ad carcerem et intro aspiciens vidensque famulum incarceratum, tortoribus nequam mancipatum, poenis affectum, non potuit non misereri quia proprium est Misericordiae misereri et laceratis vestibus et complosis manibus sparsisque per colla capillis, ululans et clamans recurrit ad patrem et ingenuculata ante paternos pedes ⁴⁷

In the next three stanzas Mercy stresses her grief, thus expanding the passages in the Latin version in the individual manner of the poet. Stanza 32, in which Mercy asks for the prisoner's release, is common property in the tradition and is ultimately derived from the Rex et Famulus. Stanzas 33 and 34 represent Truth requesting that her Father explain to her the meaning of Mercy's action. When her Father tells her of her sister's desires, Truth presents her objection. This procedure, lacking in Grosseteste's version, appears thus in the Latin original:

Taliter illa ante patrem argumentante, advenit soror ejus Veritas, et cur Misericordia fleret quaesivit a patre. Cui pater 'Ista, inquit, soror tua vult ut ego miserem illius superbi transgressoris cui poenam indixi.' Veritas, haec audiens, ad modum stomachata, torvisque oculis intuens patrem, sic ait 'Numquid ego sum filia tua Veritas et non diceris verax? Nonne verum est quod ei poenam in iunxisti et per mortem tormenta promisisti? Si verax fueris, verum persequaris' ⁴⁸

Stanzas 35 and 36, expanding the plea of Truth, although common in the tradition, also come from the Latin.

Finally, in stanza 114 which Buhler gives as his last example of indebtedness to Grosseteste, the poet of the Court says:

'He knew the cause of hys foure sustres stryfe, 792
And how by sentence man shuld punysshed be.
Furst in the pryson of thys present lyfe,
Reuyd wyth vnheelle, slown wyth aduersyte
Dyed at the last and wyth all crewelte
Suffryd wormes deuoure hym in hys graue,
Hard was this payne, and yche man sholde hit haue.'

The lines translate literally again the passage in the Rex et Famulus

Primus tortor tortorum qui eum incarceravit est carcer et exilium praesentis vitae . . . Secundus, qui eum decoriavit, misera est mundi quae nos omnes poenis et miseriis afficit. Tertius, qui eum jugulavit, mors est, quae nos omnes jugulat et occidit. Quartus, qui eum devoravit, vermis est, quia, sicut dixi, ex quo homo moritur vermibus esca datur et vermes ad corrodendum eum suscipiunt ⁴⁹

None of the fourteen stanzas attributed to Grosseteste's influence, therefore, can be found in Le Chateau d'Amour.

⁴⁷ Hauréau, Manuscripts Latins, III, 261.

⁴⁸ Ibid

⁴⁹ Ibid., pp. 262-263

One might mention also that of the thirteen stanzas which Buhler gives as coming from pseudo-Bonaventure,⁵⁰ three come from the Rex et Famulus, and have only a general similarity of theme to the Meditationes. These are stanzas 74 and 75, containing the discussion of the difficulty between Sapience and the Son,⁵¹ and stanza 105 in which the Father bids the Son to depart.

Of the fifty-three stanzas given by Buhler as coming from other unknown sources, fifteen are directly derived from the Rex et Famulus. In stanzas 72 and 73 Sapience describes the Son as the brother of Mercy, and the Son tells Sapience of his desires.⁵² In stanza 76 the Son gives Sapience the same reasons for his perplexity as the Father gives the Son in the Rex et Famulus. In stanza 104 the Son expresses his resolution to the Father. Stanzas 106–111 expand the love of Mercy for her brother; stanza 115 tells how she accompanies him to the prison. Stanzas 126–129, describing the way in which each of the sisters is appeased, give a more literary treatment of what is found in the source:

Hoc videns Misericordia non habebat unde conqueretur, qui vidit famulum

⁵⁰ Buhler, following Miss Traver, does not question the authorship of Bonaventure of Padua, cf. Sources of the Court, p. 19, and Four Daughters, p. 41. According to Miss Traver, Molanus in his Bibliotheca Sacra (1618) first assigned the Meditationes to Bonaventure of Padua rather than to the Seraphic Doctor among whose works it had been included. The Quaracchi editors, however, questioned the attribution to either Bonaventure, the Seraphic Doctor or Bonaventure of Padua, and suggested that Joannes de Caulibus was the author, cf. Doctoris Seraphici S. Bonaventurae Opera Omnia, ed. Studio et Cura P. P. Collegii A. S. Bonaventurae, Quaracchi, viii (1898), cxii, and x (1902), 25. L. Oliger acted upon this suggestion of the Quaracchi editors and concluded from internal evidence that the author was Joannes de Caulibus of Santo Geminiano, a Franciscan who lived at the beginning of the fourteenth century, cf. "Le 'Meditationes Vitae Christi del Pseudo-Bonaventura'," Studi Francescani, N. S. vii (1921), 143–183, viii (1922), 18–47. Dom Wilmart considers Oliger's conclusions probable, cf. A. Wilmart, Auteurs Spirituels et Textes Dévots du Moyen-Age Latin (Paris, 1932), p. 509, note 2. Miss Deansley shows that the work was known in England before the time of Caulibus, and had been translated in a metrical version usually attributed to Robert Mannyng of Brunne, cf. "The Gospel Harmony of Joannes de Caulibus or St. Bonaventura," British Society for Franciscan Studies, x (1922), 12–18. Mrs. Carleton Brown, influenced perhaps by the desirability of dating precisely the Southern Passion, reverts to Bonaventure, the Seraphic Doctor, cf. Southern Passion, ed. Beatrice Daw Brown, E. E. T. S., clxix (1927), pp. liv and xc. Finally, on the evidence of the manuscripts, C. Fischer refutes all previous opinions and concludes that the author was an unknown Friar Minor who lived at the beginning of the fourteenth century and who drew upon the Meditationes de Passione of Bonaventure the Seraphic Doctor, cf. "Die Meditationes Vitae Christi' ihre Handschriftliche Ueberlieferung und die Verfasserfrage," Archivum Franciscanum Historicum, xxv (1932), 3–35, 175–209, 305–348, 449–483. Although Fischer's evidence seems the best advanced thus far, I prefer to await the final judgment of other competent scholars.

⁵¹ In the Rex et Famulus the same arguments are presented by the Father to the Son.

⁵² These desires summarize the situation in the Rex et Famulus.

duplicato honore reversum, et stola immortalitatis indutum. Veritas non inveniebat causam querelae, quia pater inventus fuerat verax, nam famulus omnes poenas exsolverat Justitia, soror, jam nil conquerebatur, quia in transgressore fuerat justitia comprobata, et, si revixit, perierat et inventus in [morte] Videns itaque Pax sorores suas concordantes, reversa est et eas pacificavit ⁵³

The total number of stanzas in the Court showing the influence of the Rex et Famulus is thirty-two There is no evidence of indebtedness to Le Chateau d'Amour.

V. The attribution of the Rex et Famulus to Peter of Saint-Victor is by no means a proof of his authorship. Hauréau thought it possible that the volume ascribed to him may have been a collection of works by various writers This fact takes on new significance when considered in its relation to an explanatory note in the Court The four torturers had been introduced in stanza 27, but their function was not interpreted until stanza 114 Since eighty-seven stanzas had intervened between the last appearance of the torturers and the explanation, the poet thought it necessary to recall the subject to his readers "Nota," he says, "Primo homo torquetur in carcere presentis vite Secundo labore et miseria mundi ex quo quis moritur vermibus esca datur." He then adds, "Hec Lincolniensis super: Misericordia et Veritas obuiauerunt simul"

No extant manuscript of Grosseteste's poem describes and interprets the four torturers. Moreover, it is certain that the Court was based on the Rex et Famulus and not on Le Chateau d'Amour Was Grosseteste, then, the real author of the Rex et Famulus? While one would like to think so, the absence of definite Grossetestean traits of style⁵⁴ makes it apparent that the reference to Lincolniensis was only an illustration of the custom of accrediting the best-known writer of a theme with the authorship of the original or its several versions

Nevertheless, against the complete rejection of Grosseteste's authorship we have the lines of the English translator in Ashmole 61 This poet, obviously dependent on Grosseteste, mentions the torturers but does not interpret their function ⁵⁵ If he found the episode in some version of Le Chateau d'Amour it seems that at least a few of the extant manuscripts would contain it ⁵⁶ It appears more likely, therefore, that the poet was ⁵³ Hauréau, Manuscripts Latins, III, 263.

⁵⁴ Professor S. Harrison Thomson, who has examined all the known MSS of Grosseteste's work, agrees with me in this conclusion

⁵⁵ "De Principio Creationis Mundi," ed. Horstmann, Allenglische Legenden, pp. 349-354; see lines 261-270

⁵⁶ Buhler thinks that two different versions of Grosseteste's poem may have existed, one containing the episode of the torturers, and the other omitting it, cf. Sources of the Court, pp. 22-23 The episode does not occur in the eleven complete MSS which Miss Murray uses in her edition, nor in the two fragments which she mentions and classifies with a drawing on the Latin source. He may have thought that Grosseteste was the author of this work also. But we cannot be certain, since the lines

Grosted it made .
All in french out of latyne, 11

probably applied to the metrical work as a whole without reference to this brief episode. The problem of the authorship of the Rex et Famulus must be left, then, "à la sagacité des érudits"⁵⁷

Apropos of these considerations, the question of the dependence of Le Chateau d'Amour and several other Anglo-Norman versions on the Rex et Famulus suggests itself. This problem involves more difficulties than are at first apparent. I have endeavored to solve some of them, nevertheless, in the separate study to which I have previously referred. It is hoped that the results of this investigation will establish a new course of development for the allegory of the Four Daughters of God and illustrate the relation of the theme to another major motif out of which it grew.

SISTER MARY IMMACULATE, C S C

Saint Mary's College
Notre Dame, Indiana

previously analyzed group, cf Le Chateau, p. 33, note 1. MS Hatton 99, which Miss Murray had seen but does not use, contains no evidence of the episode, as I have found from an examination of the photostat. Miss Murray had also seen a MS at Brussels for which she does not give the signature, but which Professor Thomson identifies as MS Brussels Bibl. Royale 2306 ff. 255r-269v. Thus far, we can safely say that fifteen MSS do not contain the episode. Because of a happy error the sixteenth can be added, for Långfors in correcting Miss Murray's description of MS Brussels 2306 was not aware that he was examining another MS (Brussels 3357 ff. 228v-240r) the only one which Miss Murray had not seen, cf S. H. Thomson, The Writings of Robert Grosseteste (Cambridge, 1940), p. 153, note 3. Långfors is extremely skeptical of the work of his predecessors (see for example Not et Est XLII, 205) yet he points out that the incident of the torturers is not found until its occurrence in Dieu des Quatre Seigneurs, a poem generally considered later than Le Chateau d'Amour, cf ibid., p. 182. In a separate study I shall discuss the relation of the Dieu to the Rex et Famulus.

⁵⁷ Rivière, Le Dogme de la Rédemption au Début du Moyen-Age, p. 479.

SOME CONTINUING TRADITIONS IN ENGLISH
DEVOTIONAL LITERATURE

ONE of the things that most surprises the student of the sixteenth century is the place held by religious literature even in the realm of vernacular publication. The product of the early English presses is religious to an extent that the modern reader finds quite outside his experience. It has been estimated that more than forty per cent of all English books published between the beginning of printing in England and 1640 belong to the various types of religious literature.¹ That preponderance is easy to explain in the light of the ecclesiastical traditions of learning, and there is no doubt that certain aspects of the earlier body of publication as compared with that of more recent times are to be explained in terms of those origins, but the fact is that even when the machinery of religious life had been gravely disturbed, the relative predominance of the genre persisted.

Of course, there were changes. Everyone is familiar with the tremendous ebullition of controversial writing in the sixteenth century. Often there has been a disposition among modern readers to see in that phenomenon only an unhappy manifestation of the combative spirit in a field where one would have hoped charity would appease it. To judge so is to forget that this was a period when the established and accepted premises of religious life had been challenged on all fronts. It became, therefore, one of the primary necessities of all religious parties to think through and define their positions on the main points at issue. The result is a great age of defining and discriminating, of attack on and defense of intellectual positions. Certain aspects of the religious mind received generous exercise. And so did certain aspects of the imagination and the emotions, especially those that enter into the creative art of denigration. But though the period is one of the great ages of Christian history for certain intellectual activities, there is no question that others suffered. The very attention which the controverted issues received disturbed the balance of the total field of experience. Attention went to those matters on which men disagreed, not to those on which they agreed, by no means a sure guide to the relative importance of religious elements. In the atmosphere of Armageddon, speculation came to seem unreasonable. And other activities than the prevailing intellectual ones of definition and of defense and attack naturally suffered in the claims they could make on the attention.

¹ Edith L. Klotz, "A Subject Analysis of English Imprints for Every Tenth Year from 1480 to 1640," The Huntington Library Quarterly, I (1937-38), 417-419.

of men alive to the currents of the time Southwell, for instance, in a letter to Agazario notes the eagerness of the Recusants in England for sermons on current controversy,² this for a group which though under considerable external pressure was in general keeping to positions already established

The danger of this devotion to controversy was early appreciated by men whose combative instincts had not completely destroyed their awareness of other religious values Obviously it was more apparent to those who thought that much of the controversy was unnecessary than to those who thought that the work of reformation must be carried forward Robert Parsons in the preface to his 1585 edition of A Christian Directorie reminds his readers of what was clearly his settled opinion, "that our forefathers were most happie in respect of us, who receauing with humilitie one vniforme faith without contention or contradiction, from their mother the holie Catholique Church, did attend onlie to build upon that foundation good workes and vertuous life"³ But the Anglican John Carpenter was clearly of the same opinion with regard to his settlement in A Preparatiue to Contentation of 1597, for in the course of his examination of what on his title-page he styled "the wonderfull distractions of men in opinions and straunge conceits," he laments, "Alas, why is it then, that now men waxe wearie of prayer? wearie of Gods service? wearie of the word of God? wearie of true obedience? wearie of peace and quietnesse? wearie of goodnesse? wearie of God?"⁴ It was time that the clergy asked that question, for there must have been a good many common men who sympathized with the complaint of the Capper in the famous A compendious or brieue examination of certayne ordinary complaints, of diuers of our country men in these dayes, now usually ascribed to John Hales, which was published by Thomas Marshe in 1581. That sturdy artisan warns the Doctor in the dialogue that if he were of the Queen's Council, he would "set you to the Plough and Carte: for the deuill a whit of good yee doe with your studies, but set men together by the Eares, some with this opinion and some with that, some holding this way, and some an other, and that so stiffly as though the troth must be as they say that have the vpper hand in contention."⁵

But some of these far-seeing men did more than complain about the

² Catholic Record Society, Unpublished Documents Relating to the English Martyrs, Vol 1, 1584-1603, col and ed John Hungerford Pollen, S J (London, 1908), p 318

³ Robert Parsons, A Christian Directorie guiding Men to their Saluation ([n p], 1585), p. 6.

⁴ John Carpenter, A Preparatiue to Contentation. Conteyning a display of the wonderfull distractions of men in opinions and straunge Conceits (London, 1597), p 9 dangers of the existing situation. They set about making a real effort to restore the balance, to see that the claims of feeling, of imagination, above all of will were not lost sight of in the intellectual battle. The result is a growing body of protest against the destructive over-emphasis of controversy, a conscious pioneering in the direction of moderation of controversial ardor, and the development of other aspects of religious enterprise, particularly in the personal religious life.

⁵ A Compendious or brieue examination of certayne ordinary complaints, of diuers of our country men in these our dayes (London, 1581), sig. B2.

Among other resources of the pre-Reformation Church in England rather lost to sight in the middle third of the century, when questions of authority and government and dogma held the field, there was an abundant literature of private and personal religious instruction and devotion. Some of this was very ancient, some relatively modern, some of it foreign, some of it thoroughly English in its origins, and much of the rest of it quite English in the form in which it had been translated and become acclimated. Some of this material was highly original and at times ingenious. But much of it was classic, even conventional in its form and spirit, with all the poise and assurance and it should be added, undisturbing quality, of the long-accepted and established. Little effort had been made to bring it up to date, because the immemorial processes of the spiritual life were not regarded as in need of such modification. But there were signs of a realization that the new age presented certain new challenges as regards classes of men, if not generic human nature. One of the most interesting evidences of this is to be found in a little book which Henry Bradshaw prepared especially for merchants and which Richard Pynson published in 1521.⁶ This effort to provide for the devotional needs of merchants must be one of the earliest of sixteenth-century recognitions of the arrival of a new class, and the forerunner of a vast literature of provision for the devotional needs of that aggressive group of laymen. But in the light of the very apposite, not to say shrewd, appeals which later devotional writers, particularly of Puritan tendencies, were going to make to this group of worldlings, the monk of Chester's notion of what would appeal to the stirring merchant of the time does more credit to his optimism than to his understanding of the problems of a mercantile life. For what he offers to one of the most alertly modern of that most contemporaneous of the genres of men is a very charming but thoroughly traditional and quite unworldly life of a nun, Saint Werburge. It is not surprising that Bradshaw's cause was lost to men who knew more about the leaders of the new age.

For the saint's life was one of the types that was soonest to be eliminated by the main tendencies of the Reformation, especially the saint's life so obviously designed to increase the number of clients of a particular cult. One may say as absolutely as one may ever say anything of so complicated a matter that that type disappeared from the English scene. If in the literature of the next century one comes across a life of Saint Catherine of Siena or of Saint Wenefride, one may be sure that it will bear the address of Doway or Paris or Saint Omer or some other of the great Recusant publishing centers. The only other type that disappeared as completely as this is the contemplative book, like, Richard Rolle's Of the drede and loue of God, or Walter Hylton's Scala Perfectionis, The Ladder of Perfection, to name two of the glories of the contemplative literature of medieval England. And the book of contemplation disappeared for very similar reasons. Just as the cult of the saints, of which the saint's life had been the literary expression, had been the foundation of the whole system of shrines and offerings and pilgrimages against which the Reformers inveighed, so the book of contemplation was the literary expression of that type of religious activity which found its institutional embodiment in the monasteries. The protest against the monasteries like the protest against the cult of the saints was by no means simple. There were economic and social, not to say political, elements in the motivation of the attack on the monasteries. But there was also an unquestioned failure of that general faith that will alone sustain a type of activity which the average man very little understands. Just as the more speculative and the more imaginative elements of religious life are somewhat attenuated in the middle years of the century in England, so one is conscious of a revulsion against what was popularly taken to be contemplation and very little appreciation of what contemplation as a technique of access to God may mean.⁷ That is why so many of the ancient devotional favorites of England like the works of Hylton and Bonaventura which play so large a part in the output of the early English presses vanish from sight. Again, if one seeks for their continuance in the language, one must turn to the Continent, and there they are to be found in the flood of literature that presently poured from the Recusant presses. And they are to be found, too, in those lists of books confiscated at ports and seized in raids on booksellers and suspected Catholics that enable us to follow the fashions of Recusant devotion. These, then, are the two clearest casualties of the English reformation.

⁶ Bradsha[w], Henry, Holy lyfe and history of saynt werburge (London, 1521), sig. s2.

In view of the social and economic and political circumstances that reenforced the religious assault upon the institutions with which they were associated, one would have thought that their disappearance would have been absolute and final. And that all the more so because the hero-worshipping and devotional instincts to which they appealed seemed to be so admirably provided for in the popular English versions of the Scriptures of the time. There is, I think, no doubt that those who most vigorously promoted the destruction of the old devotional literature believed that they would so be satisfied, and this was clearly one at least of the motives for the widespread propaganda on behalf of Scripture reading not only as an informative and instructional activity but as an inspirational and devotional one as well.

⁷ There are exceptions, of course, like the publication of Antony Marten's translation of John Barnarde's The tranquillitie of the minde (London, 1570), but there is no evidence that this book exercised any influence.

Yet the Scriptures did not suffice. And they did not suffice for two reasons. It is true that one of the most passionate desires of the reformers of the time was to get back to the beginnings of things. But it is equally true that no man was ever more present-minded than those very primitivists. The very circumstances of their position, fighting for the dominance of their view of things, drove them to a realization that the battle between what they conceived to be truth and error was not something over once and for all in the long ago, but something of their own day, and that their own day and presently the recent past afforded as dramatic evidences of the constancy of the faithful and the oppression of the enemy and the benevolence of Providence as anything in Scripture. In other words, the witness of the martyr was something too precious to be rejected. So that aspect of the condemned Golden Legend was revived, both in the commemoration of early Christian martyrs and in the proud discovery of contemporary realizations of those ancient prototypes in the victims of the Henrician and Marian persecutions. Especially was the testimonial value of the firmness with which the martyr met his fate precious in an age which looked to the believer's death as the final evidence of the correctness of his views, provided always of course that he died on the right side.

The result is a growing body of records and more or less fugitive accounts of martyrs' lives, that culminates in John Foxe's famous book of 1563.⁸ But there is another reason for the martyrology, apparent also in Foxe. In answer to the common gibe of his adversaries, "Where was your Church before Luther?" Foxe had appealed to a continuous tradition of witnessing from Scriptural days to the present.⁹ Such a tradition was, of course, one of the values of the Golden Legend which the Reformers had repudiated. But for their purposes of indictment there was available the tradition of heresy, not any one heresy, nor any coherent succession of doctrines, but all the heresies that had the common denominator of protest against the Catholic Church or repudiation by it.¹⁰ This common center of trouble with Rome was the unifying principle of what might be described as the United Front of Foxe's book. It provided a tradition of martyrs as a background for the martyrs of Henrician and Marian days, just as the Golden Legend was to provide the more remote background for the Catholic martyrs of Elizabethan days. To the central business of controversy it afforded a very effective dramatic technique. And in the accounts of the past lives of these martyrs it began to perform something of the function of providing heroic examples of the Christian life which the Golden Legend had performed. For the burgeoning of Protestant saints' lives is really not to be found until the middle of the next century, with books like Clark's on the Puritan side¹¹ and Walton's on the Anglican.¹² But the magnetism of martyrdom was too abundantly demonstrated in the sixteenth century for its literary advantages to be neglected.

⁸ John Foxe, Actes and Monuments of these latter and perillous dayes (London, 1563)

⁹ Ibid, sig. C4 ff

¹⁰ Ibid, sig. I16 ff

Just as the need for bringing the witness of Scripture down to the crucial present, led to the development of the Protestant martyrology, so did the necessity of applying the materials of Scriptural precept and inspiration to the necessities of contemporary life lead to the vogue of the Protestant guide to the religious life. Again, this was not so much an innovation as a recovery and adaptation of an old type. Indeed, in one category of the type, the old books still held their own, that of the Ars Moriendi. One of the most popular of all sixteenth-century books was Thomas Becon's The Sicke mannes Salve, first published in 1560.¹³ The famous De contemptu mundi of Innocent III was still one of the popular and influential books of aid to the dying, perhaps because the problem of dying had not changed so much in the intervening centuries.¹⁴ But the conditions of living had changed a good deal, and the necessity of a clear meeting of those conditions had long been apparent to the spiritual guides of the new dispensation. Here Richard Whitforde with his alertness to the possibilities of the new reading public had seen the need for books more directly concerned with the actual problems, say of the young married man living in his family. And in his A werke for housholders which Wynkyn de Worde published in 1530 he had tried to meet those needs. But though his good will and his good sense are apparent, his book shows very little of that sense of the life actually lived in its practical contingen-

¹¹ Samuel Clarke, A Generall Martyrologie . . . Whereunto are added, The Lives of Sundry Modern Divines, Famous in their Generations for Learning and Piety, etc. (London, 1651) cies from hour to hour that the books, say, of Thomas Becon show. It is clear and sound on classic lines, but it does not have the immediate persuasiveness and excitement of Becon's books, another example of the momentum of the new dispensation in any period of radical change. For this genre of the guide to daily life was to offer one of the fields of richest development of the century, and one of the most influential. Especially there was to be an enormous elaboration of types within the genre, particularly in the direction of books for special groups of men and even women, and men and women in special circumstances, of which probably the most characteristic and the most influential were those destined for merchants. Thomas Becon's work, notably in The Flower of godly prayers of 1551, is an example of a growing class-consciousness in the field of the religious guide, one instance among many of his grasp of the practical problems of the situation of his day.¹⁵ The vogue of his work is one illustration of how the old type of general spiritual guide yielded to one more specifically adapted to the various classes of the day and to the needs of the time of the religious groups. This development is to continue throughout the next century in multiplication of number of books and circulation of books.

¹² Walton, Izaak, Lives, of Donne, 1640, Wotton, 1651, Hooker, 1665, Herbert, 1670, Collected, 1670, Dr Sanderson, 1678

¹³ In The seconde parte of the booke, which Thomas Becon hath made (London, 1560, etc.)

¹⁴ The translation which H. K. dedicated to Anne, Countess of Pembroke, and Henry Bynneman published in 1576 under the title of The Mirror of Mans Lyfe makes no mention of the author's name but notes that the book was written three hundred and sixty years past, sig. ¶2.

Something of the same thing takes place in the field of books of prayers for the layman. In this field the old prymer had performed a double function. It had in the Little Office of the Virgin afforded the layman a means of taking part in a common devotional exercise in the church, and in the selections from Scripture, and the various rearrangements of Scriptural materials like the Psalter of Saint Jerome, and in the collections of prayers for various occasions and needs usually added thereto, it had provided him with aids to private devotion. From the first point of view, then, the prymer afforded the foundation for the development of vernacular services of congregational prayer, a development that moving through the First Prayer Book of Edward VI in 1549, the Second in 1552, and Queen Elizabeth's revised version of the latter, the Prayer Book of 1559, was to culminate in the Book of Common Prayer, the liturgical treasure house of Anglican observance. But the need for the book of extra-liturgical prayers that could be used in the private closet persisted,¹⁶ and it received its answer in Elizabeth's Primer of 1559.¹⁷ This book, a revision of Edward's prymer of 1546, was a modification of the traditional prymer with its emphasis on the type of prayer or Scriptural arrangement suitable for private devotion. This two-fold development was possible because the old prymer had been in itself, outside of certain fixtures, a very flexible instrument of devotion. The Reformation had carried away the heart of the fixtures, the Little Office of the Blessed Virgin. And the Marian prayers had, of course, vanished, as well as the prayers most intimately associated with the ancient rites. But the arrangements of Scripture like the Psalter of Saint Jerome had remained. And so to a surprising extent had the occasional prayers, especially the acknowledgments of remorse for sin and the petitions for forgiveness, but little changed with the changing times.

¹⁵ Thomas Becon, "The Flower of godly prayers," in The seconde part of the booke, which Thomas Beacon hath made, sigs 3F3-3H2v.

¹⁶ Authority was probably encouraged to meet this need by the availability of the distinctly traditional prymer in An vniforme and Catholyke Prymer in Latin and Englishe, published according to Queen Mary's "letters patentes" in 1555.

¹⁷ The Primer set forth at large, with many godly and devout prayers, Anno, 1559 (Parker Society, 37).

The motive of such a book as this was, of course, to provide an effective and yet, from the point of view of the new settlement, safe substitute for the old book. But there were other developments, often of some one feature of the old prayerbook, again of several. The psalters are a case in point. The selection and arrangement of verses from the psalms to meet specific devotional needs, the adaptation of sections of Scripture to particular purposes, and the culling of whole prayers out of the text of Scripture because they apply to contemporary emergencies, all of these rearrangements of Scripture for special purposes are very ancient. The Psalter of Saint Jerome is a famous example. But this was no merely traditional memorial. The process was a living and continuous one. The Jesus Psalter, ascribed to Whitforde, which was so popular on the eve of the Reformation and afterward carried through for a good many years among the Recusants on the Continent is a conspicuous example of this sort of thing.¹⁸ When therefore Thomas Berthelet, the King's Printer, in 1544 printed his famous "Psalmes or Prayers taken out of holie scripture," better known as The King's Psalms,¹⁹ he was but carrying out an old tradition, perhaps even in the number of his synthetic psalms, fifteen, reminiscent of the number of the gradual psalms, one of the fixtures of the old prymer. It bears the same relation to the materials of the Book of Psalms that Saint Jerome's Psalter did, a plastic reshaping of the materials of Scripture in the service of new themes and new occasions.

Closely allied to this synthetic psalm type is the series of prayers or meditations likewise quarried out of scripture but with a wider range of source and a still more flexible handling of material and a more sustained development of theme and occasion like The Queenes prayers or Medita-

¹⁸ Sixe Spirituall Bookes, Full of Merveilous Piete and Deuotion. And First, Certaine Deuout and Godlie Petitions, Commonlie Called, The Iesus Psalter (Doway, 1618).

¹⁹ As in the edition bound up uniformly with the H. Wykes' edition of The Queenes prayers (1568).

tions, printed by H Wykes in 1568. But the most interesting and perhaps the most influential of these early recastings of scriptural material is that collection known as Prayers of Holy Fathers, Patriarches, Prophetes, Iudges, Kynges, and renowned men and women of eyther testamente, which Richard Grafton printed in 1544. This use of Scriptural prayers for timeless and contemporary human emergencies was nothing new. A limited number of such prayers so used were a regular feature of the old prymer, prayers offered in time of crisis by such dramatic figures of the Old Testament as Jonah, Susanna, Manasses, and Judith.²⁰ But here the selection was more extensive and the resulting collection was more systematically organized under appropriate headings like "Praiens for the synnes of the people," and "Prayers in tyme of aduersite, and for a mannes owne synnes," than ever before.²¹ But it still remains true that a good many of these selections and even the applications had already been made in the prymer. Perhaps the most dramatic example is the selection from and rearrangement of the psalms traditionally attributed to Saints Ambrose and Augustine and a common feature of all the primers as a portion of the Matyns of Our Lady.²² In other words, the disposition of these editors was to keep as much as they could of the ancient devotional materials, eschewing, of course, the praises of the Virgin and the prayers for the intercession of the saints that had been so striking a feature of the traditional prymer. And this is true of their many successors, like the editor, say, of the Treasure of Gladnesse of 1568.

And this remained true even of later developments of this modified prymer tradition. For this material passes into the Bull-Middleton prayer books and so into the Daye prayer books, both the earlier form of 1569 often referred to as Queen Elizabeth's Prayerbook,²³ and the much-altered form of 1578 which was to prove so popular.²⁴ The very format of these Daye prayerbooks with their border ornaments of designs of Scriptural and allegorical significance, including a Dance of Death very closely following the designs found for instance in the Paris 1527 edition of the Hore Beatissime virginis Marie already referred to, is reminiscent of the ancient book of the layman's private devotion. And the materials, particularly in the Christian Prayers of 1578, are more so. There are, for in-

²⁰ See Hore Beatissime virginis Marie ad legitimum Sarisburiensis Ecclesie ritum (Paris, 1527), sigs. P3-8v.

²¹ Prayers of Holy Fathers, etc. (London, 1544), sigs. 04v-P4v.

²² Compare Thys prymer in Englyshe and in Laten (Paris, 1538), sigs. E6-7 and Praiens of Holy Fathers, sigs. F3-4v.

²³ Christian Prayers and Meditations in English, French, Italian, Spanish, Greeke, and Latine (London, 1659).

²⁴ A Booke of Christian Prayers, collected out of the auncient writers, and best learned in our tyme (London, 1578).

stance, the seven penitential psalms of the prymer, in a fresh rehandling. There are prayers "taken out" of the preceding psalms, and prayers out of Scripture, often the very same selections, often selections made on the same principles as the old ones. There are some very interesting survivals of ancient prayers, like the "O Bone Iesu," "O Bountiful Lord Iesu" of Saint Bernardine of Siena.²⁵ But the most interesting examples of unexpected survival are to be found in a series of prayers to Christ of a warm personal character not to be expected in this period when there was a general reaction in Protestant devotion against the often luxuriant floriation of emotional and imaginative prayer that had preceded the Reformation. They are in substance the famous Fifteen Oes which Caxton first published in the year 1491. Their basic plan is quite simple. They follow up the opening invocation which gives them their name with a simple and fairly dramatic image in which some aspect of the rôle of Christ in the redemption of the race is presented symbolically and then the devotee asks that in an analagous fashion he may follow that example in his own life. In that movement of revival of the ancient devotional treasures of the national Church that was one of the features of English religious activity in the middle of the last century, these were reprinted by Stephen Ayling with a very moving appreciation of the spirit of sincere devotion which breathed through their imaginative petitions, and with the suggestion that this was the first book of prayers in English issued by the followers of Wickliffe.²⁶ The only trouble with this Lollard ascription is that they are found in early sixteenth-century English prymer, of the most orthodox type, the editors of which were quite aware of the issues of the time, and as such usually ascribed to Saint Brigit of Sweden.²⁷ And though any woman so enterprising as Brigit of Sweden was doubtless called a good many things by her harassed superiors, I doubt if she was ever called a Lollard. At any rate, the authors of the sixteenth-century Anglican prayerbooks that reprinted these prayers were under no such illusions. For they omitted some and expurgated others, particularly with regard to references to the Virgin and to the Passion and to the Eucharist, in a fashion that shows that they were quite aware of the traditional character of these prayers.²⁸

As for the ancient books of devotion as distinguished from the collec-

²⁵ Compare Thys prymer in Englyshe and in Laten (Paris, 1538), sig. Z8 and A Booke of Christian Prayers (London, 1578), sigs. R2-3.

²⁶ The Fifteen O's, and other Prayers (reproduced in lithography by Stephen Ayling, London, 1869), sig. 3v.

²⁷ For example, Hore beatissime virginis marie (Antwerp, 1525), sigs. T1-5, Hore Beatissime virginis Marie (Paris, 1527), sigs. 2a1-5, Thys prymer in Englyshe and in Laten (Paris, 1538), sigs. M3-8v.

²⁸ See for instance, A Booke of Christian Prayers (London, 1578), sigs. X3-Aa1.

tions of prayers, their fate was a curious one. Some, as the works of Bonaventura, disappeared quite completely. Others, as the works of Augustine, survived in hardly diminished popularity, and this is true not only of the genuine Augustinian book of meditations like the volume of selections out of his De essentia diuinitatis which William Hill printed in 1548,²⁹ but also of the pseudo-Augustine like The Glasse of vaine-glorie.³⁰ Perhaps the most curious of these survivals is to be found in some of the rehandlings or adaptations of Saint Augustine. A pretious booke of holie meditations,³¹ for instance, is in reality a mosaic of selections from the great Doctor's works, especially from the Confessions, not so far as I know available in English translation until 1620.³² And it should be added, that if the elimination of Bonaventura should over-emphasize the admitted antipathy of the age to the mystical element, some of the selections included in this work represent some of the most mystical passages of the Confessions, notably selections from the famous sixth chapter of the tenth book.³³ It would, therefore, seem correct to say that while the age had pretty definitely repudiated contemplative literature, there were some notable exceptions.

Of these easily the most remarkable is the survival of the Imitation of Christ. At first sight, this would seem the most monastic of works, the very epitome of the devotio moderna with its emphasis on individual, inner, even subjective piety, with its strong though muted emotional coloring. Its popularity was well established before the Reformation, for it had in whole or in part run through about fifty Latin editions before the end of the fifteenth century.³⁴ The English translations begin with that of William Atkinson (the first three books), printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1502 and Pynson in 1503. With the addition of the Lady Margaret's translation of the fourth book, first published in 1504, this version ran through some half dozen editions in the first quarter of the century. Then about 1531 the translation of our old friend, Richard Whitforde, took the field, likewise running through half a dozen editions in the next twenty-five years. Then there is a dearth of English editions of the Imitation between the significant years of 1556-1567. The next

²⁹ Certain Places Gathered Out of S. Austens Boke intituled de essentia diuinitatis (London, 1548)

³⁰ The Glasse of vaine-glorie Faithfully translated (out of S. Augustine his booke, intituled Speculum peccatoris) into English, by W. P. (London, 1585)

³¹ A pretious booke of holie meditations, trans. T. Rogers (London, 1581) See especially chaps. 18 and 31

³² Ascribed to Tobie Mathew, The Confessions of the Incomparable Doctour S. Augustine (St. Omer, 1620)

³³ See especially the eighteenth and thirty-first chapters

³⁴ See Augustin de Backer, Essai Bibliographique sur le Livre de Imitatione Christi (Liège, 1864) This work needs to be corrected for the English translations appearance of Whitforde's book in 1585 bears neither place of publication nor name of printer. It is clearly a Recusant publication, probably Continental. Then comes the third great English version of the Imitation, Edward Hake's 1567, and in 1580 the best-known of all the English translations of the period, Thomas Rogers', which was to run through some fourteen editions in the next sixty years.

Hake faced the key problems of the pre-Reformation classic with resolution. The fourth book of Thomas, that on the Eucharist, with its untransmutable dependence on the repudiated doctrine of transubstantiation, he completely omitted, without any explanation, adding "as springing out of the same roote," A short and pretie Treatise touching the perpetuall Reioyce of the godly, euen in this lyfe to round out the volume. Dubious or dangerous passages in the other books he annotated in the margins with warnings or with explanations that the author was not to be understood to have meant what he clearly said.³⁵ Rogers likewise contented himself with the first three books in his first half dozen editions, but when in 1592 he published what was at least the seventh edition of his version, he solved the problem of the unassimilable fourth book by adding to the first three a translation of the Soliloquium Animae ascribed to the same author under the title of The sole-talke of the Soule, Or, A Spiritual and heauenlie Dialogue betwixt the Soule of Man and God, with the title-page addition, "Which, for the great affinitie it hath with other bookes of the Auctor published heeretofore in our natue tongue, is now entituled, The Fourth booke of the Imitation of Christ." And he justified this substitution as well as other necessary deviations from his author in an address to the reader that admirably sums up the spirit of many of these translators of the devotional classics of the past. He begins by pointing out that he has altered his author only where he has himself "varied from the truth of God, and, I doubt not, would haue redressed, had hee lived in these daies of light, as he did in the time of most palpable blindnes." Indeed, as Rogers hastens to remind us, the author had himself prayed God to reveal to him or some other any errors he might make. So Rogers' corrections may piously be regarded as an answer to that prayer. And anyway though Thomas à Kempis lived "in a Popish time," yet was he "in hart no Papist."³⁶ A charitable principle that doubtless did much to rescue ancient light from out the darkness of the past.

Some such principle must also be invoked to explain the surprising use of contemporary Catholic devotional works in thoroughly orthodox Protestant works of devotion. Some of this at least had its start in that transitional period when one reformer looked to another, never doubting that his enthusiasm for reform or for the deepening of spiritual life would carry him out of the ancient fold as it had the English translator. A famous and widely influential example is to be seen in the inclusion in Bradford's prayers of translations of daily prayers by the Spanish humanist Vives.³⁷ Vives' prayers for the daily round of the devout Christian obviously spring from the traditional morning and evening prayers of the prymer, but they have a certain actuality and immediacy characteristic of the new time. It is not surprising, therefore, that Bradford made them his own without any sense of strangeness. That is one of the characteristic phenomena of the time. Bradford recognized a kindred spirit at certain key points and assumed that that was true of all. So did a good many other Englishmen with regard to other Spanish and Continental writers then and later,³⁸ this appropriation of devotional material across the lines of battle is evidence of the fact that the degree of continuity in certain non-controverted areas was so great that it outweighed the misgivings of a new orthodoxy.

³⁵ The Imitation or Following of Christ, trans. Edward Hake (London, 1568), p. 18.

³⁶ The Imitation of Christ, trans. Thomas Rogers (London, 1592), sigs. A3v-4v.

But the most interesting example of this sympathetic appropriation is to be found in the history of the book to which perhaps the most dramatic of sixteenth-century English penitents, Robert Greene, credited his conversion,³⁹ and to which in the next century the saintly Richard Baxter was to attribute his moral awakening, "the booke of Resolution."⁴⁰ The English story of this work, which in its various incarnations was to prove one of the most popular of all the devotional books of the time, begins with an already "improved" version by one James Sancer published in Paris in 1579 under the title The Exercise of a Christian Life. The author of the original work, if a book of selections arranged to meet the daily and occasional needs of the devout has any claims to originality, was an Italian Jesuit, Gaspare Loarte. Under the form which the first known English translator gave the book it had enjoyed a good deal of popularity, when Robert Parsons came upon it. Whether Parsons actually found it incomplete as he said or whether he saw in it larger possibilities than the original author had realized it is not possible to say, but the ³⁷ John Bradford, Private Prayers and Meditations, with Other Exercises, in The Writings of John Bradford (Parker Society) v, 230-242.

³⁸ Luis de Granada is another notable example. See, for instance, Granados Devotion, trans. F. Meres (London, 1598), Añ Excellent Treatise of Consideration and Prayer (London, 1599), The Sinners Guyde, "digested into English" by F. Meres (London, 1598), and Granadas Spirituall and Heauenly Exercises, trans. F. Meres (London, 1598).

³⁹ Robert Greene, "The Repentance of Robert Greene," Life and Works of Robert Greene, M.A., ed. Alexander Grosart (London, 1881-86), xii, 165 ff.

⁴⁰ Baxter, Richard, Reliquiae Baxterianae: or, Mr. Richard Baxter's Narrative of the most Memorable Passages of his Life and Times, ed. Matthew Sylvester (London, 1696), p. 3.

fact is that when he was through his work of expansion and reorganization, the resulting book was between three and four times the size of the original. The first book of this expanded version Parsons offered to the English-speaking world probably at Rouen in 1582 as an antidote to the superfluity of controversy of the time and a book of direction for "matters of life and spirit."⁴¹

Apparently the book enjoyed a good deal of popularity in Protestant circles, for two years later, in 1584, Edmund Bunny published a "corrected" edition of it with an address to the Archbishop of Canterbury in which he explained the pains he had taken to relieve the good it might do of any possibility of doing harm, and an accompanying treatise to persuade the Recusant who had got so far as to read a good book like this" to join with us likewise in the truth of Religion."⁴² Bunny is generous in his approval of the worth of the author's labors, but there are a few things that he must correct. Parsons uses Our Lord for The Lord, iustice for righteousness, poenance for repentance, merit for good works, or the service of God, and so on. Then there were passages involving opinions "wherin we dissent from them, and they (no dowt) from the truth it selfe." Those he left out, and with the more confidence because, as he suggests in this preface to the reader, he suspected that they had been added by the licensing authorities rather than by the author himself, whom he pays the compliment of supposing to be of a better mind.⁴³

But, sad to say, this delicate compliment was not appreciated. For the very next year Parsons published A Christian Directorie, of which the first book was the aforesaid Book of Resolution. And in a preface dated from Saint Omer in Artois Parsons launched a spirited "reprofe of the corrupt and falsified edition of the booke lately published by M. Edm. Bunny," the burden of which was that Bunny had made him speak like a Protestant.⁴⁴ Parsons cited chapter and verse and delivered himself of his indignation in some vigorous sentences in which the more temperate terms of sixteenth century religious controversy, "ridiculous," "absurd," and "wicked" figured with effect.⁴⁵ Bunny was not so quick as Parsons in the uptake, but when in 1589 he got round to A Briefe Answer, unto those idle and frivolous quarrels of R. P. against the late edition of the Resolution, he defended himself with equal spirit, pointing out that all he

⁴¹ Robert Parsons, The first booke of the Christian Exercise, appertayning to resolution ([Rouen?], 1582), p. 2.

⁴² Edmund Bunny, A Booke of Christian Exercise, appertayning to Resolution by R. P. Perused, and accompanied now with a Treatise tending to Pacification (London, 1584), sigs. *2-2v.

⁴³ Ibid, sigs. *5-7.

⁴⁴ Robert Parsons, A Christian Directorie ([Saint Omer], 1584), fols 10v-11.

⁴⁵ Ibid, fol 12.

had done was to put Parsons right and if Parsons could not see it, what more evidence could you ask as to what was the matter with him⁴⁶ But the book, whatever the shortcomings of its author, established itself in the favor of what the publisher of the 1590 London edition of the second part called, "all indifferent iudgements," for it was "written by a Iesuit beyonde the Seas, yet an English man"⁴⁷

By the end of the century, then, for all the fighting words like merit and transubstantiation it was possible for a good many of the members of the Church of England to recognize something of a common ground with their ancestral adversaries in the realm of inner and private devotion. That is due primarily to the fact that in the field of devotional literature so many specific works and component elements had passed through the successive crises of the sixteenth century and made good their place in what was coming to be an established tradition. The context of public religious life was greatly altered, the directions and emphases of private devotion more delicately modified, but the enduring and continuing elements were more numerous and more influential than has always been appreciated. The fact is important for our understanding of the personal psychology that met not only the changes of the sixteenth century but made possible the developments of the first quarter of the seventeenth century, developments in the work of men like Herbert and Donne of quite as much consequence for literature as for religion.

HELEN C WHITE

University of Wisconsin

⁴⁶ Edmund Bunny, A Briefe Answer, vnto those idle and friuolous quarrels of R P against the late edition of the Resolution (London, 1589), pp. 53-55

⁴⁷ Robert Parsons, The Seconde parte of the Booke of Christian exercise (London, 1590), sig. ¶3

LIII

SPENSERIAN ARMOR

IN the first edition of the Faerie Queene appeared a woodcut of the Red Cross Knight in combat with the Dragon. The Knight is clad in armor of the sixteenth-century type. In particular the iron skirt, or tonnlets, of the rider are like those in a suit of armor given by the Emperor Maximilian to Henry VIII in 1515.¹ The artist, however, may not have been very familiar with armor, for the plates over the knees and elbows are not accurate. The plumes of knight and horse are suitable for pageantry rather than for serious combat. The knight's shield, with its red cross, is wholly unfitting, since shields were not worn with such armor in service, and shields such as were used in some types of jousting were of different shape. The horse wears armor on the head and neck, but not on the body, though the body is covered with cloth housing.

Spenser is presumably not to be held for what the illustrator did, yet his references in the poem to some extent support the drawing, though in other ways they depart from it. It must be remembered that Spenser's knights are usually on active service, and often apparently unaccompanied by a squire able to assist in putting armor on and off. In a few instances they engage in formal tournaments. There is not an absolute line between armor intended for battle and that for tournaments; yet the latter was generally more elaborate and required more aid in assuming it. Sometimes armor suitable for battle was adapted to jousting by adding further plates for protection for the head, neck, breast, and arms. Battle armor was obliged to sacrifice security to mobility.

The helmet of a Spenserian knight might have an elaborate crest:

His haughtie helmet, horrid all with gold,
Both glorious brightness, and great terrour bred,
For all the crest a Dragon did enfold
With greedie pawes, and over all did spread
His golden wings. his dreadfull hideous hed
Close couched on the bever, seem's to throw
From flaming mouth bright sparkles fierie red,
That suddaine horror to faint harts did show,
And scaly tayle was stretcht adowne his backe full low (1 7 31).

Knights seem actually to have gone to battle in such crests in the fourteenth and early fifteenth centuries, though in the early sixteenth these were abandoned even for the tournament.² Since this is a helmet for serious combat, Spenser is archaizing, or following the precedent of the romances, in the Orlando Innamorato we read of Marfisa·

¹ Laking, A Record of European Arms and Armour, III, figures 1003, 1016, 1017, 1017A.

² Laking, II, 165.

E per cimier nel più sublime loco
Un drago verde che gettava foco

Ed era il foco acconcio di maniera,
Che da l'impeto acceso arde del vento,
E quando in mezzo a la battaglia ell' era,
Un lampeggiar facea pien di spavento (189, 10) ³

The helmet worn by some of the faery knights had a movable ventail, which when raised showed the face ⁴ This indicates a basnet with movable parts, or some later type of close helmet such as appears in the picture of the Red Cross Knight The most general indication given about the helmet is that it has lacings to be unfastened If the word unlace is to be taken literally, and not in the general sense of unfasten, it would seem to apply only to the form of helmet which fitted over another protective head-covering, such as a hood of mail, since only such helmets seem to have had lacings ⁵ Late models even of this type were fastened by metal pieces hinged to the helmet, and, still later close helmets were fitted over flanges on the gorget. ⁶ Large helmets for tilting were also carefully laced to a padded hood within them, ⁷ and their adjustment required the aid of a skilled attendant This lacing is also mentioned by Ariosto: Brandimarte has unlaced the front fastenings of the helm of Agramante and intends to remove it to free passage for his dagger; Marfisa has her squire attend to the lacing of hers ⁸

Several times a Spenserian knight unlaces the helm of his adversary to behead him or otherwise kill him, ⁹ in these instances the poet neglects any other covering for the head, such as the coif of mail. Such a coif, to be covered by the helmet when jousting, appears on English brasses as late as 1306. ¹⁰ In the Morte Darthur the coif is mentioned more than once, ¹¹ though it was not worn in Malory's time, the references to it are translated from his source, La Queste del Saint Graal, assigned to about the year 1220. ¹² By keeping this detail, he showed himself more

³ For other elaborate crests see 26 12, 46 38, 49 18, 62.34. ⁴ 3 2 24 3; 5 8 12 5

⁵ Ashdown, British and Foreign Arms and Armour, pp 106, 114, 184, Laking, I, 57, 276; II, 176 For helmets of this type illustrated in the manuscripts of romances, see Eugène Vinaver, Malory (Oxford, 1929), plates facing pp 38, 58, 98

⁶ Laking, II, 102 ff; Ashdown, pp. 223, 266, etc., Laking, IV, 90

⁷ Laking, II, 137-138

⁸ Orlando Fur, 41 98, 27.88 Cf also, e g, Tasso, Gerusalemme Lib. 11.75, Bojardo-Berni, Orlando Inn 26.8. ⁹ E g., 2 8 52.8

¹⁰ Herbert Druitt, A Manual of Costume as Illustrated by Monumental Brasses (London, 1906), p. 149. ¹¹ Book 13, chap. 17; bk. 17., ch 1.

sensitive to historical accuracy than did Spenser more than a century later. This neglect of any covering for the head except the helmet is especially striking in a narrative of Britomart.

Her glstring helmet she unlaced,
Which doft, her golden lockes, that were up bound Still in a knot, unto her heeles downe traced,
And like a silken veile in compasse round
About her backe and all her bodie wound (4 1 13)

Here, if the passage is taken literally, she unlaces her own helmet, as sometimes do other knights in the Faerie Queene. The effect is that Spenser has in mind not the laced helmet but a later type that would carry its lining with it,¹³ so that when it was removed the head would be quite uncovered. Since the incident is modeled on Ariosto,¹⁴ perhaps Spenser's attention was first of all on the specific situation and its development, rather than on literal consistency.

After 1400, armor of iron plates rather than of linked chain mail prevailed, though a mail skirt appears on the suits of English nobles of the sixteenth century and mail was used at the armpits and at other points where plate was not adequate. The armpit was recognized as a weak point in early plate armor, though in mail it would be as strong as any other part. Spenser was apparently conscious of this, for he writes of Campbell that he

Stroke him, as he his hand to strike upreard,
In th'arm pit full, that through both sides the wound appeard (4 3 33 8-9).

The wounded Triamond's armor here may have been like that early plate worn by the Germans at the battle of Benevento, where the Italians defeated them by thrusting at their unprotected armpits.¹⁵ When Ariosto describes a similar scene, he is careful to make clear that the victim was not wholly undefended:

Pria che 'l braccio scenda al duro effetto,
Gli caccia sotto la spada pungente,
E gh fa nella magha ampla finestra,
Che sotto difendea l'ascella destra (30.57).

This refers to fifteenth-century battle armor.¹⁶

¹² La Queste del Saint Graal, ed. Albert Pauphilet (Paris, 1923), pp. 56, 196 "la coife de fer" ¹³ Laking, IV, 123-124 ¹⁴ Orlando Fur, 26 28

¹⁵ Charles Oman, A History of the Art of War, The Middle Ages (New York, 1898), p. 486

¹⁶ For an illustration, see Laking, III, 179. This figure shows the use of a plate to strengthen the mail defense of the armpit. For a knight struck just as Spenser describes, see an illustration in the Miroir historial de Jacques, duc de Nemours, reproduced in R. Chantelauze, Mémoires de Philippe de Commines (Paris, 1881), p. 27. Tasso tells of a knight killed in battle in this way (Gerusalemme Lib, 6 44).

Spenser's knights sometimes appear to be clad in plate, like the Red Cross Knight, who when resting by a fountain is "Disarmed all of iron-coted plate" (1.7.2.8). Among Spenser's villains the Soudan wears a "cote of plate, burnisht with bloudie rust" (5.8.29.1-2), and Grantorto is "armed in a cote of iron plate" (5.12.14.3). If he stands for wrong in Ireland, he is not armored like the ancient Irish galloglass, who had "a long shirt of mayle downe to the calfe of his legg", he was rather like the "armed footeman that nowe weareth a corslett."¹⁷ In one instance, Spenser may intend to signify something of the exotic by mail, for the pagan Sans-joy is armed in "woven mail" (1.5.4.2).

Other references to mail are, however, more abundant than those to plate, especially if the habergeon and hauberk are always to be interpreted as indicating mail, as they do in some instances,¹⁸ for example Arthur's hauberk has a "linked frame" (2.8.44.7), and Radigund wears a "mayled habergeon" (5.5.2.9). If references to mail are an indication, Spenser's knights are archaic in their equipment, for the habergeon of mail alone is not later than the fourteenth century. Two of them wear ancient armor, Artegal that of Achilles (3.2.25.6), and Britomart that of Angela the Saxon queen (3.3.58.8), "foiraine armes and straunge aray" (4.6.9). Britomart's habergeon is twice alluded to, but elsewhere she wears plate (3.1.6.3), and her "shoulder plate" is struck (5.7.33.2).¹⁹ If this passage is to be pressed for consistency, it may be that Spenser has reference to the shoulder plates or ailettes worn with mail.²⁰ Plate is also associated with Artegal (4.6.15.8, 5.5.20.9).

More than once Spenser associates the two types of armor: for example, "neither plate nor mayle" (4.3.15.4) could sustain the stowre of the axes. Perhaps this is not to be taken too literally, but means merely armor. At least it appears in Ariosto: "Sacripante non ha piastra nè maglia."²¹ If it must be taken as exact, it may refer to fourteenth-century

¹⁷ View of the Present State of Ireland (London, 1934), p. 93. In Gough's edition of the Fifth Book, Spenser's "iron plate" (5.12.14) is interpreted as mail.

In this context in the View Spenser is usually thought to have been mistaken about Sir Thopas' "shecklaton." It seems, however, that Spenser did know what a hacqueton is, namely the "quilted jack" "worn in war under a shirt of mail." If so, probably the word in Faerie Queene 2.8.38.7 is a slip of the pen for habergeon.

¹⁸ According to the NED the hauberk is always of mail. For the belief that it sometimes indicates plate armor, see Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, ed. by J. M. Manly (New York, 1928), the note on Sir Thopas, p. 633, lines 2050-58, and F. M. Kelley and R. Schwabe, A Short History of Costume and Armour (New York, 1931), I, 81.

¹⁹ Arthur wears a habergeon of mail (2.8.44.6) but elsewhere a "curat" (5.8.34.8).

²⁰ Ashdown, pp. 101-110.

²¹ Orlando Fur, 27.78. Cf., e.g., 6.80, 26.84, 30.59, 31.21, 45.75. Likewise, Bojardo-Berni, Orlando Innamorato, 16.28.35, 18.18, and many other passages, Tasso, Gerusalemme Lib., 6.48.

armor, in which mail and plate were combined, for example a breast-plate was worn over a mail shirt. Spenser gives no indication of an exact knowledge of this, though perhaps Ariosto does. At least he writes:

Grosso l'usbergo, e grossa parimente
Era la piastra, e 'l panziron perfetto
Pur non gli steron contra, ed ugualmente
Alla spada crudel dieron ricetto ²²

In one instance Berni seems interested in this combination of armor on the forearm. The shield of Rinaldo is cut across, and then

Sott' esso era la piastra del bracciale
Sopr' un cuojo di bufolo guarnita
Nè di maglia la manica gli vale,
Che gli fece nel braccio aspra fenta ²³

The sleeve of the mail shirt is strengthened by plates for the arm, as was usual in the armor of the transition from mail to plate.

With improvement in armor, the shield disappeared from the service equipment of the mounted knight. About 1360 is the last instance of a knight wearing a shield as shown on his monumental brass. ²⁴ It is, however, apparently invariable in the equipment of faery knights, being mentioned some two hundred times in the poem. Some of the shields are obviously archaic, being the "three square" shields of the early fourteenth century. ²⁵ The "sevenfold" shield that occurs three times is classical. ²⁶ For fighting on foot certain warriors used shields until long after Spenser's day, as in the English combination of sword and buckler. Such shields were held on the arm or even by the left hand alone, and could be freely moved about, as Artegal is able to raise his shield above his head (5.12 21 6). The heavy shields of early mounted knights were supported by a strap over the shoulder, ²⁷ so that the left arm could be free for the ²² Orlando Fur, 24 64. Similarly

Gli passo la corazza e il soprappetto,
Ma prima un ben ferrato e grosso scudo (19 82)

See F. M. Kelley and R. Schwabe, A Short History of Costume and Armour, I, 60. In each instance Ariosto mentions the mail first, does he indicate the plate as worn under it? See Charles Oman, History of the Art of War, Middle Ages, p. 514, for the belief that plate was so used. The passage seems to mean that the plate is penetrated last, but it may be that the poet is not mentioning the exact order of layers as pierced by a spear.

²³ Orlando Inn, 23 44. See, e.g., Drutt, Costume, frontispiece.

²⁴ Drutt, Costume, p. 159. ²⁵ 1 6 41 8, 3 1 4 4, 3 4 16 3.

²⁶ Iliad, 7 220, Aeneid, 12 925, Ovid, Metamorphoses, 13 2, Bojardo-Berni, Orlando Inn., 65 5, Tasso, Gerusalemme Liberata, 20 86.

²⁷ For this in the illustrations of the MSS of romances see Eugène Vinaver, Malory, plates opp. pp. 58, 98.

bridle or for a two handed weapon But Spenser, on the other hand, sometimes represents his knights as fastening their shields to their wrists.²⁸ Of this I have no other instance, unless this custom is indicated when we are told of Orlando, on foot, that "dal braccio lo scudo si dislaccia" (Orl Inn, 33 48) Such fastening seems as obvious a device for the buckler man as the fastening of a sword by a chain²⁹ Is it possible that Spenser is here drawing on the customs of the sword-and-buckler men of his own time? Such fastening seems reasonable for a shield held only in the hand, but hardly needed for one held on the arm as well. In the importance given to the shield, Spenser is at one with the Italian romantic poets, and archaic as well, even with a touch of the classical

Of armor for the sake of pageantry, such as could be seen in the entertainments of Spenser's time,³⁰ there is little in the Faerie Queene Yet Artegal appears at a tourney

In queynt disguise, full hard to be descide
For all his armour was like salvage weed,
With woody mosse bedight, and all his steel
With oaken leaves attrapt, that seemed to fit
For salvage wight (4 4 39 3-7)

Apparently he also goes on his adventures in the same fantastic trappings (4 6.4.9). Perhaps such equipment was also used at the jousts at the spousals of Florimel (5.3 4 4-5).

Armor for the horse is mentioned but once in the Faerie Queene, Guyon's horse had "goodly gorgeous barbes" (2.2.11 7). In other instances horses injured in combat seem clearly not protected, as the horse of Pyrocles, struck by a glancing blow on the neck just in front of the saddle and completely beheaded (2 5 4) If Mr. Laking is right in saying that armor for horses was little used in warfare, Spenser is correct in this matter. Usually the horses of romantic poetry are, it seems, unarmored, but Berni twice writes of a horse as "coperto di piastra e maglia"³¹

What opportunity would Spenser have had for learning of armor? In an age when it was still used, he must have seen a good deal of it actually worn, or in armories intended to supply combatants That would have stimulated his eye for differences between modern and old-fashioned equipment. In addition he could have examined a great many artistic ²⁸ 1.5.6.3, 2 8 22 7, 3 9 22 8; 5.6 28 9.

²⁹ Orlando Fur., 26 123, 41.96, Orlando Inn, 54 14, etc., Sidney, Arcadia (Cambridge, 1922), p. 457. Laking, iv, 45.

³⁰ Nichols, Progresses of Elizabeth, II, 312 Cf. Sidney, Arcadia, pp. 285, 454, 455, 462 In the latter instances fancy armor is worn in serious combat Cf. also Nashe, The Unfortunate Traveler, in Works (London, 1910), pp. 271-278 representations, in illuminated books, in paintings, and on funeral monuments For example, knowledge of fashions in armor can be gained from such monumental brasses as remain to us, in Spenser's day there were many more than now Students of costume were well aware of the value of such monumental effigies, at any rate in Italy, as can be learned from Cesare Vecellio Writing on the Armato Venetiano all' uso antico di già 400 anni, he says:

³¹ Orlando Inn, 22 55; 36 14. In 11 29 Bajardo is spoken of as "bardato."

Havendo noi di sopra fatto mentione, de' soldati Romani, & delle loro armi, non sarà fuor di proposito il mostrar a' curiosi, quali fussero l'arme usate anticamente da' Venetiani Et se di questo ci possono far fede alcuna le sepolture antiche, io, che ne sono stato diligentissimo investigatore, sarò ancora fedelissimo testimonio di quel, che in questa matena ho potuto raccorre Si vede adunque per gli annali intagliati nella sepolture, che intorno al 1200 per la venuta de' Gothi (& così riferisce Olao Magno) andavano armati in questo modo ³²

The illustration shows a man in a coat of mail with long sleeves, his head is covered by a mail coif, and his legs are protected by plates.

It may also be asked how exactly Spenser's language is to be taken Does mail, for example, mean literally that, or is it sometimes hardly more than armor? Did Spenser generally intend to be accurate and consistent, or is he willing to be as vague in military terms as in the geography of Faerie Land, or in the dating of the "antique world" of which he writes? It would seem that in the equipment of his knights he was satisfied with a general suggestion of "antique history" and did not make an attempt to find a norm to which the outward appearance of a cavalier must conform In other words, there is no indication that he carefully visualized the details in the armor of his heroes, indeed he has less feeling for the niceties of armor than his Italian predecessors in romantic poetry.

To say that he was archaic comes to the same thing as to say that he followed the precedent of Ariosto and the other Italians Ariosto and Berni were three quarters of a century before him, and Malory still further, yet all were archaic in their time Since there seem to be but few passages in which Spenser took anything from the decadent chivalry of his own age or from any of its military customs, the conclusion apparently must be that he adopted the formulas of earlier romance without criticism and without considering exactness or consistency. The obvious vigor of his single combats is not the result of minute or historical realism.

ALLAN H. GILBERT

Duke University

³² Cesare Vecellio, Habitu Antichu et Moderni (Venice, 1598), p. 43 The preface, written for an earlier edition, is dated 1589.

HOW GREAT WAS SHAKESPEARE'S DEBT TO MONTAIGNE?

EDWARD CAPELL in his Notes and Various Readings (1781)¹ pointed out a parallel between Montaigne's essay "Of the Cannibals" (Florio's translation) and The Tempest, II, 1, 118, ff., where Shakespeare follows the wording of Florio so closely that his indebtedness is unmistakable. Since this discovery various attempts have been made to prove further the influence of Montaigne upon Shakespeare. In 1871, G. F. Stedefeld published the first extended study of the relationship between the two writers,² and from that time on there have appeared from time to time books and articles on the subject, some of which make extravagant assertions in regard to the extent of Montaigne's influence upon the dramatist. For example, J. M. Robertson in Montaigne and Shakespeare (1897), after gathering numerous parallels from the Essays and from Shakespeare, made the sweeping claim that much of the growth of Shakespeare's mind was due to the influence of Montaigne.³ G. C. Taylor in Shakespeare's Debt to Montaigne (1925) makes almost as large claims as this. He "proposes to demonstrate" by means of parallel passages "that Shakespeare was beyond any doubt, profoundly and extensively influenced by Montaigne, definitely influenced in regard to vocabulary, phrases, short and long passages, and, after a fashion, influenced also in thought."⁴ In an article published shortly after Robertson's book appeared, Miss Elizabeth Hooker, after citing numerous parallels, comes to the more guarded conclusion that Shakespeare used the Essays as a store-house of material only.⁵ Conservative students of the literature of the Renaissance have questioned the soundness of assigning definite sources, especially for material of common knowledge, on the basis of parallel passages. A. Brandl, in his review of Robertson's Montaigne and Shakespeare, warns against assigning to Montaigne sources which were common to both writers, such as Plutarch,⁶ and C. R. Baskervill, in his review of Taylor's Shakespeare's Debt to Montaigne, states the same objection, and says that most of the ² Hamlet ein Tendenz-drama Shakespeares (Berlin, 1871).

¹ I have not had access to this work. A. H. Upham, The French Influence in English Literature (New York, 1908), p. 282, cites the parallel as pointed out by Edward Capell, Notes and Various Readings (1781), pt. iv, p. 63.

³ This reference is to the edition of 1909, Montaigne and Shakespeare, p. 37.

⁴ Shakespeare's Debt to Montaigne, p. 5.

⁵ "The Relation of Shakespeare to Montaigne," PMLA, x (1902), 347.

⁶ Shakespeare Jahrbuch, xxxv (1899), 313-314.

parallels cited by Taylor may be due to a common inheritance of Renaissance thought shared by the two writers.⁷ Pierre Villey believes the passage in The Tempest is the only instance of Shakespeare's borrowing from Montaigne. After reading the exhaustive parallels cited by Robertson and others, he concludes that "cent zéros additionnés ensemble ne font toujours que zéro."⁸ Yet, in spite of the skepticism of the more conservative scholars, parallels are still cited to prove a direct relation between the two writers. Miss Suzanne Turck has brought together numerous passages which she believes show unmistakable influence of the Essais on Hamlet.⁹ J. Dover Wilson cites Montaigne frequently in his notes to his recent edition of Hamlet.¹⁰ And Joseph E. Baker, in his essay "The Philosophy of Hamlet," says that in Hamlet "direct echoing [of Montaigne] seems very probable."¹¹

Those who have attempted to show that Shakespeare's borrowing from Montaigne was extensive have failed to take sufficient account of the wide currency in the Renaissance of ideas common to the two writers. For most of the passages in the Essays and in Shakespeare which reflect on the same problems, both writers probably drew upon sentences, similitudes, and philosophical generalizations to be found in popular classical authors and in loci communes gathered from them. Shakespeare probably knew the Latin forms of many of the loci. He had no doubt learned to search out the "places" in school authors by the methods then in vogue in the schools. He had perhaps gathered them from the treatises of Cicero, from the letters and essays of Seneca, and from some Latin version of Plutarch—writers who are prominent among Montaigne's avowed sources. In these, in other Latin works, and in the enormously popular anthologies of quotations, such as Erasmus' two great collections—the Adagia and the Apophthegmata—and the Polyanthea of Mirabellius, would have been found loci communes from Greek and Latin writers, on a vast number of subjects. The moral precepts in Catonis disticha and in Mimi Publani were universally familiar, and so were those in short collections by Seneca (or St. Martin)—De remediis fortuitorum, Liber de moribus, and De formula honestae vitae. Early translations into English from the Latin books of precepts and aphorisms and from moral works such as Cicero's Tusculanae Disputationes and De officiis and Seneca's letters and treatises are cited below, as well as popular books of apho-

⁷ Modern Philology, xxiii (1925-26), 499-500

⁸ "Montaigne et les poètes dramatiques anglais du temps de Shakespeare," Revue d'histoire littéraire de la France, xxiv (1917) 390

⁹ Shakespeare und Montaigne ein Beitrag zur Hamlet-Frage (Berlin, 1931)

¹⁰ The Tragedy of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark (Cambridge: The University Press, 1934)

¹¹ Essays in Dramatic Literature (Princeton University Press, 1935), p. 468

risms from classical sources originally compiled in English—Elyot's Bankette of sapience (1539, with four later editions), Baldwin's Treatise of moral philosophy (1547, with fourteen editions by 1600), Ling's Politeuphuna, or Wits Commonwealith, Part I (1597, with twelve editions by 1630), Meres' Palladis Tamia, the second part of Wits Commonwealith (1598), Cawdrey's A treasure or storehouse of similies (1600), and Bodenheim's Belvedere, or Garden of the Muses (1600)¹² A large number of the parallels in the special studies which have been cited from the Essays as sources for Shakespeare, especially those from Hamlet and Julius Caesar with parallels from Florio's "That to Philosophie, is to learne how to die" (I, 19), are reflections embodying the Stoic view of the ideal attitude toward death and fortune. Shakespeare would have found precepts on this theme scattered through the books of aphorisms mentioned above and in numerous popular English adaptations from Stoic works, such as E A's Defence of Death (1577), Lord Berners' The golden boke of Marcus Aurelius (1534), North's Diall of Princes (1557), and Thomas Twyne's translation of Petrarch's De remedius utriusque fortunae as A Phisicke against fortune (1579).

The list given above of works in English accessible to Shakespeare, which drew on the same classical sources as Montaigne used, will serve to point out the danger of assigning to one source to the exclusion of others aphorisms of classical provenance adapted in his plays. Even this partial list of English works containing sentences, examples, apophthegms, and similitudes derived from the classics indicates how early and how completely the precepts of the ancients which point the way to wise conduct found their way into English, and how wide the currency of these aphorisms must have been. Montaigne and Shakespeare have in common exactly the sort of sententious matter to which this kind of book gave currency.

The citations below demonstrate that Shakespeare, Florio, E A., the compilers of the English precept books, and many others expand, adapt, and fuse in much the same fashion the loci communes, which in classical works or in quotation books derived from them, gathered together the pronouncements of the ancients on a vast number of subjects, and passed them on to succeeding generations. To loci communes under such headings as "Mors," "Vita," "Homo," "Constantia," etc., are due, quite certainly, most of the correspondences which appear to be so striking in Montaigne's Essays and Shakespeare's plays. The loci were accessible to Shakespeare as well as to Montaigne in classical writers and in such collections of quotations as the Adagia and the Polyanthea. Shakespeare could have found them adapted by Baldwin or Ling or Meres or Cawdrey, under headings such as "Of man," "Of mans life," "Of death," or under less general ones, such as "Of education" or "Of custom." He was probably familiar with many of the well-known Latin "places" on popular subjects. He may frequently have found, however, that the more formal "classics" either in the original or in translation, or the Latin collections of aphorisms, were less suited to his needs in dramatic composition than the English precept books, where there lay ready to hand such sentences, similitudes, and classical commonplaces as he cared to use without particular effort. It is hardly to be argued that any one of these books is the specific source of any particular passage in his plays—the supposition that he may have been acquainted with several of them is reasonable. It is certain, however, that he would not have needed to go to Florio's Montaigne for this sententious matter.

¹² My citations from Baldwin are from the edition of 1564, representing Paul Freyman's third revision. I cite from the 1630 edition of Ling, and from the 1634 edition of Meres. My citations from Elyot, Bankette of sapience (1539) and from Whittinton's translations from St. Martin—The Forme and Rule of honest lvyng and The Myrrour or Glasse of muners—are from photostat copies of the originals in the British Museum. Of the Polyanthia I cite the edition of 1608, of the Adagia the Froben edition, 1533. My citations from E A's The Defence of Death are from a film reproduction of the original in the British Museum.

We turn now to the citations. Since the space at my disposal is limited, I give full texts of probable classical originals and of typical English variants for only a few of the commonplaces, indicating others by footnote references or in tabular form. I have chosen from the special studies those parallels from Montaigne and from Shakespeare which in my judgment show the closest correspondence in wording and also a definite relation in thought. Since writers of these studies hold that Hamlet and Measure for Measure show Montaigne's influence more clearly than other plays of Shakespeare, I cite most frequently from them.

"OF LEARNING"—"OF IDLENESS"

Taylor has pointed out a striking correspondence between Florio and Shakespeare in the use of the similitude likening the idle mind to an unweeded garden.¹³

Montaigne, Essays I, 39¹⁴ "Of Idleness":

As we see some idle-fallow grounds, if they be fat and fertile, to bring forth store and sundrie roots of wilde and unprofitable weeds, and that to keepe them in ure we must subject and imploy them with certaine seeds for our use and service . . . So is it of mindes, which except they be busied about some subject, that may bridle and keepe them under, they will here and there wildely scatter themselves through the vaste field of imaginations ¹³ Shakespeare's Debt to Montaigne, pp. 15 and 24-25.

¹⁴ References to Montaigne are to The Essays of Montaigne done into English by John Florio, The Tudor Translations (London, 1892).

Shakespeare, Hamlet, I, ii. 133-137:

How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable,
Seems to me all the uses of this world'
Fie on 't! oh fie, fie! 'Tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed, things rank and gross in nature Possess it merely

Antony and Cleopatra I ii 113-114:

O, then we bring forth weeds
When our quick minds lie still

Othello, I, iii, 321-329:

Virtue! A fig! 'tis in ourselves that we are thus or thus. Our bodies are our gardens, to the which our wills are gardeners, so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness, or manured with industry, why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills.

Shakespeare need not have gone to Florio for this similitude. It was one of the familiar commonplaces on Education, and is to be found in the works of those great favorites, Cicero, Seneca, and Plutarch. It frequently occurs in the translations and adaptations from these authors, often in the English precept books. We find in North's translation of Plutarch's Lives, at the beginning of the life of Coriolanus, and marked by a marginal note, "Coriolanus wit," the following passage, which may be compared with the lines cited above from Shakespeare:

This man also [Coriolanus] is a good prooffe to confirme some mens opinions. That a rare and excellent wit untaught, doth bring forth many good and evil things together as a fat soile that lyeth unmanured bringeth forth both hearbes and weeds¹⁵

—The Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romans (ed. of 1579), p. 237

Meres is undoubtedly adapting this similitude, from Plutarch or at second-hand from North, in the following:

As a field untilld, doth not only remaine unfruitfull, but also doth bring forth many weeds. so youth capable of reason, except it be exercised in honest precepts doth not onely not become good, but runneth into many vices. Plutarch.

Wits Commonwealth, pp. 128-129 under "Education."

¹⁵ Cf. II Henry IV, iv, iv 54-56, where the King, lamenting over the riotous life of Prince Hal, says,

Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds,
And he, the noble image of my youth,
Is overspread with them

Cawdrey has

As the earth when it is not tilled, or trimmed, dooth breede and bring forth bryers, brambles, nettles, and all noysome and unprofitable things So Idlenesse in man, doth breed and broode in him, ungodly thoughts, and wicked cogitations of all sortes

—A treasure or storehouse of similes, p 409, under "Idleness"

Meres includes this same precept under "Youth," Ling under "Of Schools" (Politeuphona, p 77). It is to be found also in Lord Berners' Golden boke of Marcus Aurelius (edition of 1553), sig Kvi Seneca's Epistle 34 was a popular source of commonplaces on Education, and Cicero's precept, ". . . ut ager quamvis fertilis, sine cultura fructuosus esse non potest, sic sine doctrina animus," Tusculanae Disputationes II, 13, was constantly quoted

"OF AMBITION OR VAIN GLORY"

Taylor matches Shakespeare's lines on ambition in the second scene of Act II in Hamlet with a passage in Florio describing vain glory Montaigne, Essays, II, 352, "Of glory":

He that first bethought himselfe of the resemblance betweene shadow and glory did better than he thought of They are exceeding vaine things It also often goeth before her body, and sometimes exceeds by much in length

Essays, I, 296:

Fame . . . is a dreame, dreames shadow¹⁶

Shakespeare, Hamlet, II, II 263–270:

Gul Which dreams indeed are ambition, for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.¹⁷

Ham A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality¹⁸ that it is but a shadow's shadow

Ham Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs and outstretch'd heroes the beggars' shadows

The similitude here involved in Florio and in Shakespeare may go back to Cicero's comparison of glory to a shadow: ". . . gloria . . . virtutem

¹⁶ Taylor, op cit, p 14

¹⁷ The comparison between transitory and vain things and a shadow seen in sleep is frequently met in the literature of the Renaissance Montaigne here quotes Tasso The figure is to be found in Pindar (Pythian Hymns VIII), where it is used to describe the slightness and evanescence of man's life Erasmus' quotation of the similitude from Pindar (Adagia, II, III, 48, under "Homo bulla") no doubt gave currency to this figure I cite part of Erasmus' paraphrase from Pindar below, for the Duke's speech in Measure for Measure

¹⁸ Cf. Seneca Ep. CXXIII, 16.

Gloria vanum et volucre quiddam est auraque mobilis tamquam umbra, sequitur"—Tusc Disp, I, 110, or to Seneca: "Gloria umbra virtutis est"—Epistulae morales, LXXIX, 13. The idea expressed in Shakespeare's lines, emphasizing the vanity of ambition, or the desire of false glory, may be compared with a passage in Tusculans (III, 3), which distinguishes true glory from false. It is rendered thus by Dolman. All men nevertheless do greedelye desyre the prayse of the common sorte, and sunge therein after true and unfayned honesty are foulye deluded and mocked. For they do not obtayne any perfect picture of vertue, but the shaded image of glorye. For, true glorye is a sounde and perfect thyng and no colored shadowe.¹⁹

—Those five questions, sig Niif

The Polyanthea, under "Gloria," quotes from Plutarch a similitude which introduces the figure of the lengthened shadow as representing the emptiness of (false) glory suggested in these parallel passages from Florio and from Shakespeare. The quotation from Plutarch is given in Latin, as follows:

Uti sol, si immineat hominis vertici, aut prorsum tollit umbram aut minimam reddit: sic ingens gloria extinguit invidiam. *Plut in Moralibus*²⁰

Plutarch is the source of this similitude in Meres:

When the Sun-beames are perpendicular over a mans head they either altogether take away his shadow, or make it very little: so exceeding great glory doth quite extinguish envy. Plut —Wits Commonwealth, pp. 384–385, under "Glory," and probably in Cawdrey:

As the more directly the Sunne lieth upon us, the lesse is the shadowe of our bodie, as at noone wee may see by experience, and a little before and after. Even so the lesse that we arrogate and ambitiously boast of our selves, the greater gifts and graces of God are wee endued withall.²¹

—A treasure or storehouse of similes, p. 23, under "Ambition."²²

"OF THE SOUL"—"OF REASON"

Hamlet's speech praising the beauty and order of the universe has been traced to Montaigne.

Montaigne, Essays, II, 141:

Let us now but consider man alone without other help. Let us see what hold-fast, or freehold he hath in this gorgeous, and goodly equipage. Who

¹⁹. ad quam [i.e., populari gloriam] fertur optimus quisque, veramque illam honestatem expetens, quam unam natura maxime inquit, in summa inanitate versatur consecaturque nullam eminentem effigiem virtutis, sed adumbratam imaginem gloriae. Est enim gloria solida quaedam res et expressa, non adumbrata.

²⁰ I have not traced this quotation in the Moralia.

²¹ Cawdrey gives a reference to 1 Cor., 4:7, but he is probably following Plutarch here, not St. Paul.

²² Other English versions of this similitude may be found in Meres under "Wisdom," and in Cawdrey under "Vertue."

hath perswaded him, that this admirable moving of heavens vaults, that the eternal light of these lampes so fiercely rowling over his head, that the horror-moving and continuall motion of this infinite vaste Ocean, were established, and continue so many ages for his commoditie and service? Is it possible to imagine any thing so ridiculous, as this miserable and wretched creature, which is not so much as master of himselfe, exposed and subject to offences of all things, and yet daeth call himselfe Master and Emperour of this Universe?

Shakespeare, Hamlet, II. ii. 309–315:

Hamlet . this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory, this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours . . .

The passage from Florio's translation of "The Apology of Raymond Sebonde" which is quoted above has been cited again and again as the source of Hamlet's speech praising "this goodly frame, the earth."²³ J. Dover Wilson, in his edition of Hamlet, remarks that a parallel was noted by G. B. Harrison (Shakespeare at Work, pp 277–278), who quotes from W. Parry's Travels of Sir Anthony Shirley (pub. Nov., 1601): "Those resplendent and crystalline heavens over-canopying the earth." Professor Wilson concludes, however, that "Montaigne seems the more likely source."²⁴ But descriptions of the beauty and order of the universe as contemplated by the mind of man including details which appear in these parallels, are a set piece in classical works popular in the Renaissance. These conventional pieces were no doubt models for the many descriptions of the heavens which occur in the literature of the sixteenth century, often as commonplaces proving the existence of God and the divine origin of man's soul. Such commonplaces occur in classical treatises amplifying the Stoic view that the marvel of the creation points to God as creator, as opposed to the Epicurean notion that the universe is merely a "concourse of atoms," without design. Cicero, in the second book of De natura deorum, puts into the mouth of the Stoic Balbus, who is arguing against the Epicurean Velleius to prove that the world could not have been created by chance, several descriptions of the beauty of the heavens²⁵ quite like those just quoted from Montaigne's Essays and from Hamlet.

²³ Feis, Shakespeare and Montaigne, pp 81, ff., J. M. Robertson, op cit, p 53, Miss Turk, op cit, p 50, and J. Dover Wilson, as noted below, all cite this parallel.

²⁴ The Tragedy of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, ed by J. Dover Wilson (1934), p 175. Professor Wilson refers here to Florio's Montaigne, Bk. III, ch. 12—no doubt an error for Bk. II, ch. 12, in which the passage in question occurs.

²⁵ See De natura deorum, Bk. II, sections 4, 15, 90, 98, ff., etc., especially the elaborate account of the beauty and order of the world in sections 98 ff. For one passage (II, 95), which argues from the perfection of the universe that the gods exist, Cicero quotes Aristotle, the lost dialogue, De Philosophia. In Plato's Timaeus the contemplation of the revolutions of the heavenly bodies is described as the highest function of the soul of man (para-

Similar passages are to be found in Seneca, De otio (v, 3, ff) and De providentia (i, 2), in Cicero's Tusculans, in Plutarch's De tranquillitate animi, and elsewhere. De natura deorum was not translated into English in the sixteenth century, nor were Seneca's treatises just referred to. But other classical works which may have served as models for this commonplace were accessible to Shakespeare in English. Compare with Hamlet's speech, the following passage from Dolman's translation of Tusculanae Disputationes v, 69:

What ioye, then, must the minde of this wise man needes dwell in, daye and nyght, with such pleasaunt thoughtes? When he shall also beholde the motions and turnings of the whole woulde, and shall see innumerable starres fastened in the skyes, and turned, onelye by the motion of the same. And other some, to have motions, & courses of theyr owne, distante the one from the other, cyther in hyghnes or lowenes. Whose wanderinge motions kepe neverthelesse, a stedfast and certayne course . . .

—Those fyve questions sig Ccii

A passage on this theme from a sixteenth century translation of Petrarch's De Remedius utriusque fortunae, a work which makes much use of popular commonplaces from the classics, is of interest as an elaboration of the conventional description of man's contemplation of the universe not unlike that in Shakespeare's lines in Hamlet. Reason exhorts Sorrow as follows:

What shall I neede to speake of . . . the most glorious and bryght spectacle of all, whiche is the circumference of the starrie Firmament, that continually turneth about with incomprehensible swiftness, wherein are fastened the fixed Starres? Lykewyse the wanderyng lyghtes, which you call the seven Planettes, and especially the Sunne and Mone, the two most excellent lyghtes of the worlde, as Virgil tearmeth them, Or the most glorious beauteie of Heaven, as Horace speaketh of them . . . Hereunto, moreover, there is geven unto you a bodye, which although it be frayle and transitorie, yet notwithstanding in shewe is imperious and beautiful, fashioned upryght, and convenient in contemplation to beholde the heavens²⁶ . . . he, who by this marveyulous and mercifull vouchsafeing preferred you before the Angels, set Angels also over you, to keepe and graphs 47 and 90, Jowett's translation) Quite possibly these passages in Plato were a main source of the various descriptions in later classical writers of the response of man's soul to the ordered beauty of the universe

²⁶ Cf Seneca De otio, v, 4

[Natura] in media nos sui parti constituit et circumspectum omnium nobis dedit; nec erexit tantummodo hominem, sed etiam habilem contemplationi factura, ut ab ortu sidera in occasum labentia prosequi posset et vultum suum circumferre cum toto, sublimis fecit illi caput et collo flexili imposuit. . . .

defend you, that by all meanes he myght declare your excellencie above all other creatures ²⁷

—A Phisicke against fortune, Thomas Twyne (1579), folios 281–282

“OF VOLUPTUOUSNESS”

Montaigne, Essays, III, 67, Shakespeare, Hamlet, III, iv, 144–149 Seneca, De tranquillitate animi, II, 11–12, and De ira, I, xvi, 3 Polyanthea under “Voluptas”, Cawdrey, p 146, under “Continuance of Sinne.”

“OF ADVERSITY”

Montaigne, Essays, II, 28 and 110–111, Shakespeare, Troilus and Cressida, I, III, 20–40, Timon of Athens, I, I, 10–11, Coriolanus, IV, I, 2–10 Defense of Death, sigs GIV, v, HII, iii—from Seneca, De providentia; Cawdrey, p 572, under “Patience in Affliction.”

“OF OLD AGE”

Montaigne, Essays, I, 69, and II, 536, Shakespeare, Macbeth, II III 96–101 Seneca, Ep Mor, CVIII, 26, and Ep. LVIII, 32–33, Polyanthea, under “Mors ” “Similitudines”, Meres, p 140, under “Youth”, Cawdrey, p 771, under “Unwilling to die.”

“OF CUSTOM”

Montaigne, Essays, III, 29, 265, 347, Shakespeare, Hamlet, III. iv 161–168 Seneca, Ep xxxix, 6, Polyanthea, “Consuetudo”, Elyot, Bankette, under “Maners of men,” Baldwin (ed of 1556), fol cvii, Whittinton, Myroure or Glasse of maners, sig. A8, Ling, p. 181, “Of Labour ”

“OF COVETOUSNESS”

Montaigne, Essays, II, 343, Shakespeare, Measure for Measure, III, I, 21–23 Seneca, Ep LXXIII, 2, Elyot, Bankette, under “Ingratitude”, E A., Defence of Death, sigs E1, EII See also Alciati, Emblemata, LXXXVI, “In Avaros”, Whitney’s Choice of Emblemes (ed by H Green, 1866), p. 18, “In Avaros”; Polyanthea, under “Avaritia”, Baldwin (1564), fol. 12, Cawdrey, p 140, under “Covetousness ”

“OF DEATH”

Perhaps no lines in Shakespeare except the passage in The Tempest referred to at the beginning of this article have been so frequently traced to Montaigne, and so consistently matched with the same passage in Florio as the familiar speech of Hamlet just before the duel with Laertes,

²⁷ Cf with the Senecan passage in the preceding footnote and with the lines from Twyne’s translation of Petrarch, the latter part of Hamlet’s speech on the beauty of the universe

What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! How infinite in faculty! In form and moving how express and admirable! In action how like an angel! In apprehension how like a god! The beauty of the world! The paragon of animals!

—Hamlet, II iii. 315–320

where he expresses an attitude of fatalism in regard to the outcome of the duel. From the early studies of Stedefeld and Feis to J. Dover Wilson's edition of Hamlet in 1934, the following parallel has been cited.

Montaigne, Essays, I, 78, 84, 87:

It is uncertaine where death looks for us, let us expect her everie where why should we feare to lose a thing, which being lost, cannot be moaned? Moreover, no man dies before his houre. The time you leave behinde was no more yours, than that which was before your birth, and concerneth you no more

Shakespeare, Hamlet, v, ii 230-235:

Hamlet Not a whit, we defy augury . If it be now, 'tis not to come, if it be not to come, it will be now, if it be not now, yet it will come the readiness is all Since no man has aught of what he leaves, what is't to leave betimes?²⁸

J Dover Wilson says that this whole speech is "a distillation of Montaigne," the essay entitled in Florio, "That to Philosophie, is to learne how to die." He cites for Hamlet's speech the passage from the Essays quoted just above,²⁹ the various parts of which are taken from the nineteenth chapter of the first book Upham cites the Montaigne parallel, and remarks that it "goes a long way toward clearing up a doubtful line in the folio"³⁰ He refers to the line "since no man has aught of what he leaves, what is't to leave betimes?" The citations below show, however, that Shakespeare would have had no more need to turn to Florio for Stoic commonplaces on death such as those in Hamlet's speech just cited than for those expressed in other plays which are thought to be indebted to Montaigne The nineteenth essay of the first book, which has been cited more often than any other of the Essays as Shakespeare's source, has been shown by the editors of Montaigne to consist in large part of adaptations of Latin—chiefly Senecan—aphorisms, separated by comments on these aphorisms.³¹ Senecan and other commonplaces on how the "wise man" meets death and fortune were probably familiar to Shakespeare in the original. There are English variants of consolatory precepts such as he has adapted in Hamlet and in the Duke's speech in Measure for Measure to be found among the commonplaces in Ling, Baldwin, Elyot, and elsewhere I have selected as typical the adaptations from Seneca in E A's Defence of Death (1577). Compare with this speech of Hamlet's the following:

²⁸ Feis, p 111, Hooker, p 320, Turck, pp 61-62

²⁹ Hamlet, Prince of Denmark (Cambridge University Press, 1934), p 249

³⁰ The French Influence in English Literature, p 283

³¹ See citations of Montaigne's sources for "que philosophe c'est apprendre a mourir," I, xx (in Florio, I, xix), Les Essais de Michel Montaigne (Bordeaux, 1920), tome 4 (by Pierre Villey), pp 41-47 See also comment on the sources of this essay, ibid. p. 45 "On remarquera que bien souvent les sentences en français qui séparent les citations latines ne sont guère que des commentaires de ces citations"

... No man knoweth where death waiteth for thee, watch thou therfor for it in al places.

—The Defence of Death, sig Evi, from Ep xxvi, 7.

. . what greater folly can there be then to wonder, that the thing dooth sometime happen which is in danger dayly to come to pass? Our bounds are limited in place where the inexorable destinie hath planted them, and yet can no man tell how nere they are Let us therefore frame our mindes as if we were at the end of them, let us not defer the time For he who dayly setteth the last hand to his life hath nothing to doo with time (Cf "If it be not now, yet it will come the readiness is all")³²

—The Defence of Death, sigs Fvi, verso, Fvii, recto.

it skilleth not when we suffer, for as wel one day we must suffer It skilleth not how long thou livest so thou livest wel & unto good life many times long life is hurtful³³ . feare not therefore to tarry the appointed houre, which will take thee from hence Whatsoever thou seest about thee account it as moovables and baggage of hostries [hosteltries] and that thou must go forwarde Nature abaseth men at their departure, as at their comming in We carry away no more then we bring with us (Cf "since no man has aught of what he leaves, what is 't to leave betimes?")³⁴ Let death find us redy disposed, and nothing slack³⁵ (Cf "The readiness is all") —Ibid, sigs Fvii, verso, Gi, verso.

The Duke's speech, Measure for Measure, III, 1 1-44

Those who have sought to demonstrate by means of parallel passages a marked influence of Montaigne on Shakespeare have looked upon Hamlet and Measure for Measure as being especially important in indicating this debt Robertson says, "The real clue to Montaigne's influence on Shakespeare beyond Hamlet . . . lies . . . in Measure for Measure"³⁶ He says of the Duke's speech to Claudio in this play, "It is difficult to doubt that Montaigne is for Shakespeare the source of the stimulus,"³⁷

³² Quid autem stultius quam mirari id ullo die factum, quod omni potest fieri? Stat quidem terminus nobis, ubi illum inexorabilis fatorum necessitas fixit, sed nemo scit nostrum, quam prope versetur terminum Sic itaque formemus animum, tamquam ad extrema ventum sit Nihil differamus . Qui cotidie vitae suae summam manum imposuit, non indiget tempore —Ep ci, 7-8

³³ [Excutienda vitae cupido est discendumque] nihil interesse, quando patiaris, quod quandoque patiendum est Quam bene vivas refert, non quam diu, saepe autem in hoc est bene, ne diu

—Ep ci, 15.

³⁴ prouinde intrepidus horam illam decretoriam prospice Quidquid circa te iacet rerum tamquam hospitalis loci sarcinas specta, transeundum est Excutit redeuntem natura sicut intrantem Non licet plus efferre quam intuleris .

—Ep cii, 24-5.

³⁵ Depone onus, quid cunctaris

—Ep cii, 26

³⁶ Op cit, p 182

³⁷ Ibid., p 87.

and "the very ground for surmising that he had Montaigne's writing in mind when he penned the Duke's exhortation to Claudio is that he has there framed a catena of stoical comments on life and death, and that such a catena is found repeatedly in Montaigne."³⁸ Robertson quotes the Duke's speech entire, with parallels from the Essays.³⁹ Collins quotes it in refuting Robertson, and conceded that it is here that "we have a typical illustration of the way in which Shakespeare may have been influenced by Montaigne."⁴⁰ Miss Hooker quotes it almost entire with some rather close parallels from Montaigne. She says that this speech "seems to collect many of Montaigne's remarks upon the paradoxical and unsatisfactory nature of human existence."⁴¹

The correspondences to the Duke's speech which have been pointed out in Florio are, like others cited above, more likely to be due to a common knowledge on the part of Shakespeare and Montaigne of classical aphorisms which were current as loci communes than to a direct relation between the two writers. The Duke's speech is, as Robertson says, made up of Stoic comments on life and death. Most of these were universally familiar as commonplaces of consolation against the fear of death. There are in this passage the conventional charges against life for its shortness and insecurity, and against the shifting sense of values in the mind of man; against the frailness and the base origin of the body, against old age, with its impotency, its susceptibility to disease, its peculiar fault—covetousness—and its unreasonable desire for longer life. Those who sought loci communes on these themes would have found them in many places. Among these are the famous consolatory passage against the fear of death in Lucretius' De rerum natura, Book III,⁴² certain loci in Seneca and in Marcus Aurelius; Pliny's Nat. Hist., Book VII, which deals with man, his life and death, and in which chapters 1 and 50 are popular sources for loci on these themes; and gatherings of the loci communes in such comprehensive collections as the Polyanthea, under "Homo," "Mors," "Vita," "Senectus," etc., and the Adagia—especially, in this last-mentioned work under "Homo bulla," where Erasmus has gathered together the most beautiful classical imagery on the fragility and the swift passing of human life. Shakespeare had probably searched

³⁸ Ibid., p. 274

³⁹ Ibid., pp. 87–91.

⁴⁰ J. Churton Collins, Studies in Shakespeare (London, 1904), p. 291

⁴¹ "The Relation of Shakespeare to Montaigne," PMLA, x (1902), 326

⁴² Lucretius' great poem may have been quite frequently the source of consolatory precepts among the commonplaces, especially Book III, the Discourse of Nature. It is less frequently quoted for commonplaces of consolation, however, than other classical writers, especially Cicero and Seneca, the reason being no doubt largely that the definite rejection of the doctrine of personal immortality in his poem (III, 417 ff.) is in direct conflict with Christian teaching.

out, in grammar school, the Latin "places" in some of these sources. But before his plays were written, this material, like that on the various subjects noted above, was represented quite completely in English, in such translations and adaptations as I have cited, and especially in the English collections of sentences and similitudes. No one passage which I cite can be pointed out definitely as Shakespeare's source—indeed in this speech he has adapted, fused, and compressed his material more perhaps than in any of the passages from his plays quoted above. It is made clear by the citations, however, that he would not have needed to depend upon Florio for the Duke's speech, and that Seneca's commonplaces are probably a main source for this passage. The lines which have been cited from the Essays for this passage are the least convincing of all the parallels in the special studies. Striking correspondence to the Duke's speech are scattered through the English commonplace books under "Of mans life" and similar headings. They occur in Baldwin, Elyot, Ling, Cawdrey, Meres, and E. A. I cite most frequently E. A.'s Defence of Death.

"OF MAN"

Montaigne, Essays, II, 327:

Is it our senses that lend these diverse conditions unto subjects, when for all that, the subjects have but one? as we see in the Bread we eate it is but Bread, but one using it, it maketh bones, blood, flesh, haire, and nailes thereof.

Shakespeare, Measure for Measure, III, i 13-21:

Thou are not noble,
For all the accommodations that thou bear'st
Are nurs'd by baseness. Thou'rt by no means valiant,
For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork
Of a poor worm.
. Thou art not thyself;
For thou exist'st on many a thousand grains
That issue out of dust.⁴³

The citation from Montaigne does not seem at all close to Shakespeare's lines, which express the conventional charges against the base origin and earthy sustenance of the body common in exhortations of consolation such as the Duke's speech. The English books of common places contain much the same matter under headings such as "Of man," "Of mans life," etc. Compare Baldwin,

Thou shalte knowe thy selfe accordinge to gods commaundemente, if thou consider, what thou arte, what thou wast, & what thou shalte bee. . . . Thou knowest thy body shal putrifie and become earth, than was it earth before it was thy bodye, for looke whereinto anye thing ceaseth thereof bee sure it hadde the beginning . . . And therefore thy growing & sencible moving life that came of the earth, remaineth so with it, that by putrifaction plants & wormes do engender therof which encrease, move & feele as thou didst . . . —A treatyce of morall philosophy (1564), fol 76, under "Of man and what he is"

⁴³ Hooker, op cit, p. 328

Conventional consolation in the Renaissance emphasized not only that in the very nature of things man's life is short and fleeting, and his body fragile and subject to disease and planetary influences, but that his disposition is fickle, and his judgments, which are under his own control, are unreliable. Stoic teaching in particular, the chief source of consolatory commonplaces, insisted that it is man's own passions only which disturb the calm of his mind and cause his sense of values to be shifting and uncertain.⁴⁴ Passages in Stoic works were constantly put under contribution for "places" on this popular theme. Montaigne's Essays were only one of many sources accessible to Shakespeare for sentences on it, and for similitudes with which to "amplify" it. Seneca's prose was more often sought for consolatory precepts than the works of any other classical writer. A somewhat detailed comparison between the separate aphorisms in the Duke's speech and several passages in E.A.'s translation of commonplaces from Seneca shows interesting correspondences

Shakespeare has

A breath thou art,
 Servile to all the skyey influences,
 That dost this habitation where thou keep'st
 Hourly afflict
 Thou art not noble,
 For all the accommodations that thou bear'st
 Are nurs'd by baseness.
 Thou art not thyself;
 For thou exist'st on many a thousand grains
 That issue out of dust.

Compare the suggestion of the transitoriness of life in "this habitation where thou keep'st" with Seneca's comparison of life to an inn:

Man is never more heavenly then when he considereth his mortall nature, and knoweth that he is borne a man, to die, assuring him self that this body is not his owne house but an Inne, & such an Inne as he must shortly parte from.⁴⁵

—The Defence of Death, sigs G1, verso, G11, recto

⁴⁴ My forth-coming monograph, Shakespeare's Treatment of Passion, analyzes in some detail the Stoic doctrine which undoubtedly influenced Shakespeare.

⁴⁵ Quod numquam magis divinum est, quam ubi mortalitatem suam cogitat et scit in hoc natum hominem, ut vita defungeretur, nec domum esse hoc corpus, sed hospitium, et quidem breve hospitium, quod relinquendum est. . . .

Compare with the "skyey influences" which "afflict" the body, Seneca's reflections on the inconvenience of inclement weather.

[Winter brings cold, and we must shiver] Dooth the summer bring heat? We must not be without heat Dooth the distempered aire hinder our helth? We must be sick ⁴⁶

—Defence, sig. G1, verso

Compare also Shakespeare's reflections that "all the accommodations that thou bear'st Are nurs'd by baseness," and that "thou exist'st on many a thousand grains That issue out of dust" with E A, the same passage from which I cited just above:

It is a great token of an hautie minde to account these places where he is conversant, bace, & straight, and not to fear to depart from them For in that he knoweth and remembreth from whence he commeth, he knoweth also whither he must return ⁴⁷

—The Defence of Death, sig. Gi, recto

Robertson cited⁴⁸ a passage from Montaigne's "Of Experience" which suggests the charges against life, especially against old age, expressed in the Duke's speech:

Looke on an aged man, who sueth unto God to maintain him in perfect, full, and vigorous health . . . Is it not folly? . . . The gowt the stone, the gravell and indigestion are symptomes or effects of long-continued yeares . . . Thou art seene to sweate with labour, to grow pale and wanne, to wax red, to quake and tremble, to cast and vomit blood, to endure strange contractions, to brooke convulsions . . . Even now I lost one of my teeth . . . That part of my being, with divers others, are already dead . . . Death entermeddleth, and everywhere confounds it selfe with our life.

—Essays, III, 359, 361, 375–376.

Montaigne probably depends here upon the same Senecan passages⁴⁹ which are quite certainly back of similar charges in the Duke's exhortation against the inconveniences and unsatisfactory nature of life: that man's "complexion shifts to strange effects," that we are dying even while we fear death, that man's body is subject to disease Shakespeare's ⁴⁶ Hiems frigora adducit algendum est Aestas calores refert aestuandum est Intemperies caeli valetudinem temptat aegrotandum est.

—Ep CVII, 7.

⁴⁷ Maximum . . . argumentum est animi ab altiore sede venientis, si haec, in quibus versatur, humilia iudicat et angusta, si exire non metuit Scit enim, quo exiturus sit, qui unde venerit meminit.

—Ep CXX, 15.

⁴⁸ Montaigne and Shakespeare, p. 89.

⁴⁹ Compare with these lines citations from the Epistles below, especially the passages from Ep CXX, 16, cited in the next two footnotes.

list of diseases, which include those especially assigned to the period of old age—. . the gout, serpigo, and the rheum—may be compared with E.A.'s translation of Seneca's list of the disturbances of the body:

Se we not how many discommodities we overpasse, and how unfit this body is for us? Somtime we complain of our bellyes, of our brest, or of our throte Othertimes our sinews or our feet do greeve us, Otherwhiles some flux [flux] or Rheume molesteth us ⁵⁰

—The Defence of Death, sig Gii, recto

Meres adapts this commonplace in Seneca thus:

As they that have their feet under other mens Tables, and dwell in other mens houses, are vexed with many discommodities and doe alwayes complaine of one thing or other so the soule doth now complaine of the head, now of the feete, now of the stomache, now of one thing, now of another, signifying that shee is not in her owne house, but that shee must goe hence very shortly Seneca

—Wis Commonwealthe, p 108, under "The Soule "

Shakespeare's charge,

Thou are not certain,
For thy complexion shifts to strange effects
After the moon, and his reference to the insecurity of "this habitation where thou keep'st," may be compared with E A , the sentence which follows immediately the last one quoted above:

Otherwhiles we have to much blood, and otherwhiles to little We are tempted and tossed from place to place. Thus are they ordinarily used which dwel in other mens houses. . . ⁵¹

Compare also Shakespeare's charge of covetousness:

Happy thou art not,
For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get,
And what thou hast, forget'st.

with E.A , a passage which continues his translation of Seneca's Epistle: Thus are they ordinarily used which dwel in other mens houses, and yet becing furnished of such vilanous bodyes we do heer propound to our selves eternall matters and as far as mans age can extend we doo through hope promise our ⁵⁰ Non videmus quam multa nos incommoda exagitant, quam male nobis conveniat hoc corpus? Nunc de capite, nunc de ventre, nunc de pectore ac faucibus querimus. Alias nervi nos, alias pedes vexant, nunc delectio, nunc destitutio . . .

—Ep. cxx, 15-16

⁵¹ . . aliquando superest sanguis, aliquando deest, hunc atque illuc temptamur et expellimus, hoc evenire solet in alieno habitantibus.

—Ep. cxx, 16.

selves all things We are not content with any welth or authoritie. Is there any-thing more shameless and foolishhe ⁵²

—The Defence of Death, sig Gi.

Finally, compare Shakespeare's

. . . Merely, thou are Death's fool,
For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun
And yet runn'st toward him still with the following lines in E A., which occur immediately after those in the last quotation above from the Defence

We are made to dye, and yet at our death nothing seemeth sufficient for us For dayly we draw neerer the last point, and every houre driveth us to the place from which we cannot escape beholde then the blindenes of mans understanding ⁵³

"OF THE FEAR OF DEATH"

The adaptations of Senecan aphorisms on the fear of death cited just above from E A , and the passage quoted above from The Defence of Death for Hamlet, v, ii. 230-235, are typical versions of commonplaces on this theme. Compare also the following:

Montaigne, Essays, II, 330-331:

And when we doe foolishly feare a kind of death, when as we have already past, and dayly passe so many others . . . The flower of age dieth, fadeth and fleeteth, when age comes upon us, and youth endeth in the flower of a full growne mans age Child-hood in youth, and the first age, dieth in infancie and yesterday endeth in this day and to day shall die in to morrow And nothing remaineth or ever continueth in one state.

Shakespeare, Measure for Measure, III, i. 38-41:

What's yet in this
That bears the name of life? Yet in this life
Lie hid moe thousand deaths, yet death we fear,
That makes these odds all even ⁵⁴

Montaigne here follows Amyot's Plutarch, "Que signifioit ce mot 'Ei'?" These lines from Montaigne and from Shakespeare state popular com-

⁵² At nos corpus tam putre sortiti nihilominus aeterna proponimus et in quantum potest aetas humana protendi, tantum spe occupamus, nulla contenti pecunia, nulla potentia. Quid hac re fieri impudentius? Quid stultius potest?

—Ep cxx, 17.

⁵³ Nihil satis est morituris, immo morientibus, cotidie enim propius ab ultimo stamus, et illo, unde nobis cadendum est, hora nos omnis impellit. Vide in quanta caecitate mens nostra sit!

—Ep. cxx, 17, 18.

⁵⁴ Robertson, op. cit., p 88, Hooker, op. cit., p 330.

monplaces on death: that there are many kinds of death constantly lying in wait for us, and that death, when it comes, relieves us from further fear of it, which is the thought in Shakespeare, and that all life is death, since each period of our life must die before the next one is reached, which is the idea expressed by Montaigne. Shakespeare's sources for this passage are probably Senecan. The citations below from E. A.'s adaptations from Seneca and from his translation of de Mornay's Excellent discours—which itself depends to a great extent upon Seneca—are closer to Shakespeare's lines than the passage from Florio which has been matched with them.

. . The time neerest hand dooth alwaies escape from him that liveth in hope, & he is so covetous of life that with the feare of death he becommeth miscialle, and though the dout thereof lameth him of one hand and of one leg, of one thigh maketh him crooked, and loseneth all his teeth, yet so long as life continueth it maketh no matter, all is wel, such a miserable thing dooth death seeme unto him. He wisheth his paines more extreme, and that which is hard to be abidden he desireth to prolong and maintain a great while, and for what reward or wages? even to obtain longer life. But what is this long life? as long a death. Is there any who wold languish in torments and perish member after member that had not⁵⁵ rather cast away his life by little & little then to cast it away all at once? Deny me then that the necessitie of death is not a great benfit of nature⁵⁶

—The Defence of Death, sig. Fvii.

De Mornay apparently adapts this same Senecan commonplace on the miseries of long life and the unreasonableness of man's desiring it, in a passage in the Excellent discours which E. A. renders thus:

. . They had rather languish perpetually in the pain of the Goute, the Sciatica, the stone or such like, then at once to die of a sweet death, which comprehendeth ⁵⁵ The negative is an error in translation.

⁵⁶ . in spem viventibus proximum quodque tempus elabitur subitque aviditas et miserrimus ac miserrima omnia efficiens metus mortis. There follows the prayer of Maccenas, which Seneca calls "the most debased of prayers"—"turpissimum votum"—and which E. A. translates in part. I cite the part which he adapts.

Debilem facito manu, debilem pede coxo,
Tuber adstrue gibberum, lubricos quate dentes,
Vita dum superest, benest . . .

Usque adeone mori miserum est?

Optat ultima malorum, et quae pati gravissimum est extendi ac sustineri cupit, qua mercede? Scilicet vitae longioris. Quod autem vivere est diu mori? Invenitur aliquis, qui velit inter supplicia tabescere et perire membratim et totiens per stilicidia emittere animam quam semel exhalare?

Nega nunc magnum beneficium esse naturae, quod necesse est mori

—Ep. ci, 10-14

the least sorow in the world they had rather to die member after member, & as ye would say, to over live their sences, moovings & actions⁵⁷ then altogether to die to the end to live eternally

—The Defence of Death, sig Dviii, recto.

The citations have shown that aphoristic matter which Montaigne and Shakespeare have in common was easily accessible to Shakespeare in other sources than the Essays. Certainly Shakespeare could have had from the popular commonplaces from the classics the type of material which he shares with Montaigne—in many instances indeed he could have found there the specific sentences and similitudes which occur with similar wording in Florio and in his plays. Whether he knew the Latin form of these commonplaces or not—and he probably knew many of them in the Latin—he must have been familiar to some extent at least with the vast body of precepts and similitudes from the ancients which had been assimilated into English long before his time in the books of aphorisms, under convenient headings, for the use of all who sought it. This

⁵⁷ This passage probably depends not only upon the Senecan commonplaces cited above from Epistle cxx, 16 and Epistle ci, 10 f, but for the charge that old people who fear to die prefer to cling to life even though they lose their "senses, moovings, & actions," upon a much-quoted commonplace in Pliny which describes the miseries of old age

. tot periculorum genera, tot morbi, tot metus, tot curae, toties invocata morte, ut nullum frequentius sit votum. Hebescunt sensus, membra torpent, praemoritur visus, auditus, incessus, dentes etiam ac ciborum instrumenta. Et tamen vitae hoc tempus annumeratur,—Pliny, Nat. hist. lib vii, Cap 50 (51)

This commonplace was given wide currency by Erasmus' inclusion of it among the quotations under "Homo bulla," Adagia, II, iii. 48. It is constantly adapted in the literature of the English Renaissance. Jonson translates it literally in a passage in Volpone (I, v. 144 ff.)

So many cares, so many maladies,
So many fears attending on old age,
Yea, death so often call'd on, as no wish
Can be more frequent with 'em Their limbs faint,
Their senses dull, their seeing, hearing, going
All dead before them, yea, their very teeth,
Their instruments of eating, failing them.
Yet this is reckon'd life

Probably the closing lines of Jaques' description of the last age in the seven ages of man

Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

—As You Like It, II, vii. 163–166, owes something to this popular commonplace. But the description of old age in the Duke's speech is clearly Senecan for the most part.

material, arranged for the most part as loci communes, would have been most useful in dramatic composition, and there is no doubt that English collections of the sentences and similitudes may often have furnished matter for the drama of the period, including Shakespeare's plays.

That Shakespeare read Montaigne's "Of the Caniballes" is certain, from his borrowing from this essay in The Tempest. And it is quite possible that he received from the Essays suggestions which he may have used elsewhere in his plays. But, as the parallels cited above show, to build up an elaborate theory of literary "influence" upon the evidence of parallel passages alone is unsound, unless coincidences in idea and wording are unmistakable, and unless such agreements in thought and phraseology are not to be found in other accessible sources than the supposed "influencing" author. In its broader implications, the present essay has served to underscore the danger of "influence grafting" still regrettably prevalent in literary criticism. Ordinarily, to assign "sources" and to trace "influences" on the evidence of correspondences in thought and expression is especially unsafe in the Renaissance, and particularly for matter presumably of classical provenance. The wise sentences and fitting similitudes of the ancients were in every one's mouth. Essays, sermons, treatises, the interminably long moral disquisitions so popular in the period, abound in them. The learned no doubt sought this material in the original sources. But educated and half-educated alike could help themselves from those reservoirs of ancient wisdom which were known to all, the books of commonplaces. Certain striking correspondences between Montaigne and Shakespeare do not prove that Montaigne formed Shakespeare's style, nor even that the dramatist used the Essays as a store-house of material. Nor does the occasional similarity between sententious passages in Chapman and in Shakespeare prove that Chapman had a hand in composing Shakespeare's plays. Indeed it is quite possible that a very large number of the parallels by which recent criticism has attempted to prove indebtedness of one author to another in this period are due wholly to the universal knowledge of the "places."

ALICE HARMON

Montana State College

THE EVOLUTION OF THE TAMING OF THE SHREW

MOST Shakespeare scholars have believed that an earlier form of The Taming of the Shrew once existed, whether it was The Taming of a Shrew or some other version. There are scholars also who hold that an earlier form of The Taming of a Shrew must be postulated. Some have suggested a theory of a common source.

I

As early as 1889 Arthur H. Tolman declared, "If we suppose A Shrew to have been stolen from an early play of Shakespeare, and that this early play became, after revision, The Shrew,—we have, indeed, a bold hypothesis, but it is one which meets our difficulties in a remarkable manner."¹

In 1850 Samuel Hickson argued for what virtually amounted to a theory of a common source. "I think I can show grounds for the assertion that The Taming of the Shrew, by Shakespeare, is the original play, and that The Taming of a Shrew . . . is a later work, and an imitation."² Hickson, however, felt forced to qualify his thesis with the admission, "I think it extremely probable that we have it only in a revised form the play which Marlowe imitated might not necessarily have been that fund of life and humour that we find it now."³ Hickson has offered no further characterization or description of the earlier form of the play from which he suggests that both The Shrew and A Shrew derive, his evidences of imitation in A Shrew, however, constitute what many scholars have thought proof that A Shrew derives from The Shrew or from an earlier play similar in some respects to The Shrew.

Mr. Peter Alexander accepts Hickson's argument that A Shrew is an imitation, but, instead of adopting Hickson's suggestion that the author of A Shrew may have imitated an earlier form of The Shrew, he insists that A Shrew derives from the folio text and not from any earlier and unrevised version. "It has been suggested," writes Mr. Alexander, "that although A Shrew is a 'bad Quarto,' it derives from an unknown version (say, X) which was also the original of The Shrew."⁴ Rejecting this theory of a common source, whether suggested by Hickson, Tolman, or another, Mr. Alexander asserts positively: "That the Quarto writer had the Folio

¹ "Shakespeare's Part in the Taming of the Shrew," PMLA (1890), v, 201-278, see p. 228. Tolman credits the theory to Bernhard ten Brink (pp. 227-229), and recurs to the theory in The Views about Hamlet and Other Essays (Boston, 1904), p. 302.

² "The Taming of the Shrew," N&Q (March 30, 1850), i, 345.

³ Ibid., p. 347.

⁴ "The Taming of the Shrew," LTLS, Sept. 16, 1926, p. 614.

text in mind when making his compilation is placed beyond dispute." He sums up his thesis. "that the Quarto is derived from a comedy by Shakespeare and that this comedy is preserved for us in the Folio, although somewhat imperfectly, by Heminge and Condell"⁵ I have an uneasy feeling that the phrase, "although somewhat imperfectly," may be a joker, Mr Alexander's thesis, nevertheless, amounts to a denial of any revision in the folio version subsequent to the alleged derivation of A Shrew therefrom.⁶

The exact opposite to Mr Alexander's theory—the view that A Shrew was the source of The Shrew—has been so long and so widely held that it would seem superfluous to review the supporting arguments here. The theory has been endorsed by eminent scholars.

There are scholars, also, who have held a theory of an intermediate version of the play—a version intermediate between A Shrew and The Shrew. The successive stages in the making of the folio text, according to this school, may be outlined as: (1) an original play, (2) A Shrew, (3) an unrevised version of The Shrew, and (4) the folio text of The Shrew.⁷

The theory of a so-called unrevised or intermediate version of The Shrew would seem to have been derived, as is generally recognized, from R. G. White's thesis of 1857 that three hands are traceable in The Shrew.⁸ F. J. Furnivall, when reviewing F. G. Fleay's paper "On the Authorship of The Taming of the Shrew"⁹—a paper read (apparently in absentia) at a meeting of The New Shakspeare Society on April 24, 1874, quoted White: "In The Taming of the Shrew three hands at least are traceable, that of the author of the old play, that of Shakespeare himself, and that of a co-labourer."¹⁰ As Brinsley Nicholson phrased it while commenting on Fleay's paper, "we have the old play, then the recasting by a second author. . . . then the alterations by Shakspeare."¹¹ What had been but stated in general terms by White and the earlier J. P. Collier,¹² cited by Fleay, became in Fleay's paper an attempt to prove by methods thought to be scientific which lines of The Shrew were to be credited to Shakespeare and which to another.¹³ Of the five members of the society who discussed Fleay's paper, only two, Furnivall¹⁴ and "Dr. 'E. A.'"

⁵ Ibid., p. 614.

⁶ B. A. P. van Dam supports Alexander's theory, which would date The Shrew as of 1592, or earlier, in English Studies (Amsterdam), x (1928), 97-106. Van Dam suggests that actors, during a surreptitious and improvised performance of The Shrew in 1592, deliberately altered both the plot and the names of the characters (ibid., p. 106).

⁷ R. W. Bond, The Taming of the Shrew (London, 1904, 1929), pp. xxxi-xxxii, xliii.

⁸ The Works of William Shakespeare, ed. Richard Grant White (Boston, 1857), iv, 390.

⁹ New Shakspeare Society Transactions (London, 1874), pp. 85-101; discussion, pp. 102-125.

¹⁰ Ibid., p. 103.

¹¹ Ibid., p. 124.

¹² The History of English Dramatic Poetry to the Time of Shakespeare (London, 1831), iii, 78.

¹³ Trans. N. S. S., op. cit., pp. 100-101.

¹⁴ Ibid., pp. 102-114.

Abbott,¹⁵ thought his arguments valid; the other three, namely, Richard Simpson,¹⁶ Alexander J. Ellis,¹⁷ and Nicholson,¹⁸ were apparently unconvinced. Fleay, nevertheless, has had a considerable following—a following, however, which is steadily diminishing with the growing recognition of the elusiveness of his evidence¹⁹

Mr R. Warwick Bond has declared himself largely in accord with the critics who “question the necessity of postulating an intermediate play or ‘third hand,’ considering that the signs of Shakespeare’s handiwork are so numerous and evident throughout that we may as well assign him sole credit for the adaptation”²⁰

I dare say that Mr Bond and some other scholars would have rejected entirely “the hypothesis of intermediate work”²¹ had they not accepted without question an argument by P. A. Daniel to the effect that certain “speeches of Tranio” in The Shrew “should be in the mouth of Hortensio,”²² and concluded therefrom that Shakespeare was thereby convicted of carelessness or that there had been a revision of the play subsequently to its adaptation from A Shrew.²³

Daniel’s rock of stumbling seems to have been the lesson scenes, the employment of Hortensio wherein as “Licio” prevented him from continuing his public rivalry for the hand of Bianca. Daniel failed to perceive that Shakespeare had a double for Hortensio in Gremio, by whom the rivalry with Tranio (as Lucentio) is carried on while Hortensio (as “Licio”) is engaged in the more intriguing and amusing direct wooing of Bianca in actual competition with Lucentio similarly disguised as “Cambio.”²⁴ I quote further from Daniel’s statement:

The fact is, all these speeches of Tranio, of and to Petruchio, should be in the mouth of Hortensio, who is really Petruchio’s familiar, but this wonderful plot of his, of disguising himself as Licio,—when there was no need for it,—has not

¹⁵ Ibid, pp 119–123

¹⁶ Ibid, pp 114–115

¹⁷ Ibid, pp 116–119

¹⁸ Ibid, pp 123–125

¹⁹ See Ernest P. Kuhl, “The Authorship of The Taming of the Shrew,” PMLA, xL (Sept., 1925), 551–618, Bond, The Shrew, op cit, p xxxii and note, George Lyman Kittredge, The Complete Works of Shakespeare (Boston, 1936), p 325. Florence H. Ashton, in “The Revision of the Folio Text of The Taming of the Shrew,” PQ, vi (April, 1927), 151–160, presents certain bibliographical evidence for a revision of the subplot of The Shrew which I evaluate in “Strata in The Taming of the Shrew,” SP, xxxix (1942), 291–302.

²⁰ Bond, The Shrew, op. cit, p xxxii.

²¹ Ibid, pp xxxiii, xxxvii

²² “Time-Analysis of The Taming of the Shrew,” New Shakspeare Society Transactions (1877–1879), pp. 164–165

²³ Bond, The Shrew, op cit, p xxxv and p 77, note on TS III ii 24, 25 See also C. H. Herford, Works of Shakespeare (London, 1899, 1901), II, 7–8.

²⁴ See “The Integrity of Shakespeare’s The Taming of the Shrew,” JEGP, xxxix (April, 1940), 222–229, wherein, in opposition to Daniel, I point out Shakespeare’s provision for such a doubling.

only silenced him as an open competitor for the hand of Bianca, but also as the friend of Petruchio

Note that in the old play Polidor [= Hortensio] does not disguise himself as the musician, and it is in his mouth that the speeches which are the equivalent of Tranio's in this scene are placed ²⁵

What, moreover, had thus been stated by Daniel as a logical inconsistency or a mere dramatic inexpediency in The Shrew became, in the hands of his disciples, a mark of a revision and grounds for postulating an intermediate version between A Shrew and The Shrew

Daniel seems to have argued that the rôle of Hortensio was bungled when A Shrew was rewritten as The Shrew ²⁶ Mr John Dover Wilson, misled by Daniel, but not believing with Daniel that The Shrew derives from A Shrew, would seem to argue that Shakespeare bungled while rewriting "a pre-Shakespearian form of the play" ²⁷ Shakespeare's version—according to Mr. Wilson ²⁸—existed in two copies in 1592 the one, the halograph, becoming the original of A Shrew, the other, a transcript, becoming the original of the folio text of The Shrew ²⁹

The fatal defect in Mr. Wilson's "bad Quarto" origin for A Shrew—a theory taken over from Mr Alexander ³⁰—consists in the lack of any certain knowledge of the nature of its alleged source, whereas Mr Alexander has specifically argued that this source was the folio version of The Shrew, Mr. Wilson thinks it to have been something else ³¹ Mr Wilson suggests, but fails to prove, three stages both in the development of The Shrew and of A Shrew (1) "a pre-Shakespearian form of the play," in which the interludes were present and in which Hortensio appeared in his rôle of a rival for the hand of Bianca, (2) a Shakespearean version of the play in which Hortensio, by the assumption of the disguise of "Licio," eliminated himself from the public competition for Bianca, and (3a) the quarto of 1594, which lost the element of rivalry, and (3b) the folio version, which lost the interludes.

In accordance with my theory that A Shrew and The Shrew derive from a common source—though not such a common source as Mr. Wilson imagines—I have drawn up a chart in which I have placed in parallel ²⁵ "Time-Analysis," op cit, p. 165 It may be worth noting that some scholars have similarly objected to the employment of Valeria as the lute teacher in A Shrew.

²⁶ Ibid, p. 162.

²⁷ The Taming of the Shrew (Cambridge, 1928), edited by Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch and John Dover Wilson, pp. 124-125.

²⁸ Wilson, The Shrew, op cit, pp. 122-126. Cf Bond's suggestion of an "intermediate play," which was "already perhaps a year or more old" in 1594 (Bond, The Shrew, op. cit., p. xxxvii).

²⁹ Ibid, p. 120.

³⁰ Ibid, pp. 109-110, 120-124. See above and note 4.

³¹ Ibid., pp. 122, 124.

columns the corresponding texts of *A Shrew*³² and The Shrew,³³ together with a suggested reconstruction of the original form of the play,³⁴ with indications of order, chronology, and subject-matter.³⁵ For this hypothetical earlier form of the play I have used the line numbers of A Shrew.

A COMPARATIVE CHART

The Shrew			A Shrew			No	Original Form			Subject Matter
Folio Page	Globe Divisions	Day	Day	Boas' Divisions	Furn Scene		Quarto Sign	Boas' Divisions	Day
208a	Ind i 1-138	Th	Sat	Ind i 1-89	i	1	A2r	Ind i 1-89	Th	Induction
209a	ii 1-147			ii 1-60	ii	2	A3v	ii 1-60		Elevation
210b	ii 1-105			iii 1-29	iii	3	A4v	iii 1-29		Sisters
211a	106-253			30-99	iv	4	B1r	30-99		Disguises
212b	254-259					(5)				Interlude
212b	ii 1-282	Fri	Fri	100-129		6	B2r	100-129	Fri	Tamer
214b	ii 1-114					(7)	C1r	276-323		Teachers
215b	115-142			130-141	v	8	B2v	130-141		Dowry
215b	143-166					(9)	C1v	ii 1-55		Lute
216a	167-333			142-275		10	B3r	ii 142-275		Betrothal
217b	334-413					11				Bidding
				276-323		(7)
				324-331		(5)	C1v	324-331		Interlude
				ii 1-55	vi	(9)
218a	iii 1-81	Sat	Sun	56-85		12	C2v	ii 156-85	Sat	Wooring
218b	82-92	Sun	Sun	86-94	vii	13	C3r	86-94	Sun	Dressing
218b	ii 1-129			95-164		14	C3r	95-164		Groom
				ii 1-53	viii	15	C4v	ii 1-53		Servants
219b	130-150					16				Father
220a	151-185					17				Wedding
220a	186-254			54-108		18	D1v	54-108		Departure
				109-128		19	D2r	109-128		Father
						(20)	E4r	iv 1-1		Interlude
220b	iv 1-181	Tu	Tu	iii 1-36	ix	21	D2v	iii 1-36	Tu	Supper
221a	182-214			37-53		22	D3r	37-53		Method
221a	ii 1-58			ii 1-30	x	23	D3v	ii 1-30		Suitors
221b	59-120			30-34		24	D4r	30-34		Father
223a	iii 1-52			iii 1-46	xi	25	D4r	iii 1-46		Meat
223b	52-58	Th	Th	47-54		26	D4v	47-54	Th	Visit
			Sat	iv 1-65	xii	(29)
223b	59-170			v 1-55	xiii	27	E2r	v 1-55	Sat	Apparel
224b	171-198			56-72		28	E2v	56-72		Visit
225a	iv 1-72					(29)	E1r	iv 1-65		Forgery
225b	73-110					30				Elopement
225b	v 1-25					(31)	E4r	iv 1-2-18	Sun	Moon
226a	26-79					(32)	E4v	19-55		Maid
227b	v 1-7		Sun	vi 1-77	xiv	33	E3r	iii vi 1-77		Brides
				78-79		34	E4r	78-79		Interlude
				iv 1-1	xv	(20)
				2-18		(31)
				19-55		(32)
226b	8-62			ii 1-44	xvi	35	F1r	iv ii 1-44		Discovery
227a	63-64			45-53		36	F2r	45-53		Interlude
227a	65-146			54-125		37	F2r	54-125		Pardon
227b	147-155			126-132		(38)				Reduction
227b	ii 1-48					39				Supper
228a	49-189			v 1-161	xvii	40	F3v	v 1-161		Wager
						(32)	F3r	iv ii 126-32
				Epi 1-24	xviii	41	G2r	Epi 1-24		Epilogue

³² I cite A Shrew in The Shakespeare Classics, edited by F S Boas (London, 1908)

³³ I cite The Shrew in the spelling and punctuation of the folio of 1623, but in the Globe divisions of the text as reproduced in Kittredge, Works of Shakespeare, op cit, pp 327-359

³⁴ See W G Boswell-Stone's suggestive comparison of the plots and his list of corresponding characters in The Old Spelling Shakespeare The Taming of the Shrew (London, 1907), pp. xv-xxv, 1.

³⁵ I give also the scene divisions adopted by Furnivall in The Taming of a Shrew The First Quarto, 1594 (London, 1886), together with the signatures of the quarto and the pages numbers of the folio, with the columns of the latter indicated by the letters a and b.

II

There are, I hold, evidences of order and of chronology within the first part of A Shrew which throw light upon the nature of the earlier form of the play lying behind A Shrew.

1 The deranged order of certain scenes in A Shrew suggests that A Shrew is a corruption of an earlier form of the play in which the order of the scenes corresponded to that of The Shrew.

(1) The derangements in order which I trace in A Shrew involve, among other scenes, the lute lesson (AS II. i. 1-55) and the interlude of AS I. i. 324-331. Although students of the play have noticed that the lute lesson does not occur in the same order of scenes in the quarto and the folio, and although they have adjudged the order of The Shrew to be the better, their comparative studies of the two versions have apparently hitherto failed to demonstrate which of the two orders is the more original. I call attention to evidence in the text of A Shrew itself which may solve the problem.

The lute lesson (II. i. 1-55) would seem to be improperly placed after the first interlude (I. i. 324-331) in A Shrew. The concluding lines of the interlude refer to the imminent entrance of two fine gentlewomen, presumably Emelia and Philema:

Lord My Lord heere comes the plaiers againe
 Slie O brave, heers two fine gentlewomen (I. i. 330-331)

The entrance, immediately following, of Valeria and Kate at II. i. 1 does not answer to Sly's announcement, and indicates, accordingly, that there is a disturbance of some kind in the text of A Shrew.

My suggestion that this disturbance is a derangement in the order of the scenes in A Shrew is made plausible by the fact that, if the lute episode (II. i. 1-55) be removed from its present context, the lines 330-331 of the first interlude will precede II. i. 56-94—the latter a scene in which Emelia and Philema appear with Aurelius and Polidor. I conclude, therefore, that Sly's words of I. i. 331 had been originally intended to introduce this scene.

As a reconstruction of the order of the earlier form of A Shrew, I suggest that the place originally designed for the lute episode was between I. i. 141 and 142 in A Shrew, that is, after the dowry scene (I. i. 130-141) and before the betrothal scene (I. i. 142-275). In harmony with such a relocation of the lute episode, the antecedent scene in which Valeria is sent to teach Kate (I. i. 276-323) must also be relocated; its original place may well have been between I. i. 129 and 130, immediately preceding the dowry scene.

The relocation of the two lesson scenes throws the first interlude after the betrothal, the report whereof (i. i. 142-275) closes with the departure of Sander, the fool of the play. Sly is obviously referring to Sander in the first line of the interlude (i i 324), "Sim, when will the foole come againe?" This restoration of the order of A Shrew places the interlude as a transition device in a fitting context

The derangement of scenes in A Shrew was, however, not a merely mechanical dislocation, an editorial hand apparently was involved. This editorial hand seems to have been responsible, not only for the deranged order of scenes, but also for certain revisions of stage directions, transitional lines, and even of the text itself—revisions probably made in order to give a measure of consistency to the deranged order of A Shrew. The reconstruction which I have made of the order of scenes in A Shrew does, therefore, run counter to certain stage directions and lines in the play—seeming contradictions which will be explained as they arise.

I give a brief analysis of each of the scenes of A Shrew according to the reconstructed order which I have outlined in the above chart.

The Tamer—AS 11 100-129 Ferando's declaration that he is going to woo Kate furthers the plan of Aurelius and Polidor to court the younger sisters. Ferando proceeds to seek Alfonso.

Introduction of Teacher—AS 11 276-323. This scene begins with Aurelius and Polidor sending Valeria to Kate, "as erste we did devise" (line 276)—a phrase suggesting a previous discussion which has not been preserved in A Shrew. Alfonso soon enters and informs Polidor and Aurelius that he has set Kate and Valeria together (lines 296-299). The statement of Alfonso that Kate is to marry Ferando (lines 311-320) is an anachronism in my reconstructed order of the play, I suggest, therefore, that lines which originally referred to Ferando's known candidacy for Kate's hand (cf 11 117-118) may have been altered by the author of A Shrew so as to make the betrothal an already-accomplished fact. The scene ends with the departure of Polidor and Aurelius in search of the sisters, Emilia and Philema. The stage is left empty.

Dowry Arranged—AS 11 130-141 Alfonso welcomes Ferando and confirms his earlier offer as to Kate's dowry. The scene closes with the plan to summon Kate from the house so that Ferando "may speake with hir" (line 141).

Lute Episode—AS 11 i.1-55 Before, however, the anticipated interview of Ferando with Kate may take place, a scene is staged in which Kate enters with Valeria, and a lesson begun earlier (see line 8) is resumed. Valeria suffers Kate's wrath (lines 1-36). Upon Kate's departure, Valeria reports to the audience (lines 37-46) and to Aurelius and Polidor (lines 47-55), he is thereupon sent to entertain the visitor from Sestos.

Betrothal Effected—AS 11 142-275. Kate enters to Alfonso and Ferando and is asked by her father to use Ferando in a friendly manner. The betrothal follows, in a scene (lines 144-184) wherein the violence of Kate's emotion may well be accounted for as having been aroused by the lute episode. After much intervening matter, including the clowning of Sander and the departure of Ferando to prepare for the wedding, Sander leaves.

The First Interlude—AS I 1 324-331. Sly's question, "Sim, when will the foole come againe?" would seem to refer to Sander, who has left the stage at line 275. Sly's remark, upon the return of "the plaiers" (line 330), "O brave, heers two fine gentlewomen" (line 331), would seem properly to refer to an entrance of Emelia and Philema.

The Wooing—AS II 1 56-85. The words of Polidor, "Come faire Emelia" (line 56), may well have served originally to mark the beginning of a new scene and the entrance of Emelia and Philema with Aurelius and Polidor.

According to this reconstructed order, an order which A Shrew reverses, the lute episode precedes the betrothal scene. The scurrilous way in which Valeria addresses Kate suggests that the lute scene, as originally conceived and as substantially preserved in A Shrew, was meant to antedate the betrothal scene. Surely a betrothed maiden was entitled to the honorable protection of her fiancé, and could expect courteous treatment from his friends and their servants. Valeria would hardly have dared to insult the fiancée of Ferando as he insults Kate. I conclude, again, that the lute episode properly precedes the betrothal scene.

The earlier form of the play, thus reconstructed, contained the first interlude, written for a specific context and linking two portions of the play (namely, I 1 1-275 and II 1 56-III 1 53), which had been separated by an interval possibly of a night or more. The phrasing of the first interlude must be credited, accordingly, to the original author rather than to the author of A Shrew, for the order of scenes which the latter follows could not have suggested the words of the interlude.

The hypothetical earlier form of the play contained also the two lesson scenes of AS I. i. 276-323 and AS II 1 1-55, although in more appropriate contexts than they have in A Shrew.

The conclusions arrived at above as to the order of scenes in an earlier form of the play are confirmed by the order of the scenes in the corresponding part of The Shrew. Brief summaries of the relevant scenes in the folio version, which may be compared with the summaries given above of the corresponding scenes of A Shrew, will serve to illustrate this original order of the play.

The Tamer—TS I.ii 1-282. The scene in The Shrew, in which Petruchio consents to woo Katherine, ends with Hortensio, who has planned to pose as Petruchio's "man" "Licio" (II 117-140; cf. II.i.55), joining the other suitors in an afternoon of drinking.

Introduction of Teachers—TS II.i.38-114. After an encounter of Bianca with

Katherine (lines 1-37), a scene follows wherein Petruchio announces himself as a suitor to Katherine (lines 42-54) and presents "Licio" to Baptista (line 55) Baptista sends "Licio" along with "Cambio" (Lucentio, presented by Gremio) to teach the sisters, Katherine and Bianca (line 111), Gremio and Tranio (as Lucentio) presumably continue with Baptista and Petruchio (line 114)

Dowry Arranged—TS II i 115-142 The scene begins with the discussion by Petruchio and Baptista of Katherine's dowry, the terms of which are soon agreed upon—an arrangement, however, which is made to hinge upon Katherine's consent (lines 129-130). Baptista seeks to prepare Petruchio for "some unhappy words," but before Petruchio is able to proceed "to the proove" of his boast that he will easily obtain Katherine's love, Hortensio enters "with his head broke" (142/3)

Lute Episode—TS II i 143-166 The anticipated interview between Katherine and Petruchio is delayed somewhat by this scene in which Hortensio reports the issue of the lute lesson to Baptista and the others, including Petruchio The luckless Hortensio is then sent by Baptista to teach Bianca, who is supposed to be more "apt to learne" (line 166)

Betrothal Effected—TS II i 167-333 Baptista sends Katherine to Petruchio, who thereupon makes good his boast After the betrothal is effected, Petruchio leaves in order to prepare for the wedding

There is no interlude in The Shrew at this point The ending of the foregoing scene of the betrothal, the insertion of the rivalry of Bianca's suitors (lines 334-413, which have no parallel in the text of A Shrew), and the changed personnel of the following scene, would make the interlude of A Shrew II i 324-331 inappropriate to the text of The Shrew here.

The Wooing—TS III i 1-81. Bianca enters, followed by her suitors, Lucentio and Hortensio, disguised respectively as "Cambio" and "Licio" Instead of the two pairs of lovers in the corresponding scene of A Shrew, there is but one gentleman in The Shrew, namely, Bianca, who is courted by both gentlemen

The lute lesson, included in the foregoing summaries of The Shrew (II i. 143-166), forms an illustration of the topic Baptista and Petruchio have been discussing, and fits the context perfectly. It is an integral part of the scene, and serves as an example of what Petruchio may expect from Katherine When the latter strikes Hortensio, who is known to her as Petruchio's servant "Licio," she may be regarded as striking at Petruchio himself. In A Shrew, on the other hand, Kate, as well as Alfonso, probably associates the lute teacher with Polidor (see I. i. 278, 296-297); the deranged order of A Shrew, moreover, with the lute lesson placed between the interlude of I. i. 324-331 and the wooing scene of II i 56-85, leaves the absent Ferando in ignorance of Kate's outburst of violence

That this obvious superiority in the order of The Shrew was not effected during its formerly supposed adaptation from A Shrew becomes apparent from the evidences within A Shrew, discussed above, that A Shrew itself is a corruption of an earlier form of the play in which the order was identical, for this part of the play, with that of The Shrew

(2) Another derangement in the order of A Shrew involves the interlude of iv i 1, and the adjacent identity scene (iv. i 2-55). I quote the interlude, together with the accompanying stage direction and the preceding interlude of iii vi. 78-79:

She. Sim must they be married now?

Lord. I my Lord.

(iii vi 78-79)

Enter Ferando and Kate and Sander.

She. Looke Sim the foole is come againe now.

(iv i 1)

There are two considerations which suggest that something is wrong with this interlude and its context in A Shrew. First, although attention is called by Sly to the entrance of the fool, that is, Sander, the rôle of Sander in the following scene (iv. i 2-55) as a mere lackey, leaving the stage entirely at line 4, is insignificant and in no way answers to Sly's expectations. Second, the occurrence of two interludes in succession, separated only by a stage direction referring to the main text, would seem to indicate that the author of A Shrew united two originally distinct interludes.

As a restoration of the order herein of the earlier form of the play, I suggest that the interlude of iv. i. 1 (and the stage direction which precedes it, deleted of the names of Ferando and Kate) be placed between AS ii. ii. 128 and AS iii. i. 1—a context which the interlude would fit perfectly. Ferando and Kate depart at ii. ii. 91, and the others leave the stage at line 128; attention is then directed to Sly, who remarks to the Lord, "Looke Sim the foole is come againe now" (iv i 1). After the stage direction, "Enter Sanders with two or three serving men," Sander enters at iii i. 1 to play the fool. At line 20/1 occurs a second stage direction, "Enter Ferando and Kate." I attribute the dislocation of iv i. 1 to the author of A Shrew, who seems to have sought thereby to round out the interlude of iii vi. 78-79 after the pattern of the interlude of i. i. 324-331. Then, in order to provide a proper context for his composite interlude of iii vi. 78-iv. i. 1, he placed after it the identity scene of iv i 2-55, which he removed from the position it occupied in the earlier form of the play—a position such as that of the identity scene of The Shrew (iv. v. 1-77). According to this theory of the dislocation of iv. i. 1 in A Shrew, the author of A Shrew not only failed to place the interlude in the context for which it had been designed, but he built up an entirely different context for it by altering the position of the identity scene of iv. i 2-55.

(3) Another probable derangement in the order of A Shrew involves the interlude of iv. ii. 126-132. The carrying out of the sleeping Sly before the completion of the play within the play prevents Sly from witnessing the scene of v. i. 1-161, in which full proof of the taming of the Shrew is presented. Such a logical consideration would suggest that the original place designed for the reduction scene of iv. ii. 126-132 may have been immediately before the so-called Epilogue of A Shrew.

On the evidence of the deranged order in which the lesson scenes and the interludes of AS I i. 324-331, of AS IV i. 1, and of AS IV ii. 126-132 are involved, I conclude that A Shrew is a corruption of an earlier form of the play in which the order of scenes corresponded to that of The Shrew.

2. The obscured chronology of the first part of A Shrew points to an earlier form of the play in which the chronology may have been more clearly indicated—as it is in The Shrew.

(1) The linking process (the method which Latin comedy used to secure a semblance of unity of time and place) employed in A Shrew obscures the intervals of time both demanded logically for the consummation of events and also indicated by textual evidence.

The original plotter of the play could hardly have intended to observe the unities, for more than a week is required for the action of the play, and frequent changes of scene are involved. As long as the scenes of A Shrew remain in Athens (I i. 1-II ii. 128) they are so linked together as to make continuous what had certainly covered two, and probably five days in an earlier form of the play. Certain stage directions and transitional lines, which I attribute to the author of A Shrew, however, allow no interval whatever. Of the chronology of the play Daniel has incorrectly, but suggestively, said:

In the old Play of the Taming of a Shrew the whole story is knit up in the course of two days. In the first, Ferando-Petruchio woos Kate and fixes his marriage for next Sunday, "next Sunday" then becomes to-morrow, to-morrow becomes to-day, and to-day ends with the wedding night in Ferando's country house. All the rest of the Play is included in the second day.³⁶

For his "first" day, Daniel apparently took account principally of the stage directions and the transitional lines, and followed the author of A Shrew in ignoring the internal evidence for the necessity of a longer space of time.

The references to time upon which Daniel bases his time-analysis of A Shrew, with the exception of one instance (I i. 315) which I have credited above to editorial revision, all occur in the betrothal scene and the report thereof (I i. 142-275)—a scene which, according to my reconstruction of the original order of the play, immediately precedes the interval marked by the interlude of I i 324-331. The absence of such indications of time in the earlier scenes—namely, I i. 1-99, 100-129, 276-323, 130-141, and II i 1-55—would seem to permit the dating of some of these scenes earlier in the week, if such earlier dating should be required by other considerations. Two days at least must be postulated for the first part of A Shrew,³⁷ namely, the day of the betrothal and the day of the wedding. The latter is referred to as "sunday next" (I i 175, 205), "upon sundaie" (line 208), and "to morrow" (lines 165, 264, 271, compare 178, 183).³⁸

³⁶ Daniel, Trans. N. S. S., op. cit., p. 169.

The absence of stage directions at certain places in A Shrew, together with its deranged order, makes it difficult to determine at just what point in the text the day of Kate's wedding to Ferando properly begins. I refer the reader to the chart and the analytical paragraphs given above. In accordance with this reconstructed order, I would suggest that the events of Saturday in A Shrew actually close with Sander's report to Polidor of Ferando's betrothal to Kate (I i 262-275). The interlude (I i. 324-331), which follows, marks an interval of a night. This interlude-interval is followed, in my reconstruction of the original order of the play, by II. i. 56. As the text of A Shrew stands, there is no indication of any change of scene, of characters, or of time between lines 55 and 56. I suggest that the author of A Shrew may have removed a stage direction which stood, in an earlier form of the play, before the scene of II i 56-94. The words, "Come faire Emelia," of line 56, as indicated above, may suggest that they were intended to inaugurate a new scene. That an interval really occurred is proved by the fact that Philema possesses information at II i 88-89 concerning the whereabouts of Kate which she did not presumably possess at II i 47. Kate had left the stage at line 36, and had not been observed by Aurelius and Polidor, who entered to Valeria at line 46 and asked him, "whears your mistresse?" (II. i 47). If Philema and Emelia were present in this scene, according to the stage direction at 46/7, "Enter Aurelius, Polidor, Emelia, and Philema," they were equally in ignorance of the whereabouts of Kate. But at II. i 89 Philema replies to Alfonso, who enters at 85/6, "She is making of hir readie." If this be a continuous scene, one may well ask how Philema learned that the Kate who had gone in anger from the scene of the lute lesson is now making herself ready for the wedding. I would suggest that a stage direction stood originally before line 56, a point which properly marks a new act and another day.

³⁷ Furnivall suggests that Sunday properly begins in A Shrew at II i 85. He allows four days for the entire play: Saturday, Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, beginning at scenes III, VII, XII, and XIV, respectively. Daniel later concedes that Sunday may have begun at II i 1 (Furnivall, A Shrew, op cit, p. XII).

³⁸ The "to morrow" of A Shrew would leave Ferando but little time in which to hie him to his "countrie house" (line 179) in order to make provision to entertain his "Kate when she dooth come" (lines 180-181, cf. lines 206-208, 268-271).

(2) Although the foregoing considerations with reference to the obscured chronology of A Shrew, and to the hypothetical earlier form of the play, are not dependent for their validity upon the chronology of the corresponding text of The Shrew (I 1. 1–IV. i 214), a comparison of the two versions does reinforce the conclusion that A Shrew obscures a chronology which had been logically worked out in an earlier form of the play. It may be worth while, therefore, to outline the entire chronological system of this part of The Shrew.

As indicated in the above chart, Day 1 in The Shrew would seem to comprise I 1. 1–I 11. 282, and may be placed on Thursday. Although the thesis of this section in no way depends upon it, textual evidence compels me to follow Daniel, rather than other Shakespeare scholars, in placing an interval of a night after I 11. 282.³⁹ All that could be, or has been, alleged against such an interval are the words of Petruchio, "I wil not sleepe Hortensio til I see her" (I 11. 103), and the entrance at I 11. 141/2 of "Gremio, and Lucentio disguised," as if going to Baptista's house. But Petruchio is successively delayed by Hortensio (line 117), by this entrance of Gremio and Lucentio (141/2), by the entrance of Tranio and Biondello (218/9), and, finally, by the plan (I 11. 276–282) to spend the afternoon in convivial drinking. Furthermore, Gremio's promise to have Lucentio's books of love "verie fairely bound" (I 11. 146) may indicate that he and Lucentio were not planning to go to Baptista's house immediately.

Day 2 in The Shrew, consequently, comprises II i. 1–413, and is to be placed on the following day, Friday (the corresponding scenes in A Shrew, I 1. 1–II. i 55, fall on Day 1 or Saturday). The stage had been left empty at the end of the first act, the second act begins with a change of characters and of location. Further evidence in support of this chronological scheme is the indication that the second act begins on the morning of another day, for Gremio says "Good morrow" to Baptista (II i. 40), with whom he had already conversed in the first scene of the previous act. Baptista's invitation "then to dinner" (II i. 113) also indicates a morning hour.

Day 3 in The Shrew falls on Saturday, and comprises III 1. 1–92—a text which corresponds roughly with the scene of A Shrew II i. 56–94, which falls on Sunday morning.

I place the first three days of The Shrew on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, respectively, for I deem an interval of one night between II. i. 413 and III. i. 1 as entirely sufficient. The placing of the betrothal on Friday in The Shrew (II i. 167–333) would have given Petruchio ample time in which to go to Venice to buy apparel, but hardly enough time after his return for his tailor to fashion new garments from the materials he may have purchased there. Petruchio would have part of Friday, all of Saturday, and part of Sunday for his journey (II i 316-317, 324), for he does not appear in the scene (III i 1-92) which takes place on Saturday.

³⁹ Daniel, Trans. N. S. S., op. cit., p. 163. F. A. Marshall, however, follows Daniel in making the time of action six days, see The Henry Irving Shakespeare (New York, 1888), II, 248.

The lesson of III i 1-56 is not the first that Lucentio gives to Bianca, for he was probably teaching her on the previous day, Friday (see his remark to Bianca at III i 31, "as I told you before"), while Hortensio was having his troubles with Katherine (II i 143-166). Hortensio, however, seems to be giving his first lesson to Bianca in III i 56-81—the time of which is definitely to be named as Saturday, for the Sunday of the wedding is "to morrow" (III i 84).

Day 4 in The Shrew comprises III ii 1-IV i 214, it is called "the pointed day" (III ii 1), the Sunday of Katherine's wedding. It is the "to morrow" of III i 84. The corresponding text in A Shrew (II i 56-III i 53) also falls on Sunday. The dressing up of the bridal chamber (TS III i 83), which properly enough falls on Saturday in The Shrew, seems partially paralleled in the dressing for the wedding (AS II i 89-94), which precedes the ceremony on Sunday morning in A Shrew.

For these four days of The Shrew (three, according to some commentators), A Shrew has but two days. There may also have been a fifth day for this part of the play. Daniel hardly knows what to make of Petruchio's statement with reference to Katherine, "Last night she slept not" (IV i 201), and queries, "How did he know that she didn't sleep last night?"⁴⁰ I would suggest that the conversations of IV i 182-214 should be placed on a new day, Monday, in The Shrew. What Ferando in A Shrew III i 43-53 announces that he will do, is related as, in part, done by Petruchio in The Shrew (IV i 191-214). Petruchio's words imply an interval of time after IV i 181, which should properly be marked by a change of scene, even though no change of characters or of location is involved. Petruchio tells Katherine:

And for this night we'll fast for companie.

Come I wil bring thee to thy Bridall chamber (IV i 180-181)

After these words there follows an "Exeunt" in the folio, which leaves the stage empty and permits a lapse of time. This theory is confirmed by a second direction, "Enter Servants severally." After two lines in which Nathaniel, Peter, and Grumio gossip over Petruchio's treatment of Katherine (IV i 182-183), there occurs another direction, "Enter Curtis a Servant." Curtis gives out information which he could not possibly have gained unless there had been a considerable lapse of time between lines 181 and 184; he states that Petruchio is ⁴⁰ Daniel, Trans. N. S. S., op cit, pp 165-166.

In her chamber, making a sermon of continencie to her, and railles, and sweares, and rates, that shee (poore soule) knowes not which way to stand, to looke, to speake, and sits as one new risen from a dreame (lines 185-189)

Commentators have seen fit to interpret Petruchio's later words, "Shee eate no meate to day, nor none shall eate" (line 200), as referring to the day of the wedding, although the words would suit the following day, Monday, just as well, and have interpreted Petruchio's further words, "Last night she slept not, nor to night she shall not" (line 201), as referring to Saturday and Sunday nights, respectively. Katherine may or may not have been so excited or disturbed by the prospect of her marriage as to be unable to sleep the night before.⁴¹ The events which are reported by the servants and by Petruchio himself would, however, seem to require for their consummation a longer interval of time than that which has been allowed by the editors who have not seen fit to place iv 1 182-214 on a later day

These five days in The Shrew, with the possible exception of the fifth, are clearly indicated, whereas in A Shrew there is much obscurity, and no more than two days are certainly involved. That there may have been five days outlined in an earlier form of A Shrew, as well as in The Shrew, may reasonably be concluded from the way in which the author of A Shrew has merged Saturday and Sunday in A Shrew and from the further consideration that, as is indicated above in the comparative chart, A Shrew has material corresponding to the material grouped under each of the five days of The Shrew.

I conclude, accordingly, that the evidences of order and of chronology within the first part of A Shrew suggest its derivation from an earlier form of the play which was similar, for the corresponding part of the play, to the order and chronology of The Shrew.

The conclusions of this section would seem to be in harmony with the theory of Hickson, Alexander, and Wilson that A Shrew is a corruption of The Shrew, revised or unrevised.

III

There are, on the other hand, phenomena largely within the latter part of The Shrew which suggest that The Shrew is a revision of an earlier form of the play which was similar, in some respects, to A Shrew.

Such a conclusion is in harmony with the theory that The Shrew represents a rewriting of an earlier form of the play—a rewriting in which fuller use was made of Ariosto's I Suppositi and in which considerable changes were made in both plot and characters. Mr. Bond, for example, says that "A Shrew is clearly the model on which our play is ultimately fashioned, with changes introduced partly independently, partly from Gascoigne's Supposes."⁴² Mr. Bond adds, "Shakespeare's play varies the uniformity by representing a rivalry for the hand of Baptista's second and only other daughter between Lucentio (Aurelius), Hortensio (Poli-dor), and a new character 'Gremio a Pantelowne' suggested by the Supposes, by introducing for Hortensio's consolation an independent Widow in the last Act," etc.⁴³ I suggest that Mr. Bond's account of the making of The Shrew would explain equally well, or better, the derivation of The Shrew from an earlier form of the play similar, in the respects he cites, to A Shrew.

⁴¹ Charlotte Porter, The Taming of the Shrew (New York, 1903), p. 125.

1. The element of rivalry in The Shrew, culminating in an elopement, involves a shortening of the chronology of the latter part of the play—a shortening which seems to have been the result of a revision which introduced the element of rivalry into an earlier form of the play

(1) I shall attempt, first, to demonstrate the fact that the elopement in The Shrew brings with it a shortening of the play.

The time-analysis of Daniel, as well as those of other scholars, for the latter part of The Shrew leaves something to be desired, Daniel tentatively names the last day of the play as Sunday—a day which he makes to include everything from TS IV. III 1 to the end.⁴⁴ I hold that this day may properly be dated as early as the previous Thursday

The wedding of Bianca to Tranio (as Lucentio) had been planned by Baptista, conditional upon confirmation by Vincentio of the dowry promises, to take place on the Sunday following the marriage of Katherine.

Now on the sonday following, shall Bianca
Be Bride to you, if you make this assurance.

If not, to Signior Gremio. (II i 397-399)

But the elopement of Lucentio with Bianca while the false assurances of dowry are being given nullifies Baptista's plans and shortens the play by one or more days.

For the sake of clarity of exposition, I have, as is shown in the comparative chart above, used Baptista's mention of a second Sunday (II i 397) as a fixed point in the chronology, even though that mention occurs in a passage for which A Shrew, which leaves the day of the wedding of the younger sisters unnamed, has no corresponding text.

In accordance with the theory that the latter part of The Shrew is a revision of an earlier form of the play in which the chronology was similar to that of the corresponding part of A Shrew, I shall set forth the latter.

Daniel's time-analysis of A Shrew, given in the preceding section, is not to be trusted. Although his inclusion of AS i. i. 1–iii. i. 53 with Day 1 may, from a certain point of view, be defensible, his assigning all the rest of the play to Day 2 is without any justification, for the linking of scenes in A Shrew which prevails throughout i. i. 1–ii. ii. 128 is subsequently abandoned with the alternation of scenes between Ferando's country-house and Athens. After the wedding of Kate and Ferando and upon the removal to Ferando's country-house (iii. i. 1) even the author of A Shrew could no longer maintain the pretense of unity of time. There is, I hold, nothing in the stage directions or in the transitional lines between the scenes to prevent the allowance of any intervals between scenes which may be required, for instance, for the hunger cure to take effect (iii. i. 43–iii. 54), for the making of Kate's cap and gown (iii. v. 1–55), for the visit of Polidor to Ferando's country-house and return to Athens (ii. ii. 107, iii. ii. 1–54), and for the asserted fetching of Aurelius' father (ii. ii. 109–111, 125, iii. iv. 15–19).

⁴² Bond, The Shrew, op cit, p xv, cf pp xxxi-xxxii.

⁴³ Ibid, p xix.

⁴⁴ Daniel, Trans. N S S, op cit, pp. 166-169

I have, accordingly, subdivided Daniel's Day 2 of A Shrew into four days, which I have named, in accordance with the system which I have adopted in the above chart, as Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday, and Sunday. The logic of events and internal evidence provide the justification for such an arrangement.

Tuesday in A Shrew—AS iii. ii. 1–34. This scene in A Shrew develops the deception plot by the plan to have Aurelius meet Phylotus, the man whom Valeria has induced to impersonate the father of Aurelius, not, however, as the Duke of Sestos, but as a mere merchant (line 34). There is also in this scene a brief reference to the affairs of Ferando and Kate Polidor, who had said on the Sunday of Ferando's marriage,

Within this two daies I will ride to him,
And see how lovingly they do agree. (ii. ii. 107–108) has already gone to visit Ferando and Kate, Aurelius says of Polidor, "he's gon unto the taming schoole" (iii. ii. 25). All this implies some lapse of time. As early as iii. ii. 25, the report has already reached Aurelius in Athens that Ferando is the master of devices calculated to tame a shrew (lines 27–29).⁴⁵

Tuesday in The Shrew—TS iv. ii. 1–120. This scene, corresponding to that of AS III. ii 1-34, gives glimpses of the courting of Bianca by the disguised Lucentio and of the departure of Hortensio in disgust (lines 1-43), and the subsequent statement by Tranio that Hortensio has gone to the taming school (lines 44-58), together with a later interview of Tranio (as Lucentio) with the Pedant (lines 72-120). The scene develops the deception plot in The Shrew by Tranio's plan to clothe the Pedant so that the latter may impersonate Vincentio, the father of Lucentio. The assigning of this scene to Tuesday tallies closely enough with Hortensio's declaration that he will be married to a wealthy widow "Ere thirce dayes passe" (line 38). The wedding of Hortensio to his widow, not specifically mentioned elsewhere, occurs either before his visit to Petruchio or after his return to Padua Thursday evening with Petruchio, Katherine, and Vincentio.

⁴⁵ At first sight it may seem that Valeria's question, "is Ferando married then?" (line 21), would place AS iii. ii. 1–34 earlier than the conjectured date of Tuesday, but such earlier dating does not necessarily follow. Valeria's state of ignorance may have been the result of his having been removed from the field of operations for a time, he was, of course, not present at Ferando's wedding, for, after his failure as a teacher, he had been sent home by Aurelius to serve as host to the visitor from Sestos. Aurelius apparently became the household guest of Alfonso, while Valeria probably resumed the apparel of Aurelius (see i. i. 89–97), and remained in the lodgings provided by Polidor. The occupation of Valeria

The events of Tuesday in The Shrew and in A Shrew are, as outlined in the foregoing paragraphs, of a similar nature. For the rest of the play The Shrew has but one day, whereas A Shrew has three—Thursday, Saturday, and Sunday.

Thursday in A Shrew—AS III. iii. 1-54. This is the only scene in A Shrew in which Polidor appears as Ferando's guest. Kate rejects meat at the end of the scene, even though Sander has threatened her with, "He keepe you fasting for it this two daies" (line 26). Two days from Thursday would bring the time of the next scene down to Saturday, Friday, of course, was a fast day of the Church. The corresponding material in The Shrew (IV. iii. 1-58) falls into the last day of The Shrew, that is, Thursday.

Saturday in A Shrew—AS III. iv. 1-v. 72. These scenes, forgery and apparel, which, as I suggest below, appeared in reversed order in the earlier form of the play, include the fraudulent assurances of the supposed father, the apparel of which Kate is deprived, and the delayed start of Ferando and Kate to attend her sisters' wedding. For the consummation of the fraud of the supposed father, a date as late as Saturday would seem to be required. On the first Sunday of the play, after the marriage of Kate to Ferando, Aurelius informs Alfonso that he expects his father "within this weeke" (II. ii. 125)—a phrase which suggests the end of the week as the time of the expected arrival of the father and of the drawing up of contracts giving assurances of dowry for Philema, the second daughter of Alfonso; for sufficient time must elapse in order to convince Alfonso that Aurelius' father has come in response to a message from Aurelius himself (II. ii. 109-111).

Sunday in A Shrew—AS III. vi. 1-v. i. 161. The wedding of the sisters in the meantime may not have been unlike the similar rôle assigned to Tranio in The Shrew:

Keepe house, and ply his booke, welcome his friends,
Visit his Countrimen, and banquet them (TS I. i. 201-202) occurs on the day following the day on which the assurances of dowry are given by the supposed father. The day originally began, according to my suggested order of the earlier form of the play, with the identity scene (iv i. 2-55), but in A Shrew the day begins with a scene in which the two bridal couples exchange vows (iii. vi 1-61) before proceeding to the church (lines 62-77). Ferando and Kate arrive too late to witness the ceremony, partly possibly because of their disputes on the way (iv. i. 2-55), but more probably because they had turned back on the evening before. On Saturday afternoon at two o'clock (iii v. 65-66), Ferando had said to Kate: "Thy sisters Kate to morrow must be wed" (line 61). Irked by Kate's habit of contradiction, Ferando then declared. "Come backe againe, we will not go to day" (line 70). Polidor, who was not present in this scene in A Shrew, makes a shrewd, but incorrect, guess as to the reason for the absence of Ferando and Kate from the wedding on Sunday:

His wife I think hath troubled so his wits,
That he remaines at home to keepe them warme. (iv.ii 6-7)

The Last Day, Thursday, in The Shrew—TS iv iii. 1-v. ii. 189. The events of the last day, which, as noted above, I have named Thursday in The Shrew, include, among others, the scene in which Katherine is offered meat and, contrary to the issue of the corresponding scene in A Shrew, is persuaded to eat (iv iii. 1-58). The meat scene in A Shrew has also been assigned to Thursday, for reasons stated above. In The Shrew the meat scene (iv. iii 1-58) is linked with the apparel scene (lines 59-198). I suggest that these two scenes were separate in the original sketches of the play, but were united by Shakespeare when he wrote The Shrew, and that they were separated more effectively with the insertion of the forgery scene (AS iii. iv 1-65) by the author of A Shrew who may have thought thereby to perfect a system of alternation of scenes between city and country. The forgery scene occurs in A Shrew on Saturday, the day before the wedding, but it apparently occurs in The Shrew on Thursday. This antedating of events in The Shrew, contrary to the expectation of Baptista, and contrary also to the chronology which prevails in A Shrew, is explained by the Pedant, who accounts for his appearance so early in the week by the statement:

sir by your leave, having com to Padua
To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio
Made me acquainted with a waighty cause
Of love betweene your daughter and himselfe. (iv iv 24-27)

Thus coincidence is utilized to explain the early arrival of the supposed father of the supposed Lucentio, if time had to be allowed in The Shrew, as in A Shrew, for the Pedant to come as if in response to a message, the forgery scene could not have been placed so early in the week. While Baptista is busy about the assurances of dowry, Lucentio and Bianca steal their marriage. Not only does the marriage, accordingly, take place before the day appointed, but it occurs also before the arrival of Katherine and Petruchio.

As has been stated above, Ferando and Kate in A Shrew at the hour of two on Saturday afternoon (III v 61, 65-66) set out to attend the wedding of Kate's sisters, but turn back (line 70), their journey the next day is delayed (IV i 2-55), they miss the wedding entirely (IV ii 3-5). Petruchio in The Shrew, in like manner, tells Katherine, "I will not goe to day" (IV iii 196), but, unlike Ferando in A Shrew, he apparently does not carry out his threat. Otherwise Petruchio would have missed the feast as well as the stolen wedding ceremony. The "to day" of TS IV iii 196 is the day of the drawing up of the marriage contracts. The hour when Petruchio makes the threat is "almost two" in the afternoon. According to Katherine's computation of time, were they to take their departure then it would be "supper time" ere they arrived at her father's house in Padua (IV iii. 191-192). The wedding feast which Petruchio and Katherine finally attend (TS V i. 140-147) takes place at supper time⁴⁶ on the same day, that is, after the elopement and the subsequent dénouement scene (TS V. i 8-144).

(2) That this shortening of the chronology of the latter part of The Shrew was effected during a revision of the play which introduced the elopement, is indicated by several apparent inconsistencies or lapses in The Shrew.

(a) The scene of TS IV iii 171-198 ends with Petruchio's declaration, "I will not goe to day" (line 196), but in IV. v 1, without any explanation whatever, Petruchio and Katherine are on their way, on what must certainly be the same day—as Daniel has not failed to notice. In A Shrew, as stated above, the similar declaration of Ferando, "we will not go to day" (III v 70), effects a postponement of the journey from Saturday to Sunday. That there is an actual inconsistency in The Shrew is, however, not an inevitable conclusion, for Petruchio's mere threat may have been enough to cause Katherine to submit and thus to permit a resumption of the journey the same day, but the lack of any verbal indication of such immediate submission of Katherine has probably led many a reader to suppose that the journey in The Shrew is resumed in iv v 1 on a later day. This slight discrepancy, if discrepancy it be, would suggest the conclusion that the threat to postpone the journey was originally composed for an earlier form of the play in which the chronology was similar to that of A Shrew

⁴⁶ See TS V ii. 128 "since supper time." The supper mentioned in A Shrew (V. i 1) may have been the second meal after the marriages of Philomena and Emilia, if A Shrew be supposed to follow such a schedule of events as is in A Merry Jest of a shrewde and curste Wyfe, lapped in Morrelles Skin, for her good behavvour (London, ca. 1550-60), wherein (pp. 65-70) the wedding festivities include dinner and supper on the same day. I cite the edition by Thomas Amyot in The Old Taming of a Shrew (London, 1844), pp. 53-91.

(b) Again, the condensation of events in the latter part of The Shrew is such that it almost exceeds the bounds of probability. Thus on the last day in The Shrew (iv iii. 1-v ii 189) occur the scenes in which Katherine's taming is finally effected, in which the Pedant poses as Vincentio and is exposed, in which Bianca's marriage, although stolen, is festively celebrated, and in which proof is given of Katherine's taming. As stated above, Katherine says that, if they were to take their departure at "almost two" in the afternoon, it would be "supper time" ere they arrived at her father's house in Padua (iv iii 191-192). Thus, according to Katherine, all the time between two and supper time would be required to make the journey. But between that hour and supper time many things occur in The Shrew besides the making of the journey. There are the delays on the road, occasioned by the dispute concerning the sun (iv v 2-25) and by the merriment with Vincentio (iv v 26-76), there is also the delay caused by the dénouement scene (v i 9-144), which Petruchio and Katherine witness after their arrival at Padua—all crowded in before "supper time." The hour of two in A Shrew iii. v. 65, on the contrary, would have given Ferando and Kate ample time in which to journey to Athens on Saturday to attend the Sunday wedding, had they not postponed the journey. I would suggest, accordingly, that the mention of the hour of two in both versions of the play derives from an earlier form of the play which was similar in chronology, herein, to A Shrew.⁴⁷

(c) Another bit of verbal evidence in The Shrew possibly pointing to an earlier form of the play may be Petruchio's statement to Vincentio, "Thy Sonne by this hath married" (iv v. 63). Such an assertion would have been appropriate to Ferando in the corresponding part of A Shrew (iv i 19-55), for Ferando probably is aware that they are already too late for Aurelius' marriage, when the Duke of Sestos subsequently arrives in Athens (iv ii 21) the wedding party has returned, or is returning, home (iv ii 1-20). Petruchio in The Shrew, on the other hand, seems to have no inkling that Lucentio had assumed a disguise and that an elopement had been planned. In the subsequent dénouement scene Petruchio still regards Tranio as the right Lucentio (v i. 26-30).^{47a} It would seem, accordingly, that the principle of consistency would have required that Petruchio should remain in ignorance of the marriage of Vincentio's son until his arrival in Padua, and that his statement to Vincentio is a relic of an earlier form of the play in which, as in A Shrew, the Tamer knew that he was arriving too late for the wedding.⁴⁸

⁴⁷ The "slender pittance" which Tranio (as Lucentio) seems to promise Baptista for "supper" upon conclusion of the dowry business (TS iv iv 61, 70, 86) was probably a part of the deception, and not an inconsistency with the fact that a feast is actually served (v i 146, v ii 1-48), for Tranio, who planned the elopement, may well have made secret provision for ample entertainment.

On the evidence in The Shrew of the lines, just discussed, "I will not goe to day," "'tis almost two," and "Thy Sonne by this hath married" — lines which would be appropriate only to A Shrew, which has neither an elopement nor a consequent shortening of the chronology—I conclude that the chronology of the latter part of The Shrew is the result of a revision of an earlier form of the play which was similar, in the corresponding part, to A Shrew.

2. In further support of the theory that The Shrew is a revision of an earlier form of the play in which no rivalry, elopement, or shortening of the chronology occurred, I argue: both, that interludes of an earlier form of the play were eliminated during the revision, made under the influence of I Suppositi, which introduced into The Shrew the elements of rivalry, elopement, and shortened chronology, and also, that there are relics or parallels in The Shrew which suggest that interludes similar to those of A Shrew had existed in an earlier form of the play.

Scholars are generally agreed that the Sly interludes existed in a fuller form in an earlier version of The Shrew, but they have not been in accord ^{47a} Neither is it clear how Hortensio is able to confirm Petruchio's statement (iv v 74) When Hortensio renounced Bianca at iv ii 1-43 he was not aware of the disguises under which Lucentio and Tranio were masquerading, nor was he aware that an elopement was being planned. After the scene, however, in which Tranio (as Lucentio) told him that he also renounced Bianca (iv ii 32-33), Hortensio must somehow have come to believe that the supposed Lucentio's renunciation was but feigned, otherwise he probably would have told Petruchio that the negotiations between Baptista and "Lucentio" were off, and that no one remained to marry Bianca except Gremio—for, to Hortensio's mind, a marriage between Bianca and "Cambio," a "Cullion" (iv ii 20), would have been out of the question.

⁴⁸ "Enter Peter." (TS iv. iv 68/9), a stage direction whose meaning has been in dispute, appears in the text of the folio. Instead, however, of the entrance of such a character after the forgery scene (TS iv iv 1-72, cf. AS III iv 1-65), Lucentio and Biondello enter to discuss the plans for the elopement (TS iv iv. 73-110). I would suggest that the direction "Enter Peter" was originally the beginning of the stage direction introducing the identity scene, "Enter Petruchio, Kate, Hortensio" (TS iv v 1-79, cf. AS iv. i 2-55), and that, when the identity scene was displaced, or delayed, by the insertion of the plans for the elopement, the stage direction of the identity scene was copied by mistake so far as "Enter Peter" and then discontinued. According to this interpretation, "Enter Peter" would be a relic of an earlier form of the play in which, as in A Shrew, no elopement had occurred. Cf. Ashton, PQ, op. cit., p. 159.

as to the manner, time, or cause of Sly's elimination. A variation of the older view that Shakespeare planned the retention of the Sly scenes in the folio version of the play⁴⁹ has received expression comparatively recently in the words of Mr. Wilson:

we think it at least possible that Shakespeare himself intended Sly to sit the play out and revert to beggary at the end, and that in the interest of theatrical convenience these intentions have been frustrated in the text that has come down to us. . . . a few strokes of the pen would suffice to rid the transcript of them at any time.⁵⁰

In opposition to the 'older view,' I support the theory, stated by Mr. Bond, that Shakespeare deliberately planned in advance the dismissal of Sly from the play after the interlude of TS I. i. 254-259⁵¹—an interpretation to which Mr. Kuhl has given currency.⁵² One of Mr. Bond's arguments, however, that Sly may have been removed in order to permit the Pedant to look out of the window at v. i. 16/7, has been invalidated by observations made by Miss Porter.⁵³ His other argument, which would seem to have some force, I shall list below under the heading of the Epilogue of A Shrew.

This theory, that Shakespeare while rewriting an earlier form of the play deliberately omitted the interludes and an epilogue, and utilized all that was available of them in other parts of The Shrew, may best be checked by a study of the text of The Shrew in the places corresponding to the positions of the several interludes of A Shrew.⁵⁴

(1) The first interlude of A Shrew (I. i. 324-331), restored, as outlined above, to a position between AS I. i. 275 and AS II. i. 56, was obviously designed to separate and unite the betrothal scene and the wooing scene. The corresponding place in The Shrew would have been between TS II. i. 333 and TS III. i. 1, wherein the lines of TS II. i. 334-413, involving the rivalry of Tranio (as Lucentio) and Gremio, may have usurped the former place of the interlude. These lines not only carry on the original function of the interlude as a transition link but also disturb the right sequence of exterior and interior scenes, it would seem that an interlude as an interior scene would properly come between two exterior scenes, but the dowry

⁴⁹ Such older views include the suggestion that the end of the play was lost or inadvertently omitted. See E. P. Kuhl, "Shakespeare's Purpose in Dropping Sly," MLN (June, 1921), pp. 321-322.

⁵⁰ The Shrew, op cit, p. 124. A theory of actor-economy was expressed by Tolman, PMLA, v, 222.

⁵¹ The Shrew, op cit, note on p. 33.

⁵² MLN, op cit, pp. 323-329.

⁵³ Porter, The Shrew, op cit, pp. 194-195.

⁵⁴ The demonstration that the elimination of the interludes was co-incidental with the elaboration of the subplot would constitute a refutation of Wilson's theory of an unrevised version of The Shrew, that is, of an intermediate version which contained both the elaborated form of the subplot and the Sly interludes in full.

business of TS II 1. 334-413 was probably conducted indoors⁵⁵ Such considerations may have suggested to Shakespeare the elimination of the interludes, which he may then have effected by the improvisation of the interlude of TS I 1. 254-259, which would have provided Sly a more or less graceful exit I conclude, accordingly, that an original interlude similar to that of A Shrew I 1. 324-331 may have been eliminated by Shakespeare from an earlier form of the play when he introduced the element of rivalry derived from I Supposit.

(2) The interlude of A Shrew IV 1. 1, restored, as outlined above, to a position between II 1. 128 and III 1. 1, would seem to have been designed to allow for a change of scene from the court of Alfonso's house in Athens to Ferando's country-house It may be observed here that the departure of Petruchio, Kate, and Grumio in The Shrew at III 1. 241, thirteen lines before the end of the scene, corresponds to the plan of A Shrew, the departure of Ferando at AS II 1. 91, thirty-seven lines before the end of the scene in A Shrew, would have made it possible for one actor to double in the rôles of Sly and Ferando⁵⁶

It would be too much to expect to find any surviving trace in The Shrew of such an interlude as the one-line interlude of A Shrew IV 1. 1, but the similarity of construction in the corresponding contexts of A Shrew and The Shrew permitting the doubling of the Sly actor in the rôles of Ferando and Petruchio, respectively, suggests at least the possibility that such a doubling may have been planned in an earlier form of the play.

(3) The interlude of A Shrew IV 1. 45-53 is unique among the interludes, in that it seems to have been designed not so much to serve as a transition between scenes as to show Sly so interested in the progress of the play and so sympathetic with the fate of the conspirators that he attempts to interfere in their behalf. In the corresponding place in The Shrew (v. i. 8-155), instead of an interlude in which Sly would intervene

⁵⁵ All of the scenes of A Shrew, with the exception of the interludes, may be regarded as exterior scenes, even the scenes of III 1. 1-53 and III 1. 1-54, in which food is served at Ferando's country-house, may have been placed in the court (the peristyle of Roman houses). The scene of A Shrew V 1. 1-161 takes place after supper on the evening of the wedding day of the younger sisters

Come gentlemen now that suppers donne,

How shall we spend the time till we go to bed?

(lines 1-2)

Sly in A Shrew may be supposed to have looked out of his bedroom alternately upon the exterior scenes of the street, of the court, and, with less verisimilitude, of a country road The location of certain scenes in The Shrew might also be regarded as in the court of a house, but the language of Shakespeare is hardly reminiscent of such a style of architecture, and the time of The Shrew is definitely stated to be winter (iv. 1. 24).

⁵⁶ Cf Boas, A Shrew, op cit, p xxv.

in the action of the play proper, Gremio appears in the rôle of intercessor and Petruchio assumes the rôle of spectator. I suggest, accordingly, that the interposition function of such an interlude in an earlier form of the play was assumed, during revision, by Gremio, and that a relic of such an interlude remains in The Shrew in Petruchio's rôle of spectator during a part of the dénouement scene.

(a) Gremio's indebtedness to Cleander of I Suppositi has long been recognized,⁵⁷ his indebtedness to a Sly interlude may be equally true. The Ferrarese of I Suppositi conducts Philogano (the father) to the feigned Erostrato's house where the Sienese (the feigned Philogano) is lodged (Supp iv iii 66-67),⁵⁸ remains as an active witness to the action (Supp iv iv 1-vii 50), and recommends Cleander to Philogano as an advocate who will plead his cause (Supp iv.viii 1-88). In The Shrew Petruchio conducts Vincentio to the house of the supposed Lucentio where the supposed father is lodged (v i 9, 26-30), but withdraws before the scene is concluded, and witnesses the remainder of the action only from a distance, Gremio remains to counsel Vincentio. Gremio's prototype, Cleander of I Suppositi, does not come into contact with Philogano until a later scene (Supp v v.1-150). Petruchio's action as a guide, for which there is no parallel in A Shrew, seems, as Mr. Bond has noticed, to have been devised in imitation of the action of the Ferrarese in I Suppositi. But in the Ferrarese's continued rôle as a friend to Philogano (Supp iv.viii 1-88), Petruchio is succeeded in The Shrew by Gremio. Vincentio, outfaced by the impostors, is about to be carried to jail by the Officer (v i 94-97),⁵⁹ when Gremio interposes, "Stare officer, he shall not go to prison" (line 98). Baptista answers, "Talke not signior Gremio. I saie he shall goe to prison" (lines 99-100).

When the Duke, in the dénouement scene of A Shrew iv ii 1-25, orders Phylotus and Valeria to be sent "to prison straight" (line 44), Sly, in the interlude of lines 45-53, cries out, "I say wele have no sending to prison."

The influence of I Suppositi, Mr. Bond thinks, was first manifest in the version of the dénouement scene in A Shrew, and then developed more fully in the corresponding scene in The Shrew. Whereas in A Shrew Sly intervenes in behalf of the supposed son and the supposed father, who have fled to escape imprisonment, in The Shrew it is the real father who is threatened with imprisonment and for whom Gremio interposes;

⁵⁷ Bond, Early Plays from the Italian (Oxford, 1911), p. lxxvii. Cf. Bond, The Shrew, op. cit., p. xxvii.

⁵⁸ I use Bond's edition of Gascoigne's Supposes (Early Plays, op. cit., pp. 1-73).

⁵⁹ The rôle of the Officer may have been doubled by the Hortensio actor in The Shrew, for Petruchio, making a pun on the name, tells Hortensio at v. ii. 37 that he "Spoke like an Officer."

as in I Suppositi again it is the real father who is threatened, and who, after consultation with Cleander, the lawyer recommended to him by the Ferrarese, would appeal to the Prince

The rôles of Gremio and of Petruchio in the dénouement scene of The Shrew, accordingly, would seem to share equally in indebtedness to I Suppositi and to belong, consequently, to the same writing—that is, to the revision of the play made under the influence of I Suppositi

(b) The foregoing argument, that the function of an interlude of an earlier form of the play, similar to that of A Shrew iv ii 45–53, has been taken over by Gremio in the corresponding scene in The Shrew, is supported by what seems to be a relic in The Shrew of such an original interlude. I refer to the movements of Petruchio and Katherine during the latter part of the dénouement scene in The Shrew (v i 63–147). Petruchio, who has taken some part in the conversations of the first part of the scene, withdraws with Katherine, "Preethe Kate let's stand aside and see the end of this controversie" (TS v.i 63), and remains as a mere spectator of the action until line 147, when Katherine says, "Husband let's follow, to see the end of this adoe"

Petruchio's rôle as spectator during the dénouement is analogous to that of Sly in A Shrew, and the rôle of Katherine as a companion to Petruchio probably corresponds to the rôle of Sly's Lady (although the presence of Sly's Lady in the interlude of AS iv ii 45–53 is only to be inferred). The demands, moreover, which Petruchio makes of Katherine in this scene are reminiscent of the demands which Sly makes of his Lady in the Induction of The Shrew. Petruchio's insistence that Katherine kiss him "in the midst of the streete" (v i.148–153) upon the conclusion of the dénouement scene, which they have witnessed from afar, is just the kind of conduct which one would have expected from Sly had his Lady been at his side in an interlude. I repeat, the movements of Petruchio and Katherine during the dénouement scene suggest the action which Sly and his Lady might have indulged in had they remained as spectators to the play.

Furthermore, in accordance with the theory that a doubling of Sly and the Tamer was originally intended, it may be noted that the elimination of a Sly interlude from the context of the dénouement scene would have left the Sly actor free to appear in the main text of the play in the rôle of Petruchio. It is significant that Ferando does not appear at all in the dénouement scene of A Shrew; probably the rôle of Sly as a spectator of the action prevented the appearance of his double on the stage. Whereas in The Shrew, wherein no interlude occurs, Petruchio both takes part in the initial part of the dénouement scene and also gives what would seem to have been a good imitation of Sly during the rest of the scene

He that knowes better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speake, 'tis charity to shew (iv 1 213-214)⁶³

Such elements in A Shrew suggest that Sly's domestic problem may have been originally regarded as the principal subject of the play, and that the plots of the taming and of the deception may have been used as object-lessons to teach Sly how to deal with a shrewish wife. Sly's problem, illustrated more or less clearly in the Induction of A Shrew by his apparent reluctance to sleep at home (Ind 1 3,6-8) and by the words of San[der],

Marrie my lord tis calde The taming of a shiew
Tis a good lesson for us my lord, for us that are married men (Ind 1 63-64), would constitute the minor premise of the syllogism, the play of "The taming of a shrew," which Sly is to witness, would build up a general rule or the major premise, and the Epilogue would form the conclusion.

The Shrew, however, has little of the form of the syllogism. Shakespeare neither states in the Induction that a lesson is about to be offered, nor does he point Sly's moral at the end, what he retains of the Sly material of A Shrew, or rather of the earlier form of the play, is realistically presented.⁶⁴ Instead of the beshrewed Sly of A Shrew, who apparently prefers a bed in the road outside the alehouse door to his bed at home, The Shrew has a tinker of ancient lineage who refuses to pay his tavern score.⁶⁵ The play within a play in The Shrew is not given for Sly's instruction but for the entertainment of the Lord. It would seem probable, accordingly, that a desire to remove such scholastic elements from an earlier form of the play may have, in part, motivated a revision during which the play within a play was deliberately enlarged by Shakespeare at the expense of the Sly interludes.

I summarize: Shakespeare in The Shrew seems (1) to have supplanted an interlude similar to that of A Shrew 11.324-331 by more important matter, he seems (2) to have omitted an interlude of no considerable length and purpose, such as that of A Shrew iv 1 1, he seems (3) to have assimilated into the main text of The Shrew an interlude similar to that of A Shrew iv.11.45-53; finally, he seems (4) to have transferred to other parts of The Shrew ideas similar to those of the Epilogue of A Shrew. All ⁶³ Compare the lines appended to The Wife Lapped in Moors Skin.

He that can charme a shrewde wyfe
Better then thus,
Let him come to me, and fetch ten pound,
And a golden purse

(Amyot's edition, op cit, p. 91)

⁶⁴ See Kuhl, MLN, op cit, pp. 327-328

⁶⁵ Cf. The Shrew, Ind 1 1-15, Ind 11 20-25, 87-90

this supplanting, eliminating, assimilating, and transferring he seems to have effected while rewriting an earlier form of the play under the influence of I Suppositi.

I conclude, accordingly, that The Shrew is a revision of an earlier form of the play which had interludes and an epilogue, but no rivalry, elopement, or shortened chronology—a form of the play similar in these respects to A Shrew

IV

That The Shrew and A Shrew derive from a common source would seem to be the inevitable conclusion to be drawn from the foregoing studies of internal evidence in the two extant versions of the play. The alternate theories that The Shrew derives from A Shrew and that A Shrew derives from The Shrew have been discredited, as has also the theory of an unrevised or intermediate version of The Shrew.

The nature of the hypothetical common source may be arrived at by merging the characteristics of the earlier form of A Shrew and of the earlier form of The Shrew—characteristics brought out above. The studies in section II are largely of the first part of the play. For that part the marks common to The Shrew and to the earlier form of A Shrew consist in the order and in the chronology of The Shrew—both indicated in the comparative chart under the heading of the "Original Form." For the latter part of the play—the principal subject of the studies of section III—the marks common to A Shrew and to the earlier form of The Shrew consist in the plot, in the chronology, and in the interludes of A Shrew—also indicated in the comparative chart. Accordingly, the earlier form of the play, from which A Shrew and The Shrew have departed, although each in a different way, would seem to have had something like the order of The Shrew, the interludes and the subplot of A Shrew, the chronology of The Shrew for the first part, and the chronology of A Shrew for the latter part of the play.

This original form of the play would seem to have been designed to be chronologically presented, in contrast to the method of Latin comedy and of Ariosto's I Suppositi. Sly falls asleep, awakes, sees a play, falls asleep, awakes. The main plot of the play which Sly witnesses is the taming of a shrew, beginning with betrothal and marriage, and ending with the taming and the proof thereof. Sly witnesses also the subplot, which has a second set of characters and another theme, including (as in A Shrew) disguise, deception, forged contracts, and marriage under an assumed name—the whole chronologically arranged.

I would suggest that the earlier form of the play, as Hickson has argued, may have been happier in its conceits and phraseology than is

A Shrew. To the earlier form of the play I would credit also the excellence, noted by many scholars, of A Shrew in plot construction⁶⁶ and in vigor of conception⁶⁷

The earlier form of the play may have been either a completed play or no more than a set of preliminary sketches. If it was a completed play, the derivation of A Shrew therefrom could possibly be explained by some 'bad Quarto' process of mutilation and reconstruction, whether by way of actors' recollection or by a stenographic report of a stage presentation. If, on the other hand, the earlier form of the play was a set of loose-leaf sketches, the manner of derivation of A Shrew could easily be accounted for.

To the author of A Shrew, identity unknown,⁶⁸ I would credit the lines from Marlowe and in imitation of Marlowe, which are interspersed throughout A Shrew,⁶⁹ at places where the original author of the play may have given but brief suggestions. At such places the author of A Shrew would have been thrown almost entirely upon his own resources eked out by those of Christopher Marlowe. That the original author of the play was not the author of A Shrew seems obvious from the fact that the latter apparently misunderstood not only the correct order of the scenes and the true chronology of the play, but also missed the point of certain conceits, which, as stated above, seem to have been more correctly preserved in The Shrew.

The theory that Shakespeare may have been the author of the hypothetical common source of the two extant versions of the play receives some support from the arguments of those who would give to Shakespeare at least a share in the authorship of A Shrew, while the objections made to the Shakespearean authorship of A Shrew would not necessarily apply to the authorship of the earlier form of the play. The theory that the author of the original form of the play was the author also of The Shrew receives further support from the fact that the materials which seem to have been used for the earlier form of the play seem also to have been used by the author of The Taming of the Shrew; the author of The Taming of a Shrew, on the other hand, either had no access to Shakespeare's library or failed to see the advantage of using it.

RAYMOND A. HOUK

Washington, D. C.

⁶⁶ Boas, A Shrew, op. cit., p. xxxiii.

⁶⁷ Bond, The Shrew, op. cit., p. xli. Tolman, Views, op. cit., p. 303.

⁶⁸ Cf. H. D. Sykes, Sidelights on Elizabethan Drama (Oxford, 1925), pp. 49-78.

⁶⁹ Boas, A Shrew, op. cit., p. xxxi. For the authorship of A Shrew see Boas, ibid., pp. xxxiv-xxxvii, Alexander, LTLS, op. cit., p. 614, Bond, The Shrew, op. cit., pp. xxxvii-xliv.

THE DYNAMIC IMAGE IN METAPHYSICAL POETRY

SO many brilliant critics and scholars have interpreted the metaphysical image that one hesitates to push the analysis farther, but analysis and theory are justified if they throw new light on a subject or show a possible relationship between things that had previously seemed independent. The question is not whether metaphysical poetry can be analyzed more fully, but whether one simple, underlying peculiarity can be found to explain some of the characteristics of this type of verse and to show that these disiecta membra are of a piece. The underlying quality that appears to connect many of the seemingly unrelated features of metaphysical poetry might be called the dynamic image.

All imagery may be divided into two chief types, the static and the dynamic. The static image describes the appearance, taste, smell, feel, or sound of an object—the qualities, in short, which mediaeval philosophers called accidents. The dynamic image describes the way in which objects act or interact. Static imagery is comparable to sculpture and painting; dynamic imagery is comparable to ballet, or, more accurately, to the modern dance, in which costumes and backgrounds are deliberately subordinated in order that attention may be focused on motion.

Static imagery is the more common type of the two. Almost all the conventional Petrarchan comparisons of the Elizabethan sonneteers fall into this category; it has been the poetic legal tender in many periods of literature. Keats' "valley lillies whiter still Than Leda's love"¹ is an excellent illustration of this sort of image, as is Shakespeare's:

Her beauty hangs upon the cheek of night
Like a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear,
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!
So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows,
As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.²

Even the metaphysical poets used static images, frequently to achieve comic or satiric effects. The exaggerated similes in Donne's eighth elegy, "The Comparison," are almost exclusively static and sensuous:

And like a bunch of ragged carrets stand
The short swolne fingers of thy gouty hand³

Dynamic imagery, too, is found in the poetry of all ages and all countries. The epic similes of classical poetry often describe motion rather than external appearance:

¹ Endymion, I, 157 f.

² Romeo and Juliet, I, v. 47-51

³ Lines 33 f.

Untur infelix Dido, totaque vagatur urbe furens, qualis coniecta cerva sagitta quam procul incautam nemora inter Cresia fixit pastor, agens telis, liquitque volatile ferrum nescius, illa fuga silvas saltusque peragrat
 Dictaeos haeret lateri letalis harundo ⁴

Milton's extended similes often elaborate on motion, rather than on form or appearance ⁵ Shakespeare's plays are filled with the imagery of motion—the imagery best suited, surely, to dramatic poetry Miss Spurgeon comments on the "number and vividness of his images drawn from quick, nimble action,"⁶ and observes that Shakespeare's chief improvement on Plutarch's description of Cleopatra's barge was his addition of movement ⁷ The effect of the poison on Hamlet's father is made horrible by this vivid simile:

And, with a sudden vigour, it doth posset
 And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
 The thin and wholesome blood ⁸

Even worn-out myths take on a new vitality when Shakespeare sets them into motion:

fleck'd darkness like a drunkard reels
 From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels ⁹

Shakespeare was especially skilful in explaining mental action through the imagery of physical action The expanded image in *Lucrece*¹⁰ which Miss Spurgeon has shown was derived from the curious eddy under the bridge at Stratford¹¹ describes mental upheaval in terms of external motion A psychological state is likewise interpreted by a simile involving physical movement in the following passage:

Fie, fie, how wayward is this foolish love,
 That, like a testy babe, will scratch the nurse,
 And presently, all humbled, kiss the rod!¹²

The characteristics of metaphysical poetry have been enumerated and analyzed, but little attempt has been made to integrate these qualities. If, however, one considers the metaphysical image, particularly as used by Donne, a dynamic image, one sees a logical relationship coordinating many of its peculiarities. The sensuous thinking, the interest in psychological aspects of experience, the dramatic tenseness, the disregard of

⁴ Aeneid, iv, 68-73

⁵ See Paradise Lost, iv, 181 ff

⁶ Caroline F. E. Spurgeon, Shakespeare's Imagery and What It Tells Us (New York, 1935), p. 50

⁷ Ibid., p. 55

⁸ Hamlet, i v 68-70

⁹ Romeo and Juliet, ii ii 3 f.

¹⁰ Lines 1667-73

¹¹ Spurgeon, op. cit., p. 98.

¹² The Two Gentlemen of Verona, i ii 57 ff physical beauty, the neutrality of the minor term of images, and the imaginative distance between the major and minor terms—these characteristics are all closely connected with the predominance of dynamic imagery

John Donne's sensuous thinking has been pointed out and explained by a number of writers.¹³ Sensuous thinking may be defined briefly as thought that is expressed through imagery instead of in direct, prosaic terms. Thought, moreover, is not a static condition, but a line of mental action between two points, even the stream of consciousness is a continuous motion, though not a deliberate one. In short, if thought is to be expressed poetically at all, it requires a dynamic imagery rather than a static imagery. When he goes through the steps of elaborate philosophical reasoning or describes his inner psychological states, Donne employs images drawn from external motion. One of his finest love poems, "A Valediction: Forbidding Mourning," is full of dynamic images that describe the psychological relationship between the lovers who are about to part, and the effect that absence will have on this relationship. The four chief images of the poem describe motion: a virtuous man's soul leaving his body, earthquakes and the movements of the spheres, the beating of gold into gold leaf, and the famous image of the compasses, and this collection of images, which seem miscellaneous when listed thus, is unified by the thought of the poem. Indeed, the images carry the thought of the poem. The conceits here are functional, not decorative, and their function is to make psychological action clear by expressing it in terms of physical action.

As Milton Rugoff has pointed out, Donne was interested chiefly in the mechanical side of things. His images from illness, derive largely from medical theories, anatomy, and surgery, his metaphors and similes from geometry and other branches of mathematics, his images drawn from the technical aspects of music, the construction and operation of watches and clocks, the practices of artisans, and the machinery of war—all show the intensity of his absorption in the technical or mechanical phases of a subject, and his consequent tendency to turn to science and learning for his imagery.¹⁴ Though dynamic imagery need not be coldly scientific—Shakespeare's images of motion are generally drawn from ordinary life—nevertheless science and pseudo-science offer a fine formal garden where the poet in search of figures explaining actions and relationships may pluck exotic buds. On the other hand, the sciences are barren ground to the writer who seeks material for static images describing external appearances. Donne's interest in mechanics and his interest in psychology are closely related. "He is less interested in what life is than the 'way in which' he feels, experiences, and believes it, less interested in the metaphysical 'what' than in the psychological 'how'."¹⁵ In order to express adequately such psychological mechanics, he drew his images from the mechanics of science and industry.

¹³ T. S. Eliot emphasizes this point, see the passage from his Clark lectures quoted by Mario Praz in "Donne's Relation to the Poetry of His Time," A Garland for John Donne, ed. Theodore Spencer (Harvard University Press, 1931), p. 58. See likewise George Williamson's remarks in The Donne Tradition (Harvard University Press, 1930), pp. 89 f. and 48, and W. Bradford Smith, "What Is Metaphysical Poetry?" Sewanee Review, XLII, 263.

¹⁴ Milton Allan Rugoff, Donne's Imagery: A Study in Creative Sources (New York, 1939), pp. 220-232.

In sharp contrast to Donne's interest in the inner workings of things is his disregard of external appearances. Rugoff has pointed out that Donne seldom drew his images from music or from visual qualities.¹⁶ This neglect of surface impressions might be considered, in part, a deliberate revolt against the lush and unreal appliquéés of Elizabethan poetry; Donne in his honesty was contemptuous of "beauty that is not one with reality."¹⁷ But beneath this deliberate revolt against an artificial literary convention there was doubtless a fundamental lack of interest in visual beauty. In Donne's poetry the descriptions of a woman's hair, eyes, and lips that form the stock-in-trade of most Elizabethan poets are absent. His interest is primarily in the emotion of love, not in the object of his love. He attempts to analyze the effects of love, the way in which love acts on him and on his mistress, he is interested in the workings of his own mind under the stimulus of love, and in describing the results of his introspections the Petrarchan imagery of polite compliment was of no use to him.

The metaphysical image has been described as "far-fetched" in its comparison of dissimilar objects.¹⁸ But, as Rugoff emphasizes, the imaginative distance between the terms of an image depends partly on the familiarity of the image; "an unfamiliar analogy will usually seem more 'remote' than a traditional one."¹⁹ When images have become conventional, the essentially irrational quality of the comparison becomes obscured and does not force itself upon the reader. A woman's lips have no resemblance to coral except in one particular, color; the reader is not supposed to think of other attributes of coral—hardness or roughness. Human skin does not resemble snow except in one particular, ¹⁵ George Williamson, "Donne and the Poetry of Today," A Garland for John Donne, p. 156.

¹⁶ Rugoff, op. cit., pp. 225-228. See also Kathleen M. Lea, "Conceits," Modern Language Review, xx, 399.

¹⁷ Williamson, "Donne and the Poetry of Today," p. 166.

¹⁸ Thomas Stearns Eliot, "Donne in Our Time," A Garland for John Donne, p. 16.

¹⁹ Rugoff, op. cit., p. 241.

whiteness, and even this is a gross exaggeration. Likewise the metaphysical image compares two things that are dissimilar except in one detail, a detail that might be called the focus of the image. In both the Petrarchan and the metaphysical image, the attention is focused on one significant detail, one point of resemblance, and the other details—the coldness or wetness of snow, the hardness of coral—are deliberately blurred. If one examines the portions of any image that are outside the point of focus, the comparison becomes fantastic,²⁰ and in this respect a metaphysical image is no more far-fetched than the most routine Petrarchan image. The fundamental difference is that in static, Petrarchan imagery the focus of the comparison is a sense impression that is communicated with relative ease to the reader's imagination. When a girl's cheeks are compared to roses, the reader can form visual images of roses and cheeks without effort and with aesthetic satisfaction. The metaphysical image, on the contrary, does not focus on a resemblance of external qualities, of sense impressions, but on a resemblance between actions. The reader who, accustomed to cheeks and roses, comes upon Donne's image of the compasses is confused not because the analogy is any less real but because he makes the mistake of treating it as a static sense impression and trying to visualize it as such.

The neutral quality of the minor term is comprehensible when one considers the metaphysical image a type of dynamic image.²¹ Not all dynamic images, of course, are without connotation or sensuous appeal. The simile from the Aeneid quoted earlier in this article is a description of movement, but the minor term is enriched by emotional coloring and pictorial vividness. Likewise, in the image quoted from Hamlet, the unpleasant associations of curdled milk add to the horror of the poisoning. Those images of Donne's which refer to ordinary events of human life and death have minor terms that are not neutral, but deeply moving, adding to the emotional impact of the poem:

As virtuous men passe mildly away,
And whisper to their soules, to goe,
Whilst some of their sad friends doe say,
The breath goes now, and some say no.
So let us melt, and make no noise,
No teare-floods, no sigh-tempests move²²

²⁰ Henry W. Wells remarks that in a Radical image (which is practically identical with a metaphysical image) "the minor term . . . is significant metaphorically only at a single narrow point of contact. Elsewhere it is incongruous." See Poetic Imagery Illustrated from Elizabethan Literature (Columbia University Press, 1924), p. 125.

²¹ The neutral quality of the minor term is pointed out by Wells (op. cit., p. 121) and by Williamson (The Donne Tradition, pp. 31 and 86 f.).

²² "A Valediction: Forbidding Mourning," ll. 1-6.

But a dynamic image is not primarily sensuous, and can easily dispense with Petrarchan adornments. An image of motion may be lovely in itself, but it may have validity because of its aptness even if the minor term is not rich in poetic suggestion. The originality of the metaphysical image and the fact that it is often drawn from learned, esoteric material contribute to the neutrality of the minor term, the Copernican theory of the universe stimulates the imagination, but has little emotional connotation. In general, the reader is not supposed to notice the sensuous side of metaphysical images.

Our eye-beames twisted and did thread
Our eyes, upon one double string ²³

The above image is both ridiculous and unpleasant when one forms a mental picture of eye-balls strung on cord like beads, but when one considers it a purely dynamic image that underlines the direct, active intensity of the lovers' gaze, the absurdity disappears. An even more vivid example of the neutralizing of the minor term appears in Donne's "Anatomie of the World":

But as some Serpents poyson hurteth not
Except it be from the live Serpent shot,
So doth her vertue need her here, to fit
That unto us, shee working more then it ²⁴

The drama and vitality of Donne's poetry derives, in part at least, from the predominance of dynamic imagery. Wells has pointed out the fact that the Radical image is extremely dramatic and that the use of it accounts for much of the vigor of Shakespeare's dialogue.²⁵ In connection with this one may recall Lessing's idea, expressed in Laokoon, that the province of poetry is the description of action, the province of the graphic arts, the description of static beauty. By this standard much Elizabethan poetry, with its heavy stress on elaborate "word-pictures," deserves censure. In turning away from emphasis on the pictorial, Donne may have been indulging in mere revolt against literary convention, but he showed nevertheless an understanding of the powers and limitations of poetry.

The school of Donne continued the tradition of the dynamic image, though the followers did not turn so frequently to science for their material or neutralize their images so thoroughly.²⁶ In George Herbert's poem "Artillery," the good impulses sent by God are described as stars shot from cannon, and Herbert's prayers and tears are a return barrage.

²³ Donne, "The Extasie," ll. 7 f.

²⁴ Lines 409-412

²⁵ Op cit., pp. 135 f.

²⁶ Williamson (The Donne Tradition, pp. 86 f.) attributes the failure of many of the conceits of Donne's followers to their neglecting to neutralize the minor term.

In "The Showre" Vaughan likens half-hearted prayers to water evaporated from a lake and then, "too grosse for heaven,"²⁷ cast down to earth again as rain. Marvell's geometrical simile in "The Definition of Love" resembles Donne's imagery closely in its use of unpoetic, scientific material:

As Lines so Loves oblique may well
Themselves in every Angle greet
But ours so truly Paralel,
Though infinite can never meet ²⁸

The grotesqueness of the images used by men like Cleveland arose from their non-functional character, for the dynamic figure, which is not primarily decorative, loses its point when used as decoration instead of as an integral part of the poem.

The hypothesis of the dynamic image throws some light, I believe, on many peculiarities of Donne's poetry. Not all of Donne's images are dynamic, nor is imagery of motion confined to metaphysical poetry. How, then, do the dynamic images of Donne differ from those of a poet like Shakespeare? In the first place, other poets usually describe actual physical motion,²⁹ but Donne's purpose, almost invariably, is to explain mental actions or psychological relationships. Secondly, whereas Shakespeare's images of motion are drawn from nature or from ordinary life, Donne's are often derived from technical or scientific sources. Consequently, Shakespeare's figures are not neutralized, since they are rich in the emotional connotations that surround everyday words and everyday experiences. In Donne's images, on the other hand, the minor terms are neutral because they are, to a large extent, scientific or pseudo-scientific facts, with all the non-human coldness of science. Donne's interest in the intricate processes of the mind led him to use a mechanical or dynamic type of imagery—an imagery that was original, exact, intellectual, and, on the whole, unemotional. His most remarkable achievement was his success in writing poems that are, in spite of the neutrality of the figures through which he expressed his thought and feelings, full of intense emotion.

ALICE STAYERT BRANDENBURG

Southern Methodist University

²⁷ Line 5

²⁸ Lines 25-28

²⁹ See the quotations from Virgil and Shakespeare in the first part of this article

VOLTAIRE AND MONTESQUIEU'S THREE PRINCIPLES OF GOVERNMENT

VOLTAIRE criticizes the famous motivating principles of the three forms of government more vigorously than any other theory in the Esprit des lois. In general his criticisms of that great work have been too often discounted because of his known hostility to Montesquieu.¹ The aim of this study is to account for his attitude toward the motivating principles as they are set forth in the Esprit des lois. Here the facts reveal that his criticisms are sincere and in keeping with his own established opinions. They show the impatience of a mind thinking in relativist and human terms with the generalizations of legal theory.

At the outset Voltaire disagrees with Montesquieu's classification of states. To the three divisions of the Esprit des lois—monarchy, republic and despotism—he opposes the simpler classification of Aristotle—government by the many, by the few or by a single officer.² In his thought particular relations of climate to governmental form,³ or the varying suitability of luxury in the three forms⁴ are but the false distinctions of a classification in itself incorrect. As for the principles—"vertu" for the republic, "honneur" for monarchy and "crainte" for despotism—Voltaire denies that any one of them inheres more in one political form than another.

In the Esprit des lois monarchy is distinguished from despotism by a privileged intermediary body between the subject and the king. According to Montesquieu the absence of honor in the despotism leaves the subjects equal in political abasement.⁵ To the charge that there is no magnanimity under the despot⁶ Voltaire replies by naming many generous Oriental viziers.⁷ He denies also the assertion that slavery requires no virtuous qualities,⁸ that men sell themselves as slaves under despotism,⁹ that Russia seeks escape from absolutism.¹⁰ When Montesquieu speaks of viziers, pachas and beys in this equality of political abasement Voltaire wonders if "un beglier-bey, un pacha à trois queues ne sont pas

¹ G. Lanson, Histoire de la littérature française (Hachette, 1924), p. 762—In regard to Voltaire's criticism of L'Esprit des lois "Voltaire eut la petitesse d'être gêné par la grandeur de Montesquieu. L'écrivain était mort, l'œuvre restait. Voltaire s'y cassa les dents."

² Pensées sur le gouvernement, Moland, xxiii, p. 530.

³ Commentaire sur l'Esprit des lois, M. xxx, p. 442 et seq.

⁴ Idées républicaines, M. xxiv, pp. 419-420.

⁵ Esprit des lois, Liv. iii, Ch. viii, Lab. iii, p. 133.

⁶ Ibid., Liv. v, Ch. xii, Laboulaye iii, p. 196.

⁷ Commentaire sur l'Esprit des lois, M. xxx, p. 416.

⁸ Dictionnaire philosophique, M. xx, p. 3.

⁹ Ibid., p. 7.

¹⁰ Ibid., p. 4.

supérieurs à un homme du peuple.”¹¹ Elsewhere his language resembles that of Montesquieu. “Le despotisme est l’abus de la monarchie comme l’anarchie est l’abus de la république ”¹² In the following passage Voltaire tries to show the futility of aspersions cast on despotism: “. . . despotique et monachique sont tout juste la même chose . . . despote (herus) signifie maître et monarque signifie seul maître ce qui est bien plus fort ”¹³

Montesquieu defines the honor which motivates monarchy as “le préjugé de chaque condition” which demands “des préférences et des distinctions ”¹⁴ So true is it that “vertu” is not the monarchical principle, he writes, “que si dans le peuple il se trouve quelque malheureux honnête homme, le cardinal de Richelieu, dans son Testament politique, insinue qu’un monarque doit se garder de s’en servir ”¹⁵ In the reasoning of the Esprit des lois, honor in any moral sense is so insignificant to monarchy that “une action qui se fait sans bruit y est en quelque sorte sans conséquence ”¹⁶ In spite of its unmoral qualities this motivation results in good because among the subjects “. . . chacun va au bien commun croyant aller à ses intérêts particuliers,” a fact which causes the author to qualify the principle of monarchy as really an “honneur faux.”¹⁷

Refusing to accept Montesquieu’s specialized definition of the term, Voltaire declares: “. . . C’est précisément dans les cours qu’il y a toujours le moins d’honneur ”¹⁸ He finds the Romans more virtuous under the Emperor Trajan than under Marius and Sulla.¹⁹ He mentions many habitués of royal Versailles who were conspicuous for their virtue. He can not believe “qu’il faille plus de vertu à un Grison qu’à un Espagnol.”²⁰ On the other hand he mentions “des statues, des couronnes de lauriers et des triomphes,” to show that honor figures as an incentive to the republican.²¹ For Voltaire the term “honneur” was more consistent

¹¹ Commentaire sur l’Esprit des lois, M xxx, p 416

¹² Pensées sur le gouvernement, M xxiii, p 530.

¹³ Lettre à M Gin, 20 juin 1777, M L, p 236. cf Commentaire sur l’Esprit des Lois, M xxx, p 416

¹⁴ Esprit des lois, Liv III, Ch VI, Lab III, p 131.

¹⁵ Ibid, Liv III, Ch v, Lab III, p 130

¹⁶ Ibid—This statement is not a commendation of vice. Faults corrected in a republic by a sentiment of vertu must be prevented in a monarchy by law. ¹⁷ Ibid, p 132.

¹⁸ Dictionnaire philosophique, M xix, p. 387. He follows this remark with lines from the Pastor fido which describe the intrigue of court life

“L’ingannare, il mentur, la frode, il furto
E la rapina di pietà vestita,
Crescer col danno et precipizio altrui
E far a se de l’altrui biasmo onore
Son le virtù di quella gente infida ” Pastor Fido, V

¹⁹ Supplément au Siècle de Louis XIV, M xv, p 138.

²⁰ Dictionnaire philosophique, M xix, p. 387

²¹ Pensées sur le gouvernement, M xxiii, p. 531.

with laurels and statues than with a system under which patents of nobility were auctioned off to wealthy buyers.²² Quoting the passage in which Montesquieu refers to the Testament politique he writes: "dans une monarchie tempérée par les lois, et surtout par les mœurs, il y a plus de vertu que l'auteur ne croit et plus d'hommes qui lui ressemblent."²³ When Montesquieu qualified the monarchical principle as an "honneur faux" Voltaire saw in the expression a contradiction in terms "L'honneur est le désir d'être honoré," he writes, "avoir l'honneur c'est ne rien faire qui soit indigne des honneurs."²⁴ Admitting that honor was the motivation of chivalry, he declares: "... prétendre que l'honneur est le mobile de la monarchie . . . est aussi peu convenable que de dire que la vertu est le mobile des républiques."²⁵ Elsewhere his meaning is still clearer: "L'honneur est commun à tous les hommes."²⁶ For Voltaire there is no conception of honor especially befitting monarchy, honor is human integrity which always implies a moral obligation.

Montesquieu attempts to draw the same sort of distinction between the "vertu" motivating the republic and the usually accepted meaning of the word "vertu." The reaction of Voltaire to this distinction is consistent with his criticism of the similar one regarding honneur. In the Esprit des lois "vertu" is defined as the love of the laws and the fatherland "Cet amour," writes Montesquieu, "demandant une préférence continuelle de l'intérêt public au sien propre, donne toutes les vertus particulières, elles ne sont que cette préférence."²⁷ After he had been attacked for having barred virtue from monarchy²⁸ the author tries to make his definition of "vertu" clearer. In the Avertissement, accompanying later editions of the Esprit des lois he writes: "Ce n'est point une vertu morale ni une vertu chrétienne, c'est la vertu politique: et celle-ci est le ressort qui fait mouvoir la république."²⁹ In the Eclaircissement, he explains for the benefit of the Journal de Trévoux: "Je parle ici de la vertu politique qui est la vertu morale dans le sens qu'elle se dirige au bien général, fort peu des vertus morales particulières, et point du tout de cette vertu qui a du rapport aux vérités révélées."³⁰ Neither moral virtues nor "la vertu poli-

²² Dictionnaire philosophique, M. xix, p. 388

²³ Supplément au Siècle de Louis XIV, M. xv, p. 139

²⁴ Pensées sur le gouvernement, M. xxiii, p. 531

²⁵ Le Triumvirat, n. vi, pp. 209-210

²⁶ Le siècle de Louis XIV, M. xiv, p. 394

²⁷ Esprit des lois, Liv. iv, Ch. v, Lab. iii, p. 151

²⁸ "Examen critique de l'Esprit des lois," Nouvelles ecclésiastiques, 9 octobre 1749 in Lab. vi, p. 122 et seq. Cf. Préface de l'Éditeur, Lab. vi, p. 99, where the above article is attributed to a certain Abbé La Roche

²⁹ Esprit des lois,—"Avertissement de l'auteur," Lab. iii, p. 87

³⁰ Eclaircissements sur l'Esprit des lois, Lab. vi, p. 205

tique" are excluded from monarchy, he explains, because honor is the motivation of that form. The simile which he uses in this place is completely mechanistic "Si je disais telle roue, tel pignon ne sont point le ressort qui fait mouvoir cette montre en conclurait-on qu'ils ne sont pas dans la montre?"³¹

Ignoring the specialized definition of Montesquieu, Voltaire assures us that "vertu" had no part in the establishment of Athens, Rome or Ragusa. "On se met en république quand on le peut"³² Elsewhere, addressing himself to Montesquieu, he declares: "Je lui dirai que la vertu n'est le principe d'aucune affaire, d'aucun engagement politique. La vertu est de tous les gouvernements et de toutes les conditions"³³

Modern critics have generally agreed that Montesquieu failed in his attempt to establish a specialized "vertu" motivating the republic. Perhaps the best statement is that of Faguet: "l'amour de la patrie poussé jusqu'à lui sacrifier tout et soi-même n'est pas autre chose que la vertu toute entière"³⁴ Voltaire would have approved of this statement, but with the qualification that "vertu" even in its extended sense could not exclusively motivate any governmental form.

Voltaire takes exception not only to the principles themselves but also to the author's measures for the encouragement of the mœurs supposedly consistent with them. In illustrating the sanctity of the royal person Montesquieu cites from the Histoire byzantine the example of Emperor Basil punishing very lightly sixty conspirators against his life and sentencing to the axe a retainer who cut the royal girdle in order to save his master from being gored to death by a stag.³⁵ Treating this anecdote as a simple extravagance Voltaire retorts: "C'est au président Cousin et au président de Montesquieu à chercher la raison"³⁶ The author of the Esprit des lois refers elsewhere to the cruel punishment meted out by the Areopagus to a man who killed a sparrow seeking refuge in his bosom when pursued by a hawk. The same body sentenced to death a boy who had gouged out the eyes of a pet bird.³⁷ Montesquieu explains that it was not, in these cases, a question of punishing crime "mais d'un jugement de mœurs dans une république fondée sur les mœurs"³⁸ Re-

³¹ Esprit des lois,—"Avertissement de l'auteur," M xxx, p 88

³² Commentaire sur l'Esprit des lois, M xxx, p 426

³³ Supplément au Siècle de Louis XIV, M xiv, pp 138-139.

³⁴ E Faguet, Dix-huitième siècle (Paris, 1901), p. 156 Cf Levi-Malvano, Montesquieu e Machiavelli (Paris, 1912), p 42, where the conclusion reached is "Per lui dunque, malgrado le sottili distinzioni che si studia de stabilire per far inghiottire l'amara pillola, la virtù, base necessaria alla repubblica, è purezza, austerità di costumi, è la virtù tutta intera"³⁵ Esprit des lois, Liv vi, Ch xvi, Lab iii, p 258

³⁶ Commentaire sur l'Esprit des lois, M xxx, p 429.

³⁷ Esprit des lois, Liv v, Ch xix, Lab iii, p 218

³⁸ Ibid

turning directly to the neglected moral issue Voltaire exclaims: " . . . C'est un jugement de mœurs, dit Montesquieu, quelles mœurs! N'y a-t-il pas une dureté de mœurs plus horrible à tuer votie compatriote qu'à tordre le cou à un moineau . . . ?"³⁹ Elsewhere in the Esprit des lois we read: "Lycurgue, mêlant le larcin avec l'esprit de justice, le plus dur esclavage avec l'extrême liberté, les sentiments les plus atroces avec la plus grande modération, donna de la stabilité à sa ville."⁴⁰ Claude Dupin, scandalized, remarks: "L'auteur paraît avoir voulu dire que les Lacédémoniens confondaient les vertus et les vices."⁴¹ Citing this same passage Voltaire declares: " . . . il n'y a point de larcin dans une ville où l'on n'avait nulle propriété pas même celle de sa femme " Referring to the anecdote of the Spartan boy and the fox he adds: " . . . C'est une éducation de Bohême."⁴²

Voltaire found the principles false and non-existent because Montesquieu in his definition had tried to divorce them from their usual moral significance. He condemned the measures for the cultivation of the appropriate mœurs for the same reason, they were unmoral. He recognized in all men from the most primitive to the most cultured the "common denominator of human morality" which he himself accepted.⁴³ Such an idea effectively excludes any theory of civic motivation which admits "vertu sans honneur."⁴⁴ The aristocratic form of government is treated in the Esprit des lois as a compromise form. Its animating principle is "la modération," a quality too ethically sound to draw Voltaire's fire.⁴⁵

Recommending the censorship in certain instances for fostering the appropriate mœurs Montesquieu points out that the Epidamnians placed foreign commerce under the direction of a single officer in order to preserve the purity of their customs.⁴⁶ Voltaire replies that the officer mentioned was a simple broker and adds: " . . . peut-être dira-t-on un jour que c'est pour conserver nos mœurs que nous avons établi la compagnie des Indes "⁴⁷ The author of the Esprit des lois condemns censorship in monarchies however because their foundation is honor " . . . et la nature de l'honneur est d'avoir pour censeur tout l'univers "⁴⁸ Voltaire's reaction is: "Que signifie cette maxime? Tout homme n'a-t-il pas pour censeur l'univers? . . . Les Grecs . . . crurent que l'univers avait les yeux sur eux.

³⁹ Commentaire sur l'Esprit des lois, M. xxx, p. 426

⁴⁰ Esprit des lois, Liv. iv, Ch. vi, Lab. iii, p. 153

⁴¹ Ibid., n

⁴² Commentaire sur l'Esprit des lois, M. xxx, pp. 418-419

⁴³ G. R. Havens, "The Nature Doctrine of Voltaire," PMLA, xl, 854-855.

⁴⁴ Dictionnaire philosophique, M. xix, p. 387

⁴⁵ Esprit des lois, Liv. iii, Ch. iv, Lab. iii, p. 127.

⁴⁶ Ibid.

⁴⁷ Commentaire sur l'Esprit des lois, M. xxx, p. 419

⁴⁸ Esprit des lois, Liv. v, Ch. xix, Lab. iii, p. 218.

Toujours de l'esprit mais ce n'est pas ici sur les lois."⁴⁹ Approving of censorship in a republic in order to correct "une certaine tiédeur dans l'amour de la patrie,"⁵⁰ Montesquieu praises the Jesuit establishment of an Indian Commonwealth in Paraguay "On a voulu faire un crime à la société," he writes, "qui regarde le plaisir de commander comme le seul bien de la vie. Mais il sera toujours beau de gouverner les hommes en les rendant plus heureux."⁵¹ Alleging that the Jesuits flogged the Indians in enforcing a sort of communism, Voltaire refers to their methods as "honteuse pédanterie" and terminates with the remark: "Mais les Jésuites étaient encore puissants quand Montesquieu écrivait"⁵²

In his reaction to a passage of the Contrat social, which recalls the case of the Paraguay Indians, Voltaire has expressed still clearer convictions on this point. When Rousseau speaks of a " . . . profession de foi purement civile dont il appartient au souverain de fixer les articles, sans lesquels il est impossible d'être bon citoyen ni sujet fidèle,"⁵³ Voltaire's note, written opposite the passage in his own copy of the Contrat social, defines concretely the vice inherent in censorship: "Tout dogme est ridicule, funeste. Toutte (sic) contrainte sur le dogme est abominable. Ordonner de croire est absurde. Bornez-vous à ordonner de bien vivre."⁵⁴

Thus the author of the Essai sur les mœurs rejects censorship as a means of keeping the government consistent with its alleged principle. His dislike of the principles themselves is consistent with his general aversion to metaphysics. In a straight look at the functioning of monarchy Voltaire writes: "une mouche est monarque des animalicules qu'elle dévore, l'araignée est monarque des mouches, . . . ; l'hirondelle domine sur les araignées, les pies-grièches mangent les hirondelles, cela ne finit point. Vous ne disconviez point que les fermiers généraux nous mangent. Le monde est ainsi fait depuis qu'il existe."⁵⁵ Of a similar frankness is his picture of the republic which is not founded on "vertu" but "sur l'orgueil qui réprime, sur le désir de dominer qui ne souffre pas qu'un autre domine,"⁵⁶ an institution in which " . . . l'esprit de propriété, l'am-

⁴⁹ Commentaire sur l'Esprit des lois, M xxx, p 427.

⁵⁰ Epsrit des lois, Liv v, Ch xix, Lab iii, p 218

⁵¹ Ibid, Liv. iv, Ch ii, Lab vi, p 155

⁵² Commentaire sur l'Esprit des lois, M xxx, p 419

⁵³ J J Rousseau, Le Contrat social, Oeuvres complètes de J J Rousseau (Hachette, 1913), iii, 388

⁵⁴ G R. Havens, Voltaire's Marginalia on the Pages of Rousseau (Ohio State University Press, Columbus, 1933), citing marginal note of Voltaire in his copy of the Contrat social, Rey, 1762, p 313 in the Voltaire Library at Leningrad

⁵⁵ Lettre à Monsieur Gin, 20 juin 1777, M L, p 236

⁵⁶ Pensées sur le gouvernement, M. xxiii, p 531.

bition de chaque particulier ont été un frein à l'ambition et à l'esprit de rapine."⁵⁷ What is a republic? "C'est une société où des convives, d'un appétit égal, mangent à la même table jusqu'à ce qu'il vienne un homme vorace et vigoureux qui prenne tout pour lui et leur laisse les miettes."⁵⁸

Voltaire felt that the principles in the Esprit des lois were too theoretical and too remote from the problem of human betterment. He would probably approve of any government founded on human nature and on the moral sense of mankind. When the principles, "crainte," "honneur" and "vertu" are related to particular governmental forms rather than to the nature of the people to be governed, he thinks of them as mere Euclidian generalizations. He abhors indoctrination by censorship because it is inimical to the desire for freedom. In the field of politics as elsewhere the author of the Commentaire thinks of man as the measure of all things.

For the interpretation of Montesquieu one finds Voltaire's criticisms helpful. "La philosophie de l'Esprit des lois," writes Brunetière, "a quelquefois besoin d'être corrigée par la philosophie de l'Essai sur les mœurs."⁵⁹

E. H. PRICE

Mississippi State College

⁵⁷ Dictionnaire philosophique, M. XIX, p. 387.

⁵⁸ Pensées sur le gouvernement, M. XXIII, p. 531.

⁵⁹ Ferdinand Brunetière, Etudes critiques sur l'histoire de la littérature française, 4e série, (Paris, 1894), p. 262.

SMOLLETT'S PAMPHLETEERING FOE SHEBBEARE

ON November 28, 1760, when Smollett entered the King's Bench Prison, he must have looked forward with some misgiving to spending a period of three months in the same gaol with his old enemy "Doctor" Shebbeare, who on that day had served two years of his three-year term. These two writers had been at loggerheads ever since Smollett's vitriolic reviews of the "Letters to the People of England" began to appear in the Critical Review. And now Smollett had offended again by putting a caricature of Shebbeare in The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves, the novel that had been running in the 1760 numbers of the British Magazine. Thomas Seccombe's placing of Smollett's imprisonment in the early summer of 1759,¹ which will now have to be given up, encouraged the view that the first part of Sir Launcelot Greaves was written in the King's Bench.² Seccombe believed that it was on one of his visits to Smollett in prison that Newbery engaged his services for the British Magazine. That Shebbeare, the model of Ferret in Sir Launcelot Greaves, was at hand to be observed, seemed to strengthen this assumption and to lead one to suppose that perhaps Smollett had let fall a hint about the nature of the novel he was writing and received from his fellow prisoner a response as crabbed as the remarks with which Ferret greeted Sir Launcelot.³ But

¹ D N B "Smollett"

² Harold Stein, "Smollett's Imprisonment," LTLS, May 5, 1927 establishes the exact date of the trial as Nov. 24, 1760. This is supported by Sir William Blackstone, Reports of Cases determined in the Several Courts of Westminster-Hall from 1746 to 1779 (London, 1828), I, 268, who lists Smollett's trial as the last in the Michaelmas term of 1760. Claude E. Jones, in his recent Smollett Studies, University of California Publications in English, Vol. 9, No. 2 (1942), prints Blackstone's report of the case, but (failing to note the date) is led to the false conclusion that Smollett served his term in the interval between his letter from Chelsea, dated Oct. 12, 1759 and Feb. 21, 1760, the date (according to Jones) of William Huggins's letter congratulating him on the "Restoration to his dear Liberty" (see pp. 87-88). But Smollett could not have been in the Southwark gaol at this period, for he wrote from Chelsea on Oct. 30, 1759, Dec. 14, 1759 and Feb. 4, 1760. Moreover, the Huggins letter, which is printed in L. F. Powell's "William Huggins and Tobias Smollett," MP, Nov., 1936, xxxiv, is actually dated Feb. 21, 1761. Smollett's answer to it (also printed by Powell) is from Chelsea, is dated Feb. 25, 1761, and has this postscript: "I offer my best Respects to Mrs. Gatehouse, not forgetting our kind Landlord of Wallop, whose Generosity made the Bells of Chelsea ring at my Deliverance." The last two dates reveal the interesting fact that Smollett did not have to serve out his full term, but was released some time before Feb. 28, 1761, when his three months would have been completed.

Jones, ibid., p. 93, refers twice to Shebbeare as Thomas Shebbeare, but in the appendix he appears with his correct given name, John.

³ Ch. II "What! you set up for a modern Don Quixote? The scheme is rather stale and extravagant. What was a humorous romance and well-timed satire in Spain near these are false assumptions. By putting imaginary objections in the mouth of Ferret, who never spoke well of anything, Smollett merely hoped to forestall criticism of his novel. Only the last installments of the narrative could have been written in prison.⁴

Just how the two splenetic prisoners behaved toward each other is not known, although there was certainly no reconciliation. Both were so busy with literary projects that it is not likely that they wasted any time quarrelling, yet Smollett for one would not have backed down before a threat of any kind. Long before Smollett entered the prison Shebbeare had plotted his revenge. It was an effort that revealed the man. He would beat his foe at his own game by writing a history so wonderful that Smollett would be ashamed to own his History of England. The projected magnum opus would include the study of man, the origin of laws, the comparison of institutions, and determine which form of government would be "consentaneous" with "the primogenial institutes of nature, and the happiness of human kind." The Doctor solicited subscriptions but the subscribers never saw the work. It was never published. He was sorry to disappoint them, but he had, he said, contracted a debt.⁵ Besides the prison did not afford the right reference books. He had been misled by relying on modern historians "who pretend to cite the authors from which their materials are taken," but he now knew that many of them instead of examining the authorities had simply copied one another's books. Because of this and because of their misrepresentations and omissions, these histories are manifestly defective. In other words, the chief reason that Shebbeare could not write his history was that other men's histories, especially Smollett's, were bad.

The inability to capture even a part of the grandiose dream of the projected history and the accomplishment, modest as it may be, represented by that part of Sir Launcelot Greaves written in prison indicate how far apart the two prisoners in the King's Bench were in ability. However on the level of the political journalism of that day the difference between a creative artist and a writer who was merely vehement and vituperative was not always obvious.

* * *

two hundred years ago, will make but a sorry jest, and appear equally insipid and absurd when really acted upon affectation, at this time of day, in a country like England."

⁴ Seccombe, ibid, "Scott relates that Smollett while engaged upon this work was at Paxton in Berwickshire on a visit to George Home. When post time drew near he retired for an hour to scribble off the necessary amount of copy." This must refer to the first part of the novel only.

⁵ He tried to vindicate his conduct in An Answer to the Queries contained in a Letter to Dr. Shebbeare, printed in the Public Ledger, Aug. 10, 1774, which was reviewed in the Monthly Review, Jan. 1775, 31-35, LII. Here he promised "not to die" until his history was completed.

Just how much of the account of Shebbeare's youth is legend there is now no way of knowing, but according to report the Devonshire boy was as mischievous and vindictive as Roderick Random or Peregrine Pickle, and much like them in other particulars.⁶ As a student in the free school at Exeter he was noted for a malicious and ungrateful temper. It is said that by the time he left the school he had lost all his friends, save one, a young barber of "abandoned character" who alone was congenial to him. Yet his wit and memory were considered remarkable. In short, his traits were such as to give evidence of his "future eminence in misanthropy and literature."

Like Roderick Random the young Shebbeare was apprenticed to his Dr. Crab and proceeded to make life tough for the poor surgeon, who made attempts but was never entirely successful in catching his tormentor red-handed or making an accusation stick. The sly apprentice also exercised his wit and malignity on the Exeter magistrates. He displayed libels against the corporation at street corners and on public posts. Many citizens were afraid of him for they had heard that he would not be offended without revenge. The authorities went to some pains to find evidence sufficiently convincing to cause the culprit to be punished but were no more successful than the surgeon. But tricking one's master and lampooning the city fathers is no way to gain support if one is setting up for oneself, as Shebbeare was soon to do. Whether the cause was the shifting of his interest from surgery to chemistry, or his wish to marry immediately, or a pressing need for money, or a combination of all three, is not known, but he decided not to wait for his medical degree.⁷ The wife he took is described as "an amiable girl of genteel family but with no money."⁸

⁶ The most authoritative and complete biographical sketch is the article written by Gerald Le Grys Norgate for the Dictionary of National Biography. Some of the material for this sketch came from An Account of the Life and Writings of Dr. John Shebbeare, European Magazine, Aug., 1788, 83-87, 167-168, xrv, which was written at the time of Shebbeare's death by an unknown author. Further Particulars Concerning Dr. J. Shebbeare, from a correspondent, in the same volume of the European (pp. 244-245), also anonymous, throws some light on Shebbeare's youth. The author of Allibone's article on Shebbeare states that the first European Magazine sketch was published separately and was "practically transferred" to Chalmer's Biographical Dictionary. References to sources other than these listed in this footnote will be indicated.

⁷ The fortunes of the family declined with the death of the father, who left his son but a slender sum. For a while the mother carried on the corn-factoring business, but this at length failed and the widow was removed to King's Bench Prison, where she died. Later one of Shebbeare's sisters died in London. Another died at Bideford in great poverty, it is said.

⁸ The marriage must have been in 1733, when Shebbeare was twenty-four, if his own account of the years he gave to Mrs. Burney was correct. In the Early Diary of Frances Burney, Feb. 20, 1774, he said of his wife, "I think I have been yoked for one and forty

In the house in Bideford, where he set up as doctor, he must have spent more time with chemicals than with patients. It is said that he etched a remarkable landscape on one window pane and on others scratched sentences that had "every tendency except what was good."⁹ The squandering of what little money he had on chemical experiments to discover "the grand arcanum to make gold ad libidum" and the lack of patients to bring him more forced him to leave his native town. His departure in 1736 was, it seems, regretted by no one. He never saw Bideford again, but there is a passage in Lydia (1755)¹⁰ that shows that while in London he had fits of something like homesickness. At the conclusion of an idyllic description of Probit Castle in its setting of river and sea and gardens he writes, "Oh! native soil! When shall these eyes again behold thee? Will Heaven, propitious to my vows, waft me at length to this delicious land of bliss, there to behold the setting sun of life go down in brightness and tranquillity upon gray hairs and ease?"¹¹

In Bristol he formed a partnership with a chemist. Perhaps alchemist would be more exact since the chief object of the experiments performed seems to have been the discovery of the philosopher's stone. Shebbeare must also have tried to beat up a practice. There evidently were hard times. Nothing is known of them unless Smollett's account of Ferret as a mountebank is founded on fact, as is likely. In Sir Launcelot Greaves when Tom Clarke threatens Ferret, he is described as brandishing a gridiron with such uncommon dexterity that people supposed that before he had plunged into politics "he had occasionally figured in the character of that facetious droll who accompanies your itinerant physicians, under the familiar appellation of Merry-Andrew, or Jack-Pudding, and on a wooden stage entertains the populace with a solo on the salt-box, or a sonata on the tongs and gridiron."¹² A few pages further on Smollett has Ferret use some of the terms of alchemy in his harangue about the Elixir of Long Life he is selling. Whether by such labors or by practicing medicine, or by both, Shebbeare managed to live in Bristol for the next twelve years. He even found time to write a poem,¹³ and publish an analysis of the Bristol waters.¹⁴ Moreover he became interested in politics to the exyears, and I have wished my wife under ground any time since." The marriage was an unhappy one, although there was a son and two daughters. Shebbeare posed as a woman hater being in this respect like Dr. Akenside.

⁹ Cf. the doggerel verses in "abuse of the Scotch nation" that Jerry Melford pointed out to Lismahago and Matthew Bramble in Humphrey Clinker. ¹⁰ Ch. ci.

¹¹ The subject of this description was probably not Bideford, but the old family seat in South Devon where a hundred and a village bear the name of Shebbeare. The description is somewhat like Smollett's picture of the House of Cameron on Loch Lomond in Humphrey Clinker. ¹² Ch. iv.

¹³ "Epitaph in Memory of Thomas Coster, member for Bristol," printed in the European Magazine, Aug., 1788. ¹⁴ 1740. Second ed. 1760.

tent of striking up friendships with some of the Bolingbroke Tories, or the allied "Patriots," who resided in Bristol ¹⁵

He must have left Bristol in 1750 or shortly thereafter. In 1752 he went to Paris where he claimed to have obtained a medical degree and to have been elected member of the Academy of Sciences. How long he was in France is not known, but it could not have been more than several months. According to Norgate, on his return he settled in London and began his career as a political writer. However, if the account he gives of himself and his wife in the Memoirs of a Lady of Quality (1751) is based on fact, and it seems that it is, the Shebbeares must have been in London a year or two before 1751.

In the Memoirs a Dr. S—— is one of two physicians summoned to attend Lady Vane. One despaired of her life and took his leave, but "Dr S——, who was the other, persisted in his attendance, and, in all human appearance, saved my life, a circumstance by which he acquired a great share of reputation," wrote the author ¹⁶ Later when stricken in Lille she sent for a physician "who seemed to have been a disciple of Sangrado" for he bled her white without helping her any.¹⁷ The same Dr. S—— was shocked to see her so ill on her return to London. He thought her illness due to her calamities, and prescribed undisturbed rest. Soon she recovered, as she said, "by the great skill and tenderness of my doctor, who now finding me strong enough to encounter fresh troubles, endeavored to persuade me, that it would be my wisest step to return to my husband, whom at that time he had often occasion to see." She rejected his advice, but later he again urged her to return to Lord Vane. "The Doctor," she writes, "was my friend, and a man of sense, for whom I have the most perfect esteem, though he and I have often differed in point of opinion." Not even Lady Vane, it seems, could always agree with Shebbeare.

The Memoirs continues with an account of how Dr. S—— and his wife, in accord with a promise, visited Lady Vane, who had finally agreed to try to live with her husband at a country house near Tunbridge. In the night Lord Vane entered his lady's room with a naked sword under his arm. The doctor's wife was so startled that she ran half-clothed into Lady Vane's chamber. The lord explained that his intention was to kill bats with the sword, but the doctor's wife was not convinced, and considering that she and her husband were the principal cause of Lady ¹⁵ In 1755 he dedicated Lydia to Mr. William Borrow, merchant of Bristol. It is said that the Monitor, a paper for which Shebbeare wrote, was originally planned by Richard Beckford, late member for Bristol. The Monitor was an Anti-Whig paper. See the Critical Review, Nov., 1756, 343-348, II.

¹⁶ Just after this, Dr. S—— was called in the night to attend to one of Lady Vane's lovers, Lord B——, whom he found "almost suffocated."

¹⁷ Probably a doctor would be more likely to know Sangrado than Lady Vane.

Vane's returning to her husband, she sat up with that unhappy female the rest of the night Dr S—— expostulated with Vane and brought Lady Vane back to London himself

In the Bond-Street house Lady Vane avers that she was allowed to see no one except an "old male friend" and the "doctor with his lady, from whose conversation also I was at last excluded."¹⁸ Evidently the doctor's lady could no longer assist her husband in his furthering of Vane's plans, and said so "The doctor exhorted me to bear my fate with patience, and Mrs S—— was silent on the subject " But soon the Doctor himself could bear no more of Vane's jealous tormenting, and had such a violent quarrel with him that his eyes were finally opened to Vane's hypocrisy

This curious account of the Doctor's relations with the Vanes does not have the ring of pure invention From it and other likely suppositions it is safe to conclude that Shebbeare was in reality Lady Vane's physician ¹⁹ Consequently the Shebbeares must have left Bristol sooner than was previously supposed. Moreover it seems likely that without Lady Vane's payment to him for his editorial assistance with the Memoirs, his trip to Paris which came just after Peregrine Pickle was published, would have been impossible

When Smollett was advertising that the only genuine memoirs of Lady Vane were forthcoming in a work of his, he must have known that Shebbeare was helping her with them. Indeed, it is likely that the publication of the Memoirs had been arranged through Shebbeare. Melville states that Smollett knew him at this time, but he does not cite his authority.²⁰ Shebbeare seems to have known so much about the assembly of Grubs that frequented Monmouth House, Chelsea, that one is tempted to believe that he himself had visited there either as guest or as consultant. But one looks in vain for his figure among the Grubs described in Humphrey Clinker. The abusiveness of Dick Ivy, which might get him "a post or a pillory," suggests Shebbeare, but the similarity is superficial. The same can be said of "Lord" Potatoe, the slippery pamphleteer. But the Grubs' lack of gratitude for Smollett's help and favors, and their resenting the judgments of the Critical Review, as well as the "anonymous libels, letters, and lampoons" with which they sought to avenge themselves, are not only redolent of the dour Grub-street spirit but suggest the Shebbeare of the Occasional Critic. In this passage Dick Ivy is made to say that although Smollett "pretended to have a knack at hitting off characters, he blundered strangely in the distribution of his favours." Doubtless, as Smollett wrote Humphrey Clinker, he thought of Shebbeare as one of the persons he had befriended or assisted and who repaid him with ingratitude or enmity. "If you pick up a diverting original by accident," Matthew Bramble warns, "it may be dangerous to amuse yourself with his oddities: he is generally a tartar at bottom, a sharper, a spy, or a lunatic."

¹⁸ This sentence was added in the revised edition of Peregrine Pickle (1758), which was the work of Lady Vane and Smollett Shebbeare was in the toils of the law at that time

¹⁹ Howard S Buck, A Study in Smollett, chiefly Peregrine Pickle (1925), p. 47, writes, "The Memoirs themselves make it almost certain that Dr Shebbeare was in fact Lady Vane's physician " Buck suggests that Lady Vane may be the patron mentioned in the preface of the Regicide (1749) and the lady of fashion in Melopyn's story in Roderick Random She had interceded for Mr Hunter of Burnsyde, a Scotch refugee Smollett saw in France in 1750 But it is not likely that Smollett fell in love with her, or, like Peregrine in the novel, thought of falling in love with her. Yet Peregrine's reason for not doing so, the fate of her former lovers, "who seemed to have been wound up to a degree of enthusiasm, that looked more like the effect of enchantment than the inspiration of human attractions an ecstasy of passion he durst not venture to undergo," might well have been what held Smollett back

²⁰ Lewis Melville [Lewis S. Benjamin], The Life and Letters of T. Smollett (1721-1771), (1926), p. 60. "If, however, as it is said, Lady Vane in the composition of the Memoirs was assisted by Dr John Shebbeare, that very pedestrian political writer, then, as Smollett knew Shebbeare, perhaps the mystery [about the authorship of the Memoirs] is explained

* * *

Most of the mystery surrounding the authorship of the Memoirs has been cleared up in spite of the astonishing unreliability of some of Lady Vane's biographers and the reticence of Smollett on the subject.²¹ For example, the obituary notice in the Gentleman's Magazine got Lady Vane mixed up with a Lady Fane. A subsequent article²² corrects this mistake but makes others. The author of an anonymous pamphlet, A Parallel between the Characters of Lady Frail and the Lady of Quality in "Peregrine Pickle" (1751), assuming that Smollett is the author of the Memoirs and Dr. John Hill the author of Lady Frail, attacks the former and praises the latter.²³ One should be careful, he writes, not to offend either of these ²¹ Howard S. Buck, op. cit., shows that the evidence supports the view that Lady Vane wrote the Memoirs, paid Shebbeare for editorial advice and paid Smollett for inserting them in Peregrine Pickle. Lewis Melville and E. A. Baker both follow Buck.

²² I.e., Gentleman's Magazine, May, 1788, 379. LVIII Pt. I. This refers to the article in the April number and asserts that Lady Vane actually wrote the Memoirs herself and "superintended the press" while they were printing. The writer evidently confuses Lady Vane with Teresa Constantia Phillips, who printed her Apology (1748) herself. His assertion that "in beauty of composition" the Memoirs are "superior to the rest of the work" is merely an echo of an advertisement which had appeared in the Royal Magazine and Quarterly Bee, 1751, 466, II, "The Adventures of Peregrine Pickle. In which are included Memoirs of a Lady of Quality (supposed to be Lady Vane) which are most elegantly wrote, and, greatly outshine the rest of the work." It is not unlikely that Shebbeare had a hand in this advertisement.

²³ Ralph Griffiths, who published this, must have known that Hill wrote the Adventures of Lady Frail and that the pamphlet helped Hill in his quarrel with Smollett. Griffiths

"formidable gentlemen" Of course, Smollett could never have written such a shambling and repetitious narrative

John Hill knew that this was so In the *Inspector*²⁴ attacking Smallhead (i.e. Smollett) Hill represents a trio of fashionable ladies "in the autumn of their beauty" appearing before the tribunal of Fame, Learning, Genius and the Arts. They ask the tribunal its judgment concerning their Apologies for their Lives "Genius told them that they had better repent than brag of lives that it was a shame to have lived" The tribunal then ordered their books burned "What astonished me was," writes Hill, "that this mortification did not produce one blush from either of the fair Authors. As they passed by me, my Companion told me, that the first of these Apologists was a Lady of Quality, the second an English, and the third an Irish Prostitute of note"²⁵

In another *Inspector*²⁶ he writes that after the appearance of the Adventures of Lady Frail, which was attributed to him, he had the "honour to receive about fifty second-hand messages, by the mouth of a very eminent and learned physician of [his] acquaintance, from a celebrated Lady, who supposed herself treated a little too freely in that performance" These could be none other than Shebbeare and Lady Vane Hill, considering the messages as "little less than challenges" seemed to fear a personal attack but wrote that he received from his fair enemy nothing but "looks that would have pierced a heart, a soul of ice, or adamant"

The Memoirs are obviously her work. The detailed description of costume, the psychology of vanity, jealousy, love, fidelity and infidelity are published a collection of Hill's "Inspectors" Isaac Disraeli, Calamities and Quarrels of Authors, 192, II, remarks that the Monthly Reviewer "writes with the tenderness of a brother of whatever relates to our hero" (i.e., Hill)

The author of A Parallel, etc mentions a "Lady who in a manner lays claim to the whole merit of, at least, one of these two noble performances" and thinks that the world may conclude from the similarity of the two stories "that it can be only Modesty that prevents her declaring she has an equal Right to both" The reference, of course, is to Lady Vane Her cause was championed by An Apology for the Conduct of a Lady of Quality, lately traduced under the name of Lady Frail, an anonymous pamphlet which the Monthly Review, July, 1751, 157, v, calls "a low, trifling, catch-penny performance"

²⁴ No 14 in the collection of "Inspectors" published in 1751.

²⁵ The reference seems to be to Lady Vane, who wrote the Memoirs (1751), Teresia Constantia Phillips, who wrote and printed An Apology for the Conduct of Mrs Teresia Constantia Phillips (1748) and Laetitia Pilkington, who wrote her Memoirs (1748) Hill's disdain was hypocritical for he wrote his Letters from the Inspector to a Lady, with the genuine Answers (1752) in imitation The letters in the novel are supposed to be genuine and to picture a real love affair between Hill himself and a Mrs D—— A lady who was supposed to be this Mrs D—— advertised in the papers that the letters were not hers hers, as are the story and the language. In going over her manuscript, which he did so carelessly that Smollett in the revision of 1758 had to transpose and amplify freely to make the story hang together, Shebbeare slipped in a little effusion of his own and occasionally added a caricatural stroke to the description of a character.²⁷ As he did not show Lady Vane how to build the story up to a climax, the narrative is flat and repetitious. But he could never build a plot himself, as his novels were soon to demonstrate

²⁶ No 24 in the collection printed in 1753

Her chief motive for writing was to vindicate her conduct. Yet she did not feel that her guilt was very deep. When Melville²⁸ asks whether she wished to publish her "shame" in this "scandalous manner" he simply is not seeing the affair as she saw it, or many of her sentimental friends saw it. Smollett has her say that people of delicacy and understanding would see that she was by nature a faithful wife and excuse "the tenderness which youth and sensibility . . . could not possibly resist."²⁹ So confident was she that the Memoirs would explain her conduct in a favorable way that she actually handed the book to Lord Vane himself to read.³⁰ Consequently, Howard S. Buck's assertion that Smollett was not such a mean character as to repay the confidence of the Vanes (supposing him to be the Dr. S—— of the Memoirs) by publishing the Memoirs is irrelevant. "On the other hand," he writes, "it is perfectly easy to believe just that of Dr. Shebbeare . . . a scurrilous and unprincipled hack-writer, who was pilloried six years later."³¹ But Shebbeare betrayed no confidence. No one took advantage of Lady Vane. She had a cause and a case of cacoethes scribendi. Her intention was to write an apology like "Con" Phillips's or Laetitia Pilkington's, and she did

* * *

The scandalous success of the Memoirs must have encouraged Shebbeare to go on with writing. He decided to attack Lord Hardwicke's Marriage Act, which had just been enacted in 1753. His interest in works such as Jonathan Wild and Roderick Random induced him to choose the novel instead of the pamphlet as his vehicle. To curry favor he dedicated his novel, The Marriage Act (1754), to the Duke of Bedford, an enemy of ²⁷ E.g., the apostrophe to Envy beginning, "O baleful Envy" is in his vein, as is also the odd sketch of Lord Vane on his first appearance. Lady Vane's sense of humor must have been very masculine or certain scenes are Shebbeare's. e.g. the scene in which Lady Vane locks her husband in a room at Bath. When he screams in fright she remarks that she cannot imagine the cause of his panic unless "he thought I designed to ravish him, an insult, than which nothing was further from my intention." ²⁸ Lewis Melville, op. cit.

²⁹ Peregrine Pickle, Lord——'s reply to Lady Vane's question about her motives for publishing the Memoirs. ³⁰ See the Gentleman's Magazine, May, 1788, 461, LVIII.

³¹ H. S. Buck, op. cit., p. 44.

the bill To gain attention he made some extremely free reflections on the Legislature Since to publish books reflecting on the proceedings of the House was a violation of its rights and prerogatives, a warrant for taking Shebbeare into custody was issued and executed a few days after the novel appeared However, he was soon released but had to appear before the court twice a term³² for a certain period The government thought best to let the matter quietly drop Doubtless upon investigation it was found that Shebbeare was not important either on his own account or on account of his political backers The reviewers hinted that he was at this time looking for a patron and was not overly scrupulous about the exact shade of politics he would defend if given the right encouragement

He understood perfectly and was quite willing to take advantage of the reluctance of the authorities to prosecute under the censorship laws In Humphrey Clinker Smollett, with a disdainful glance at Shebbeare, explains why these laws were largely disused and when applied were often ineffective³³ Bramble asks Mr. Barton why a certain minister attacked in the press did not vindicate himself "And pray, sir," said Mr. Barton, "what steps would you have him take? Suppose he should prosecute the publisher, who screens the anonymous accuser, and bring him to the pillory for a libel, this is so far from being counted a punishment, interrorem, that it will probably make his fortune. The multitude immediately take him into their protection, as a martyr to the cause of defamation, which they have always espoused—they pay his fine, they contribute to the increase of his stock All this time the prosecutor is inveighed against as a tyrant and oppressor."³⁴

Consequently Shebbeare's first clash with the authorities did not dash

³² There is a reference in Lydia to this and to one of the main contentions of The Marriage Act that is, that the Act encourages immorality Shebbeare describes the notorious Mother Douglas as defending prostitution in these words. "Who speaks against it, but a parson or two, and a novel writer, who is so simple a fellow, as to wish there were no w—s in the world A fine fellow to judge of laws, indeed! But our wise —y [Ministry] knew the good consequence of having a great number of girls upon the town, and therefore that fellow who wrote the Marriage Act, is punished for writing against it, by shewing his face twice a term amongst the greatest scoundrels of the city, who are brought there also for other notorious crimes A fit punishment for his daring to speak against the propagation of fine girls, and so wise an adm—tion!" [administration].

³³ Matthew Bramble's letter of June 2 from London

³⁴ Charles Johnstone in Crysal, or, the Adventures of a Guinea (1760–65), III, Ch XLVI, had both Shebbeare and these conditions in mind when he has Churchill's publisher say, "Fools may be frightened at the thoughts of a cart's-tail or a pillory, I know better things When they come in a popular cause, nothing sets a man's name up to such advantage, and that is the first step toward making a fortune, as for the danger, it is a mere bug-bear, while the mob is on my side And, therefore I will go on without fear, if I am not bought off. A pension or a pillory is the word" "Former occasions," in III, ch. LII, p. 204, refers to Shebbeare's trial before Pratt his spirits in the least. On the contrary, the attention he received seemed to exhilarate him. He made up his mind to exploit his nuisance value. Early in the spring of 1755 he published Letters on the English Nation, a farrago of attacks on the Whig ministry, personal lampoons and abusive assaults on the Duke of Newcastle.³⁵ In a month or two his Practice of Physic,³⁶ which he must have been preparing for a long time, was published. This is a curious and characteristic book. To establish his own importance the Doctor uses most of the first volume to try to destroy the prestige of the most reputable medical men of his day. Then he assigns himself a position of equality to the great men of the past by remarking that had Harvey and Newton been alive to see the effects of electricity, they would have shared with him the honors of his discoveries. Perhaps he should have confined himself to the singular, since his one great discovery, that the presence of fire in the human system and its excess or deficiency explain the causes of disease, renders other discoveries unnecessary.

The reviewer for the *Monthly*³⁷ felt that this display of arrogance and scientific inaccuracy called for a rebuke. He must have been a medical man since he felt himself qualified to pronounce certain of the treatments advised by Shebbeare "more pernicious than salutary." Shebbeare, he declares, is "more exuberant than correct" and has "less discovery than disquisition." "He is not to be classed among dull, heavy scrawlers: having more fancy than judgment, and more virulence and vanity than most writers we have met with on any subject Not content to instruct meek [?] pupils as a professor, he pronounces like an oracle, with confidence of rectifying the whole faculty And these sudden documents are the more extraordinary from our author, as the time and place of his institution and graduation in physic are not generally known in London, and, we hear, have been questioned at Paris ³⁸

³⁵ Letters on the English Nation by Batista Angeloni, a Jesuit who resided many years in London. Translated from the original Italian, by the author of the Marriage Act, a Novel 2v (1755). The reviewer in the Monthly Review, Monthly Catalogue for April and May, 1755, 387-388, xii, calls this book a piratical or counterfeit imitation of Voltaire's and LeBlanc's letters concerning the English nation, and declares that it is no translation. He believes that the heart of the author was as instrumental as his head in choosing a Jesuit for his title and adds that the author's "rancorous, insolent dogmatical turn" disgusts the most candid reader.

³⁶ The Practice of Physic: Founded on principles in physiology and pathology, hitherto unapplied in physical enquiries. By John Shebbeare, M.D. reg. acad. scient. Paris. soc. In two volumes. 1755.

³⁷ Monthly Review, May, 1755, 401-402, xii. This article is not listed in Benjamin C. Nangle's The Monthly Review First Series, 1749-89, Indexes of Contributors and Articles (Oxford, 1934). There are only three Shebbeare items in this book. They are The Occasional Critic, Oct. 1757, 367-374, xvii, by Owen Ruffhead; Answer to the Queries, Jan. 1775, 31-35, lii, by Andrew Kippis; and Letter to the People of England, March, 1760, 235-239, xxii, by Owen Ruffhead. The last pamphlet is so different from the other "Letters to the People of England" that attribution to Shebbeare is questionable. Nowhere else is it listed as his. If it is his he must have written it in the King's Bench. Yet it is not likely that he would have had the pamphlet printed, as it was, by Ralph Griffiths, who was at that time his enemy. However the chief idea set forth in the work, that England should put an immediate end to the war and obtain an advantageous peace by making payments to the Court of Vienna, the Elector of Saxony, and perhaps the French, resembles in some respects Shebbeare's opinion in the matter.

Shebbeare was touched on a very tender spot He could overlook being called an egoist and a quack, but he could never forgive a person who informed all London that he was an empiric without a degree For the third time Ralph Griffiths had printed a sharp criticism of one of his writings Although his second novel was almost finished, he made room in it for an attack on Griffiths, the Monthly Review and the supposed author of the criticism of The Practice of Physic ³⁹

This author is represented as a refugee French doctor in Soho, who, for a guinea, takes a note from the light-headed Vainlove to Lydia ⁴⁰ The doctor is a small contemptible creature who thinks a big wig essential to the dignity of his calling "For which reason his head is covered with as much hair, as would, were it straw, thatch a cottage, and through this integument he peeps, like King Charles in the sigh of the Royal Oak, a small face surrounded with a wood of leaves" Although his understanding is awry, he sets up for a critic of philosophy and literature He is "a sample of Dutch ignorance, grafted on French self-sufficiency, being of the education of the first, and race of the last. These ill-grounded pretensions, together with the meanness of his heart, have rendered him the contempt and ridicule of all who know him" Vainlove found him at his quarters in Thr——ft Street as he was "translating the original criticisms of his J-r-l Br-t-n-q-e from the trite observations of the Monthly Review." The doctor himself helps the great "cannon" Mr. —— and the great Mr —— and his lady write the Review ⁴¹

³⁸ The reviewer adds that there is much unquoted borrowing in the book, that the author parades his learning in medicine and his taste in painting and statuary and "in brief, like Bayes, with his thunder and lightning, is for terrifying the town into their applause of himself, and himself only" Indeed the book "contains the least self-knowledge, the least candor, or good-manners, of any treatise that has lately fallen under our consideration"

³⁹ The dedication of Lydia; or, Filial Piety is dated May 30, 1755 It was reviewed in the Monthly Review, June, 1755, 478, xii In the May number Griffiths gave brief notices of two pamphlets written in defense of Richard Blacow, who is attacked in Lydia as one of the Monthly Reviewers ⁴⁰ Lydia, or, Filial Piety, Ch. lxxxix

⁴¹ The cardinal principle of the Review, according to the French doctor, is that writers who send copies of their books to the editor are good, and those who do not are fools The doctor himself, however, writes the reviews for his journal without reading any books

Shebbeare writes, "It seems that he,⁴² B——w,⁴³ and others form the alliance which produces the Monthly Review ⁴⁴ This accounts for the singular criticisms which are to be found in it, a dignified informer, a French refugee, and a renegado to the Church of England, an excellent triumvirate of criticks indeed. By these means, whatever attacks the infamy of the first, and supports our Constitution, is sure to meet defamation, the latter prefers translations from the French to our own language, and the last, all that is immoral, impious, schismatical, and against the established Church, to truth and righteousness This discovery partly accounts for all the absurd misrepresentations of that Review, but, indeed, the world now judges diametrically opposite to their decisions, and never fails purchasing the books they dispraise This is my rule, and the approbation of the world confirms this truth "

Shebbeare brought his lampoon to a close by making fun of Dr Maty's scientific interests and honors He declared that the Royal Society chose the Doctor because he was the most singular thing in the world and in ⁴² The French doctor is Dr Matthew Maty (1718-76), physician, author of the Journal Britannique, editor of Chesterfield's Miscellaneous Works (1777), librarian of the British Museum, and foreign secretary of the Royal Society He frequented a club of physicians, was a friend of Sloane, and helped Gibbon with his Essay on the Study of Literature Although his articles in the Journal were just and fair, some of them aroused the anger of Dr Johnson When Maty was proposed as a suitable assistant in a projected literary journal, Johnson exclaimed, "The little black dog! I'd throw him in the Thames first " In his review of the Rambler (Journal Britannique, April, 1751, 363) Maty wrote

On ne change point le talent
Qu'on reçut du Ciel en partage
Jamais C-bb-r ne sera sage,
Ni J-hns-n ne sera plaisant

He added that perhaps a little more vivacity and "d'enjouement" would help the Rambler Although he praised the Dictionary (Journal Britannique, July-August, 1755, 218 ff) he thought that if Johnson had used the old dedication he would have saved himself the trouble of writing a new one, which "on est tenté de regarder comme destinée à faire perdre de vue quelques unes des obligations que M Johnson avoit contractées, et le Mécène qu'il s'étoit choisi "

⁴³ B——w is Richard Blacow, M A F R S (1723?-60) He aroused Shebbeare's enmity when in 1747 he helped bring to trial some rioting Jacobite gownsmen of Oxford When in 1755 he was made Canon of Windsor, his enemies charged that his preferment was due to his activities as an informer In the Monthly Review, May, 1755, 395-396, xii, there are brief notices of two pamphlets, one by Blacow himself, defending his conduct The only other writing he did for Griffiths, a review of a translation from the Hebrew, appeared in the June number of this year The reviewer of a pamphlet attacking Blacow, An Answer to Mr B——w's Apology, etc By a Student of Oxford (Monthly Review, Aug 1755, 150-151, xiii), defends him his will had given his body "to be smoaked and dried,⁴⁵ and to be put in the grand collection of Sir Hans Sloane, to be placed on the pedestal"⁴⁶ The Doctor for the pains he took in carrying Vanlove's note to Lydia is tossed in a blanket and told to go clean himself with the leaves of his journal.⁴⁷

⁴⁴ The "others" are Ralph Griffiths and his wife Shebbeare hated Griffiths because of the reviews his books received in the Monthly, and because he was a Whig and a Dissenter

Whether Shebbeare in attributing the offensive review to Dr Maty had anything more solid than hearsay to go on is not known. The only mention of Dr Maty in the Monthly at this time appears in the "Monthly Catalogue" for April and May, 1775⁴⁸ where he is referred to as M Maty, the ingenious journalist who printed an Eloge du Docteur Richard Mead in the July-August number of the Journal Britannique.⁴⁹ That Griffiths knew him does not, of course, prove that he reviewed books for the Monthly Review, but it makes it possible, or even probable in the case of medical works like the Practice of Physic.

That Dr. Maty did not like Shebbeare or his writing is shown by the three short reviews printed in the May-June Journal Britannique.⁵⁰ It seemed to Dr Maty that Batista Angeloni's Letters were insipid, indecent, false, tasteless and an affront to the Jesuits Lydia, which "vient de sortir du même fonds malheureusement trop fertile en mauvais

⁴⁵ After Maty's death in 1776, an account of his illness and the appearance of his dead body was written by Drs Hunter and Henry Watson and published in the Philosophical Transactions

⁴⁶ With this inscription.

Semiviro immortal
Here continues to stand
In his original perfection
J. M——y,
Doctor in physick
Doctor in philosophy
Fellow of the Royal Society of London,
And of Berlin,
That being so marvellously favoured
By Providence
Selected
From all the race of the creation,
To be the distinguished link
In the great chain
Of Nature
That does so amazingly join the Monkey and the Man

⁴⁷ There is an engraving of the doctor's being tossed on page 200 of the Novelist's Magazine, Vol. xxxii, 1786

⁴⁸ P 389, xii

⁴⁹ Dr Maty wrote and published a memoir of the life of Dr Mead in 1755

⁵⁰ 1755; 211.

ouvrages," is equally pernicious. That is all he writes about Lydia here, but a few pages further on in a footnote comment on Hutcheson's opinion that one ought to avoid calumny as the lowest of crimes, he seems to have had Shebbeare and the caricature of himself in Lydia in mind when he deplores the unhappy necessity the English are under of tolerating venomous insects who slander without fear of punishment.⁵¹

The review of the Practice of Physic, although much shorter than the one in the Monthly, is so similar in attitude and content that it could have been written by the same person. "Des suppositions hasardées, des décisions magistrales, des critiques malignes caractérisent cet traité." If the art of medicine is simply the regulation of fire "cet art seroit bien efficace, si par l'extraction de la matière ignée il pouvoit guérir notre auteur de la maladie d'écrire." Since when does merely being a correspondent authorize a person to call himself a member of the Royal Academy at Paris? Dr. Maty is animated by a sharp resentment. However he does not mention here anything about Shebbeare's medical degree. Perhaps he meant this silence to be significant.⁵²

The attack on Dr. Maty is only one of several like it in Lydia. The pamphleteer often got the better of the novelist. It is surprising to see how often Shebbeare brought the uneven progression of the story to a jolting stop of indefinite duration to insert a sarcastic essay against the Whigs, make a topical allusion, or lampoon the King and the Duke of Newcastle. These digressions are often much livelier than the story itself. For instance, the satirical essay on the Honor of Old England, which Shebbeare grafts on to the story of the cowardly Captain Bounce, must have been very entertaining to readers who saw in Bounce a surprising anticipation of Admiral Byng.⁵³ Bounce would not attack the French man-of-war that failed to pay him the usual courtesies and excused himself by saying that he had "private orders from the Duke of ——"⁵⁴ not to offend the French on any account. To do so would embarrass the ministry as "the brave Colonel Wash——ton"⁵⁵ did when he attacked the French in Virginia.

⁵¹ The laws of England offer less hope of satisfaction for defamatory libels than for any other crime, writes Dr. Maty. Consequently there is nothing more common. Under pretext of assuring the liberty of the press, one must tolerate these venomous stinging insects who slander without fear of punishment. Their precaution of omitting some letters in the names or designations of those whose characters they wound without shame, frees them from the necessity of proving their calumnies or making good the damage they have done. Let these writers whose writings and style smell of baseness and sterile malignity learn that those they attack, sustained by the feeling of their innocence, abandon them to the execration of the public and their own consciences.

⁵² The Practice of Physic was signed as by John Shebbeare, M.D. Reg. Acad. Scient. Paris, Soc.

⁵³ Byng's Minorca misadventure came about a year after Lydia.

⁵⁴ This must be the Duke of Newcastle. The essay is in Ch. XX.

⁵⁵ George Washington.

The blood of the King, now more or less thinly spread through the English nobility, is not the true fountain-head of the Honor of Old England, since it does not show itself in the intellect or heart, but is "ever rambling about the body, sometimes in the heels dancing a minuet, or kicking a race-horse at Newmarket, sometimes in the fingers, packing cards, palming dice, and other honourable employments." If Bounce would seek exemplars of courage in England he must turn to the English courtesans. Miss Fanny ——⁵⁶ was so little awed by the French that she refused to sell her favors to them one penny cheaper than the price demanded by "her illustrious predecessor, Con Phillips, [who] had been before in these circumstances."⁵⁷ Fanny would challenge the Grand Monarch himself! The men of England should learn from women like these to defy the French and sustain the honor of old England.

Shebbeare makes fun of the ministerial ignorance of geography, a subject touched on again by Smollett in the famous satire of Newcastle in Humphrey Clinker. Dick the schoolmaster had to "shew some of the M——y [ministry] where America lies on the map." The French played the devil there, obliging the Ministry to know where it is.⁵⁸ Lydia will teach her children geography so that if they become members of Parliament they will not be as ignorant as the present members who call Pennsylvania an island and Newfoundland a continent.

The author's hatred of Presbyterians, Jews, Quakers and the Scotch is shown in many a sketch in Lydia.⁵⁹ Sandy Macpherson, the surgeon on Captain Bounce's boat, is a satire on Scotch doctors. Shebbeare drew Sandy with Roderick Random and perhaps Smollett himself, in mind. An example of Scotch perseverance, pretention and ambition,⁶⁰ Sandy deludes many into thinking him a great surgeon, but when a leg is to be amputated his mate Jimmy English has to do it. A doctor who has not studied at Edinburgh, "the furst school for medicine 'i the woorld," knows nothing at all, according to Sandy. But he is not very honest. He supports the vile Captain Bounce at the latter's trial, and would never have passed the examination at Surgeon's Hall and been appointed to his present

⁵⁶ Perhaps this is Fanny Hill of Cleland's Fanny Hill, or the Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure, which Griffiths published in 1750.

⁵⁷ Teresa Constantia Phillips, whose Apology inspired Lady Vane.

⁵⁸ Dick's friend, the London rider, wants to attack the French, "but the cowardly M——y suffer everything to be done that the French rascals please. That damned Han-over ruins us all; there lies the mischief."

⁵⁹ The soul and body of the bad Quaker Amnabad is described as "a monstrous union—like that of Scotland with this Kingdom, something poor and scurvy with something fat and saucy." See p. 120, ed. 1786.

⁶⁰ Lydia, p. 70, ed. 1786, condemns the "singular" methods used by the Scotch to advance themselves.

position without political influence and helpful hints from certain quarters

The Duke of Newcastle was the favorite butt for Shebbeare's shafts ⁶¹ In many ways the meeting of the noble savage Cannassatego with the Duke is the best scene in Lydia. When the vessel bearing the Indian lands in Wales, Popkins the exciseman takes him for the son of the Pretender, and Lydia, like Sophia Western, is thought to be Jenny Cameron Animated by "a true Whig principle, which believes that no man will serve his country, without the power of plundering it, or being purchased," Popkins plans to seize Cannassatego and ask the government for a reward ⁶² The Indian eludes Popkins, who, nevertheless proceeds to London and reveals his "secret" to the Whig politicians ⁶³ Encountering Cannassatego at the Minister's house, he denounces him as the Pretender. Nothing could equal the Minister's consternation; it was six hours before the physical manifestations of the most violent terror began to diminish. Only when the Indian's true identity was revealed did the Minister recover his composure What a disillusionment the Minister was to the brave Indian appears in a later conversation He thought him "undignified by nature, whiffling, inconstant, whose words, hurried out like water from an inverted bottle, included nothing to be understood, ever beginning, never closing one sentence, rambling from man to man, from one half-thought to another, the farce and mockery of national prudence " How could such a man, thought the brave Chief, direct the business of a people? ⁶⁴

The attack on George II is just as sarcastic ⁶⁵ Shebbeare pretends to ask the public whether he should proceed with an actor's story or continue with Popkin's tale A certain Flatterwood sends a letter requesting the author to continue with the latter, since "the preservation of our most gracious s——n [sovereign] should be preferred to all other considerations, particularly when there is no danger " The letter now becomes a virulent attack on the King's partialty for Hanover and his

⁶¹ See Macaulay's Walpole's Letters to Sir Horace Mann for famous satires of the Duke of Newcastle The satire in Lydia is not mentioned here, however

⁶² The idea for this situation came from Ferdinand, Count Fathom In this novel a smuggler, hoping for a reward, denounces Fathom as the Pretender's eldest son

⁶³ They charge Popkins to give out that the Pretender's son had been lately in England As a reward Popkins was made supervisor in Wales He could not be made Canon of Windsor because "that place is always given to an informer " Shebbeare's enemy Richard Blacow was made Canon of Windsor in 1755

⁶⁴ Compare this with the Newcastle in Humphrey Clinker and the Adventures of an Atom. Benjamin Bissell, The American Indian in English Literature of the Eighteenth Century, New Haven, 1925, quotes this passage but does not identify the minister.

⁶⁵ Lydia, Ch xxxiv

failure to encourage learning and the arts in England. How England thrives, Flatterwood ironically concludes, from the paternal fondness of its King, and how other kingdoms decline from their ruler's inattention.⁶⁶

This letter, which comes almost as near lese majesty as Shebbeare's notorious Sixth Letter, was not even noticed by the authorities. Perhaps they believed that a novel would not be read by as many persons as a pamphlet. Shebbeare, no doubt, thought that he had protected himself by putting his ideas in a Jacobite's letter.

* * *

"What a strange fancy it was," wrote Fanny Burney in concluding her account of how "the growler" "absolutely ruined" her evening at Catherine Reid's, "for such a man as this to write novels!"⁶⁷ Her opinion is upheld by every critic of the novel, for all have been very severe with Shebbeare. Yet in his day his novels were widely read. Fanny Burney herself read them, and the editor of the Early Diary read at least one of them.⁶⁸

⁶⁶ The Germans and the German subsidies are bitterly attacked here and on p. 107, ed. 1786. Flatterwood writes that the King's journey to Hanover shows "true paternal impartiality," as he risks his life to "secure and fortify the feeble, whilst he leaves the strong, at the eve of the war, to the care of Providence, and the Duke of ——" [Newcastle].

"With what joyful eyes must he be beheld by his subjects," the ironic Flatterwood observes, "[he] who is ever propagating arts and sciences, rewarding, encouraging, and preferring men of learning and genius, from his own private munificence whilst the King of Prussia, France, and Spain, are depressing merit, wherever it dares to shew its head." In another passage Flimsy's mother is advised not to educate her son: "Besides, madam," the adviser said, "the m——r has made it a constant rule, never to promote men of letters. There is an aversion at present in the ad——n to all men of great sense and learning." In the Marriage Act, I, 84, Shebbeare remarks that it has been out of fashion to reward ingenuity at court: "ever since Mr. Hogarth received that ample Reward of Five Shillings, for a Print of his 'March to Finchley-Common,' after having Exhibited the Picture, which Sum may be supposed to have quite exhausted the Fund for that Purpose."

⁶⁷ Early Diary of Frances Burney, I, 283 ff. Fanny Burney closed her entry for Feb. 20, 1774 with these words: "... and so, Adieu, sweet Doctor Shebbeare," and added as a conscientious afterthought, "I must read the Marriage Act and Lydia, nevertheless." That she did read them seems to be indicated by the caricatural touch in the portraits of some of her more abnoxious lordlings. Probit's story of Dr. De Carte's daughter in Lydia tells of a nurse who sends her own daughter in place of the foster child to the parquits who have employed her. This, of course, is the situation in Evelina and may have been the source. Rev. Arthur Villars is somewhat like the good parson who reared Eliza Barter in the Marriage Act.

⁶⁸ Ibid., p. 289, Note 2. Mrs. Ellis remembered Shebbeare's name because "when a girl, she was sharply rebuked for reading one of them [i.e., one of the 34 novels which Mrs. Ellis mistakenly attributes to Shebbeare in this note. He wrote only two novels] of which she can recall neither the name, or the plot, but this conversation brings back its dulness." The novel was certainly Lydia, for Mrs. Ellis read the book in "a dear and delightful collection, never to be forgotten." This was, of course, the Novelist's Magazine.

At Miss Reid's Shebbeare is described as again attacking the booksellers.⁶⁹ "I never knew a bookseller who was not a scoundrel, I was cheated plaguily about Lydia, and the rascal who sold the Marriage Act promised to share the profits, yet though I know that there have been six editions, he always calls it the first."⁷⁰

In the Marriage Act the thesis is allowed to run away with the narrative. As the Monthly Reviewer remarked, the author "has here put together a number of improbable tales of young people rendered unhappy in their amours, or matrimonial engagements, and the blame of all is contrived to be thrown upon the late act for the better preventing of clandestine marriages which, according to our author, is only calculated to produce all these terrible consequences he has enumerated on his title-page"⁷¹ Today it seems surprising that anyone would oppose an attempt to do away with the scandalous Fleet marriages. However Oliver Goldsmith,⁷² siding with Shebbeare, gives similar reasons for his conviction. The Act is an encroachment on the prerogatives of the clergy and an attempt to regulate love and marriage, which defy all laws but those of poetry and nature. Moreover it will halt the cheering spectacle of money passing from the rich to the poor. It will encourage immorality and celibacy, and check the growth of the population.

Like the author of Clarissa, Shebbeare sympathizes with the young lovers rather than with parents and guardians, but he does not imitate Richardson's brand of sentimentality, as has been asserted.⁷³ His senti-

⁶⁹ Nineteen years before this he had attacked them in Lydia (Ch. v) for employing writers to collect scraps from old works and to tack these together "like rags gathered by old women" to form a "new manufacture."

⁷⁰ This is not exactly accurate. The first edition of the Marriage Act, in two volumes, was printed for J. Hodges and B. Collins in 1754. In a reissue (1755) the title was changed to Matrimony, a Novel. A third edition was printed for T. Lowndes in 1766. Lydia, or, Filial Piety, 1755, in four volumes. The second edition, in two volumes, was of 1769, and it was reprinted in 1786 in volume XXII of the Novelist's Magazine. The DNB lists the last item as another edition.

⁷¹ Monthly Review, Nov. 1754, 395, XI. The subtitle runs: "In which the ruin of female honour, the contempt of the clergy, the destruction of private and public liberty, with other fatal consequences, are considered." Shebbeare dedicated the novel to the Duke of Bedford, but did not sign the dedication. The reviewer calls Shebbeare "a writer of some parts, but more virulence, stimulated by party prejudice against the present admiration, as we are led to conclude from many passages of this work."

⁷² See Citizen of the World, letters 72 and 114. Smollett took the opposite side. In the review of the Continuation of his History (Critical Review, Oct. 1761, 283-295, XII) the writer (not Smollett) remarks that the opponents of the Act "foresaw a great number of evils in the train of this bill, which have not yet been realized. A part of the History dealing with the Marriage Act is printed here as an excerpt."

⁷³ See Ernest A. Baker, History of the English Novel, v, 47. "The style is an amalgam of Fielding and Smollett, the sentiment, as the ill-connected stories proceed, becomes more and more an affectation of Richardson's sensibility."

mentality is that of the second-rate sentimental novel of his day, with its ecstatic extravagant language, lacrimose leave-takings and swoonings at sudden meetings. His heroine Lydia will suckle her child "My dear babe shall reap the advantage which nature designed." Her husband builds a garden containing an anchorite's cell, a temple of fortitude, a statue of his wife, and a little cottage to be used as a retreat. The hero of the Marriage Act has an English garden with a temple of honor, a temple of conjugal felicity, an altar of Venus and a grotto. These were fairly common in sentimental novels of that day, but there is something unusual about Shebbeare's sentimental characters. Sir William Worthy has peculiar mental powers. He has "pre-sensations" or premonitions that can be relied upon. Yarico can feel from afar the coming of her Onondagan lover. The author explains that "in this land of yet unaltered nature, the hearts of lovers, sentimentally touched, are conscious of these attracting powers at greater distances than European natives conceive it possible." When Sir William Worthy drew near his sweetheart's home in Cornwall, he felt himself drawn thither "by the increase of an emanating power."

Sensibility as shown by grottoes and temples and extraordinary mental powers is strictly reserved for heroes and heroines. Moreover, sentiment is always subordinated in a Shebbeare novel. The dominant tone is satirical after the manner of Jonathan Wild or Roderick Random. Shebbeare considered Fielding his master⁷⁴ and tried to follow him. However, the working out of a novel-length plot with three or four leading characters was beyond the imitator's powers. In his hands the main story always broke up into several stories, and these were strung together artlessly.

The main story in the Marriage Act concerns the love affairs of two sisters—the crude and selfish Molly Barter and the angelic beauty Eliza. Molly, heeding the advice of a worldly tutor and her parvenu parents,⁷⁵ marries the fashionable and degenerate son of Earl Wormeaton and is unhappy. Finally she runs away to Paris with her valet-de-chambre. After he abandons her, she concludes that her life is a failure and enters a convent.⁷⁶ Eliza, however, does not listen to her parents, but heeding her good tutor, flees from a marriage with Sir Roger Ramble, who has squandered his money and ruined his constitution on a tour of the Continent. She loves her father's clerk, William Worthy, who later inherits a fortune, marries her, and makes her happy.

⁷⁴ In the Marriage Act he refers to Fielding as "an author whom we adore." This "adoration" was due as much to Fielding's political beliefs as to his literary achievements.

⁷⁵ Mrs. Barter is the first of Shebbeare's monstrous viragoes which he modeled after Laetitia Snap. She is repulsive, immoral and lusty. Her husband was a Presbyterian who "had learnt the true Cant to a miracle." By unscrupulous methods they disinherit a tobaccoist's heir and accumulate a fortune.

⁷⁶ Molly's husband knows that he is not the father of her child. He suspects the valet, who argues himself out of an awkward situation by the use of Lucina Sine Concubitu, "written by the author of Pompey the Little," wherein "it is proved that a lady may be breeding without the Knowledge of Man." The pamphlet is by John Hill and not Francis Coventry, as Shebbeare thought.

As if these contrasting fortunes did not make the moral sufficiently clear, other stories on the same theme are added. Some of them do not fit the text. For example, the story of Fanny, who loved too intensely to wait until her lover became of age, seems to indicate that stricter chaperonage and sympathetic parents are needed more than a repeal of the Marriage Act. In another tale the reader is asked to sympathize with a poor curate who performs a clandestine marriage.⁷⁷ Although the novel is ramshackle in structure and biased in point of view, it contains some lively character sketches.

That Lydia, or, Filial Piety is much better known than the Marriage Act is largely due to its inclusion in the widely read Novelist's Magazine. It is more pretentious than its predecessor, and, although showing some improvement, has the same faults, especially the disconnected structure. It too is built upon contrasts. A noble savage from the American forests is to provide a contrast to the pampered, degenerate and materialistic English. A monstrous old maid, Rachael Stiffump,⁷⁸ is a foil to the virtuous Lydia Fairchild. The main story is Lydia's although the reader at first might suppose that it is to be Cannassatego's. Lydia sails from New York to return to her parents, with Rachael as companion. On the boat she becomes the friend of the noble Indian Cannassatego, who wishes to find out whether the native English are more virtuous than the perfidious colonists. Bounce, the captain of the vessel, is a coward and a lecher, Sandy Macpherson, the ship's surgeon, is a pretentious hypocrite. The chief officers, however, are honorable. One is the hero, Lieutenant Pro-

⁷⁷ While the curate is in prison, a cowardly captain sets on Ensign Firebrace to seduce the curate's wife, a situation much like Mrs. Heartfree's in Jonathan Wild. A valorous Welsh squire challenges the captain, and to show him that he is of rank to fight flourishes a pedigree in the coward's face. This Welshman, Squire Gam, is much like Morgan of Roderick Random. Gam speaks dialect and swears "Cotdamochée."

⁷⁸ Rachael is a grotesque and rude caricature. She, like Molly Barter in the Marriage Act, is after Fielding's Laetitia Snap. She is described as being distorted both physically and morally: "Her waist was round and round, six times as substantial as Peg Woffingtons, and much shorter." Her breasts were like kettle drums, "her teeth stood like the old palisades of a court in shape and colour, with here and there one wanting, where the dogs creep through." Presbyterianism "like horse dung in a hot-bed" had brought forth lust in her. At the age of forty she is got with child by a Presbyterian teacher, Maul-text, and accompanies Lydia to London where she hopes to be relieved of her "dropsy." She needed no Crab to persuade her, like the maid in Roderick Random, "that she was not with child, but only afflicted with a disorder" (Roderick Random, Ch. v). Rachael dotes "on the divine hymns of the Rev. Mr. Watts," but secretly reads Rochester's verses.

bit Lieutenant MacValor, an Irishman, and the Welsh chaplain, David Pugh, a compound of Morgan in Roderick Random and Abraham Adams, are brave and honest

Bounce bribes Rachael to permit him to enter Lydia's cabin, but the vigilant Cannassatego foils his evil attempt on Lydia's virtue.⁷⁹ In London Lydia finds that her father has died and that her mother is almost destitute. The last of the family's savings had been entrusted to Jabez Sly, a Quaker of "great external purity," and had vanished. So Lydia takes service with Arabella, a rich orphan. Arabella's mercenary guardian Muckworm, plans to marry her to the degenerate Viscount Flimsy. But Arabella will not have a "noseless lord." She loves Sweetwood, a man of modest fortune, and although tricked into a marriage with Flimsy, is soon freed by his death and can have her lover. Meanwhile Lydia's fortunes decline. By a lucky chance a good captain rescues her in the nick of time from Mother Douglas's brothel.⁸⁰ In a fit of despondency she contemplates suicide when Lieutenant Probit, now a rich earl, meets her in a park, and brings her troubles to an end. Miss Betty Wriggle and the old Miss Oldcastle try to win Probit away from her but their attempts are futile. Lydia marries him, and when a child is born Probit "faints with ecstasy," and the good valet Frank recovers from a fever when he kisses the babe.⁸¹

Cannassatego's story, although secondary to this typical account of a good poor girl's trials in London, is much better known because it is an example of romantic primitivism. But the story is not integrated. Because it is not, Lydia is a poorly constructed novel. It is as if the author got his Indian to England and then did not know what to do with him. With the account of his disillusionment at Milford Haven, where instead of God-like Britons he sees grimy coal diggers, and the matter of his being taken for the Pretender, his story is dropped. We do not hear from him ⁷⁹ At this point Shebbeare inserted an essay on chastity. Lydia's virtue he writes, will reclaim the honor of her sex. Chastity has not reached down on the feminine side to modern times, but some men are still virtuous since men are "nearer the original simplicity of human virtue than women." As an instance of male chastity Shebbeare cites Lord George Anson's honorable treatment of some female natives he had taken on board his ship. Anson's expedition had returned in 1753. Although Shebbeare does not name Anson here, the reference is clear. See Lydia, p. 66, ed. 1786.

⁸⁰ This is Shebbeare's second allusion to Mother Douglas in Lydia. There is another in the Marriage Act. Smollett in Ferdinand, Count Falkom (Ch. xxiii) describes a French madame in a brothel squabble thus: "and I question whether the celebrated Mother Douglas herself could have made such a figure in an extemporaneous altercation." It is said that the convulsed figure in the left-hand quarter of Hogarth's print "Enthusiasm Delineated" (1761) is Mother Douglas. She also appears at the window of the King's Arms in the "March to Finchley."

⁸¹ Frank is much like Sergeant Jenkinson in Amelia.

again until the novel is nearing its conclusion.⁸² Here Lydia and Probit, the only English people "uncorrupted amidst polluted millions," hear what a disappointment the Prime Minister was, and how Cannassatego's chastity was tried by Lady Susan Overstay. The noble Chief pronounces on the degeneracy of the English, reads a touching letter from his Yariko, and makes a farewell speech that wrings tears from the eyes of all. Some pages further on we learn that he has returned safely to Yariko and is on the point of ordering his chiefs to "boil the war-kettle" to avenge the mistreatment he suffered in England.

Besides these two main stories there are many others. Some are mere anecdotes while others tell what happens to various minor characters. The account of Popkin's trip to London is like parts of Peregrine Pickle and Joseph Andrews. There are high words and strange fellow travelers in a stage coach, curious types at an ordinary, funny tricks played, and at the inns people get in the wrong beds. Popkins meets a young actor who is to be trained by Rich, who declares that Garrick "has no fire, no freedom of action," and that Mrs. Prichard "cannot speak a word of dialogue." Occasionally a telling caricature or a comic scene makes up for the general mediocrity of these tales.⁸³

⁸² Benjamin Bissell, op cit, writes that after "many adventures" the Chief meets Lydia and Probit again. However, it is precisely the inadequacy of the two or three situations (adventures is not the word) in which the Indian plays a part that makes Lydia disappointing to those whose expectations were raised by the first chapters of the novel. Yet Bissell correctly remarks that "in no other novel of the century does the Indian figure so conspicuously or so heroically as in Lydia, elsewhere he appears only as a subordinate character, introduced to add a touch of local color or picturesque adventure." Bissell thinks that Cannassatego is more fully and consistently developed than Oroonoko.

George Saintsbury, The English Novel (1924), p. 140, writes "Shebbeare, who was a journalist, had the journalistic faculty of 'letting everything go in'—of taking as much as he could from Richardson, Fielding, Smollett, etc., up to date (1755), and throwing back to Aphra for an interesting Indian, Cannassatego." E. A. Baker, op cit, p. 47 also seems to think that the Indian is related to Oroonoko. He refers to Cannassatego as being "a nearer relation of Mrs. Behn's Oroonoko than of the noble savage of Rousseau and his tribe." However, there is little or no evidence that Shebbeare had ever heard of Aphra Behn, Montesquieu and his imitators, versions of the Yariko and Inkle story, and his own imagination are more likely sources.

E. A. Baker, op cit, p. 108, calls Cannassatego a "preposterous creation." H. N. Fairchild, The Noble Savage, A Study in Romantic Naturalism (1928), p. 93, thinks both the Indian and his Yariko "idealized out of all relation to humanity." Indeed, it is hard to believe, as Shebbeare would have us, that nature should so purify these lovers as to enable them to sleep together "uncontaminated." Yariko's sister-in-law, although subject to the purifying effects of the same environment, does not believe it possible, and says so. "But alas!" cries Shebbeare, "so unlike is the frame of woman through the whole creation, the forests of America contain females as different from each other, as the Ephesian matron from Penelope."

⁸³ E. A. Baker, op cit, p. 47, criticizes the loose structure of Lydia but admits that some

No one seems to have pointed out that Smollett had Lydia in mind when he wrote Lismahago's account of his adventures in America.⁸⁴ Lismahago's Indian name, Occacanastaogarora, is simply Cannassatego made still more preposterous. Smollett's opinion of romantic primitivism is revealed when he describes Liddy as fainting at Lismahago's account of Murphy's tortures, and Tabitha as spitting and crying, "Jesus, what cruel barbarians." Tabitha's questioning of Lismahago is reminiscent of Lady Susan Overstay's questioning of Cannassatego. The Scot had to give a detailed account of his bride's appearance on her wedding day. He is made to say that the Indians were "too virtuous and sensible to encourage the introduction of any fashion which might help to render them corrupt or effeminate."⁸⁵ When it appeared that the bride was without shoes, stockings or linen, used human bones and a fresh Mohawk scalp as ornaments, and was anointed from head to foot with bear's grease, Tabitha, overlooking the repulsive barbarism of the gewgaws, expressed the wish that "the squaw had been better provided with linen." To Tabitha's mind the presence or absence of linen made the difference between decency and the incomprehensibly indecent. This realistic picture of Lismahago's savage bride is Smollett's answer to Shebbeare's idealized Yariko, whose "shape was so exquisitely finished, like the production of Poussine's pencil in the fullest powers of painting."

* * *

The two novels must not have taken long to write, but as ambition and financial necessity made Shebbeare begrudge even this short time, he turned to the political pamphlet. Before the year was out he had written two, and perhaps three, of his notorious Letters to the People of England. After his attack on the Monthly Review,⁸⁶ he could expect no quarter from that publication. The review of the first *Letter*⁸⁷ was short and trench-of the author's "caricatures are galvanized into life by dint of sheer acrimony," that sometimes he shows real feeling, and that his airs of righteous indignation are not all affected even though "his manner did tend to alienate sympathy." Saintsbury, op cit, p. 140, declares that "the irony is factitious and forced, the sentiment unappealing, its coarseness quite destitute of Rabelaisian geniality." I believe Shebbeare was once pilloried for his politics. If it had been for Lydia, I should not have protested."

⁸⁴ Humphrey Clinker, Jerry Melford's letter from Morpeth, July 13.

⁸⁵ This passage is, of course, ironic. The Indians had just been described as shockingly cruel and cannibalistic. Lady Susan Overstay belongs to the man-hungry tribe of Lady Booby and Mrs. Grizzle.

⁸⁶ Lydia was reviewed in the Monthly Review, June, 1755, 478, xii. The critic wrote, "To his old scurrility and malignant extravagance, the author has here joined the most ridiculous trifling, and extreme absurdity; he seems to have left his plan unfinished, with a view, as we suppose, of indulging his public with a sequel." The novel was in four volumes, perhaps the reviewer had received only the first one or two.

⁸⁷ Monthly Review, Sept., 1755, 283, xiii.

antly ironic: the review of the second⁸⁸ was just one line in length "The author raves against the ministry in his old strain." And with the third Letter the publication of the Critical Review brought another enemy, for no matter how unfriendly Whig and Dissenter was to Tory and High Church, both were agreed on subjecting Shebbeare to the critical bastinado. In its very first number the Critical Review in an article that in all probability was written by Smollett⁸⁹ attacked the third Letter. The author of this pamphlet reminds the critic of an old sybil he used to see in the park. She was in the habit of raising her spirits with a cordial and then cursing the higher powers in public. At first, passers-by of a certain political party threw her half-pence. Later, when all neglected her, she grew angry and became outrageous. Then she was arrested and thrown in Bridewell, where she was scourged and put at hard labor until she had sweated out all her regard for the Pope and the Pretender. Had she been a more dignified character, perhaps her ears might have been nailed to the pillory.⁹⁰

In their March number the Monthly Reviewers expressed the opinion that in this Letter the "clamorous" author had gone beyond the bounds of common sense and decency, and hinted that his motives were selfish. "Some say his scheme is to bully the ministry into a pension, or, as the phrase goes, to get himself bought off."⁹¹ But censorious remarks such as these did not deter Shebbeare. He was beginning to be noticed. Other pamphleteers began to imitate or attack him. One Grub-streeter, made

⁸⁸ Monthly Review, Nov., 1755, 400, xiii.

⁸⁹ Critical Review, Jan.-Feb., 1756, 88-89, 1.

⁹⁰ The opinions in this review are similar to those expressed concerning Ferret in Sir Launcelot Greaves. The style seems to be Smollett's. Although positive evidence is lacking, it is extremely probable that Smollett wrote this and the subsequent reviews of Shebbeare's pamphlets appearing in the Critical Review before 1760. This was the period of Smollett's greatest activity as a contributor to the Critical. All these articles are so consistently alike in style, ideas and attitude that it seems reasonable to assume that they were by the same author. One of his favorite devices is analogy. Shebbeare is likened to an old woman, a strutting player, a plague, etc. In this review he is compared to a madman in Soho who cries "fire" when the only fire is in his brain. The following passage seems to hint that the author knew that Shebbeare was a contributor to the Monitor: "Perhaps there is some truth in what 'this monitor' advances." The truths in his Letters are hackneyed truths, continues the critic, and he, and such as he, have made them so. Moreover, Shebbeare is not as patriotic or as sincere as he pretends to be, but is "a poor player who struts and frets his hour upon the stage and then is heard no more." His calculations about the reduction of taxes are wrong, he betrays his weakheadedness in attempting to prove too much. Probably his purpose is to attract the attention of the ministry, but even here he may be disappointed.

⁹¹ Monthly Review, March, 1756, 260, xiv. The critic, having heard a false rumor, writes that Shebbeare has succeeded in being noticed since for a second time he has been taken into custody. Differences will at last be decided in court, he adds, although some think Shebbeare's ravings indicate the necessity for a different sort of treatment.

indignant by what he called the "flagitious" insults heaped upon the foot grenadiers, and even the King himself, in the Third Letter, urged that these soldiers take the punishment of the offending writer into their own hands.⁹² Another called Shebbeare the tool of a wrong-headed party—a man who admitted that he wrote for a post or the pillory.⁹³ A spurious Fourth and Sixth Letter made their appearance.⁹⁴

The genuine Fourth Letter was greeted with the usual disdain. The Monthly Reviewers declare that they will not pay much attention to the latest product of this "incendiary" but will say that men who scribble for bread and have not been considered worth the "meanest purchase" ought not to be able to make the English people their dupes.⁹⁵ The Critical Reviewer declares that since he is no advocate of the Ministry he would welcome an opportunity to detect and expose ministerial errors, and to this end would try to separate truth from fiction and patriotism from sedition in this pamphlet.⁹⁶ But there is small trace of truth or patriotism since the author is full of ignorance and sophistry. He is contradictory, inconsistent, malicious, bombastic and misuses the King's English.⁹⁷ The American Quakers did not start the French and Indian Wars for their private interest, as charged.⁹⁸ Although Lord L— -- n

⁹² An Answer to a Pamphlet called a 'Third Letter to the People of England' This was reviewed in the Monthly Review, March, 1756, 26, xiv. The critic cites the most insulting passage: "Such confusion and dread dwell on the dastard faces of all, who, sold to the H——n [Hanoverian] interest, stand branded in the forehead with the White Horse, the ignominious mark of slavery!" The reference is to the figure of a white horse embroidered on the caps of his Majesty's grenadiers. In the Gentleman's Magazine, April, 1756, 195, xxvi, there is a review of a pamphlet attacking this same Third Letter. The critic believes Shebbeare's invective less harmful than his opponent's interpreting a passage concerning a white horse in Revelations as a prophecy favorable to the King. The critic felt that to identify George II with God was excessive.

⁹³ Shebbeare answered this writer in An Answer to a Pamphlet called 'The Conduct of the Ministry impartially Examined,' etc., which was reviewed in the Monthly Review, Dec., 1756, 673, xv. Here the critic writes, "As it has been the rule with the Reviewers not to bestow any particular attention to the productions of this Intemperate writer, so nothing particular will be said about this." But the critic hopes that Shebbeare will cease exposing the nakedness of his country with the "air of a satyr."

⁹⁴ The spurious Fourth Letter was reviewed in the Monthly Review, March, 1756, 261, xiv, and the spurious Sixth Letter in the same journal of Nov., 1756, 532, xv.

⁹⁵ Monthly Review, Sept., 1756, 292–293, xv.

⁹⁶ Critical Review, Aug., 1756, 35–44, ii.

⁹⁷ Smollett (for it is certainly he) took exception to expressions like "seen-service," "possolite" and "parallelarity," which indicate, he says, that the author is an empiric in language as well as in politics. He declares that Shebbeare has plagiarized a story in Joseph Andrews and given it in mangled form as the story of the thief in this pamphlet.

⁹⁸ Smollett believed that the turbulence and avarice of some New England adventurers forced the nation into this war. According to him, these men had expected the Government to furnish them with large sums of money and to leave the management of the war to them.

[Loudon⁹⁹] had been magnanimous and overlooked "the sarcastic insinuations which this reptile has thrown against him," friends of that nobleman might not be so forgiving. The attack on Parliament is such an outrageous insult that "nothing but sovereign contempt or compassion can save him [Shebbeare] from severe castigation." A "desperate incendiary" and "profound enemy" of his government, he is a man "without principles, talent, or common discretion, who has neither friends, property, or interest in the country where he assumes the character of patriot and reformer, and who could not live in this or any other country, but by fomenting discord, and sowing seeds of civil dissention." He is like a "species of vermin, peculiar to Lapland, which . . . rise in the summer from the filthy bogs and marshes, fly, stink, sting, and perish in the course of a few hours."

The Critical Reviewers were not to be thrown off the scent. They saw immediately that a pamphlet¹⁰⁰ purporting to be an attack on the Fourth Letter was nothing of the kind as it was written by Shebbeare himself, who was following the example of Daniel DeFoe, "a political writer of great virulence, and some genius, without the least tincture of principle," who "sometimes found his account by answering his own productions." They were all the more "induced to believe this was the case, as Dr Sh—— [Shebbeare] has not scrupled to declare publicly, that though he writes well against the M——y, [Ministry] he could write much better in their defense or vindication, thereby hinting, that he was in utrumque paratus." Moreover he does not seriously attempt to refute "his own libel," but "serves it up again in a Hachis seasoned with a double propor-

⁹⁹ John Campbell, fourth Earl of Loudon, was made commander-in-chief of the British forces in America on March 20, 1756. His dilatory tactics suggested to an American the comparison with the figure of King George upon the signposts, "always on horseback but never advancing." As he was Scotch Shebbeare was eager to attack him and Smollett eager to defend him. To a correspondent who wrote saying that the statement in the Fourth Letter referring to Lord Loudon could be taken in two ways, the answer was made in the Critical Review, Sept., 1756, 192, 11, that because of the "peculiar virulence of the author, his ridiculous enmity to the natives of North Britain, and the palpable design of the work, which was to kindle the animosity of the nation against all those who are employed under the G——t, the Critical Reviewers thought that they had a right, to understand it, as a malicious sarcasm against that nobleman."

On page 121 of this number of the Critical a pamphlet supporting the ministry receives praise, the reviewer declaring that it would do more service to the country than "the loud bawlings of the Monitor, or the raucous invectives of a Letter to the People of England."

¹⁰⁰ A Full and Particular Answer to all the Calumnies, Misrepresentations, and Falsehoods, contained in a Pamphlet, called 'A Fourth Letter to the People of England'. This was reviewed in the Critical Review, Oct., 1756, 279, 11. Smollett adds to the above-mentioned remarks the admonition to remember the fate of the ass of the fable that affected the air, manners and familiarity of the favorite spaniel. "Every author is not animal risibile, There is some difference between laughing and braying."

tion of gall " "We wish," adds the critic, no doubt Smollett, "the G——t [Government] would take some notice of him, otherwise the poor creature will break his heart "

Smollett treated Shebbeare's next effort, The Conduct of the Ministry impartially Examined, a pamphlet not given any special attention by the Monthly Reviewers,¹⁰¹ to a sound drubbing

This performance puts us in mind of a fisherwoman, who having been detected in vending stinking mackerel, takes post at a corner of some alley, and in despair reviles her detector with all the tropes of obloquy she had learned in the university of Billingsgate, 'till at last some parish officer introduces her to the next justice, who commits her to Bridewell, where she sweats out her resentment in hard labor. Indeed we have never seen such a series of scurrility and false reasoning as is here presented to the reader. The author of the Conduct of the Ministry examined is a liar, a miscreant, a fool, a coward, a drunkard, and a thief.

If he really believes himself to be the savior of the nation, why deprive him of such an agreeable reverie in that case he would have reason to exclaim with the Argive lunatic mentioned by Horace, who being blooded, blistered, and purged out of such delusion cried

My friends . . . pox take you for your care!
That from a patriot of distinguished vein,
Have bled and purg'd me to a Grub again

For some reason the production of the Letters slowed down. Perhaps the adverse reviews in the Monthly and the Critical had something to do with it. At any rate the Fifth Letter did not appear until April.¹⁰² In September the accumulated resentment against the Critical Review burst forth in the Occasional Critic.

The purpose of The Occasional Critic, or the decrees of the Scotch Tribunal in the Critical Review rejudged, etc.,¹⁰³ as Smollett indicated in his criticism of the pamphlet, was "to demonstrate that the authors of the Critical Review are Scotch scrubs and rascals, barbers, taylors, apothecaries, and surgeon's mates, who understand neither Greek, Latin, Spanish, French, nor English, nor any other language, art, or science, whatsoever, and that Scotland never produced any one man of genius, learning, or integrity." "Alas! poor Scotland!" Smollett ironically exclaims "What misfortune, that ever thou should'st have incurred the resentment of such a formidable hero, as the invincible and immaculate Sh——e!"¹⁰⁴ It is likely that Shebbeare had found out who had written the offending reviews in the Critical. Anyhow he held Smollett responsible and centered the attack on him. He scoffed at Smollett's Spanish, his Regicide, his History, his journeyman authors, his critical ability, his literary style, his grammar and his reasoning.

¹⁰¹ See the Monthly Review, Dec., 1756, 673, xv. Smollett's review is in the Critical Review, Dec., 1756, 474-475, II. As instances of the author's sophistry and arrogance Smollett cites the bringing in of French memorials to refute an English ambassador, and the calling of Washington a confessed assassin and the King of Prussia a superb thief. "We expect to see this author with an urn instead of a pen in his hand, running a muck like a frantic Malayan."

¹⁰² Reviewed in the Monthly Review, May, 1757, 280-281, xvi. The critic points out that the purpose of the pamphlet, to produce proofs that the constitution is being subverted, is promptly forgotten. He laughs at Shebbeare's pose as the sole defender of the English people.

¹⁰³ Arnold Whitridge, Tobias Smollett: A Study of his Miscellaneous Works, Columbia University diss. (c. 1925), p. 29, gives a good description of this pamphlet. However, he mentions only one of the Critical Review articles (the review of the Third Letter) that caused Shebbeare to write the Occasional Critic. Edward S. Noyes, The Letters of Tobias Smollett (1926) p. 150, refers to this pamphlet as The Occasional Critic, or the Decrees of the Scotch

This raucous carping was one more voice added to the chorus of authors nettled by the Critical Review. No one except the few given unconditional praise, was without a complaint. The novel publishers complained that the critics did not read through the novels that they reviewed.¹⁰⁵ Writers who burned to visit personal vengeance upon their reviewers complained at the anonymity of the articles. The passage in Humphrey Clinker describing the retaliation for unfavorable reviews that descended on Smollett's head in the form of "anonymous libels, letters, and lampoons" is well-known. Smollett had the Occasional Critic in mind when he wrote Dr. John Moore¹⁰⁶ that the Critical Review had been "insulted and abused as a Scotch Tribunal." "Truth is," he wrote, "there is no Author so wrteched but he will meet with countenance in England, if he attacks our nation in any shape. You cannot conceive the Jealousy that prevails against us."

His reply to the Occasional Critic was vitriolic and coarse.¹⁰⁷ Smollett Tribunal Reviewed. The last word in the subtitle should be "rejudged." Noyes's dating of Smollett's answer to the Occasional Critic in the Critical as September, 1757 should be October, 1757. ¹⁰⁴ Critical Review, Oct., 1757, 332-338, iv.

¹⁰⁵ In an article in the Critical Review, Jan., 1758, 28 ff., v, on the History of Miss Sally Sable the critic reminds the Messrs Noble that he had taken pains to analyze "this flimsy and miserable performance" because of their complaints, but they must not expect him to go to such trouble in the future.

¹⁰⁶ Noyes, Letters of Tobias Smollett, Letter 43, Jan. 2, 1758.

¹⁰⁷ Critical Review, Oct., 1757, 332-338, iv. This article is described by Arnold Whitridge, op cit. As an example of the typical coarseness of journalistic polemics of that day the following is cited. As Shebbeare's lungs rival the herald of Grubstreet and Tyburn, writes Smollett in this article, he would have made more money if he had printed his pamphlets on half-penny slips of brown paper and hawked them on the streets in person. Smollett printed in the Critical Review, Oct., 1757, 376, iv, a letter signed Philaethes, a person who was delighted by the discovery of such a comfortable use for the Occasional Critic's lucubrations. He preferred them "to the neck of a goose so warmly recommended by Pantagruel." There is a similar joke in Shebbeare's lampoon of Dr. Maty in Lydia.

recognizes that the whole attack had been levelled at him but forgives it as the natural effect of resentment at being detected and chastised as a "quack in politics, an enemy to his King and country, and a desperate incendiary, who by misrepresenting facts, and aspersing characters, endeavoured to raise a ferment in the nation, at a time when a concurrence of unfortunate incidents had produced a spirit of discontent among the people." Coming to the defense of Dr Blackwell, who had been attacked in the Occasional Critic, Smollett demonstrates that the classical knowledge of "this modern Zolus" is nothing but the hollow pretense of a "poor piddler"¹⁰⁸ The "impotent attacks of this furious wretch, upon the personal character of one of our associates, whom he has lately traduced in many instances"¹⁰⁹ and the scurilous and false assaults against "several gentlemen who never provoked him in the least" are due to the natural antipathy of malice to merit Shebbeare is like a carter who "in his drunkenness bespattered the first men of the kingdom," and who will besmirch all who touch him Let him alone and "he will soon fall into the hands of the constable and beadle of the parish."

Shebbeare replied to this blast with an Appendix to the Occasional Critic, which was even more personal than the Occasional Critic itself¹¹⁰ As a severe review of the latter had appeared in the Monthly Review before the Appendix was written, Shebbeare assails both the Critical and the Monthly The most offensive part of the pamphlet was a mock advertisement ridiculing Smollett¹¹¹ The Critical took no notice of the Appendix except to print a letter by a "gentleman of learning and character" in the University of Cambridge who was assailed in that pamphlet as the author of that part of Smollett's review of the Occasional Critic that dealt with Shebbeare's criticism of the Polibius.¹¹² The

¹⁰⁸ Shebbeare criticized his translation of a fragment of Polibius

¹⁰⁹ No doubt a reference to Dr William Smellie In the Occasional Critic Shebbeare pretended to believe that Smellie's Treatise on Midwifery, which Smollett saw through the press, was really Smollett's work

¹¹⁰ It must have been published in November, 1757

¹¹¹ Both H S Buck, op. cit., and Arnold Whitridge, op. cit., print this It runs as follows

"To be lett and entered upon immediately
An empty author

He is equally qualified to write tragedy, comedy, farces, history, novels, voyages, treatises on midwifery, in physic, and in all kinds of polite letters . . . He will undertake to praise all works, be they ever so bad . . . in the Critical Review, for very small gratuities . . . Besides himself he has under him several journeymen authors, so that all who chuse to have a subject fitted up . . . may be commodiously furnished at his house . . . N B. He chuses to work for those who have never employed him before and you may enquire after his character of most booksellers, except R——n and A M——r " It seems that Smollett and Millar were not friendly, but there is nothing to show that there was ill-feeling between Smollett and Rivington at this time.

¹¹² Critical Review, Dec, 1757; 552, iv The Appendix asserts an impudent falsehood,

*Monthly Review*¹¹³ observed that the Appendix made it obvious that the chastisement "bestowed on this ill-natured writer" in the last Review was ineffectual. The Monthly Reviewers should have known that although what they wrote gave him pain it did him no good. Though thou should'st bray a Fool in a mortar, yet will not his foolishness depart from him.

The chastisement just referred to was administered in Owen Ruffhead's review of the *Occasional Critic*¹¹⁴. Ruffhead decided to censure Shebbeare but without vindicating Smollett or the Critical. Indeed, he professed to see resemblances between the Occasional Critic and Smollett. It was with his eye upon Griffith's Scotch associate William Rose, and not upon Smollett, that he rebukes Shebbeare for treating the Scotch with "brutish insolence." This writer, Ruffhead asserts, stoops to personalities and carries on a "tedious and miserable Hypercriticism . . . in a most illiberal and abusive manner . . . he has even ransack'd the Jakes for comparisons and illustrations."¹¹⁵ Just because the Empress-Queen had the Fourth Letter translated into High Dutch does not establish the merit of that epistle, as its author seems to think.¹¹⁶ The disloyalty of this tract, the spread of which was no doubt encouraged by Britain's foreign enemies, "merited the severest reprehension," and al-writes the Cambridge scholar, who could have been one of the editors of the Critical, Dr. Thomas Franklin, professor of Greek at Cambridge. He did not help Smollett with the article "being much better employed than in useless controversies with so abusive and scurrilous a writer as Dr. S—, who is hereby called upon publicly to recant his Lye, or to prove the truth of his assertion."¹¹³ Monthly Review, Dec., 1757, 562-563, xvii.

¹¹⁴ Monthly Review, Oct., 1757, 367-374, xvii. Ruffhead wrote reviews for both the Monthly Review and the Gentleman's Magazine. Griffiths may have given him some hints for the review of Shebbeare's pamphlet, and doubtless the review received the editor's approval before it was printed. Ruffhead's paper, the Con-test, supported the government.

¹¹⁵ Yet Ruffhead is not exactly refined. To the Occasional Critic's quip addressed to the Critical, "Pray, like your countrymen, the Highlanders, have you not shown your back-sides, in stooping to become critics?" Ruffhead replies, "Here we will only observe that if Buckhorse was to answer this elegant question, he would probably reply, with the same spirit of St. Giles—Ask mine a-e. And, perhaps, such an answer might not be altogether unsuitable to such a question." Buckhorse was a hawker and an "underboxer at Broughton's" who was put in a novel, Memoirs of the Noted Buckhorse (1756).

¹¹⁶ Shebbeare had defended his Fourth Letter in the Occasional Critic. Ruffhead declares here that he would not collect instances of false grammar, etc., but does not keep his word. He points out the bad French in Shebbeare's Le peuple instruit, ou les alliances dans lesquelles les ministres de la Grande Bretagne ont engagé la nation, etc., considérés dans une Quatrième lettre au peuple d'Angleterre (Paris? 1756), a translation of the Fourth Letter or a part of it, which was defended in the Occasional Critic. Ruffhead declares that not even a hare-brained Frenchman would call himself, as Shebbeare does here, an Athenian orator addressing the people of England. He is more like "a Demosthenes of Moorfields haranguing a holiday crowd, through an iron grate." Unless his friends can keep him from pen and ink, "his exuberant spleen and folly may, one day, reduce him to this wretched state of declaration."

though we will not say whether or not the Critical Reviewer used the right way to censure it, it is true that the author of the pamphlet is a "stranger to our constitution," an "unworthy intruder in the Republic of Letters" and a "profound enemy to the peace of his country."

A patriotic author, continues Ruffhead, in attacking the ministry will not do it through their characters and before the vulgar. To stoop to harangue the mob in such a scurrilous and personal manner makes for the confusion of anarchy. Since Shebbeare seems deliberately to aim at inflaming the populace, he is especially dangerous.

That Shebbeare was a rabble-rouser was in the eyes of Ruffhead, Smollett and Hogarth unforgivable. In Hogarth's Third Election Print, "Polling," Shebbeare in fetters and with the infamous Sixth Letter peeping from his coat-pocket, is shown whispering in the ear of an idiot. To prompt the people on how to vote is presented as one of the worst forms of demagoguery.

Continuing with his review, Ruffhead declares that the Occasional Critic exposed his indecency, ignorance and lack of judgment in attacking the Critical Reviewers but nevertheless had in many instances accidentally stumbled upon truth. Although he accuses them of being perfect masters of the Blackguard style, he himself uses it. If one were to believe what each says about the other, both have several similarities. Both appear to be "physicians without practice, authors without learning, men without decency, gentlemen without manners, and . . . if their critical merit is no greater than his . . . the public will, probably be ready to add—Critics without judgment."¹¹⁷

With Ruffhead's article the smolder of ill-feeling between the two Reviews broke into flame. In a fit of irritation Smollett had previously told the Monthly that he would not dispute with "any low-bred, pedantic Syntax-monger, retained as a servant or associate to any bookseller, or bookseller's wife."¹¹⁸ Ruffhead's article appeared in October. In the

¹¹⁷ Without the decorum or restraint of gentlemen or scholars "these invective altercators, who presume to enter into literary disputes, with the genius and phraseology of Rag-Fair, ought to be whipt through the Republic of Letters, and driven among the herd whose manners they assimilate for if their ideas are low, their reflections mean, and their language indecent, where is the difference between them and the mob? . . . Such mean, envious, and illiberal competitors have brought Letters into disgrace, and have made the name of Author so disreputable that we have seen men of genius and merit creep into a Bookseller's shop with as much caution and secrecy as a married man would steal into a brothel."

¹¹⁸ This passage, which is from the brave declaration of independence and defiance, the Letter to the Public, Critical Review, April, 1756, 287-288, I, is cited by Arnold Whitridge, op cit, as an "unprovoked thrust" against Griffiths. Smollett knew or suspected that the offending article mentioned in the Letter (an attack on the Critical and its very first article, Gentleman's Magazine, March, 1756, 141-142, xxvi) was by Ruffhead or another who wrote for the Monthly.

November Critical it was answered by the not very chivalric *To the Old Gentlewoman who directs the Monthly Review*¹¹⁹ Smollett professes to believe that it was Mrs Griffiths (and not Ruffhead) who had "squirted . . . malevolence at the authors of the Critical Review" in the Monthly's review of the Occasional Critic. He could have demonstrated, he claims, that with the exception of press errors and one or two slips of the pen every assertion of the Occasional Critic either false, frivolous or absurd. He points out the inconsistency of making a "strange pother" about decency and decorum and then making the coarse allusion to Buckhorse. After arguing against any similarity to Shebbeare, he suggests that Mrs Griffiths should have employed some sensible person to write the article.¹²⁰

In a defense of his History against an attack by Thomas Comber¹²¹ Smollett lists his enemies—"little inconsiderable curs barking at the moon" hereafter to be ignored. One was the despicable Dr. John Hill. Another, "the sage, the patriot, the sedate Dr. Sh——re [Shebbeare]," had attacked the History "tooth and nail" because of punishment meted out to him by articles in the Critical he supposed were by Smollett. And finally there were the "serene G——ths [Griffiths] and his spouse" who were enraged because they supposed that Smollett had set up the Critical in opposition to the Monthly. Consequently Griffiths had engaged this "obscure Grub," Comber, to bespatter the History.¹²²

Still another enemy soon appeared. By letter and pamphlet Dr. James Grainger assailed Smollett as the author of a severe article in the Critical.¹²³ When Grainger cast imputations upon his erudition, Smollett answered with what he imagined was about the worst thing he could say: "Spare your reflections, Dr. James Grainger, with respect to the Reviewer's learning . . . lest we declare the whole [letter] to be a scandalous

¹¹⁹ Critical Review, Nov., 1757, 469, rv. Goldsmith, who had just left the Monthly to write for the Critical, complained that Griffiths and his wife had tampered with his work. Perhaps this complaint suggested the inclusion of Mrs. Griffiths in the attack on the Monthly. See Benjamin C. Nangle, op. cit., on the Griffiths' reaction to Smollett's article.

¹²⁰ Before this the Monthly had given Smollett's works very fair and in general very favorable reviews. A very sudden change in attitude may be seen by comparing the review of the first three volumes of the History (Monthly Review, June, 1757, 530-536, xvi, by Goldsmith) and the review of volume four (April, 1758, 289-305, xviii, by Ruffhead).

¹²¹ Comber's A Vindication of the Great Revolution in England, etc., was reviewed in the Critical Review, Sept., 1758, 226-239, vi.

¹²² Smollett states that the "respectable characters" whom Comber claims the Critical had "treated with indelicacy" are Shebbeare, Hill and Griffiths. He imagines them "sitting in close divan, animated with double pots, encouraged with double pay, by the right worshipful the proprietors of R——n (Rivington) to review their attacks against the Complete History of England." Smollett had reason to suspect some connection between Griffiths and Hill. In 1751 Griffiths printed a collection of Hill's "Inspectors," among them No. 14, which was very offensive to Smollett.

¹²³ Smollett's reply to Grainger is in the Critical Review, Feb., 1759, 141-158, vii.

piece of calumny, which you have repeated at third hand from your great pattern and brother critick, Dr S——re [Shebbeare] ” As one would expect, Griffiths came to Grainger's support¹²⁴ and charged that malice and private pique had been the motives for the attack on Grainger's *Tibullus*¹²⁵ Of course, Smollett was at fault in thinking that Griffiths would associate himself with Shebbeare In spite of their quarrel both Reviews were one in their enmity toward the Doctor This is made plain in an interesting spurious Seventh Letter The critic of the *Monthly*¹²⁶ points out that the Letter is “a banter upon upon Dr Shebbeare” and makes him “rail at his mortal enemies, the Reviewers ” Although the good Doctor's “Idea of a Patriot” is very queer, it can hardly be brought into agreement with his post-or-pillory philosophy He terrifies people with his false alarms A libeller, hireling, and hackney writer for every petty bookseller who chooses to employ him—all should applaud him except a “few growling, mean, low, vile [the author here adds forty-eight similar adjectives]¹²⁷ Scotch Gentlemen Critics ” And since Shebbeare had been arrested, the critic felt it safe to add: “He is a great philosopher, and possessed of such admirable moderation, that he suffers himself to be kicked out of every coffee-house in town, without being discomposed, or shewing the least resentment ”

The Critical,¹²⁸ in the same vein of animosity, called the same pamphlet “a facetious and severe burlesque upon the swaggering Pistol, who, by his ranting nonsense, has been endeavouring these several years to deceive and inflame the Nation.” The reviewer, probably Smollett, imagines a scene in which the Doctor, having taken his printer's devil for a bailiff's follower, breaks out into a hysterical eulogy of the liberty of the press With a licencer of the press there would be no more Letters, no great characters traduced, no ministers blackened, and no gentlemen Scotch critics abused

¹²⁴ The quarrel between the Monthly and the Critical was so widely known that a pamphleteer made it the subject of a Battle of the Reviews, which was printed about the time of Smollett's trial for libel against Admiral Knowles In the pamphlet Rhechoam Gruffy is Griffiths, Sampson MacJackson is (perhaps) William Rose, Paddy Fitzpatrick is Goldsmith and Sawney MacSmallhead is Smollett

¹²⁵ Monthly Review, March, 1759, 273–274, xx.

¹²⁶ Monthly Review, March, 1758, 274, xviii

¹²⁷ The subtitle of the Occasional Critic ends thus “ in which the . impartiality, abilities, pretensions, performances, designs, etc , etc , etc , etc , etc , etc , etc , etc , of the Gentleman authors of that work are placed in a true light ”

¹²⁸ Critical Review, April, 1758, 350, v. After Shebbeare had served his prison term a second spurious Seventh Letter appeared The Critical Reviewer (Dec., 1761, 477, xii) calls it a florid rhapsody inflated with bombast “The attention paid to certain inflammatory pamphlets under this title, during a disgraceful period of the Ad——n, hath encouraged other authors to hang up the same sign to the public. Of the Seventh Letter we may say in the words of Shakespeare, ‘Oldcastle died of sweat, but this is not the man’ ”

Three months before this unfriendly pamphlet was reviewed the notorious Sixth Letter had appeared, with its oft-quoted motto: "And I looked, and beheld a pale Horse and his name that sat upon him was Death, and Hell followed with him." Although not much more abusive than some of its predecessors, it was more direct in its attack upon the Georges, or as Shebbeare called them, the Presbyterian Messiahs. He charged that the serious troubles of the English began with King William and grew steadily more acute with the Georges' increasing preoccupation with Hanover. No one knows what the Stuarts might have brought, he argues, but anyone can plainly see what "came with a North-East wind from Germany." He wishes George I had drowned in the storm he encountered as he returned to England after signing the Treaty of Hanover. George II is treated to a mock eulogy ending with an ironic compliment: "And in this enlightened Age [he is] the best Judge of the sublime arts, to whom Doctor Hill hath dedicated his God and Nature, and his Sleep of Plants." Shebbeare had concluded his Fourth Letter with a direct appeal to George II to save England. The Third Letter ended with an appeal to Pitt to shield the nation against the rage of "German Harpies." Both George II and Pitt had failed him. The Sixth Letter calls upon "Lord Bolingbroke's Vision of a Patriot King" for national salvation. At last Shebbeare's real political convictions were unveiled for all to see.¹²⁹

The authorities were now forced to act. A general warrant was issued against Shebbeare, his printer and his publisher on January 12, 1758. Eleven days later all copies of a Seventh Letter, which was then being printed, were seized and suppressed.¹³⁰ To the Critical Reviewers the Sixth Letter seemed "an extravagant rhapsody" of nonsense, treason and vulgar abuse. "We in charity believe the author has really lost his senses, and hope, that instead of mounting the pillory, of which he seems to be so ambitious, he will attract the notice of some benevolent Christian, who will provide him lodging and proper attendance in Moorfields."¹³¹ The ¹²⁹ W. E. H. Lecky, History of England in the Eighteenth Century, II, 442, in commenting on the Sixth Letter declares that it really represented the common sentiment of the English people and army in their resentment at the preference given the Hanoverian. He refers to the ill-feeling between the English and the Hanoverians at the battle of Dettingen. In Vol. III, 64, Lecky notes the punishment for the "virulent libel against the House of Hanover" and states that Shebbeare later was "pensioned by Bute in order that he should defend the peace." The pension was obtained by George Grenville and John Phillips, not Bute.

¹³⁰ Arnold Whitridge, op. cit., p. 27, gives the impression that the Seventh rather than the Sixth Letter caused the arrest. Likewise W. Tooke, editor of the Aldine edition of Charles Churchill (1866), in a note on "The Author" (verses 293-366) writes that the Seventh Letter caused the prosecution of Shebbeare.

¹³¹ Critical Review, Jan., 1758, 79, v. The critic's final remark is, "By the blessing of heaven, and the care of Dr. Battie, [who had just written a book on insanity] he may yet become good for something in his day and generation."

Monthly Reviewers were indignant and apprehensive.¹³² They feared that this "inflammatory letter" because of its "flaming licentiousness" might offer some designing minister a pretext for ending the liberty of the press. Every friend of liberty, therefore ought to express his abhorrence of such a "glaring abuse of liberty as is conspicuous in the pamphlets of this virulent Letter-writer."

On June 17 Shebbeare was tried for libel. The Sixth Letter, according to Lord Mansfield, nearly approached high treason. It was obvious that the Doctor had not a chance. So certain was the verdict that the jury was given the right to judge the question of law as well as the question of fact. On November 28 he was sentenced to pay a fine of five pounds, to serve three years in prison, to find security for his good behavior for seven years, and to stand in the pillory at Charing Cross on December 5. His political associates, seeing an opportunity to make political capital out of the pillorying, circulated thousands of bills inviting all to come to see the "British Champion." At the hour appointed a great crowd of people filled Charing Cross. They were astounded to see the Doctor being driven up the street in a smart coach instead of in the usual prison cart. They were surprised and amused when instead of placing hands and head in the pillory he stood upright between the upper and lower boards. And to shield him from the weather a liveried Irish chairman, hired for the occasion, held an umbrella over his head. These kindnesses were due to Beardmore, the undersheriff, an old friend of Shebbeare's and a co-worker on the Monitor, who in some way or other had been put in charge. The meaning of the concluding lines of Charles Churchill's attack on Shebbeare is clear.¹³³

Where is Shebbeare? Oh let not foul reproach,
Travelling thither in a City-coach,
The pillory dare to name the whole intent
Of that parade was fame, not punishment,
And that old, staunch Whig, Beardmore, standing by,
Can in full court give that report the lie!¹³⁴

¹³² Monthly Review, Jan., 1758, 93, xviii. The critic thoughtfully appended to his article a list of the Monthly's reviews of the preceding five letters. Curiosity about Shebbeare was at such a pitch that a hungry garreteer published a Review of the Sixth Letter to the People of England, wherein the principal passages of that malignant piece are quoted at large and refuted. This was reviewed in the Critical Review, April, 1758, 350, v, and in the Monthly Review, May, 1758, 486, xviii. The first reviewer points out that the author and publisher concealed their names for fear of being called seditious and derides the author's "schoolboy" comments that are "anything but refutations." The second reviewer thinks that the author shows proper abhorrence of the "licentiousness" of Shebbeare.

¹³³ "The Author" 1763. Verses 293-306 are a scathing indictment of Shebbeare. Beardmore for his part in this fiasco had to serve two months in prison and pay a fine of fifty pounds. Of course, he was no Whig. Churchill in calling him one is ironic.

After an hour of this farce the "British Champion," who from time to time rested by placing his hands "upon the holes of the pillory," got back into the coach and was driven toward prison amid the cheers of the crowd. Teague, the Irishman, came to him in the King's Bench and asked for more money. "Only consider the disgrace of the thing," he pleaded.¹³⁵ But it is doubtful whether Shebbeare had such fine susceptibilities. It is certain that he did not attribute the relative mildness of his punishment to the forbearance of the Hanoverian King as he should have done, according to the author of A Letter of Consolation to Dr. Shebbeare,¹³⁶ who accuses the Doctor of defamation, misrepresentation, and of offering "the most virulent and envenomed Abuse, the most flagrant Insults on his present Majesty, and his royal Father."

Although the King's Bench might have been, as Smollett said in Sir Launcelot Greaves, "full of mirth and jollity," Shebbeare did not relish it. His family was dependent upon him. He felt that he had been abandoned by his political associates. Perhaps he was a restless prisoner and fomented political strife in prison as he had outside. In his novelistic ac-

¹³⁴ William Mason in "An Epistle to Dr. Shebbeare" (1777) writes

"O for a thousand tongues! and every tongue
Like Johnson's, arm'd with words of six feet long,
.
.
.
.
.
Then should my Tory numbers, old Shebbeare,
Tickle the tattered fragment of thy ear!"

In a note referring to this passage in relation to the Churchill verses quoted above, Mason declares that the Doctor has only to show his ears in public to prove Churchill wrong in saying that his ears were not harmed. Mason refers again to the Doctor's ears in the beginning of "An Heroic Epistle."

"Witness ye Hills, ye Johnsons, Scotts, Sheabbears (?)
Hark to my call, for some of you have ears."

¹³⁵ Dr. Johnson, like Teague, thought that dishonor clung to the pillory. In opposition to Boswell he maintained that Shebbeare "could not mouth and strut about as he used to do, after he had been there. People are not willing to ask a man to their table who has stood in the pillory." Allibone's Dictionary, "Shebbeare."

¹³⁶ Memoirs of the Pillory being a consolatory Epistle to Dr. Shebbeare, etc., 2nd ed. 1759, seems to be a similar effusion. The Letter of Consolation attacks the Sixth Letter and declares that Shebbeare under former kings, such as his beloved Stuarts, would have come off much worse. The Critical Review, Dec., 1758, 518, vi, in its article on this pamphlet states that "the person to whom this is addressed has no occasion for volatiles, or, if he had, he would find no flavour in this vapid performance," and believes that not the King but the people "who retrenched the dangerous prerogatives of the crown" are to be accredited with the humanity shown Shebbeare. The review in the Monthly Review, Dec., 1758, 583-584, xix, remarks that the instances of severe punishment given state libellers in the reigns of the Stuarts are intended to show the Doctor that he lives in milder and happier days.

count of the King's Bench¹³⁷ Smollett describes a Dr Crabshaw, a physician of "atrabilious aspect," and a brewer, his adversary, as demagogues "of warm and impetuous tempers," whose "intrigues have embroiled the whole place insomuch that it is dangerous to walk the street on account of the continual skirmishes of their partisans." But if Shebbeare had political friends within the prison, they were like those without and gave him little financial assistance. He complained that during all the three years of his confinement he did not get more than twenty guineas help "from all the world." Once, when very ill, he applied for permission to be "carried into the rules" a few hours "in a day," and although Lord Mansfield acceded to his petition, "the prayer of it was denied and defeated by Judge Foster."

Much of the time he was busy with pen and ink. After his projected history came to naught, he wrote a pamphlet in defense of the delinquent of Minden, Lord George Sackville.¹³⁸ As this nobleman was an intimate friend of Lord Bute, the writing of this seems to indicate that Shebbeare was making new connections and even trying to forget, for the nonce, his hatred of the Scotch. And then he bent to work with a will. George II was dead. The new monarch, who freely aired himself as Bolingbroke's Patriot King, seemed to offer a happy ending to all the prisoner's present woes. For him Shebbeare wrote the History of the Sumatrans,¹³⁹ which was completed, at least in its first form, some months before the author left prison.

Soon there were signs that the laudatory remarks in this work were appreciated in the right quarters. As early as 1762 it was rumored that ¹³⁷ Sir Launcelot Greaves, Ch. xx. Shebbeare may have suggested Crabshaw although Crabshaw is brave enough to fight while Ferret is cowardly and furtive.

¹³⁸ An Answer to a Letter to a late Noble Commander of the British forces, etc. (1759). An attack on this pamphlet was reviewed in the Critical Review, Nov., 1759, 410-411. Shebbeare's pamphlet is here referred to as "the production of the far-famed Dr. Sh---re, who has engaged in his lordship's vindication, either as a volunteer, or upon other motives, perhaps more interesting."

¹³⁹ The whole title is The History of the Excellence and Decline of the Constitution, religion, laws, manners, and genius of the Sumatrans, and the Restoration thereof in the reign of Amurath the Third. Norgate in the D.N.B. article on Shebbeare gives the date for this as 1763, but there was a two-volume edition printed by G. Kearsley as early as 1760. Shebbeare took more pains than usual with this work but as usual followed Bolingbroke in style and ideas. It is an attack on Whig policy and administration, and a panegyric of George III and his ministers. A review of Volume II appeared in the Monthly Review, March, 1763, 245, xxviii. The critic believes that the picture painted here of the happiness of the Sumatrans [British] during the reign of Amurath [George III] exaggerates. "The scene . . . is, we fear, too desirable to be real: indeed, we have more reasons than one to conceive, this writer to be no Prophet. But whatever his pretensions to prophecy, he certainly hath very little to panegyric, which, it must be allowed, is not the Doctor's talent: this volume being one of the most insipid and unentertaining of all his literary performances."

Shebbeare was to have a pension. A poet, celebrating the retirement of Newcastle, hails Bute in these terms:

In Caledonia see! a genius rise,
 A genius formed for deeds of high emprise

 Beneath his sway what halcyon days approach!
 While bare-foot Sawney vaults into his coach
 In more than native pride, the thistle glows
 With all the beauties of the faded rose
 S—e [Shebbeare] is mute place, pension, taxes cease,
 And faction wears the candid robes of peace ¹⁴⁰

Shebbeare and others had derided George II for failing to encourage artists and writers. Bute decided to make amends. Many a poor Scotchman, and Englishman too, now were provided with place and pension. A few men of real attainment like Smollett, who refused a pension but received financial support for The Briton,¹⁴¹ or Hogarth, now made sergeant-painter to the King, or Johnson, were honored too, but no more or no less than the less worthy. Hence the indignation of Macaulay, who resented the placing of Dr. Johnson on the same level with "a wretched scribbler named Shebbeare, who had nothing in common with Johnson except violent Jacobitism, and who had stood in the pillory for a libel on the Revolution."¹⁴² But the Sixth Letter was a libel on the Georges. Macaulay was inaccurate also in stating that Bute pensioned Shebbeare. For a Scotch minister to reward Britain's most notorious Scotch barter must have seemed absurd even to Bute. After Bute had withdrawn, George Grenville, at the request of Sir John Philips, granted the pension early in 1764. That this minister made quick use of Shebbeare's pen is indicated by the pamphlet written by the Doctor under Grenville's direction and sent by Walpole to Lord Hertford with the curious remark, "We do not ransack Newgate and the pillory for writers."¹⁴³

This granting of pensions is satirized in the Adventures of an Atom. Yak-strot [Bute] proposes to "display his liberality in patronizing genius and the arts" but is able to unearth only five men of genius in the whole nation. "One was a secularized bonza [parson] from Ximo [Scotland], another a malcontent poet of Niphon [England], a third, a reformed comedian of Xicoco [Ireland], a fourth, an empyric, who had outlived his practice, and a fifth, a decayed apothecary, who was a baid, quack, author, chymist, philosopher, and simpler, by profession." These can be identified in turn as John Home, Dr Johnson, Thomas Sheridan, Shebbeare, and John Hill, the "tympanitical inspector."¹⁴⁴ All these together, Smollett disdainfully observes, were not given as much money as many a private nobleman spends on a kennel of hounds.

¹⁴⁰ "An Epistle to his Grace, the Duke of N—e, on his Resignation, By an Independent Whig," 1762. Reviewed in the Critical Review, July, 1762, 77, xiv.

¹⁴¹ In "The Author" Churchill calls Smollett a pensioner, saying that what makes Smollett write makes Johnson dumb. Possibly one of Smollett's motives for refusing the pension was his indignation at Shebbeare's being granted one. Another may have been the smallness of the grant. ¹⁴² See Macaulay's The Earl of Chatham.

¹⁴³ D N B "Shebbeare." Here Norgate also notes that Shebbeare engaged with the solicitor of the treasury in writing against Lord Chief Justice Pratt in a paper, The Moderator.

For accepting a pension Shebbeare has often been accused of forsaking his associates for his own advantage and of changing his political opinions with suspicious rapidity.¹⁴⁵ But the accusation is not entirely supported by the facts. The Doctor saw little or no inconsistency in changing from an enemy of George II into a champion of a Monarch who from early youth had been taught to scorn his grandfather as a weak king, and to worship Bolingbroke's Patriot King as an ideal. It was easy to forget that George III was a Hanoverian when his policies were like those advocated by the Doctor himself. It is said that the King in a conversation with Sir John Philips referred to Shebbeare "in very favorable terms." The King and the Doctor shared Bolingbroke's belief in the need of a powerful ruler. Shebbeare did not, therefore, change his political opinions to any extent. As to the abandonment of Pitt, that had happened long before. He had disappointed the Doctor, who thought that a minister ought to provide protection for a pamphleteer whose pen had helped him to the highest place in the government. The eulogy of Pitt in the Third Letter (1756) should have moved a mountain, but no, the Minister did not stay the hand of punishment. The Doctor paid the penalty. And this for writing words that were, as he said, less offensive than those the Prime Minister had spoken time and again in the House of Commons. Moreover Pitt had ill-treated Sir John Philips, who had applied to him in behalf of Shebbeare. In other words, Pitt would have none of him. The Doctor, therefore cannot be said to have "abandoned" him. The blackest page on the Doctor's record is not that of tergiversation but the one of demagoguery and pillory-or-post opportunism.

¹⁴⁴ Arnold Whitridge, op cit, Ch. IV, points out that Seccombe identified the apothecary as Shebbeare. Whitridge is right in taking him as Dr John Hill, whose Lucina sine Conubitu is glanced at in a near-by passage describing how Pitt had blown the people up until they believed that "food was not necessary to the support of life; nor an intercourse of the sexes required for the propagation of species." Bute obtained for Hill the management of the Royal Gardens, worth 2000 pounds a year, but it is believed that the grant was not confirmed.

¹⁴⁵ E.g., E. A. Baker, op cit, v, 46, "... for Shebbeare, in spite of the apparent frankness of his views and fearlessness in asserting them, seems to have ratted, and made a suspiciously quick transit from pillory to pension." Also Arnold Whitridge, op. cit, p. 27. "After emerging from prison Shebbeare changed his tactics and devoted himself to the Court, even going so far as to attack his old hero, Pitt, for which abject tergiversation he was granted a pension of 400 pounds." But the pension was only 200 pounds a year.

In the following years the pensioner appeared at intervals as the champion of the King¹⁴⁶ and his various ministers. His name was seen occasionally in the Critical or Monthly, but as before in the midst of the same unflattering adjectives.¹⁴⁷ Neither his style nor his pet aversions changed. He went on hating women, William the Third, the Whigs and the Scotch. The last two pamphlets worthy of mention were full of spleen. The first, An Answer to the Queries, reviewed by Andrew Kippis,¹⁴⁸ is an attempted vindication of his conduct in regard to his projected history, an assault on Townshend and Lee for the speeches they made in disapproval of his pension, and an abusive outbreak against William the Third,¹⁴⁹ who is blackened to make George III appear brighter in contrast. It was the second, the "essay" on Dr. Price's Observations,¹⁵⁰ that moved William ¹⁴⁶ E.g., he defended the American policy of George III in the Public Advertiser and elsewhere. In 1774 he wrote a pamphlet attacking Burke, whom he did not like because of his parody of Bolingbroke and opposition to North.

¹⁴⁷ E.g., Critical Review, Dec., 1762, 380, xiv. In reviewing One More Letter to the People of England By their old Friend, the critic remarks, "What can be expected from a copy of such an original as the patriot S—— [Shebbeare], but scurrility, raving, and sedition." Allibone's cites the Monthly Reviewer's criticism of Shebbeare's An Answer to the Printed Speech of Edmund Burke, Esq., April 19, 1774. This was, according to the reviewer, composed of "slandorous invectives, coarse witticisms, vulgar obscene allusions, and scandalous epithets."

¹⁴⁸ An Answer to the Queries contained in a Letter to Dr. Shebbeare, printed in the Public Ledger, Aug. 10, etc., etc. (1774). Monthly Review, Jan., 1775, 31-35, lxi. Kippis grants that the Doctor makes a good excuse for disappointing the subscribers to his history, but states that the "scurrility to which he descends with respect to Mr. Townshend is disgraceful to any writer of tolerable talents, and as to Mr. Lee, Dr. Shebbeare's pious and charitable wish is, that his exit may be like that of Algernon Sidney." Kippis concludes with the observation that no Prince or administration of the Brunswick line, "if lunacy hath not possessed them, can approve of the raving positions, and the bitter spirit of this writer."

¹⁴⁹ The treatment of William here was resented by so many that Shebbeare hurt his cause much more than he helped it. Hugh Baillie's answer to this pamphlet was reviewed in the Monthly Review, Jan., 1775, 35-36, lxi.

In 1774 Fox protested in the House of Commons against the Whigs' coupling of the names of Johnson and Shebbeare together, saying that the government had pensioned a He-bear and a She-bear. In 1776 Wilkes spoke of them as "two famous doctors" who were the "state hirelings called pensioners," and whose names "disgraced the civil list."

¹⁵⁰ An Essay on the Origin, Progress, and Establishment of National Society, in which Dr. Price's Observations, etc., are fairly examined and reflected. This was reviewed in the Monthly Review, Sept., 1776, 240-241, lv. The critic notes many tenets repugnant to the principles of all free governments expressed here. Also examples of faulty reasoning, low coarse humor, and foul, intemperate, opprobrious language.

Mason to write his "Epistle to Dr. Shebbeare,"¹⁵¹ wherein the Doctor is addressed as—

Wretch! that from slander's filth art ever gleaning,
 Spite without spite, malice without meaning
 The same abusive, base, abandon'd thing,
 When pilloried, or pension'd by a king,
 Old as thou art, methinks, 'twere sage advice,
 That North should call thee off from hunting Pice.
 Some younger blood-hound of his bawling pack
 Might sorer gall his Presbyterian back
 Thy toothless jaws should free thee from the fight,
 Thous canst but mumble, when thou mean'st to bite

* * *

It was Shebbeare's fate to have his memory perpetuated chiefly through his enemies. And these he seemed to inspire with an animosity that was undying. Indeed, the only writer who has even been suspected of relenting in his hostility is Smollett. Evidence of such a change in attitude toward Shebbeare is supposed to be found in the Continuation of the Complete History of England (1760–65). Norgate¹⁵² writes that although Shebbeare had criticized both the Critical Review and the History (1757), the passage relating to the Doctor's prosecution in the revised edition of the History is "curiously laudatory." In her note on Shebbeare in the *Early Diary*¹⁵³ Mrs. Rame Ellis indignantly writes, "He [Shebbeare] was a Jacobite, so Mr. Strange and Miss Reid put up with him, and Smollett writes of him in his History of England as this good man." H. S. Buck¹⁵⁴ in observing that Smollett in his sketch of the liberal arts in the reign of George II makes amends by praising his former enemies Garrick, Fielding, Quin, Lyttleton and Akenside, states that "even Shebbeare steps forth here"¹⁵⁵ as 'this good man'." But Smollett, he hastens to add, was not known to have become personally reconciled with Shebbeare. With the ¹⁵¹ Only about a score of lines in this poem refer to Shebbeare. His name in the title shows that Mason counted on the notoriety of the Doctor to attract the attention of a large public. The poem was written in 1777, as by Malcolm MacGreggor, a name to irritate the Scotch barter Shebbeare, who is called by Mason in a prefatory note "a hackney scribbler of a newspaper," "a pensioner," and a "broken apothecary." The Monthly Review Dec., 1777, (488, LVII) thought "The Epistle" "a keen, acute, spirited satire on court connections, in which poor old Shebbeare comes in for 'stripes he was not formed to feel'."

¹⁵² D N B "Shebbeare." Norgate gives the amalgamated Hume and Smollett History of England (1855), x, 186, as his reference.

¹⁵³ Early Diary (ed. 1889), Feb. 20, 1774, I, 285.

¹⁵⁴ Op. cit., p. 75.

¹⁵⁵ In this context here is ambiguous. It should be taken to mean 'in the History,' but not 'in this passage.' Smollett never could have considered the Doctor important or even respectable enough to be listed with this distinguished group.

foregoing as his authorities E. A. Baker writes, “. . . but Smollett was not always in the same mind about Shebbeare.”¹⁵⁶

The passage in question follows a description of how a spy, Hensey, had a death sentence changed to exile, either because of information he gave the ministry or because the ministry considered him “so insensible and insignificant” In the first edition¹⁵⁷ it runs as follows:

The severity of the g——t [Government] was much about the same period [1758] exercised on Dr Shebbeare, a public writer, who in a series of printed letters to the people of England, had animadverted on the conduct of the M——y [Ministry] in the most acrimonious terms, stigmatized some great names with all the virulence of censure, and even assaulted the t——ne [throne] itself with oblique insinuation and ironical satire The M——y, incensed at the boldness, and still more enraged at the success, of this author, whose writings were bought with avidity by the public, determined to punish him severely for his arrogance and abuse, and he was apprehended by a warrant from the secretary's office His sixth letter to the people of England was pitched upon as a foundation of a prosecution After a short trial in the court of King's bench, he was found guilty of having written the sixth letter to the people of England, adjudged a libellous pamphlet, sentenced to stand in the pillory, to pay a small fine, to be imprisoned three years, and give security for his future behavior so that in effect, this man suffered more for having given vent to the unguarded effusions of mistaken zeal, couched in the language of passion and scurrility, than was inflicted on Hensey, a convicted traitor, who had acted as a spy for France, and betrayed his own country for hire.

One must not take the absence of the harsh language that marked Smollett's reviews of Shebbeare's pamphlets in the Critical Review as a sign of a change in personal attitude. Smollett is simply trying to be restrained and objective, as is befitting the historian Yet there is a Tory bias here He disapproves of the Whig ministry's lack of a sense of proportion in punishing Shebbeare too harshly and Hensey not harshly enough But disapproval of Whig justice is not approval of Shebbeare. The passage, as it stands, offers little to support the view that Smollett had undergone a change of mind in regard to his old enemy.

However, in a subsequent revision of the Continuation, someone, seeking to make Smollett's dissatisfaction with the punishment meted out to Shebbeare seem like righteous sympathy for him, inserted the word good to make that part of the sentence read, “this good man suffered more, etc” But the addition of good makes the first part of the paragraph seem absurd and out of harmony with the rest of it. If Smollett had made this addition it seems logical to suppose that he would have revised the whole

¹⁵⁶ Op cit, v, 47

¹⁵⁷ Continuation of the Complete History of England, 3v 1760 II, 408

passage to make it consistent. Indeed, there seems to be no evidence that he himself revised this passage. On the contrary it is highly probable that the good was inserted after his death.¹⁵⁸

In his other writings there is no indication that he altered his opinion of Shebbeare. Although Smollett's active participation in the Critical Review ended shortly after his release from the King's Bench in February, 1761, the animosity that characterizes the reviews of the Letters reappears in the Adventures of an Atom (1769) and in Humphrey Clinker (1771), where there are three or more scornful allusions¹⁵⁹ to the Doctor. Therefore it is extremely unlikely that Smollett ever changed his attitude. To the end of his days he must have considered Shebbeare a despicable rabble-rouser and quack no more worthy of friendship or sympathetic regard than a charlatan like "Dr." John Hill, another writer whom Smollett never ceased to despise.

* * *

The picture of the scurrilous Doctor, painted as it is almost entirely by his foes, is not flattering. His writings do little to change the impression. However, one of his biographers cautions us. "It is said, that those who should form a judgment of his character by his writings would be deceived, and that his disposition was better than these seem to promise, and indeed the manners in which he speaks of his connections exhibits traits of a liberal and benevolent mind."¹⁶⁰ Yet even this writer, after praising Shebbeare as a father, has to admit that he had a hot temper, as obstinate, and would not be contradicted. Shebbeare could, no doubt, feel loyalty and gratitude, but nuances escaped him, and he did not know restraint. A person was either to be attacked tooth and nail or embraced with ecstatic sentimental outbursts. Something of the churlishness of Johnson and the headlong intemperate anger of Smollett was in his temperament. He was full of gall, perverse, quarrelsome and inconsiderate of others.

¹⁵⁸ Lewis M. Knapp, The Publication of Smollett's Complete History . . . and Continuation, The Library, Fourth Series, xvi, 293-308, notes that in the amalgamation of Hume's and Smollett's histories (e.g., Cadell's edition in 1785) Anderson found "several omissions, transpositions and additions, for which no reason is assigned." It seems reasonable to suppose that the good was inserted at this time.

¹⁵⁹ There are contemptuous allusions to Shebbeare and his pillory-or-post opportunism in Davis's letter to Rev. Dustwich, in Jerry's letter to Sir Watkin Phillips concerning Dick Ivy, and in Matthew Bramble's letter about literary conditions in London. In the last the dogmatic, arrogant and presumptuous critic who, using politics as a criterion, "rejudged" writers of the past and called his contemporaries "dunces, pedants, plagiaries, quacks, and imposters," seems to refer to Shebbeare's opinions as set forth in the Letters of Batista Angeloni and the Occasional Critic.

¹⁶⁰ European Magazine, Aug., 1788, II, 83-87.

He was an egoist. Always he was so confident of his own wisdom and rectitude and importance that he counted those who differed with him as naught. Hence the general opinion that he was tough-skinned. Boswell said that ridicule cast upon him did not move him "so long as he could find reviews to write at six guineas per sheet and enemies to abuse at three shillings per pamphlet."¹⁶¹ He liked to play a churlish part. Fanny Burney describes how he referred to his wife in an insulting manner at Miss Reid's.¹⁶² Because his hostess was a Scotch woman, he insulted the Scotch. Because there were five women present, he insulted the female sex. Poor Fanny and Sissy "never presumed to open [their] lips for fear of being affronted" by the "growler." His egoism explains his pose as the great Patriot from whom alone could come salvation for England.

Related to this excessive self-esteem was a desperate audacity bordering on insolence and effrontery. Smollett admired Ferret's daring but thought it the rashness of a madman. In Sir Launcelot Greaves he writes that Ferret's attack on the government made many think he ought to be punished "for his presumption in reflecting so scurrilously on ministers and measures. . . . Of this sentiment was our adventurer [Sir Launcelot], though he could not help admiring the courage of the orator, and owning within himself, that he had mixed some melancholy truths with his scurrility."¹⁶³ But Smollett makes Ferret's courage a verbal one. Physically Ferret is a coward and runs away or hides when threatened with bodily injury. As we have seen, the author of a spurious Seventh Letter also describes Shebbeare as a coward. He is such a "philosopher" that "he allows himself to be kicked out of every coffee-house in town."¹⁶⁴ Perhaps there was some basis for this charge. There certainly is for the accusation of closeness in money matters. For instance, he is known to have bickered over the payments he was to receive from persons who engaged him to write.

His style was often censured for its slovenliness and abusive coarseness. That he could write a fairly respectable prose is proved by a biographical sketch, The Character of Edward Hyde, Earl of Clarendon, which was published in the European Magazine shortly after his death.¹⁶⁵ Here ¹⁶¹ Cited by Allibone's from Boswell's Johnson, year 1783. Boswell, who was introduced to Shebbeare by General Oglethorpe, thought the Doctor's "knowledge and abilities much above the class of ordinary writers." Boswell admired Angeloni's Letters, and for some reason did not seem to be irritated in the least by Shebbeare's Scotch baiting.

¹⁶² Early Diary, Feb. 20, 1774.

¹⁶³ Ch. x. Part of this passage is an echo of Smollett's review of Shebbeare's Third Letter (1756).

¹⁶⁴ Monthly Review, March, 1758, 274, xviii.

¹⁶⁵ It is in the issue of Oct., 1788, pp. 283-286. It had probably been prepared for the edition of Clarendon's History that Shebbeare was not allowed to publish.

for once he had taken due care. However, he struck off his pamphlets and novels in such haste that a careless style was inevitable. It is chiefly owing to this mean style that these are now generally regarded merely as interesting records of the times. Shebbeare was often coarse in writing and in speech. Mrs. Raine Ellis, in a note to Fanny Burney's account of the Doctor at Miss Reid's, remarks that some sentences that Fanny wrote down "in amazement" had been crossed out, seemingly by another hand, as too "gross" to be suffered to stand in the manuscript.¹⁶⁶ Shebbeare was less discreet in company than Smollett, but when he wrote he certainly was no coarser than Smollett, or other polemical writers of his day. Bolingbroke declared that journalists have "ill manners, Impudence, a foul Mouth, and a fouler Heart,"¹⁶⁷ and his disciple shows that most of his master's words were only too true.

A comparison of Ferret in Sir Launcelot Greaves with the model reveals that Smollett had a surprisingly thorough understanding of Shebbeare's character. Ferret is not conceived in the spirit of unmitigated acrimony but rather in that of the amused astonishment caused by an original who touches on the preposterous but who is not yet a monster. He is furtive and grotesque, and even a little sinister, rather than repulsive. In spite of the caricaturist's simplification and exaggeration, the physical and mental features of Shebbeare are clearly recognizable,¹⁶⁸ as is shown by the description introducing Ferret.

The solitary guest had something very forbidding in his aspect, which was contracted by an habitual frown. His eyes were small and red, and so deep set in ¹⁶⁶ Early Diary, Feb. 20, 1774.

¹⁶⁷ Dissertation on Parties. Shebbeare had a hand in the Monitor, which he and his associates must have regarded as carrying on the work of the Craftsman.

¹⁶⁸ For instance, the sweeping eyebrows pulled down in a half-frown, one of the most striking features of the Bromley engraving of Shebbeare, are easily recognizable in Smollett's description. The engraving was printed in the European Magazine, Aug., 1788, 83. Here Shebbeare is represented as a plump Englishman in the late fifties, posing in a fez and loose coat. The finely curved upper lip, the small round chin and chubby cheeks give the lower part of the face a boyish look, but the long retreating forehead, with the fez, gives the upper part a hard Oriental cast.

In Ch. II Ferret is described as being so frightened that "his eyes retired within their sockets" and "his complexion, which was naturally of a copper hue," as shifting to a leaden color. Mason in his "Epistle to Dr. Shebbeare" assumes in the following that his face is bronzed.

"Enough of souls unless we waste a line
Shebbeare, to pay a compliment to thine
Which forg'd, of old, of strong Hibernian brass, Shines through the Paris plaster of thy face,
And bronzes it, secure from shame, or sense,
To the flat glare of finish'd impudence."

the sockets, that each appeared like the unextinguished snuff of a farthing candle, gleaming through the horn of a dark lanthorn. His nostrils were elevated in scorn, as if his sense of smelling had been perpetually offended by some unsavoury odour, and he looked as if he wanted to shrink within himself from the impertinence of society. He wore a black periwig as straight as the pinions of a raven, and this covered with a hat flapped, and fastened to his head by a speckled handkerchief tied under his chin. He was wrapped in a greatcoat of brown frieze, under which he seemed to conceal a small bundle. His name was Ferret, and his character distinguished by three peculiarities. He was never seen to smile, he was never heard to speak in praise of any person whatsoever, and he was never known to give a direct answer to any question that was asked, but seemed, on all occasions, to be actuated by the most perverse spirit of contradiction.

The controversies between Sir Launcelot, to a certain extent the author's mouthpiece, and Ferret, who represents the political chicanery which is part of the evil against which Smollett's Don Quixote fights, echo much of the journalistic warfare that had taken place between Smollett as critic and Shebbeare as author of the Letters. For instance, Sir Launcelot's attack on Ferret for spreading false insinuations to poison the minds of his Majesty's subjects "in defiance of common honesty and common sense" is like a Smollett review in the Critical. In the clever mountebank scene, where Smollett, laughing at the dual nature of the Doctor, makes Ferret weave together an empiric's praise of his nostrum and a politician's dispraise of "High German quacks, that have blistered, sweated, bled and purged the nation into atrophy," one recognizes the Doctor's hatred of the Hanoverian foreign policy.

In describing Ferret's philosophy Smollett takes the opportunity to ridicule Shebbeare's opportunism and seemingly to cast a derisive glance at the sentimental primitivism of Lydia. For the benevolent state of nature as set forth in this novel Smollett substitutes Hobbes' state of nature where self-preservation is the only law. He has Ferret excuse the selfish cunning that freed him from Gobble's clutches but threw Sir Launcelot into them, with these words: "I look upon mankind to be in a state of nature, a truth which Hobbes has stumbled on by accident. I think every man has a right to avail himself of his talents, even at the expense of his fellow creatures; just as we see the fish, and other animals of creation, devouring one another." Accordingly he has a right to play cruelly with the hopes and fears of Crowe and Crabshaw when they seek to make use of his powers as a fortuneteller. But events show that Ferret is not consistent. When he himself becomes involved in a painful situation, he complains bitterly at the injustice of it.¹⁶⁹ He should have read

¹⁶⁹ When Ferret finds himself in debt he indulges in the following high-sounding sophistry "I have been oppressed and persecuted by the government for speaking truth; your further in Hobbes and found out what was said about the rights of others

It seems that one or two of Ferret's traits came from Cadwallader Crabtree of Peregrine Pickle, although Shebbeare might have had them too. Both Ferret and Crabtree are misanthropic cynics. Penny's friendship turns into dislike when he concludes that Crabtree is a "morose cynic, not so much incensed against the follies and vices of mankind as delighted with the distress of his fellow creatures." Ferret is represented as unwilling to walk ten paces to save Captain Crowe from the gallows, and as consenting to frighten him at the vigil "merely in hope of seeing a fellow creature miserable." Ferret is even more indifferent to the suffering of others than Crabtree. Indeed to make others unhappy was essential to his own happiness. Smollett describes him as being constitutionally incapable of enjoying the serenity made possible by the financial security that came to him at the end of the novel. After a brief respite his "misanthropy" returned. "He could not bear to see his fellow creatures happy around him, and signified his disgust to Sir Launcelot, declaring his intention of returning to the metropolis, where he knew there would be always food sufficient for the ravenous appetite of his spleen."

How correct Smollett was in his estimate of Shebbeare's inability to change his nature was proved by later events. Neither Sir Launcelot's bounty nor Grenville's pension could alter what was fixed in the personality. The Doctor was a born Grub-streeter and political pamphleteer. Owing to the novelist's thorough comprehension of this character, Ferret is one of the most convincing of the minor figures in the novel of that day.¹⁷⁰ Moreover, he is interesting as a memento and as a kind of by-product of the animosity that arose between two typical eighteenth-century personalities, one a great novelist and the other an original whose character is more notable than his writings.

JAMES R. FOSTER

Long Island University

omnipotent laws have reconciled contradictions. That which is acknowledged to be truth in fact, is construed falsehood in law, and great reason we have to boast of a constitution founded on the basis of absurdity."

¹⁷⁰ Eugene Joliat, Smollett et la France (1935), p. 206, in writing of the reception of Sir Launcelot Greaves in France, observes that Le Drapeau Blanc, June 10, 1824, gave the novel a favorable review because the Toryism of Smollett was pleasing to the ultra-royalists of that time. Mr. Joliat adds, "Le critique remarque surtout, dans le roman, le personnage de Ferret, un 'coureur de l'opposition,' un agitateur politique d'avant-garde, allant de ville en ville invectiver le gouvernement."

GOETHE AND IBSEN'S BUTTON-MOULDER

HENRIK IBSEN in his Peer Gynt has created a minor figure of absorbing interest—the Button-moulder—who embodies the poet's ideas regarding immortality. He appears grim and macabre as, with his huge ladle, he comes to fetch Peer's soul, yet there is a sort of Mephistophelian humor in his tone:

The Button-moulder

Your grave is dug ready, your coffin bespoke
The worms in your body will live at their ease;
But I have orders, without delay,
On Master's behalf to fetch in your soul!

Peer

It can't be! Like this, without any warning—!

The Button-moulder

It's an old tradition at burials and births
To appoint in secret the day of the feast,
With no warning at all to the guest of honor.¹

He explains that those human beings who have done something distinctive—either good or bad—live on in heaven or hell, these concepts being retained, while the vast majority, the great average, are, as Archer well translates it, again to be “merged in the mass” (p. 238) (at ga over i massen) by going into the Button-moulder's ladle. What is the provenience of this original figure, this “unorthodox symbol”?² The explanation lies partly in what biographers tell us of the dramatist's early life. We learn there why Ibsen chose precisely a button-moulder and not one of the many other comparable symbols:

Ibsen's Button-moulder was formed from one of the memories of his own childhood. In his boyhood days he himself had done some button-moulding, and we can imagine that he sometimes sat pondering the horror of being lost in the molten mass. Now the picture returned to him, and became to him the symbol of the wasted life which is blotted out.³

Before the appearance of the Button-moulder, there is an earlier reference to button-moulding in the scene toward the end of the third act in which Aase is rummaging among her ancient belongings. She comes upon an old casting-ladle (p. 96) and recalls that little Peer Gynt had used it to play at button-moulding. In the fifth act the Button-moulder refers to this when he says, "You've worked at the craft" (p. 238).

¹ P. 235. Page references to Peer Gynt are to Archer's translation (New York, 1908).

² P. G. La Chesnais, Henrik Ibsen, Œuvres Complètes (Paris, no date—appeared 1938), VIII, 64.

³ Halvdan Koht, The Life of Ibsen (New York, 1931), II, 31.

We learn a bit more from the Danish novelist Vilhelm Bergsøe, who was Ibsen's companion during the composition of Peer Gynt. Bergsøe reports⁴ that one day, probably in July, 1867, they were walking along in silence when suddenly Ibsen amazed him with the question "Do you think one could represent a man on the stage with a casting ladle?" Bergsøe was puzzled and Ibsen did not explain. But the story indicates that Ibsen was searching for a suitable histrionic representation of his ideas on immortality and it is possible that on this very walk the Button-moulder was conceived.

The question of the poet's source for the Button-moulder is discussed by the chief commentator on this drama, the Belgian scholar H. Logemann.⁵ Logemann begins by dismissing as absurd the alleged provenience from the folktale of the smith, as claimed by Passarge, or from Oehlen-schlager's Aladdin, as alleged by J. Collin (p. 273), and goes on to state that the symbol contains rather common imagery, especially familiar from its use in the Bible; for which he cites

Jeremiah vi, 29. "The bellows are burned, the lead is consumed of the fire, the founder melteth in vain; for the wicked are not plucked away." Jeremiah ix, 7 "Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord of Hosts, Behold, I will melt them and try them; for how shall I do for the daughter of my people?" Ezekiel xxii, 20 "As they gather silver and brass and iron and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it, so will I gather you in mine anger and in my fury, and I will leave you there and melt you." Malachi iii, 2, 3 "But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? For he is like a refiner's fire and like fuller's soap. And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver, and he shall purify the sons of Levi and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering of righteousness."

Furthermore he mentions that Solveig's father had said to Peer (in the sketch): "Smelte dig, Luttre dig!" i.e., better your life, purify your soul. By further examples from this as well as other plays, he shows convincingly that Ibsen was familiar with this biblical imagery. Then he says (p. 277): "It is of course quite plain that skabe om, smelte om, støbe om all stand for the process of purification (Luttre) that the soul is to undergo, and that is precisely what Ibsen wished to express in the theory of the Button-moulder."

Strange to say, Logemann believes that Peer is to be condemned or at least that a further encounter with the Button-moulder is to decide the question of his condemnation or salvation. The opposite view, held by most critics, is succinctly expressed by Giovanni Bach:

⁴ Henrik Ibsen paa Ischia (Copenhagen, 1908), p. 212.

⁵ A Commentary on Henrik Ibsen's Peer Gynt (The Hague, 1917), pp. 313 ff. and much more explicitly, in an article, "The Caprices in Henrik Ibsen's Peer Gynt," Edda, vii (1917), 258-285 (page citations refer to this article).

At last, on the brink of ultimate destruction, his death drawing near, Peer is saved through Solveig's unselfish and ennobling love, which kindles the latent spark of divinity within him, enabling him for once to face life unflinchingly and thereby to find himself ⁶

If we are in accord with this generally accepted view of Peer's end, we cannot find much meaning in Logemann's conclusion that Peer's soul is to be purified.

So we need not assume any direct influence of the use of similar imagery in Aladdin in order to explain the development of the little boy's childish amusement into an attribute of a messenger of Death. And we conclude that Ibsen's Knappestøber is a direct adaptation of the biblical imagery of purification to the chance words about Peer's youthful games, conceived as an afterthought some time in the July of 1867 (p. 286).

If Peer goes into the ladle he loses his identity, and how can "he" then be purified? One could just as reasonably speak of purifying a little tin soldier by tossing him into the mass in a ladle.

In order to arrive at a clearer notion than Logemann offers us regarding the Button-moulder, let us analyze this character a bit. First, we must consider on what basis he judges men, and secondly the punishment he metes out to those who lack personality—"a core." The Button-moulder informs Peer that he has "orders, without delay, on Master's behalf to fetch in your soul" (p. 235) because Peer is "no sinner on the so-called heroic scale," "but to call you a good man would be going too far," and "you're nor one thing nor t'other then, only so-so." This same ethical standard is applied also in Ibsen's Brand, is found in Kierkegaard, as well as in other Scandinavian writers whom Ibsen knew well. Hence, as Halvdan Koht indicates,⁷ we can look there for a source:

Then he meets his judge: the Button-moulder. Quite externally this meeting reminds one strongly of the "apocalyptic comedy" by J. L. Heiberg, A Spirit after Death (1840). Certain thoughts in the two dramas are closely associated: the soul in Heiberg is condemned for not great sins but for ordinary bourgeois paltriness, it had never cared for the things of the spirit, but had been content to live for material good and had never striven for a genuine personal existence. This draws a clear line from A Spirit after Death, through Adam Homo, to Peer Gynt. The line is raised a step upward for each of these works. In Heiberg it is still chiefly a philosophic-aesthetic demand that is made the test for the soul.

⁶ The History of the Scandinavian Literatures, Various authors (New York, 1938), pp. 39 f. ⁷ The Life of Ibsen (New York, 1931), II, 36 f.

Paludan-Muller makes it an ethical demand, and in Ibsen this ethical demand is sharpened to such an intensity that it bores itself burning into the soul he who does not follow his calling forfeits his right to life itself. He is worth no more than the chaff which the Almighty throws into the fire.

One may say that this thought could never have become so powerful a demand upon life and character had not Søren Kierkegaard's fiery spirit made an issue of it as he did, yet it is also true that Ibsen succeeded in giving it a searing quality which rendered it the very question of life and death to every man. The Button-moulder whom he made the judge and accuser, half humorous though he may seem, still moves in an atmosphere of ghastly horror much worse than either Mephistopheles in Heiberg or the advocatus diaboli in Paludan-Muller.

In Heiberg's and Paludan-Muller's dramas the paltry souls are condemned to hell (Adam Homo, to be sure, then is saved by his loving Alma and permitted to enter purgatory), while in Ibsen a strikingly different form of punishment is introduced, namely to be "merged in the mass." Did Ibsen derive it merely from his boyhood musings, as Koht seems to think, or did he have a literary source?

Ibsen's Boswell, John Paulsen, tells us that, just as Goethe venerated Shakespeare, so Ibsen studied Goethe, and not without results, he rarely mentioned Goethe, but when he did, it was with great admiration. Paulsen says that Peer Gynt particularly shows traces of Goethe's Faust. He calls attention to the form of the two works, rhymed couplets, often approaching colloquial speech interlarded with lyrical passages. He quotes Ibsen as saying of Goethe, "That he wrote Faust was the main thing."⁸

Furthermore, the manner of Faust's and Peer Gynt's salvation, brought about in part through a woman's devotion, is strikingly similar. Peer misquotes, true to character, "Das Ewig-Weibliche zieht uns an." Halvdan Koht⁹ calls attention to the influence on Ibsen's views as expressed in his letter to Georg Brandes, February 17, 1871, of Goethe's words from the second part of Faust:

Nur der erwirbt sich Freiheit wie das Leben,
Der taglich sie erobern musz.

He who possesses liberty otherwise than as a thing to be striven for, possesses it dead and soulless, for the idea of liberty has undoubtedly this characteristic that it develops steadily during assimilation.¹⁰

While Horace and many other poets have expressed the same idea as the aged Faust:

Es kann die Spur von meinen Erdetagen
Nicht in Aeonon untergehen

⁸ Erinnerungen an Henrik Ibsen (Berlin: Fischer, 1907), pp. 66 and 73. See also A. Le Roy Andrews in JEGP, xii, 238-246. ⁹ Op. cit., II, 83.

¹⁰ Letters of Henrik Ibsen, Translated by John N. Lørvik and Mary Morison (New York, 1905), p. 208.

it is very striking that Ibsen was positively haunted by this notion at the time when he was composing Peer Gynt in Ischia, as Bergsoe reports:¹¹

Moreover Ibsen was very self-confident and frequently expressed himself to the effect that he was not working for time, but for eternity, and when I replied that no author could attain that far, that even the greatest spirits were forgotten after the passage of thousands of years, he flew into a rage against me and said quite beside himself "Spare me your metaphysics If you rob me of eternity, you rob me of everything"

In other words, Ibsen himself was determined not to end in the Button-moulder's ladle, and he considered such a fate something gruesome and shameful Ibsen endowed Peer Gynt with his own horror of losing his identity, one of the appealing qualities possessed by this compromising weakling To less spirited beings the matter of survival or non-survival after death may be a matter of complacent indifference, but not to Peer and not to Ibsen, for them a merging with the elements was something to be avoided at all costs. The Button-moulder, in a magnificent passage, tells Peer of his great promise and dismal failure:

Now you were designed for a shining button
On the vest of the world, but your loop gave way,
So into the waste-box you needs must go,
And then, as they phrase it, be merged in the mass (p 238)

Peer in his replies seems quite as much "beside himself" as Ibsen had been in his talk with Bergsoe:

You're surely not meaning to melt me up,
With Dick, Tom and Hal into something new? (p 239)

No, I say! No! With both teeth and claws
I'll fight against this! Sooner anything else! (p 239)

I'll be damned if I do! (p. 241)

Evidently, in his view of after-life, Ibsen was aristocratic, i.e. he held that immortality was only for "the best," while the undistinguished majority would be merged with the elements I believe it can be shown that this conception also came to him from his reading of Goethe's great drama.

At the end of the Helena scenes in the third act of Faust II we learn the fate of the queen's servants, the maidens of the chorus, from the lips of Panthalis This leader of the chorus is so devoted to Helen that she will follow the queen into after-life, while the light-minded maidens of the chorus deserve no such distinction:

¹¹ Bergsoe, op. cit., p 163

Wer keinen Namen sich erwarb, noch Edles will Gehört den Elementen an, so fahret hin!
 Mit meiner Königen zu sein verlangt mich heisz,
 Nicht nur Verdienst auch Treue wahrt uns die Person
 (9981-9984)

Bayard Taylor¹² comments on these lines.

Panthalis, the Chorage, is the only member of the Chorus who has manifested an individual character throughout the Interlude, consequently she remains it here, where the other members are about to be lost in the elements. We are reminded by what she says, of Goethe's vague surmises in regard to the future life. He hints on more than one occasion that a strong, independent individuality may preserve its entelechie (actual, distinctive being) while the mass of persons in whom the human elements are comparatively formless will continue to exist only in those elements. In 1829 (September 1) he said to Eckermann, "I do not doubt our permanent existence, for Nature cannot do without the entelechie. But we are not immortal in the same fashion, and in order to manifest oneself in the future life as a great entelechie, one must also become one." The subject seems to have been discussed with others, for we find Wilhelm von Humboldt, in 1830, writing to Frau von Wolzogen: "There is a spiritual individuality, but not everyone attains to it. As a peculiar, distinctive form of mind, it is eternal and immutable. Whatever cannot thus individually shape itself, may return into the universal life of Nature."

Other commentators on this passage cite a much earlier expression of the same thought by Goethe in a letter to Zelter, December 3, 1781:

... weil es ein Artikel meines Glaubens ist, dasz wir durch Standhaftigkeit und Treue in dem gegenwertigen Zustande, ganz allein der höheren Stufe eines folgenden werth und, sie zu betreten, fähig werden, es sey nun hier zeitlich oder dort ewig.

Faust, of course, was such an individual destined for immortality. It is worth noting that in the stage direction before line 11,825, where the angels are described, as bearing Faust's Unsterbliches to heaven, Goethe had written originally Faust's Entelechie. Because of his idealistic striving Faust attains to immortality, an event that is beautifully foreshadowed by Panthalis' phrasing of Goethe's profound conception of after-life. His view is soundly in conformity with our feelings of poetic justice, while of course it runs counter to the Christian dogma of eternal life for every single soul, even that of an hour-old babe; hence it avoids, also, for example, the pesky problem of infant damnation, regarding which the Scotch preacher said "God must do much in his official capacity that he would not do as a private individual." It hovers between our experience that the great have immortality in the memory of mankind and an intuitive belief in after-life which is found among most peoples. It strikes us as modern, in conformity with principles of science, e g., the indestructibility of matter. In the poem Euphrosyne Goethe presents the same idea, except that the "nameless" are here pictured as shades instead of being absorbed into the elements:

¹² Faust, The Second Part (Boston, 1871), p. 431 (Note No. 126).

Nur die Muse gewahrt einiges Leben dem Tod
Denn gestaltlos schweben umher in Persephoneias
Reiche, massenweis, Schatten vom Namen getrennt,
Wen der Dichter aber geruhmt, der wandelt, gestaltet,
Einzeln, gesellet dem Chor aller Heroen sich zu

Eckermann reports a conversation of January 29, 1827, in the course of which Goethe spoke of his treatment of the Helena theme:

Auf den Gedanken, dass der Chor nicht wieder in die Unterwelt hinab will, sondern auf der heitern Oberfläche der Erde sich den Elementen zuwirft, tue ich mir wirklich etwas zu Gute

Es ist eine neue Art von Unsterblichkeit, sagte ich

This new type of immortality is discussed at length by Franz Koch¹³ in a monograph devoted especially to this subject. A brief quotation can make it apparent how close to Goethe stands Ibsen with his aristocratic view of society, his ever reiterated demand for self-realization, and his hatred of apathy rather than vice, as expressed, for example, in Brand.

Be passion's slave, be pleasure's thrall,
But be it utterly, all in all

Ob einer eine bedeutende Persönlichkeit ist und welches Schicksal, mit welcher Reinheit und Machtigkeit es sich in ihm verkörpert, das also ist das Entscheidende für die aristokratische Auffassung der Unsterblichkeitsidee, wie Goethe sie vertritt, und hat zunächst mit moralischer Wertung nichts zu tun. Ausserordentliche Menschen haben für Goethe den Rang von "groszen Naturerscheinungen," sie gelten ihm als "heilig," wobei garnicht in Betracht kommt, "ob solche Phänomene genutzt oder geschadet." Sie sind Beispiele wahrer Selbstverwirklichung.¹⁴

Goethe's conception of immortality was indeed an original one, and Panthalis' speech a poetic touch of which the author might well be proud. But it had nothing of the histrionic about it. It is a pleasing thought that the greatest dramatist of the nineteenth century should seize upon Goethe's idea and embody it in the vivid personality of the Button-moulder with his ominous ladle, his grim summons, and his picturesque humor, not forgetting his high ethical demand:

To be oneself is to slay oneself.

A. E. ZUCKER

¹³ Goethe's Stellung zu Tod und Unsterblichkeit, Goethe Gesellschaft (Weimar, 1932), pp 283 ff

¹⁴ Ibid., p 285. Koch here refers the reader to Goethe's Werke I, 48, 109 f., Ueber die Verherrlichung der Helena

A MID-NINETEENTH CENTURY DUTCH VIEW OF AMERICAN LIFE AND LETTERS

PERHAPS it would have been hard to find a writer on the continent of Europe during the second and third quarters of the last century who was so eager, so sympathetic, and so persistent a student of American life and letters as the Dutch poet, author, and critic, Everhardus Jan Potgieter (1808-75) ¹

To write of Everhardus Jan Potgieter in a year when Holland is in enemy hands is to be reminded first of all of what he wrote to his friend and fellow-editor of De Gids, Conraad Busken Huet, in July, 1869: "How does it strike you, do you not see the day dawning in which Europe, tired at last of its foolhardy worship of princes, will follow the example of the United States and form a great Federal Union?" ²

Potgieter very probably is a stranger to most of us, and if we are to be pleased by his interest in us, we shall need an introduction. About American indifference to Dutch literature he himself, in his fine novelle "Journey in the Rain," has the Hawthorne he has conjured up say to him: "I shall begin by offending your national pride: I know nothing about your literature . . . The complete neglect of the study of foreign languages in the States is a disgrace to us, shaming us as you do in this, you are enviable." ³ Potgieter was especially enviable. "He knew all the Germanic languages; he read and spoke High German, English, Swedish, Norwegian and Danish with uncommon facility, French literature was to him an open book and he seemed to have turned every page of it, he enjoyed the masterpieces of the Spanish and Italian authors and was able to appreciate these in the full beauty of the original. . . ." ⁴

A perusal of De Gids and a study of the eighteen volumes of Potgieter's collected works confirm the testimony. The many-sidedness and depth

¹ I want to acknowledge a general indebtedness in preparing this article to R. Pennink, "Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," De Nieuwe Taalgids, xxxiii (1929), 273-294.

² E. J. Potgieter, Brieven aan Cd Busken Huet uitgegeven door G. Busken Huet (Haarlem, 1902), II, 184. All quotations from Dutch authors in this article are given in English. The translations are mine. It seemed best to give the titles of Potgieter's works in English, the Dutch title of a work by him will be found in the footnote the first time the work is cited.

³ "Onderweg in den Regen," De Gids, 1864, IV, 446-447 (De Werken van E. J. Potgieter Proza, Poezy, Kritiek verzameld onder toezicht van Joh. C. Zimmerman [Haarlem, 1885, 1886], VII, 374. This work will hereafter be designated Werken).

⁴ Quoted by Dr. W. J. A. Jonckbloet, Geschiedenis der Nederlandsche Letterkunde (Groningen, 1892), IV, 184.

of Potgieter's studies are remarkable, the more so because he left school at thirteen and because he was by vocation throughout his life a mercantile house agent.⁵ The best product of his studies in the Scandinavian literatures—he was the first to introduce these to Holland and he did so effectively—were the two volumes of The North in Scenes and Sketches.⁶ As an example of his careful attention to French literature, one can single out his long critical review of Béranger's Dernières chansons and Ma biographie.⁷ A similarly penetrating study of an English poet—in the collected works this study runs to three hundred pages—is Potgieter's "George Crabbe."⁸ Byron and Scott he knew, of course, in Holland also these exerted an influence almost to contend with. He liked Burns. His own book-length translations from the English include Lamb's Essays, Bulwer's Rienzi, Beckford's Vathek, Hazlitt's Table Talk, and Leigh Hunt's Studies and Sketches.⁹ The most significant result of his pursuit of Italian literature is the astonishingly ambitious poetic study—or is it really a poem?—of Dante's life and experiences, "Florence."¹⁰ Written in Potgieter's unsuccessful variation of Dante's terza rima, "Florence" offers any student who wants to pursue Dante's influence upon modern literatures a challenging adventure. Goethe—but Goethe Potgieter had always on his tongue. "And as for our own history and literature," wrote a critic of his country, "few were so fully informed about and so completely absorbed in them."¹¹

It was as critic that Potgieter achieved most for the literature of Holland. "Potgieter was the first in The Netherlands to make the national literary criticism a separate branch of activity, the first out of whose reviews a book could be compiled which is its own raison d'être, and which is certain to live on."¹² His medium was De Gids, a literary critical journal which he edited from its first appearance in 1837 until 1865. The achievement of De Gids was so largely the product of Potgieter's inspiration and ⁵ For an account of Potgieter as business man, see P. N. Muller, "Potgieter ter Beurze," De Gids, 1886, iv, 411–420.

⁶ Het Noorden, in Omtrekken en Tafereelen (Amsterdam, 1836, 1840) (Werken, iii and iv).

⁷ De Gids, 1858, i, 119–129, 309–342, 440–467, 782–831 (Werken, xvii, 36–214).

⁸ "Een Blik naar Crabbe," De Gids, 1858, ii, 584–514 and "George Crabbe," De Gids, 1858, ii, 602–641, 780–819 and 1859, i, 105–156 and ii, 198–231, 799–877 (Werken, xvii, 252–412 and xviii, 1–141).

⁹ Proeven van een Humorist (Amsterdam, 1836), Rienzi (Deventer, 1836), Vathek (Amsterdam, 1837), Tafelkout (Amsterdam, 1840); Studies en Schetsen (Deventer, 1842).

¹⁰ E. J. Potgieter Poezy (Haarlem, 1868), i, 193–333, 337–438 (Werken, ix, 193–335, 337–441).

¹¹ Quoted by Jonckbloet, Geschiedenis der Nederlandsche Letterkunde, vi, 184.

¹² Cd Busken Huet, "Potgieter's Kritiek," Litterarische Fantasiën (Haarlem), xxii (1886), 35.

effort—he was substantially assisted by Bakhuizen van den Brink—that Zimmerman's nice summary of it is in place here.

Potgieter and his colleagues broke with the conventional, with the pathos and sentimentality, with the milk-and-water poetry, and with the puffing of events, deeds, and books which smacked of patriotism but were otherwise ordinary or banal, they returned to the study of Nature and immersed themselves in a regenerating bath of our national history—a history which to them was not solely a record of campaigns in the field but a story of the accomplishment of our forebears in every sphere in commerce, on sea, in industry, science, literature, and art. . . They conducted their criticism without pity, but also without respect of persons. A drop of biters in those many honey-laden cups seemed salutary to them. If the rod in their hands sometimes became a scourge, so much the better the time-embedded disease was not to be remedied by milder means. . . Dutch literature owed Potgieter and Van den Brink a cure of rejuvenation, the return to nature and truth, attention to local color and historical accuracy in its representations, a plastic realization of the object instead of personal impressions from it, and purer art forms. . .¹³

It was so. And the line which deserves italics in Zimmerman's account is the one about "the regenerating bath of our national history." "To love Old Holland, to hold up Old Holland before Young Holland: that was the dual purpose of Romanticism in The Netherlands, of the Artist and Critic Potgieter. . . ." So the poet Albert Verwey wrote in 1903.¹⁴ Potgieter withdrew from the staff of De Gids in 1865, leaving it, as Professor Barnouw has recently stated, "in the hands of respectable mediocrity."¹⁵ Twenty years later "Young Holland"—Willem Kloos, Frederik van Eeden, Albert Verwey, and others—founded a rival journal, De Nieuwe Gids. And these "men of the eighties" looked back to Potgieter as the best of their literary elders. Verwey wrote an appreciative interpretation of his life and Kloos in a sonnet "Aan Potgieter," addressed him as his "good Master," and called him "the one great poet of [his] time."

This is not the place to characterize the more than one hundred sixty original and translated poems, the sixty tales and sketches, the thirteen reviews of foreign and sixty-two reviews of Dutch literature, and the five articles on art which Potgieter contributed to De Gids. Nor is this the place to comment on the poems he contributed to the annual Tesselschade or published through other media as Songs from Bontekoe,¹⁶ "The Legacy

¹³ "Narede," E. J. Potgieter's Verspreide en Nagelaten Werken. . . uitgegeven onder toe ikt van Joh. C. Zimmerman (Haarlem), v (1876), 432–433.

¹⁴ Het Leven van Potgieter (Haarlem), pp. 242–243.

¹⁵ Adriaan J. Barnouw, The Dutch (Columbia University Press, 1940), p. 148.

¹⁶ Liedekens van Bontekoe (Amsterdam, 1840) (Werken, xii, 1–52).

of a Country Gentleman,"¹⁷ and "Florence " In prose and poetry alike, Potgieter was original, original to a fault. He was conscientiously true to his own patterns of thought, to his own modes of feeling. Consequently his style is sometimes peculiar and his meaning obscure. He depended on communicating the validity of his personality for his readers' attention. He would rather challenge, even annoy, them by an eccentricity than lull them into inattention by a hackneyed phrase or threadbare association.

In his "Rijksmuseum at Amsterdam," an essay which Busken Huet called "the most closely-knit, most artistic, and most distinguished prose piece that can be pointed to in our modern literature," Potgieter indicated where his treasure was and his heart also. The style is more fluent than was usual with him:

There was a time when the princes of Europe could not take up the balance of the nations except the maid of Holland, seated beside them at the bench, put her sword or her olive branch into the scale and sometimes tipped the beam, you who read this as well as I who write it were present a few years ago when she, having appeared with her party in the court of the Five Powers, was sentenced and put down by her equals and inferiors—There was a time when the flag of Holland was greeted as the mistress of the sea and was saluted wherever the morning, midday, or evening sun gilded the oceans of two hemispheres, a time when her admirals fixed a broom to the mast and, to use the virile language of the time, swept the scum from the seas; in a late assembly of Their Honors the States General, eloquent voices deplored Janmaat's inglorious respite from the sea¹⁸—There was a time when the merchants of Holland ventured to break the bonds laid upon them by the lords of the two Indies, and, more daring still, to brave the ends of the earth and find a passage "forbidden by nature," a time when the genius of trade earned a patent of nobility for herself by her marriage with learning, suppose if you can, God forbid it should happen, that Java were no longer to pour her treasures into our lap—say where then the serviceable ships of the merchant fleet would bend their prows, say where in North or in South America our love of enterprise has maintained connections, say where in China they remember us, or who in Australia knows us—There was a time when Holland longed for learning, valued learning, loved learning, and when in many a branch of study she became the oracle of the cultured world, when she did homage to the scholar—honoring the scholar in him without any other respect of person, a native and hence the object of her legitimate pride, or an exile and hence the object of her high-minded respect, a preserver of the old and therefore the guardian of treasures already achieved, or a crusader for the new and therefore the surety for her share in the conquest almost due, now—be it far from me, a novice in her temple, to judge as a blind man judging of colors—lend your ear

¹⁷ "De Nalatenschap van den Landjonker," De Musen, Nederlandsch Tijdschrift . . . , 1835, pp. 48-58, 154-159 (De Werken, xi, 151-165)

¹⁸ "Janmaat" is the personification of Holland at sea.

to the quarreling of her priests and deny if you can that the sacrifices laid on her altar are scanty and scarce, so scarce and so scanty that they explain and even justify the neighbor's indifference as he sees our rising wisp of smoke — There was a time when a Holland respected for her skill, envied for her wealth, and celebrated for her learning, wove the laurels of art into her threefold crown, when she had an ear for music and a feeling for poetry and revelled in both, a time, moreover, in which her school of painters evoked the wonder of Europe — an original school, born from her struggle for freedom, reproducing and making immortal the heroes of that struggle in a monument raised by that generation to itself . . . , a monument before whose splendor it befits us only to bow our heads in shame each time it reflects as in a mirror all the gifts, all the energies, all the virtues of that generation, until we, feeling what we once were and what we now are, gird ourselves . . . ¹⁹

That was the theme of Potgieter's gifted life. Busken Huet wrote that Potgieter thought the Dutch struggle for the national independence and the Republic of the Seven Provinces to which it gave birth — perfect, that he saw signs of life and vigor even in the civil and religious broils which accompanied it, that he loved and honored in the eighteenth century only that which it had in common with the seventeenth, and — what is more — that Holland's past was the rule of his faith in her future.²⁰

It was history that inspired him, history, as Zimmermann said, "not of campaigns in the field" but of the achievements of the past in every sphere. De Gids was primarily a literary journal but the editors thought of literature always in relation to the whole complex of the national life. Seven years after the first issue appeared, another journal, the Spectator, devoted exclusively to art, felt called upon to urge its claims for the integrity of the aesthetic over against the general culture of Potgieter and Van den Brink. Our own puristic times have taken the stand of the Spectator. Potgieter did not take it. He knew as well as anyone that literature is not a substitute for morals, patriotism, religion, or history — and he pointed it out to a public which needed the distinction. He knew that literature works its own effects in its own way. But what for him gave it much of its importance when successful in this was its relation to the national mind and life and character.

A burgher, fundamentally democratic by disposition and breeding; a liberal with idealistic hopes for the possibilities of freedom in democratic states,²¹ a patriot who derived his standards of excellence from the national past and insisted on their relevance to the present; a "man of ¹⁹ "Het Rijks-Museum te Amsterdam," De Gids, 1844, II, 18-19 (Werken, II, 100-102).

²⁰ "Potgieter's Kritek," Letterarische Fantasien, XXII, 22 ff.

²¹ For a discussion of how Potgieter's sympathies for America were related to his idealistic liberalism, see C. G. N. de Vooy, Letterkundige Studreen (Groningen, 1910), pp. 219 ff.

letters" who saw literature always in relation to the whole complex of the national culture, a hard student of comparative literature; a business man who thrilled to vigorous trade, a romanticist who could not resist "all that was young, stirring, and alive"²²—on the face of it, such a man might be a likely student of American life and letters

Potgieter was First of all, he liked the American dream:

America, you who turn none away from your shores, who not only write e pluribus unum on your banner, but have in very fact united the many-sided energies of your immigrants into the great white whole of a freely evolved and complete embodiment of all that is human, what a splendid spectacle you offer, what more does the world not expect of you? [Our] eye falls eagerly upon you, the rapidly developed, fortunate, free State, without king, nobility, or ecclesiastical caste, luring the peoples as by magic and exerting an immediate and irresistible influence upon them as unperceived as it is effective . . . a challenge to the present, a prophecy of the distant future

So he wrote in his "Emigration to the United States" in 1855.²³ The essay itself, prompted by the receipt of two letters from the Reverend Scholte's Dutch settlement at Pella, Iowa, is an interesting reconsideration of the causes of Dutch emigration to America. Potgieter was by no means convinced that the reasons alleged by the leaders of the emigrant parties to be the causes for emigration were sound, but he could not quarrel with the choice of destination: ". . . go to the United States, my friends . . . Westward the Star points the way"²⁴ As late as 1872 Potgieter transcribed the whole of Bishop Berkeley's poem and sent it to Huet at Java. With it he sent an article from the New-York Shipping and Commercial List which served as evidence for the fulfillment of Berkeley's vision.²⁵ Potgieter's American dream is romantic but it is also real. ". . . on the other side of the Ocean a society has developed, free from most of our antiquated prejudices, in which man, irrespective of who his forebears were, counts only for what he is."²⁶ Again, in a comment on Longfellow, also written in 1853, Potgieter referred to America as "a people which, even as ours in its youth, is pointing the world in new directions, believing, and meanwhile working"²⁷ He was continually seeing such parallels between the energy of the old Holland he loved and the energy of the young United States he admired. "Much as I should enjoy seeing you and your family again," he wrote to Busken Huet in 1870, "I believe that

²² Quoted by Pennink, "Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 274

²³ "Landverhuizing naar de Vereenigde Staten," De Gids, 1855, I, 529-530 (Werken, VIII, 216-218)

²⁴ "Landverhuizing . . .," De Gids, 1855, I, 529 (Werken, VIII, 216).

²⁵ Brieven aan Huet, III, 180-183. See also page 236

²⁶ "Landverhuizing . . .," De Gids, 1855, I, 467 (Werken, VIII, 140).

²⁷ "Pietistische Poesij," De Gids, 1853, II, 314 (Werken, XV, 40).

if I had three or six months time, I should go the the United States”²⁸

Potgieter knew “the joy of hero-worship”²⁹ He was a hard student of Bancroft,³⁰ and from Bancroft he learned much about the three leaders of American life, Franklin, Washington, and Lincoln, whom he counted among his heroes In his “Béranger” he eagerly quoted Washington’s and Bancroft’s tributes to Benjamin Franklin, and in the same essay he drew Franklin into a significant digression on the subject of clothes and diplomacy³¹ Franklin has a place also in his poems “Mount Vernon” and “Abraham Lincoln.” Potgieter had come into possession of a rose which had grown on Washington’s grave: “If Potgieter, who revered the rose plucked from Washington’s grave as a relic and decorated his sitting room with it, had visited Washington’s country, ‘Abraham Lincoln’ would not have remained a fragment and ‘Mount Vernon’ would have been surpassed”³²

“Mount Vernon” and “Abraham Lincoln”—Dutch literature owes these to Potgieter’s study of American life The two can appropriately be named together, for the theme of both is slavery “Mount Vernon”³³ comprises twenty-four long stanzas divided into two groups of twelve, the first group entitled ‘1799’ and the second ‘1861.’ A published note to the poem explains the scheme: “Mount Vernon . . . was the property of George Washington and on it during the night of the 14th December he died,—Mount Vernon, where it was thought his remains were assured a well-earned rest, became in 1861 one of the points contested by the Divided States.” The poem is successful It begins with a stirring address to the sun which is casting its last rays through the window at the feet of the dying Washington, and it is the sun which serves effectively as a formal motif for the poem. Considering the temptation to sentimentality which the subject invites—occasionally Potgieter yielded to it—and the absence of great poems on the theme in our own literature, one is impressed by the effectiveness of “Mount Vernon.”

“Mount Vernon” is dated 1861. At the time of his death in 1875, Potgieter was engaged in writing a cycle of poems, or a cyclical poem, to be entitled “Abraham Lincoln.”³⁴ Zimmerman, who edited the manuscript for publication, stated that Potgieter had “with his usual painstaking thoroughness gathered the materials from all sides.”³⁵ Seven parts, ²⁸ Brieven aan Huet, III, 70.

²⁹ Pennink, “Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde,” p. 293.

³⁰ For example, in “Landverhuizing . . .,” De Gids, 1855, I, 465–467, 494–498 (Werken, VIII, 137–139, 174–178), “Béranger,” De Gids, 1858, I, 815 (Werken, XVII, 190), and “Onder Weg in den Regen,” De Gids, 1864, II, 435–436 (Werken, VIII, 360).

³¹ De Gids, 1858, I, 814–815 (Werken, VII, 189–191)

³² Cd Busken Huet, “Potgieter Persoonlijke Herinneringen,” Letterarische Fantasien en Krinkeken, XIII, 73.

³³ De Gids, 1861, II, 914–932 (Werken, IX, 126–143).

³⁴ Werken, XII, 378–415.

³⁵ Werken, XII, 378 n.

each part consisting of one or more six-stanza groups, are extant: "Lincoln's Election," "Europe Hears the News," "Lincoln at the Capitol," "Fort Sumter," "Lincoln's Proclamation," "The Attitude of Europe," and "The Battle of Bull Run." In this poem, as in "Mount Vernon," Potgieter succeeds in giving his composition a feeling of weight and scope. Strangely enough, the person of Washington is more real in the first poem than the person of Lincoln is in the second. Coming to it from Whitman, Lindsay, and Sandburg, American readers will find the fragment of "Abraham Lincoln" unimpressive.

There were stains "on the great white whole" of the America Potgieter hoped for. Slavery was one of them. "God's image carved in ebonywood," he called the Negro in "Mount Vernon," "Abraham Lincoln," and "Salmagundi." He concluded his apostrophe of praise to America at the end of "Emigration to the United States" with a question which weighed heavily with him: "Brave, dazzling, stalwart Beauty,³⁶ who bear on your shield the arms of labor and liberty, why does there cling to your white robe the stain of Slavery, the blood of your African brother?"³⁷ In his poem "To New York," written in 1842, he had similarly asked: "Do you honor in Negroes the image of God?"³⁸ Moreover, his anxiety about the abuse of the slave very probably affected his choice of poems from Longfellow for translation in De Gids. "The Slave's Dream" appeared in 1843,³⁹ "The Slave Singing at Midnight"⁴⁰ and "The Good Part" in 1844,⁴¹ and "The Quadroon Girl" in 1845.⁴² "God's image carved in ebonywood," he wrote in 1851, "has found a champion in Longfellow who will overcome the prejudice."⁴³

The abuse of the Indian was another grief to Potgieter. Often, as in the poems "To New York," "Mount Vernon," and "Abraham Lincoln," he stood before America, as Pennink put it, almost in the rôle of a father-confessor.⁴⁴ The abuse of the Indian and the abuse of the slave were her arch-transgressions. His ethical concern for the Indian, too, is reflected in his choice of poems for translation. In 1839 he gave his readers Longfellow's "Burial of the Minnisink"⁴⁵ and Whittier's "The Indian's Tale."⁴⁶ His epigraph over Whittier's poem read: "The poor tribes of the

³⁶ Here the Dutch is untranslatable. "Slanke, schitterende, stoute, Schoone . . ."

³⁷ "Landverhuizing . . .," De Gids, 1855, I, 530

³⁸ "Aan New-York," Nederlandsche Muzen-Almanak, xxiv, 15-22 (Werken, ix, 22-28).

³⁹ "De Droom van den Slaaf," De Gids, 1843, II, 615-616 (Werken, xii, 227-229)

⁴⁰ "Het Zingen van den Slaaf," De Gids, 1844, II, 337-338 (Werken, ix, 45-46)

⁴¹ "Het Goede Deel," De Gids, 1744, II, 596-598 (Werken, xii, 237-240)

⁴² "Het Quarteronne-Meisje," De Gids, 1845, II, 310-312 (Werken, xii, 263-265).

⁴³ "Salmagundi," De Gids, 1851, I, 670 (Werken, vii, 361-362)

⁴⁴ Pennink, "Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 287

⁴⁵ "Begravenis van den Minnisink," De Gids, 1839, II, 395-396 (Werken, xi, 321-323).

⁴⁶ "Weeklagt des Indiaans," De Gids, 1839, II, 123-124 (Werken, xi, 328-331)

West! The war, the whiskey, and the pestilence among the children were too much for them." That is a quotation taken from his own contribution to De Gids of 1838, "Mahaskah or the White Cloud" ⁴⁷ "Mahaskah" is a pleasant account of Indian life adapted entirely from American materials. First of all, Potgieter made use of the descriptions of Mahaskah and Young Mahaskah in Thomas L. M'Kenney and James Hall's History of Indian Tribes in North America ⁴⁸ Potgieter welcomed the volume as a token of belated justice to the Indians:

No longer tolerated, they were despised, and only now when Europe is transplanting herself to the other side of the Ocean, only now does history direct its research to a race which had only the wilderness as a witness and, accordingly, as the grave for its heroic deeds, a race which approached the altar of civilization only to be butchered upon it. Their fate arouses an interest as romantic as it is touching . . . There is a justice for the aborigine also. If Cooper has excited the interest of the old world in the red men by presenting them in a few of his romantic panoramas, now two of his countrymen have undertaken to write their history. . . ⁴⁹

Potgieter spoke of "eagerly following the American poets into those places of the New World . . . where only the wild horse and the man of nature have been" ⁵⁰ The "Mahaskah" itself shows his reading of the poets. He introduced the piece with an adaptation of and improvement upon Mrs. Sigourney's "The Indian's Welcome to the Pilgrim Fathers." ⁵¹ He translated and wove into his vignette John G. Brainard's "Far away from the hill side," ⁵² a poem based on Leather Stocking's determination "to quit the settlements of men for the unexplored forests of the west." ⁵³ To these, finally, he added Isaac McLellan's "Burial of One of the First Colonists in 1630," ⁵⁴ and Bryant's "An Indian at the Burying-place of his Fathers." ⁵⁵ Obviously, Potgieter was a student of the Indian. As early as 1839 he knew enough about the subject to share Mark Twain's notion of a Cooper Indian, for in this year he praised Miss Sedgwick's charac-

⁴⁷ "Mahaskah of de Witte Wolk," De Gids, 1838, II, 446-458 (Werken, VI, 203-221)

⁴⁸ Potgieter was using the first volume of the edition published by Campbell and Burns (London, 1837) ⁴⁹ De Gids, 1838, II, 447-448 (Werken, VI, 205-206).

⁵⁰ De Gids, 1838, II, 446 (Werken, VI, 204)

⁵¹ "De Ontmoeting der Oude en Nieuwe Wereld," De Gids, 1838, II, 446 (Werken, VI, 204)

⁵² The poem was published without title in John G. C. Brainard, Occasional Pieces of Poetry (New York, 1825), pp. 49-51

⁵³ Brainard, Occasional Pieces of Poetry, p. 49

⁵⁴ "Begrafenis van een' der eerste Kolonisten in 1630" Not included in McLellan's three published volumes of verse. I could not trace it in the journals of the period

⁵⁵ "De Indiaan op de Begraafplaats zijner Vaderen" The poem was first published in Poems, ed. Washington Irving (London, 1832), pp. 173-176.

terization of the red men in Hope Leshe, and added, "Don't tell me you have learned to know them from Cooper."⁵⁶

There were other features of American life which Potgieter mistrusted. The love of money was prominent among them. Potgieter had reason to know from his fine awareness of Dutch history that this is the root of evil. In the effective characterization of Holland embodied in the Jan of his "Jan, Jannetje and their youngest child," Potgieter has Jan say:

I was only a business man—don't think I despise him, no one in the world is more useful, a man who must know all kinds of things and all kinds of people, who must have the courage to undertake the most variegated enterprises, including the courage for war on water and on land, a man who must appreciate knowledge and art in order to stand up against competitors and remain abreast of his times—a business man, I was only a business man, I repeat. But then, when I had reached the apex of the growth of my character, I was most exposed to the threat of degeneration. Abundance enervates, slackens, emasculates. Instead of the strong, high-minded spirit which animated me in the days of my development, a pettiness of mind and an indifference of heart, characteristic of the newly rich, became mine. I grew vain and deluded, I became proud and lazy . . .⁵⁷

Potgieter, always the moral idealist, never the moralist, was in dead earnest when he pointed to what he thought were lapses or the symptoms of lapses in the American character. His attitude was that of a man who had high hopes for America, who hung breathlessly upon her fate, and who was anxious lest her pride should go before a fall. This attitude is characteristically revealed in "Mount Vernon." In it Potgieter points to the little band of Pilgrims. Their glory was the glory of struggle. Escaped from the ugly claw of persecution, they faced the new dangers of their physical environment. What inspired them to miracles of accomplishment was the Word of God ingrafted in their hearts. Potgieter asks them, now, whether they recognize this new generation as their own. It is a generation which blandly ignores purpose in life, takes no care to train its youth in discipline and loyalty, is willing to gamble anything and everything for profit, and not only chooses, but lives up to the motto: "The dollar only, the dollar is almighty."⁵⁸ So too in the poem "To New York" Potgieter had asked the city whether in its haughtiness and greed it was not offering sacrifices of gold upon its altars.⁵⁹ Always, however, his constructive idealism is apparent. He concludes "To New York" with the confident plea, "Shame us by surpassing us."

America had virtually no other faults to Potgieter. He was amused by

⁵⁶ De Gids, 1839, I, 146

⁵⁷ "Jan, Jannetje, en hun jongste Kind," De Gids, 1842, II, 44 (Werken, I, 29-30)

⁵⁸ "Mount Vernon," De Gids, 1861, II, 914-932 (Werken, IX, 126-143).

⁵⁹ Werken, IX, 28

her worship of size "Imagine, they are building a bridge over the father of waters, over the Mississippi Young America is confounding the whole world by so mammoth an undertaking . . . There is to be a tunnel with side aisles and arches supported by pillars Egyptian-Assyrian architecture, be ashamed, Memphis and Nineveh, bow your heads!"⁶⁰ Moreover, Potgieter had heard of the American sensitiveness to the criticism of foreigners. He construed it in our favor: "The citizen of the United States may make himself ridiculous by flying into a tantrum at every criticism of the foreigner. He is at least sensitive, and when the fit has blown over, there is a good chance that he will ask himself, 'Could there have been any truth in it?'"⁶¹

Potgieter, it is evident, liked his Young America. He took an affectionately patronizing attitude towards her, was often anxious about her, and continued to be studious of her past and present. He liked to conjure up the American scene and to imagine himself moving in it.⁶² He knew that scene well. In 1869 Huet had written an article about the Pacific Railroads, and when he sent it to Potgieter the accompanying map was missing. Potgieter wrote, "I regret this, and why? Because I plan to go to the States? No, but on however small a scale it may have been, it would have enabled me to point out to you with my finger how many opportunities you neglected to give your essay a little of the local color from which it would have gained so much."⁶³

Perhaps it was this interest in American life which aroused Potgieter's interest in American literature. "We cannot . . . say," wrote Pennink, "that Potgieter had a monopoly [in Holland] of the literary interest in the United States, but very likely it was he first and he only who viewed American literature more or less as a whole and remained interested in it continuously. . . ." ⁶⁴ Potgieter did indeed view American literature as a whole. His two brief, general surveys of it, the one in his review of Miss Sedgwick's Linwood and Hope Leslie,⁶⁵ the other in his novelle "Journey in the Rain,"⁶⁶ point to the range of his studies in American letters. He took care to be informed. He often read the American journals, thanks in part perhaps to the fact that he was a member of an "English and American Reading Society" at Amsterdam.⁶⁷ One can definitely trace his use of the North American Review, the Knickerbocker, the American Literary Gazette, the Columbian, and the Atlantic Monthly.⁶⁸

⁶⁰ Brieven aan Huet, II, 82.

⁶¹ De Gids, 1858, I, 461 (Werken, XVII, 133).

⁶² See, for example, De Gids, 1860, II, 870-871 and "Onderweg in den Regen," De Gids, 1864, IV, 452-453 (Werken, VIII, 381-382).

⁶³ Brieven aan Huet, II, 292.

⁶⁴ "Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 277.

⁶⁵ De Gids, 1839, I, 135-149.

⁶⁶ De Gids, 1864, IV, 449-450 (Werken, VIII, 377-378).

⁶⁷ See Brieven aan Huet, II, 205.

⁶⁸ In 1872 Potgieter wrote Huet that he had found Frederick Hudson's Journalism in the United States from 1690-1872 interesting.

Again and again while reading him one is surprised to note how soon after publication an American author's volume came into Potgieter's hands. At the time of his death he left a library, later given to the University of Amsterdam, which contained "besides a large amount of American historical writings, seventy-five items of American literature."⁶⁹

Potgieter had much to say of Cooper and Irving. ". . . It was especially through him, together with a few translators, that Holland shared in the general European admiration for Cooper and Irving."⁷⁰ In 1837, the first year of De Gids, Potgieter momentarily joined the translators of Cooper. He selected two excerpts from A Residence in France with an Excursion up the Rhine and a Second Visit to Switzerland, a book of travel which Cooper had published in Paris in 1836. He published the excerpts together with an introduction from which we learn that he intended to give the readers of De Gids portions of Cooper's travelogues from time to time. This intent he did not carry out. The Cooper he praised in the introduction is the Cooper of the sea tales. Potgieter could not agree with the judgment of the Muse who, distributing the world, gave Scott the earth, Moore heaven, and Byron hell—a disposition, Potgieter felt, more clever than just. But when Jonathan—Potgieter had been reading Irving, Paulding, and Willis—asked the same Muse that Neptune's triton be given to Cooper, no one could object:

We appeal to the judgment of those who have read his masterly panoramas in this kind—in fact we appeal precisely to the limited scope of his talent. Scott, Moore, and Byron have a range of powers, Cooper, to the contrary, you must leave at sea if you want to admire him. Please do not cast up his wildernesses, his Savannahs, his forests at me, what are these but another ocean, interminable spaces. I recognized Cooper but twice in his Bravo, once in an unfortunate reference to The Spy, once in the description of that stirring battle on the Adriatic—he saw in Venice only another Venus, borne out of the waves. Do not ask me to write of the Heidemaer and the Headsman. I do not like to hunt out the thorns on the rose, I deplore every mistaken application of talent or genius. . .⁷¹

In his "Mahaskah," written the following year, Potgieter admitted that Cooper had aroused Europe's interest in the Indian.⁷² However, in a review written in this same year of Steenberg van Goor's translation

⁶⁹ Pennink, "Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 293. I regret not having had access to a book. Pennink mentions Catalogus van de Bibliotheek van wijlen E. J. Potgieter aan de Universiteit van Amsterdam. gegeven door Mej. E. J. Potgieter (Amsterdam, 1879).

⁷⁰ "Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 277.

⁷¹ "John Fenimore Cooper op Reis," De Gids, 1837, II, 69-74. Potgieter's "Een Tuin achter het Huus" is a freely selected translation of the earlier parts of Letter VIII, "Excursion up the Rhine", Potgieter's "Louis Philippe en General Lafayette" is a translation of the footnote to Letter IV, "Residence in France," p. 49.

⁷² De Gids, 1838, II, 448 (Werken, VI, 206).

of J. P. R. James's Mary of Burgundy, Potgieter returned to his earlier judgment: "We regretted to notice that Cooper was not mentioned [in the translator's survey of foreign novels that had ruled the day in Holland], but Steenberg van Goor was touching only on novels that had ruled the day among us, and neither The Spy nor The Pilot were as satisfactorily received as they deserved to be."⁷³ In 1839, however, the Cooper of the Leather Stocking tales as well as the Cooper of The Spy and The Rover was praised:

Fenimore Cooper and Washington Irving were, until a few years ago, the only writers who upheld the honor of the young New World among us Europeans in the department of polite letters. . . The fame of Chateaubriand was eclipsed by that of Cooper wherever panoramas of the wilderness and its natives were concerned. Cooper taught the world to be interested in a ship lost upon the waves, as though ropes, masts, and sails were so many animated beings, as though a heart were beating in the terrible rigging. . .

Unfortunately Cooper had not sustained his eminence:

But Cooper, alas, Cooper, taken in by the New World to the ridiculous extent of spurning the old, has set himself up as a censor of European civilization! And his Travels! Do not ask me to speak of them or of his latest work Eve Effingham or Home. . .⁷⁴

When, in 1857, Potgieter returned to the consideration of Cooper, he said nothing about the novels of the sea: "Out of the deluge of his writings James Fenimore Cooper will reach the peak of reputation among those who come after by means of The Pathfinder and The Deerslayer. The whole of the old world envies the new his creation of Leather Stocking; and yet, Europe in the dawn of her civilization must have seen the prototype of this man hundreds of times."⁷⁵ And Friedrich Nippold reported that when he first met Potgieter in 1860, Potgieter's talk had been all of Cooper and Irving, of Shakespeare and Scott.⁷⁶

Potgieter first mentioned Irving in a letter to Aernout Drost in 1833. The Alhambra was the occasion of the remark.⁷⁷ Five years later Potgieter singled out for praise the four books which to him seemed best among Irving's works:

. . . Irving still seems to find favor with our public, irrespective of how tedious he has become since his excellent Sketch Book, his choice Bracebridge Hall, his stirring Tales of a Traveller, and his masterly Alhambra.⁷⁸

⁷³ De Gids, 1838, I, 193.

⁷⁴ De Gids, 1839, I, 140.

⁷⁵ "Grond en Geschiedenis," De Gids, 1857, I, 86 (Werken, xv, 121-122).

⁷⁶ So Pennink ("Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 289) has it from Nippold, Mannen van Beteekenis in onze Dagen (Haarlem, 1875).

⁷⁷ Noted by Pennink ("Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 280) from J. M. de Waal's "Briefwisseling van Aernout Drost met Potgieter en Heye," Tijdschrift van Nieuwe Taal en Letterkunde, 1918, p. 117.

⁷⁸ De Gids, 1838, I, 193.

In 1839 Potgieter drew Irving into a comparison with Cooper: "More versatile, but not so original, was Irving: a resounding command of language, a talent for style which enabled him by one leap to come abreast of the novels of his mother country, mind and feeling, spirit and whim—these gave his sketches a popularity beyond the reach of his genial countryman"⁷⁹ Mind and feeling, spirit and whim—these were the very qualities which distinguished Potgieter's own tales and sketches.

There can be no doubt that Potgieter had Irving's work frequently in mind during the year 1842. He translated from the columns of the Knickerbocker the section of "The Crayon Papers" entitled "Don Juan A Spectral Romance"⁸⁰ Moreover, 1842 is the date of Potgieter's "To New York," and "To New York" is Potgieter's answer to the Irving who caricatured the Dutch. Albert Verwey thought well enough of the poem to introduce four stanzas from it into his Life of Potgieter, together with the comment: "How good the spirit of that seems to me, who, as a lad, wept tears of regret between the rocks of New Mexico because no American there had ever heard of a Dutch Indies, or of an Amsterdam other than the place where they sell diamonds. . . ."⁸¹

Potgieter suggests in the poem that the great city has become ashamed of her origins, has forgotten Hendrik Hudson and the doughty Dutch who accompanied him. In Albany alone a sham-token of remembrance remains. There on Saint Nicholas Eve they raise a toast "To Holland's King." Potgieter refuses the lifted cup. He knows from the way in which they have dismembered the Dutch language that theirs is no real appreciation of the best traditions of their people. As for Irving, Willis, Paulding, and the rest of the caricaturists, Potgieter is really a little hurt by their monstrosities:

Onz' voorzaat strekt karikatuur
 Van wie bij u vernuften heeten!
 Misdeeld van lijf, van geest beroofd,
 Zoo schetst gij hen in iedren bondel,
 Hen, 't volk de harpe waard van Vondel,
 Hen, 't volk de veder waard van Hooft!
 Ik zoek vergeefs naar één geregte,
 Van Irving af tot Willis toe,
 Die aan hun deugd zijn zegel hechte,
 Die Stuivesand geen onregt doe,
 Die Evertsen een eerkrans vlechte!⁸²

⁷⁹ De Gids, 1839, I, 140.

⁸⁰ "Don Juan Studies van Spoken," De Gids, 1842, II, 91-101. The original was first published in the Knickerbocker, XVIII, 247-253 (March, 1841) and later in Wolfer's Roost and other Papers (New York, 1855).

⁸¹ Het Leven van Potgieter, pp. 264-265.

⁸² "Aan New-York," Werken, IX, 25.

It would, however, be false to suggest that Potgieter was disposed to exaggerate the part played by Holland in the building of New York. In 1855, he wrote:

America is the sphere in which we have been the least successful, in the North [New York] as well as in the South [Brazil], the expectations of the forebears have proved vain. Even though the memory of a few Dutch generations lives on near New York in the names given to an attractive island or lovely estate, you know it, the efforts of our fathers at colonizing New Netherland failed. "Brazil neglected!" sang Otto Swier van Haren, and many of our readers, remembering that poet's couplet, will anticipate us in saying that fate has rebaptized the Dutch cities below as well as above the equator. New Amsterdam has become a strange sound on the banks of the Hudson, and who hearing Fernambucq named remembers that it was once called Mauritsstad?⁸³

In its undertone of ethical seriousness, its concern about indifference to the values of history and tradition, "To New York" resembles "Mount Vernon." In its praise of Holland's impressive past, it reminds of the "Rijksmuseum at Amsterdam," written two years later. In its proximity to humor, it suggests the riper, more seasoned response to Irving of "Journey in the Rain." It is because the poem is typical of Potgieter in all the qualities of his peculiar personality that it will remain permanently interesting to students of Dutch literature.

The year 1842 is also the year of Potgieter's "Jan, Jannetje, and their youngest child,"⁸⁴ a prose piece which achieves as a charming sketch what the "Rijksmuseum" two years later was to accomplish as a brilliant essay. Potgieter is at his genial, humorous, and whimsical best in the piece. The form allows him all the digressions, allusions, and insinuations he needed to be successful as a writer. "Jan, Jannetje . . ." is in all the schoolbooks: there is as much essential Holland in it as in an album of De Hoogh.

Indirectly, Irving contributed to "Jan, Jannetje . . ." In the "John Bull" of his Sketch Book he suggested to Potgieter what could be done towards embodying richly suggestive national types in the prose sketch. Irving had written:

There is no species of humor in which the English more excel, than that which consists in caricaturing and giving ludicrous appellations or nick-names. In this way they have whimsically designated not merely individuals but nations, and in their fondness for pushing a joke, they have spared not even themselves. One would think that in personifying itself, a nation would be apt to picture something grand, heroic, and imposing, but it is characteristic of the peculiar humour of the English, and of their love for what is blunt, comic, and familiar, ⁸³ "Landverhuizing . . ." De Gids, 1855, I, 486 (Werken, VIII, 163-164).

⁸⁴ De Gids, 1842, II, 22-46 (Werken, I, 1-33).

that they have embodied their national oddities in the figure of a sturdy, corpulent old fellow, with a three-cornered hat, red waistcoat, leather breeches and stout oaken cudgel

From that—and from the John Bulls and Brother Jonathans of Paulding, Willis, and Haliburton, whom Potgieter also knew—Potgieter caught the suggestion of what could be done towards embodying the time-honored Jan, who is Holland, in a prose sketch Potgieter's Jan is talking of his foreign relations:

"Hm! John Bull," he says, "whom I trust least when everything seems to be at its best between us. Hm, hm! Hans Moff," he adds . . . "who will be insistent now that he is making so much of those few beets Hm, hm! Monsieur, too, who ought to remember how well I cared for him when he was here. Even Jonathan, —well, well, who would not be boasting of a New York yet, if I had not laid out a New Amsterdam for him . . . No matter, better be envied than pitied."

For Irving's figure of a "sturdy, corpulent old fellow," Potgieter gives us his Jan: "He need not be ashamed of his stock . . . Let no one lift incredulous eyes when I say that about the year 1500 Jan was lying in diapers already and that now, as a sturdy fellow of sixty, he is still standing firmly on his feet . . ." John Bull is the father of a considerable family of boys: "His children have been brought up to different callings." So Jan Jan's whole family visit him on Old Year's Night—a convenient time for the national inventory. There is Janmaat—Jack Tar, if you wish, but in Holland, Janmaat, so long as a Dutch bottom remains afloat: "When, under the Spanish tyranny the need had grown dire at home, he kissed the anxious Jannetje goodbye. 'I'm leaving port, mother, but you'll see me again' And he kept his word like a man; he left in a nutshell and came home in a ship of the line" There are Jan Contant and Jan Crediet: "Their firm is not only found at every exchange in Europe: it is in both Indies, it is as good as the bank in China, their signatures are worth more than those of kings and kaisers." There are Jan Cordaat ("the healthiest, wholesomest, handsomest of Jan's children") and Jan Compagnie ("Whoever is master of Java can become the lord of India") There is Jan the Poët: "I who used to be called Jan the poet and who was that; who am now only Jan the Rhymer though I am improving." Jan Klaassen, the scholar, and Jan Kritiek, the critic, are there, and so are the noisy but indispensable Jantjes Goddome and Jan-nen Kalebas, Jan Hagel, and Jan Rap en zijn Maat. Both fathers, as Pennink notes, have seen better days, are having their gloomy moments. John Bull goes about "whistling thoughtfully to himself, with his head drooping down." Potgieter speaks of the "flagging spirit of the otherwise cheerful old man." Irving gave several pages to describing the family mansion, "an old castelated manor house . . . a vast accumulation of parts erected in various tastes and ages" So Potgieter: "Jan still likes a reception hall as big as a church . . . even though his daily apartments no longer have the any, roomy, unrestricted quality he used to insist upon . . ." John Bull has a son who is a thorn in his flesh, "a noisy, rattle-pated fellow who neglects his business to frequent ale-houses . . ." Jan and Jannetje have their black sheep too But "the youngest child" who has a place even in Potgieter's title is not at all Irving's socialist son of a Tory father He is Jan Salie. To say who Jan Salie is would be to translate not only the whole of "Jan, Jannetje . . ." but the whole of Potgieter's works as well Jan Salie embodies all that Potgieter most disliked in Holland—the lethargy and tepidity, the lassitude and mediocrity in the national character. Irving concluded his sketch with the wish that John Bull might "long enjoy, on his paternal lands, a green, an honorable, and a merry old age And Potgieter ends his with the prayer "God bless you, Jan, you and yours" Potgieter's is the more personal, direct, and realistic of the two sketches Irving's sketch was but a catalysing agent for Potgieter's. But it was that, and the result was a fine one

In 1851 the editors of De Gids planned a critical miscellany to be conducted informally and published serially. Potgieter was soon left to write it alone Six installments were published under the title "Salmagundi" ⁸⁵ Pennink plausibly supposed that Potgieter was acknowledging the American origin of his title when he signed the "Emigration to the United States" with the name "The Salmagundist." ⁸⁶ The critical pot-pourri of De Gids owed little if anything besides title and scheme to Paulding and the Irvings. Potgieter soon found the form unsuitable to his way of writing, overloaded it with unassimilable elements, and abandoned it after a year.

There was another piece in the Sketch Book which had particularly impressed Potgieter. He mentioned it first while he was discussing George Crabbe's "Library" in 1858: "Forty years later the same theme, the Mutability of Literature, will be described by Washington Irving, not as poetry but as humour, a style which suits the subject better" ⁸⁷ Ten years later Potgieter still had the piece in mind, he was writing Huet. "You merely touch on 'the mutability of the forms of literature,' and if as you ask why I write the phrase in English you recall a sketch of Geoffrey Crayon, I believe I have gained my point." ⁸⁸

⁸⁵ De Gids, 1851, I, 501–536, 635–671, 743–781 and II, 74–105, 232–262, 355–387 (Werken, VII, 260–460 and VIII, 1–136). ⁸⁶ "Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 281

⁸⁷ "George Crabbe," De Gids, 1858, II, 814 (Werken, XVII, 342).

⁸⁸ Brieven aan Huet, I, 155.

In his charming sketch, "Journey in the Rain,"⁸⁹ a sketch primarily concerned with Hawthorne, Potgieter returned to the theme of Irving's caricatures of the Dutch. In the Knickerbocker History of New York, Irving had presented the Dutchman as a passive, phlegmatic, imperturbable creature, and in "Rip van Winkle" he had described a meek, long-suffering, patient old soul "who could sit . . . and fish all day without a murmur, even though he should not be encouraged by a single nibble." Potgieter, in his sketch, has Hawthorne describe a Dutch angler who is certainly a blood-brother to the unruffled Rip:

Over against me, stretching out of the reeds, we would say, out of the rushes, you say, and rightly so, for it is a growth which flourishes and flutters in your marshes only—over against me I saw a fishing rod stretching out of the green. I studied it for a long while before I became aware of the hand that held the yellow pole, for that did not appear until the bobber indicated a bite—no, until the bobber had wholly disappeared. I was careful not to make a movement on my own part, had I done so, the hand might have been withdrawn again. For only very gradually a form emerged from the grey-green of the brush, its coat fading into colorlessness along with the landscape around us, dull-grey overhead, dull-grey underneath, and thick fog in the distance. Poor fisherman! he thought he had a bite and had himself been taken in, the fish was gone, and with it the bait. But, although the pole was raised high over the bulrushes then, it all happened without excitement, without a sign of the vehemence of disappointment, without impulsiveness. There was as little hint of perturbation in the movement of the hand which placed it next him in the deep-furrowed path as in the wave-ringlet which was left on the water by the upcast bobber, and which slowly thinned out and vanished. Whether all this would have happened so quietly, so unobtrusively, if a bass or eel had struggled at the end of the line, I do not know. I think not. The assumption that his delight in the catch would have robbed him of a bit of the calm which had proved too tough for disappointment was warranted, I thought, even though the way in which he brought a tobacco-box into view gave no evidence for it. The bright metal glimmered a little in the general dulness, but he beamed no grateful acknowledgment upon it. Wise fisherman! so far from pouncing upon the few strands of tobacco, his fingers slowly gathered them together. He put the snack in his mouth, new bait on the hook—fastened better than the first, no doubt—and the yellow pole again glided slowly through the green. Once more the figure was submerged in the rushes, imperceptible as the hand that governed the pole. But a beam brighter than the glimmer of the copper tobacco-case a moment ago flashed upon me from this scene and illuminated that virtue. . . .

The virtue of course is imperturbability, although the jarring of the coaches, in which Potgieter and Hawthorne are riding, conveniently prevents the word from being spoken.

⁸⁹ "Onderweg in den Regen," De Gids, 1864, iv, 427-453 (Werken, viii, 349-382)

Potgieter mentioned Willis in "To New York" as being among the writers who had not done justice to the Dutch of New Netherland. In 1842 also, Potgieter criticized Willis's American Scenery for lacking warmth,⁹⁰ but found "Wigwam versus Almack's" good enough for translation in De Gids.⁹¹ Moreover, Potgieter's "Salmagundi" contained a short translation from American Scenery in 1851.⁹²

From James Kirk Paulding, Potgieter translated "The Fountain of Youth—A Vision."⁹³ Thomas Chandler Haliburton published The Clock-maker, or The Sayings and Doings of Samuel Slick, of Slickville in 1838. Two years later Potgieter shared a part of it with his subscribers by translating "How Jonathan Rules the World."⁹⁴ In 1839 Potgieter referred to David Crockett in a way which suggests that he knew this humorist well.⁹⁵ "Curtis, the humorist" has a place in the survey of American writers included in "Journey in the Rain."⁹⁶ A letter to Huet discloses that Potgieter knew at least one of Curtis's books. Potgieter advised Huet to review Edmond About's Ahmed le Fellah and wrote, "Use the Nile Notes of a Howadji when you do so . . . Do you remember G. W. Curtis's pleasant preface?"⁹⁷ Potgieter's interest in the American scene led him to give the readers of De Gids the twenty-eighth chapter of Mrs. Mary Clavers's *A New Home—Who'll Follow?*⁹⁸ In the North American Review, C. C. Felton had called the book "one of the most spirited and original works that has yet been produced in this country."⁹⁹ Very probably it was his interest in the American scene also which induced Potgieter to translate the whole of Mrs. Susan Ridley Sedgwick's Allen Prescott Or the Fortunes of a New-England Boy.¹⁰⁰ Potgieter stated in his Preface that "the pleasant sketches of town life, of the genuineness, the intelligence, and the goodness which distinguishes the people along these ⁹⁰ So Pennink (p. 284) has it from the Nederlandsche Musen-Almanak, 1842, p. 22.

⁹¹ "Wigwam contra Almack's," De Gids, 1842, II, 501-541.

⁹² De Gids, 1851, II, 239-240 (Werken, VIII, 59-61).

⁹³ "Verjonging," De Gids, 1844, II, 424-441. Paulding's vignette, never collected, appeared in the Columbian, I (February, 1844), 78-83.

⁹⁴ "Hoe Jonathan de Wereld Beet Heeft," De Gids, 1839, II, 385-393.

⁹⁵ De Gids, 1839, I, 141.

⁹⁶ De Gids, 1864, IV, 449 (Werken, VIII, 377).

⁹⁷ Brieven aan Huet, II, 122. Potgieter noted that the Nile Notes of a Howadji had been published in New York in 1851.

⁹⁸ "Wat Men Al te Leen Vraagt in het Vreemde Westen van America!" De Gids, 1841, II, 466-473.

⁹⁹ Vol. I, 223 (January, 1840). Potgieter very probably took the excerpt which he translated from Felton's review.

¹⁰⁰ Allen Prescott Tooneelen uit Dorp en Stad in Nieuw-Engeland (Deventer, 1840). The American edition was published anonymously in two volumes by Harper and Brothers in New York in 1834.

lovely waysides, doing homage to the humanity in man, are one of the principal merits of the book"¹⁰¹

One can hardly regard the numerous, short translations in De Gids as mere space-fillers, as the last resort of an editor who needs copy. Pen-nink remarks in this connection that Potgieter "might have plundered the whole of world literature for his miscellany"¹⁰² Moreover, most of the translations appear during the first years of De Gids, and the founders of the journal had committed themselves to high standards of selection in the matter of translations:

Not as a youth who, with an exaggerated but pardonable zeal, wants to reckon a new era of the national literature from the date of his first appearance, but as a man who is convinced that the head and heart of our public have higher needs than the booty pilfered, and often crudely pilfered, from French sheets can satisfy, and who, prompted by love and longing for knowledge and art, is daily keeping his eye on the fields of domestic and foreign literature, honoring the beautiful wherever it is found¹⁰³

To Catherine Maria Sedgwick's Linwood or America and Hope Leslie, Potgieter gave a long review in 1839.¹⁰⁴ He made it the occasion for presenting a bird's eye view of American literature. Some, though not all, of his detailed information about Miss Sedgwick he obtained from the North American Review.¹⁰⁵ Potgieter introduced several pages from both novels into his criticism. He praised the breadth of Miss Sedgwick's character portrayal in Linwood, and added:

There is both truth and simplicity in this sketch . . . The muse of Miss Sedgwick may not soar to a high plane, but she nowhere defiles those two nestimable gifts. Although she has neither philosophical depth nor poetic ardor, she nowhere denies the character of an intelligent and sensitive woman. Harry and Jasper, Herbert and Eliot are young people from the real world, not lovers who exist at all only because they have sweethearts . . .¹⁰⁶

The reviewer knew well from his experience of the second rate in the literature of his own country, if not in ours, that noble intentions do not make a novel:

For there was a time when you could be sure of being three-fourths of a success if only you prated about patriotism or religious zeal in the proper places. Disparagement of every foreign, puffing of every domestic event, much chatter about piety and forefathers, and success was assured.¹⁰⁷

¹⁰¹ De Gids, 1842, I, 404

¹⁰² "Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 283

¹⁰³ Quoted from the Prospectus of De Gids by Jonckbloet, Geschiedenis der Nederlandsche Letterkunde, VI, 172

¹⁰⁴ De Gids, 1839, I, 135-149.

¹⁰⁵ Vol. XLV, 475-481 (October, 1837).

¹⁰⁶ De Gids, 1839, I, 145.

¹⁰⁷ De Gids, 1839, I, 136-137

A Dutch ship's officer translated Richard Henry Dana's Two Years Before the Mast in 1842¹⁰⁸ Potgieter was overwhelmingly pleased by the book and immediately made it the subject of an enthusiastic review¹⁰⁹ Remembering his unqualified praise of Cooper as a writer of sea tales, we may suspect that the eulogist of Janmaat was attracted to the subject The review shows that he was also attracted to the author The young Dana reminded Potgieter of the heroes of his own seventeenth century Potgieter relates how Richard Henry, Jr., left school because of illness:

The courage of the decision, as well as the choice of the journey, testifies to the resilience characteristic of a young nation To manipulate hawsers instead of poring over books, to brave the malice of wind and weather instead of keeping vigil with a lamp till midnight, to cut your way through ice when used to the comforts of a study—what a change! A pampered child would be as taken aback by it as by the purpose of the journey No pleasure jaunt, this, no cruise along the Archipelago. He went for hides to California—a destination which could not be reached except by sailing around that end of the world which Jacob le Maire, according to the Spiegel der Australische Navigatie, discovered the 29th January, 1616, and, in honor of the city of Hoorn, called Capo de Hoorn Forgive me for the inadvertent recollection of the youth of our own people .

Obviously Dana's book had fallen into good hands.

The same good sense which saved the young pupil of the muses from the stupid pride of refusing to work, when open air, exercise, and boundless vistas promised a cure for his peculiar disease, the same good sense which prompted him to begin on the lowest rung of the ladder in the merchant fleet, when it became apparent that he would have to give up his beloved Literature, this same good sense is reflected in the style of the novel Instead of the poetic student whom you expect, you meet the practical burgher Restrained in his borrowings from Greek and Latin authors with which students so much like to polish an insignificant tale, the young academian adapts himself wholly to his new conditions He reproduces the impressions these have made upon him with the same fidelity his forming in the school of the ancients has taught him to appreciate We have not in a long time read a book that is so simple, so virile, so true, and—what is of a higher order still—so informed by a love of humanity

It is significant of Potgieter's interest in the novel and its author that he selected as the epigraph over his review the line: "And I vowed that, if God should ever give me the means, I would do something to redress the grievances and relieve the sufferings of that class of beings, with whom my lot had so long been cast " Potgieter concluded the review by advising the Dutch Ministry of the Marine and the shipping firms to take over the distribution of the novel

¹⁰⁸ Potgieter was enthusiastic about the excellence of the translation by "one of our best ship's officers " De Gids, 1842, I, 550. ¹⁰⁹ De Gids, 1842, I, 535-550.

Potgieter had read of the Transcendentalists, of course. But it cannot be said that he was a student of the movement. We know that he owned the complete works of Emerson and many of the works of Thoreau.¹¹⁰ Emerson's name has a place in "Emigration to the United States,"¹¹¹ perhaps, however, because the correspondent at Pella had mentioned him. Potgieter wove a summary of the Transcendental movement into his novelle, "Journey in the Rain." Speaking to Hawthorne, he says:

I do not deny that your large public took a great interest in the efforts made by your best minds to determine how far the theses of the day, including those of Fourier, could be carried out in practice. The world—as they say in the States—kept its eye fixed upon the Transcendentalists at Concord. Emerson alone proved worthy of the pilgrimage to "the new Mecca," Emerson in the full bloom of his freely inquiring spirit. Around him what a group of budding intelligences, since become famous in various ways. Thoreau, the naturalist, Parker, the pious, no more so when he was pleading for reasonable religion than when he was contending for the abolition of slavery, Curtis the humorist, the formidable figure of Channing, the eloquent speaker, and finally, most remarkable of all, perhaps, Margaret Fuller, who shamed them by her gifts of mind and spirit, the magnet to which those men felt drawn and by which they were controlled.¹¹²

Besides, Potgieter in the same sketch gave Hawthorne a full account of the genesis and reception of the Blithedale Romance.

American poetry seemed to Potgieter to show symptoms of the same weakness which Jan the Poet had pointed to in the poetry of Holland.¹¹³ Concerning American verse Potgieter wrote in 1842:

Their poetry—permit me to be outspoken about it—savors of the same leaven which sometimes makes the enjoyment of our own more a matter of duty than of pleasure. There was a time in which a practical, a didactic, a religious purpose overloaded us with rhymes. The Americans have too little time to be sitting empty-handed in moments of relaxation making verses, and they, too, are a serious, reasoning people who listen attentively to sermons. Art is more likely to be a means to them than an end—you know the result!¹¹⁴

Longfellow was Potgieter's favorite American poet. Besides "The Burial of the Minnisink," "The Slave's Dream," "The Good Part," and "The Quadroon Girl," mentioned above, Potgieter translated "The Wreck of the Hesperus"¹¹⁵ and "Santa Filomena."¹¹⁶ In his note to "Santa Filomena" Potgieter pointed to Longfellow's religious tolerance:

¹¹⁰ Pennink, "Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 293.

¹¹¹ De Gids, 1855, I, 513 (Werken, VIII, 197).

¹¹² De Gids, 1864, IV, 449 (Werken, VIII, 377).

¹¹³ De Gids, 1842, II, 35–36 (Werken, I, 19–20).

¹¹⁴ De Gids, 1839, I, 141.

¹¹⁵ "De Schipbreuk van den Hesperus," De Gids, 1843, II, 213–216 (Werken, XII, 218–222).

¹¹⁶ "Santa Filomena (Saint Nightingale)," De Gids, 1858, II, 256–258 (Werken, IX, 89).

Struck by a coincidence of name, inasmuch as Philomena means Nightingale, he saw no harm in thus referring to the virgin martyr under Diocletian, even though our distinguished contemporary belongs to the protestant faith. The singer of the "Psalm of Life," we know, is not one of those who in their adherence to notions derived from the Old Testament would rather ignore the first centuries of Christendom than try to work from both the past and present towards the development of a better future.¹¹⁷

While discussing Albertine Kehrér's Gedichten in 1853, Potgieter had reprinted the whole of the "Psalm of Life" and asked, "Who among our celebrated, spiritual singers will oblige us by translating the poem?"¹¹⁸ He was not satisfied with the response to his invitation, for in 1860 he asked, "What? Another unsuccessful translation of the 'Psalm of Life'?"¹¹⁹

Potgieter liked "Evangeline." Most of the final installment of his "Salmagundi" in 1851 was given to a prose reproduction of the tale.¹²⁰ "A simple story," he wrote, "which derives all its value from the manner in which it is told and is therefore doubly difficult to retell—not everyone has the talent for it."¹²¹ Potgieter had the talent. It is a pleasure to read his version. In 1857 the Dutch *Library of Foreign Classics*¹²² contained an excellent translation of the poem. In his review of this Potgieter wrote:

We run the danger of neglecting Longfellow in our survey. Be it far from us! We owe a translation of his "Evangeline" to the combined efforts of S. J. Vanden Bergh and B. Ph. de Kanter. We had previously given an indication of our sympathy for this masterpiece, which, together with the Hermann und Dorothea, belongs to our favorite reading. . . There is only one objection to introducing the poem into this Library: contemporary praise does not warrant giving a poem the title "classic."¹²³

And again in 1864 Potgieter mentioned "Evangeline." C. P. Tiele had included a translation of "The Village Blacksmith" in his Gedichten and Potgieter gave the poem special attention in his review of Tiele's work. He explained his choice:

Has our preference, perhaps, been dictated by the attractive volume *Poets of the West*¹²⁴ lying open before us, in which we can enjoy "The Village Blacksmith" twice: in the pithy lines and in the lively illustrations. . . But do you enjoy this pleasure yourselves, whether in the original of the American whose recently published new cycle of poems Tales of a Wayside Inn testifies to his many-sided

¹¹⁷ De Gids, 1858, II, 256.

¹¹⁸ De Gids, 1853, II, 315–316 (Werken, xv, 41–42).

¹¹⁹ De Gids, 1860, II, 871.

¹²⁰ De Gids, 1851, II, 367–387 (Werken, VIII, 108–136).

¹²¹ De Gids, 1851, II, 367 (Werken, VIII, 108).

¹²² Bibliotheek van Buitenlandsche Klassieken (Haarlem, 1857).

¹²³ De Gids, 1857, II, 835.

¹²⁴ Poets of the West—a Selection of Favorite American Poems, with Memoirs of Their Authors (New York, 1860).

studies, or in the translation of the Hollander who in many ways has a sympathy with the poet ¹²⁵

Naturally Potgieter, the student of the American Indian, noted "Hiawatha." He translated the last half of the Introduction to "The Song of Hiawatha," using it as his own introduction to a critical review of two books on Dutch history, W. J. Hofdijck's Historische Landschappen and Het Nederlandsche Volk ¹²⁶ "Charles Bossevain," he wrote to Huet in 1869, "is contemplating an attack on Longfellow in De Gids as being "too tame, too trite" ¹²⁷ No matter, this tameness and triteness—Potgieter enjoyed his Longfellow. Pennink suggests the reason: "That Potgieter . . . who loved the simple, the wholesomely emotional, the constructive, should like Longfellow is not surprising." ¹²⁸ And Potgieter knew Longfellow at his poetic best. The Divine Comedy had appeared in 1867, Potgieter's "Florence" in 1868. But in the Notes to "Florence"—in which long quotations from Irving ¹²⁹ and Lowell ¹³⁰ also have a place—Potgieter was already paying tribute to the translator. In his Notes, Potgieter translated five of the six sonnets introducing the several parts of Longfellow's Comedy ¹³¹ Finally, in "Journey in the Rain," Potgieter's maturest, most personal novelle, Longfellow is made to read a poem at the grave of Hawthorne. Obviously the Longfellow whom he had first translated in 1839 remained interesting and real to him throughout the years.

From Bryant Potgieter translated besides "The Indian at the Burying-place of his Fathers," mentioned above, the two poems, "The Future Life" ¹³² and "Life" ¹³³ Potgieter at no time commented on Bryant's poetry, except to say—with his usual up-to-date information about American books—that Irving had in 1836 introduced Bryant to England ¹³⁴ In 1843 Potgieter translated from the pages of the Knickerbocker Isaac McLellan's "Song of the Hawk." ¹³⁵ After introducing John G. Brainard's "Far away from the hill side" into "Mahaskah" in 1838, Potgieter stated that he regretted that poet's early death. Very probably, therefore, he had read Whittier's account of Brainard's life and work. ¹³⁶

¹²⁵ De Gids, 1864, I, 196 (Werken, xvi, 323)

¹²⁶ De Gids, 1857, I, 31–32 (Werken, xv, 52–53) ¹²⁷ Brieven aan Huet, II, 82.

¹²⁸ "Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 288 ¹²⁹ Werken, IX, 392.

¹³⁰ Werken, IX, 417–418 ¹³¹ Werken, IX, 369–370, 376, 387–388.

¹³² "Het toekomstig Leven," De Gids, 1843, II, 663–664 (Werken, XII, 230–232).

¹³³ "Leven," De Gids, 1843, II, 152–156 (Werken, XII, 213–217)

¹³⁴ "Mahaskah," De Gids, 1838, II, 455 (Werken, VI, 217)

¹³⁵ "Het Lied van den Valk," De Gids, 1843, II, 334–336 (Werken, XII, 223–226) Knickerbocker, XIX, 125 (March, 1842)

¹³⁶ J. G. Whittier, The Literary Remains of John G. C. Brainard with a Sketch of His Life (Hartford, 1832)

To Potgieter's reading of Whittier, Dutch prose is partly indebted for "A Novelle?"¹³⁷ "A Novelle?" was written in 1864, the year of Potgieter's translation of "Maud Muller"¹³⁸ And "A Novelle?" is a metamorphosis in prose of Whittier's poem Potgieter begins the tale—it is a kind of exercise in the idyll—with a discussion of the advantages of prose over poetry Very likely he had "Maud Muller" in mind as he set about achieving in prose what Whittier had accomplished in verse "A Novelle?" is a frame story, and the inside story is the story of Whittier's Maud:

"It's a dream," the girl whispered to herself, "it's foolishness," she went on But the foolishness persisted, the dream was pleasant Eight days ago, no, it was nine now, it had happened, as twilight fell, that a gentleman's carriage had stopped at the door. "How long will it take?" she heard the gentleman ask, but look, she had the trough in front of the horse already, and he was already out of the chaise Such foolishness, that she could not forget the thrill of the friendly look he gave her The last rays were coming through the leafage "Is there no one here to give my thirsty horse a drink?" he had asked, and she had answered, "I'll do it." "But that is not for such a pretty" He had not finished the compliment, he had seen the pump, he had seen the bucket, with his gloved hand he worked the handle, the horse drank During the drinking she raised her eyes to him and saw that he, as he removed the yellow kid, was looking at her again She blushed It had been only a dream, those moments with him, and meant nothing, of course Yet she dared not close her eyes now, for then they would be standing together again in front of the horse, the creature was almost brushing her face with the long, white mane, she raised her hand to prevent it, but his was ahead of hers Their hands touched Such foolishness, to tremble as she thought of it He had simply forgotten that she was only Machteld

It is the story of "the rich repiner and household drudge" Echoes of the "sisters proud and vain," of "him who sat by the chimney lug, Dozing and grumbling o'er pipe and mug," of "the care and sorrow of childbirth pain," and even of the "new toy each day" are heard in "A Novelle?" also. Potgieter's novelle is much more than these details, of course; there are fifty-four pages for Whittier's three, and Potgieter's Machteld gets her prince.

Potgieter mentioned "The Raven" in his letters to Huet, and he commented on it, while reproducing almost the whole of it, in his review of Jacob van Lennep's interesting translation of the poem¹³⁹ We know that Potgieter owned the complete works of Poe¹⁴⁰ However, it is not surprising that he had nothing to say of the tales. Potgieter was not the man

¹³⁷ "Eene Novelle?" De Gids, 1864, III, 521-563 (Werken, VIII, 294-348)

¹³⁸ "Aafje," De Gids, 1864, IV, 485-492 (Werken, XII, 344-350)

¹³⁹ De Gids, 1860, II, 870-873

¹⁴⁰ Pennink, "Potgieter en de Amerikaanse Letterkunde," p. 293 to appreciate the fierce economy of Poe's technique. Nor was Potgieter the man to admire an author whose tales seemed to spring from nothing more palpable than an inexplicable faculty for tale-telling. To Poe, Potgieter, who usually shunned clichés, applied the cliché, "a man who in many respects left much to be desired."¹⁴¹

Nathaniel Hawthorne was, barring none outside of Dutch literature with the possible exception of Goethe, Potgieter's favorite author. None but the hackneyed phrase will do. he saw in Hawthorne a kindred soul. It must be said, however, that he fashioned Hawthorne somewhat after his own image. He saw, or fancied that he saw, many parallels between the American and himself. Generally well informed about our writers, he believed—or did he perhaps know better?—that Hawthorne was "an old bachelor" like himself.¹⁴² He knew that Hawthorne lived aloof from men and affairs. Potgieter, who would certainly have been an excellent family man—consider his relations to his Tante van Ulsen and to the Busken Huets—and who confesses to an uncommon sociability, thought of himself also as unhappily alone in the world. Potgieter saw tenderness in Hawthorne, and himself had tenderness—such sketches and tales as "Albert," "Anna," and "A Novelle?" prove it. Potgieter loved children, necessarily other people's children—"You're like my father," said little Gideon Huet, touched by Potgieter's affection.¹⁴³ And so, he thought, did Hawthorne. Potgieter was continually seeing mystery in the world of the actual. "How rich life is in mysteries," he wrote to Huet,¹⁴⁴ perhaps thinking of Hawthorne as he wrote, for the years of these letters to Huet are the years of Potgieter's spiritual companionship with Hawthorne. Hawthorne's early work had been unpopular, all of Potgieter's was. "I have noticed for years how unpopular I am—Krusseman's remittance of royalties confirms it again. I say this without bitterness: I do not want to become popular by the means one must use to obtain popularity."¹⁴⁵ The year before he had written, and was now almost certainly thinking, of Hawthorne: "The one strength he possessed became evident in the fact that he kept on writing, irrespective of how few his readers were. . . ."¹⁴⁶ Always, and in his most disillusioned moments, in moments when he felt most solitary in the pursuit of his artistic ideals, Potgieter thought of Hawthorne and found a comfort in the thought.

His first critical comment on Hawthorne is one of boundless praise. Potgieter wrote it in 1853: "No matter which way we search, we shall hunt in vain among all the eminent of our time for the equal of a Na-

¹⁴¹ De Gids, 1860, II, 871.

¹⁴² De Gids, 1864, IV, 445 (Werken, VIII, 372).

¹⁴³ Huet, "Persoonlijke Herinneringen," Litterarische Fantasien en Kritieken, XIII, 77.

¹⁴⁴ Brieven aan Huet, I, 9.

¹⁴⁵ Brieven aan Huet, I, 126-127.

¹⁴⁶ De Gids, 1864, IV, 445 (Werken, VIII, 372).

thaniel Hawthorne, whose range of values increases with each new work."¹⁴⁷ It is significant of Potgieter's companionship with Hawthorne that he spoke of him most in the most personal writing of his later years, in the letters to Huet, and in the novelle "Journey in the Rain." The references to Hawthorne in the letters abound. In July of 1864, the year of "Journey in the Rain," Potgieter wrote: "I read Our Old Home by Hawthorne and recommend it to Mevrouw, what a pity that it is his last book. Although this does not occur to one while reading it, he was here already 'half in the land of dreams' "¹⁴⁸ In January of 1865 he addressed young Gideon Huet in a statement which suggests how Potgieter constantly saw himself reflected in Hawthorne. "Yes, Gideon, I had hoped to do some good, and I brewed only ill, if Hawthorne had seen you he would have asked you many questions and have had no answer "¹⁴⁹ Again to Huet in April of 1865: "Have you read the introduction to the Mosses from an Old Manse? In substance it contains all that is most original in what Hawthorne later produced."¹⁵⁰ And as late as 1870, Potgieter admitted: "I completely lack the talent of a Hoffmann or a Hawthorne."¹⁵¹

But the best of Potgieter's tributes to Hawthorne, the best result, indeed, of Potgieter's sympathetic and persistent interest in American life and letters, is the novelle of 1864, "Journey in the Rain."¹⁵² Potgieter is at his ripest, most seasoned, and peculiar best in the prose of this piece. He is working in his favorite prose, he can "be inclusive without being tedious" in it, can remain true to his somewhat tortuous patterns of thought and private modes of feeling.

"Journey in the Rain" shows again how constantly Potgieter kept abreast of the literary situation in the United States. In July, 1864, the Atlantic Monthly published "A Scene from the Dolliver Romance" together with an introduction in which Oliver Wendell Holmes described the last days and funeral of Hawthorne. By December of the same year, De Gids had published "Journey in the Rain," in which elements of both the Dolliver Romance and Holmes's "Nathaniel Hawthorne" were embodied.

In the novelle Potgieter is in a reflective mood. He has spent the whole day futilely riding a cab through the Hague. It is raining. "To Scheveningen?" the cabman asks. Indeed not. He will not have the memories of a more cheerful day spent there obliterated. "To the tracks," then. The train to Amsterdam has arrived. But for him, and he sociable to a fault, there is no one in the coaches. A book then, a slender one, Pansie. This is ¹⁴⁷ De Gids, 1857, II, 265-266.

¹⁴⁹ Brieven aan Huet, I, 104.

¹⁵¹ Brieven aan Huet, III, 13.

¹⁴⁸ Brieven aan Huet, I, 55.

¹⁵⁰ Brieven aan Huet, I, 120.

¹⁵² De Gids, 1864, IV, 427-453 (Werken, VIII, 349-382).

good, this about old Dr Dolliver and little Pansie and the kitten. Through the clouds of blue smoke from his cigar he can see Pansie and the old man. Their dawdling at breakfast is delightful. Strange, the denser the smoke becomes, the more clearly the little group is relieved. He gives Pansie his hand, starts, and draws it back. What has he touched? The withered fingers of Dr Dolliver perhaps? No product of the imagination, this,—someone is seated opposite him in the coach. It is Hawthorne.

They talk. They talk of the imperturbability of the Dutch. They talk of children, of Hawthorne's success in picturing them—Pansie, Alice, Pearl and Little Annie. Hawthorne says that he knows the Dutch paintings and regrets that "one meets with so few children in them who do anything except to lie on their mother's lap, or stand alongside their mother's apron, or, at best, to play with—a doll." They talk of the Blithedale Romance, The Marble Faun, and Our Old Home. Hawthorne senses at last that his companion is an admirer. "You loved Hawthorne?" he asks. And Potgieter answers:

If hammer and chisel were at my disposal, I should want to see Goethe hewn out in marble at the moment when he, on his first visit to Rome, gazed up at the Juno Ludovisi, when the great man with all his lust for life was introduced to the world of the ancients—a world to which he transferred us also in his Romische Elegien. For Goethe represents classical humanism. I should want to see Hawthorne wrought out as he stood in the Capitol looking upon the Faun of Praxiteles, his forehead darkened by the many questions arising in him—questions which he tried to answer for us in his Transformation. For Hawthorne represents mysterious humor.

They talk of profounder subjects, touch at last upon the mystery which is art. Potgieter says:

People talk so glibly about creating, and yet Hawthorne would have been the first to acknowledge that although the poet consciously and deliberately gathers and arranges a mass of materials, the gift which permits him to say "Let there be light!" is none of his, but remains as mysterious to him as the God who gives it.

Hawthorne disappears as quietly as he came. Still indulging the dream suggested by the Dolliver romance, Potgieter sees himself transported to Concord:

I followed a group of men . . . Gently the path meandered to a hill-top, where the towering pines admitted a square of sunshine . . . On the coffin lay a manuscript—Pansie . . . Longfellow steps out of the group to read a poem. Where, you little ones all, Pearl, Annie, Pansie, where are you? Quick, a handful of flowers . . .

"Especially pleasing," wrote Professor Kalff, "is the characterization of Hawthorne in 'Journey in the Rain' . . . realism and imagination . . . an art which will seem impressive in proportion to the extent one knows the narrative art of the American romancer, who, as perhaps no one else, knows how to exalt and spiritualize reality by a continuous contact with the mysteries of life around us "¹⁵³ "Nothing finer," said Busken Huet, "has been written in our language since the seventeenth century, finer in feeling, in expression, in noble satire . . ." "¹⁵⁴ "The composition is so choice," wrote Albert Verwey, also struggling with excerpts and paraphrase, "that I should like to reproduce the whole of it . . ." "¹⁵⁵

We can be pleased by the fact that so active, informed, and interesting a mind as Potgieter's was a student of our life and literature. We can quarrel with an aesthetik which goes to literature to find the national character and the national heart rather than a purely literary pleasure, but who with any other approach would have studied us so eagerly or hoped for us so much?

HENRY ZYLSTRA

Calvin College

¹⁵³ G. Kalf, Geschiedenis der Nederlandsche Letterkunde (Groningen, 1912), VII, 459

¹⁵⁴ "Potgieter Persoonlijke Herinneringen," Litterarische Fantasien en Kritieken (Haarlem, n.d.), XIII, 40-41

¹⁵⁵ Het Leven van Potgieter (Haarlem, 1903)

THE ART OF THE FLASHLIGHT: VIOLENT TECHNIQUE IN LES ROUGON-MACQUART

THE average man pictures Zola as a writer of brutal novels, the patron-saint of all novelists labelled by present-day critics as naturalistic, vigorous, earthy, bestial, or disgusting. This much is obvious: any reader who scans the Rougon-Macquart cycle for violent effects finds a profusion of them in every one of the twenty novels.¹ Certain readers, however, feel that Zola's violence, no matter how obvious, is not entirely banal and is worthy, even, of careful study. Let us begin, therefore, by jotting down, in correct order and without regard for squeamish tastes, the really brutal moments of the series. A list of them resembles strikingly, at first glance, the programs of old melodrama. Perhaps, like such programs, our list also should be printed in various sensational sizes of type, for, as we shall see later on, Zola's work has distinct affinities with the melodrama. At any rate, here, in tabloid fashion, are the incidents we propose to study.

1 La Fortune des Rougon: march of the Republicans on Plassans at the time of the coup d'état of '51; the (accidental) gouging out of a gendarme's eye, the sadism of a degenerate youth practised upon the girl who spurned him, a prisoner shot by mistake by his own party (Zola irony), Republicans massacred in ambush; an innocent peasant's head smashed in and the hero's life taken by the vindictive gendarme, while the lad's helpless grandmother looks on.

2. Son Excellence Eugène Rougon: two attempts at seduction, one in a stable-full of horses, the other in the lady's boudoir, each attempt resisted successfully, one with a riding-whip, the second with the lighted end of a cigarette.

3. La Curée: an attempted rape, incest, husband confronting his guilty wife, that Amazonian lady bruising her lover's arm, a violent American gentleman (!), who not only threatens to beat his mistress, but leads cotillions at a breakneck pace.

4. L'Argent: another violent discovery of infidelity, mistreatment of a minor, the hero slaps and beats his mistress, another lady slapped by her lover, rape committed by a minor.

5 Le Rêve: this is one of Zola's "idylls," thus the only scene of violent action is a chase after billowing laundry on a windy day!

6 La Conquête de Plassans: the gradual insanity of two characters, a husband and wife, a final holocaust, planned by the deranged husband, in which five people perish—certainly one of the more violent moments in this, or any other novel.

7. Pot-Bouille: the violent rages of an idiot boy, a jealous husband twists his wife's arm; a rape, another vulgar domestic quarrel, a secret midnight accouche-

¹ Les Rougon-Macquart, 20 titles, 20 vols. of Œuvres complètes: Émile Zola (notes et commentaires de Maurice Le Blond, texte de l'édition Eugène Fasquelle), 46 vols. (Paris Bernouard, 1927-28).

ment (quite after the fashion of Les Mystères de Paris), and a murderous attack by the idiot

8. Au bonheur des dames: sadism—the cruelty and lack of humanity of the heroine's fellow-employees, defender throws a glass of wine in traducer's face, "un cri de mélodrame lui vint aux lèvres"

9. La Faute de l'abbé Mouret: a gruff old peasant hurls clods at his erring daughter, a fight with clods and stones between Jeanbernat and Archangias, a Christian Brother (!), the feud ends with Jeanbernat's severing Archangias' right ear. All this in a story otherwise "idyllic"

10. Une Page d'amour this is another of Zola's idylls, though it has a rather vigorous scene in which a husband, warned of his wife's assignation with another man, pursues the two, in vain

11. Le Ventre de Paris: a fight between two fishwomen in the market, using fish as weapons, cruelty of one child to another, a battle between two sisters.

12. La Joie de vivre the various semi-epileptic seizures of the heroine, she shakes and almost beats her rival, another attempt at seduction; and another accouchement; a suicide by hanging

13. L'Assommoir: a fight between two jealous women in a laundry establishment, using the laundry-sticks as weapons; mistreatment of a wife and child by a drunken man, horrible death of both mother and child, insanity of a chronic drunkard; his death and that of his wife

14. L'Œuvre: a sculptor almost crushed by a falling statue, the hero hangs himself

15. La Bête humaine: a jealous husband crushing his wife's hand, the homicidal mania of the hero, mistreatment of minors, a railway wreck, a suicide in a railway tunnel, a poisoning, two other murders and one accidental self-destruction

16. Germinal: the revolt of starving miners, discovery of a wife's infidelity, fight to the death between two rivals, death by cave-in, drowning, starvation, explosion, fusillade, etc., etc

17. Nana: a fight backstage, brutality of men; a suicide with shears, sadism of the heroine.

18. La Terre: the villain pushes his mother roughly against a wall, thus indirectly causing her death, a murderous fight with flails between two rivals, an imbecile youth attempts to violate his grandmother, she splits open his head, a murder with a scythe; death, strangling, burning, and general running amuck

19. La Débâcle: oddly enough, and by contrast, the violences in this novel of warfare seem to come at greater intervals than the foregoing, various scenes of death and suffering in battle and retreat, the execution of a civilian, burning of his body, a brawl with a murderous giant, and his execution by severing the jugular vein, while his own child looks on; summary executions during the Paris Commune; gasoline-throwers; accidental killing of one friend by another.

20. Le Docteur Pascal. the "terrible" anger of the hero, bleeding to death of an imbecile boy, and the death of his crazed great-great-grandmother, the spontaneous combustion of an old alcoholic.²

² Dickens uses this same incident in his Bleak House, and, on the score of its truthfulness, got himself into much argument with the critics: see his Preface to the novel Zola

I

Even a bare catalogue will indicate that these moments are not all equal. They may, indeed, be subject to contradictory tendencies, and for that reason must first be related to the form and frame of the story in which they occur. Doubtless, not one of the twenty novels in its pattern exactly resembles another; but there are certain strong similarities, which seem to indicate that Zola's plot-formulas pass through six characteristic stages. These stages we have tagged as Balzacian, Elizabethan, Serial Novel, Melodramatic, Palais-Royal, and Epic.

(1) Zola had the advantage (and disadvantage) of coming late in the nineteenth century, when the novel had become more self-conscious than ever before. Just as Balzac's theory was inspired by his predecessor, Scott, so Zola, in his turn, had the inspiration of Balzac, not only in conceiving the general structure of his cycle, but in planning the individual novels which composed it. This debt to Zola's predecessor is quite obvious. La Fortune des Rougon, first of the series and keystone of its structure, is most certainly indebted to La Rabouilleuse, and in particular to the provincial sequences of Balzac's work. There are many similarities: Zola's small town like Balzac's is composed of bitter "factions" or societies, the character of Antoine Macquart, a scapegrace Napoleonic veteran, suggests Balzac's Colonel Bridau; the timid Pierre Rougon may be compared with Balzac's Jean-Jacques, and the very name of the family recalls Balzac's Rougets—the more so because in both families hereditary traits skip a generation.³ Indeed, one could go so far as to say that, of the Rougon-Macquart tribe, Balzac furnished the Rougons, Zola supplied the Macquarts.

The critic Brunetière wisely pronounced La Rabouilleuse the most "naturalistic" novel of Balzac's.⁴ Certainly it must have been Zola's favorite; for he found therein much to suit his purpose and his theories. Overtones of the Balzacian story are frequent: in La Terre, for example, Jacqueline "La Cognette" has the rôle of servant-mistress quite like Balzac's fisher-girl. Other stories have their Balzacian parallels: L'Œuvre grows out of La Rabouilleuse (the story of Joseph Bridau) and Le Chef-d'œuvre inconnu; Le Rêve suggests in more than one place Eugénie Grandet and Le Curé de Tours (as does also La Conquête de Plassans), L'Assommoir, with its descriptions of murky stairwells and multi-colored puddles flowing into dirty courtyards, presents similarities to the tenement descriptions may have found his "little blue flame" in the episode of Natasya Petrovna's blacksmith in Gogol's Dead Souls, but Gogol's intention is ironical, while Zola is extremely serious.

³ La Fortune des Rougon, pp. 47 ff., 52 ff., 90, 134, 148, also pp. 86, 109.

⁴ Ferdinand Brunetière, Honoré de Balzac (Paris: Calmann-Lévy, [1905]), pp. 110-111.

in Ferragus and L'Interdiction.⁵ Other parallels could be noted, but they would merely overload the argument, and might—a thesis we do not hold—seem to deny the originality of Zola.

The disastrous effect of this reliance on Balzac is not that it hinders Zola's genius, but rather that it sometimes retards the activity of his novels. Thus, La Fortune des Rougon—the high points of which we have already listed—promises, in these disappointing moments, to be one of the most vigorous works in the series, but its plot is actually confused by Zola's too conscientious use of a Balzacian scenario. We regret that here our novelist had a model too clearly in mind: the moving and affecting story of the youthful hero is outweighed by the mass of detail which Zola, faithful to his master, feels he must record. In other words, Silvère Mouret is lost in Félicité Rougon's yellow drawing-room. Zola, having promised his reader in the first chapter the story of a vigorous youth, has betrayed his reader in the conclusion. Balzac, never promising so much excitement, can afford to while away more time in "yellow drawing-rooms." His novels, furthermore, seldom as neatly arranged as Zola's, often surpass them in a kind of divinely accidental quality: events transpire, sometimes, as it were against the very will of the author and in truly violent rhythm.⁶ Zola's "Balzacian novels" are less violent, because they are more self-conscious, because they contain a contradiction, an antithesis (passive Balzacianism vs. dynamic Creation). Here Zola the Disciple overpowers Zola the Poet.

(2) Zola's plot-weaving arrives at a second and more complex stage with a pattern best termed "Elizabethan." The title is justified, because the English plays of that epoch display frequently a similarly neat but complicated formula of plot and counterplot, of primary and secondary intrigue, of tragic and comic relief. Zola made the same effort to construct with two, even three, intrigues, and—making the Elizabethan parallel closer—usually one of his subordinate plots is comic. Thus, La Terre contains, beside the love-story of its two chief characters, the King Lear plot of Papa Chouan despoiled by his children, and a bitter-comic plot—the efforts to keep a (supposedly) innocent child ignorant of her father's scandalous business. L'Assommoir likewise has its first (or Gervaise-Coupeau) plot, which is tragic, and its second (or Lantier) plot, concerning the wrecking of successive households by this gentleman, which is comic. Exactly parallel is La Bête humaine, which, beside its brutally tragic story, has the tale of old Misard, the "worm who destroys an elephant" ⁷

⁵ Balzac parallels Terre, pp. 95, 192–193, 324, 549, Assommoir, pp. 54, 132, 438, Rêve, pp. 10, 71, 93, 142, 158, also Bonheur des Dames, pp. 18, 236, Pot-Bouille, pp. 23, 140, 216, Conquête de Plassans, pp. 256, 264, Curée, pp. 90, 171. There are also overtones of the artist Manet in the iridescent puddles of L'Assommoir.

⁶ Cf. the present writer's "Speed as a Technique in the Novels of Balzac," PMLA, March, 1940.

The very multiplicity of these themes leads to more movement than does the Balzacian formula, but this construction offers, like the first, a temptation and a danger. The novelist must tread his way carefully through these double and triple imbroglios, and, often enough, he slights one at the expense of another. One example will suffice. We have already noted the complicated plan of La Terre. Within that structure, certainly the most sympathetic story is that of Jean Macquart and Françoise Mouche, yet Zola scandalously neglects the death scene of his heroine, presenting instead a full-length portrayal of a group of secondary characters at an inn, together with a minute reproduction of their conversation. Meanwhile, Françoise, a character in whom the reader has a prior interest, and whose death should mark the climax of the novel, is permitted to die almost unheeded by the author—a few scant pages, in contrast to the lengthy inn scene ⁸ This neglect is certainly a structural weakness, a tendency in the direction of passivity, and represents Zola's yielding to a temptation which we shall meet again later.

(3) Thus, an excessive use of sub-plot sometimes leads Zola to stray; and he strays not infrequently from the Elizabethan into a third and related stage, which might be labelled the "serial story." (Indeed, the Elizabethan tragedians, the melodramatists, and the serial-writers had in many respects the same concept of plot-construction.) This type of scenario is betrayed by an ill-considered hurrying or crowding, by hasty or illogical linking of incidents. Sometimes, to be sure, Zola emphasizes by this means his conception of "life's little ironies." Thus, in L'Assommoir, the mother-in-law becomes mortally ill, upsets the household, then just as suddenly recovers her health—for no very clear reason ⁹ There may be a staccato rhythm here, but it is none the less captious. Similarly, in the same novel, a drunkard almost kicks his wife to death twice before Zola finally permits him to succeed ¹⁰ Scenes like these make for suspense, in a way, and it may be that suspense is sufficient excuse for any method of plot construction, but they follow the formula of "continued in our next," the formula of Le Juif errant and Les Mystères de Paris.

Although the serial method succeeds very well in certain of Zola's novels—particularly in two masterpieces of vice and monomania (L'As-

⁷ Elizabethan construction. Terre, p. 313, Bête humaine, p. 277, ch. x, Assommoir, pp. 451, etc.

⁸ Terre, Part IV, ch. vi, cf. also the hasty conclusion of the lengthy marriage scene in the same novel.

⁹ Ironic construction. Assommoir, p. 293.

¹⁰ Serial construction. Assommoir, pp. 199–200, ch. vi.

sommoir and Nana)—it occasionally ceases to function even here. In both L'Assommoir and Nana, the important death scenes are slighted, passed over in perfunctory fashion. It is as though the serial novelist, after a busy day, had hurried to shut up shop. In one paragraph, Gervaise is allowed to die in her cubbyhole under the stairs, and the decomposition of Nana—fresh from her triumphs in distant lands—seems also remarkably prompt. After a very large and emphatic preparation, these incidents seem by contrast hurried and awkward. If this is violence, it is of a hasty kind, and betrays the powerful influence of the serial-scenario, with its uneven pace, hectic mood, and frenzied characters.

(4) Zola does not tarry long in this frantic stage, but moves to a fourth, which may be labelled, purely and simply, "melodrama." The main action of La Bête humaine is distinctly of this kind: a sanguinary crime-story, the tracking down of criminals, the pricking of conscience, and the destructive power of vice. To prove this novel's affinities with melodrama, we have only to read the first chapter: here, point for point, the author has followed the second act of Henri III et sa cour—even to the husband's crushing his wife's hand and arm as he dictates the letter of assignation.¹¹ Thus, from its very beginning, a story which might have become another Crime and Punishment really achieves nothing higher than melodrama. L'Assommoir, too, is frequently on the melodramatic level. In one chapter, the heroine decides to turn to the streets for a livelihood. There, in one night—by extension of the long arm of coincidence—she runs into almost every one of her acquaintances. The incident reaches its climax when, reduced to begging, she accosts a nocturnal stroller, who immediately begins to beg of her in turn—he is a neighbor and friend.¹² One could certainly establish other analogies between Zola's fiction and the Boulevard Theaters; yet, for all their theatrical obviousness, it must be admitted that these melodramatic plots have an activity of their own, and offer a more genuine opportunity for violence than do the other three types.

(5) But the novelist does not stop here. Zola favors another dramatic formula, which has affinities with the kind of comedy made illustrious by Eugène Labiche and performed until recently in time-honored fashion at the Palais-Royal Theater. The Palais-Royal is a temple of farce; and some of Zola's most characteristic works deserve a place inside that shrine. To be convinced of the relationship, we need only compare one of Labiche's typical farces of the 1860's—say, La Cagnotte—with one of ¹¹ Melodrama. Bête humaine, pp. 24–25, Assommoir, pp. 430 ff.

¹² The same coincidence was used by Édouard Brisebarre and Eugène Nus in the melodrama, Les Pauvres de Paris, adapted by Dion Boucicault as The Streets of New York (mother and son, begging in the street, meet one another).

Zola's "middle-class" novels—Pot-Bouille, for example. Their patterns are the same: marriage-brokers and go-betweens, mothers trying desperately to dispose of undowered daughters, fathers trying desperately to make or break liaisons with actresses. This formula, with its emphasis on bedrooms, dressing-gowns, night escapades, sudden flights, jealous husbands, and all the rest of the vulgar apparatus, represents a whole Zeitgeist—it is nothing short of "Second Empire." Even so idyllic a story as Une Page d'amour sinks occasionally into scenes that are pure farce.¹³

"Second Empire" seems to be an amalgam of Scarron's Roman comique, the medieval fabliau, and Paul de Kock. It is animated by a spirit of sadistic relief achieved through indignity and outrage heaped upon the characters. This sadism is seen in its lighter manifestation when, in L'Assommoir, Mme Lorilleux is inundated with a bowl of starch. But, in La Terre, far less pleasant materials are hurled, and certain incidents involving the peasant known as "Jésus-Christ" become absolutely unrelatable. In this fondness for mayhem, even words are hurled like missiles: "Tu es une . . . Il dit le mot." Fortunately, however, burlesque fantasy occasionally reaches the level of genuine irony. Thus, a poor but honest carpenter is expelled for daring to bring his wife to his room in a "respectable" apartment house which fairly crawls with illicit intrigue. A novelist too (is our author thinking of himself?) for writing "un tas de saletés" is marched off to the police station from that selfsame apartment house, while the other tenants continue their lecherous way.¹⁴ In such cases, Zola's farce merges with the epic. Indeed, by means of its very va-et-vient, this recipe is more active than the others—not even excepting the melodrama, for melodrama, even Zola's, smacks always of the 1830's, while his farce moves into the 1860's, and packs the punch of a more contemporary Zeitgeist. Still, it is rather distressing to have to admit that the most vigorous formula so far discovered is farcical, fit rather for the Palais-Royal than for the Théâtre-Français.

(6) The Zolaesque plot has progressed through five stages, and now reaches a sixth, which, in a way, comprehends them all—just as philosophy is said to comprehend the subordinate sciences. This is the "epic," a large pattern which fits not only whole novels but also phases of the plots already considered. Zola's epic may be defined as a formula which transcends all the others because in it people, things, and forces are all united in an action. Indeed, a greater number of Rougon-Macquart stories belong to this category than to any other. The great epics of disaster are well known (La Débâcle, Germinal). There are also epics of the soil (La Terre). There are biblical and saintly epics (La Faute de l'abbé Mouret, Le Rêve, and, to a lesser extent, Le Docteur Pascal). Finally, there are even epics of humor: Pot-Bouille, as we have seen, is more than farce—it is epic in its Olympian vigor. We can maintain, without exaggeration, that the one contribution of the nineteenth century to an ancient and aristocratic literary genre was the "vulgar epic," a novelty which Zola, even more than Hugo, successfully exploited. His epic genius, more than any other, conditions his episodes, and his epic plots, if for no other reason than their large-scale, dynamic simplicity, achieve the maximum of clarity and progression, activity and vigor.

¹³ Farce: Pot-Bouille, ch. II, p. 360 (cf. Labiche), and passim, Page d'amour, pp. 262, 266. Compare also the bourgeois wedding-scenes in Un Chapeau de paille d'Italie and L'Assommoir.

¹⁴ Burlesque style: Assommoir, p. 137; Terre, pp. 225, 393, 452-453, Fortune des Rougon, pp. 110, 258, Son Excellence Eugène Rougon, pp. 145, 261, 350, Curée, pp. 119, 221, 258, 267-268, Pot-Bouille, pp. 129, 180, 309, 320, 398, Faute de l'abbé Mouret, p. 360, Œuvre, pp. 36, 361; Nana, chs. V, VIII; Page d'amour, pp. 262, 266.

This review of the six main structural stages of the Rougon-Macquart series leads to one obvious conclusion: all are not equally powerful. Some are more active than others, and, on this basis, the six are about equally divided. Of the less active types, the Balzacian plot is often too faithful to its model, the Elizabethan plot lacks unity sometimes, and often presents an unfinished appearance, the serial plot likewise occasionally neglects or mistreats those episodes which should be most vigorous. None of these types, as regards the presentation of violence, is quite as successful as the other three. Of these, the melodramatic plot lends itself to a kind of frantic violence; the Palais-Royal plot, despite its vulgar character, has a very sprightly activity, and the epic plot achieves a steady and inexorable progress. It is not necessary to judge or evaluate these plots from an esthetic point of view, nor need one contend that any one novel falls neatly or completely into only one category. Rather, we have seen how several of Zola's best (L'Assommoir, for example) grow kaleidoscopically from one pattern into another. Our conclusion is merely that, within the novels of the series, certain formulas are better calculated than others to favor the effects of motion, activity, and violence.

II

The violent moments of Les Rougon-Macquart are, therefore, differentiated, qualified, and subtilized by the plot-forms. Secondly, they are qualified by the characters who participate in them. Fortunately, this may be proved without treating every type of character in Zola's impressive list.¹⁵ One need merely indicate the distinctions which Zola set up between three concepts—the normal, the abnormal, and the animal.

To the searcher for the violent in Zola's pages, it is vaguely disquieting, even disappointing, to find as one of his most characteristic achievements (and one of his most noteworthy contributions to the later novel) his treatment of ordinary man. This would seem almost paradoxical, were it not for the necessity that confronts every artist of presenting, somewhere or somehow, a norm, a horizon line. Molière's plays have their raison-neurs, even Hamlet has in Horatio his norm. Zola, preoccupied as he is with the physical, achieves his norm in the person of the solid, vigorous man, a specimen of ordinary appetites and desires. With this figure the author is not uniformly successful—perhaps two or three times: certainly with Jean Macquart (of La Terre and La Débâcle) and Étienne Lantier (of Germinal) and, it may be, with Octave Mouret (the Octave of Au bonheur des dames) and perhaps His Excellency, Eugène. The first two are the best examples of the type. Both are almost masterpieces.

¹⁵ J. G. Patterson, A Zola Dictionary (London: Routledge, 1912).

Jean and Étienne are by nature similar. It does not matter, for Zola's purpose, that Lantier is presented as devoured by overpowering rages: this fact is important only at the end of the story, and only to achieve suspense. Throughout the novel, he appears as an earnest, plodding mortal, with whose stupidities we come to sympathize. The ordinary man may have extraordinary biceps, but he rarely has excessive intelligence; and it is Zola's task to make his reader "warm" in friendly fashion to this hero—even as he renders friendship, of soldiers or civilians, a matter of physical warmth.¹⁶ Indeed, this may be taken as one of the essentials of the Naturalistic Novel: even so recent a work as Steinbeck's Grapes of Wrath clings to the Zolaesque technique in the person of an ordinary but robust hero, and, to make the case completely Zolaesque, this hero's violent deeds are presented as entirely normal.

The search for the "ordinary" conditions the very style of the author. Consider, for example, the similes and metaphors favored by Zola. We give only a few.

comme crucifié . . . travaillé de terreur . . . le cœur barbouillé de malaise . . . un coup de sifflet comme le cri d'une femme violentée . . . Paris, qui, un à un, les dévorait . . . une envie d'homme brutal, celle de la prendre au mollet . . . la colère folle dont elle entendait le craquement dans sa nuque . . . des longues feuilles de bananier où deux amants pouvaient se cacher à l'aise . . . le ventre comme déboutonné au soleil . . . comme un juron de charretier entendu sur la porte d'une auberge . . . regard de femme enceinte qui a envie de manger quelque chose de malpropre . . . lèvres perverse d'une dame qui . . . etc , etc , etc¹⁷

¹⁶ Ordinary man throughout La Terre, Germinal, La Débâcle, physical warmth, Débâcle, p. 51.

¹⁷ Stylistics: Terre, pp. 251, 271, 399, Bête humaine, p. 34, Assommoir, pp. 6, 49–50, 431, Son Excellence Eugène, pp. 53, 65, 131, 193, 372, Curée, p. 45, Argent, p. 19, Pot-Bouille, p. 394, Bonheur des dames, p. 142, Vente de Paris, p. 23, Œuvre, pp. 20, 272.

All this violently colored language, which of course lends itself to the caricaturist's art,¹⁸ is the linguistic equivalent of Zola's ordinary man. One step farther: this language is "naked"—just like Zola's portraiture. There is no doubt that, for the naturalist, the physical norm is nudity; and the critic cannot disregard the fascination which naked flesh always exerted on Zola. Professor Whitcomb could write, many years ago: "The novel rarely portrays the unclothed human body", but this was before readers had become well acquainted with Zola and Naturalism.¹⁹ Flesh and fleshy desire become the norm, shaping Zola's descriptions and even the rhythms of his style. The Zolaesque conception and statement of human tragedy are summed up thus: "Mme Caroline, dans l'incurable désespoir de sa stérilité. . . ." And: "Le Docteur Pascal avec la face hantée d'un homme qui a perdu sa virilité d'homme."²⁰

It is because ordinary man and naked language form the horizon line of the Rougon-Macquart novels that the style of Zola seems at first so strange to the reader brought up on the Greco-Latin rhetoric of the French classics and even, in large measure, of Hugo and his generation. Zola, by contrast, was particularly successful in the use of vulgar language, in dignifying the common speech of the 60's and 70's. We meet it everywhere—metaphorical, earthy, and, above all, physical; "un qu'il fait bon ne pas rencontrer au coin d'un bois . . . gifler à lui retourner la tête . . . prendre la poudre d'escampette [cf. our contemporary American "take a powder"]," etc., etc. The Zolaesque transmutation of base language seems to have become another of the requirements of the Naturalistic Novelist: The Grapes of Wrath, for example, manages to raise commonplace speech to a sublimity at times quite Biblical.²¹ What is important for the present study, however, is this: many of the violences in the pages of Zola—of character, portraiture, and language—are keyed as entirely "normal."

Against this credit must be set a slight debit. Despite his vigor and his influence, the "ordinary" specimen in the Rougon-Macquart novels cannot be termed a complete success. For one thing, the type of Jean and Étienne appears at its best in about three novels out of twenty. For another, this character, which the reader's sympathies so demand in Naturalistic fiction, is, in the case of these novels, very often obscured and submerged by the plot—we have already noticed this shortcoming in La

¹⁸ Paul Reboux, Charles Muller, A la manière de, 2 vols (Paris: Grasset, 1914), I, 168-174.

¹⁹ Nudity: Curée, p. 262, Faute de l'abbé Mouret, pp. 267, 330, Docteur Pascal, p. 102, Nana, ch. XII, S. L. Whitcomb, The Study of the Novel (Boston: Heath, 1905), p. 114.

²⁰ Argent, p. 374, Docteur Pascal, p. 132.

²¹ Vulgarity: Assommoir, pp. 239, 382, etc., etc.

Terre Finally, he is denied a feminine counterpart. We must regret our inability to set beside Jean and Étienne an outstanding and similar portrait of the opposite sex. Zola's women tend to be allegories, either of Amazonian strength (Lisa Macquart, Nana, Renée Saccard, Clorinde Balbi), or of fecundity (Clotilde Saccard, Pauline Quenu), or of idealized beauty (Angélique Hubert, Albine), and the most "ordinary" of them, Catherine of La Terre, as we have seen, neither lives nor dies, quite, in Zola's pages.

At this point a reader might well exclaim: If Zola makes even his "normal" man violent, what will he do with the abnormal! Certainly there is no lack of extraordinary characters. The pages of Les Rougon-Macquart present the abnormal, with a kind of Hugo-like antithesis, in two main incarnations: the giant and the imbecile. Really, the antithesis does not exist, as every good hugolâtre will readily see. giant flesh and shrivelled intellect are actually one, both are heredity gone to seed, subnormal despite their low cunning. Of giants, a good half-dozen come to mind. La Débâcle presents the German spy, Goliath, a character quite like his namesake in Le Juif errant.²² There is Cabuche, a perfect Caliban, in La Bête humaine. There is Beaugé the Fleming in Au bonheur des dames. There is the magnificent portrait of two rival blacksmiths in L'Assommoir. Finally, Le Ventre de Paris has more than its share of giants: Marjolin, another Caliban; Alexandre, the colossus whose muscles the artist Claude so much admired, even "la belle Lisa" herself is a muscular giantess, who can fell Marjolin with one blow.²³

As these giants are all related by their lack of intelligence, so the imbeciles of Zola are united under the aura of an unsuitable and disquieting adolescence (even in the case of old Tante Dide, foundress of the dynasty). Victor Saccard, of L'Argent, represents the type perfectly. We need not dwell on this unpleasant and disturbing portrait of a half-man. He differs, in this unhealthy quality, from his prototypes, Hugo's ragamuffin Gavroche and Balzac's saute-ruisseau of Paris law-offices. Victor Saccard has many fellows among the Rougon-Macquart: pitiful Saturnin Jossérand, little Vincent, who resembles a snake rather than a child; the cretin girl, Désirée, ill-fated Hilarion, cross-eyed Augustine and green-eyed Jeanlin; finally, Charles, last of the dynasty, Maxime Saccard's idiot son, and—to crown the horrors—a sufferer from hemophilia.²⁴

²² Cf., also, his summary trial and execution to Milady's in The Three Musketeers.

²³ Giants Débâcle, pp 14, 496, 500, Assommoir, p 174, Ventre de Paris, pp 74, 123, 212, Bonheur des Dames, p 150.

²⁴ Imbecile and degenerate. Argent, p 161, Pot-Bouille, pp 44, 253, 352, 416, Faute de l'abbé Mouret, pp 35, 279, Docteur Pascal, pp 60, 68, 215, Assommoir, p 237, Terre, p 423, Germinal, pp 431 ff.

Yet, as if this list were not enough, Zola increases it generously: he presents even his "normal" adolescent characters under this same rather distressing halo. True, there are one or two handsome portraits in Zola's gallery: the figure of Silvère, young hero of La Fortune des Rougon, comes pleasantly to mind. But, with few exceptions, a sickly hue surrounds Zolaesque youth. Nana, as a precocious child, all too clearly foreshadows what she will become. A fisher-boy who is a husband at fourteen years has the same unpleasantly "premature" quality. A Zola girl is likely to grow up a tomboy or galopin—a favorite term and a favorite type of the author's. And as for Zola's boys—an unwholesome case of arrested adolescence, a disgustingly effeminate schoolboy, and a participant in youthful escapades which impress one as a farcical burlesque of seventeen-year-old folly: these are samples.²⁵

The same light illumines them all. And this is precisely the point: these adolescent and arrested-adolescent figures are portraits rather than characters. They never actually grow, never become—though the term "adolescence" in its etymological sense has a dynamic connotation. In this sense, clearly, Zola's one adolescent novel, his one study of growth, is L'Œuvre, and this work pales significantly when set beside Flaubert's Éducation sentimentale, which it superficially resembles. Zola, contrary to Flaubert, is interested only in the picture of adolescence. In fact, he is not interested in adolescence at all—only in puberty.²⁶

It is the same with his giants: they are pictures rather than forces in the story. One has but to compare the scene of amorous rivalry between two smiths in L'Assommoir (a scene admirable enough in itself) with Rubens' painting of Vulcan at the Forge to be convinced of this plastic quality. In Zola's abnormal characters, form outweighs force.

But if Zola's normal man is infrequent and sometimes overpowered, and if his abnormal and adolescent creatures (the two are actually only variants of one type) are drawn toward a plastic ideal, what remains? The type toward which all these conceptions tend—the Animal.

Zola's characters lead logically to the animalistic concept. Indeed, some of the most successful of them are pictured as animals: one is likened to a great, purring cat, another "se dressait et sifflait ainsi qu'une couleuvre", and a cretin boy resembles a snake.²⁷ Finally, what is Zola's "normal man" if not an animal? But, in addition to these, real animals become important characters in his novels. Out of the epic pages of La

²⁵ Adolescent Assommoir, p. 159, Ventre de Paris, p. 73, Bonheur des dames, pp. 7-8, Faute de l'abbé Mouret, p. 166, Docteur Pascal, p. 29, Fortune des Rougon, p. 20, Curée, pp. 43, 104. ²⁶ Cf. Faute de l'abbé Mouret, pp. 267, 330.

²⁷ Comparison to animals Rêve, p. 14, Curée, p. 186, Faute de l'abbé Mouret, p. 35, Germinal, passim, Conquête de Plassans, pp. 264, 347.

Débâcle, it is impossible to forget the death of the horse, Zéphirine, as recounted by a cavalryman, and the aimless charging of the wild, riderless mounts after the battle, eating one another or being killed by the soldiers for food. Elsewhere animals take important rôles. The distress of a household is made more poignant by the starving of the horse, or the death of an old watch-dog emphasizes pathetically the wasting of the years. In Germinal, the story of two mine-horses, Trompette and Bataille, has the dignity of a sub-plot: the corpse of Trompette remains throughout the scene of riot as a kind of grisly symbol, and the death of Bataille, drowned in the caverns underground, is for the heroine a picture of her own doom. Even the chase after a tame rabbit, Pologne, led by the degenerate Jeanlin, is detailed in Germinal at great length, and gives rhythm and impetus to the rebellion which is its background. Through this gathering the chase weaves in and out, making the vindictive miners seem passive by comparison.

Animals swarm through these novels: the geese that accompany a tomboyish, thieving peasant girl, a cat dying under a grating, Louis-Napoléon's hunting dogs, the goats and chickens and even ants that belong to an imbecile girl, and the favorite horses of various gentlemen. A gruesome episode in Le Ventre de Paris is the forced feeding of pigeons for market. In Nana, the green-room cat becomes a demoniacal symbol of roving eroticism, and the racehorse, in a climactic scene, actually symbolizes the heroine herself. And—to carry the process to its absurd extreme—there is the scene of the wreck in La Bête humaine, with the dying locomotive beside the dying dray-horse. Here, it would seem, Zola has overstepped himself. He stresses equally the death of the horse and of the mechanical beast, and, by so doing, he weakens the center of interest of his composition. It should be the locomotive, not the animal, which claims our attention. The episode must be mentioned as indicating the extreme to which Zola's fondness for animal characters led him. The Naturalistic Novelist—it appears—ends logically as a Zoophile.²⁸

However, by the very force of their pathos, animals do live and breathe in the pages of Les Rougon-Macquart—a privilege which is not always permitted normal man, abnormal man, or adolescent man. When Zola wearied of the panting appetites of his own humans, he turned with something like relief to the less frantic, more "natural" movement of his beasts. Each age has its own rebellion. A hatred of speech accompanies every hyper-articulate era. Rousseau turned to Primitivism, Vigny took refuge in Quietism, Zola sought relief in Animalism. The animal completes the other Zola creatures just as the "epic" completes his patterns, and, finally, animals make apparent an important fact. Zola's characters, like his formulas, are drawn toward both an active and passive pole, and progress through several stages. They begin with normal "ordinary" activity, pass, in the abnormal concept, through a kind of picturesque phase, and finally emerge, at the most rarified level, as animals.

²⁸ Animals. Bête humaine, pp. 294, 302, Terre, pp. 52, 103, 316, 337, Débâcle, pp. 88, 387, 399, 422, 424, 425, Rêve, p. 30, Docteur Pascal, pp. 239, 283, Page d'amour, p. 44, Jose de vivre, pp. 48, 124, 161, 187, 230–233, Eugène Rougon, pp. 62, 122, 195, Faute de l'abbé Mouret, pp. 34, 79–81, 267, 279, 399, Ventre de Paris, pp. 206, 294, Nana, chs. v, x, Argent, p. 385, Germinal, Part IV, ch. vii, Part VI, ch. v, Part VII, ch. v.—Note, incidentally, that a tortoise is a leading character throughout one whole chapter of Steinbeck's Grapes of Wrath. Cf. also Frank Norris's shepherd in The Octopus who can hypnotize a whole flock of sheep. Also compare the heartrending description in La Débâcle: "Il fallut près de cinq minutes au cheval pour mourir"—its reproachful eyes on the men to the last moment—with the leopardess in Balzac's Passion dans le désert.

III

The violent moments of the twenty Rougon-Macquart novels, qualified by the patterns of the stories in which they occur and by the characters who participate in them, must now be considered in their immediate context.

Obviously, violence of an incidental nature and in a minor degree is frequent enough, and serves mainly to aid in creating the atmosphere of commonplace, brutal "news" or "atrocity story" in which Zola likes to immerse his novels. Thus, throughout L'Assommoir, the characters comment on various notorious affairs of the day, which are never mentioned again and have, of course, no direct relation to the plot: a Zouave who cut off his mistress's nose with a razor, a woman found dead in the street, and other atrocities. Similarly, in La Bête humaine, there is the casual mention of various accidents along the railway, such as a cow cut in two by an express train. In Au bonheur des dames: "Vous avez lu, cet homme qui a guillotiné sa maîtresse d'un coup de rasoir?" Zola, like one of his characters—Gilquém, who loved to imagine disasters—"avait le goût des imaginations atroces."²⁹ These little incidents, however sanguinary, are nevertheless quite external to the action of the Rougon-Macquart novels. Over and above the obvious fact that Zola finds almost all brutality attractive, they prove little. They are merely the "small change" of violence.

Zola exploits other violent incidents much more pretentiously. These expansive moments are usually found in association with the pattern which we have called epic. Three epic frescoes may be recalled, among many: La Fortune des Rougon, Germinal, and La Débâcle. The march on Plassans of the rural and sentimental Republicans of '51, the aimless marauding of a crowd of starving miners, aimlessness which turns pitifully and ironically into open rebellion, and the march, betrayal, defeat, and dispersal of a vast army around Metz in 1870. these are certainly subjects of breathless movement, worthy of any artist. And Zola chooses to depict them precisely after the fashion of a color-artist. In Germinal, the scenes come before our eyes in pictures—from the meeting of the dissatisfied miners in the woods,³⁰ and the horrible and fantastic parade of blood-satiated women past the barn in which are hiding a terror-stricken group of townsfolk, down to the final catastrophe before the mine-pit: all of them are episodes caught at their crisis, mobs photographed at the right moment, gestures immobilized and set down, fixed for observation. Zola seems to be at work here with a camera: indeed, the scene at the mine pit is a true flash-light picture. The whole band of workers, and the individuals which make it up, are caught at the moment of the fusillade: their death or escape, the destruction of their hopes, their very gestures are listed. A further important qualification: the lens of Zola's camera is always set at wide focus. The frightful parade viewed through a chink in the barn door very soon outgrows that narrow frame, and expands into as extensive a diorama as the mine-pit tragedy.

²⁹ Incidental brutality: Bête humaine, pp. 46, 139, Débâcle, p. 81, Terre, pp. 392, 464, 467, 481; Assommoir, pp. 109, 139, 233, 273, Docteur Pascal, p. 283, Joie de vivre, pp. 81, 182, 269, Ventre de Paris, pp. 15, 99, Bonheur des dames, pp. 181, 348, Conquête de Plasans, pp. 212, 217, Rêve, p. 179, Curée, p. 130, Fortune des Rougon, pp. 148, 333, Son Excellence Eugène, p. 99.—We must note again a resemblance to Eugène Labiche and his sadistic farcical subjects: for example, L'Affaire de la rue de Louvaine.

Scenes like these, needless to say, are to some extent an inheritance. Zola and the literature of the 'eighties had been prepared for this technique by a doughty Romantic, Victor Hugo. What is the Légende des siècles but a great procession—one might almost say, a mural? Doubtless Hugo was inspired by a mural-artist and by a generation that delighted in the colorful costume-pageantry of Sir Walter Scott. But, in the case of Zola, we can be sure that the arrival of photography in the mid-nineteenth century had influenced—consciously or unconsciously—the men of letters, and the power and precision of these flash-lights of his derive, at least in part, from the new form of vision which his century had created.

In proof both of the photographic affinities of Zola's art and its relationship with Hugo's, there occurs throughout his novels a phenomenon which we would call "the Romantic vantage point." Here, instead of the author, it is an actual personage of the story who achieves the all-embracing, ego-flattering, object-belittling view. The murderer, Roubaud smoking his pipe on the roof of the station at Le Havre, is master of all he surveys. A green-room cat, looking down from the dizzy height of dressing-room stairs, seems to envisage a host of lustful histories. The crafty priest, at his high window which embraces a view of the back-gardens of three ridiculous little households of Plassans, literally overtops these ineffectual societies, just as the evil figure of the usurer, La Méchain, seems to dominate the crowded Stock Exchange. Even the crows which fly away, croaking, after a pompous ground-breaking ceremony, have an ironic vantage: animals of ill-omen dominate the Second Empire itself.³¹

³⁰ A scene which has its parallel in the stealthy meeting of Balzac's Chouans

Indeed, Zola seems to have bequeathed this technique to the bas-fonds of literature. It has become a commonplace in twentieth-century "thrillers." Gaston Leroux, certainly, was influenced by Zola when he created his "Phantom of the Opera," a fantastic and evil figure who presides over the destinies of the Paris Opéra, or when he made the hero of another "penny-dreadful" the familiar demon dominating hypnotically the affairs of a great department store (cf. Au bonheur des dames). This is Zola "in the bargain basement."

Zola uses his vantage-point, however, for other effects than mere picturesque romanticism. Indeed, even his novels which do not pretend to be epics of revolt or of defeat have the same wide focus and camera-angle. Almost every one of the works has at least one scene into which the whole of the dramatis personae are gathered. Funerals make particularly effective group-portraits of this kind. Student gatherings, public meetings, processions, carriages whirling by in the Bois de Boulogne or along the Champs-Élysées—all these moments serve Zola's purpose admirably.³² They permit him to assemble his cast of characters, like the diable boiteux, to take the lid off houses and places, and to study groups minutely and individually while still keeping them in check collectively. It is a technique of holding reality in suspension.

But his use of the dramatis personae is for Zola both a technique and a temptation. He insists on it in every novel: his miners assemble in taverns and woodland clearings, his gentlemen banquet in high- and half-society, those ironically parallel worlds, his conspirators gather in their back-rooms, his characters assemble at art exhibits, "big sales," evening musicales, the Stock Exchange, a politician's office, family feasts, and the "salon jaune" of the Rougons at Plassans.³³ He insists that we meet the personnel of an infantry company, the passengers aboard a train, the peasants telling their stories by night in a warm cow-stall.³⁴ There is even a lunatic asylum, in which Zola assembles five generations of his Family Zola's sense of the dramatis personae obtrudes in the most unexpected places: for example, the sardonic finale of La Conquête de Plassans finds the whole society of a little town seated in comfortable chairs on the sidewalk and watching a disastrous fire, and finally, the very saints carved on the portals of a cathedral come to life for Zola, and people his story of Le Rêve. His cast of characters holds a dangerous fascination for him—not as characters, but per se. He cannot refrain from naming these folk over and over again, he brings them all together at the same time, there is never an absentee—until one wonders whether, in Au bonheur des dames, the clientele of the store is not a very restricted one, after all! Even the great train wreck, in La Bête humaine, is less an episode in action than a wide-focussed description of the dramatis personae: it resembles a diorama of a wreck.³⁵

³¹ "Romantic vantage point" Bête humaine, p. 161, Nana, ch. v, Ventre de Paris, p. 183, ch. iv, Page d'amour, pp. 130, 321, 346, Bonheur des dames, p. 318, Conquête de Plassans, p. 109, Rêve, ch. iv, Argent, p. 356, Eugène Rougon, p. 281, Fortune des Rougon, p. 341.

³² Note how the rhythm of carriages is a favorite device with novelists of this period—in Flaubert's Éducation sentimentale, in Daudet's Le Nabab and in Maupassant's story, A cheval.—Also the funeral processions in Balzac's Père Goriot, Ferragus, in L'Éducation sentimentale and Le Nabab (where the bust of Balzac presides over the description), and, finally, in the related art of painting, Gustave Courbet's celebrated "Funeral at Ornans."

³³ Cf. the irony of the finale—Rougons at supper while their nephew is being shot—with Frank Norris's imitation in the supper-table scene of The Octopus.

This desire to collect, to name and rename, leads to another technique, which we would call, borrowing a musical term, the art of the “refrain.” Like the arts of the catalogue and the vantage-point, this likewise is epic in its effect, and consists in reviewing one or more times the same characters in the same situations or poses. The battle scenes of La Débâcle best exemplify the trick. Here, as the company retreats, we catch horrid, Dantesque glimpses: a Zouave, his beard and hair on fire, and alive, the little trumpeter, Gaude, dead like Roland at Roncesvalles, with his trumpet to his lips, the bodies of two artillerymen—the rider and his helper—“mariés jusque dans la mort”, finally, the corpse of Rochas, the old Napoleonic sergeant, with whom “a legend ended.” Later, when the grieving farm-girl traverses the same field in search of her dead lover, she looks on the figures—wax-works, they almost seem—in precisely the same order.³⁶ Out of that great field of dead, they are made to serve the author's purpose on two occasions. This parallel rhythm is epic, but there is a certain “gloating” quality to the action even here while the author holds up his characters one after another to the light and examines them. Here too—as in the tavern scenes of La Terre—the novel becomes stalled.

Thus, Zola's epic flash-lights tend to pass through such stages as his Romantic vantage-point, his excessive use of the dramatis personae, and his related use of the refrain, into the pictorial and graphic presentation of violence. His episodes, like his plots and characters, have both a plastic and a dynamic guise. It is quite true that, as the author drew nearer the end of the Second Empire and of his series (most of his novels take place in the late years of Napoleon III), the epic formulas and examples of violence increase,³⁷ but, precisely along with them, the plastic quality of the novels increases also (Germinal, Nana, La Terre, La Débâcle)—which further proves that epic breadth and plastic precision progress together.

³⁴ Cf. a similar scene in Balzac's Médecin de campagne.

³⁵ The dramatis personae Docteur Pascal, pp. 72, 116–117 (survey of living members of the Family), Nana, chs. III, IV, V, Œuvre, ch. XI, Ventre de Paris, pp. 123, 310, Page d'amour, pp. 331, 334, Pot-Bouille, pp. 102, 421 (singing of the Huguenots chorus), Rêve, pp. 30, 180, Curée, p. 304, Eugène Rougon, p. 56, etc., etc.

³⁶ The epic refrain Débâcle, pp. 343, 397, 355, 356, 396. Cf. the dramatis personae of the stalled train and of the railroad wreck, Bête humaine, pp. 206, 299.

The growth in plasticity of Zola's episodes illustrates an antithesis between suspension and suspense. The art of suspension is mainly pictorial, the art of suspense relies mainly on concentration. Suspension, wide-framed and graphic, occurs often in the Rougon-Macquart novels, narrow-framed moments of concentrated suspense are fewer.

In a way, it is a pity that Zola's great work was done before the days of the moving-picture. Certainly its technique would have appealed to him. His dramatis personae do indeed represent a sort of foreshadowing of the cinema, but there are also examples of true "silent movie" in his work: Jacques Lantier's glimpse of a murder, perfectly lighted and posed, through the windows of a passing train, and the silent picture of degradation which Gervaise sees through the window of a grog-shop. Perfect moving-pictures are also the following scenes: the nihilist Souvarine, after watching, motionless, a particularly brutal fight, calmly lights a cigarette, and turns away, an old woman watches until the roofer Lantier falls from his perilous perch, then quietly shuts her window.³⁸ This brings the action to a truly legitimate stop.

This poignant and "concentrated" power has caused Zola's fights to be much admired. The laundry-scene in L'Assommoir,³⁹ the struggle between Jean and the land-hungry Buteau in La Terre, and the battle between Étienne and the sex-drunk Chaval in Germinal are, indeed, masterpieces of suspense, of retribution, of a kind of moral sadism. There is never a moment's doubt where our sympathies lie. Insult and offense are piled upon the sympathetic character until, at the last moment, he turns, avenges himself and the reader's thirst for justice at the same time.

³⁷ Contrary to Balzac and Dumas, with whom the violent technique tends to decrease with the years.

³⁸ Moving-picture technique Bête humaine, p. 60, Assommoir, pp. 233, 355, Germinal, Part VI, ch. III, Assommoir, p. 199. Mark Twain used a similar suspension in his description of the opening of the battle of Orleans in Joan of Arc (girl at window with watering-can), Barbey d'Aurevilly also in Le Chevalier Des Touches (rescue scene, old woman at window).

³⁹ Note how Zola uses the rhythm of the laundry-sticks to give unity to the episode—another case of "pattern" in the novel.

Here is Zola's action at its most physical: the suspense in these cases is built upon our fear of bodily harm, motivated by justice, consummated sadistically, and is cleverly drawn out to the very limit of the reader's endurance⁴⁰

Sadism occurs also at three lesser degrees of poignancy—domestic, infant, and adolescent. By their very excess, the instances of husbands twisting their wives' arms, or otherwise mistreating them, finally become commonplace; for Zola seems to hold married life in very low esteem. The grand "aristocratic" passion of Dumas' Henri III has sunk to the bourgeois level of the Second Empire.⁴¹ A more moving, more inexorable sadism is the mistreatment of children, instances of which we have already mentioned. L'Assommoir reaches a height of poignancy in the story of little Lahe Bijard—a story quite English in its brutality (as the Latins like to imagine the English⁴²). A third type of sadism which Zola exploits effectively, so effectively as to make it peculiarly his own, is the rendering of embarrassment. The most memorable scene of this kind would certainly be Denise Baudu's entrance as a new employee into the department store, the supercilious smiles of the older clerks, their overt sneers at her provincial dress and clumsy bearing. The author pushes cruelty to the point where his reader suffers embarrassment with his heroine—a trick since appropriated by the American novelist, Booth Tarkington, particularly in his stories of adolescence, Seventeen and Alice Adams.⁴³ Indeed, it must be admitted that there is something peculiarly "adolescent" about this third sadistic theme.

Concentrated sadism probably reaches its apogee in two moments of the Rougon-Macquart novels. The first is the climax of La Bête humaine. Here, after long suspense, the homicidal mania of Jacques Lantier seizes fatal hold upon him, and he finds release by slaying his mistress. The incident is accomplished with a violent economy of words (not a slighting of the subject, such as we have noticed in other episodes, but real economy). The woman suddenly sees her doom written in the gold-

⁴⁰ Fights Assommoir, pp. 19, 29, Terre, pp. 285, 308, 316, 332, Nana, ch. vi, Ventre de Paris, p. 135.

⁴¹ Domestic sadism: Pot-Bouille, pp. 269, etc.; Nana, chs. vii, viii, xii, Argent, pp. 341, 375-376.

⁴² Cf. Mario Praz, The Romantic Agony (London: Oxford, 1922), pp. 413 ff.; G. Polti, Les Trente-Six Situations dramatiques (Paris: Mercure de France, 1895), p. 132, also a similar theme in Thomas Burke's "The Chink and the Child" (in Lamphouse Nights, New York: McBride, 1917) and the more famous motion picture founded thereon, Broken Blossoms; also James Joyce's Counterparts (1914).

⁴³ Embarrassment: Bonheur des dames, pp. 123, 242, Ventre de Paris, p. 130, Assommoir, p. 211.

flecked eyes⁴⁴ of the crazed man, and utters the one word: "Pourquoi?" This "pourquoi" is melodrama, to be sure, but even its relations with melodrama cannot lessen the violent effectiveness of the scene

The last episode which must be mentioned is the horrible catastrophe of La Conquête de Plassans, in which the priest's mother dies avenging him, her teeth biting the throat of the insane murderer, Mouret. Yet this episode, gruesome as it is, tends nevertheless in the pictorial direction. It is epic, it is even Classic: the figure of the abbé's mother, carrying him from the burning room on her back, merely pictures the escape of Eneas and Anchises from burning Troy, the rôles and sexes reversed.⁴⁵ We have made a complete circle in our search for violence, and have returned to the plastic.

IV

Plot, Character, and Incident in Les Rougon-Macquart all reveal a dichotomy. The work of Zola sways between two poles, he himself wavered between two temptations. His plots, as we have seen, progress through passive or active stages. His characters are either pictorial or animal. His episodes depend on extended suspension or concentrated suspense. He strives toward various, sometimes conflicting, art-ideals—spatial and temporal, graphic and musical, plastic and athletic. Here is a work with an allegiance to two very different genuises.

These contradictory tendencies can perhaps best be summed up, in the case of Émile Zola, as an antagonism between scene and situation. There is, to the best of our knowledge, little attempt to differentiate clearly these two concepts, even on the part of critics. The dramatic situation has found its expounder in the inimitable, often fantastic, and always intriguing work of Georges Polti,⁴⁶ but—again to the best of our knowledge—there has never been a hardy soul to undertake a similar classification of "scenes" in fiction or drama. Without delving too deeply into the distinction, we may define Scene as largely pictorial, Situation as kinetic.⁴⁷ Scene is drawn toward the graphic arts; situation is drawn toward the arts of time, the dance, and athletics. The novel, as a ⁴⁴ Bête humaine, p. 335. Zola likes to give his villains and abnormal characters yellowish eyes: the gold-specked eyes of Buteau (Terre, p. 443) and the greenish eyes of little Jeanlin (Germinal, p. 432).

⁴⁵ Conquête de Plassans, p. 347.—Cf. the epic ending of Germinal (p. 532), where La Maheude resembles Niobe surrounded by her dead. Or the scene of Vulcan at the forge, referred to above.

⁴⁶ Georges Polti, Les Trente-Six Situations dramatiques (Paris: Mercure de France, 1895). Cf. Carl E. W. L. Dahlstrom, "The Analysis of Literary Situation," PMLA, LI (Sept. 1936), 872-889 (based on Polti's classification).

⁴⁷ Polti's dramatic formulas always take the equation of a struggle between forces.

comprehensive form, embraces both tendencies, and so Zola, in his violent technique, sought two orientations⁴⁸

If this is so, in which guise was Zola more effective, original, and influential? In other words, how can one locate his violent technique with relation to Past, Present, and Future?

Certainly, as regards the past, Zola's work and his technique make real progress. His novels rise from the servile Balzac scenario to real situation, in the Classic sense and often on the Classic model, and Zola ends by creating his own mythology much after the manner of Hugo. For, though Zola's novels may often begin in Balzacian rhythm, his catastrophes are most often classical. We have already called attention to some of these, but additional proof is to be found by referring again to Polti's little book. He lists almost every one of Zola's novels as illustrating types of dramatic situation (a greater number than he does for any other novelist), and, frequently, Zola's titles stand side by side with those of the Greek tragedians.

At the same time, we have seen how much of this violent technique derived from the methods of the popular school, serial novel or melodrama; or was at any rate related to them. We have seen how deeply Zola was in debt to Victor Hugo for many of his broad-scale devices. We have seen also how much he in turn bequeathed to later popular and sensational literature (the Romantic vantage-point, the familiar demon of the great place, department store or opera-house). But this is of small moment: the caste-line between vulgar and refined literature, between literature for the people and literature for posterity, is not as strictly drawn as many would insist.

As regards Zola's relation to his own period, we can link him with the Impressionist painters and with the Parnassian poets. There is a type of vision peculiar to the late nineteenth century, seen in such Zolaesque phrases as "poussière d'or du soleil" or "poudroiement de lueurs"⁴⁹—phrases which show that Zola, like the hero of L'Œuvre, like the Impressionist painters in general, like Leconte de Lisle in such a poem as Midy, was trying to render the feel of the atmosphere, to give substance to the quality of light and sight, and most of all to depict the Scene or Landscape that forever confronts our waking vision. In the descriptions of the late nineteenth century—whether by novelists, poets, or painters—the very air becomes corporeal and thick; and, for that reason, it sometimes immobilizes the picture.⁵⁰ Indeed, the Impressionist painters conceived of sunlight as a fixative, just as the Naturalistic novelists liked to render moving carriage-wheels, a favorite subject of theirs, not as dynamism and direction but as sheen and shimmer. This plastic and immobilizing tendency, therefore, marks a counter-balance to the melodramatic and vulgar phases of Zola's violence.

⁴⁸ Cf. the antithesis between Posture and Gesture in the present writer's "Violence in the Dramas and Dramatizations of Dumas père," Romantic Review, October, 1940.

⁴⁹ Light Bête humaine, p. 92, Curée, p. 41, Ventre de Paris, p. 13, Œuvre, throughout.

⁵⁰ Perhaps the classic instance of this "arrested motion" is seen in the famous passage from Germinie Lacerteux which describes "l'entrée aux champs."

Perhaps the best way to locate Zola in the Past, Present, and Future of his century is to borrow a simile from grammatical terminology. It may not be too far-fetched to sum up the history of French fiction, in the nineteenth century, as an effort to get out of the Past Definite into the Imperfect tense. These tenses, of course, are used only as symbols for a spiritual effort, not for the actual mechanics of style. With Balzac (save perhaps in the critic's favored oddity, Eugène Grandet), the novel is still in the Preterite, and as such marks Balzac as one of the last of the great Classical tradition. Certainly Flaubert's importance and influence can hardly be judged on the amount he wrote, nor even on its intrinsic excellence, but rather on an artistry that drew Mme Bovary out of the realm of history and into the realm of life: days, weeks, hours, and minutes are moulded by the Imperfect sense and tense which Flaubert imparts to his novel. And Hugo—that much maligned and much neglected novelist—by very reason of the gestures and attitudes into which he throws his characters, must be accepted as an improver upon Balzac's model and as an influence upon Zola. Finally, with Zola, the Parnassians, and the Impressionists, art becomes mainly imperfective—a kind of dazzling, sunlit or flash-lighted mass against which stands out a face, a gesture, or a transient mood. Whether the Past Definite or the Imperfect is the more active tense may remain a debatable point: the undebatable fact is that the novel throughout the nineteenth century gained in richness and complexity by acquiring a stronger concept of the Imperfect, and Zola's violent effects are the richer for that gain.

In this most important respect, the art of Zola links him closely with the generation of 1900–1914, and with the novel of today. For what is his technique of the dramatis personae, his suspension of action, his review and reprise of personages in tavern or drawing room, but an adumbration of the technique later to be associated with the name of Marcel Proust? The art which is in Zola's case merely one side of his talent, a kind of balance against the melodramatic violence he strove for, becomes in the case of Proust the entire preoccupation and striving of the novelist. Compare any one of Zola's gatherings with a similar scene in Proust. The two, ironically-contrasting supper-scenes of Nana are but a foreshadowing of the snobbish, finicking description of the Duchess of Guermante's drawing-room, through which Proust picks his way in the same manner as Zola, though without Zola's sense of balance. Suspension has become for the later novelist not a means, but an end in itself. Thus, if all of Zola's other talents—his lyric, his epic, his melodrama, his grim farce, his Second-Empire spirit—were negligible, a study of his work would still be necessary for the seeds of the twentieth-century French novel

JARED WENGER

Princeton University

AUF DEN SPUREN VON HAUPTMANN'S
FLORIAN GEYER (I)

GERHART HAUPTMANN hat in seinem Florian Geyer den großartigen Versuch gemacht, eine um vier Jahrhunderte zurückliegende Zeit mit den Mitteln naturalistischer Technik auf der Bühne lebendig zu machen. Dem Drama in seiner Eigenschaft als Wortkunstwerk gegenüber stellte sich der Dichter die Forderung, einen Dialog zu schaffen, der im Leser und Hörer die Illusion erwecken müsse, er vernehme unmittelbar die Sprache von Menschen der deutschen Reformationszeit, genau so, als wäre der Dialog vor vier Jahrhunderten auf Schallplatten aufgenommen und für unsre Zeit aufbewahrt worden. Es galt mithin, den Satzbau, die Wortformen, den Wortschatz und die ganze Fülle jener bildlichen Wendungen, die den charakteristischen Stil einer Epoche ausmachen, mit möglichster Treue nachzubilden. Um dieses Ziel auch nur annähernd zu erreichen, war—von der höheren, eigentlich schöpferischen Befähigung ganz abgesehen—zweierlei vonnöten: erstens eine außerordentliche Gabe der Einfühlung in das Leben einer vergangenen Zeit und sodann ein gewissenhaftes Studium des aus jener Zeit überlieferten Schrifttums.

In welchem Grade es Hauptmann geglückt ist, sich in das Leben jener unruhigen Zeit einzufühlen, darüber läßt sich streiten. Kurz nach dem Erscheinen des Florian Geyer tat ein verdienter Historiker den Ausspruch über Hauptmanns "interessante aber unholde Dichtung," es sei immerhin möglich, daß sich für jede Wendung der Hauptmannschen Sprache ein Beleg aus dem Schrifttum jener Zeit werde beibringen lassen, daß aber Hauptmann das Geringste von dem Geist jener Zeit begriffen hatte, sei mit der größten Entschiedenheit zu verneinen.¹ Schien der vollständige damalige Mißerfolg des Florian Geyer auf der Bühne diesem Urteil recht zu geben, so haben sich die Zeiten inzwischen gewandelt, und der Florian Geyer ist nachgerade zu einem Grundbestandteil des deutschen Mythos geworden. Was aber den andern Punkt, Hauptmanns Studium der Quellen, angeht, darüber muß es möglich sein, zu dauernden, wissenschaftlich einwandfreien Ergebnissen zu gelangen. Eine—sehr zu

¹ Max Lenz, "Florian Geyer," Preussische Jahrbücher, LXXXIV (1896), pp. 97–127. Worthich heißt es dort: "Vielmehr zeigt seine Dichtung weder in den Persönlichkeiten noch in der Abschilderung der Zustände und Anschauungen noch auch in der Sprechweise selbst etwas von dem Geist der Quellen, trotzdem er diese offenbar sehr viel fleißiger studiert hat als einer seiner Vorgänger, und die Redewendungen, mit denen er die Sprache des 16. Jahrhunderts nachbildet, sich vielleicht sämtlich in der Literatur nachweisen lassen mögen. . . Aber niemals benahmen sie sich, wie ich sie kenne, weder Edelleute noch Bürger und Bauern so rude wie Hauptmanns Helden in jeder Szene." (pp. 97–98).

wunschende—kritische Ausgabe unsrer Dichtung mußte es sich, neben vielen andern Gesichtspunkten, angelegen sein lassen, Hauptmanns Beziehungen zu seinen Quellen eingehend zu erforschen, sowohl in sachlicher wie in sprachlicher Hinsicht Vorwiegend der sprachlichen Seite eines solchen Unternehmens wollen die im Folgenden dargebotenen Ergebnisse unsrer Forschung dienen. Um gleich eine weitere Einschränkung zu machen: Es geht hier in erster Linie darum, den Wortlaut der Quellen anzuführen, die auf Hauptmanns Sprache deutlich abgefarbt haben, wogegen der an sich sehr wichtige Gesichtspunkt, wie Hauptmann das aus den Quellen geschöpfte Sprachgut sich zu eigen gemacht und dem Stil seiner Dichtung angeglichen hat, hier nur beiläufig gestreift werden kann. Denn um einen sicheren Überblick über Hauptmanns Arbeitsweise in diesem Drama zu gewinnen und das Verhältnis von Entlehnung, Angleichung und schöpferischer Durchdringung des Stoffes gerecht abzuwägen, dazu gehört meines Erachtens vor allem, daß der entlehnte Sprachstoff erst einmal in annähernder Vollständigkeit kenntlich gemacht werde.

Daß die Erforschung der Quellen die Beurteilung der schöpferischen Leistung einer Dichtung zu fordern geeignet ist, bedarf keiner weiteren Erörterung. Im Florian Geyer aber liegen die Verhältnisse so eigen, daß die Erschließung einer Quelle außerdem gelegentlich einen Kommentar zum Verständnis schwieriger Stellen bietet. Ja, es werden sogar Fälle zu verzeichnen sein, wo die Quelle überhaupt erst den Schlüssel zu einer sonst völlig dunklen Stelle bietet. Mindestens ebenso wichtig erweist sich in unserm Fall die Quellenforschung für die Herstellung eines zuverlässigen Textes der Dichtung. Ich habe bereits anderwärts eine Anzahl von Proben veröffentlicht,² die auf diese Seite unsrer Forschung ein schlagendes Licht werfen. Wir werden im Laufe unsrer Untersuchung noch auf eine ganze Reihe von Fällen stoßen, wo offenbare Verderbnis des Textes der Dichtung vorliegt, sei es, daß eine Flüchtigkeit im Manuskript des Verfassers, sei es, daß ein Versehen des Setzers daran die Schuld trägt.

Über einige Quellen Hauptmanns liegen bereits gründliche Untersuchungen vor. Heinrich Lemcke³ hat 1918 nachgewiesen, daß Hauptmann die Lebensbeschreibung des Gotz von Berlichingen sorgfältig gelesen und sich eine ganze Reihe von charakteristischen Worten und Wendungen daraus zu eigen gemacht hat. Und Helene Hermann⁴ hat

² "Zur Textkritik von Hauptmanns Florian Geyer, MFDU, xxxiii (1941), pp. 198–202.

³ "Gotz von Berlichingen in Gerhart Hauptmanns Florian Geyer," Neue Jahrbücher für das Klassische Altertum Geschichte und Deutsche Literatur, xli (1918), pp. 460–474.

⁴ "Andreas Gryphius als Quelle für Gerhart Hauptmann," Preussische Jahrbücher, clxxxviii (1922), 307–324.

1922 ihre Entdeckung veröffentlicht, daß Hauptmann dem Horribilicribrifax seines Landsmanns Gryphius, der freilich mehr als ein Jahrhundert nach dem Bauernkrieg schrieb, den Wortlaut einer stattlichen Reihe sehr wirkungsvoller Stellen verdankt ^{4a}

Die gegenwärtige Untersuchung nun bemüht sich, nachdem sie eine Nachlese zu Hauptmanns Benutzung des Gryphius vorausgeschickt hat, zu zeigen, was Hauptmann der Dichtung des 16. Jahrhunderts verdankt. Zuerst werden Hauptmanns Anleihen bei Thomas Murner gemustert. Sodann wird der Niederschlag von Hauptmanns Studium des Hans Sachs kenntlich gemacht. Hierauf wird die Herkunft der in den Florian Geyer eingestreuten Strophen und Verse aufgezeigt. Da es sich bei letzteren größtenteils um Volksheder bzw. historische Lieder handelt, werden als Nachtrag eine Reihe von Ausdrücken besprochen, die Hauptmann augenscheinlich aus der Lektüre des Volksliedes geschöpft hat.

Ein späterer Beitrag, für den das Material bereits vorliegt, soll in erster Linie Hauptmanns sprachliche Anlehnung an die von ihm benutzten Chronisten des 16. Jahrhunderts, Thomas Zweifel, Lorenz Fries, Michael Eisenhart, eingehend erörtern. Sodann soll er über Hauptmanns sprachliche Anleihen bei neueren Historikern, Wilhelm Zimmermann, David Friedrich Strauß, Johannes Janssen berichten. Diese letztere Gruppe bildet zugleich Hauptmanns unmittelbare Quelle für eine ganze Reihe bedeutender Stellen, die letzten Endes auf Schriften Huttens, Luthers, Munzers zurückgehen.

Um Mißverständnissen vorzubeugen sei gesagt, daß das hier aufgestellte Programm nur Schriften umfaßt, die für jedes unbefangene Auge eindeutiges Zeugnis unmittelbarer Benutzung geben. Es steht für mich außer Frage, daß Hauptmann außer den hier genannten noch eine ganze Menge weiterer Bücher fleißig studiert und ausgezogen hat. Möglicherweise gibt das Hauptmannarchiv einmal Aufschluß darüber. Immerhin besteht starker Grund zu der Annahme, daß wir die Mehrzahl der von Hauptmann benutzten Werke bereits namhaft gemacht haben. Zu diesem Schluß bin ich durch die Erwägung gelangt, daß von der Gesamtzahl der Worte und Wendungen archaischer Prägung im Florian Geyer bereits weit über die Hälfte mit einer bestimmten Quelle in Zusammenhang gebracht werden können. Unter diesen gibt es allerdings eine ganze Anzahl, die in der Literatur des 16. Jahrhunderts so häufig begegnen, daß es verlorene Mühe wäre, sie einer bestimmten Quelle zuzuweisen zu wollen, wo Hauptmann sie doch bei mehr als einem Verfasser gefunden haben muß.⁵ Nun wäre es freilich andererseits denkbar, daß unter den Wendungen, deren Quelle noch nicht ermittelt ist, sich einige befanden, die Hauptmann selbst geprägt haben konnte, insgleichen solche, die er der mündlichen Überlieferung seiner Heimat verdankt. Theoretisch ist beides zuzugeben, anhaltendes Suchen hat jedoch in so zahlreichen Fällen zum Erfolg geführt, daß man zu der Überzeugung genötigt wird. Für schlechthin jede Wendung archaischer Prägung mußte es gelingen, eine schriftliche Quelle beizubringen, aus der sie Hauptmann geschöpft hat. Vielleicht läßt sich der hundertprozentige Nachweis nie erbringen; als heuristisches Prinzip aber beansprucht der Satz uneingeschränkte Gültigkeit.

^{4a} Nachdem diese Arbeit abgeschlossen und für PMLA angenommen war, erschien eine Arbeit von Carroll H. Owen "Hauptmann's Sources for Florian Geyer" in GR xvi (1941), 286-303. Eine spätere Veröffentlichung wird sich damit befassen. Einige zusätzliche Anmerkungen—durch Buchstaben gekennzeichnet—nehmen schon hier auf Owen Bezug.

Zum Schluß möchte ich es mir gestatten, einen Einzelfall zu beleuchten, der als beispielhaft gelten darf, was die Kreuz- und Quersfahrten des Suchens betrifft. Er besitzt schon deshalb einen eigenen Reiz, weil es ihm, trotz vieler sich hoffnungsvoll anlassenden Versuche ihm beizukommen, bis auf diese Stunde geglückt ist, sein neckendes Inkognito zu bewahren.

In Kratzers Wirtshaus zu Rothenburg sagt der deutsche Schulmeister Jos Frankenheim, auf Marei anspielend: "Eine Spindel im Sack, das Meidlin im Haus, das Stroh in den Bottschuhen mögen sich nit verbergen" (FG 156).⁶

Das ist, in seiner Dreigliedrigkeit, ein Satz von unverkennbar sprichwortlichem Klang. Ich erinnere mich, bald nachdem ich den Quellen des Florian Geyer nachzuspüren begonnen hatte, im Grimm ("Deutsches Wörterbuch") und im Wander ("Deutsches Sprichwörterlexikon") unter "Spindel" nachgeschlagen zu haben, aber ohne Erfolg. Die erste positive Bestätigung meiner Witterung fand ich in dem "Hurenlied," Nr. 229 des Ambraser Liederbuchs von 1582,⁷ dessen zweite Strophe, in Ausführung des Gedankens, daß eine Hure ihren Charakter nicht verleugnen kann, mit den ironischen Versen schließt:

ein solchs mag sich einer spindel gleich in einem sack verbergen.

⁵ Dies trifft auch zu auf Konstruktionen wie "Zuvor aber waren sie Herolde senden" (FG 81) oder altertümliche Partizipialformen wie "daß alle . . . vor großer Freud" and schreiende durch die Kammern geloffen" (FG 185)

⁶ Unsere Zitate folgen der Gesamtausgabe des Dramatischen Werks. "Erste bis funfte Auflage der Ausgabe zum 70. Geburtstag des Dichters 1932" Von der sechsten Auflage an weist der Text jedenfalls eine wichtige Änderung auf. Das Wort des Sartorius gegen Ende des ersten Akts "Der deutschen Zwietracht mitten ins Herz!" (FG 106), wird nun auf Geyer übertragen!

⁷ Herausgegeben von Joseph Bergmann (Stuttgart, 1845), = Bibliothek des Literarischen Vereins Stuttgart, Band XII.

Damit war die Sprichwortlichkeit der Wendung bestätigt und eines der drei Glieder gefunden. Später stieß ich beim Lesen der schönen Facsimileausgabe von Brants *Narrenschiff*⁸ in Kapitel 39 auf die Verse:

Dann narren rott, vnd büler wergk,
Eyn statt gebuwen vff eym bergk
Vnd strow das yn den schühen lyt
Die vier verbergen sich keyn zyt

Diese viergliedrige Maxime brachte ein zweites Glied des gesuchten Sprichworts. Da erinnerte ich mich, daß Geiler von Kaisersberg ja über das Narrenschiff gepredigt hat. Ich hatte glücklicherweise den ersten Band von Scheibles Kloster (Stuttgart, 1845) bei der Hand, schlug darin die Predigt zum 39. Kapitel nach und fand zu meiner Freude den Satz (S. 436):

Vier ding sin, die man nit verbergen kann, ein statt auff einem hohen Berg, die lieb oder Bulerey, das Strow in den schuen, vnnnd des Narren rath, das funfft wirt noch hinzu gethon ein spintel im sack, vnd ein verborgene Hur im Hauß

Da waren nun alle drei Glieder beisammen, allerdings in anderer Anordnung und etwas verandertem Wortlaut. Nun schlug ich von neuem im Grimm nach, in der Hoffnung, daß die ungewöhnliche Form "Bottschuhen" vielleicht weiter helfen würde. Und in der Tat, unter "Bottschuh" fand ich Zitat und Beleg (I, Sp. 278):

ein spill im sack und das meitlin im hus und strow in bottschuhen mogen sich nit verbergen. Keisersb. post. 3, 61.

Das Rätsel war gelöst, Wortlaut und Urheber unsres Sprichworts waren gefunden. Aber woher hatte es Hauptmann? Der Beleg deutete auf den dritten Band der 1522 gedruckten Postille. Soweit konnte sich doch der lobliche Forschungseifer eines Dichters nicht verstiegen haben, an so entlegener Stelle ein Sprichwort aufzuspüren! Doch das Quellenverzeichnis des D. W.'s schien weiterzuhelfen. Dort stand unter Keisersberg zu lesen:

xiv postill. Straszb. 1522 4 theile, die Wackernagels lesebuch III, I s. 51 näher angibt, wo man überhaupt sp. 5-68 schöne Stellen ausgehoben findet.

In gespanntester Erwartung holte ich mir den Wackernagel, hoffte ich doch, daß mir bei dem Charakter dieses Werkes neben der gesuchten Stelle noch eine Reihe von anderen dabei in den Schoß fallen würden. Aber die Enttäuschung war bitter. Jene Postillenpredigt befand sich nicht unter den ausgewählten Stücken, und von der "Spindel" fand sich auch bei wiederholtem Lesen keine Spur — Der Wackernagel hat versagt, gewiß aber werden die Geilerstücke im Kurschner (Band XII, Teil 2) die Losung bringen, dachte ich zuversichtlich. Doch wieder hatte ich eine getauschte Hoffnung zu buchen. Nun wandte ich mich, was ich längst hatte tun sollen, an Zarnckes Kommentar in seiner Ausgabe des Narrenschiffs ⁹ Und die vielgerühmte Zuverlässigkeit Zarnckes bestand die Probe. Zarncke brachte eine lange Anmerkung (S. 375), die damit begann, daß er Geilers lateinische Fassung unsers Sprichworts zitierte (In sacco fusa, Meretrix in aede reclusa Nequit occultari Nec stramen in solutari). Aber Zarncke verschmahte es, die deutsche Übersetzung daneben zu drucken! Stunde die dabei, dann wäre es ausgemacht, wurde jeder meinen, daß Zarncke Hauptmann das Sprichwort vermittelt habe. Also wieder eine blinde Fahrte! Aber Zarncke verweist u. a. auf eine Variante unsers Sprichworts bei Sebastian Franck und zitiert diesen: "Strouw im schüh, spindel im sack vnd ein hûr in einem hauß guckend allweg herauß." Diese Variante fuhrte mich zurück zu Wander, und im Wander fand ich einen Hinweis auf August Stobers Zeitschrift "Alsatia," ¹⁰ die in dem die Jahre 1862–67 umfassenden Band als Beitrag des Herausgebers eine Sammlung von 496 Sprichwörtern aus den Schriften Geilers bringt, darunter das von der Spindel, wie wir es aus Florian Geyer kennen.—Konnte Hauptmann es dorthin haben? Es ist denkbar, aber reichlich unwahrscheinlich. Hatte ihn ein gelehrter Freund auf diese ziemlich entlegene Fundgrube hingewiesen, so hatte sich Hauptmann vermutlich mehr daraus geholt, was nicht der Fall zu sein scheint. ¹¹ Überhaupt scheint es mir ausgemacht, daß ein Dichter wie Hauptmann weit mehr dazu neigt, aus einem lebendigen Zusammenhang ein Wort herauszugreifen und sich anzueignen, als seinen Vorrat aus trocken aufgereihten Sammlungen zu beziehen (Rilke freilich hat, laut eigenem Zeugnis, viel in Grimms Wörterbuch gelesen).—Seit Kenntnisnahme der "Alsatia" bin ich noch auf Spuren unsres Sprichworts in Murners Mühle von Schwandelsheim (Vers. 1392 f.) und in Scheidts Grobrianus (Braunes Neudrucke 34–35, Randglosse zu S. 108) gestoßen, ohne dadurch der Losung der Frage näher gekommen zu sein. Als ich dann schließlich entdeckte, welche ergiebige Fundgrube für Hauptmann Janssens Geschichte des Deutschen Volkes geworden ist, erwartete ich von Seite zu Seite, daß mir unsre Wendung entgegenspringen werde, aber auch diese Hoffnung ist zu Wasser geworden. Da heißt es eben, die Fühlhörner ausgestreckt halten und dem Glück vertrauen!

⁸ Herausgegeben von Franz Schulz (Straßburg, 1913)

⁹ Sebastian Brants Narrenschiff. Herausgegeben von Friedrich Zarncke (Leipzig: Georg Wigands Verlag, 1854).

¹⁰ "Alsatia." Beiträge zur elsassischen Geschichte, Sage, Sitte und Sprache, herausgegeben von August Stober 1862–1867 (Mulhausen, 1868).

¹¹ Vgl. aber den Nachtrag (Nr. 9) zu unserm Abschnitt Die Strophen und Verse

Zu guter Letzt konnte man sich ja an den greisen Gewaltigen persönlich um Auskunft wenden. Aber wäre ich Hauptmann, so würde ich dem Betreffenden in der Gestalt des kühlen Nickelmanns im Traum erscheinen und ihm unter piffigem Augenzwinkern die ermunternden Worte zurufen: "Such, Schratlein, such!"

GRYPHIUS

Bereits vor zwei Jahrzehnten hat Helene Herrmann ihre überraschende Entdeckung veröffentlicht, daß Gerhart Hauptmann für sein Bauernkriegsdrama bei seinem schlesischen Landsmann zu Gast gegangen ist.¹² Es gelang ihr, eine ganze Reihe von Wendungen, Sätzen, sogar längeren Stellen aus dem Florian Geyer anzuführen, die Hauptmann aus dem Horribilicribrifax des Gryphius wortlich übernommen hat. Noch erstaunlicher aber als die Tatsache der Entlehnung aus dem abgelegenen Lustspiel des 17. Jahrhunderts war der geistvoll geführte Nachweis, daß es sich bei den Hauptstellen nicht im entferntesten um mechanische Übernahme handelte, sondern durchaus um Neuschöpfung. Für diesen Vorgang, der es der belebenden Phantasie des geborenen Gestalters ermöglichte, aus dem oden, niedrigen, skurrilen Stoff dieser pedantischen Literaturkomödie bedeutende Stücke herauszuheben, sie in die ganz andere Luft seines Dramas organisch zu verpflanzen und sie Situationen einzuverleiben, die nicht die entfernteste motivische Verwandtschaft mit den Vorgängen des Lustspiels aufweisen, so daß unter anderm das Trocken-Pedantische eine scharf charakterisierende, das Lappische eine ruhrende, das Possenhafte eine im Tiefsten erschütternde Wirkung zu erzielen imstande ist,—für diesen Vorgang hat Helene Herrmann den Begriff des schöpferischen Plagiats geprägt.

Erneute Durchsicht des Horribilicribrifax hat nun noch eine Reihe weiterer Stellen ergeben, die Hauptmann nachweislich von Gryphius übernommen hat. Diese sollen im Folgenden als eine kleine Nachlese zu Helene Herrmanns Ausführungen namhaft gemacht und besprochen werden. Im allgemeinen von geringerem Belang als die von Helene Herrmann herausgehobenen Stellen, sind sie eher dazu geeignet, die handwerkliche als die schöpferische Seite der Hauptmannschen Produktion zu beleuchten.

Zuerst fallen eine Reihe von Stellen ins Auge, die, der Sprache oder Herkunft nach lateinisch, dem Rektor Besenmeyer in den Mund gelegt sind und ihn als Träger humanistischer Bildung kennzeichnen. Die Belege aus dem Florian Geyer beziehen sich, wie oben erwähnt, auf die Gesamtausgabe, Das Dramatische Werk, 1932, erste bis fünfte Ausgabe; die aus dem Horribilicribrifax auf den Gryphiusband (Band 29) von Kurschners Deutscher National-Literatur (DNL S. 237–326), der in einem Anhang (S. 326–328) die fremdsprachigen Ausdrücke des Lustspiels erläutert.

¹² Vgl. Anm. 4.

(1) FG 77: "Necdum omnis hebet effoeto in corpore sanguis: noch ist nicht alles Blut im alten Leibe vertrocknet" Dieses Virgilzitat deckt sich völlig mit Gryphius' lateinischem Text bis auf die Form hebet, DNL 286: haebet, ebenso die Übersetzung in den Erläuterungen, 327, bis auf ein vorangestelltes "und"

(2) FG 107: "Divinavit"—DNL 258.

(3) FG 107: "Pruriunt mihi dentes."—DNL 275. "pruriunt ipsi dentes." Hier hat Hauptmann die benutzte Stelle seinem Dialog angeglichen

(4) FG 107: "Allen Menschen geziemt es, mit allem Fleiß zu streben, daß sie ihr Leben nicht lautlos wie das Vieh hinbringen, sagt Sallust." DNL 284 steht der lateinische Text, und in den Erläuterungen 327 steht die von Hauptmann zitierte Übersetzung.

(5) FG 163: "O Cordolio, o cordolio!"—DNL 281: "Ich rede von meinem cordolio." Hier scheint Hauptmann die von Gryphius gebrauchte Dativform in anderer Konstruktion unbekümmert übernommen zu haben. Vielleicht war die ausdrucksvolle Klangwirkung der Klage dabei ausschlaggebend Bekanntlich ist Hauptmann nicht über die Quarta hinausgekommen, und er wird in späteren Jahren schwerlich Gelegenheit gehabt haben, seinem Latein nachzuhelfen. Eine bessere Fundgrube für seine Zwecke als das von lateinischen Wendungen strotzende, polyglott gelehrte Lustspiel seines Landsmanns hatte Hauptmann kaum finden können. Die Benutzung der Erläuterungen beweist, daß er es in der Kurschnerschen Ausgabe gelesen hat. Eine Vermutung darüber, wie Hauptmann bei der Arbeit am Florian Geyer auf den Gryphius gestoßen sein mag, möchte ich nicht unterdrücken. Seine wichtigste Quelle für den Verlauf der Rothenburger Ereignisse fand Hauptmann in Thomas Zweifels Chronik, die ihm als Band 139 der "Bibliothek des Literarischen Vereins Stuttgart" vorlag. Nun stehen aber Gryphius' Lustspiele als Band 138 derselben Sammlung unmittelbar neben der benutzten Chronik. Da wird ihn die Neugier des Dramatikers verführt haben, in dem Lustspielbände zu blättern. Als er dann in Auftritte hineingeriet, die mit lateinischen und griechischen Wendungen gespickt waren, wird ihm irgend ein Hinweis auf die mit Erläuterungen versehene Ausgabe der DNL zugekommen sein. Von dieser Sammlung hat er, wie sich zeigen läßt, andre Bände eifrig benutzt.

(6) FG 145: "gedrauscht." In DNL 290 mit "studiert" übersetzt.

Dieser Ausdruck ware als Nachtrag zu dem zu buchen, was Helene Herrmann über die Quelle der hebraischen Wörter und Wendungen bemerkt, die der Rede des Juden Joslein beigemischt sind

(7) FG 112. Als der betrunkene Schaferhans bei Erwähnung des Ketzers Karlstatt einen Koller bekommt und seinem frommen Grimm in wüsten Drohungen freien Lauf läßt, äußert der Wirt zu andern beiseit: "Muskaten in Warmbier sind gut vor die Mutterkrankheit" Der trockene Witz dieser Glosse sprichwortlichen Gepräges wirkt natürlich lebendiger, als wenn der Wirt gesagt hatte: "Dem hysterischen Kerl mußte man ein beruhigendes Tranklein verordnen." Bei Gryphius, DNL 257, findet sich dieselbe Redensart in einem Gemenge von Unsinn, wo der gelehrte Sempronius mit seinen lateinischen und griechischen Brocken und die schwerhorige alte Kupplerin Cyrille aneinander vorbeireden. Daß Hauptmann aus diesem Wust von Mißverständnissen und Lautverdrehungen ein solches Korn hat herausklauben können, setzt in Erstaunen. In der Sicherheit des Zugriffs bewahrt sich der Meister des dramatischen Dialogs

(8) FG 144 sagt der Jude: "Ist ein gut Geschäft für die Herren, oder ich will ung'rische Gulden fortan nit meh' zweimal zahlen" Der Sinn dieser Redensart (auf den es freilich nicht ankommt) wird bei Gryphius deutlich, wo die alte Kupplerin behauptet, sie habe einen Gulden zu wenig bekommen. Aber das Fraulein erwidert, DNL 270. "Zehlet noch einmahl! ich habe recht gezehlet." Worauf die Alte einlenkt mit den Worten: "Es ist war: ungrische Gulden soll man zweymahl zehlen." Bei dieser Anleihe ging es Hauptmann offenbar nur um den Anschein kulturhistorischer Färbung.

(9) FG 193. Sogar bei dem ergreifenden Auftritt, wo Geyer seinen Schwager um ein Asyl bittet, scheint Gryphius Pate gestanden zu haben. Dort sagt Wilhelm von Grumbach, mit plötzlichem Entschluß "Komm! geh dort hinein! Kann ich Hunde und Katzen leiden, so kann ich dich auch eine Nacht leiden . . ." Man vergleiche damit den narischen Liebesbrief des Sempronius, worin es heißt, DNL 274: ". . . und wie ein Krancker sich nach nichts sehnet, als nach seinem Artzt, ita ego vehementer opto nur einen Augenblick [Augen-Blick] eurer Clemenz, welchen ihr doch Hunden und Katzen nicht mißzugonnen pfeget" Hier beschränkt sich die Ubereinstimmung allerdings auf die Hunde und Katzen, aber bei der Mannigfaltigkeit der Faden, die von Gryphius zu Hauptmann hinüberschießen, halte ich es für durchaus wahrscheinlich, daß die Wendung des Lustspiels Hauptmann bei seinem Schreiben im Ohr geklungen hat.

(10) FG 109. Der Hausierer preist seine Bücher an, unter andern reformatorischen Flugschriften jene berühmte, schon aus der ersten Hälfte des 15. Jahrhunderts stammende "Reformation Kaiser Sigmunds". Da schreit ihn der dem alten Glauben ergebene Schaferhans an: "Friß Flechtenmacher, sch Siedeschneider!" Man versteht, daß es sich um einen unflätigen Anwurf handelt. Darüber hinaus aber wird kein noch so guter Kenner des Dramas die Stelle erläutern können, ohne den Gryphius zu Rate zu ziehen. Dort, DNL, 272, ruft der Diener Diego der alten Kupplerin, die Blut gespien hat, zu: "Purgiere dich Teuffel! friß Flechtenmacher! schieß Siedeschneider! wische den Ars an Feuermauerkehrer!" Offenbar handelt es sich um die Übertragung auf die Alte einer jener unflätigen Redensarten, in denen man den Teufel zum besten hatte, war doch der Teufel in jener Zeit ein uberaus beliebter Gegenstand des Volkswitzes. Darüberhinaus scheint der Schalk, der das Wort aufgebracht hat, die Angehörigen der betreffenden Innungen zu hanseln, was ja auch ganz dem Brauch der Zeit entspricht. So sind viele Streiche Till Eulenspiegels offensichtlich nur dazu erfunden, die Angehörigen der verschiedenen Handwerkszünfte der Reihe nach durchzuhecheln. Ähnlichem begegnet man in Fischarts Gargantua (Braune, Neudrucke 65–67), wo ein Trunkner grohlt: "Obehe, wir fressen Bauren, vnd sauffen Edelleut, vnnnd scheissen Mönch . . ." (132); und wenige Seiten später: ". . . die Schneider zum Arßwisch, Ich fress dich sampt deinen Låusen, Fang hinden an, so hast den Senff zum besten" (140) — Offenbar wollte Hauptmann auch auf die derbsten Auswuchse des Volkshumors in seinem kulturhistorischen Drama nicht verzichten, fand es dann aber doch geraten, die Anspielung für die Öffentlichkeit bis zur Unverständlichkeit zu verkürzen. In seinem Manuskript wird gewiß der ganze Passus zu finden sein.

Was die Unverständlichkeit betrifft, steht diese Stelle durchaus nicht vereinzelt in unserm Drama. Ich werde im Lauf dieser Arbeit Gelegenheit haben, auf eine ganze Reihe von Anspielungen, versteckten Zitierten und dunklen Redensarten hinzuweisen, zu denen nur die genaue Kenntnis des Schrifttums des 16. Jahrhunderts den Schlüssel bietet. Damit ist eine problematische Seite des ganzen Unterfangens berührt, das 16. Jahrhundert auf dem Wege naturalistischer Technik im Lesedrama und auf der Bühne zu verlebendigen.

MURNER

Von allen Schriftstellern der Reformationszeit hat Thomas Murner die Sprache des Florian Geyer am stärksten befruchtet. Hauptmann hat Murners Narrenbeschwörung und Schelmenzunft gelesen und daraus eine Menge kraftiger, derber, anschaulicher, überhaupt volkstümlicher Wendungen sich zu eigen gemacht. Viele der namhaft zu machenden Wendungen finden sich nun freilich nicht nur bei Murner, sondern auch bein andern Zeitgenossen, Vorgängern und Nachfolgern, die Hauptmann zum Teil sicher auch gelesen hat. Es laßt sich daher in vielen Fällen nicht mit Sicherheit sagen, daß Hauptmann einen bestimmten Ausdruck Murner verdankt. Diesem Einwand zuvorkommend, werde ich zuerst eine Wendung besprechen, die Hauptmann nur aus unmittelbarer Kenntnis Murners haben kann. Damit ist dann für die überwiegende Mehrzahl der weiter anzureihenden Fälle der Wahrscheinlichkeitsbeweis erbracht, daß sie ebenfalls aus der Lektüre Murners geschöpft sind.

Murners Schriften werden hier nach der im Kurschner enthaltenen Auswahl (DNL, Band xvii) zitiert, die Hauptmann jedenfalls benutzt hat, die Narrenbeschwörung als N, die Schelmzunft als S. Den ebenfalls im Kurschner enthaltenen Großen Lutherischen Narren hat Hauptmann wohl nur flüchtig oder gar nicht gelesen. Ich habe keine Wendung im Florian Geyer gefunden, die sich mit Sicherheit auf dieses Werk zurückführen ließe.

(1) FG 136. Die Baurischen haben, als es bereits schlimm um ihre Sache steht, einen Landtag nach Schweinfurt zusammenberufen. Wir befinden uns im Rathaussaal, wo eine kleine Gruppe der Ankommenden harrt.

Rektor Besenmeyer tritt ein: Bona dies.

Löffelholz: Bene veneritis nobis

Rektor Besenmeyer Bist du krank, Bruder?

Löffelholz. Ich denke wohl. Es steht sehr übel um mich, hat mich ein elender Gaul vor die Brust geschlagen.

Rektor Besenmeyer. Bruder, tritt ab, leg' dich nieder Löffelholz Ich? Bewahr' mich Gott. Soll mich der Henker im Bette finden?

Rektor Besenmeyer. Sieht es so übel aus um den Handel, Bruder?

Löffelholz: Es wird ein klaglicher Landtag werden.

Rektor Besenmeyer. Sursum corda!

Löffelholz Sursum corda—facht Essen an.

Rektor Besenmeyer ist näher hinzugetreten: Mich will bedunken, liebe Bruder, als sei die Tagsatzung ein klein zu spät beschehen.

Das energische "sursum corda" des Rektors will ohne Zweifel den gesunkenen Mut des kranken Gefährten neu beleben. Was für ein Sinn verbirgt sich aber in dessen Antwort, in der Wiederholung der liturgischen Wendung und dem ratselhaften Nachsatz, "facht Essen an"? Gibt sie die Ermutigung zurück, etwa im Sinne von: Kopf hoch und Waffen geschmiedet!? Spricht Löffelholz die Worte in elegischem Tonfall, mit einer Anspielung auf die Marterfeuer, die das Los der unglücklichen Gefangenen sein werden, wenn der Schwabische Bund gesiegt hat? Man versuche es mit allen möglichen Deutungen. Dann aber lese man das 21. Stück der Schelmzunft und darin die Verse, S 916–917:

Beneveneritis nobis, her Grobian, Sursum corda, facht essen an.

Hier wird ein Vertreter des von Sebastian Brant im Narrenschiff kreierten neuen Sankt Grobiansordens eingeführt, ein Unflat, der, mit Brant und Murner zu reden, "die Sau kront," einer der, von Murner auf lateinisch begrüßt, mit ironischem Pathos im Kirchenton den Gruß zurückgibt, um gleich daran die Aufforderung zu knüpfen: Jetzt tragt mir aber auf, was ihr habt! Und nun gehts an ein Fressen und Rulpsen, und auf die saftigen Bissen folgen die saftigen Zoten!

Vielleicht gilt es ein Strauben zu überwinden, ehe sich uns nun aus der Quelle der Sinn der Löffelholzschen Replik erschließt. Sie ist ein mit bitterster Ironie geladenes Zitat, auf die Vollerei der Bauernfuhrer vom Schläge des Jakob Kohl gemunzt. Wir wollen hoffen, der wackere Rektor versteht die Anspielung; er muß dies aber, falls überhaupt, durch sein Mienenspiel zum Ausdruck bringen, denn seine nächsten Worte geben dem Dialog eine völlig neue Richtung. Kein Leser wäre freilich ohne das Murnersche Zitat dem Sinn der Stelle auf die Spur gekommen.—Das Rätsel wäre gelöst, nicht aber die Rätselfrage, wie Hauptmann sich die Wirkungsmöglichkeit dieser Stelle gedacht haben kann. Hat er etwa, allerhöchstem Beispiel folgend, in seinen Dialog dies und das hineingeheimnißt, sei es zu seinem Privatvergnügen, sei es, damit die Gelehrten auch etwas an ihm zu kommentieren haben mochten?

(2) FG 60–61: "Itzt meinen sie, daß sie es Gott wollen abtrotzen, wann sie den Teufel zum Abt über sich setzen, und daß er werde einen jeden lusbuhel unter ihnen zum Herren machen."—Lusbuhel (Laushügel), hier ein Schimpfwort zur Bezeichnung der Bauern, findet allgemeinere Anwendung bei Murner, wo er die modische Haarpflege durch seine satirische Hechel zieht. N 8620–26:

Vorab so ist es kruselecht
Um holzln bunden, wider schlecht,
Gebisst, geflochten wider krum
Mit sidnen schmieren ummendum,
Und der lusbuhel ist bedeckt
Mit huben; unser lus ersteckt,
Das sie kein luft nit mugen hon.

(3) FG 65: "der Bauer will alleweil auf der faulen Haut liegen . . . Aber der Pflug ist ihm zu schwer worden,"—Vgl. S 250–252:

Den schelmen ist der pflûg zû schwere,
Und wellent sich nit dornoch bucken—
Ein schelmen bein hand si im rucken!

(4) FG 65: "Wird er [der Bauer] itzt aber bei Eiden und Pffichten gemahnt, oha, so ist er der Junker Dorflinger . . ." Vgl. N 1447–50:

Din vater was ein handwerksman,
Du laßt dich junkherr liegen an
Junkher Dorflinger ist din nam,
Do her all dine fruntschaft kam.

Zu beachten ist, daß sich mit der Betonung der Sinn der Stelle bei Hauptmann verschiebt.

(5) FG 77, ebf 116.

Der Schultheiß · Setzt Euch, Bruder Rektor, Ihr seid mude!
Rektor Besenmeyer · Schutt' dich der Ritt, Bruder Schultheiß!

Bei dieser Stelle, die auf Müdigkeit anspielt und die Aufforderung zum Sitzen enthält, wird der heutige Leser nur zu leicht auf eine ganz falsche Fahrte geraten. Mit Reiten hat die Stelle nichts zu tun. Es handelt sich um eine, hier zur Beteuerung abgeblaßte Verwünschung: Moge das Fieber dich schütteln! Sie findet sich bei Murner, N und S ungezählte Male (mit Varianten). Auch Hans Sachs bedient sich gern dieser Formel. Vgl. N 7311–12.

Wol uß, das uch der ritten schitt,
Zû gûtem welsch le febre quartan!

und N 3229–30:

So sagent sie "Das der ritt schutt Den munch in sinen hals hin in!"

(6) FG 80. Auf die Erwähnung des Geruchts, man wolle Götz von Berlichingen zum obersten Hauptmann machen, entgegnet Löffelholz sarkastisch: "Das hat Hans Furzlin ersonnen."—Diese Wendung von sprichwortlichem Klang mag Hauptmann einem in der Einleitung enthaltenen Murnerzitat entnommen haben DNL xvii (Erste Abteilung), lxi:

Du düst eben wie Hanß Furtzlin, der wolt buwen und fienß an, ein huß ganz abzubrechen, darnach uber π iar wolt er ein nuwes buwen, also daß er die π iar im regen saß, und nit so witzig was, daß er sich des alten huß solt behelffen, biß er ein nuwes uberkeme

(7) FG 90: "Der ist mit Juristen behängt, wie ein Jacobsbruder mit Muscheln."—Vgl. N 81–85:

Jetz sind die gecken wider kummen
Und hant vil narren mit in gnummen
Und sind mit doren so gerist,

Als wie ein Jacobsbrüder ist
Mit muscheln allenthalb behenkt.

(8) FG 91: "Brav, Bruder, in deiner Predigt war Gottestreiben Du hast wahrlich nit von blauen Enten und von Huhnermilch gered't!" Den Doppelausdruck, "blaue Enten und Huhnermilch," finde ich im Deutschen allerdings nur bei Luther belegt, wo ihn Hauptmann gefunden haben wird (s. unten). Blaue Enten dagegen, sprichwortlich für blauen Dunst, finden sich bei Murner so häufig, daß sich der Ausdruck Hauptmann gewiß von dorthier eingepragt haben wird. Je ein Stuck von N und S fuhr den Titel: "Von blouwen enten predigen" Vgl. ferner S 111-114:

So ich verkünd das himmelreich,
Sag ich dor von so schimpflich,
Als ob ich wolt den christen schedigen
Und im von blouwen enten predigen.

Vgl. ebenfalls S 146-148, 1338-43, N 2870-73, 3272-73.

(9) FG 92: "Ei, was eine hubsche, hollische Weisheit! Er hat St. Velten den Schulsack gefressen."—Den Schulsack fressen ist ein Lieblingsausdruck Murners für Schuler, die nichts gelernt haben, für Esel, die Esel bleiben. Ein Stuck der Schelmenzunft trägt den Titel: "Ein schulsack fressen."

Vgl. S 390-391. Das latein hab ich vergessen,
Wie wol ich hab ein schülsack fressen,

N 5638-41: Ich hab eins mals ein schülsack freßen,
Das ichs latins nit kan vergeßen
Und weiß me, dann ein ander christ:
I t a Gretmullern tochter ist

N 5704-07: So sie nun in jaren sind,
Dann kratzen sie sich in dem grund,
Das sie den schülsack haben freßen
Und alle kunst und ler vergeßen

Das Verständnis unsrer FG Stelle aber wird durch das eingeschobene St. Velten bis zur Unverständlichkeit kompliziert. St. Velten steht hier nicht etwa als Dativ, sondern als reine Bekräftigungsformel. In diesem Sinne ist der Name des Heiligen bei Murner und Zeitgenossen unzähligmale anzutreffen. Das Fehlen der Kommata bei Hauptmann befremdet. Hauptmann hat hier vermutlich die Konstruktion des geradezu zum Adverb verblaßten "lichnam" nachbilden wollen, Vgl. N 7986-88:

Was hab ich angst und sorg gehan,

E das ich bracht uf disen plan
So manchen lichnam nerrschen man!

Glücklicherweise hat Hauptmann sich nur in seltenen Fällen darauf versteift, so wie hier mehr den Buchstaben als den Geist seiner Vorlage nachzuahmen.

(10) FG 92: "das machen die verfluchten Barettlinsleut' und römischen Juristen."—Vgl. DNL XVII (Erste Abteilung), Einleitung xxxv; Ich hab auch das von Jacob Murner and Matheo, meinem vater, so oft gehort klagen, wie die barethlsleut, uß gedult also von inen genant, die armen leut rechtloß umbgetriben haben, . . .

(11) FG 101. Als Bubenleben den dicken Jakob Kohl zum obersten Hauptmann vorschlagt, ruft Löffelholz mit ironischem Beifall: "Er kann alle großen Schwur'"—Daß das Fluchen den tüchtigen Soldaten macht, bezeugt Murner in der entsprechenden Stelle, S 235–238:

Wer ietz wil sein ein redlich knecht
Und kan die grossen schwer nit recht.
Gotz marter, wunden, Velten, Kurein!
Der nimt kein doppel solt nit ein.

(12) FG 115. Der Hausierer ruft der Kellnerin scherzend zu: "Herzu, Gret-Mullerin, geh mir um den Bart, sollst eine fette Pfrunde haben." Der Kosenamen Gret-Mullerin enthält eine ganz eigene Huldigung. Als Dirne von abgefeimtem Reiz ist Gret-Mullerin gewissermaßen die Hauptperson in Murners Mühle von Schwindelsheim und Gret Mullerin Jahrzeit. Auch in N und S geschieht ihrer Erwähnung. Sicherlich war die Anmerkung zu N 4399 Hauptmann nicht entgangen:

In der "Schwindelsh. Mühle" heißt es von der Gret Mullerin: Sie was so lyß und zart gebachen, Das sie kundt mit dem arßloch krachen Pfersich kernen, groß und klein, Das thetten ir schne weissen bein.

(13) FG 119: "Meid das Feuer, so meid'st den Rauch." Vgl. S 1337:

Mach kein feür, so meidst den rouch!

(14) FG 119: "Sollen wir itzt nit ein wenig granten, gumpen, blitzen und ungeschickt sein?" Gumpen und blitzen heißt tanzen und springen. Vgl. N 7052–55:

Mancher hat im herzen sitzen
Ein lutenschlaher mit sim kritzen,
Das er müß gumpen und ouch blitzen
On all vernunft, mit wenig witzen.

(Granten gebraucht Hauptmann auch noch 158, 187 mit der Bedeutung tanzen. Ich finde keinen Beleg dafür Zarncke in seiner Ausgabe von Brants Narrenschiff gibt im Kommentar zu dem Rotwelsch des Kap 63, Vers 39 f. "grantner" mit "sich krank stellender Bettler" wieder.)

(15) FG 123: "Karlstatt, fanatisch: Der Luther ist dem Teufel auf den Schwanz gebunden."—Murner überschreibt ein Kapitel mit dieser Wendung und setzt mit folgenden Versen ein S 1350–55:

Ich hab wol manchen schelmen funden
Dem deuffel uf den schwanz gebunden,
Der in widerwertigkeit
Dem deuffel puntnuß zû hat gseit
Und meint, im wurde nimmer baß,
Bis das er bi dem deuffel saß

(16) FG 124. Als Menzingen dem Geyer ein kostbares Meßgewand und Kruzifix verehren will, fragt Geyer lachend: "Habt Ihr Sackmann darüber gemacht?"—Bei Murner findet sich der Ausdruck "Sackmann machen" (etwas erbeuten) besonders häufig in GLN. Aus N 6714–20 bringe ich den Beleg.

Ich lis und habs ouch oft ergründt,
Wann man wirt den klosteru find
Unđ wolt mit in gern sackman machen,
So liegt man, das die balken krachen,
Bis das man bapstlich bullen bringt,
Die armen munch von dannen zwingt
Und ander geuch setzt in das nest.

(17) FG 126–127. Mit zu den geglücktesten Situationen des Dramas gehört jener Augenblick der Entspannung, wo Geyer, unmittelbar nach seiner befeuernden Rede an die Rothenburger, Mareis Bundel Krebse gewährend, einen davon herausgreift und auf den Tisch setzt, indem er in übermutiger Laune dazu ruft: "Der alte Krebs lehrt sin Kind den Strich, daß sie noch heut gehn hinter sich." Auch diesen Spruch hat Hauptmann von Murner, wo er N 685–686 folgenden Wortlaut hat:

Der alt krebs lernt sin kind den strich,
Das sie noch hut gont hindersich.

(18) FG 142: "Durch wieviel Brett lugt der Pfaff?", schreit der erregte Jakob Kohl.—Eine Murnerstelle, in der sich das Lügen einerseits mit der Zahl und der Tiefendimension, andererseits mit der Vorstellung vom "Brett" verbindet, ist wohl als genauestes Seitenstück zu der von Hauptmann gebrauchten Wendung anzusprechen. N 5246–49 heißt es:

Da kummen erst die rechten sachen,
Wann man liegt, das die balken krachen.

Sie liegen iesz durch stehelen berg,
Wann schon sechs legen uberzwerg

Und N 5254–59 heit es weiter:

Das sind stark lugen und gro sachen,
Wann man liegt, das die balken krachen.
Wir hant vorhin ouch liegen kunnen,
Das man in Morenland ward innen,
Und hant gelogen durch ein brett,
Das vier und vierzig elen hett, .

(19) FG 143 Derselbe Pfaffe wird gleich darauf seiner grosprecherischen Verheiungen wegen verspottet, mit denen er sich vor der Schlacht gebrustet hatte. Als aber das Schieen begann—"ei! Pfafflein, was hast du doch da gemacht?", hantselt ihn Link, und Kohl trifft ins Schwarze mit der Antwort: "Er hat den Ars in die Schanze geschlagen."—Auch hier hat Hauptmann eine Lieblingswendung Murners ubernommen, nur pflegt Murner der volkstumlichen Redensart eine erotische Wendung zu geben, so S 1246–50:

Man findt wol weiber, die sind frum
Und guckend doch so schentlich um,
Das ich schwier dusent eid dorum,
Wen ichs dorft frolich sagen,
Si het den ar in die schanz geschlagen

Vgl. auch das ganze 39. Kapitel von N, betitelt "Den ars in die Schanz schlagen," dessen Satire sich gegen die Unzucht der Klosterfrauen richtet.—Zu der hier angefuhrten Stelle bemerkt Dr. M. Spanier in seiner Neuausgabe der Schelmensunft ¹³

Gerhart Hauptmann lat im Florian Geyer, S 178, vom Pfaffen Bubenleben sagen, der wie der Kampf gefahrlich wird, auskneift: "Er hat den Ars in die Schanze geschlagen." Das ist eine neue, eigene Anwendung der Redensart

(20) FG 146. Den Schlemmer Kohl begrut Geyer bei der Tagung mit der ironischen Frage: "Tuchtig geburstet die Nacht? Tapfer die Sauglock' gelaetet?"—Murner schildert das Treiben wuster Gesellen—nach dem Vorgang Sebastian Brants—mit dem Wort, S 933: "Die saw glock lassent uns ouch merken." Dabei steht die Funote: "saww glock, mit der Sauglocke lauten, Zoten vorbringen."

(21) FG 167: "Wein von dem Rhein! Ich will das Radlein noch einmal treiben," ruft Geyer im 4. Akt, die dustere Stimmung gewaltsam ban-nend. Wiederholt findet sich die sehr beliebte Redensart—eine Anspie-lung auf das Glucksrad—bei Murner, so N 2279–82 in der Geißelung des leichtfertigen Treibens der geistlichen Richter:

¹³ Thomas Murners Deutsche Schriften (Walter de Gruyter und Co.), Band III (1925), 205.

Ir tribt das redlin um so selzen,
Das der gloub schier gat uf stelzen,
Bis er den hals ein mal absturzt,
Je eins das ander so verkurzt

(22) FG 190. "Bettdrucker" schilt der Schaferhans die gefangenen Bauern nach Murners Vorgang, N 5922–25:

Ich hab wol solche narren funden,
Die mit laborare kunden,
Bettrucker und landschelman waren
All ire zit von jungen jaren

(23) FG 198. "He! Du! mit deinem spanischen Pfauentritt, bleib mir vom Leib!", droht Geyer einem der Ritter, die ihn umstellt haben. Auch Murner verspottet den Pfauentritt als Zeichen gespreizter Wurde, so N 1755–60:

Do fiengen sie an zû verheißen,
Einer wolt in leren beißen,
Der ander setzen uf den hût
Und berden, wie ein bischof tût,
Ouch zeigen im den pfouwentritt,
Den bischofstecken tragen mit.

Vgl. S 672–692, wo der Pfauentritt als Begleiterscheinung der Doppelzüngigkeit gerugt wird.

(24) FG 199. "Nasse Buben" schilt Geyer die Ritter, die sich nicht an ihn wagen.—"Nasse Knaben" ist ein uberaus beliebtes Schmahwort in Murners Schriften, so S 338–341:

Jo wol, wir sind die nassen knaben,
Die es besser den die herren haben,
Und sitzent oft uf einem kussen,
So unsre herren nut drum wissen.

Ich vermute, Hauptmann hat Buben statt Knaben gesetzt, weil das Wort Knaben für ihn geädelt war. Man erinnere sich der Klage Geyers über die Vernichtung seiner schwarzen Schar: "Wo sind meine Dunkelknaben geblieben?" (150).

(25) Schließlich seien ein Reihe von Fluchen erwähnt, die Hauptmann aus Murner haben kann,—freilich nicht haben muß, denn saftige Fluche sind im 16. Jahrhundert nicht das Monopol irgend eines Schriftstellers. Ich verweise auf je einen statt vieler Belege und begnüge mich im ubrigen, eine charakteristische Stelle zu zitieren.

FG 62 "Kotz Leichnam." Vgl N 1193.

FG 65 "Kotz Schweiß." Vgl N 8470.

FG 75 "Daß dich potz Marter schand " Vgl S 230

FG 78: "Kotz Lung " Vgl S 115.

FG 90: "Kotz Dreck " Vgl N 8470

FG 132. "Bluts willen " Vgl N 5250

N 8464-71 Ich hab kein fremden schwär erfunden
Und schwer nit, als die Schwizer, wunden,
Ich marter nit nach unserm sitten,—
Mich dunkt, gott hab genüg erlitten —
Doch wann min sach gont über zwerg,
Wie man schwert am Kochersperg
Gotz lus! gotz dreck! gotz darm! gotz schweiß!
Und flüch als, das ich rendert weiß.

SACHS

Da Hauptmann den Thomas Murner erwiesenermaßen ausgiebig benutzt hat, liegt die Vermutung nahe, er werde auch bei dessen jungerem Zeitgenossen Hans Sachs in die Schule gegangen sein. Diese Erwartung findet sich bestätigt, und wir werden im Folgenden eine reiche Ausbeute von altertümlichen Worten und kernigen Wendungen mustern, die größtenteils mit Sicherheit dem Hans Sachs zuzuweisen sind. Unsere Belege beziehen sich wieder auf den Kurschner (Band XXI, zwei Teile) und verweisen mit ihren Zahlen auf Teil, Seite und Versnummer.

(1) FG 96. "Verdammter Finanzer!", heißt es von Gotz, als dieser der Bestechlichkeit überführt ist — Bei Sachs findet sich das Wort wiederholt, so II, 144, 20-21:

Hie werd ir auch schawen
Der finantzler art und gebrauch

(2) FG 120: "Schaferhans. Bublein! Du tritt beiseit', in drei Teufels Namen, oder ich will dir den Hundshaber dermaßen ausdreschen—". — Bei Sachs sagt der Pfarrer zur Bauerin, mit der er ein Stelldichein hat, II, 194, 40-42:

Ja, du komm aber eylends wider,
Das nicht dein man komm in das hauß
Vnd dresch mir den Hundshaber auß!

(3) FG 121: "Schaferhans . . . vexierest du mich?

Kratzer. Was gehet das mich an?

Schaferhans. Ob du mich scheel angesehen, frag ich dich."—

Vexieren, bei Sachs häufig belegt, findet sich z.B. I, 60, 33-40:

Der sechst· ein munich, so der kes
 Samlet, so sein die beurn res
 Und sprechen, er sei stark und faul,
 Ob man im fullen sol das maul,
 Das er auch arbeit, hack und reut
 Und ner sich auch wie ander leut,
 Kunt er heim, bringt er kes nit vil,
 Erst man in auch vexieren will

(4) FG 121: "Mit einem Packscheit wollt ich mir ihrer zwölf Dutzend vom Leibe halten"—Vgl. Sachs II, 442, 255: "Der ist wol groß als ein packscheyt." Dazu Anm: "packscheyt, langes Scheit Holz für den Backofen"

(5) FG 122-123: "Karlstatt Bewahre uns Gott vor Menschenfurcht . . . Itz[t?], wo Gott die Saat, von uns gesaet, hat lassen aufgehen, itzt soll ich kleinmutig sein, die Birn' in der Kachel umreiben?" [=öffentliches Auftreten vermeiden; hinterm eigenen Ofen hocken]—Bei Sachs, II, 231-232, 490-498 spricht Ampedo:

Mich glustet keines reisens sehr.
 Ich will zu Famagusta bleiben,
 Mein zeit in rhu und freud vertreiben
 In dem hauß, welches uns auff trawen
 Hat unser vatter aufferbawen.
 Wilt du wandern, so wander hin!

Ihm antwortet Andolosia:

Ja wol, du hast ein solchen sin,
 Wilt auff dem bolster sitzen bleiben,
 Die birn in der kachel umbreiben, . .

(6) FG 138. Der Handelsjude Joslein beteuert seine Ehrlichkeit: "Ich habe niemalen unter Safran Rindfleisch gehackt, Gaiskot in den Lorbeer getan, Lindenlaub in den Pfeffer, noch hab ich Fichtenspane vor Zimmet verkauft."—Die Anmerkung zu Sachs II, 61, 130 zitiert unter Hinweis auf Jansen [Janssen] folgende Verse:

Dein saffran hast zu Fenedig gesackt,
 Und hast rintfleisch darunter gehackt,
 Und melst unter negelen gepets prot,
 Und gibst für lorper hin geißkot,
 Und fichtenspen für Zimmentrinten,
 Und nimmst das laup von einer linten,
 Darmit tust du den pfeffer meren, . . .

Da Hauptmann, wie an andrer Stelle zu zeigen sein wird, bei Johannes Janssens Geschichte des Deutschen Volkes (Herder: Freiburg) sehr bedeu-tende sprachliche Anleihen gemacht hat, laßt es sich natürlich nicht feststellen, ob Hauptmann sich die Stelle aus Sachs oder aus Janssen (Band I, 9. Aufl., S. 401) notiert hat.

(7) FG 141: "Bubenleben. Da horet doch zu: itzt will der Kohl vor dem Garne abziehen . . ."—Ebenfalls FG 179: "Frau Grumbach Hie kam er' 'rein, als war' nichts nit geschehen, hat gemeinet, er wollt' gar vor dem Garn abziehn."—Vgl. Sachs II, 188, 185–188:

Nun frew ich mich, das ich allein
Nicht fürchten thu die frawen mein,
Sonder mein Nachbaur sie auch fleucht
Vnd gmachsamb vor dem Garn abzeucht

Anm: "vor dem Garn abzeucht, entfernt sich vor der Gefahr "

(8) FG 141 [unmittelbar an die vorige Stelle anknüpfend] . . . "als war er nit hoch stolzieret, wie wenn er eine Glenne [Lanze] geschluckt hatt'."—Vgl. Sachs II, 401, 271–274:

Herr künig, das wil ich willig thon,
Doch ich kainen thurnier zeug hon
Schaft mir ros, harnisch, schilt vnd glennen
Zum thurniren, stechen vnd rennen

Sachs bietet das Wort, der Vergleich aber erinnert an Heines Wintermarchen, Caput III, Strophe 7:

Sie stelzen noch immer so steif herum,
So kerzengrade geschniegelt,
Als hatten sie verschluckt den Stock,
Womit man sie einst geprugelt

(9) FG 152: "Geyer Wo ist der Sartorius? Löffelholz Er hat den Ring an der Hoftur lassen." Im gegebenen Zusammenhang ist der Sinn ohne weiteres deutlich: Er ist ausgekniffen—Sachs hat diese—zu seiner Zeit sprichwortliche—Wendung wiederholt, so II, 219, 131–134.

Mein Wilhelm, solt ich nit frolich sein?
Wir sind unsers Walhen abkommen
Er zeucht dahin gleich einem stummen,
Hat den ring an der thur gelan.

Ebenfalls II, 279, 322–324:

Wenn er am besten maint sten dermassen,
Muß ern ring an der hofthur lassen
Oder kumbt als bald gar umbs leben

(10) FG 156. Der törichte Christheinz meint, alles stehe gut für die Sache der Bauern, da Gotz von Berlichingen mit dreißigtausend dem

Trucheß entgegenziehe "Der Berlinger wird ihm die Feigen zeigen!", prahlt er "Er ballt die Faust, so daß der Daumen zwischen Zeige- und Mittelfinger vorragt"—Murner gebraucht häufig das sehr beliebte obszöne Bild von der "welschen Feige," so im Großen Lutherischen Narren, 3387 Hauptmanns unmittelbarer Gewährsmann scheint aber Sachs zu sein, der I, 246, 36–42, einen Klaffer [Verlaumder] sein eigenes Treiben folgendermaßen darlegen läßt:

Ich setz manchen inn ein schweiß-bad,
 Bring manchen umb sein ehr und glimpff
 Ist als mein gwonheytt, schertz und schimpff
 Etwan sag ichs eym byderman,
 Der mich fert auch mit Worten an.
 Solcher nachred solt ich geschweygen
 Dem zeyg ich denn haymlich die feygen .

Bei Hauptmann enthält natürlich die schwache Form "Feigen" zugleich ein tragisch-ironisches Wortspiel—eine Vorandeutung der Tatsache, daß Gotz sich im kritischen Moment heimlich aus dem Staube machen wird

(11) FG 164. Geyer sagt von seiner Hausfrau: "Sie meiner, ich soll heimkommen, das Schlotterlein drehen und dem Kind in der Wiege das Judel scheuchen."—Sachs zählt II, 60, 97 unter den Waren des Kramers

Nestel, harpant vnd schlötterlein auf Dabei die Anm: "schlotterlein, Klapper (Spielzeug für kleine Kinder) "

(12) FG 165: "Sankt Urban und seine Plag' haben vor diesmal den Frühling um den Sommer betrogen."—Diese Bezeichnung für das Laster der Trunksucht konnte Hauptmann bei Sachs häufig antreffen, so II, 371, 946–949.

Die hochzeit hat gewert vierzehn tag
 Hab schier stat ghabt sanct Urbans plag
 Hab schier vertroncken witz und sin

(13) FG 166: "Geyer Bruder, es ist ein Hahnensteigen gewest nach der deutschen Kron."—Vgl. Sachs II, 43, 111–113:

Im Sommer stecket jr die Mayen,
 Habt Kirchwey, hochzeyt, Tentz vnd rayen,
 Kugeln, Hannenstaygen vnd lauffen.

Dazu die Anm: "Hannensteygen, das Steigen auf eine Kletterstange, um einen auf derselben angebundenen Hahn zu erlangen." Hauptmann hat hier einen sehr glücklichen Ausdruck gewählt, um sowohl die Zahl der Wettbewerber um die Krone, wie auch die Leichtfertigkeit der Gesinnung anzudeuten, die bei den Wahlintrigen zum Vorschein kam.

(14) FG 170. Auf die Nachricht von der Niederlage bei Königshofen sagt Menzingen: "So bin ich am Ende mit allem Meinen und kann gen Straßburg auf die Hochzeit ziehen."—Bei Sachs, II, 44, 137–141, sagt der Handwerksmann, der seine letzte Habe zum Pfandleiher getragen hat:

Derhalben mein Werckzeug vnd Beth Zu Schneitach vntern Jüden steht,
Das ich darmit bin fast bereyt
Gen Straßburg auff die Hochzeit

Hier hat Hauptmann eine Wendung rein um ihres redensartlichen Klanges willen übernommen, ohne daß sich uns der anschauliche Sinn der Anspielung erschlosse.

(15) FG 173. Geyer, an Tellermanns Leiche: "Hast brav ausgehalten, Landsmann, hast tapfer gewerket, Landsmann, und Frieden und Schlacht ehrlich erarnet."—Ebenfalls FG 189 Schertlin zu den gefangenen Bauern: "Keinnutziges Lauszeug, ist nichts zu erarnen an euch fur ein'n Reutersmann."—Vgl. Sachs I, 59, 24: "Hart erarnet ist botenlon." Dazu Anm: "erarnet = ererniet." In dem ersten Hauptmannpassus teilt sich das Wort in seiner zweifachen Beziehung auf Frieden und Schlacht in die Bedeutung von "durch saure Muhe verdienen" und "durchhalten." In dem zweiten heißt es soviel wie "muhsam erbeuten."

(16) FG 185 Lorenz von Hutten berichtet von dem Wassermangel während der Belagerung von Unsrer Frauen Berg: "Was nit meh' fern, daß wir hatten unsern eignen Brunnen wiederum müssen saufen."—Sachs II, 433, 44–45, sagt der Arzt zu dem Kranken:

Hast du gefangen deinen prunnen,
So gib vnd laß mich den besehen!

(17) FG 189: "Als wir hinauf waren, kam einer uf'n Gaul uberzweg dahergerennet."—Vgl. Sachs I, 167, 23–27:

Da ich das sach, ich schrie im zu:
Halta, halta! wie lauffest du?
Keyn antwort gab das weyblich bild
Und floch nur eylends inn die wild,
Ich eylet im zu uber-zweg, . . .

Anm: "uber-zweg, quer."

(18) FG 190: "Schertlin. Ihr Herren, wo machen wir hernacher den Mummplatz? Wolf von Kastell. Wollt Ihr würfeln?"—Vgl. die Klage des Lantzknichts bei Sachs, II, 45, 173–175:

In Schantzen, Graben vnd Schiltwachten,
In scharmützln, stürmen vnd feldschlachten,
Auff dem Mumplatz muß ich mich palgen.

Dazu die Anm: "Mumplatz, Stelle, wo gewurfelt wird(?)."

(19) FG 193 "Vier Tag' hab ich nit geruht," klagt der bis auf den Tod erschöpfte Geyer seinem Schwager —Bei Sachs steht II, 405, 396–398:

Nun pin ich ie vier nacht vund tag
Gangen, das ich nie ruens pflag,
Hab auch nit gessen noch getrunken,

Niemand wird eine innere Motivverwandschaft zwischen dem hüernen Sewfrid und dem Helden von Hauptmanns Drama behaupten wollen. Der Wortlaut aber spricht für Übertragung. Dabei fällt ins Gewicht, daß der Zeitraum von vier Tagen Hauptmann allein angehört, nicht den von ihm benutzten Quellen. Da nun Hauptmann, wie Helene Herrmann an Gryphius gezeigt hat, die erstaunlichsten Übertragungen von Wortmaterial, ohne Rücksicht auf irgendwelche Verwandschaft der Stimmung oder der Situation bewerkstelligt, so halte ich es für nicht unwahrscheinlich, daß die Sprache des Hans Sachs auf diesen großen Auftritt abgefarbt hat, genau wie ich es mit den "Hunden und Katzen" des Gryphius wahrscheinlich zu machen suchte. Wenn man sich vorstellt, daß Hauptmann bei der Arbeit am Florian Geyer dauernd die Schriftsteller der Reformationszeit gelesen haben wird, um für seine Aufgabe in Form zu bleiben, so ist diese Vermutung nicht als abgeschmackt von der Hand zu weisen.

(20) Zum Schluß seien noch einige charakteristische Flüche gebucht.
FG 152: "Potz Leichnam Angst."—Vgl. Sachs II, 197, 125:

Potz leichnam angst, es ist mein Man!

FG 181: "Potz kuren Marter!"—Vgl. Sachs II, 197, 127:

Potz kûm marter, wo sol ich hin?

FG 182: "Sammer potz Körper!"—Vgl. Sachs II, 176, 221:

Ich wil sammer botz Cörper mit dir

FG 184: "Daß dich's blau Feuer."—Vgl. Sachs II, 196, 102·

Heb dich hinauß! hab dirs blaw fewr, . . .

DIE STROPHEN UND VERSE

Die in den Dialog des Florian Geyer eingestreuten Lieder und Verse—es gibt deren mehr als ein Dutzend—veranlassen den kritischen Leser zu der Frage: Woher stammen diese Bestandteile des Dramas? Hat Hauptmann sie im Geist der geschilderten Zeit selbständig gedichtet, oder hat er sie—teils oder samthlich—seinen Quellen entnommen, sei es wortlich, oder in leichter Umformung, etwa so, wie Goethe das Lemurenlied im zweiten Faust eingestandenermaßen aus Shakespeares Hamlet entlehnt hat?

Diese Frage ist ganz präzise dahin zu beantworten, daß Hauptmann alle Stücke im Florian Geyer, die gebundene Rede aufweisen, mit einer bezeichnenden Ausnahme den Quellen verdankt. Dieser Nachweis soll im Folgenden geführt werden. Wie beim Lied die Verhältnisse liegen, wird es allerdings nicht in jedem Falle möglich sein, mit Sicherheit zu sagen, welcher Vorlage Hauptmann die betreffenden Verse entnommen hat. Seit dem Vorgang Herders, Nicolais, Elwerts, hat das 19. Jahrhundert eine Fülle von Liedersammlungen volkstümlichen und historischen Charakters weiten Leserkreisen zugänglich gemacht, neben dem Wunderhorn vor allem die Sammlungen von Erlach,¹⁴ Uhland,¹⁵ Lilhencron,¹⁶ um nur einige der wichtigsten zu nennen; aber auch streng wissenschaftliche Neudrucke alter Liederbücher, wie des Ambraser Liederbuchs von 1582¹⁷ und *Bergreihen*¹⁸ konnten dem Dichter des Bauernkriegsdramas in die Hand gekommen sein, der Möglichkeit zu geschweigen, daß er aus den alten Flugblättern, auf welche die Liederdrucke größtenteils zurückgehen, in den Bibliotheken eigenhändig das eine oder andere Stück aufgestoßert haben konnte. Der theoretisch somit äußerst weit gespannte Rahmen unsrer Forschung wird sich indessen in der Praxis auf ein viel bescheideneres Maß beschränken lassen, wenn wir den Grundsatz befolgen, daß, wo eine Versreihe an leicht zugänglicher Stelle zu finden ist, nach entlegeneren Möglichkeiten nicht gesucht zu werden braucht.

Da Hauptmann die Orthographie seiner Quellen im Florian Geyer der modernen Schreibart prinzipiell angeahnt hat, versage ich es mir, auf rein orthographische Abweichungen des Hauptmannschen Textes von seinen Vorlagen einzugehen.

(1) FG 78. Der Schuler Martin nagelt grüne Reiser im Kapitelsaal und singt dabei das Frühlingslied:

Winter, du mußt Urlaub han,
Das hab ich wohl vernommen

¹⁴ Die Volkslieder der Deutschen. Herausgegeben durch Friedrich Karl Freiherrn von Erlach, 5 Bände (Mannheim bei Heinrich Hoff, 1834–36).

¹⁵ Alle Hoch- und Niederdeutsche Volkslieder. Herausgegeben von Ludwig Uhland. 2 Bände (Stuttgart und Tübingen: J. G. Cotta'scher Verlag, 1844–45).

¹⁶ Die Historischen Volkslieder der Deutschen vom 13. bis 16. Jahrhundert. Herausgegeben von R. Freiherrn von Lilhencron. 4 Bände. Leipzig: F. C. W. Vogel, 1865–69).

¹⁷ Vgl. Anm. 7.

¹⁸ Bergreihen. Ein Liederbuch des XVI. Jahrhunderts. Herausgegeben von John Meier (= Braunes Neudrucke, 99–100) (Halle a. S.: Max Niemeyer, 1892).

Was mir der Winter hat angetan,
Das klag ich diesem Sommer

Diese Strophe konnte Hauptmann bei Uhland (Nr 48 A, Strophe 1) und im Ambraser Liederbuch (Nr 120, Strophe 1) finden. An beiden Stellen indes lautet der dritte Vers: "Was mir der winter hat leids gethan". Die Änderung scheint auf Hauptmann zurückzugehen. Auch Böhmes Altdeutsches Liederbuch,¹⁹ Nr 153, bietet die hergebrachte Form — Könnte irgend ein wohlmeinender Berater bei Durchsicht von Hauptmanns Manuskript sich an dem vermeintlichen Anklang an den Erlkönig gestoßen haben?

(2) FG 108 Hier heult ein Trunkener in der Rothenburger Schenke: "O Karle, Kaiser lobesam, greif du die Sach' zum ersten an, Gott wird's mit dir ohn' Zweifel han." — Diese Verse stehen auf dem Titelblatt einer von Hutten herausgegebenen Flugschrift. D. F. Strauß zitiert sie in seinem Hutten,²⁰ II, 67, mit der Variante "lobesam". Mit dem an anderer Stelle zu leistenden Nachweis, daß Hauptmann dem Straußschen Huttenbuch eine Reihe von Zitaten verdankt, darf die Herkunft dieses entlegenen Strophenbruchstücks für erwiesen gelten.

(3) FG 116 Der in schimmerndem Waffenschmuck eintretende Jungling Jorg Kumpf singt die Strophe:

Die Singerin singt den Tenor schon,
Die Nacht'gall den Alt in gleichem Ton,
Scharf Metz bassiert mit Schalle,
Die Schlange den Diskant warf darein,
Sie achten nit, wenn es g'falle
Sie sangen, daß die Mauern klubend
Und Bett und Polster zum Dach ausstübend.

Wie ich bereits an anderer Stelle nachgewiesen habe,²¹ stammen die prächtigen Verse aus dem Lied "Hohenkrahnen" (1512). In den 5. Vers hat sich ein Schreib- oder Druckfehler eingeschlichen. Er sollte lauten: "Sie achten nit, wem es g'falle". Hauptmann kann die Kenntnis dieses Liedes aus Uhland (Nr 177, Strophe 9–10) oder aus Luhencron (III, Nr 268, Strophe 9–10) geschöpft haben. Die Vergleichen des Donners der verschiedenen Geschützttypen mit verschiedenen Chorstimmen ist ein im Liede des 15. und 16. Jahrhunderts sehr beliebtes Motiv. Hauptmann hat mit der Aufnahme der vorliegenden Fassung eine ausgezeichnete Wahl getroffen.

¹⁹ Franz M. Bohme Altdeutsches Liederbuch. Volkslieder der Deutschen nach Wort und Weise aus dem 12–17. Jahrhundert (Leipzig: Breitkopf und Hartel, 1877).

²⁰ David Friedrich Strauß Ulrich von Hutten 2 Bände (Leipzig: Brockhaus, 1858).

²¹ Vgl. Anm. 2.

(4) FG 122 Geyer ist in die Rothenburger Schenke eingetreten, wo der betrunkene Schaferhans sich wust auffuhr. Geyers Versuch, ihn durch Blick und Wort in seine Schranken zu weisen, hat keinen Erfolg. Vielmehr erdreistet sich der Schaferhans zu einem betrunkenen Lachen, um dann "in unreinem, trotzig-hamischem Halbsingen" die folgenden Verse von sich zu geben:

Wir sind vom Ritterorden,
Doch itzund arm geworden,
Noch wollen wir empor
Wir wollen zu Kind und Wiben,
Von den man uns vertrieben,
Und Schloß han wie zuvor
Uns soll der Powel helfen,
Dann fall'n wir gleich den Wolfen
In geistlich Hurden ein,
All' Pfaffen zu verjagen,
Sie all' zu Tod zu schlagen,
Zu trinken ihren Wein.
Das gottlich Wort sagt eben
Wir müssen christlich leben
Und alle Bruder sein.

Diese Verse hat Hauptmann aus Janssens Geschichte des Deutschen Volkes,²² II, 471, wo sie mit folgenden Abweichungen stehen, V 3: "woll'n"; V 4: "woll'n", V 6: "hant"; V 7: "Povel", V 13: "sagt's."^{22a} Janssen, der für die Verse auf seine (ungedruckte) Quelle verweist, läßt uns auch durch seine Ausführungen deutlich verstehen—was wir aus unserm Drama mehr erraten müssen—worauf der Schaferhans mit seinem auf Geyer gemunzten Spottlied eigentlich hinzielt. Janssen sagt:

In Verbindung mit Ulrich von Wurttemberg standen auch viele der seit Zerspaltung des Sickingen'schen Bundes geächteten und in die Schweiz geflüchteten Ritter. Diese 'ohn Hab und Gut und darum gierig auf Meuterey und Veränderung,' waren Freunde 'Jedwedens, der dazu verhalf, itzt Freunde und Aufweger des Pobels und der Bauern, die sie sonst geschunden und durch Raub und Heckenreuterei verderbt' hatten . . . Man legte den 'verloren Edelleut' die Worte in den Mund: [nun folgen unsre Verse]—

Die Geschichte Janssens ist durch viele Zitate in der Sprachform der Zeitgenossen belebt. In einem späteren Kapitel wird zu zeigen sein, daß

²² Johannes Janssen: Geschichte des Deutschen Volkes seit dem Ausgang des Mittelalters. Band II. Siebente verbesserte Auflage (Freiburg i B · Herdersche Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1882)

^{22a} Owen, a.a.O. 298–299, zitiert diese Verse. Er behauptet, sie stünden, nach Bensen 572–573, in Eisenharts Chronik, S. 97. Beides ist falsch. Bensen bezieht sich weder auf diese Verse, noch stehen sie in Eisenharts Chronik.

Janssen zu einer der ausgiebigsten Fundgruben für Hauptmanns altertümliche Prosa geworden ist.

[FG 131. Geyer hat eben Kunde von dem mißglückten Sturm auf die Feste Unser Frauen Berg erhalten. "Sind unsre Schwarzen dabei gewesen?", fragt er "Ja, Kapitän," antwortet Marei "Als sie die Horner blusen: 'welche fechten wollten, kamen recht,' haben die Unsern das Wilde-Mann's Fahnlein ufgerecht' " Mareis ganzer Bericht deutet auf eine altertümliche Vorlage Die Worte in Anführungszeichen geben sich trotz ihrer Form—indirekte Rede—als ein Zitat. Ich habe es bisher nicht auffinden können und weiß in Anbetracht seines Rhythmus nicht, ob es einem Versgefuge entnommen ist]

(5) FG 156. Der Stelzfuß Klauslin singt auf des Christheinz Aufforderung hin "das neue Lied vom Gotzen von Berlichingen und vom Florian Geyer":

Gotz von Berlingen und auch sein Heer
Lag in der Stadt, als ich versteh', Waren eitel Bauersknaben.
Florian Geyer zu Heidingsfeld lag,
Über achtzehntausend Hauptmann was,
Waren eitel frankische Knaben

Schon Heinrich Lemcke²³ hat nachgewiesen, daß die Strophe sich mit Liliencron III, Nr 379, Strophe 9 deckt Dorthier hat es Hauptmann ohne Zweifel. Benutzung Lilienrons läßt sich auch sonst in unserm Drama nachweisen

(6) FG 157. Gleich nach dem vorigen Lied stimmen Jos Frankenheim und Genossen den Bauernfreunden zum Trutz die Verse an:

Den Munzer hat sein Geist betrogen,
Der ist nun hin und aufgefliegen,
Sie haben beid' gut Ding gelogen
Thomas, der Herr der Hollengeister,
Und Luther, aller Lügen Meister

Diese Verse entstammen einem ca. 180 Verse zählenden Spottgedicht auf Luther in vierhebigen Reimpaaren. Sie bilden einen Anhang zu der Rotenburger Chronik des Barfüßermönchs Michael Eisenhart,^{23a} die zusammen mit Thomas Zweifels viel umfangreicherem Werk als Band cxxxix der "Bibliothek des Literarischen Vereins Stuttgart" im Jahre 1878 im Druck erschien. Dieses Werk bildet Hauptmanns wichtigste Quelle für den

²³ "Florian Geyer in der Geschichte und bei Gerhart Hauptmann" (Neue Jahrbücher für das Klassische Altertum, Geschichte und Deutsche Literatur und für Pädagogik) 1916 Band 37, S. 227

^{23a} Owen, a a O. 302, hat die Herkunft dieser Stelle bereits nachgewiesen

Gang der Rothenburger Ereignisse Bei Eisenhart lauten unsre Verse,
S. 622–623:

Den Muntzer hat sein gayst betrogen,
Der ist nun hin und aufgefliegen,
Sy haben beyd gut ding gelogen

*

Thomas, det yetzgenante geyster,
Und Luther, aller lügen meyster,
Das christlich volck schentlich verfurt

Man sieht, Hauptmann hat nicht bloß den im Original entstellten vierten Vers verbessert, sondern auch die zwei durch einen Stern getrennten Stücke zu einem strophenartigen Gebilde zusammengeschweißt.

(7) FG 167. "Wein!—Wein!—Wein von dem Rhein!", ruft Geyer. Auch dieser Ausruf ist als ein Zitat zu belegen. In Janssens Geschichte, I, 223 (9. Aufl., 1883), fand Hauptmann ein Trinklied, dessen Anfang lautet:

Wein, wein von dem Rein, lauter, claur und fein, dem varb gib gar lichten schem als cristal und rubein.

(8) FG 171–172. Der schwerste Schlag hat Geyer getroffen. Sein braver Tellermann ist zu seinen Füßen verschieden. Er weiß, es geht auch mit ihm zu Ende. Die Vorahnung des eigenen Todes hat er eben in ein Ratselspiel gekleidet, das seine seelische Gefäßtheit ergreifend offenbart. Da besinnt er sich der im Halbdunkel kauern den Gefährten "Fürchtet Euch nit, singt!" ruft er ihnen zu. "Den Toten weckt Ihr nit auf." Da beginnt Klauslin und "singt mit einer alten, zitternden Stimme:

Der Florian Geyer zu Weinsberg was .
Ergriff er die schwarze Fahne und sprach.
Auf, liebe Gesellen mein,
Jetzt wollen wir das Schloß gewinnen "

Mit seiner Erinnerung an jene berühmte Waffentat verschärft das Lied die Kluft zwischen dem Einst und dem Jetzt bis zum Unertraglichen, und Florian Geyer läßt sich nieder und weint.

Dieses Lied, das in Rhythmus und Reim ganz den Charakter der Improvisation hat (wie so manche Volksliedstellen), findet sich in keiner Sammlung. Und das aus guten Gründen. Soll es als eine Augenblickseingebung des von Ruhrung übermannen Klauslin wirken, so sollte man billig in gedruckten Quellen nicht danach suchen. Aber es gibt zureichendere Gründe, an die wir uns halten können. Es gab kein solches Lied, es konnte kein solches Lied geben. Die alte Überlieferung in Lied und Chronik weiß nichts von einer Beteiligung Florian Geyers an der Ersturmung von Weinsberg Florian Geyer lebt im Lied als ein Bauernführer, wie so viele andre, doch von Waffentaten, durch die er sich ausgezeichnet hatte, weiß die Überlieferung nichts zu melden Gleich nach Erscheinen unsers Dramas hat Max Lenz²⁴ den Nachweis erbracht, daß der Mann, dem Hauptmann die Anregung zur Inangriffnahme des Dramas verdankt, der Historiker Wilhelm Zimmermann,²⁵ den "romantischen Poeten" zuzurechnen ist, was die Gestalt Geyers betrifft Geyers schwarze Schar, von der Zimmermann fabelt, hat es nie gegeben "Bleibt für Florian Geyer selbst bei Weinsberg, Heilbronn und Neckarsulm überhaupt noch Platz, wenn seine schwarze Garde nie existiert hat?", fragt Lenz. Und seine Antwort lautet "Wir können getrost annehmen, daß der Historiker des Bauernkrieges [Zimmermann] hier wie anderwärts lediglich seiner blühenden Phantasie gefolgt ist" (109) Noch der neueste Geschichtschreiber des Bauernkriegs, Gunther Franz,²⁶ pflichtet Lenz bei, wenn er schreibt: "M. Lenz . . . zerstörte zuerst die von Oechsle und Zimmermann gewobene Geyerlegende, er ist für die Kritik des Tatsächlichen noch immer grundlegend" (I, 304, Anm.) Es ist hier nicht der Ort, der Frage nach Hauptmanns Einstellung zu der historischen Überlieferung nachzugehen Das Gesagte genügt, um zu zeigen, weshalb die besprochene Strophe sich nicht in den Quellen findet.

(9) FG 172 Als Geyer sich wieder gesammelt hat, läßt er sich von Marei seine Waffen—zum letzten Ritt—anlegen Dabei spricht er ein feierliches Gelöbnis der Treue zu seiner Sache aus,—Worte, die in Anführungszeichen stehen aber trotz ihres Verscharakters wohl deshalb als Prosa gedruckt sind, weil sie durch fremde Einschübe unterbrochen werden:

'Von Wahrheit ich will nimmer lahn' . . . Den Helm, Marei!—'Das soll mir bitten ab kein Mann, auch schafft, zu schrecken mich, kein Wehr, kein Bann, kein Acht' . . . Die Armschienen fest, ich will mich damit begraben lassen 'Obwohl mein' treue Mutter weint, daß ich die Sach' hab' fangen an, Gott woll' sie trösten . . . [Das Schwert umgürtend] Es muß gahn '

Dann fordert er die Gefährten auf, ihm Bescheid zu tun, auf Ulrich von Huttens Gedächtnis, auf des Sickingen Gedächtnis

Das sind Huttenverse Sie stammen aus Huttens Vorwort zu der deutschen Ausgabe seiner Gesprache Hauptmann hat sie, wie die an Kaiser Karl gerichtete Apostrophe, aus D. F. Straußens Huttenbuch, wo

²⁴ Vgl. Anm. 1

²⁵ Dr. W. Zimmermann, Allgemeine Geschichte des Großen Bauernkrieges 3 Bände (Stuttgart Franz Heinrich Kohler, 1841–43)

²⁶ Gunther Franz Der Deutsche Bauernkrieg 2 Bände (München und Berlin Verlag Oldenbourg, 1933)

sie, Band II, S. 121, in folgendem Wortlaut zu finden sind:

Von Wahrheit ich will nimmer lan,
 Das soll mir bitten ab kein Mann,
 Auch schafft, zu schrecken mich, kein Wehr,
 Kein Bann, kein Acht, wie fast und sehr
 Man mich damit zu schrecken meint,
 Obwohl mein fromme Mutter weint,
 Da ich die Sach hatt gfangen an
 Gott woll sie trosten, es muß gahn,
 Und sollt es brechen auch vorm End,
 Wills Gott, so mags nit werden gwend,
 Darum will brauchen Fuß und Hand.
 Ich habs gewagt.

Die ergriffenen Horer kannten die Verse gut, was Menzingers Zusatz zu Karlstats Antwort auf Geyers Gelobnis beweist. Er sagt nämlich, in betonter Umbildung eines der vier von Geyer ausgelassenen Schlußverse "Will's Gott, so mag's noch werden gewend't."—Daß Hauptmann die Huttenverse aus Strauß hat und nicht etwa aus der Huttenausgabe im Kurschner (DNL, XVII, 2. Teil, S. 285–286), beweist der dritte Vers, der bei Strauß und Hauptmann lautet: "auch schafft, zu schrecken mich, kein Wehr," wogegen die Kurschnersche Ausgabe—jedenfalls richtiger—schreibt: auch schafft, zu stillen mich, kein Wehr. Die Ersetzung der "frommen" durch die "treue" Mutter erklärt sich jedenfalls aus Hauptmanns Wunsch, die männliche Haltung durch keinen Mißton zu storen.^{26a}

(10) FG 185–186 Lorenz von Hutten gibt einen lebendigen Bericht von der Bedrängnis der auf Unser Frauen Berg belagerten Ritter und von der Freude, die alle ergriff, als der Entsatz erschien:

So aber was Hilf' in der Not kommen. Mußte der Turmer uf'm mittleren Turm alsbald den Bauern das Liedlein blasen

Hat dich der Schimpf gereuen,
 Zo zeug du wider heim.

Der vordere Turmer jubelnde und schreiende uf die Schutt gefuhret, daß er den Wurzburgern uffspielete unten in der Stadt. Das hat er mit Freud' getan und ihnen den armen Judas gar hell und schmetternd mit seiner Trummeten zu horen geben.

Dieses Ereignis muß stark auf die Gemuter der Zeitgenossen gewirkt haben, denn wir finden es in seinen charakteristischen Zügen in einer ganzen Reihe von Liedern festgehalten. Bei Liliencron III, Nr. 380 lautet die zweite Hälfte der 20. Strophe:

^{26a} Damit ist auch Blau, nach dem Owen, a.a O. 303, die Huttenverse zitiert, als Quelle erledigt, denn sein Text entspricht demjenigen im Kurschner. Die Umbildung eines Huttenverses in Menzingers Erwiderung ist Owen übrigens entgangen.

sie bliesen mit freidenreichem schalle die edeln fursten an,
 den bauren den "armen Judas,
 was hast du gethan "

Lilencron III, Nr. 381, Strophe 51 lautet:

Der thurner blies den "Judas, ach was hast du gethan," es waren selzam laudes,
 es lacht nicht jederman
 Er blies "hats dich gerewet, so ziehe wieder heim "

Lilencron III, Nr. 382, Strophe 22 lautet:

hat dich der schimpf gerawen, ziech heim, dir mag wol grawen,
 man wurt dir nit vil trawen,
 du hast deinem herrn gethon, wie Judas der verzweifelt man!

Auch die Zimmersche Chronik,²⁷ II, 253 erwähnt das Lied: "Hat dich der schimpf gerowen," und die Anmerkung dazu, Band IV, 429 gibt beide Verse in dieser Fassung:

Hat dich der schimpf gereuet,
 so zeug nun wider heim

Der arme Judas spielt auf das bekannte Kirchenlied an, das ich noch in meiner Jugend habe singen hören — Eine ganze Reihe dieser und ähnlicher Fassungen sind Hauptmann bestimmt zu Gesicht gekommen. Die engste Anlehnung aber zeigt die Hauptmannstelle an den Bericht des Würzburger Magisters und bischoflichen Schreibers, Lorenz Fries, in seiner Geschichte des Bauernkrieges in Ostfranken.²⁸ Fries schreibt S: 320: ... der thurner uf dem mitler thurn pless den bauren das gemain liedlein "hat dich der schimpf gerauen, so ziehe du wider haim etc " so wart der vorder thurner herab uf die Schut gefurt, der bless den zu Wirtzburg in der stat den "armen Judas."²⁹

²⁷ Herausgegeben von K. A. Barack "Bibliothek des Literarischen Vereins Stuttgart," Band 91–94. 1869 f

²⁸ Würzburg, 1883 gedruckt Herausgegeben von Dr. August Schaffler und Dr. Theodor Henner. Verlag des historischen Vereines von Unterfranken Der Schlußsatz der gedegenen Entleitung der Herausgeber lautet (xlv) Moge nun das unsterbliche Werk unsers Magisters Lorenz Fries in dem würdigen Gewande, das ihm die ruhmlichst bekannte Thein'sche Druckerei (Sturz) um die Lenden gegurtet, seinen Weg wandeln und die tiefere Erkenntnis einer hochst wichtigen Epoche unserer vaterlandischen Geschichte in immer weitere Kreise tragen!

²⁹ FG 189 werden die Anfangsverse des "armen Judas" bei anderer Gelegenheit gesungen

(11) FG 190 "Schertlin. Wohlan, fromme Gesellen! So lasset uns nach der Arbeit ein wenig Deutsch-Herren spielen. Kunz von der Mühlen spricht im Abgehen:

Kleider aus und Kleider an,
Essen, trinken, schlafen gahn,
Das ist die Arbeit, so die Deutsch-Herren han

Bei Janssen, I, 604 (9. Aufl. 1883) heist man:

Eine besondere Mißachtung erregte auch der Deutsche Orden, der keine andere Aufgabe mehr zu haben schien, als über ein bestimmtes Gebiet landesherrliche Hoheit auszuüben und kraft seiner geistlichen Vorrechte die Kirche zu verweltlichen. Statt der Feinde sagte man, spießen die Ritter gebratene Kapaunen, Rebhühner, Gänse und Enten. Im Munde des Volkes ging der Spottreim

Kleider aus und Kleider an,
Essen, trinken, schlafen gan,
Ist die Arbeit, so die deutschen Herren han

(12) FG 191. Gleich darauf hort man die Ritter, die sich in den Speisesaal zurückgezogen haben, singen:

Wir haben keine Sorgen
Wohl um das Rom'sche Reich,
Es sterb' heut oder morgen,
Das gilt uns alles gleich

Es handelt sich hier um eine Wanderstrophe, die in verschiedenen Liedern auftaucht. Sehr nah kommt unsrer Fassung die 4. Strophe eines Trinkliedes ("Man sagt wohl, in dem Maeren") im Wunderhorn (S. 631–632 der Griesbachschen Ausgabe). In der Uhlandschen Fassung desselben Liedes, Uhland Nr. 215, fehlt unsre Strophe. Dafür aber lautet in Uhland Nr. 265, "Druckerorden" überschrieben, die erste Strophe wie folgt:

Wolauf mit reichem schalle!
ich weiß mir ein gsellschaft gut, hebt mir vor andern allen,
sie tregt ein freien mut,
sie hat ein kleine sorge
wol umb das romisch reich, es sterb heut oder morgen
so gilts in alles gleich.

Hauptmann mag beide Fassungen gekannt und den ersten Vers leicht verändert haben.^{29a}

(13) FG 195. Das letzte Stück gebundener Rede bilden die Verse, die der Ritter Schertlin, den kleinen Grumbach auf dem Arm, hersagt oder singt. Sie stehen an wirkungsvoller Stelle. Das symbolkraftige Gruppenbild gesellt sich dem Wort, um in dem Leser und Hörer eine Ahnung dessen erstehen zu lassen, was die nächste Zukunft dem geschlagenen Bauernvolk bringen wird:

^{29a} Owen, a.a.O. 305, weist diese Verse bei Blau in genau demselben Wortlaut nach, der im Drama vorliegt. Hauptmann hat demnach den Liedtext ohne Änderung übernommen!

Willst du dich ernahren,
Du junger Edelmann!
Folg' du meiner Lehren,
Sitz uf, tiab' zum Bann!
Wenn der Bauer zu Holze fahrt,
So greif, ihn freislich an,
Derwisch' ihn bei dem Kragen,
Erfreu' das Herze din,
Nimm ihm, was er habe,
Spann' aus die Pferdlein sin,
Sei frisch und dazu unverzagt
Wenn er nummen Pfennig hat,
So reiß ihm d'Gurgel ab.

Bei Uhland stehen diese Verse als Strophe 2 und 3 von Nr. 134 mit der Überschrift: "Edelmannslehre". Auf Uhland verweist auch Janssen, der sie I, 227 ebenfalls bringt. Bei Uhland haben unsre Verse folgenden Wortlaut:

Wiltu dich ernerren,
du junger edelman,
folg du miner lere,
sitz uf, drab zum ban!
halt dich zû dem grünen wald, wann der bur ins holz fert so renn in freislich an!

Derwusch in bi dem kragen, erfreuw das herze din,
nim im was er habe,
span uß die pferdelin sin!
bis frisch und darzu unverzagt, wann er nummen pfenning hat
so riß im dgurgel ab!

Man sieht, bei Hauptmann fehlen der fünfte Vers der ersten Strophe und die strophische Gliederung. Es wird da ein Flüchtigkeitsfehler vorliegen. Davon abgesehen aber hat Hauptmann die Sprachform der Verse erheblich modernisiert, allerdings in ganz inkonsequenter Weise. Er schreibt "sitz uf," aber "spann aus", "meiner Lehren," aber "das Herze din." In einem Vers steht sogar "Pferdelein min!" Solchen Doppelformen begegnet man ja auf Schritt und Tritt das ganze Drama hindurch. Hauptmann hat sich offensichtlich mit Rücksicht auf seinen Leserkreis weder auf den alten noch auf den neuen Lautstand festlegen wollen, ging es ihm doch darum, möglichst stark den Anschein altertümlicher Sprache zu erwecken, ohne doch in der Hauptsache unverständlich zu werden. So wird vermutlich nur der philologisch geschulte Leser Gefahr laufen, an der Doppelheit der Formen Anstoß zu nehmen, auch wo sie in ein und demselben strophischen Gebilde begegnen.

Bei weitem die meisten Verse, die wir hier besprochen haben, entstammen dem Volkslied, viele darunter der besonderen Gattung des historischen Liedes, das ein bestimmtes Ereignis festhält. Es sei deshalb gestattet, an dieser Stelle einige Wendungen zu mustern, die ihren Weg aus dem Volksliede in Hauptmanns Prosa gefunden zu haben scheinen. Vielleicht wurde es sorgfältigem Suchen gelingen, diese Lese um ein Betrachtliches zu vermehren.

(1) FG 62. "Hier ist christliche Liebe auf türkische Art bewiesen" Vgl. ebf. FG 73.—Liliencron III, Nr. 381, Str. 42 heißt es von den Bauern:

ließen sich christlich nennen und gabens türkisch für^{29b}

(2) FG 74. "Wir wollen ihnen die Würzburger Osterfladen mit Pulver bestreuen . . ." (In der Osterzeit kommt der Bauernkrieg zum Ausbruch.)—Liliencron III, Nr. 382, Str. 8 beginnt:

Die von Würzburg thetten laden gest auß dem Neckerthal zu irem osterfladen

(3) FG 74. "Bauer, hut dich, mein Roß schlägt dich!", ruft ein Ritter, um der Zuversicht der Schloßbesatzung Ausdruck zu geben—Dieser Satz steht als Vorspruch vor Liliencron III, Nr. 380, wo es auch um die Würzburger Ereignisse geht.

(4) FG 81. Im Gegensatz zu Geyers geruhmter Tapferkeit heißt es von Gotz: "Dawider nehmet den Berlinger, der will den Fuchs ninderit nit beißen."—Vgl. Liliencron III, Nr. 381, Str. 39:

Im schloß thettens sich fleißen, schickten sich erst mit lust, ob sie mer wolten beißen
den fuchs; es was um sust . . .

Vgl. ebenfalls Uhland Nr. 141 A, Str. 2:

der sich des adels fleist und doch den fuchs nit beist.

(5) FG 95. Link droht: "Soll denen in der Besatzung der Reif am Kubel dermaßen werden angezogen, daß sie wie Fische sollen daraus springen. . . ." Falls Hauptmann diese prachtige Redensart nicht in ihrem vollen Wortlaut einer alten Quelle verdankt, ist er durch das Volkslied dazu angeregt worden, wo die zugrunde liegende Vorstellung in jener Zeit häufig zu finden ist, z.B. Liliencron III, Nr. 369, Str. 13:

^{29b} Owen, a.a.O. 290, zitiert eine Stelle aus Bensen, die einwandfrei als Vorlage der Hauptmannschen Wendung anzuerkennen ist.

er sprach wurd mir an aidgenoß, ich will im den kubel binden baß, im D. W. unter "Kubel" Sp. 2488 zitiert und erklärt: "entlehnt von den Schlägen, mit denen der Faßbinder dem Kubel die Reife festkopft." Auch Zimmermann, II, 161 zitiert inbezug auf Herzog Ulrichs vereitelten Zug gegen Stuttgart, 1525. "Nun wollen wir den Schweizern den Kubel binden!"

(6) FG 136 "Die Nurnberger Pfeffersacke [Kramer] haben abgeschrieben."—Vgl. Uhland, Nr. 144, Str. 6:

Albrecht von Rosenberg der hat ein roß, das kan zelten und traben, darauf tet er manchen Nurnbergischen pfeffersack jagen

(7) FG 139: "Sind nit genug franzosische Stuber und Sonnenkronen im Umlauf?" Vgl. FG 166 "franzosische Stuber und Sonnenkronen."—Bei Uhland heißt es Nr. 190, Str. 1:

Wir loben gott den herren
darzu den edlen koning
.
.
.
.
.
.
er will uns erlich lonen mit stuwern und sonnenkronen.

(8) FG 150: "Wo sind meine Dunkelknaben geblieben?", klagt Geyer.—Bei Liliencron III, Nr. 381, Str. 30 lesen wir:

Da kamen die dunkel knaben vom hellen haufen gerant

(9) FG 151: "Getraut ihm doch euer keiner . . . , einem alten Weibe eine teige Birne zu nehmen."—Vgl. Uhland, Nr. 110, Str. 3:

Ach junk fraw, wolt irs mit mir gan und do die taigen pirn stan dort außen uf jener haide?

Vgl ebenfalls Stobers "Alsatia" 1862–67, Sprichwörter Geilers von Kaisersberg Nr. 45 (S. 135): "Man seht wol am sack wo die taigen birnen liegen."

(10) FG 195: Ich war ohne Lust am Spiel, . . . sust hattet Ihr mir wohl nit einen Weißpfennig mogen abnehmen"—Vgl. Uhland, Nr. 144, Str. 5:

der weißen pfenninge hastu nit vil, der roten kanstu nit uberkommen.

HERMANN J. WEIGAND

JEAN GIRAUDOUX, PRINCE DES PRÉCIEUX

Quand tant d'autres seront oubliés, il prendra place dans notre histoire littéraire un peu au-dessus de Voiture, parmi les précieux qui ne sont pas ridicules ¹

THAT preciosity is only a relative term will be readily endorsed by anyone who has studied the critical literature devoted to Jean Giraudoux. Some critics hurl the word as a reproach and condemnation, while others give themselves pains to plead or explain Giraudoux's case. Each, as well as the author himself, feels certain that preciosity is the word which will label and pigeon-hole him exactly, but alas, each proceeds to suggest a different nuance until the subject becomes quite confusing. The word preciosity itself suffers as many interpretations as classicism or romanticism, so a precise definition is out of the question. Originally associated with the seventeenth century arbiters of taste in language and etiquette, the term has since broadened its scope considerably. Literary historians have found it a convenient label for subtlety and refinement wherever these qualities may appear. Hence they do not mean an isolated phenomenon, but a fundamental characteristic of some minds, adapting and transforming itself according to time and place. Words such as gongorism, euphuism, conceitism, conceptualism, or marivaudage are mutations or varieties of preciosity. According to popular usage, however, précieux means only précieux ridicule, synonymous with artificial or affected. In analyzing the preciosity of Jean Giraudoux from our own point of view, we shall find occasion to examine a great variety of critical opinions.

The explanation of Giraudoux's prose style may be found in two psychological factors: namely, a sort of pictorial thinking and an extraordinary mental agility.² These characteristics account for his so-called preciosity and therefore must be investigated. As he writes, Giraudoux seems to think in images. The world, he declares, is a picture-book:

Bénie soit l'institutrice qui, lorsque j'eus cinq ans, me montrant le plus beau livre d'images et me bâillonnant hermétiquement de sa main, m'apprit à penser sans avoir à pousser des cris, en deux leçons d'une heure ³

Abstractions are meaningless to him without pictorial representation.

Au nom seul du Jour, je le sentais onduler silencieusement entre ses deux nuits

¹ Daniel and Charles Bonnefon, Les écrivains modernes de la France (Fayard, 1927), pp. 567-568.

² Laurence LeSage, "The Cliché Basis for Some of the Metaphors of Jean Giraudoux," MLN, LVI (June, 1941), 436.

³ Juliette au pays des hommes, p. 175.

comme un cygne aux ailes noires Au nom seul du Mois, je le voyais s'échafauder, arc-bouté sur ses Jeudis et ses Dimanches Je voyais les Saisons, les Vertus marcher en groupes, dormir par dortoirs. J'avais pour le monde entier la tendresse et l'indulgence qu'inspirent les allégories ⁴

Images multiply with amazing rapidity under his pen. Giraudoux's mind dances merrily around any subject, playing with words and the signs of things, much to the despair of the plodding reader who is dazzled by the display of pyrotechnics One may feel like crying out with the Cyclops, victim of Ulysses' wit

Holà! . quel est ce langage bizarre, élastique et trompeur, qui me donne l'impression de rouler sur la crête des vagues, puis d'enfoncer, et qui me chavire!⁵

Because the law of gravity has apparently no power over the little air pocket in which this "Fantasio of the new literature" moves, he has been severely reprimanded for his antics, his impenitent and incurable mental puerility. He is charged with being a "jongleur, rhéteur, sophiste."⁶ After reading Siegfried et le Limousin, M. Bidou voices his dismay. "Son esprit, qui est exquis, n'est-il pas las de porter des fruits au goût compliqué, dont la chair est malgré tout un peu filandreuse? Que n'est-il pommier, et ne porte-t-il des pommes, tout simplement!"⁷ M. Cahuet complains: "Il semble que, de son livre, M. Giraudoux aurait pu tirer bien aisément un plus beau livre durable et plutôt une œuvre d'écrivain qu'un jeu de dilettante."⁸ Lucien Dubech apparently suffered from mental indigestion after being served a meal of literary hors d'œuvres: "Toute son œuvre, sans excepter une seule ligne, est faite avec des souvenirs livresques et des figures de rhétorique."⁹ Humbourg suggests that Giraudoux is intoxicated by his muse ¹⁰

Thus endowed with unusual powers of perception and a nimble wit, Giraudoux leads his dazed and complaining readers through a tangled jungle of free association of ideas and images His tidy manuscripts, rarely marred by erasures or cross-outs, reveal a spontaneous poet recording his thought patterns as they take form. Often he begins with a phrase and the rest is embroidery on that theme. Each sentence is born from the preceding Writing, he claims, is never work, but a natural function. His novels lack structure, but possess rather a musical character because of the contrapuntal weaving of ideas:

Jetez-lui un vocable au hasard, et tout aussitôt . . . , par un mécanisme qui ⁴ Ecole des Indifférents, p 39 ⁵ Elpénor, p 25.

⁶ Yves Gandon, Le démon du style (Plon, 1938), p 140

⁷ Henri Bidou, "Parimi les livres," Revue de Paris, XXXIII (October, 1926), 690

⁸ A. Cahuet, "Le grand prix Balzac," L'Illustration, CLX (November 11, 1922), 468.

⁹ Lucien Dubech, Les chefs de file de la jeune génération (Plon-Nourrit, 1925), p 162

¹⁰ Pierre Humbourg, Jean Giraudoux (Marseille Les Cahiers du Sud, 1926).

tient de l'accroissement de la boule de neige roulant sur une pente couverte d'un épais tapis blanc, il vous composera, s'il lui chante, tout un livre Parti d'une idée—ou seulement d'une image, il ne l'abandonnera pas qu'il ne l'ait épuisée dans toutes les nuances qu'elle peut revêtir, avec tous les développements qu'elle lui propose, et en usant des ressources quasi illimitées de son pouvoir d'expression ¹¹

Giraudoux scorns the conventional novelists who, "binocle au nez, s'occupent à assembler en un roman, comme un jeu de patience, mille pensées qu'ils n'ont eues que séparément" ¹² His method is so evident that one is astonished by the statement of Professor Stansbury that Giraudoux is the least spontaneous of writers ¹³ Can we believe with M. Azais also that "M Giraudoux sue, ahanne, se tord pour trouver à chaque ligne une métaphore, une prosopopée, un mythe, une allégorie?" ¹⁴

Begging leave to differ with Professor Stansbury and M. Azais, we must assume that the brilliant bouquets of Giraudoux's imagery arise less from a conscious desire to "épater le bourgeois," than from a spontaneous exuberance:

On voit tout de suite comme l'élasticité indéfinie de son vocabulaire allait faciliter la démarche de Jean Giraudoux engagé sur la voie du style précieux. ¹⁵

Affectation is conspicuously absent. Hence he differs fundamentally from John Donne and the other metaphysical poets whom we are wont to think of as sensuous thinkers. The English poets try either to give a logical frame-work to their poetic effusions or to communicate an idea by a carefully worked out illustrative image. Their imagery illustrates their thoughts, while with Giraudoux the thought and image are, if not identical, at least simultaneous. The same distinction pertains to Giraudoux and the Hôtel de Rambouillet where petits-maitres spoke in riddles to exclude the vulgar. The patiently contrived metaphors of the Guirlande de Julie reveal a distressing lack of inspiration; such is indeed not the case with Giraudoux whose verbal extravagance results from his refusal to suppress the myriads of imagery which spring unbidden to his mind. M. Brasillach warns us not to confuse the preciousness of Giraudoux with the dry art of the seventeenth century:

Et que le mot de préciosité ne nous évoque pas le précieux français: il faut penser à l'Espagne ou à l'Angleterre, à ce luxe d'images intelligentes d'où naît la poésie et qui pare les comédies et les drames de Shakespeare, et toute la Renaissance elizabéthaine, et Caldéron Car ce n'est pas une préciosité sèche, l'art de con-

¹¹ Yves Gandon, op cit, p 139

¹² Ecole des indifférents, p 114

¹³ Milton H Stansbury, French Novelists of Today (Philadelphia University of Pennsylvania Press, 1935), p 21.

¹⁴ Marcel Azais, Le chemin des gardies (Nouvelle librairie nationale, 1926), p 237.

¹⁵ Gandon, op cit, p 139

duire une seule métaphore, le mince charme de l'hôtel de Rambouillet Les images, au contraire, sont abondantes, et celles de la Bible se mêlent sans fausse note à celles de Jean Giraudoux, et l'ensemble est d'une richesse, orientale et flamboyante, comme une dentelle de pierre dans une cathédrale.¹⁶

However, we may note some resemblance to the unrestrained verbal abundance which appeared frequently in French poetry of the sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries—in Marot, in the poets of the Pleiade, in D'Aubigné, in Garnier, in the Malherbe of Les Larmes de Saint Pierre, in Maynard, Théophile, Saint Amant, etc. What seems to be a point of special confusion is struck by M. Brasillach's expression images intelligentes. It is the undeniable intellectual nature of Giraudoux's imagery which has led some critics to label it artificial and affected. Intellectualism, however, is not necessarily incompatible with spontaneity as Mr Middleton Murry points out very convincingly in his discussion of the unselfconsciousness of Shakespeare in the working out of conceits.¹⁷ Giraudoux's misnamed tours de force are executed with much less effort than is generally supposed.

M. René Lalou remarks that Giraudoux's preciosity is only his familiarity, not a bookish fault but a spontaneous tendency.¹⁸ M. Bouvier says it is only "la poésie des simples."¹⁹ Jean Prévost insists that Giraudoux is not précieux, but original.²⁰ Maurice Bourdet is of the same opinion, for he says that literary language is so stuffed with clichés and conventionalities that originality and sincerity may at first be confused with preciosity. He concludes with André Gide: "Certes je ne prétends pas que toute préciosité d'art soit sincère, mais bien que la sincérité profonde exige une matière nouvelle et qui paraît d'abord préciosité."²¹ Giraudoux's own diagnosis leads us still farther away from the idea of affectation. He reproaches French literature for discouraging verbal excesses, "qui correspondent du moins à de vrais défauts ou qualités humaines."²² If by preciosity one means affectation, then the term is incorrectly applied to Giraudoux, for his verbal excesses result not from affectation in language, but on the contrary from a lack of it. Spontaneity is the element which marks Giraudoux's brand of preciosity.

¹⁶ Robert Brasillach, "Le théâtre de Jean Giraudoux, 1932-34," Portraits (Plon, 1935), pp. 123-163.

¹⁷ J. Middleton Murry, Shakespeare (New York: Harcourt, Brace, 1936), pp. 233-234.

¹⁸ René Lalou, "Univers de Jean Giraudoux," Nouvelles littéraires, November 7, 1931, p. 2.

¹⁹ E. Bouvier, Initiation à la littérature d'aujourd'hui (La Renaissance du Livre, 1932), p. 251.

²⁰ J. Prévost, "L'Esprit de Jean Giraudoux," La Nouvelle Revue française, xli (1933), 37-52.

²¹ Maurice Bourdet, Jean Giraudoux (Editions de la Nouvelle Revue critique, 1928), p. 53. ²² "Charles-Louis Philippe," La Nouvelle Revue française, xlix (1937), 538.

Despite the above distinction, one is loath to renounce this convenient word. Since its use is no longer restricted to the short span of years from 1620 to 1660, from the salon of Mme de Rambouillet to the Précieuses ridicules of Molière,²³ but is recognized as an age-old phenomenon which transforms itself according to time and place, one feels justified in applying the word to a contemporary writer. But let us call it the new preciousity to emphasize its gratuitous nature: . . . "et voici s'épanouir, avec la jeune poésie, un nouveau précieux." Verbal improvisation is the avowed technique of most contemporary explorers of new literary forms.

A force de poursuivre des interprétations ambiguës, et des associations curieuses, les écrivains en sont arrivés . . . à ne plus considérer dans le mot que ses capacités d'association, sens et sons, ses possibilités de jeux intellectuels, de symboles et même de calembours.

The contemporary précieux lets "en lui, naître, s'entremêler ou se bousculer des images."²⁴ Giraudoux says, "C'est cette part importante de l'improvisation qui donne de la vie à une oeuvre, et qui donne surtout de la poésie."²⁵ The poètes fantaisistes hold only to chance and fortuity. From Rimbaud and Lautréamont the tradition continues in Apollinaire, André Salmon, Max Jacob, Cocteau, Paul Reverdy, etc. Surrealism has gone beyond Giraudoux to carry improvisation to its highest power. M. A.-M. Petitjean calls him "le plus accompli sans doute de nos chasseurs d'images, mais l'écriture automatique bientôt lui fit concurrence."²⁶ Modern preciousity claims a more serious rôle than it has played in the past. In the hierarchy of literature it has provoked only the indulgent smile which one accords to pêchés mignons. It probably deserves better treatment:

Toute forme d'art est au fond un état d'esprit, c'est-à-dire un jugement de principe. Derrière chaque esthétique il y a l'ensemble d'une philosophie. On a discerné la métaphysique du baroque. Pourquoi ne reconnaîtrait-on pas celle de la préciosité?²⁷

The classicist orders and chooses, believing himself to be following a divine order, but the précieux is content to remain in the confusion and profusion of the world where "les parfums, les couleurs et les sons se répondent," where he may revel in "rapports précieux, ces bagues scintillantes, ces anneaux d'alliance par lesquels le poète consacre les innombrables mariages—même et surtout les plus bizarres—entre tous les êtres et toutes les choses qui composent l'univers."²⁸

²³ Daniel Mornet, "Comment étudier les écrivains ou les ouvrages de troisième ou quatrième ordre," Romanic Review, xxviii (1937), 206.

²⁴ Jean Epstein, quoted from John Charpentier, "Autour du précieux," Mercure de France, ccxxxviii (1932), 286.

²⁵ F. Lefèvre, Une heure avec, 4ième série, p. 117.

²⁶ A.-M. Petitjean, "Electre et Giraudoux," Nouvelle Revue française, xlix (September, 1937), 482.

²⁷ Rousseaux, op. cit., p. 119.

²⁸ Ibid.

Preciosity is not confined exclusively to matters of language. It implies a refinement, a delicacy of sentiment to combat the crude and the ugly. Here Giraudoux fits without any reservation, pleading guilty to "un excessif panthéisme et de la politesse envers la création."

Tous les désastres de la préciosité, mal qui consiste à traiter les objets comme des humains, les humains comme s'ils étaient dieux et vierges, les dieux comme des chats ou des belettes, mal qui provoque, non pas la vie dans les bibliothèques, mais les relations personnelles avec les saisons, les petits animaux . . .²⁹

He deliberately turns his back on the harsh details of the actual world. They have no place in his work. In the shipwreck scene of Elpénor one notices only how much the drowning sailors resemble birds.³⁰ Dead bodies washed ashore arouse in Suzanne only idle curiosity. Of the first she observes that "la lune se levait et le repassait et l'argentait comme un objet de toile."³¹ Giraudoux's characters are never harassed by financial worries and in their love affairs observe the rules of Mlle de Scudéry's carte du tendre. There are no villains. The public felt somewhat shocked by Giraudoux's war books: critics spoke of his "vision pommadée de la guerre,"³² his "guerre en dentelles."³³ Benjamin Crémieux finds that Giraudoux's works give the effect of objects dipped in a golden bath.³⁴ Mozart and Scarlatti come to mind. Instinctively Giraudoux avoids offensive realism: "la préciosité lui était un refuge contre la vulgarité, l'emphase ou la passion."³⁵ He is examining his conscience as he further defines preciosity in whimsical and half-ironic allusions. One will not overlook his thrust at Racine, "purest of French classicists." Suzanne muses:

Etre précieuse, c'est désespérer alors qu'on espère toujours, c'est brûler de plus de feux que l'on n'en alluma, c'est tresser autour des mots révévés une toile avec mille fils et dès qu'un souffle, une pensée l'effleure, c'est le cœur qui s'élance du plus noir de sa cachette, la tue, suce son doux sang. C'est mademoiselle de Montpensier suçant le doux sang du mot amour, du mot amant. C'est mademoiselle de Rambouillet couvrant de sa blanche main tous les mots cruels, et les rendant ensuite, le mot Courroux, le mot Barbare, inoffensifs comme les détectives qui changent le revolver du bandit en un revolver porte-cigares.³⁶

M. Crémieux fears that Giraudoux's world is more "fin" than "solide"—it does not escape preciosity or affectation.³⁷ To those who disapprove of Giraudoux's vision of the world, we may reply with M. Lafue that

²⁹ Juinette au pays des hommes, p. 230 ³⁰ Elpénor, p. 117

³¹ Suzanne et le Pacifique, p. 201 ³² Azaïs, op. cit., p. 232

³³ J. Schlumberger, "Adorable Chlo," La Nouvelle Revue française, xv (November 1, 1920), 785 ³⁴ B. Crémieux, "Aventures de Jérôme Bardini," Ibid., xxxvi (1931), 125

³⁵ P. Lafue, "Bella," La Revue hebdomadaire, xxxv (March 4, 1926), 119

³⁶ Suzanne et le Pacifique, p. 177

³⁷ Crémieux, Vingtième Siècle (La Nouvelle Revue française, 1924), p. 112

preciosity "c'est une jolie machine contre la barbarie. La préciosité est aussi nécessaire à notre époque qu'au moment où elle sévit autrefois, et pour les mêmes raisons"³⁸

Mme de Rambouillet, offended by the coarseness and vulgarity of court, withdrew to her own home where she proceeded to create a purified little world to supplant the one she could no longer endure. In his novels M. Giraudoux has also effected an escape from a world from whose realities he would be free. By weaving around it golden threads he renders the world powerless and inoffensive. "Il divorce avec le réel

Il ne veut plus être qu'un esprit libre, dominant cette nature qui l'écrase, cette société qui l'enserme. Il ne les juge même plus comme le fameux roseau pensant, il les ignore ou les assimile."³⁹ Lyrical succession replaces orderly and logical development in his novels, fancy and anachronism replace verisimilitude and historical veracity. By means of the metaphor he creates a fragile and graceful world of his own liking beyond the bounds of time and space. In the midst of twentieth century sky-scrapers Giraudoux would lead the life of Adam before the knowledge of sin in a Garden of his own creation. Through his imagination and fancy he has complete power to transfigure the world. This fairyland lacks the weight of the real world, and its inhabitants do not know the physical constraint of gravity or moral obligation. Above all there is nothing to inhibit spontaneous action. M. de Miomandre describes it as a world pure and gratuitous, like a child's dream.⁴⁰ There is no more grief in it than in a painting of Watteau.

By far the best picture of Giraudoux's world is presented by himself in the celebrated Prière sur la Tour Eiffel

C'est que je vis encore . . . dans cet intervalle qui sépara la création et le péché originel. J'ai été excepté de la malédiction en bloc. Aucune de mes pensées n'est chargée de culpabilité, de responsabilité, de liberté . . . Je vois les meubles anciens du monde comme Adam les vit, les arbres, les étangs sans tache originelle, et les meubles modernes, téléphone, cinéma, auto, dans leur divinité. Je suis un petit Messie pour les objets et les bêtes minuscules . . . Les quelques modifications que l'on me doit ici-bas sont celles que j'aurai apportées au jardin d'Eve . . . je suis le sourcier de l'Eden! . . .⁴¹

He would fancy himself the prophet of a joyful primitive oasis not condemned by Jehovah. In Judith he sings again of his pagan world, godless and free. Holophernes informs Judith that the spot upon which they stand is one of the few places not infested by gods, one of the few "taches de paradis terrestre." Giraudoux's profound respect for mankind, his sen-

³⁸ Lafue, op. cit., p. 121. ³⁹ Bouvier, op. cit., p. 238

⁴⁰ Fr. de Miomandre, "Essai sur l'art de lire un moderne," Grande Revue, xc, 193-206.

⁴¹ Juliette au pays des hommes, pp. 188-192.

Ce que seul le roi des rois peut se permettre d'être, en cet âge des dieux: un homme enfin de ce monde, du monde. Le premier, si tu veux. Je suis l'ami des jardins à parterres, des maisons bien tenues, de la vaisselle éclatante sur les nappes, de l'esprit et du silence. Je suis le pire ennemi de Dieu. Que fais-tu au milieu des Juifs et de leur exaltation, enfant charmante? Songe à la douceur qu'aurait ta journée, dégagée des terreurs et des prières. Songe au petit déjeuner du matin servi sans promesse d'enfer, au thé de cinq heures sans péché mortel, avec le beau citron et la pince à sucre innocente et étincelante. Songe aux jeunes gens et aux jeunes filles s'étreignant simplement dans les draps frais, et se jetant les oreillers à la tête, quelques talons roses en l'air, sans anges et sans démons voyageurs. Songe à l'homme innocent ⁴²

Mon enfant, ma sœur,
Songe à la douceur
D'aller là-bas vivre ensemble!
Aimer à loisir.

Escape and flight are dominant themes in Giraudoux's novels. The characters must get away from the routine imposed upon them by conventions Siegfried changes nationality; Suzanne goes to a desert island; Juliette leaves her fiancé, Jérôme Bardini forsakes wife and home to join company with the "Kid," a symbol of unfettered liberty Jérôme Bardini is called by Edmond Jaloux "une symphonie de l'évasion."⁴³ The creatures of Jean Giraudoux struggle against any form of control, any crystallization of their personality. Like Gidean heroes, they seek new thirsts rather than to quench old ones Edmée, of Le Choeur des élues, abandons successively her husband and home, then her career, to discover for her personality the atmosphere it requires. Her search is common to all Giraudoux's protagonists who blindly seek their destiny through acts of displacement. "La vraie douleur, c'est l'immobilité."⁴⁴

⁴² Judith, pp. 166–167.

⁴³ Jaloux, "Esprit des livres," Nouvelles littéraires, December 20, 1930, p. 3.

⁴⁴ Marcel Thiébaud, Evasions littéraires (Gallimard, 1935), p. 17.

⁴⁵ Op cit, and Littérature du vingtième siècle (A. Michel, 1938).

abandon their précieux chasteness and agree to settle down in the world of reality with a husband. Unlike those of his contemporaries who strive with tireless historical documentation to maintain in the novel the panoramic proportions of the Comédie humaine or the Rougon-Macquart, Giraudoux contents himself with a more modest rôle. He has chosen to paint the young girl on the threshold of womanhood, a subject far from exhausted in French literature. The fragile beauty of Sylvie and Adrienne appears again in Giraudoux's spring rainbow. M. Rousseaux refers us to the Primavera of Botticelli, which represents for him the lovely troupe of Suzanne, Juliette, Geneviève, Isabelle, Anne, Stéphy, Eglantine, Maléna and Florence. They come to our sight in a carefree intermezzo before they have accepted definitely life, the commonplace destiny which awaits them. They are "jeunes filles en fleurs" who are in love with love, but the monster is near and they must soon succumb to their lovers. The tempo of the twentieth century is a factor, Gériard and Jérôme cannot wait patiently ten years as did Montausier for his Julie. Even though already a matron, Alcmène of Amphitryon 38 bears a close resemblance to her précieux sisters. Disdaining the honor of being Jupiter's mistress, she proposes to be friend and confidante to the bewildered Olympian. Not all readers find Giraudoux's puellae perpetuae so charming as M. Rousseaux. M. A. Rouveyre objects to Giraudoux's anemic little demoiselles and finds Alcmène "une bien ridicule précieuse, une bien sottre pimbêche."⁴⁶

The escape motif is a significant feature of post-war preciosity. Writing in 1930, M. Jaloux pointed out its vogue since 1918 and predicted a new note in literature for the period 1930-45 to take its place.⁴⁷ The thirties failed to bear out his prophecy, and the escape theme persisted until the recent war. Its prevalence is an inevitable reaction against the age of machines and standardization, against world chaos. In 1939 M. Pierre Brodin made the following assertion. "La plupart des jeunes écrivains s'engagent dans des chemins qui les éloignent du monde réel et du temps présent. Romans et poèmes d'évasion prédominent. . . Tous orientent plus ou moins leur art vers la féerie."⁴⁸

The work of Jean Giraudoux is the finest flower of contemporary preciosity. Possessed of a brilliant intelligence and an exquisite culture, he has been able to create for himself and his reader a supra-terrestrial refuge from the ugliness of materialism, mechanization, and world strife. We have examined this preciosity from the two aspects of form and content.

⁴⁶ A. Rouveyre, "Théâtre," Mercure de France, ccxvi (December 15, 1929), 659

⁴⁷ Op. cit., p. 3.

⁴⁸ "Quelques tendances générales de la littérature française contemporaine," French Review, xii (1939), 296

In the first we discovered that his preciosity is not literary affectation but spontaneous verbal play, and that this technique is representative of recent literature. The second aspect of his preciosity regards the world he depicts in his works, a fairyland from which harshness and evil are banished. In conclusion we have mentioned the prevalence of escape literature in the between-wars period.

LAURENCE LESAGE

University of Oregon

ACTS OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

(Continued from PMLA, LVI, 1196, 1395)

I. See Meeting of the Executive Council, PMLA, LVI (June, 1942, 593-594.

II. Under date of June 15 the Advisory Committee recommended the following actions, which were taken in unanimous mail ballot by the Council:

1 Middle English Dictionary Resolved: (1) that the Executive Council accepts the report of the Advisory Board of the Middle English Dictionary, (2) that the Secretary notify the University of Michigan that in view of the recommendations of the Advisory Board the Council cannot give a blanket endorsement to the standards now prevailing in the preparation of the Dictionary, (3) that the Council does not feel that the Modern Language Association should sponsor the work on the Dictionary unless it can be assured of a measure of real control over the editorial policies and procedures.

2. Committee on Research Activities That the annual Budget item of $500 for meetings of this Committee be reduced to $250 per year from 1 October 1942 for the period of the national emergency.

III Under date of September 14 Professor Otis H. Green succeeded on the Committee on Research Activities to Professor Hayward Keniston (resigned).

IV. Under date of October 27 the Council accepted the autumn report of the Committee on Research Activities

PERCY W. LONG, Secretary

NEW DISCUSSION GROUP

(Tuesday, December 29, 11 A.M.-12.30 P.M.)

Comparative Literature VII. Franco-German Literary Relations. Chairman, Henry H. H. Remak, Indiana Univ., Secretary, Maurice Chazin, Queens College. (Advisory and Nominating Com. S. O. Palleske, Ch., Albert Aron, Mary Noss, A. E. Zucker Research and Bibliography Com., Arno Schirokauer, Ch. Joseph Carrière, Dorothea v. H. Davis, Henri Peyre, Lawrence Price, Werner Richter, Ralph Rosenberg, Howard Yarnall, Edwin Zeydel.)

PMLA

PUBLICATIONS OF
THE MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA

Issued Quarterly

VOLUME LVII

SUPPLEMENT

1942

AMERICAN BIBLIOGRAPHY FOR 1942

In the interest of completeness, it is hoped that authors may be willing to send to the compiler of the appropriate section off-prints of articles and notice of pertinent books and monographs.

GENERAL. Millett Henshaw, 221 N Grand Boulevard, St Louis Univ, St Louis, Mo

ENGLISH Albert C Baugh, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa.

AMERICAN Thomas H. Johnson, Lawrenceville, N J.

FRENCH H. Carrington Lancaster, The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md

ITALIAN, SPANISH, and PORTUGUESE Edwin B Williams, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa

GERMANIC. Henry W Nordmeyer, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich

The year of publication is 1942 unless otherwise noted. Italics indicate book titles, quotation marks, articles. Periodicals often cited are referred to by the following abbreviations:

AGR	American-German Review	Lang	Language
AJP	American Journal of Philology	LTLS	(London) Times Literary Suppl
AL	American Literature	MA	Medium Aevum
AnglB	Beiblatt zur Anglia	MDU	Monatshefte für den Unterricht
APS	Acta Philologica Scandinavica	MLN	Modern Language Notes
Archiv	Archiv für das Studium der neueren Sprachen und Literaturen	MLQ	Modern Language Quarterly
		MLR	Modern Language Review
AS	American Speech	MP	Modern Philology
BA	Books Abroad	NEQ	New England Quarterly
BH	Bulletin Hispanique	N&Q	Notes and Queries
CFQ	California Folklore Quarterly	PMLA	Pubs Mod Lang Ass'n of Am.
ELH	Journal of English Literary History	PQ	Philological Quarterly
ES	Englische Studien	RES	Review of English Studies
FQ	French Quarterly	RFH	Revista de filología Hispánica
FR	French Review	RHL	Revue d'Histoire Litt de la France
GQ	Germanic Quarterly	RLC	Revue de Littérature Comparée
GR	German Review	RR	Romanic Review
HFB	Hoosier Folklore Bulletin	SAB	Shakespeare Assoc Bulletin
Hisp	Hispania	SFQ	Southern Folklore Quarterly
HLQ	Huntington Library Quarterly	SP	Studies in Philology
HR	Hispanic Review	SS	Scandinavian Studies
Ital	Italica	TFSB	Tennessee Folklore Soc Bulletin
JA	Journal of Aesthetics	TFSP	Texas Folklore Society Pubs
JAF	Journal of American Folk-Lore	ZRP	Zeitschrift für Roman Philologie
JEGP	Journal of English and German Philology	ZFSL	Zeitschrift für Slavische Sprache und Literatur
JHI	Journal of the History of Ideas

GENERAL SECTION

BY MILLETT HENSHAW AND COLLABORATING SPECIALISTS

Miscellaneous. Studies in the History of Culture. The Disciplines of the Humanities. Menasha, Wis.

Festschrift for Waldo G. Leland. Individual contributions are listed under appropriate sections.

Thomson, S. Harrison. Progress of Medieval and Renaissance Studies in the United States and Canada. Bull. No. 17. Boulder, Colo.

Aesthetics and Literary Criticism. (Contributed by Frank Sullivan)

Alonzo, Amado. "The Stylistic Interpretation of Literary Texts." MLN, LVII 489-495

Baker, J. E. "Philosopher and the 'New Criticism' " Sewanee Review, CLXVII. 167-171.

Black, Max. "Some Objections to Ogden and Richards' Theory of Interpretation " Journal of Philosophy, XXXIX 281-290.

Chapman, E. "Beauty and the War." Journal of Philosophy, XXXIX 493-499
Reprinted JA, No. 6, 61-67.

Clark, G. H. "Plotinus' Theory of Sensation." Philosophical Review, LI 357-382.

Collins, J. "Aristotle's Philosophy of Art and the Beautiful " New Scholasticism, XVI. 257-284.

Dubisch, R. "Mathematical Approach to Aesthetics " School Science and Mathematics, XLI 718-723

Earnest, Ernest. "Poets in Overalls: Skittish Attitude Toward the Machine." Virginia Quarterly Review, XVIII 518-529.

Ferguson, Delancey. "Should Scholars Try to Think?" American Scholar, XI 208-219.

"... our only real function as scholars—elucidation of the literature of the past."

Frederick, E. C. "The Critic and the Cult of Art. Further Observations." RR, XXXIII. 385-387.

Garvin, L. "Pleasure Theory in Ethics and Esthetics " Journal of Philosophy, XXXIX. 57-63.

Gatz, F. M. "The Object of Aesthetics." JA, No. 4, 33-57.

Godolphin, F. R. B. "The Author of the περὶ ὅψους." AJP, LXIII 83-86.

Hamm, V. M. "Form in Literature " Thought, XVII 255-269.

Hart, C. A. "The Place of Aesthetics in Philosophy." JA, No. 6, 3-11

Holmes, H. W. "Standards of Taste in a Democratic Civilization." National Educational Association Proceedings, 1941 365-368.

Hornstein, Lillian H. See ENGLISH, III.

Hotson, Leshe. "Literary Serendipity." ELH, IX. 79-94.

Jenkins, Iredell. "Imitation and Expression in Art." JA, No. 5, 42-52.

Lebowitz, M. "Concerning Realism in Literature." Journal of Philosophy, XXXIX 356-359.

Lundholm, Helge. The Aesthetic Sentiment. Cambridge, Mass., 1941.

Mumford, L., and Spingarn, J. E. "Politics and the Poet." Atlantic Monthly, CLXX 73-78

Nolte, F. O. "Imitation as an Aesthetic Norm." In Studies in Honor of Frederick W Shipley, 289-301 St Louis, Mo

Peters, H. N. "The Experimental Study of Aesthetic Judgments" Psychological Bulletin, XXXIX. 273-305

Pollock, T. C. The Nature of Literature. Its Relations to Science, Language, and Human Experience Princeton, N.J.

Pottle, F. A. "Erudition vs Sensibility." Catholic World, CLIV 611-612.

Ransome, J. C. The New Criticism Norfolk, Conn, 1941

Read, S. E. (ed.) Documents of Eighteenth Century Taste Chicago, Ill

Rieser, M. "The Symbolic Function of Aesthetic Terms" JA, No 4, 58-72

Roellinger, F. X. "Two Theories of Poetry as Knowledge." Southern Review, VII 690-705.

Saul, G. B. "The Elusive Stallion: Notes on Poetry" News Letter of the College English Association, IV No 5

Schoen, Max "Creative Experience in Science and Art" JA, No 4, 22-32.

Sender, R. J. "On a Really Austere Aesthetic" Books Abroad, XVI. 119-123.

Spencer, T. "The Central Problem in Literary Criticism" College English, IV 159-163.

Spitzer, Leo "A New Program for the Teaching of Literary History" AJP, LXIII, 308-319.

Stauffer, D. A. "Coteries and Criticism." Virginia Quarterly Review, XVIII. 293-299.

Sutchffe, E. G. "Recreative Criticism." College English, III, 633-642.

Van Doren, M. "Good Critics, Rare and Common" Nation, CLIV. 95-96.

Venturi, Lionello. Art Criticism Now. Baltimore, Md, 1941.

Venturi, L., and Smith, J. "On Esthetic Intuition." Journal of Philosophy, XXXIX. 273-276.

Wellek, R. "Mode of Existence of a Literary Work of Art" Southern Review, VII 735-754.

Winn, Ralph B. "The Beauty of Nature and Art." JA, No 5, 3-13

Wright, R. E. Critique of Teaching Literary Forms. Philadelphia, Pa, 1941

Bibliographical. Cattell, Jaques. Directory of American Scholars: a Bibliographical Directory. Lancaster, Pa.

Ireland, N. O. An Index to Indexes: A Subject Bibliography to Published Indexes. Boston.

Moore, Ernest R. "Romance Languages and Literatures." American Yearbook, 1942. 889-896.

The year's work of 1941 by American scholars

Medieval Latin Language and Literature. Choquette, I. "Voluntas, Affectio and Potestas in the Liber De Voluntate of St. Anselm." Mediaeval Studies, IV. 61-81.

Ewald, Sister M. L. Ovid in the Contra Orationem Symmachii of Prudentius. Cath. Univ. diss. Washington, D. C.

Hammer, J. "Some Additional Manuscripts of Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia Regum Britanniae" MLQ, III 235-242.

Holmes, U. T., Jr. "Ludos scenicos in Giraldu" MLN, LVII 188-189

Ives, S. A. "A Rhymed Latin Poem on the Seven Arts" Speculum, XVII 416-417.

Krappe, A. H. "A Persian Myth in the Alethia of Claudius Marius Victor." Speculum, XVII. 255-260.

La Piana, George "A Note on Chronology in the Letters of St Boniface" Speculum, XVII 270-272

McGinty, M. E. (tr) Fulcher of Chartres Chronicle of the First Crusade Philadelphia, 1941

Meyerhoff, H. "On the Platonism of St Augustine's Quaestio de Ideis" The New Scholasticism, XVI 16-45

Quaesten, J. "A Pythagorean Idea in Jerome" AJP, LXIII 207-215

Riedl, C. C. Robert Grosseteste On Light (De Luce). Milwaukee, Wis

Roche, W. J. "Measure, Number, and Weight in Saint Augustine" New Scholasticism, xv (1941) 350-376

Thorndike, L., and Kibre, P. "More Incipits of Mediaeval Scientific Writings in Latin." Speculum, XVII. 342-366.

Medieval Literature. (General and Comparative) Aiken, P. See ENGLISH, VI, s.v CHAUCER

Battenwieser, Hilda. "Popular Authors of the Middle Ages" Speculum, XVII. 50-55.

Coffman, G. R. "Correction The Miracle Play: Notes and Queries" PQ, XXI. 249-250

Dilts, D. A. "John Gower and the De Genealogia Deorum." MLN, lvi 23-25

Durand, D. B. "Magic and Experimental Science: The Achievement of Lynn Thorndike." Isis, XXXIII. 691-712.

Flahiff, G. B. "The Censorship of Books in the Twelfth Century" Mediaeval Studies, iv. 1-22.

Ives, S. A. "Corrigenda and Addenda to the Descriptions of the Plimpton Manuscripts as Recorded in the Re Ricci Census." Speculum, XVII. 33-49.

Kantorowicz, E. H. "Plato in the Middle Ages." Philosophical Review, LI 312-323.

McKeon, Richard. "Rhetoric in the Middle Ages." Speculum, XVII. 1-32.

Mommsen, T. E. "Petrarch's Conception of the 'Dark Ages'." Speculum, XVII. 226-242.

Muckle, J. T. "Greek Works Translated Directly into Latin before 1350" Mediaeval Studies, iv. 33-42.

O'Connor, Sister Mary Catherine. The Art of Dying Well: the Development of the "Ars moriendi". N. Y. (Columbia Univ. Stud. in Eng. & Compar. Lit. No. 156).

O'Donnell, J. R. "The Syncategoremata of William Sherwood." Mediaeval Studies, III (1941). 46-93.

Rand, E. K. "A Romantic Approach to the Middle Ages." Mediaeval Studies, III (1941). 1-14,

- See FRENCH, II, s v. Roman de la Rose
- Scollard, R. J. "A List of Photographic Reproductions of Mediaeval Manuscripts in the Library of the Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies" Mediaeval Studies, iv 126-138
- Sanderlin, George See ENGLISH, vi, s v Usk.
- Experimental Phonetics (Contributed by S. N. Treviño)
- Adams, H. M. "Magnetic Tape Voice Recording" Quarterly Jour. of Speech, xxvii (1941). 376-382
- Results obtained from recorders sent by the Committee on Scientific Aids to Learning.
- Bell Telephone Laboratories' High Speed Vocal Cords Film
- Available on short loan to educational groups
- Black, J. W. "A Study of Voice Merit." Quarterly Jour. of Speech, xxviii 67-74
- Carhart, R. "Some Aspects of Model Larynx Function" Jour. of Acoustical Society, xiv 36-40
- Ehason, N. "On Syllable Division in Phonemics" Lang, xviii 144-147.
- "Two Notes on Vowel and Consonant Quantity" AS, xvii 166-168.
- Position alone has an unmistakable influence on quantity
- Emsley, B. "Talking Dictionaries." Quarterly Jour. of Speech, xxvii (1941). 275-281.
- Farnsworth, D. W. "Radiation Pattern in the Human Voice" Bell Laboratories Record, xx 298-303
- Fletcher, H. "Hearing, the Determining Factor for High-Fidelity Transmission" Proc Inst Radio Eng, xxx. 266-277.
- Hall, J. S. The Phonetics of the Great Smoky Mountain Speech. AS Reprints and Monographs No 4 New York.
- Haugen, E., and Twaddell, W. F. "Facts and Phonemics." Lang, xviii 228-237.
- Criticism of Trager and Bloch's method of phonemic analysis
- Heffner, R-M. S. "Notes on the Length of Vowels (iv)" AS, xvi (1941). 204-207.
- "Notes on the Length of Vowels (v)" AS, xvii. 42-48.
- Holinger, P. H., and Merideth, H. W. "Simplified Apparatus for Laryngeal Cinematography." Annals of Otology, Rhinology and Laryngology, li 215-219
- Hudgins, C. V., and Numbers, F. C. "An Investigation of the Intelligibility of the Speech of the Deaf." Genetic Psych. Monographs, xxv. 289-392.
- Hultzén, L. S. "Apparatus for Demonstrating Nasality." Jour. of Speech Disorders, vii. 5-6.
- Lewis, D. "Pitch and the Missing Fundamental" Jour. of Acoustical Society, xiii (1941). 84.
- "Reply to Gundlach and Dice" Jour. of Experimental Psych., xxix (1941). 174-176.
- Loveday, L. D. "The Treatment of 'Mute E' in French." Mod Langs., xxiii. 131-134.
- Malone, K. "Syllabic Consonants in English." MLQ, iii. 5-8.

McGehee, Frances. "A Psychological Study of Voice Recognition" Psych Bulletin, xxxviii (1941) 696

Moses, P. J. "Theories Regarding the Relation of Constitution and Character through the Voice" Psych Bulletin, xxxviii (1941) 746

Navarro Tomás, T. "Rasgos esenciales de las vocales castellanas" PQ, xxi 8-16

Pepinsky, A. "The Laryngeal Ventricle Considered as an Acoustic Filter" Jour of Acoustical Society, xiv. 32-35

Pressman, J. J. "Physiology of the Vocal Cords in Phonation and Respiration" Archives of Otolaryngology, xxxviii 355-398

Sebeok, T. A. "Analysis of the Vocalic System of a Given Language Illustrated by Hungarian." Quarterly Jour of Speech, xxviii 449-452

Stevens, S. S., Morgan, C. T., and Volkmann, J. "Theory of the Neutral Quantum in the Discrimination of Loudness and Pitch" American Jour of Psych, liv (1941) 315-335

Thomas, C. K. "Pronunciation in Downstate New York (II)" AS, xvii 149-156.

Trager, G. L. "The Phonemic Treatment of Semi-vowels" Lang, xviii 220-223

——— "The Phoneme 'T'. A Study in Theory and Method" AS, xvii 144-148.

Varney, J. "Programme d'enseignement d'un cours de phonétique." FR, xv. 239-243, 330-335, 429-434, 511-517.

Linguistics. Bloomfield, L. "Philosophical Aspects of Language." In Studies in the History of Culture, pp 173-177.

Carnap, R. Introduction to Semantics Cambridge, Mass.

Hahn, E. A. "The Indefinite-Relative-Interrogative Stem sem-sm-smo-." Lang, xviii 83-116.

Hatcher, A. G. Reflexive Verbs: Latin, Old French, Modern French. Baltimore, Md.

Hockett, C. F. "A System of Descriptive Phonology." Lang, xviii 3-21.

Malone, Kemp. "Some Linguistic Studies of 1939 and 1940" MLN, lvii 123-148

Scherer, P. Germanic-Balto-Slavic Etyma. Language dissertation No. 32. Baltimore, Md., 1941.

Schlauch, M. The Gift of Tongues. N. Y.

Spitzer, Leo. "Feminización del neutro (Rumano oasele, Italiano le ossa, Ant Francés ces brace, español las vísceras)." Revista de Filología Hispánica, iii 339-371.

Trager, G. L. "The Phonemic Treatment of Semivowels." Lang, xviii. 220-223.

Voegelin, C. F. "Bibliography of American Indian Linguistics 1938-41." Lang, xviii 133-139.

General Romance. Bonfante, G. "The Romance Desiderative se." PMLA, lvii. 930-950.

Gray, L. H. "Six Romance Etymologies." RR, xxxiii. 157-163.

Rice, C. C. "Romance Etymologies" Lang, xviii 39-40.

Arthurian Cycle. Bang, C. K. "Emotions and Attitudes in Cretien de Troyes' Erec et Enide and Hartmann von Aue's Erec der Wunderaere" PMLA, lvii. 297-326

Blenner-Hassett, R. "Geoffrey of Monmouth's Mons Agned and Castellum Puellarum" Speculum, xvii. 250-254

——— "Gernemuße. A Place-Name Puzzle in Lawman's Brut" MLN, lvii 179-181.

Hammer, J. See MEDIEVAL LATIN LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE, above

Nitze, W. A. "Who Was the Fisher King a Note on Haheutics" RR, xxxiii 97-104

Parry, J. J. "A Bibliography of Critical Arthurian Literature for the Year 1941" MLQ, iii 307-314

Powell, J. D. Position of the Subject Pronoun in the Perlesvaus, the Queste del Saint Graal, and the Conquête de Constantinople. Chicago U diss Chicago, Ill

Celtic Languages and Literatures. Holmes, U. T., Jr. "A Welsh Motif in Marie's Gurgemar" SP, xxxix 11-14.

Hull, V. "The Future First Singular of Old Irish do d'iat" Lang, xvii. 140 f.

——— "The Quarrel between Finn and Oisín" MLN, lvii 434-436

Hull, V., and Taylor, A. A Collection of Welsh Riddles. (Univ California Publications in Mod Phil, Vol. 26.) Berkeley and Los Angeles, Calif.

Jackson, K. "The Adventure of Laeghaire MacCrimhthainn" Speculum, xvii. 377-389.

Krappe, A. "The Sovereignty of Erin." AJP, lxiii 444-454.

Travis, J. "A Druidic Prophecy, the First Irish Satire, and a Poem to Raise Blisters." PMLA, lvii 909-915.

——— "The Relations between Early Celtic and Early Germanic Alliteration" GR, xvii 99-104.

Slavonic and East European (Contributed by Mrs. N Strelsky.) I SLAVONIC MISCELLANEOUS. Lednicki, Waclaw A. "Mickiewicz, Dostoevsky, and Blok" Summary of lecture, May 14, 1942. Bulletin of the Polish Institute of Arts and Sciences in America, i. 74-76.

——— "Alfred de Vigny et les Slaves" (Summary.) Bulletin of the Polish Institute of Arts and Sciences in America, i. 111-117.

Manning, Clarence A. "Slavonic Studies in the U. S." Slavonic Monthly, i. 6-7.

Czecho-Slovak. Coleman, Arthur Prudden. "George of Podebrad's League of Nations." Slavonic Monthly, i. 12, 22.

——— "La Cultura Eslava." Filosofia y Letras, v. 93-108; vi 237-250, vii.

——— "The Lithuanian-White Russian Folk of the Upper Niemen." Journal of Central European Affairs, i. 399-416.

MacCracken, Henry Noble. "John Amos Comenius." Slavonic Monthly, i. 2-5, 13.

Odložilik, Otokar. Jan A. Komenský (Comenius). Czechoslovak National Council of America, Chicago.

——— "Czechoslovak Writers Fight On " Bibliography. Books Abroad, xvi 380-384.

Slabey, Andrew "A Great Slav Educator." Slavonic Monthly, i 14, 21

Polish. "Joseph Conrad Korzeniowski." Slavonic Monthly, i 10-11

Kierst, W., and O. Collier. A New Pronouncing English-Polish and Polish English Dictionary. David MacKay, Philadelphia.

Kirkconnell, Watson. "Polish Literature." Poles in Canada 1942

Krndl, Manfred. "Polish Literature Abroad " Books Abroad, xvi 373-377

Wittlin, Joseph "Joseph Wittlin " Books Abroad, xvi. 3-8

Russian. A(ldanov), M(ark) "D. S. Merezhkovsky," Novyi Zhurnal, ii 368-373.

Alexandrova, V. A. "Problema svobody v sovetskoi literature " (Problems of Freedom in Soviet Literature) Novyi Zhurnal, ii 325-338

——— "Mikhail Zoshchenko." Novosele, No 3, April, 39-49

——— "Sovetskii pisatel na voine." (The Soviet Writer in War) Novosele No 5, June-July, 50-56.

Altschuler, I "Vospominaniya o Tolstom " (Recollections of Tolstoy) Novyi Zhurnal, ii. 339-359

Astrov, V. "Dostoevsky on Edgar Allan Poe." American Literature, xiv 70-74.

——— "Hawthorne and Dostoevsky as Explorers of the Human Conscience " Bibliography. New England Quarterly, xv. 296-319

Beardsley, Monroe C. "Dostoevsky's Metaphor of the 'Underground' " Journal of the History of Ideas, iii. 265-290.

Brewster, P. G. "Jurgen and Figures of Earth and the Russian Skazki." Bibliography. American Literature, xiii 305-319

Dana, H. W. L. "Afinogenov Soviet Hero Playwright." Theatre Arts, xxvi 168-176.

Heifetz, A. (compiler) Lermontov in English Bibliography. New York Public Library.

Ipatov, V. N. "Vospominaniya o M. Gorkom." (Recollections of Gorky) Novyi Zhurnal, i 305-311.

Iswolsky, Helen. "Twenty-five Years of Russian Émigré Literature." Russian Review, i 61-73.

——— "War and Soviet Literature." Commonweal, xxxvii. 248-251.

Kain, Richard M. "The Plight of the Intelligentsia in the Soviet Novel." Russian Review, ii. 70-79.

Kaun, Alexander. "Russian Poetic Trends." Soviet Literature, Art, and Music. International Anthology, London, 21-24.

——— "Turgenev in England and America." JEGP, xli. 112-115.

(Kaun) "Gorky on Literature." Books Abroad, xvi. 395-397.

Lednicki, Wacław A. "Polskaya poema Bloka." (A Polish Poem of Blok's.) Novyi Zhurnal, ii. 309-324; iii. 260-287.

Manning, Clarence A. "Alyosha Valkovsky and Prince Myshkin." MLN, LVII. 182-185.

——— "Khomayakov and the Orthodox Church." Review of Religion, vi. 169-178.

——— "The Aeneid of Kotlyarevsky." Classical Weekly, LVIII 182-185.

Martianov, N. N. (ed) Books Available in English by Russians and on Russia Published in the United States. 4th ed 1326 Madison Avenue, New York.

Miliukoff, P N Outlines of Russian Culture Ed by Michael Karpovich. Tr by Valentine Ughet and Eleanor Davis Part I Religion and the Church Part II. Literature Part III Architecture, Painting, and Music. University of Pennsylvania Press, Philadelphia

Mohrenschildt, Dimitri von "Bibliography of Books in English on Russian Literature 1917-1942 (Literary History, Biography, and Criticism) " Russian Review, II 122-128

Mory, Mary M. "Russian Bylini and American Paul Bunyan Tales " Slavonic Monthly, I 16-18.

Polyakov-Litovtsev, S. "Russkii geni." (Russian Genius) Novosele, No. 5, July, 57-61

Sandomirsky, Vera. "Selvinsky's 'Knight John'." Books Abroad, xvi. 12-16.

Segal, Louis (ed) New Complete Russian-English Dictionary (New orthography.) Stechert, New York

Slochow, H. "Fear, Tragedy, and Humor in Soviet Literature " Books Abroad, xvi 246-251.

Strelesky, Nikander "Bibliography of Books and Articles on Russia Published in 1941 " Russian Review, I. 116-123.

Titus, Laura E. "Turgenev's Irina " Slavia, xvi 149-154.

Tyrokh, I I. Karpaty i Slavyane. Predanie. (The Carpathians and the Slavs. Legends) Izдание Obshchestva Revnitel' Russkoi Stariny, New York, 1941

Yakobson, Roman "Neizvestnye stikhi Mayakovskovo " (Unknown Poems by Mayakovsky) Novosele, No. 2, March, 57-62.

Yarmolinsky, Avrahm. "Maxim Gorky." American Scholar, II 89-98.

Zamyatin, E "O Gorkom " Novosele, No 1, February, 39-49

Zenzinov, V "I. A. Bunin " Novyi Zhurnal, III, 288-304.

——— "Vstrechi s L. N Tolstym " (Meeting with L. N Tolstoy.) Novosele, No. 7, September-October, 44-49.

Zetlin, M. "D. S. Merezhkovsky." Novosele, No 2, March, 48-56.

Zheleznov, M. "Amerikanski poety " (American Poets.) Novosele, No. 3, April, 56-59

Ukrainian. Yakobson, Sergus, and Francis J Whitfield Selected List of Books on the Ukraine Published in English, French, German, and Italian Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.

Yugoslav. Bartok, Bela. "Parry Collection of Yugoslav Folk Music." The heroic ballads, their transcription and preservation. New York Times, June 28, 1942.

Klančar, A J. "The Dramatic Literature of Yugoslavia." Poet Lore, XLVIII. 305-310.

II. EAST EUROPEAN Albanian. Klančar, A. J. "Modern Albanian Literature" Books Abroad, xvi, 20-23

Finnish. "Finland in Recent Swedish Books" American Scandinavian Review, xxix, 144-146, 1941.

Kepke, J. "Finnish Declensional e-stems" Lang xvii, 139-140, 1941.

Hungarian. Gergely, L. H. "Joseph Remenyi, Immigrant Writer" Books Abroad, xvi, 282-283

Lengyel, Cornel "Ady: a Hungarian Genius" Poet Lore, XLVIII, 238-243

Remenyi, Joseph. "Hugo V. Ignatus, Refugee Hungarian Poet and Critic" Books Abroad, xvi, 393-394

Jonaitis, D. "Lithuanian folk-song—the daina. its influence on the survival of a denationalized people, with translations of: High on the hill and high in the barn, Whispering together so, Storm, Peony, O the caroling, Two loves; Dry pine, Two sisters" Poet Lore, XLVII, 322-324, 1941.

Senn, A. The Lithuanian Language Chicago.

Vaiciulaitis, Antanas Outline History of Lithuanian Literature Lithuanian Cultural Institute, Chicago.

Turkish. Kahane, Henry and Renée "Turkish Nautical Terms of Italian Origin" Journal of the American Oriental Society, LXII, 238-261

Folklore (Contributed by Wayland D. Hand)

Aberle, D. F. "Mythology of the Navaho Gamd Stick Dice" JAFLL, LV, 144-154.

Adams, J. T. Death in the Dark: A Collection of Factual Ballads of American Mine Disasters Big Laurel, Va., 1941

Alderson W. "On the Wobbly 'Casey Jones' and Other Songs." CFQ, I, 373-376.

Anderson, Geneva "Additional English and Scottish Ballads Found in East Tennessee." TSEB, VIII, 59-78

Antle, H. R. "The Legend of Abuska." Chronicles of Oklahoma, xx, 255-256.

Aurand, A. M. Quant Idioms and Expressions of the Pennsylvania Germans Harrisburg, Pa., 1941.

——— Popular Home Remedies and Superstitions of the Pennsylvania Germans Harrisburg, Pa., 1941.

Barbeau, M. Backgrounds in Canadian Art (Royal Society of Canada Transactions, xxxv, Sec. 2, pp. 29-39) 1941.

——— "Voyageur Songs." The Beaver, June 1942, 15-19.

Baughman, E. W. "Bobby Hayes, Quarry Worker." HFB, I, 75-77.

Bayard, S. L. "Ballad Tunes and the Hustvedt Indexing Method" JAFLL, LV, 248-254.

Beardsley, R. K., and Hankey, Rosalie "The Vanishing Hitchhiker." CFQ, I, 303-335.

Beckoff, S. "Songs of Occupations: Poetry for the Vocational High School." English Journal, xxxi, 664-668.

Beckwith, Martha W. "A Reply to the Review of Hawaiian Mythology." JAFLL, LV, 254-256.

- Bellaire, J. I. "Michigan's Lumberjacks" Michigan History Magazine, xxvi. 173-187.
- Boggs, R. S. "Folklore Americas: Biographic Sketches of Members to 1942." Folklore of the (de las das) Americas, II. 1-14.
- "Folklore Bibliography for 1941." SFQ, vi. 11-68.
- "Folklore Democratico y Cultura Aristocratica." Folklore of the (de las) Americas, II. 17-20.
- "Some South American Folklorists" SFQ, vi. 107-119.
- Bronson, B. H. "Professor Child's Ballad Tunes." CFQ, I. 185-200
- "Samuel Hall's Family Tree" CFQ, I, 47-64.
- Brown, C. E. Birchbark Tales (Wisconsin Folklore Society). Madison, Wis 1941.
- Flapjacks from Paul Bunyan's Cook Shanty (Wisconsin Folklore Society) Madison, Wis 1941.
- Sea Serpents: Wisconsin Occurrences of these Monsters. (Wisconsin Folklore Society.) Madison, Wis.
- Browne, Barbara, E. "The Lore of the Gremlins" Christian Science Monitor. Mag Sec. Sept. 19. P 4
- Burgess, L. Hallowe'en New York, 1941.
- Burt, W. P. "Back Stage with a Medicine Show Fifty Years Ago." Colorado Magazine, xix. 127-135.
- Campa, A. L. Los Comanches: A New Mexican Folk Drama. (University of New Mexico Bulletin Language Series, VII, No 1). Albuquerque.
- Carmer, C. L. America Sings: Stories and Songs of our Country's Growing. New York
- Songs of the Rivers of America New York
- Catalogue of Phonographic Records: Selected Title from the Archive of American Folk Song* Washington, D C
- Chase, G. D. Sea Terms Come Ashore (University of Maine Studies, Second Series, No. 96) Orono, Maine.
- Chase, G. Bibliography of Latin-American Folk Music (Library of Congress, Division of Music) Washington. [mimeographed.]
- Check-List of Recorded Songs in the English Language in the Archive of American Folk Song to July, 1940* (Library of Congress, Music Division) Washington. 3 vols [mimeographed]
- Chittick, V. L. O. Ring-Tailed Roarers: Tall Tales of the American Frontier, 830-1860. Caldwell, Idaho, 1941.
- Chrétien, C. D. "Boontling" CFQ, I. 96-97.
- Claudel, C. "Creole Folk, Tales." Southern Literary Messenger, iv. 7-13.
- , and Carrière, J. M. "Snow Bella. A Tale from the French Folklore of Louisiana" SFQ, vi. 153-162.
- Clothier, Agnes E. "Two Negro Spirituals from Georgia" JAFI, LV. 98.
- Cody, Bertha P. "Yurok Fish-Dame Dance." The Masterkey, xvi. 81-86.
- Cole, W. E. "Some Contributions of Folklore Studies to Social Planning." FSB, VIII. 2-4.
- "Conference on the Character and State of Studies in Folklore." JAFI, LV.

175 [Sponsored by American Council of Learned Societies, Washington, D C , April 11-12]

Courlander, H. "Musical Instruments of Cuba " Musical Quarterly, xxviii 227-240.

——— "Profane Songs of the Haitian People." Journal of Negro History, xxvii. 320-344.

Cowell, S R. "The Recording of Folk Music in California " CFQ, i 7-23

Cox, J. H. "Singing Games " SFQ, vi 183-261

Cronin, G. "John Mirk on Bonfires, Elephants and Dragons " MLN, lviii. 113-116.

Davidson, D. S. "Fifty-third Annual Meeting of the American Folklore Society " JAF, lv 94-95.

Davidson, L J "Colorado Folklore " Colorado Magazine, xviii (1941) 1-13.

——— "Westernisms " AS, xvii 71-73

Davis, E B "Paul Bunyan Talk " AS , xvii 217-225

Deutsch, L Treasury of the World's Finest Folk Song New York

Dobie, J. F. "Javelin Lore and Hunting " Southwest Review, xxvii 304-319.

Doering, J F "Donald Monroe, A Canadian Version of a Scottish Folksong " JAF, lv. 170-174.

———, and Doering, Eileen E "Some Western Ontario Folk Beliefs and Practices " JAF, liv (1941) 197.

Dolph, E. A. Sound Off: Soldier Songs from the Revolution to World War II, New York

Donahue, June "Rural Arkansas Revives its Folkways " Recreation, xxxv. 667-669, 692.

Dorson, R M "Davy Crockett and the Heroic Age " SFQ, vi. 95-102

——— "America's Comic Demigods." American Scholar, x (1941) 389-401.

Dunne, P. M. "The Padre of the Magic Shoes." Mid-America—An Historical Review, xxiv. 272-285.

Eckstorm, Fannie H. Indian Place-Names of the Penobscot Valley and the Maine Coast (University of Maine Studies, Second Series, No. 55) Orono, Maine, 1941.

Edmunds, P. W. Land of Sand. Richmond, Va., 1941.

North Carolina legends.

Emrich, Duncan. "A Spanish Version of 'Oh Susannah' " CFQ, i. 202.

——— Casey Jones and Other Ballads of the Mining West. Denver

——— "Casey Jones, Union Scab " CFQ, i 292-293.

——— "The Legend of Avicenna." Moslem World, xxxii. 298-323.

——— "Mining Songs." SFQ, vi 103-106

——— "Songs of the Western Miners." CFQ, i. 213-232.

Earle, H E. "An Old Time Collector: Reminiscences of Charles F. Lummis." CFQ, i. 179-183.

Ellis, Hilda R. "The Hoard of the Nibelungs." MLR, xxxvii. 466-479.

Ellis, Karry. Magic Metal: "Romantic Traditions of Bells " Étude, lx 442, 488.

Espinosa, A. M. An Extraordinary Example of Spanish Ballad Tradition in New Mexico (Stanford Studies in Language and Literature) Pp 28-34

——— "Miscellaneous Materials from the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico" PQ, xxi 121-127

Foster, T. G. "Place Names of Ingham County [Michigan]" Michigan History Magazine, xxvi 480-517

Fife, A. E. "Popular Legends of the Mormons" CFQ, i 105-125

Fitton, Mary L. "College Folklore" HFB, i 40

Frauchiger, F. "The Swiss Kuhreihen" JAFLL, liv (1941) 121-131.

Gagnou, E. Chansons Populaires du Canada Montreal, 1941

Gallacher, S. A. "Stuff a Cold and Starve a Fever" Bulletin of the History of Medicine, xi 576-581

Gardner, Emelyn E. et al. "Progress Report of Committee of the Popular Literature Section of the Modern Language Association on Folklore of Non-English Speaking Groups" JAFLL, lv 100-101, SFQ, vi 170-172.

Gayton, A. H. "English Ballads and Indian Myths" JAFLL, lv 121-125

Gordon, P. "The Music of the Ballads" SFQ, vi. 143-148

Grant, Rena V. "The Localized Vocabulary of California Verse" CFQ, i 253-290.

Gremlins "It's Them" Time, xl (Sept 14) 37-38 See also: Time, Sept 28, pp. 10-11; Oct 5, pp 10-11, Newsweek, Sept 7, p 24, Colliers, Oct. 31, pp 30, 32-33, Cosmopolitan, Dec p. 37 Cf. Browne above and Moora below

Haber, T. B. "The Influence of the Ballad in Housman's Poetry." SP xxxix 118-129

Halpert, H. "The Cante Fable in New Jersey" JAFLL, lv 133-143.

———, and Niles, J. J. "Family Tales of a Kentuckian" HFB, i 61-71.

———, Mitchell, C. B., and Dickason, D. H. "Folktales from Indiana University Students" HFB, i 85-97

——— "Indiana Folktales" HFB, i 3-34.

——— "Indiana Storyteller" HFB, i. 43-61

——— "A Michigan Lumberjack Song" HFB, i 81-84.

——— "'Oregon' Smith, an Indiana Folk Hero" SFQ, vi 163-168.

Hand, W. D. "California Miners' Folklore, I, Above Ground, II, Below Ground" CFQ, i 24-46, 127-153

——— A Dictionary of Words and Idioms Associated with Judas Iscariot. (University of California Publications in Modern Philology, xxiv, No 3, pp. 289-356). Berkeley.

——— "Folklore from Utah's Silver Mining Camps." JAFLL, liv (1941) 132-161.

——— "The Three Nephites" American Notes and Queries, ii 56-57.

Haney, Gladys J. "Paul Bunyan Twenty-five Years After." JAFLL, lv. 155-168.

Hankey, Rosalie. "California Ghosts" CFQ, i 155-177.

Hauck, Mary B. B. "The Dauphin County [Pennsylvania] Folk Festival." Recreation, xxxvi 39, 48.

- Hetherington, Sue. "Lost Channels." Missouri Historical Review, xxxvi 447-458 [river songs]
- Holmes, U T "Annual Meeting of the Hoosier Folklore Society." HFB, i 98
How They Began—The Story of North Carolina County, Town, and Other Place Names. (Writer's Program, North Carolina) New York, 1941
- Humphrey, N. B. "The Mock Battle Greeting" JAF, liv (1941) 186-190.
- Hunter, E R. "My Grandfather's Speech" TFSB, viii 5-22
- James, Thelma G "Report on the Indiana University Folklore Institute" JAF, lv 247-248, also reported in SFQ, vi. 173-175.
- Jansen, W. H "Tall Tales from a Steel Town" HFB, i 41-42, 78-81
- Jennings, A "The Last of the Troubadours" Southern Literary Messenger, iv. 312-315.
- Jente, R "A Review of Proverb Literature since 1920" (Corona Studies in Celebration of the Eightieth Birthday of Samuel Singer) Pp 23-44 Durham, N. C 1941
- Johnson, Jean B. "The Huapango: A Mexican Song Contest" CFQ, i 233-244.
- Jones, L C "Henry Backus, the Saugerties Bard" New York History, xxiii 139-148.
- "Folklore as a Living Force" People's Festival in a People's World: Thrd Annual Folk Festival of the Catskills, 1942 Long Island City, N. Y Pp [1-4]
- Jordan, P D , and Kessler, Lillian. Songs of Yesterday, New York, 1941
- Kennedy, P. "Minstrels of the Kentucky Hills" Travel, lxxix. 14-15.
- Kennedy, Stetson. "Cantates Callejeros y la Cucaracha" SFQ, vi 149-151.
- Palmetto Country. (American Folkways) New York
- Knedler, J W. "The Gurl Without Hands Latin-American Variants" HR, x. 314-324
- Knott, Sarah G. "Folk Lore in Our Day" Recreation, xxxvi 23-26
- Krappe, A H. "Amadas et Ydoine" MLR, xxxvii 367-371.
- "Guiding Animals" JAF, lv 228-246.
- "The Land of Darkness" PQ, xxi 334-346
- "Parallels and Analogues to the Death of Qrvar Odd" SS, xvii 20-35.
- "The Dog King" SS, xvii 148-153
- "A Persian Myth in the Alethia of Claudius Marius Victor." Speculum, xvii 255-260.
- La Barre, W. "Folk Medicine and Folk Science." JAF, lv 197-203
- Larsen, H. "Notes on the Phoenix." JEGP, xli 79-84.
- Lee, D D. "Greek Account of the Vrykolakas." JAF, lv 126-132.
- Lee, H "The Three Nephites: A Disappearing Legend" American Notes and Queries, ii. 35-38.
- Lee, J. "The Tragedy of the Seventh Day" CFQ, i. 337-357.
- Leechman, D "The Arts and the Aborigines" Queen's Quarterly, xlix. 353-360.
- Lewis, T. M N. "Early Chapters of Tennessee." TFSB, viii. 27-53.

Lomax, A, and Cowell, S R. American Folk Song and Folk Lore. A Regional Bibliography. New York.

Lomax, J A "Blessing the Animals " Southwest Review, xxvii 364-366.

——— "The Singing Southwest " Saturday Review of Literature, xxv (May 16) 7-8.

——— Lomax, A Our Singing Country. A Second Volume of American Ballads and Folk Songs, New York, 1941

———, ———, Lomax, Ruby T 14 Traditional Songs from Texas. Transcribed by Gustavo Duran (Pan American Union, Music Division) Washington.

Long, Haniel Pinon Country (American Folkways) New York, 1941

Loesser, A Humor in American Song New York

Lowie, R H Studies in Plains Indian Folklore (University of California Publications in American Archaeology and Ethnology, XL, No 1, pp 1-28) Berkeley.

Lowndes, M S Ghosts that Still Walk Real Ghosts of America. New York, 1941

Masin, H L "Charmed! Ball Players Have Their Superstitions." Scholastic, XL (April 20) 37

Masterson, J R Tall Tales from Arkansas. Boston, 1941

Maverick, L A "The Term 'Maverick' Applied to Unbranded Cattle " CFQ, I 94-96.

McClintock, W "The Thunderbird Myth " The Masterkey, xvi. 16-18

McCray, Doris W. "Food Fallacies and Facts " Hygeia, xix 646-649. [folklore of foods]

McGohan, H "Original American Folk Music " Étude, LX 527.

Mills, R V "Frontier Humor in Oregon and its Characteristics " Oregon Historical Quarterly, XLIII. 339-356

Moora, R, and Stein, R. "The Gremlins are Coming." Yank, I (Sept 30), 19

Morrison, F "Don José—The Love Mad López " CFQ, I. 369-371.

Mulvey, Ruth "Pitchmen's Cant." AS, xvii 89-93.

Nebraska Folklore, Book 3 (Writers' Program, Nebraska.) Lincoln, Neb , 1941.

Nitze, W. A. "Who Was the Fisher King A Note on Halieutics " RR, xxxiii 97-104

Nock, A. J "Utopia in Pennsylvania The Amish." Atlantic Monthly, CLXVII (1941). 478-484 [manners and customs]

Northcote, S The Ballad in Music. New York, 1941.

Opler, M E. "Adolescence Rite of the Jicarilla " El Palacio, XLIX. 25-38.

——— Myths and Tales of the Chiricahua Apache Indians (Memoirs of the American Folklore Society, xxxvii) Philadelphia.

The Origin of Massachusetts Place Names of the State, Counties, Cities and Towns. (Writer's Project, Massachusetts) New York, 1941.

Parish, Lydia Slave Songs of the Georgia Islands. New York.

Park, Natalie and Park, Helen. "Jump-Rope Rhymes " CFQ, I 377.

Parker, Paul. "A Monterey County [California] Song " CFQ, I 378.

People's Festival in a People's War: Thrd Annual Folk Festival of the Catskills, 1942 Long Island City, New York [mimeographed]

Peery, W. "American Folk Drama Comes of Age" American Scholar, xi 149-157.

Pim, Paul. "Nature Lore of Easter." Nature Magazine, xxxv 182-184, 217

——— "Plant Lore of Christmas: Rich in History, Romance, and Religious Symbolism." Nature Magazine, xxiv (1941) 545-546, 577.

Poladian, Sirvart Armenian Folk Songs (University of California Publications in Music, II, No 1, pp 1-76.) Berkeley.

——— "The Problem of Melodic Variation In Folk Song" J A F L, lv 204-211.

Porter, B H "Truck Driver Lingo" AS xvii 102-105

Porter, K W "Children's Songs and Rhymes of the Porter Family" J A F L, liv (1941). 167-175

Pound, Louise, "Baldy Green" SFQ, vi. 121-122

——— "Literary Anthologies and the Ballad" SFQ, vi. 127-141

Power, R L. "The Hoosier and an American Folk Type." Indiana Magazine of History, xxxviii 107-122.

Prahl, A J "The Hagerstown [Maryland] Almanack" AGR, viii (June). 7-10

Rael, J. B. "Cuentos Espanoles de Colorado y de Nueva Méjico (Segunda Serie)." J A F L lv. 1-93.

——— "New Mexican Spanish Feasts" CFQ, i 83-90.

Randolph, Mary C "Female Satirists of Ancient Ireland" SFQ, vi 75-87.

Ray, Bright Legends of the Red River Valley San Antonio, 1941.

Rayburn, O. E. Ozark Country. (American Folkways) New York, 1941

Reichmann, F. "Groundhog Day." AGR, viii (Feb) 11-13. [Pennsylvania Dutch superstition]

Reinhard, J R. "Setting Adrift in Mediaeval Law and Literature." PMLA, lvi (1941). 33-68

Reynolds, H. "All Gone, Cap'n!" Christian Science Monitor, Mag Sec Nov 14. Pp 8-9.

Richardson, J. M. Steamboat Lore on the Penobscot. Augusta, Maine, 1941.

Rotunda, D P. Motif-Index of the Italian Novella in Prose (Indiana University Publications, Folklore Series, No 2) Bloomington

Rudolph, R. C. "Notes on the Riddle In China." CFQ, i 65-82.

Sanders, J O "Finding List of Southeastern Square Dance Figures." SFQ, vi. 263-275.

Schirokauer, A. "Der Eingang des Lorscher Bienensegens" MLN, lvii. 62-64.

Seale, Lea and Seale, Marianna. "Easter Rock: A Louisiana Negro Ceremony." J A F L, lv. 212-218.

Sell, F. C. "Ein Lobspruch von eim schiessen zu Augsburg 1509." (Corona: Studies in Celebration of the Eightieth Birthday of Samuel Singer.) Durham, N. C., 1941. Pp. 45-62.

Senn, Alfred. "On the Sources of a Lithuanian Tale." (Corona: Studies in Celebration of the Eightieth Birthday of Samuel Singer) Durham, N. C., 1941.

Pp 8-22

Simpson, G E., and Cinéas, J. B. "Folk Tales of Haitian Heroes." J A F L, LIV (1941) 176-185.

Simpson, G E "Loup Garou and Loa Tales from Northern Haiti " J A F L, LV 219-227

Smith, Grace P. "The European Origin of an Illinois Tale." S F Q, VI 89-94.

———"Speech Currents in 'Egypt' [Illinois]" A S, VII. 169-173

Snook, S "The Showboat Drifts Downstream " South Atlantic Quarterly, XLI 320-326

South Carolina Folk Tales: Stories of Animals and Supernatural Beings.
(Writers' Program, South Carolina) Columbia, S. C , 1941.

South Dakota Place Names Enlarged and Revised (Writers' Project, South Dakota.) Vermillion, S. D , 1941.

"Seventh Annual Meeting of the Southeastern Folklore Society." S F Q, VI.
73-74 [A C Morris]

Spaeth, S. "He Was Her Man—But " Southern Literary Messenger, IV 234-237

"Spanish-American Baptismal Customs." (Writers' Program, New Mexico.)
El Palacio, XLIX. 59-61

The Spanish-American Song and Game Book (Writers' Program, New Mexico) New York

"Spanish-American Wedding Customs " (Writers' Program, New Mexico.)
El Palacio, XLIX. 1-6.

Speroni, C "Some Rope-Skipping Rhymes from Southern California." C F Q,
I. 245-252.

Spivacke, H "Archive of American Folk Song." Music Educators Journal, XXIX 29-31

Stegner, Wallace Mormon Country. (American Folkways) New York.

Tantaquidgeon, Gladys. "How the Summer Season was Brought In." J A F L,
LIV (1941) 203-204

Taylor, A. "An American Riddle of Eggplant." C F Q, I. 97-98.

———"A Metaphor of the Human Body in Literature and Tradition."
(Corona: Studies in Celebration of the Eightieth Birthday of Samuel Singer)
Durham, N. C., 1941 Pp 3-7.

Thane, Eric. High Border Country. (American Folkways) New York.

Thomas, Jean Blue Ridge Country (American Folkways) New York.

Thompson, Stith. "The Folktale of the Middle West." H F B, I. 39

Travis, James. "Three Irish Folk Tales." J A F L, LIV (1941) 199-203

———"Two Irish Folk Tunes " J A F L, LV. 169-170

Turney, Ida V. Paul Bunyan Marches On Portland, Ore.

——— Paul Bunyan the Work Giant Portland, Ore., 1941.

Turney-High, H. H. "Two Kutenai Stories." J A F L, LIV (1941) 191-196.

Voegelin, Erminie W. Culture Element Distributions: X X Northeast Califorma Anthropological Records, VII, No. 2 Berkeley. [Indian lore.]

Warnick, Florence, "Play Party Songs in Western Maryland" J A F L, LIV (1941). 162-166

Watkins, Frances E "The Charles F Lummis Collection of Spanish California and Indian Songs in the Southwest Museum" CFQ, I. 99-101.

———"He Said it with Music" Spanish California Songs Recorded by Charles F Lummis" CFQ, I. 359-367.

Weiant, C. W. "A Note on Modern Nagualism" J A F L, LV. 98-99

Weigand, H. J "The Two and Seventy Languages of the World" GR, XVII. 241-260

"Western Folklore Conference." SFQ, VI. 175-176. [A. C. Morris], CFQ, I 379-380. [W. D Hand].

Whitbread, L. "Beowulf and Grendel's Mother Two Minor Parallels from Folklore" MLN, LVII 281-282

Wilkinson, W. "Virginia Dance Tunes." SFQ, VI 1-10

Wood, R "Das bucklige Mannlein." AGR, VIII (Aug.) 27-30.

Wright, Estelle "Sammy Lingo and Bobby Cuso" J A F L, LIV (1941). 197-199.

Vermont Chap Book: Being a Garland of Ten Folk Ballads . . . in the Helen Hartness Flanders Collection in the Middlebury College Library Middlebury, Vt , 1941

Vestal, S Short Grass Country. (American Folkways) New York, 1941.

Vizonsky, N Ten Jewish Folk Dances: A Manual for Teachers and Leaders Chicago.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE

BY ALBERT C. BAUGH WITH THE ASSISTANCE OF ALLAN G CHESTER AND MATTHIAS A. SHABER

I. LINGUISTICS

Brown, Charles B. The Contribution of Greek to English, with Special Attention to Medical and Other Scientific Terms Nashville

Carnap, Rudolf Introduction to Semantics. Cambridge, Mass (Studies in Semantics, Vol. I)

Colby, Elbridge Army Talk: A Familiar Dictionary of Soldier Speech. Princeton.

Emsley, Bert. "The First 'Phonetic' Dictionary" Qu. Jour. Speech, XXVIII. 202-206.

On The American Phonetic Dictionary of the English Language (Cincinnati, 1855)

Hand, Wayland D A Dictionary of Words and Idioms Associated with Judas Iscariot, a Compilation Based Mainly on Material Found in the Germanic Languages. Berkeley. (Univ of Calif. Pub. in Mod. Phil , XXIV, No 3)

Heflin, Woodford A , Dobbie, Elhott V., and Treviño, S N "Bibliography [of] Present Day English." AS, XVII. 59-63; 114-119; 196-201; 265-268.

Hendricks, Ira K. "A Historical Study of the Grammatical Nomenclature pertaining to the English Verb." Abstracts of Diss., Stanford Univ., 1940-41, pp. 82-85.

Howard, Edwin J. "Four Words in Coxe's A Short Treatise . . . of Magicall Sciences." MLN, LVII. 674-675.

Records earlier uses of proclunthe, adhere, arologie, and deuastation than those recorded in the OED.

Hubbell, A. F. "A List of Briticisms." AS, xvii. 3-9.

A list of words culled from British detective stories

Kennedy, Arthur G. English Usage A Study in Policy and Procedure. N. Y. (Nat Council of Teachers of English English Monograph, No 15)

Koenig, Karl F. "German Loan Words in America, 1930-1940" GQ, xviii 163-168

Kokeritz, Helge "Elizabethan Che Vore Ye 'I Warrant You'." MLN, LVII 98-103.

Argues that Vore=warrant rather than warn

Knott, Thomas A. "The Middle English Dictionary." Michigan Alumnus Quart. Rev, XLVIII 127-132.

Kurrelmeyer, W. "The Etymology of Dragoon" PMLA, LVII 421-434.

From dragon, the hammer which fires a cavalry pistol, transferred to the pistol itself and then to the soldier who carries it

Lee, Irving J. Language Habits in Human Affairs: An Introduction to General Semantics With a foreword by Alfred Korzybski N. Y.

Livingston, Charles H. "Etymologies of Old French Reechier and English Rack" MLN, LVII 631-638

"Rack"=the process of refining wine.

Malone, Kemp. "Some Linguistic Studies of 1939 and 1940." MLN, LVII. 123-148.

—— "Syllabic Consonants in English" MLQ, III 5-8

—— "Observations on the Word 'standard'." AS, xvii. 235-238

Points out certain meanings ignored in the dictionaries

Marckwardt, Albert H. Introduction to the English Language. N. Y.

—— "Middle English wa in the Speech of the Great Lakes Region." AS, xvii. 226-234.

—— "The Verbal Suffix -ettan in Old English" Lang, xviii 275-281.

The suffix is a verbal derivative and most often indicates a frequentative Its disappearance is plausibly attributed to the weakening of unstressed vowels

Meroney, Howard. "Old English ðær 'if'." JEGP, xli 201-209.

With particular reference to Christ and Satan 107 and Beowulf 2573

Philbrick, F. A. Understanding English: An Introduction to Semantics. N. Y.

Reese, George H. "Pronunciation of shrimp, shrub, and Similar Words." AS, xvii. 251-255.

On the distribution of the pronunciation shrimp, etc , and a suggested explanation

Santee, Frederick L. "Basic, Latin, and Other Languages." Kenyon Rev., v. 60-76.

Schlauch, Margaret The Gift of Tongues. N. Y.

——— "Semantics as Social Evasion" Science & Society, vi 315-330

Spitzer, Leo. "Curmudgeon 'Miser'" JEGP, xli 150-151

Suggests that curmudgeon derives from OF chamorge = "glandered (horse)"

——— "Eng Dismal = O F Dism-al*" MLN, lvii 602-613

Sweeney, John L. "Basic in Reading." Kenyon Rev, v 49-59.

Trager, George L. "The Phoneme 't' a Study in Theory and Method" AS, xvii. 144-148.

Watson, John W., Jr. "A Phonemic Study of the Northumbrian Dialect of Old English" Univ of Virginia Abstracts of Diss, 1941, pp 19-22

Walsh, Chad "The Verb System in Basic English." AS, xvii 137-143.

Webb, Henry J. "Military Notes on the 'Oxford English Dictionary'" Am. N & Q, ii 134

On early uses of "clerk of the check," "muster-master," "muster-master-general" and "judge marshal"

White, William. "Notes on Some Words from World War II" Words, vii (1941). 41-45.

See SECTION IX, s v Swift, Neumann

II VERSIFICATION

Ghisehn, Brewster. "Paeonic Measures in English Verse" MLN, lvii 336-341.

Cites examples from several poets of the use of the quadrisyllabic foot with three unaccented syllables.

See SECTION IV, s v Beowulf, Pope

III. GENERAL

Abrams, Meyer H. "Unconscious Expectations in the Reading of Poetry" ELH, ix. 235-244.

On the critic's prepossessions as an impediment to his appreciation of poetry which does not conform to his views, illustrated particularly with reference to Johnson's strictures upon the poetry of Milton, and to the views of modern critics like John Crowe Ransom who subscribe exclusively to the metaphysical tradition.

Anderson, Maxwell, Carpenter, Rhys, and Harris, Roy. The Bases of Artistic Creation. New Brunswick.

Arms, George. "The 'More' Middle Ground" College English, iii. 568-574.
An essay on the function of literary scholarship

Ash, David F. "Creative Romanticism" College English, iv 100-110.

Bald, R. C. "Evidence and Inference in Bibliography." Eng Inst Annual, 1941, pp 159-183

——— "Early Copyright Litigation and Its Bibliographical Interest." Papers of the Bibliographical Soc. of America, xxxvi. 81-96.

Lawsuits offer a valuable means of detecting pirated editions

Bowers, Fredson. "The Headline in Early Books." Eng Inst. Annual, 1941, pp. 185-205.

Bronson, B. H., et al Studies in the Comic Berkeley, 1941 (Univ of Calif. Pub in English, Vol. VIII, No 2)

The six essays making up this volume are entered in the appropriate places below

Brown, Clarence A "The Platonic Doctrine of Inspiration and the Nature and Function of Poetry in Renaissance Literary Criticism" Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ of Wisconsin, vi 276-278

Buck, Philo M. "Science, Literature, and the Hunting of the Snark" College English, iv 1-11

Coffin, Robert P. T. The Substance That Is Poetry N. Y.

Contents The Solid Substance of Poetry, Poetry Language of the Definite Article, The Independence of a Poem, Can a Poem Be Explained? Poetry as Improvement on Life, Light as a Poetic Substance

Crane, R. S. "Two Essays in Practical Criticism Prefatory Note" University Rev, viii 199-202

A prefatory note to the essays of Maclean and Olsen listed below.

Davies, Godfrey "Some Editorial Problems Discussed." HLQ, v 488-494.

Presents a summary of a seminar discussion of problems in editing texts and in editing learned journals

Dowdell, Victor L. Aristotle and Anglican Religious Thought Ithaca

Earnest, Ernest "Poets in Overalls" Virginia Qu Rev, xviii 518-529.

On the machine as a theme of poetry

Farrell, James T. "Literature and Ideology" College English, iii 611-623

Literature "must solve its own problems and cannot be turned into the handmaiden of politics and the looking-glass of ideologies"

Frank, Tenny "Changing Conceptions of Literary and Philological Research" JHI, iii 401-414

Friedman, Arthur "Principles of Historical Annotation in Critical Editions of Modern Texts" Eng Inst Annual, 1941, pp 115-128

Frye, Northrop "Music in Poetry" Univ of Toronto Qu, xi 167-179

Greenberg, Emil A Guide to Research Sources in English and American Literature N. Y.

A mimeographed list of reference books

Griffith, Dudley D., et al "Frederick Morgan Padelford, February 27, 1875-December 3, 1942." MLQ, iii 517-524.

Bibliography of his published writings

Hamm, Victor M. "Form in Literature" Thought, xvii. 255-269

Henry, Edward A. Doctoral Dissertations Accepted by American Universities, 1941-1942 (No. 9) N. Y.

Hinman, Charlton "New Uses for Headlines as Bibliographical Evidence." Eng. Inst. Annual, 1941, pp 207-222

Hornstein, Lillian H. "Analysis of Imagery: A Critique of Literary Method" PMLA, LVII. 638-653.

Criticizes Miss Spurgeon's methods of studying poetical imagery, especially her assumptions regarding the images and the poet's experiences, predilections, etc

Hotson, Leslie "Literary Serendipity" ELH, ix 79-94
Chiefly on the resources of the Record Office for literary research

Kain, Richard "The Reorientation of Literary Scholarship" College English, III 361-368

Kern, Alexander "The Sociology of Knowledge in the Study of Literature" Sewanee Rev, I 505-514

Suggests applying the technique of Mannheim's sociology of knowledge to the study of literature

Lecky, Eleazer "Meaning and Metaphor" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . . 1938 (1939), pp 39-41

Maclean, Norman F "An Analysis of a Lyric Poem" University Rev, VIII 202-209

A specimen of critical method applied to Wordsworth's sonnet, It is a beauteous evening, calm and free

Miller, C William Early English Books at the University of Virginia Charlottesville.

Muller, Herbert J "Scientist and Man of Letters" Yale Rev, XXXI (1941) 279-296

There is no absolute distinction and no absolute antagonism between literature and science

Olson, Elder "Sailing to Byzantium: Prolegomena to a Poetics of the Lyric." University Rev, VIII 209-219

A specimen of critical method applied to a poem of Yeats

Pollock, Thomas C The Nature of Literature: Its Relations to Science, Language, and Human Experience. Princeton

Reilly, Joseph J Of Books and Men N Y

Severs, J Burke "Quentin's Theory of Textual Criticism" Eng Inst Annual, 1941, pp 65-93.

Spencer, Theodore "The Central Problem of Literary Criticism" College English, iv 153-163

Stoll, Elmer E "Heroes and Villains. Shakespeare, Middleton, Byron, Dickens" RES, XVIII 257-269

Studies in Honor of Frederick W. Shipley by his Colleagues St Louis (Washington Univ Stud, New Series, Lang. and Lit, No 14).

The articles pertinent to this bibliography are listed in the proper places

Sutcliffe, Emerson G. "Re-Creative Criticism" College English, III. 633-642
On the nature and importance of the critical function

Tate, Allen (ed) The Language of Poetry Princeton

Contents Allen Tate, Preface, Philip Wheelwright, "Poetry, Myth and Reality", Cleanth Brooks, "The Language of Paradox", I A Richards, "The Interactions of Words", Wallace Stevens, "The Noble Rider and the Sound of Words"

Union List of Microfilms A Basic List of Holdings in the United States and Canada Phila (Phila Bibliographical Center) Mimeographed

Weiss, Harry B A Book about Chapbooks, the People's Literature of Bygone Times Highland Park, N J

Weitzmann, Francis W. "Elegy and Tragedy A Comparative Study in Poetics" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses 1937 (1938), pp 43-45

Wellek, René "The Parallelism between Literature and the Arts" Eng. Inst Annual, 1941, pp. 29-63

Wimsatt, W K, Jr "When Is Variation 'Elegant'?" College English, III 368-383

On variation as a rhetorical device

Young, Karl "The Uses of Rare Books and Manuscripts" Yale Univ Library Gazette, XVI, 25-38

An account of some of the volumes in the Yale Univ library

IV. THEMES, FORMS, AND CHARACTER TYPES

Ames, Van Meter "The Novel Between Art and Science" Kenyon Rev, v 34-48

Arents, George "Where There's Smoke There's—Literature" Papers of the Bibliographical Soc of America, xxxv (1941). pp 145-150

Describes a collection of works on tobacco

Check-List of Recorded Songs in the English Language in the Archives of American Folk Song to July, 1940 Alphabetical List with Geographical Index. 3v, Washington, D C (Library of Congress, Music Division)

Coffman, George R "Tragedy and a Sense of the Tragic in Some of its Ethical Implications" Sewanee Rev, I 26-34.

Present-day tragedy fails to give artistic and ethical meaning to tragic events

Emmons, Alma R. "The Highlander in Scottish Prose Fiction" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . 1941, pp 35-38

Gerould, Gordon H The Patterns of English and American Fiction A History. Boston

A history of English and American fiction from the Middle Ages to the present

Heltzel, Virgil B A Check List of Courtesy Books in the Newberry Library Chicago

Magill, Thomas N "Character in the Drama" Cornell Univ. Abstracts of Theses 1941, pp 45-47.

Queen, Ellery The Detective Short Story. A Bibliography Boston

Randolph, Mary C. "The Structural Design of the Formal Verse Satire" PQ, XXI 368-384.

Vinograd, Sherna S "The Tragic Lament and Related Means of Achieving Acquiescence in Tragic Drama" Abstracts of Diss, Stanford Univ, 1940-41, pp 95-97.

Thompson, Alan R The Anatomy of Drama. Berkeley, Calif.

V. OLD ENGLISH LITERATURE

Miscellaneous. Dobbie, Elliott V The Anglo-Saxon Minor Poems. N. Y. (Anglo-Saxon Poetic Records, No. 6)

Contains the text of fifty-three poems from a variety of MSS.

Hotchner, Cecilia A. "A Note on 'Dux Vitae' and 'Life Lattiw'" PMLA, LVII 572-575

Considers the phrase more likely to have been taken over by continental Latin writers from OE than vice versa

Schweitzer, Henry P. "The Idea of the King in Old English Literature" Dissertations Accepted for Higher Degrees Fordham Univ, 1942, pp 32-37

Alcuin. Hargrove, Margaret L. "Alcuin's 'Poem on York'" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses 1937 (1938), pp 20-23

Ælfric. Davis, Charles R. "Two New Sources for Ælfric's Catholic Homilies" JEGP, XLI 510-513

Finds the source of the "Natale" of Saint Andrew in Homilia V of Gregory's XL Homiliarum in Evangelia, that of the "Natale" of St Matthew in Bede's "In Natale Sancti Matthaei Apostoli"

Henel, Heinrich (ed) Ælfric's De Temporibus Anni London (EETS, 213)

Shook, Lawrence K. "Ælfric's Latin Grammar: A Study in Old English Grammatical Terminology" Harvard Univ . . . Summaries of Theses . 1940, pp 360-363

Beowulf. Brown, Calvin S, Jr. "On Reading Beowulf." Sewanee Rev, L 78-86

An appreciation of the literary qualities of the poem

Malone, Kemp. "Grendel and Grep" PMLA, LVII 1-14

"In the Grep story of Saxo [book V] we have an interesting and instructive parallel to the Grendel story, a parallel which lends support to the view that not only the historical but also the fabulous material in Beowulf is of Scandinavian origin"

Pope, J. C. The Rhythm of Beowulf: An Interpretation of the Normal and Hypermetric Verse-Forms in Old English Poetry New Haven.

Whitbread, L. "Beowulf and Grendel's Mother: Two Minor Parallels from Folklore" MLN, LVII 281-282.

Summarizes two Polynesian tales which contain details similar to the account of Beowulf's fight with Grendel's mother Byrhtferth. Henel, Heinrich. "Notes on Byrhtferth's Manual" JEGP, XLI. 427-443.

Corrects and supplements Crawford's edition

Chronicle. Magoun, Francis P. "King Alfred's Naval and Beach Battle with the Danes in 896" MLR, XXXVII 409-414

Interpretation of and commentary on a well known passage in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle.

Deor. Malone, Kemp. "On Deor 14-17" MP, XL 1-18.

Translates "We learned that the moans of Mæðhild, [they] became numberless, [the moans] of Geat's lady, so that that distressing love bereft her of all sleep."

Phoenix. Larsen, Henning. "Notes on the Phoenix." JEGP, XLI. 79-84.

A comparison of an Old Norse version of the Phoenix homily with the two late Old English versions

Wulfstan. Bethurum, Dorothy. "Archbishop Wulfstan's Commonplace Book." PMLA, LVII. 916-929.

Identifies eight MSS containing liturgical, disciplinary, and homiletic material in Latin and Old English as transcripts derived from a collection made by Archbishop Wulfstan for his own use

VI MIDDLE ENGLISH LITERATURE

Miscellaneous. Cronin, Grover J, Jr "Bestiary Material in the Literature of Religious Instruction of Medieval England." Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ of Wisconsin, vi 280-281

Egbert, Donald D "The Western European Manuscripts [in the Garrett Collection]" Princeton Univ Library Chron, iii 123-130

Pellegrini, Angelo M "Renaissance and Medieval Antecedents of Debate" Quar Jour of Speech, xxviii 14-19

On the disputation as the center of the university training

Robbins, Rossell, H "Levation Prayers in Middle English Verse" MP, xli 131-146

Collects a corpus of English levation prayers—prayers said by worshippers at the elevation of the Host—and discusses their origin, substance, dispersion, and influence on the substitution of English for Latin as the language of the church service

Scollard, Robert J "A List of Photographic Reproduction of Mediaeval Manuscripts in the Library of the Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies [at Toronto]" Medieval Studies, iv 126-138

Sister Mary Immaculate "The Four Daughters of God in the Gesta Romanorum and the Court of Sapience" PMLA, lvii. 951-965.

Traces the versions of this theme in both the Latin and the English Gesta and in the pseudo-Lydgatean poem to the Latin prose Rex et Famulus rather than to Grosseteste's Chateau d'Amour

Talbert, Ernest W "A Lollard Chronicle of the Papacy" JEGP, xli. 163-193

Prints for the first time the text of Emmanuel College (Cambridge) MS 146, and supplies a critical introduction

Thomson, S Harrison Progress of Medieval and Renaissance Studies in the United States and Canada Bulletin No 17 Boulder, Colorado.

See SECTION VII, Miscellaneous.

Alberic of London. Rathbone, Eleanor "Master Alberic of London, 'Mythographus Tertius Vaticanus'." Medieval and Renaissance Studies, i (1941) 35-38

Identifies the author with a late twelfth-century canon of St Paul's

Auchinleck MS. Loomis, Laura H "The Auchinleck Manuscript and a Possible London Bookshop of 1330-1340." PMLA, lvii 595-627

The Auchinleck MS (probably also others of the same kind) was produced in a lay or commercial scriptorium, presumably at London Internal evidence shows that parts of the MS were translated by various writers working together under a single direction

Babyngton, Anthony. See below, s v Epistle of Othea to Hector.

Ballad. Gayton, A H "English Ballads and Indian Myths" JAFI, lv. 121-125.

Gordon, Philip "The Music of the Ballads" So Folklore Qu, vi 143-148

Pound, Louise "Literary Anthologies and the Ballad" So Folklore Qu, vi. 127-141.

Protests against the persistence of discarded theories of the origin and the antiquity of the ballads in anthologies for college use

Caxton. Buhler, Curt F "Caxton's History of Jason" Papers of the Bibliographical Soc of Am, xxxiv (1940) 254-261

A study of the text

Munsterberg, Margaret. "The Myrroure of the Worlde" More Books, xvii 3-13

Describes a copy of Andrewe's ed of this Caxton translation (S T C 24764)

See below, s v Doctrinal of Sapience.

Chaucer. Aiken, Pauline "Vincent of Beauvais and Chaucer's Monk's Tale" Speculum, xvii 56-68

Chaucer's use of the Speculum Historiale in the Monk's Tale.

Birney, Earle "Is Chaucer's Irony a Modern Discovery?" JEGP, xli 303-319

Argues that Chaucer's earlier critics understood the poet's essential irony, although they did not use our terms for it

Blenner-Hassett, R " 'When He His "Papir" Soghte', CT, A-4404 " MLN, lvii 34-35

Interprets papir to mean the apprentice's indenture

Braddy, Haldeen "The Genre of Chaucer's Squire's Tale" JEGP, xli. 279-290

Suggests that it is one type of Eastern framing tale where the principal story is interrupted by several incidents before being resumed and concluded

Brown, Carleton "Author's Revision in the Canterbury Tales" PMLA, lvii 29-50.

"When the evidence of the manuscripts is considered in perspective, recognizing that Chaucer himself made repeated changes in his plan, and taking the arrangement in group d as representing an earlier stage, we are enabled to trace successive steps in the development of the Canterbury Tales"

Crow, Martin M "John of Angoulême and His Chaucer Manuscript." Speculum, xvii 86-99

A full account of the original owner of the Paris MS of the Canterbury Tales, with a discussion of the character of the text

Dempster, Germaine, " 'Thy Gentillesse' in Wife of Bath's Tale, D 1159-62." MLN, lvii. 173-176

Concerning the reference of thy

Dilts, Dorothy A. "Observations on Dante and the Hous of Fame." MLN, lvii 26-28.

Calls attention to several parallelisms

Duncan, Eggar H. "Alchemy in the Writings of Chaucer, Jonson, and Donne"

Bulletin of Vanderbilt Univ, Vol. xli, No. 10 (1941), pp 16-17 (abstract of diss).

——— "Chaucer and 'Arnold of the Newe Toun' " MLN lvii 31-33

On Chaucer's indebtedness in the Canon's Yeoman's Tale to the writings of Arnold of Villa Nova

Eliason, Norman E "Chaucer's Second Nun?" MLQ, iii 9-16

"The usually ignored extra-textual evidence (the rubrics) combines with the textual evidence . . . to raise . . . a reasonable doubt about the existence of the Second Nun as a creation of Chaucer "

Epstein, Hans J "The Identity of Chaucer's 'Lollius' " MLQ, iii 391-400. Suggests the possibility that "Lollius" was Lollius Bassus, an epigramatist whose work is included in the Greek Anthology

Frost, George L " 'That Precious Corpus Madrian'." MLN, lvii 177-179 Suggests that the Host may have transformed the vaguely remembered name of a saint into a word for a familiar sweetmeat Golson, Eva O The Spelling System of the Glasgow MS of The Canterbury Tales Chicago (Univ of Chicago diss , offset).

Hamilton, Marie P "The Summoner's 'Psalm of Davit' " MLN, lvii 655-657.

On the double-edged significance of the Summoner's reference to Psalm 44

Henkin, L J. "The Pardoner's Sheep-bone and Lapidary Lore " Bull of the Hist of Medicine, x (1941) 504-512

Johnson, Dudley R. " 'Homicide' in the Parson's Tale " PMLA, lvii 51-56 Chaucer's discussion derives from the Summa Casuum Conscientiae of Raymund of Pennaforte

Kirby, Thomas A "A Note on the Irony of the Merchant's Tale " PQ, xxi 433-435

Suggests the reading cow (=chough), supported by MSS of the "inedited" group, in place of coughe, adopted by editors

Lossing, Marian "The Prologue to the Legend of Good Women and the Lai de Franchise." SP, xxxix 15-35

Denies Lowes' contention that the Lai is an undoubted source of the Legend and that the latter is bound to the date of the former as a terminus a quo.

Lynch, James J "The Prioress's Gems " MLN. 440-441

On Chaucer's use of the symbolism of the ruby, the emerald, and the pearl

Mc Jimsey, Ruth B Chaucer's Irregular -e: A Demonstration among Monosyllabic Nouns of the Exceptions to Grammatical and Metrical Harmony N Y (lithograph)

Mayo, Robert D. "The Trojan Background of the Troilus " ELH, ix 245-256

Takes issue with the view of Kittredge and Lowes that the impending doom of Troy is a genuine esthetic factor in the poem Pace, George B "The Texts of Chaucer's Truth, Lak of Siedfastnesse, and the Purse " Univ of Virginia . . Abstracts of Diss , 1942, pp. 12-14.

Pyles, Thomas "‘Dan Chaucer’" MLN, LVII 437-439

On the use of the title dan with the surname instead of the Christian name ap Roberts, Robert P "Notes on Tristram and Criseyde, iv 1397-1414" MLN, LVII 92-97.

On Chaucer's treatment of Calchas's desertion of the Trojans after he had consulted the Delphic oracle

Severs, J Burke The Literary Relationships of Chaucer's Clerkes Tale New Haven (Yale Stud in English, No 96)

Contents Intro (History of the Griselda Story in the Fourteenth Century), The Latin Original, Suggested Additional Originals, Chaucer's Treatment of His Sources, The Texts of Chaucer's Sources, Appendix, Textual Notes on the Clerkes Tale

Sister Mary Immaculate "Fiends as 'servant unto man' in the Friar's Tale [D 1501-3]" PQ, XXI 240-244

Saint Dunstan's power over fiends as shown by various incidents in the accounts of his biographers

Stearns, Marshall W "Chaucer Mentions a Book" MLN, LVII 28-31

Argues that "the mention of a book in love-vision literature can correctly be called a conventional device only after Chaucer"

Woolf, H B. "Chaucer in Colonial America" Am N&Q, III 71-72

On allusions to Chaucer in America before 1800

Crophill. Talbert, Ernest W "The Notebook of a Fifteenth-Century Practicing Physician" Univ of Texas Studies in English, 1942, pp 5-30

The commonplace-book of John Crophill, an Essex physician of the mid-fifteenth century

Doctrinal of Sapience. Buhler, Curt F "A Bibliographical Curiosity" Papers of the Bibliographical Soc of America, xxxv (1941) 58-60.

On an error in bibliographical descriptions of Caxton's edition of the Doctrinal of Sapience

Drama. Weir, Evangeline G "The Vernacular Sources of the Middle English Plays of the Blessed Virgin Mary A Study of the Marian Elements in the Homilies and Other Works of Religious Instruction from 1200 to 1500 in Relation to the Mary Plays" Abstracts of Diss, Stanford Univ, xvii 45-51

Edward the Confessor. Moore, Grace E. The Middle English Verse Life of Edward the Confessor Phila (Univ of Penna. diss)

Epistle of Othea to Hector. Gordon, James D (ed) The Epistle of Othea to Hector: A 'Lytel Bibell of Knyghthod.' Edited from the Harleian MS 838 Phila. (Univ. of Penna diss)

A fifteenth-century version of Christine de Pisan's treatise, translated by Anthony Babyngton

Geoffrey of Monmouth. Blenner-Hassett, Roland "Geoffrey of Monmouth's Mons Agned and Castellum Puellarum" Speculum, xvii 250-254.

Identifies the settlement as Edinburgh Castle

Hammer, Jacob "Some Additional Manuscripts of Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia Regum Britanniae" MLQ, III. 235-242.

Adds several MSS to the list compiled by Griscom in his edition of the Historia

Gower. Dilts, Dorothy A "John Gower and the De Genealogia Deorum" MLN, LVII 23-25

Cites several hitherto unnoted parallels between Boccaccio's work and the Confessio Amantis

James I of Scotland. Cronin, Grover, Jr "Two Bibliographical Notes on 'The King's Quair'" N&Q, CLXXXI (1941) 341-342.

Notes a transcript of Laing's collation of the text in the Harvard copy of the 1827 reprint of Tytler's ed and a reference to the poem in W B Scott's Illustrations to the King's Quair (1887)

Lawrence of Durham. Mistretta, Sister M Liguori "The Hypognosticon of Lawrence of Durham A Preliminary Text with an Introduction" Dissertations Accepted for Higher Degrees Fordham Univ, 1942, pp 14-17.

Lazamon. Blenner-Hassett, Roland "A Study of the Place-Names in Lawman's Brut" Harvard Univ Summaries of Theses. 1940, pp 334-336

—— "Gernemuðe A Place-Name in Lawman's Brut" MLN, LVII 179-181

Blenner-Hassett, Roland, and Magoun, F. P "The Italian Campaign of Belin and Brenne in the Bruts of Wace and Lawman" PQ, XXI 385-390

Lydgate. Tillman, Nathaniel P "Lydgate's Rhymes as Evidence of his Pronunciation" Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ of Wisconsin, VI 293-295.

Lyric. Robbins, Rossell H "Two Middle English Satiric Love Epistles." MLR, XXXVII 415-421.

Two poems from MS Rawlinson poet 36, of the fifteenth century

—— "The Burden in Carols" MLN, LVII 16-22.

A discussion of the difficulties presented by the burdens of the carols in B M Add MS 5665.

Mannyng, Robert. Crosby, Ruth "Robert Mannyng of Brunne: a New Biography" PMLA, LVII 15-28.

Contents that Robert was born at Bourne (1283 or earlier), that he perhaps studied at Cambridge 1298(or earlier)-1302, that he was a canon of Sempringham Priory 1302-1317 or later, and that there is no evidence for attributing the Medytacyuns to him

Mirk, John. Cronin, Grover "John Mirk on Bonfires, Elephants, and Dragons" MLN, LVII 113-116.

On Mirk's account of St John bonfires

Pearl. Hillman, Sister Mary Vincent "Text and Literal Translation of The Pearl, with Explanatory Notes and an Interpretation" Dissertations Accepted for Higher Degrees . . . Fordham Univ, 1942, pp 27-32

Reginald of Canterbury. Lind, Levi R. (ed) The Vita Sancti Malchi of Reginald of Canterbury A Critical Edition with Introduction, Apparatus Criticus, Notes and Indices Urbana, Ill (Univ of Illinois Stud in Lang. and Lit, Vol XXVII, Nos 3-4)

Robert of Gretham. Laird, Charlton G. "Five New Gretham Sermons and the Middle English Murrur" PMLA, LVII 628-637.

Describes a Huntington Library MS of Robert de Gretham's Anglo-Norman Mirror containing five sermons not found in other texts which seem to be represented in the M E translation, the Murrur

Romance. Owings, Marvin A "The Fine and Applied Arts in the Middle English Romances " Bulletin of Vanderbilt Univ , Vol. XLII, No 11, pp 18-19 (abstract of diss)

Seege of Troye. Atwood, E Bagby. "The Story of Achilles in the Seege of Troye " SP, XXXIX 489-501

This episode in the poem derives from the Excidium Troiae and from the Achilleid of Statius.

—— "The Judgment of Paris in the Seege of Troye " PMLA, LVII. 343-353.

Finds Dares and the Excidium Troiae insufficient to account for all the details of this episode

Sir Tristrem. Vogel, Bertram " Wortgeographische Belege and Sir Tristrem " JEGP, XLI 478-481.

Cites linguistic evidence to refute Kaiser's argument that the poem is of Northern origin

South English Legendary. Wells, Minnie E "The Structural Development of the South English Legendary." JEGP, XLI 320-344.

Notes parallels between the Pepys MS 2344 and the Legenda Aurea, offers evidence that the collection originally followed the calendar year (unlike the Legenda Aurea), brings forward important new considerations suggesting that the original compiler was a Franciscan, and traces the gradual amplification and extension of the Temporale

Thomas of Kent. Agard, Frederick B "Anglo-Norman Versification and the Roman de Toute Chevalerie " RR, XXXIII. 216-235

Trivet. Dean, Ruth J "MS Bodl 292 and the Canon of Nicholas Trevet's Works " Speculum, XVII 243-249.

Description of the MS and rejection of some of the works in it which have been attributed to Trivet.

Usk. Sanderlin, George "Usk's Testament of Love and St. Anselm." Speculum, XVII. 69-73

Evidence that Book III of the Testament is based on St Anselm's De Concordia Praescientiae et Praedestinationis, of which it is in part a literal translation.

Wace. See above, s v Lazamon.

VII. RENAISSANCE AND ELIZABETHAN LITERATURE

Miscellaneous. Auld, Ina B "Woman in the Renaissance a Study of the Attitude of Shakespeare and his Contemporaries." [Univ of Iowa] Doctoral Diss : Abstracts and References (1938), II (1941). 103-109.

Bond, William H. "Imposition by Half-Sheets " Library, n s XXII (1941) 163-167.

A printer's error in the second edition of Churchyard's Chrys makes it possible to demonstrate the use of this method in the sixteenth century

Craig, Hardin, et al "Recent Literature of the Renaissance " SP, XXXIX. 328-486

Cremens, Charles D The Reception of Calvinistic Thought in England. Urbana (Univ of Illinois abstract of diss).

Dean, Leonard F. "Bodin's Methodus in England before 1625." SP, XXXIX. 160-166.

Dick, Hugh G "The Doctrines of the Ptolemaic Astronomy in the Literature of the English Renaissance" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . 1937 (1938), pp 17-19

Eccles, Mark "A Biographical Dictionary of Elizabethan Authors" HLQ, v 281-302

An account of the objectives of the proposed dictionary

Howard, Edwin J (ed) Pleasant Quippes for Vpstart Newfangled Gentlewomen Oxford, Ohio

Formerly attributed to Gosson.

Jones, Richard F "The Moral Sense of Simplicity" Washington Univ Stud, New Series, Lang and Lit, No 14, pp 265-288 (Shipley Festschrift)

The common depreciation of rhetorical eloquence by religious, scientific, and utilitarian writers was a moral objection grounded on the idea that a rhetorical style denotes insincerity and a plain style truth and honesty, for the most part it was distinct from literary anti-Ciceronianism

Larkin, James F Erasmus' De Ratione Studii Its Relationship to Sixteenth Century English Literature (Univ of Illinois abstract of diss)

Milligan, Burton "Counterfeiters and Coin-clippers in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries" N&Q, CLXXXII 100-105

Noack, Jeannette S "Social Aspects of Elizabethan Medicine a Background for the Study of Elizabethan Literature" Abstracts of Diss, Stanford Univ, 1940-41, pp 90-94.

O'Connor, William V The New Woman of the Renaissance N Y

Pellegrini, Angelo M "Giordano Bruno and Oxford" HLQ, v 303-316

Casts doubt on the assumption that Bruno was ever associated with Oxford as a lecturer

Penrose, Boies Urbane Travelers, 1591-1635 Phila

Contains essays on the following Fynes Moryson, John Cartwright, Thomas Coryate, William Lithgow, George Sandys, Sir Thomas Herbert, Sir Henry Blount

"The Renaissance Conference at the Huntington Library" HLQ, v. 155-201

Includes summaries of the following discussions Robert A. Milliken, "Problems in the Historiography of the Middle Ages", Allan Evans, "Medieval Studies in the Huntington Library", Louis M. Myers, "Universal History in the Twelfth Century", Francis J. Carmody, "The Reception of World Histories and Roman Histories in France, 1200-1500", Fred H. Rathert, "The Vitas Patrum in the Fifteenth Century", Richard F. Jones, William Haller, Helen C. White, and Louis B. Wright, "An Interpretation of the History of Ideas", Claude M. Simpson, "Tudor Popular Music Its Social Significance", C. H. Collins Baker, "Henry VIII and the Eclipse of Art", Mark Eccles, "A Survey of Elizabethan Reading", John L. Lievsay, "Trends in Tudor and Stuart Courtesy Literature", Hoyt H. Hudson, "The Transition in Poetry", Ernest A. Strathmann, "Raleigh as a Transition Figure", Edwin F. Gay, "Economic Depressions, 1602-1660", William Haller, "Milton and the Levellers", Godfrey Davies, "Causes of the Restoration"

Tuve, Rosemund. "Imagery and Logic Ramus and Metaphysical Poetics." JHI, III. 365-400

On the Ramist extension of logic to poetry as it affects the imagery of the English poets of the Renaissance Weisinger, Herbert. The Idea of the Renaissance from Petrarch to Hallam (microfilm). Ann Arbor (Univ. Microfilms Pub. No. 280).

Weld, John S. "Studies in the Euphuistic Novel, 1576-1640" Harvard Univ. . . Summaries of Theses . . 1940, pp 382-387

White, Helen C "Some Continuing Traditions in English Devotional Literature" PMLA, LVII 966-980

Emphasizes the persistence of pre-Reformation traditions in Elizabethan martyrologies, guides to the spiritual life, collections of private prayers, and devotional treatises

Wilson, Harold S. "Concepts of 'Nature' in the Rhetorical Tradition: A Chapter in the History of Classical Humanism before Ben Jonson" Harvard Univ. . . Summaries of Theses . . 1939, pp 255-257

———"Some Meanings of 'Nature' in Renaissance Literary Theory" JHI, II (1941) 430-448

Discussion of the term as used by both Continental and English writers

Wolf, Edwin. "Press Corrections in Sixteenth- and Seventeenth-Century Quartos" Papers of the Bibliographical Soc. of America, XXXVI 187-198.

Barnes, Barnabe. Fellheimer, Jeanette "Barnabe Barnes' Use of Geoffrey Fenton's Historie of Gucciardin" MLN, LVII. 358-359.

The Devil's Charter contains echoes of Fenton's translation of Chamedey's French version of Gucciardin

Batman. See below, s v Spenser, Koller

Bible. Willoughby, Harold R The First Authorized English Bible and the Cranmer Preface Chicago.

Breton. Robertson, Jean "Nicholas Breton's The Hate of Treason" MLN, LVII. 116-119.

An account of the printed version and of a MS version preserved in MS Royal 17 C XXXIV

The 12 Moneths By Nicholas Breton Westport, Conn, 1941.

A portion of Fantashicks, following the text of the copy in the Huntington Library

Chapman. Bartlett, Phyllis B. "Stylistic Devices in Chapman's Iliads" PMLA, LVII. 661-675

Analyzes the devices of stylistic adornment by means of which Chapman imparts vigor, color, and point to his translation, in obedience to his announced belief that a free translation best renders the true meaning of the original

Perkinson, Richard H "Nature and the Tragic Hero in Chapman's Bussy Plays." MLQ, III. 263-285

" . . the philosophic ideas which appear in Chapman's plays are not gratuitous . . his own temper fully explains their presence"

Coblers Prophetie. Sisson, Sarah T. The Coblers Prophetie: A Morality, edited with an Introduction and Notes Urbana (Univ. of Illinois abstract of diss.)

Copley. Padelford, Frederick M "Anthony Copley's A Fig for Fortune: A Roman Catholic Legend of Holiness" MLQ, III 525-533

On an imitation of the Faerie Queene

Daborne. Bacon, Wallace A "The Source of Robert Daborne's The Poor Mans Comfort" MLN, LVII. 345-348.

Finds the source of the play in William Warner's Syrinx.

Daniel. Bambas, Rudolph C. "The Verb in Samuel Daniel's The Collection of the History of England " Summaries of Doctoral Diss . Northwestern Univ , ix (1941) 10-13

Stirling, Brents "Daniel's Philotas and the Essex Case " MLQ, III 583-594

Uhland, Maude L "A Study of Samuel Daniel " Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . . . 1937 (1938), pp 40-42

Dekker. Halstead, W L "Surviving Original Materials in Dekker's 'Old Fortunatus' " N&Q, CLXXXII 30-31

Suggests that three short prose passages were taken over from the 1596 Fortunatus

Dickenson. Hendricks, Walter "John Dickenson the Man and his Works " Summaries of Doctoral Diss . Northwestern Univ , ix (1941) 19-22

Drama. Adams, John C The Globe Playhouse, Its Design and Equipment Cambridge, Mass

Carter, Albert H "Bibliographical Article Harbage's Annals of English Drama, 975-1700 " MP, XL 201-212

Comments and corrections

Clarkson, Paul S , and Warren, Clyde T The Law of Property in Shakespeare and the Elizabethan Drama Baltimore

Gorrell, Robert M "The Popular Drama in England, 1600-1642 " Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses 1939 (1940), pp 35-37

Harbage, Alfred "A Choice Ternary Belated Issues of Elizabethan Plays " N&Q, CLXXXIII 32-34

Notes on three Elizabethan plays first printed in 1662, after being revamped for the stage before the closing of the theaters Assigns Thorney Abbey to 1590-1600, The Marriage Broken to 1610, and notes a possible connection between the latter and William Rowley

Mendell, Clarence W Our Seneca New Haven, 1941

An appraisal of what Seneca had to give English drama

Parr, Johnstone "Cosmological Fortune Astrology in the Elizabethan and Jacobean Drama " Bulletin of Vanderbilt Univ , Vol XLII, No 11, pp 22-23 (abstract of diss)

Reese, Gertrude C "The Question of the Succession in Elizabethan Drama " Univ of Texas Studies in English, 1942, pp 59-85

Ringler, William "The First Phase of the Elizabethan Attack on the Stage, 1558-1579 " HLQ, v 391-418

Argues that the attack on the stage began suddenly in 1577, that "the causes that made the drama objectionable were not external but internal, resulting from changing conditions within the theaters themselves", and that "laymen early took the lead in the controversy, and their objections were primarily the result of social and economic conditions "

Drayton. Hebel, J William (ed) The Works of Michael Drayton Vol v Introduction, Notes, Variant Readings Edited by Kathleen Tillotson and Bernard H Newdigate Oxford, 1941

Elyot. Howard, Edwin J "Sir Thomas Elyot on the Turning of the Earth " PQ, XXI. 441-443

Erasmus. Hudson, Hoyt H. The Praise of Folly, by Desiderius Erasmus. Translated from the Latin, with an Essay & Commentary. Princeton

Ford. Sensabaugh, G. F. "Another Play by John Ford " MLQ, III 595-601.

Supports with additional argument Harbage's attribution of The Great Favourite to Ford

Gascoigne. Prouty, C T George Gascoigne, Elizabethan Courtier, Soldier, and Poet, N Y

Tannenbaum, Samuel A George Gascoigne A Concise Bibliography N Y

Gosson. See above, s v Miscellaneous, Howard

Greville. Frost, William Fulke Greville's Caelica An Evaluation Brattleboro, Vt

Hakluyt. Kerr, Willis H "The Treatment of Drake's Circumnavigation in Hakluyt's Voyages, 1589 " Papers of the Bibliographical Soc of America, xxxiv (1940) 281-302

Jonson. Bentley, Gerald E "A Good Name Lost Ben Jonson's Lament for S P " LTL S, May 30, 1942, p 276

Adduces evidence to show that the name of the child-actor of Jonson's famous epitaph was Solomon, not 'Salathiel,' Pavy, and suggests that Gifford may have invented the name Salathiel

Duncan, Edgar H "The Alchemy in Jonson's Mercury Vindicated." SP, xxxix 625-637

Points out the basis of various criticisms of the alchemists and emphasizes the fact that the satire of quackery is fused with a wider social satire

——— "Jonson's Use of Arnold of Villa Nova's Rosarium " PQ, xxi 435-438

Emery, Clark, "A Further Note on Drebbel's Submarine " MLN, lvii 451-455

Throws additional light upon the submarine alluded to in The Staple of News

Kallich, Martin "Unity of Time in Every Man In His Humor and Cynthia's Revels " MLN, lvii 445-449

Calls attention to Jonson's revisions in the interest of maintaining the classical unity of time

See above, SECTION VI, s v Chaucer, Duncan.

Lyly. Bennett, Josephine W. "Oxford and Endimion " PMLA, lvii 354-369

Finds in Lyly's plan an apology for Oxford (Endimion), who had been accused by Anne Vavasour (Tellus) of seducing her, and a plea to the queen to grant him her favor.

Marlowe. Bakeless, John The Tragical History of Christopher Marlowe 2v, Cambridge, Mass

A documented biography

Battenhouse, Roy W Marlowe's Tamburlaine A Study in Renaissance Moral Philosophy Nashville, 1941

Kirschbaum, Leo "Mephistophilis and the Lost 'Dragon' " RES, xviii 312-315.

On how the first appearance of Mephistophilis was produced on the Elizabethan stage

Kocher, Paul H "Marlowe's Art of War " SP, xxxix 207-225

Illustrates references to military practice in Tamburlaine and The Jew of Malta from contemporary treatises on the art of war.

Mc Closkey, John C "The Theme of Despair in Marlowe's Faustus." College English, iv. 110-113.

See below, s v Nashe, Kocher; Spenser, Baldwin

Merry Devil of Edmonton. Abrams, William A (ed) The Merry Devil of Edmonton, 1608, Edited with an Introduction and Notes and a Reprint of The Life and Death of the Merry Devil of Edmonton, by J. B., 1631 Durham, N. C

Horrell, Joseph "Peter Fabell and Dr. Faustus." N&Q, CLXXXIII 35-36

Interprets the induction of The Merry Devil of Edmonton as a parody of Marlowe's play

Middleton. Price, George R "A Critical Edition of Thomas Middleton's Michelmass Term" Summaries of Doctoral Diss., Univ. of Wisconsin, VI 289-291

Jacobs, Elizabeth R "A Critical Edition of Thomas Middleton's Women Beware Women" Summaries of Doctoral Diss., Univ. of Wisconsin, VI 286-287

More. Kernan, Gerald. "Saint Thomas More, Theologian" Thought, XVII 281-302.

On More's indebtedness to the fathers in his controversial writings

Sullivan, Sister M Rosenda The Cursus in the Prose of St Thomas More. (Cath Univ of Amer abstract of diss)

Murder of John Brewen. Gorrell, Robert M "John Payne Collier and The Murder of John Brewen" MLN, LVII. 441-444.

The name of Thomas Kyd written on the title-page of this anonymous tract may be a Collier forgery, and thus the usual attribution of the work to Kyd is extremely doubtful

Nashe. Kocher, Paul H "Nashe's Authorship of the Prose Scenes in Faustus" MLQ, III. 17-40

Advances the thesis that "Nashe wrote substantially all of the prose scenes, both comic and serious, printed in the first quarto, issued in 1604. He did so probably in the summer of 1594 in preparation for Henslowe's revival of the play in the autumn of that year"

—— "Some Nashe Marginalia Concerning Marlowe" MLN, LVII 45-49

An account of quotations from Faustus, evidently in Nashe's holograph, in the margins of the Folger copy of Leland's Principum Ac illustrium aliquot & eruditorum in Anglia virorum Encomia

Norden, John. Mc Colley, Grant "An Early Poetic Allusion to the Copernican Theory" JHI, III 355-357.

In John Norden's Vicissitudo Rerum, 1600

Peele. Parks, George B. "George Peele and his Friends as 'Ghost'-Poets" JEGP, XLI 527-536.

Claims for Peele and George Peckham the authorship of testimonial poems attributed to Drake, Hawkins, and Frobisher in A True Reporte, Of the late discoveries . . . of the Newfound Landes. By . . . Sir Humfrey Gilbert Knight, 1583

Prayer Book. Dodds, Walter S "The Rhetorical Style of the Collects in the Book of Common Prayer" Quar. Jour. of Speech, XXVIII 407-414.

Points out the Gorgianic figures in the original and translated collects

Randolph. Bowers, Fredson T. (ed) The Fary Knight, or Oberon the Second A Manuscript Play Attributed to Thomas Randolph Chapel Hill (Univ. of Virginia Studies, No 2)

The MS, once the property of Garrick, is now in the Folger Shakespeare Library.

—— "Thomas Randolph's Salting." MP, XXXIX 275-280.

Describes, from a MS, a comic monologue presumably spoken at a banquet at Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1627

Rastell. Nugent, Elizabeth M. "Sources of John Rastell's The Nature of the Four Elements" PMLA, LVII 74-88

Prints parallel passages from the play and from Sacrobosco's Tractatus de Sphaera, the Margaria Philosophica, Caxton's Mirror of the World, Waldseemüller's Cosmographiae Introductio, and Trevisa's translation of Bartholomaeus

Redford. Withington, Robert "Experience, the Mother of Science" PMLA, LVII 592

Addendum to Excursions in English Drama (1937)

Shakespeare. Barber, C L "The Use of Comedy in As You Like It" PQ, XXI 353-367

——— Brooke, Tucker "The License for Shakespeare's Marriage" MLN, LVII 687-688

Comments on J G McManaway's note, cited below Dr McManaway replies

Bruce, Dorothy H. "The Merry Wives and Two Brethren" SP, XXXIX 265-278.

Parallels between the main plot of the play and "Of Two Brethren and their Wives" (Riches his Farewell, 1581)

Cain, H Edward "An Emendation in Romeo and Juliet" SAB, XVII 57-60
Proposes allo steccato (= to the lists) for alla stoccata (III 1 69)

Calhoun, Howell V "James I and the Witch Scenes in Macbeth" SAB, XVII 184-189

Parallels between the witch scenes and the Daemonologie and News from Scotland

Campbell, Oscar J "What is the Matter with Hamlet?" Yale Rev, XXXII 309-322

The alternating excitement and depression of Hamlet's melancholia set the rhythm of the play

Cox, Ernest H. "Shakespeare and some Conventions of Old Age" SP, XXXIX 36-46

Shakespeare's descriptions of old age for the most part correspond to conventional medieval conceptions

Craig, Hardin "Shakespeare's Development as a Dramatist in the Light of His Experience" SP, XXXIX 226-238

"Shakespeare was, not so much an imitator of others, not so much an unguided mystical force, as a leader of his age" in his art

Deutschberger, Paul "Shakespeare on Degree a Study in Backgrounds" SAB, XVII. 200-207.

Finds parallels to the argument of Ulysses' speech on degree (Troilus and Cressida I iii) in Elyot, Cheke, and Hooker.

Doran, Madeleine "An Evaluation of Evidence in Shakespearean Textual Criticism" Eng Inst Annual, 1941, pp. 95-114 ——— "Imagery in Richard II and in Henry IV" MLR, XXXVII. 113-122.

Observations on the difference in quality rather than substance in the imagery of the two plays.

Draper, John W. "The Character of Richard II" PQ, xxi 228-236

———"Benedick and Beatrice" JEGP, xli 140-149

Finds that "the Beatrice and Benedick plot progresses by stages at once logical and psychological to a reasonable comic end"

———"Et in Illyria Feste" SAB, xvii 25-32

Conclusion of the article in xvi 220-228

Durham, W H "What Art Thou, Angelo?" Univ of Calif Pub in English, viii (1941) 155-174

Discusses Shakespeare's exploitation of the comic possibilities of self-deception and lack of self-knowledge in his comedies and suggests that the transition to the tragedies and their preoccupation with appearance and reality is perfectly natural

Durilin, S "Ira Aldridge" SAB, xvii 33-39

An account of the American Negro actor who played Shakespeare in Russia, 1858-1867

Eliason, Norman E "Shakespeare's Purgative Drug Cyme" MLN, lvii 663-665

Suggests that cyme (Macbeth, V iii 55-56) may be a doublet for cumn=a plant possessing carminative powers

Evans, G Blakemore "Shakespeare's Julius Caesar—A Seventeenth Century Manuscript" JEGP, xli 401-417

A detailed account of a MS now in the Folger Shakespeare Library

Feely, Joseph M A Cypher Idyll anent the Little Western Flower Rochester

Grace, William J "The Cosmic Sense in Shakespearean Tragedy" Sewanee Rev, i 433-445.

"As a fiction, and as a deliberate dramatic irony in order to bring about tragic pity, Shakespeare deliberately blacks out from the conclusions of his tragedies the organic supernaturalism that is yet deeply part of his thinking"

Greer, C A "Revision and Adaptation in 1 Henry VI." Univ of Texas ... Studies in English, 1942, pp 110-120

Further reasons for believing that the basis was a lost play.

Harmon, Alice "How Great Was Shakespeare's Debt to Montaigne?" PMLA, lvii. 988-1008.

Shows that the "aphoristic matter which Montaigne and Shakespeare have in common was easily accessible to Shakespeare in other sources than the Essays"

Hastings, William T "The Hardboiled Shakspeare." SAB, xvii 114-125.

Breaks a lance in defense of Titus Andronicus, "a fine example of youthful power unleashed, even if taking a wayward direction alien to that of its later happy development."

Hinman, Charlton J K "The Printing of the First Quarto of Othello" Univ. of Virginia Abstracts of Diss, 1941, pp 5-8.

Houk, Raymond A. "The Evolution of The Taming of the Shrew" PMLA, lvii 1009-1038

Argues that The Taming of the Shrew and The Taming of a Shrew derive from a common source ———"Strata in The Taming of the Shrew" SP, xxxix 291-302.

Criticizes Miss Ashton's article (PQ, vi 151-160) and maintains that the folio text embodies only one revision by Shakespeare.

Jackson, James L "The Exchange of Weapons in Hamlet" MLN, LVII 50-55

Argues that left-hand seizure was the method intended by Shakespeare

——— "The Fencing Actor-Lines in Shakspeare's Plays" MLN, LVII 615-621

Fencing parts fell almost entirely to Burbage and Sly

Jacob, Cary F "Reality and The Merchant of Venice" Quar Jour of Speech, XXVIII 307-315

On the play's "remarkable fidelity to the spirit of the times"

Kennedy, Milton B The Oration in Shakespeare Chapel Hill

King, Thomson "The Taming of the Shrew." SAB, XVII 73-79

Kokeritz, Helge "Shakespeare's night-rule." Language, XVIII 40-44

Rule is a variant of revel and not the word rule, regula

Langdale, A Barnett. "Did Shakespeare Miss the Road to Warkworth?" SAB, XVII. 156-159

Finds "topographical inconsistencies" in 2 Henry IV, I i

Law, Robert A "An Echo of Homer in Henry the Fifth." Univ of Texas . . Studies in English, 1942, pp 105-109

Lawrence, William W "Troilus, Cressida and Thersites" MLR, XXXVII 422-437.

Emphasizes the traditional attitude of the public towards the story as a factor in Shakespeare's treatment, and questions the interpretation of Professor Campbell

McCloskey, John C. "Fear of the People as a Minor Motive in Shakspeare" SAB, XVII 67-72.

Mackenzie, W Roy "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern" Washington Univ Stud, New Series, Lang and Lit., No 14, pp 221-244 (Shipley Festschrift).
 Contends that Rosencrantz and Guildenstern knew nothing about the king's plan to kill Hamlet in England

Mc Manaway, James G "The License for Shakespeare's Marriage" MLN, LVII. 450-451

Suggests the reading "Item eodem die salutis emanavit licencia"

Neilson, William A., and Hill, Charles J (edd) The Complete Plays and Poems of William Shakespeare: A New Text, Edited with Introduction and Notes Boston.

A revision of The Complete Works of William Shakespeare ("The Cambridge Poets," 1906)

Nutt, Sarah M "The Arctic Voyages of William Barents in Probable Relation to Certain of Shakespeare's Plays." SP, XXXIX. 240-264

Seeks the sources of passages in eight plays in de Veer's narrative of Barent's three voyages

Ogburn, Vincent H "The Merry Wives Quarto, a Farce Interlude" PMLA, LVII 654-660

Supposes that the Q text is an adaptation of F designed to convert it into a "farce interlude"

Phelps, John. "The Source of Love's Labour's Lost" SAB, XVII. 97-102

Claims the credit of having first suggested, in 1899, the meeting at Nérac in 1578-9 as the source of the play

Pitcher, Seymour M "Two Notes on Shakespeare" PQ, XXI 239-240
 "Launcelot's Blessing" (Merch of Ven, II ii) and "Alas, Poor Yorick"

Potts, Abbie F "Spenserian 'Courtesy' and 'Temperance' in Much Ado about Nothing" SAB, XVII 103-111, 126-133

Traces parallels between Beatrice and Miabella (and other characters), Hero and Serena, Claudio and Calidore, Benedick and Braggadochio

Prior, Moody E "The Play Scene in Hamlet" ELH, ix 188-197

Reviews the various theories and suggests that, since the Elizabethan dumb-show was usually merely symbolic of the action of the play proper, Hamlet's use of the dumb-show and play with identical situations was a magnificently executed contrivance which served as a double trap for the cautious and self-controlled Claudius

Sampley, Arthur M "Hamlet among the Mechanists" SAB, XVII 134-149
 Structures on the views of C M Lewis, Robertson, Stoll, and T S Eliot

Smith, Lewis W "Shakespeare and the Speaking Line" Poet Lore, XLVIII 61-70

In Shakespeare's blank verse, dramatic lines (in which the second, fourth, and fifth or the third and fifth stresses are heavy) gradually prevail over lyrical lines (the first, third, and fifth stresses are heavy), this development might be used as a test of the sequence of the plays

Smith, M Ellwood "Note on 'Shakespeare in America'" SAB, XVII 61-62
 Calls attention to a story told by Parkman of a volume of Shakespeare on the frontier in 1764

Spencer, Hazelton "Shakespearean Cuts in Restoration Dublin" PMLA, LVII 575-576

Comments on R C Bald's article (PMLA, LVI 369-378)

Spencer, Theodore Shakespeare and the Nature of Man N Y (Lowell Lectures, 1942)

——— "Appearance and Reality in Shakespeare's Last Plays." MP, XXXIX. 265-274

Contends that the last plays affirm the beauty of humanity purged of evil and that in thus resolving the conflict between good and evil as his contemporaries conceived it—the bestiality of human nature v the capacity of the soul "to couple herself with the nature of angels"—Shakespeare worked out an original solution of the problem

Stone, George W, Jr "Garrick's Treatment of Shakespeare's Play, and his Influence upon the Changed Attitude of Shakespearean Criticism during the Eighteenth Century" Harvard Univ. Summaries of Theses 1940, pp 368-372

Stunz, Arthur N "The Date of Macbeth" ELH, ix 95-105.

Adduces new evidence in support of the dating of the play in May or June, 1606

Swan, Marshall W "Shakespeare's 'Poems': The First Three Boston Editions" Papers of the Bibliographical Soc of America, XXXVI 27-36

Tannenbaum, Samuel A "Shakespeare and his Contemporaries (A Classified Bibliography for 1941)" SAB, XVII. 2-17.

"Index of Names and Subjects," by Ralph P. Rosenberg, pp. 18-24

Thayer, Tiffany "Nerissa's Ring" Am N&Q, II 87

On the probable origin of this episode in The Merchant of Venice

Wales, Julia G. "Horatio's Commentary: A Study on the Warp and Woof of Hamlet" SAB, XVII 40-56

On the sources

Walley, Harold R. "Shakespeare's Debt to Marlowe in Romeo and Juliet" PQ, XXI 257-267

On the influence of Hero and Leander in the play

Walsh, Groesbeck, and Pool, R. M. "Laterality Dominance in Shakespeare's Plays" Southern Medicine & Surgery, CIV 51-58

Watkins, W. B. C. "The Two Techniques in King Lear" RES, XVIII 1-26

The first part of the paper discusses resemblances between Richard II and King Lear, the remainder considers the techniques

Webster, Margaret Shakespeare Without Tears N. Y.

Whitridge, Arnold "Shakespeare and Delacroix" SAB, XVII 167-183

See SECTION III, s v Hornstein, SECTION IX, s v Tennyson, HARRISON, AMERICAN LITERATURE, SECTION III, s v Whitman, Falk, GERMANIC, SECTION II, Scandinavian Countries, s v Oehlenschläger, Willey

Sidney. Dowlin, Cornell M. "Sidney's Two Definitions of Poetry" MLQ, III 573-581

——— Gilbert, Allan H. "A Poem Wrongly Attributed to Sidney" MLN, LVII 264.

A poem attributed to Sidney in Englands Parnassus is a stanza from the Faerie Queene

Wiles, A. G. D. "Parallel Analyses of the Two Versions of Sidney's Arcadia" SP, XXXIX 167-206

A detailed comparison, leading to the conclusion that the revised version is artistically superior

Sir John Oldcastle. Adkins, Mary G. M. "Sixteenth-Century Religious and Political Implications in Sir John Oldcastle" Univ. of Texas Studies in English, 1942, pp. 86-104

Spenser. Beall, Chandler B. "A Tasso Imitation in Spenser" MLQ, III 559-560.

——— Bennett, Josephine W. The Evolution of "The Faerie Queene" Chicago

——— "Spenser's Garden of Adonis Revisited" JEGP, XLI 53-78.

A study of FQ, III, VI, 29-50, devoted very largely to controverting views advanced by Brents Stirling (PMLA, XLIX 501-538), and re-affirming her belief in the neo-Platonic sources of the passage

Baldwin, T. W. "The Genesis of Some Passages Which Spenser Borrowed from Marlowe" ELH, IX 157-187.

A study of the sources of the passages in Tamburlaine which parallel those in Spenser indicates clearly that Spenser was the borrower and suggests a dating around the end of 1587 for the composition of the first two books of the Faerie Queene.

Gilbert, Allan H. "Spenserian Armor" PMLA, LVII 981-987.

Comments on Spenser's descriptions of armor, finds them romantic rather than realistic

Gottfried, Rudolf "The 'G. W Senior' and 'G W I' of Spenser's Amoretti" MLQ, III 543-546

Heffner, Ray "Spenser's View of Ireland Some Observations." MLQ, III 507-515

Hulbert, Viola B "Diggon Davie" JEGP, xli 349-367

Identifies the "farre countrye" of the September eclogue in the Shepherd's Calendar with Wales, and Diggon Davie with Richard Davies, Bishop of St Asaph's

Hutton, James "Spenser and the 'Cinq Points en Amours'" MLN, LVII 657-661.

Believes that the names of the six knights in Faerie Queene, III i 45, are derived from moral treatises dealing with the five stages of amatory progression Koller, Kathrine "The Travayled Pylgrime by Stephen Batman and Book Two of The Faerie Queene" MLQ, III 535-541.

Kuhn, Bertha M "Spenser's Faerie Queene and Fowre Hymnes in the Light of Some Medieval and Renaissance Evaluations of Plato's Doctrine of Ideas" Univ of Washington Abstracts of Theses, vi 269-272

Landrum, Grace W "Imagery in the Faerie Queene Based on Domestic and Occupational Life" SAB, xvii 190-199 (To be continued)

Mc Clennan, Joshua "Allegory and the Faerie Queene" Harvard Univ. . . Summaries of Theses 1940, pp 350-353

Ong, Walter J. "Spenser's View and the Tradition of the 'Wild' Irish" MLQ, III 561-571

Phillips, James E, Jr. "The Woman Ruler in Spenser's Faerie Queene" HLQ, v 211-234

"[Spenser's] expressed theory in the epic is an exact statement of the moderate Calvinist argument that, although government by women is against the laws of God and nature, God sometimes sees fit to raise up notable exceptions to the general rule"

Smith, Roland M. "Spenser's Tale of the Two Sons of Milesio" MLQ, III 547-557

Starnes, D. T "E. K's Classical Allusions Reconsidered." SP, xxxix 143-159

Traces E K's (and some of Spenser's) mythological data to contemporary dictionaries ———"Spenser and the Graces" PQ, xxi 268-282.

Spenser and E K made use of the dictionaries ———"Spenser and the Muses" Univ of Texas Studies in English, 1942, pp 31-58.

Spenser's indebtedness again to well-known dictionaries, and to Erasmus

Sterling, Brents "Spenser's Platonic Garden" JEGP, xli 482-486

Replies to Mrs Bennett's article listed above Mrs Bennett's rejoinder, "On Methods of Literary Interpretation," follows, pp 486-489

Stoll, Elmer E "Criticisms Criticized Spenser and Milton" JEGP, xli. 451-477.

A review of recent criticism

See above, s v Shakespeare, Potts

Tourneur. Waith, Eugene M "The Ascription of Speeches in The Revenger's Tragedy." MLN, LVII 119-121

Wars of Cyrus. Brawner, James P (ed) The Wars of Cyrus, an Early Classical Narrative Drama of the Child Actors Critical Edition with Introduction and Notes. Urbana (Illinois Studies in Lang and Lit, Vol XXVIII, Nos 3-4)

Whetstone. Izard, Thomas C George Whetstone, Mid-Elizabethan Gentleman of Letters, N Y (Columbia Univ Studies in Eng and Compar Lit, No 158)

Wilson, Robert. Mann, Irene R "The Text of the Plays of Robert Wilson" Univ of Virginia Abstracts of Diss, 1942, pp 5-8

VIII SEVENTEENTH CENTURY

Miscellaneous. Bozell, Ruth B "English Preachers of the Seventeenth Century on the Art of Preaching" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses 1939 (1940), pp. 56-59

Brandenburg, Alice S "The Dynamic Image in Metaphysical Poetry" PMLA, LVII 1039-1045

The dramatic quality and the vitality of Donne's poetry derives, in part at least, from the predominance of dynamic imagery, i e, that which describes the way in which objects act or interact

Houghton, Walter E, Jr "The English Virtuoso in the Seventeenth Century" JHI, III 51-73, 190-219

On the devotees of painting, science, antiquities, etc

Knowles, Edin B, Jr Four Articles on Don Quixote in England N Y, 1941
Selections from a N Y Univ diss The first item, "Don Quixote in England before 1660," appears here for the first time The remaining items are reprints from PQ, HR, and Hisp, and have been listed in previous issues of the American Bibliography

Patrick, J Max "The Literature of the Diggers." Univ of Toronto Qu, XII 95-110

A review article on D W Petegorsky, Left-wing Democracy in the English Civil War and G H Sabine's edition of Gerrard Winstanley

Smith, Philip A "Neo-Stoicism in English Prose of the Seventeenth Century" Harvard Univ. Summaries of Theses 1940, pp 363-367

Tucker, Joseph E. "English Translations from the French, 1650-1700. Corrections and Additions to the C.B.E.L." PQ, XXI 391-404

Utley, Francis L "Two Seventeenth Century Anglo-Saxon Poems." MLQ, III 243-261.

Prints Anglo-Saxon poems written by Abraham Wheloc and William Retchford for Irenodia Cantabrigiensis, a volume published at Cambridge in praise of Charles I's visit to Edinburgh in 1641.

Bacon. Anderson, F. H "Bacon on Platonism" Univ. of Toronto Qu, XI. 154-166

Haight, Gordon S. (ed) Essays and New Atlantis N Y

Mc Clure, N. E "King James on Bacon" LTLS, Jan. 17, 1942 p. 31.

An account of the King's comment as recorded in a letter of John Chamberlain

Behn. Baker, Herschel "Mrs Behn Forgets" Univ of Texas Studies in English, 1942, pp 121-123

Browne. Ewing, Majl "A Note on the Sir Thomas Browne—Sir William Dugdale Letters" PQ, xxi 425-427

Suggests change in the date and sequence of four letters

Gay, Robert M "Browne's Hydriotaphia" Explicator, I, item 11.

Brief explanation of an allusion in Chap V

Bunyan. See below, s. v. Dent.

Burnet. Rodman, George B "Bishop Burnet and the Thought of His Own Time" Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ of Wisconsin, vi 291-293

Burton. Blau, Joseph L "Robert Burton on Voice and Speech" Quar Jour of Speech, xxviii 461-464

Cocker, Edward. Noyes, Gertrude E "Edward Cocker and 'Cocker's English Dictionary'" N&Q, CLXXXII 298-300

Traces the sources of both editions (1704, 1715) to older dictionaries and infers that the work "was doubtless a booksellers' compilation utilizing the good trade names of Cocker and Hawkins [the editor of Cocker's posthumous schoolbooks], both long dead" See also CLXXXIII 142

Cokain, Sir Aston. Mathews, Ernst G "Cokain's The Obstinate Lady and the Arcaucana" MLN, LVII 57-58.

On Cokain's indebtedness to a passage in Alonso de Ercilla y Zúñiga's oratorical epic

Congreve. Avery Emmett L "The Première of The Mourning Bride." MLN, LVII 55-57

Argues that the first performance was on Saturday, Feb 20, 1696/7

Cook, John. See below, s. v. Milton Wolff

Cartwright, William. Danton, J. Periam "William Cartwright and His Comedies, Tragi-Comedies, With Other Poems . . . 1651" Library Quar, xii 438-456
A bibliographical study.

Evans, Gwynne B "The Life and Works of William Cartwright" Harvard Univ. . . Summaries of Theses . . . 1940, pp. 342-347.

—— "Comedies, Tragi-Comedies, With Other Poems, By Mr William Cartwright (1651). A Bibliographical Study" Library, n s, xxiii 12-22

Cleland. Molyneux, Max. "Ἡρω-παίδεια or The Institution of a Young Nobleman by James Cleland Edited with Introduction and Notes" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . . 1937 (1939), pp 27-29

Cowley. Simmons, J "An Unpublished Letter from Abraham Cowley" MLN, LVII 194-195.

Publishes the text of a letter in the Bodleian

Davies, Sir John. Howard, Clare (ed) The Poems of Sir John Davies, Reproduced in Facsimile from the First Editions in the Henry E Huntington Library and Art Gallery, with an Introduction and Notes N Y, 1941

Davies. Murphy, Charles D "John Davies's Versification of Sidney's Prose" PQ, xxi 410-414

Dent, Arthur. Law, Robert A "'Muck-Rakers' before Bunyan." MLN, LVII 455-457

Finds this term used in the sense of miser in Arthur Dent's The Plain Man's Pathway to Heaven, 1601

Digby, Kenelm. Beall, Chandler B "Kenelm Digby's 'Thuscan Virgil'" MLN, LVII 284

Identifies a quotation from Guarini in Observations upon Religio Medici

Donne. Battenhouse, Roy W "The Grounds of Religious Toleration in the Thought of John Donne" Church History, XI 217-248.

Bennett, Roger E (ed) The Complete Poems of John Donne. Chicago

———"John Donne and the Earl of Essex" MLQ, III 603-604

Cooper, Harold "John Donne and Virginia in 1610" MLN, LVII 661-663

On Donne's attempt to secure the post as "secretarie at Virginia" in 1610 and the probable significance of the episode in suggesting a date of composition for Elegy V

Duncan, Edgar H "Donne's Alchemical Figures" ELH, IX 272-585

"This paper seeks to analyze the alchemical figures in Donne's poetry against a background of the theories and practices of alchemy as recorded in the compendious literature of science current in the late sixteenth and early seventeenth century"

Fiedler, Leslie A. "John Donne's Songs and Sonnets a Reinterpretation in the Light of their Traditional Backgrounds" Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ of Wisconsin, VI 281-282.

Moses, W. R The Metaphysical Conceit in the Poems of John Donne. Nashville, 1941 (Vanderbilt Univ abstract of diss)

Stein, Arnold "Donne and the Couplet." PMLA, LVII 676-696

Donne's taste for "strong austere music leads him to avoid the full sensuous melody" of conventional rhyme by choosing rhyme-words without overtones, by rhyming masculine and feminine endings, and above all by cultivating runover lines, the taste for such a style runs parallel to the seventeenth-century vogue of "Attic" prose

White, William John Donne since 1900. A Bibliography of Periodical Articles. Boston

Reprinted from the Bull of Bibliography.

See above, s v Miscellaneous, Brandenburg, SECTION VI, s v Chaucer, Duncan.

Drama. Alleman, Gellert S. Matrimonial Law and the Materials of Restoration Comedy Wallingford, Pa.

The present volume is part of a larger study, English Law and the Materials of Restoration Comedy, presented as a Univ of Penna diss.

Miles, Theodore. "Place-Realism in a Group of Caroline Plays" RES, XVIII. 428-440

Paine, Clarence S "The Comedy of Manners (1660-1700). A Reference Guide to the Comedy of the Restoration" (cont) Bull. of Bibliography, XVII. 116-117, 145-148.

Stevenson, Allan H "James Shirley and the Actors at the First Irish Theater." MP, XL 147-160.

Suggests that the nucleus of the Dublin company was four members of the dissolved Queen's company, considers also the evidence for assigning several other London actors to the roster

Wells, Staring B A Comparison between Two Stages, a Late Restoration Book of the Theatre Princeton (Princeton Stud in English, Vol 26).

Dryden. Evans, G Blakemore. "Dryden's State of Innocence" LTLS, March 21, 1942, p 144

An account of the Harvard MS of this work

Osborn, James M "Macdonald's Bibliography of Dryden" MP, xxxix 313-319.

Smith, Russell J "Dryden and Shadwell A Study in Literary Controversy" Cornell Univ. Abstracts of Theses . 1941, pp 54-56

"Shadwell must receive considerable credit for Dryden's position as a critic"

Ward, Charles E (ed) The Letters of John Dryden, with Letters Addressed to Him Durham.

Herbert of Cherbury. Hanford, James H "Lord Herbert of Cherbury and His Son" HLQ, v. 317-332

An account, based on the papers of John Egerton now in the Huntington Library, of Herbert's difficulties, chiefly over financial matters, with his eldest son Richard

Herrick. Regenos, Graydon W. "The Influence of Horace on Robert Herrick" Trans and Proc Am. Philological Assoc., lxxii (1941) xl-xli

Hind, John. Weld, John S "Notes on the Novels of John Hind" PQ, xxi 171-178

Traces the plagiarisms from Greene and others (Lodge, Pettie, etc)

Keith, George. Kirby, Ethyn W George Keith (1638-1716) N Y.

Ladies Dictionary. Noyes, Gertrude E "John Dunton's Ladies Dictionary, 1694." PQ, xxi 129-145

Traces the shameless appropriations in this mosaic for and about women

Lithgow, William A[dams], E L "The Pilgrimes Farewell" More Books, xvii 332

Notes on the verses published by Lithgow at Edinburgh in 1618 (STC 15715)

Marvell. Roberts, John H "Marvell's To His Coy Mistress" Explicator, i, item 17.

Offers a running comment on the poem

Milton. Beller, Elmer A "Milton and Mercurius Politicus" HLQ, v. 479-487

Finds no evidence that Milton had a hand in any of the editorials in this journal

Benham, Allen R "Reply to Dr Parsons" ELH, ix 116-117.

Reaffirms the view of "The Earliest Life of Milton" proposed in ELH, vi 245-255

Dieknoff, John S "The Function of the Prologues in Paradise Lost" PMLA, lvii 697-704.

The four prologues not only mark stages in the development of the narrative but also mark stages in the development of the argument and constitute ethical proof of it, i.e., proof of Milton's inspired authority.

Drew, Helen L "The Diction of Milton's Prose" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . 1938 (1939), pp. 29-32

Eastland, Elizabeth W. "Milton's Ethics" Bulletin of Vanderbilt Univ, Vol XL, No 10 (1941), pp 17-19 (abstract of diss)

Elledge, Scott B "Milton's Imagery" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses 1941, pp 32-35

Evans, G Blakemore "Two New Manuscript Versions of Milton's Hobson Poems" MLN, LVII 192-194

Cites variant readings from two MSS now in the Folger and the Huntington Libraries respectively

Fink, Z S "The Theory of the Mixed State and the Development of Milton's Political Thought" PMLA, LVII 705-736

A survey of Milton's political ideas, emphasizing his lifelong belief in the superiority of the mixed state based on a system of checks and balances in which the aristocracy is dominant and relating to this concept Milton's view on the episcopate, on Cromwell, and on Parliament

French, J Milton "Milton's Supplicats" HLQ, v 349-359

Prints Milton's "supplicats" for the degrees of B A and M A, and also, from a MS book dated 1665, an account of the process of being examined in responsions The latter is by John Buck, who was beadle of Cambridge University during Milton's period of residence

Gilbert, Allan H. "The Theological Basis of Satan's Rebellion and the Function of Abdiel in Paradise Lost" MP, XL, 19-42

Finds the theological basis in the second psalm and Hebrews I, Abdiel not only expresses important ideas but imparts vigor and dramatic heightening to the story

Gilman, W E "Milton's Rhetoric Studies in His Defense of Liberty" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . . . 1937 (1938), pp 67-70

Hall, Amy V. "Milton and The City of God," Univ of Washington Abstracts of Theses, VI 267-268

Haller, William, and Haller, Malleville "The Puritan Art of Love" HLQ, v 235-272.

An "account of the teachings of the Puritan pulpit concerning love and marriage . . during the three or four generations before the publication of Milton's first divorce tract, in 1643"

Haug, Ralph A. "'They also serve . .'" N&Q, CLXXXIII 224-225.

Traces the last line of the sonnet On his Blindness to 1 Samuel xxx, 24

Kelly, Sister Margaret Teresa "The Influence of Dante's Paradiso upon Milton" Cornell Univ. Abstracts of Theses 1938 (1939), pp 33-35

Le Comte, Edward S "New Light on the 'Haemony' Passage in Comus" PQ, XXI 283-298

Lewis, Clarissa O. "A Further Note on Milton's Pro Populo Anglicano Defensio" Library, n s, XXIII 45-47

On textual variants in the editions of 1651 and 1652

Mc Dill, Joseph M Milton and the Pattern of Calvinism Nashville (Vanderbilt Univ diss)

Myhr, Ivar L "The Evolution and Practice of Milton's Epic Theory" Bulletin of Vanderbilt Univ, Vol XL, No 10 (1940), pp 14-15 (abstract of diss).

Neilson, William A "On Milton's Conception of Poetry" Studies in the History of Culture: The Disciplines of the Humanities. (Menasha), pp 156-160.

Parker, William R "Milton and Edward Phillips" LTLS, Feb 28, 1942, p 108

Reasons for doubting that Milton had any part in the Theatrum Poetarum

——— "Milton on King James the Second" MLQ, III 41-44

A description of the pamphlet Pro Populo Adversus Tyrannos (1689), which is "largely a reprint of the first edition of Milton's Tenure of Kings and Magistrates, 1649, cleverly adapted by some one to apply to the political situation forty years later"

Parsons, Edward S "Concerning 'The Earliest Life of Milton'" ELH, ix 106-115

Argues against the view of A R Benham (ELH, VI) that Anthony à Wood's account of Milton was the source of the so-called "Earliest Life of Milton" Professor Benham replies See above

Ross, Malcolm M "Milton's Royalism A Study of the Conflict of Symbol and Idea in the Poems" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . 1941, pp 48-50
Attempts to analyze and explain the use of royalist symbolism in the anti-royalist content of Milton's poetry

Schultz, John H "Obscurantism in Milton and the Humanistic Tradition" Harvard Univ . . Summaries of Theses . 1940, pp 356-360

Svendsen, Kester "Milton and the Encyclopedias of Science" SP, xxxix 303-327

Illustrates some of Milton's scientific allusions by quotations from six current encyclopedias ——— "Cosmological Lore in Milton" ELH, ix 198-223.

An examination of Milton's references to cosmological phenomena in both his prose and his verse.

——— "'The Prudent Crane' Paradise Lost, VII, 425-431" N&Q, CLXXXIII 66-67

Testimony to the crane's "prudence" and to the habit of "easing their flight" with "mutual wing" from popular encyclopedias of science

Warner, Charles G "Materials for an Edition of Milton's History of Britain" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses 1941, pp. 57-58

Watson, Sara R "Milton's Ideal Day" PMLA, LVII 404-420.

Traces the theme of the ideal day (L'Allegro, Il Penseroso), including personal and melancholy elements, in pastoral literature from its beginnings

Wolff, Samuel L "Milton's 'Advocatum Nescio Quem'. Milton, Salmasius, and John Cook" MLQ, II (1941) 559-600

Light is thrown upon Milton's (First) Defence of the English People by a study of its relationship to Salmasius's Defensio Regia, to which it was a reply, and John Cook's King Charles His Case

See SECTION VII, s.v Spenser, Stoll, SECTION IX, s.v. Miscellaneous, Barker
Parker, Henry. Jordan, W K Men of Substance A Study of the Thought of Two English Revolutionaries, Henry Parker and Henry Robinson Chicago.

Peacham. Cawley, Robert R (ed) The Truth of our Times by Henry Peacham Reproduced in Facsimile from the Edition of 1638 N Y (Facsimile Text Soc. No 55)

Phillips, Edward. See above, Milton, Parker.

Prior. Wright, H Bunker "Matthew Prior's Funeral" MLN, LVII 341-345
An account of the obsequies based on the MS records of Prior's executors

Retchford, William. See above, s v Miscellaneous, Utley

Robinson, Henry. See above, s v Parker, Jordan

Ross. Zimansky, Curt A "The Literary Career of Thomas Ross" PQ, XXI 443-444

Rowlands, Samuel. Waith, Eugene M "Samuel Rowlands and Humor's Antique Faces" RES, XVIII 213-219

The last nine epigrams appear also in Humors Looking Glasse This and other reasons suggest Rowland's authorship of both collections

S., G. Parker, William R (ed) The Dignity of Kingship Asserted by G S Reproduced in Facsimile from the Edition of 1660 N Y (Facsimile Text Society, No 53)

Sandys. Davis, Richard B "Early Editions of George Sandys' 'Ovid'. The Circumstances of Production" Papers of the Bibliographical Soc of America, XXXV (1941) 255-276

Shadwell. See above, s v Dryden, Smith

Sonnet. Mitchell, Charles B "The English Sonnet in the Seventeenth Century, especially after Milton" Harvard Univ. . . . Summaries of Theses 1939, pp 239-243

Traherne. Daniels, R (ed) A Serious and Pathetical Contemplation of the Mercies of God, in Several Most Devout and Sublime Thanksgivings for the Same By Thomas Traherne Toronto, 1941. (Univ of Toronto Stud, Philol and Lit Ser, No 12)

Vaughan. Manilla, E L "Henry Vaughan and the Civil War" JEGP, XLII 514-526

Cites evidence from the poems to prove Vaughan's participation in the wars

—— "A Critical and Interpretative Study of Henry Vaughan as a Secular Poet" Ohio State Univ Abstracts of Doctors' Diss, No 36, pp 215-220

Walley, Harold R "The Strange Case of Olor Iscanus" RES, XVIII 27-37
Discusses the dates of the poems, suggests that the compiler was Thomas Powell, Vaughan's closest friend, and doubts that the volume was published without Vaughan's knowledge

Walton. Coon, Arthur M "The Life of Izaak Walton" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . 1938 (1939), pp. 26-28.

Wheloc, Abraham. See above, s v Miscellaneous, Utley

Wither. Templeman, William D "Some Commendatory Verses by George Wither" N&Q, CLXXXIII 365-366

Wycherley. Avery, Emmett L. "The Country Wife in the Eighteenth Century" Research Studies, State College of Wash, x 141-172.

IX EIGHTEENTH CENTURY

Miscellaneous. Anderson, Paul B "A Reply to John Robert Moore" PQ, XXI 419-423.

Defends his views (PQ, XIX. 244-260) against the criticism of Mr Moore (PQ, XX 38-45) Mr. Moore's rejoinder follows (p. 424).

Barker, Arthur " ' . . And on his Crest Sat Horror' Eighteenth century Interpretations of Milton's Sublimity and his Satan " Univ of Toronto Qu, xi 421-436

Illustrates the tendency of romantic ideas and emotions, in the eighteenth century, to cluster about a widening concept of the sublime in eighteenth century criticism of Milton

Bush, May D "Rational Proof of the Deity from the Order of Nature " ELH, ix 288-319

On the development of this theme in the scientific, philosophical, and poetical writings of the eighteenth century

Emery, Clark "Optics and Beauty " MLQ, iii 45-50

On the "scientific ingress into the domain of poetry" as illustrated in the poets' employment of optical theory

Fairchild, Hoxie N Religious Trends in English Poetry Vol II: 1740-1780, Religious Sentimentalism in the Age of Johnson N Y

Friedman, Arthur, and Landa, Louis A "English Literature, 1660-1800 A Current Bibliography " PQ, xxi 179-227

Gardner, William B "George Hickes and the Origin of the Bangorian Controversy " SP, xxxix 65-78

An account of the origin of the controversy designed to illustrate the literary works which allude to it

Garey, Doris B "Eighteenth-century Sentimentalism An Essay toward Definition " Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ of Wisconsin, vi 282-283

Harding, Harold F "English Rhetorical Theory, 1750-1800 " Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . 1937 (1938), pp 71-74

Hazen, A T A Bibliography of the Strawberry Hill Press, with a Record of the Prices at Which Copies Have Been Sold Together with a Bibliography and Census of the Detached Pieces, by A T Hazen and J P Kirby New Haven

Klingberg, Frank J "The Evolution of the Humanitarian Spirit in Eighteenth-Century England " Penna Mag of Hist and Biog, lxvi 260-278

Oake, Roger B "Political Elements in Criticism of Voltaire in England, 1732-47 " MLN, lvii 348-354

Randolph, Mary C " 'Hide-and-seek' Satires of the Restoration and XVIII-century " N&Q, clxxxiii 213-216

Lists 53 examples of satires purporting to have been delivered to the victim or found in a specified place

Robb, Margaret "Looking Backward" Quar Jour of Speech, xxviii 323-327

On early books on elocution, English and American

Tucker, Joseph E. "The Eighteenth Century English Translations of Molière " MLQ, iii 83-103

Addison. Atkins, Stuart "Addison's Cato i 1 47--53 " PQ, xxi 430-433

Mays, Morley J "Johnson and Blair on Addison's Prose Style " SP, xxxix 638-649

Morris, Robert L. "Addison's Mist Wit." MLN, lvii. 666-668

An interpretation of this phrase as Addison applied it to the verse of Cowley

Templeman, William D "Joseph Addison's 'Man-planter' " N&Q, CLXXXIII 311

Elucidates a passage in The Guardian, No 155

Akenside. Williams, Ralph M "Two Unpublished Poems by Mark Akenside " MLN, LVII 626-631

Behn, Aphra. Sypher, Wylie "A Note on the Realism of Mrs Behn's Oroonoko " MLQ, III 401-405

Argues that the author wrote from first-hand knowledge

Bentley. Laistner, M L W "Richard Bentley 1742-1942 " SP, XXXIX 510-523

A review of Bentley's achievement, emphasizing the wide range of his interests

Blake. Schorer, Mark "The Mask of William Blake " Yale Rev, XXXI 747-763.

Blake's own view of himself as an unlettered poet in whom divinity found utterance is a mask, partially required by temperament, partially fabricated to meet the necessities of history

——— "Mythology (for the Study of William Blake) " Kenyon Rev, IV. 366-380

Stone, George W, Jr, "Blake's The Tiger " Explicator, I, item 19

Boswell. Warnock, Robert "Boswell and Andrew Lumisden " MLQ, II (1941) 601-607

An account of Boswell's friendship with the secretary to the Old Pretender

——— "Boswell on the Grand Tour " SP, XXXIX 650-661

An account of Boswell's year in Italy (1765)

Burke. Bryant, Donald C "Burke's Relations with Writers and Artists." Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses 1937 (1938), pp 63-66

——— "The Contemporary Reception of Edmund Burke's Speaking " Washington Univ. Stud, New Series, Lang and Lit, No 14, pp 245-264 (Shipley Festschrift)

Cites contemporary evidence to show that, contrary to a persistent legend, Burke's speeches, for the most part, made a great impression in Parliament

Carver, P L "Burke and the Totalitarian System " Univ of Toronto Qu, XII 32-47

On Burke's inflexible opposition to the totalitarian doctrines of Bolingbroke

Copeland, Thomas W. "Edmund Burke and the Book Reviews in Dodsley's Annual Register " PMLA, LVII 446-468

Evidence for crediting to Burke all the reviews published 1758-1765 and some of those which appeared in later years

McNabb, Leroy C "A Rhetorical Study of the Principal Speeches of Burke " Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . . . 1937 (1938), pp 75-77.

Cambridge, R. O. Altick, Richard D "Mr. Cambridge Serenades the Berry Sisters " N&Q, CLXXXIII 158-161.

Prints seven unpublished poems

Emery, Clark "The Scribleriad's Electrifying Climax " PQ, XXI 438-441

Reference to electricity in Richard Owen Cambridge's poem, and in other eighteenth-century verse

See below, s v Pope, Altick.

Campbell, Thomas. Duffy, Charles. " 'The Wolf's Long Howl'." MLN, LVII, 123

On Campbell's indebtedness to The Sentimental Sailor, "by a young gentleman of Edinburgh" (1772)

Centlivre, Mrs. Boys, Richard C "A New Poem by Mrs Centlivre" MLN, LVII 361-362

Quotes a poem printed in the periodical-miscellany Caribbeana in 1732

Colman, George, the Elder. Vincent, Howard P "Christopher George Colman, 'Lunatick' " RES, XVIII 38-48

New light on the closing years drawn from documents in the P R O

Cowper. Keck, Wendell M "Cowper's Olney Hymns a Theological Study " Abstracts of Diss, Stanford Univ, 1940-41, pp 87-89

Then, Adelaide E "The Religion of John Newton " PQ, XXI 146-170.

Reexamination of the creed of William Cowper's friend

Defoe. Ross, John F Swift and Defoe, a Study in Relationship Berkeley, 1941 (Univ of Calif Pub in English, Vol XI)

Van Patten, Nathan "An Eskimo Translation of Defoe's 'Robinson Crusoe' Godthaab, Greenland, 1862-1865 " Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America, XXXVI 56-58.

Drama. Evans, Richard B Dramatic Participation in the Gothic Revival (Univ of Calif abstract of diss)

Ramsland, Clement "Britons Never Will Be Slaves, a Study in Whig Political Propaganda in the British Theatre, 1700-1742 " Quar Jour of Speech, XXVIII 393-399

Van Lennep, William (ed) The Reminiscences of Sarah Kemble Siddons, 1773-1785 Cambridge, Mass

See GERMANIC, SECTION II, Eighteenth and Early Nineteenth Centuries, s v Schmid, Price

Dyer, John. Williams, Ralph M "The Dyer Family of Aberglasney." Carmarthen Antiquary, I (1941) 30-42

New documents about the family, and especially the father, of the poet

Fatherless Fanny. Reeves, John K "The Mother of Fatherless Fanny " ELH, IX, 224-233.

Concludes that Clara Reeve was the author of at least part of this novel published 1819, twelve years after her death

Fielding. Avery, Emmett L "Proposals for a New London Theatre in 1737 " N&Q, CLXXXII 286-287

Reprints an advertisement from The Daily Advertiser (4 February) inviting builders to submit plans and connects the project, which came to nothing, with Fielding

Heilman, Robert B "Fielding and 'The First Gothic Revival'." MLN, LVII 671-673

Comment upon reflections in Fielding's writing of the vogue for Gothic architecture

Price, Lawrence M "The Works of Fielding on the German Stage, 1762-1801" JEGP, xli 257-278

Fielding, Sarah. Werner, Herman O, Jr "The Life and Works of Sarah Fielding" Harvard Univ Summaries of Theses 1939, pp 250-255

Foote, Samuel. Wimsatt, W K, Jr "Foote and a Friend of Boswell's A Note on The Nabob" MLN, lvii 325-335

A consideration of the prototypes of Sir Matthew Mite, hero of the play, and an account of the "nabob" George Gray, whom Foote met through Boswell

Garrick. See above, SECTION VII, s v Shakespeare, Stone.

Gay Bronson, Bertrand H "The Beggar's Opera" Univ of Calif Pub in English, viii (1941) 197-231

Attempts to account for the sensational success of the piece, emphasizing its parodies of popular songs and of Italian operas and the devastating irony of its view of life

Gibbon. Cochrane, C N "The Mind of Edward Gibbon" Univ of Toronto Qu, xii. 1-17 (to be continued).

While Gibbon's "general outlook was that of the so-called Age of Reason, his specific presumptions were those of . . . 'experimental science';" i.e., the method of inquiry of Locke and his followers

Tucker, William J "England's Greatest Historian" Catholic World, clv 38-43

Gildon, Charles. Litz, Francis E "The Sources of Charles Gildon's Complete Art of Poetry" ELH, ix 118-135.

On the nature and extent of Gildon's indebtedness to the critics he named as his sources

Goldsmith. Bell, Howard J "Goldsmith and the Pickle-Shop" MLN, lvii 121-122

In his famous argument with Dr Johnson, Goldsmith selected a pickleshop as harmful because the pickle was an appetizer and hence fostered gluttony

Lynskey, Winifred "Pluche and Derham, New Sources of Goodsmith" PMLA, lvii 435-445.

Borrowings from Pluche (La Spectacle de la Nature, translated as Nature Delineated, 1733) and from Derham (Physico-theology, 1713) in An History of the Earth and Animated Nature, and earlier writings

Parsons, Coleman O "Textual Variations in a Manuscript of She Stoops to Conquer" MP, xl 57-69.

Traces the evolution of the title and lists 91 textual variants between the Larpent MS and the edition of 1773, some of them author's revisions

Gray. Botting, Roland B. "Gray and Christopher Smart" MLN, lvii 360-361.

On the indebtedness of Gray's "Ode for Music" to the Song of David

Starr, Herbert W. "Gray's Opinion of Parnell" MLN, lvii 675-676

Explains Gray's cutting reference to Parnell in terms of Parnell's unsavoury poem entitled "Bacchus or the Drunken Metamorphosis" ——— "An Echo of L'Allegro in Gray's Bard" MLN, lvii 676.

Guthrie. Law, George L "Note on Guthrie's 'History of England' " N&Q, CLXXXIII 71-72

The work was published in 3 vols, not 4, and stops at 1660 instead of 1688, as promised

Hill, John. " 'Sir' John Hill versus the Royal Society " Isis, xxxiv 16-20
On Hill's satires

Hogarth. Read, Stanley E "Some Observations on William Hogarth's Analysis of Beauty. A Bibliographical Study " HLQ, v 360-373

Hume. Mossner, Ernest C "Hume as Literary Patron A Suppressed Review of Robert Henry's History of Great Britain, 1773." MP, xxxix 361-382

Prints, from the proof sheets, a review written for the Edinburgh Magazine and Review and explains how it came to be written and to be suppressed

Wallis, Wilson D "David Hume's Contribution to Social Science " Philosophical Essays in Honor of Edgar Arthur Singer, Jr (ed F P Clarke, and M C. Nahm), Phila., pp 358-371

Johnson. Freed, Lewis M "The Sources of Johnson's Dictionary." Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . 1939 (1940), pp 31-34

Green, Boylston "Possible Additions to the Johnson Canon " Yale Univ Library Gazette, xvi 70-79.

From the author's Yale Univ doctoral diss

Lam, George L "Johnson's Lives of the Poets. Their Origin, Text, and History, with Remarks on Sources and Comments on His Life of Cowley " Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . . 1938 (1939), pp 36-38

Mc Adam, E L, Jr "New Essays by Dr Johnson " RES, xviii 197-207
Prints three essays identified by clues in Bishop Percy's collection

Merrick, James. Wiklund, Philip R " 'The Benedicite Paraphrased by the Rev Mr Merrick'. A Correction " ELH, ix. 136-140

The Benedicite Paraphrased, attributed to Christopher Smart by R E Brittain (PMLA, lvi), is the work of James Merrick

Novel. Trauger, Wilmer K "Pedagogues and Pupils A Study in Eighteenth-Century Fiction " Harvard Univ . . Summaries of Theses . 1940, pp 373-378

Parnell. See above, s v Gray, Starr

Percy. Dennis, Leah "Thomas Percy. Antiquarian vs Man of Taste " PMLA, lvii 140-154

On the Reliques as a compromise between Percy's scholarly respect for accuracy and the temptation to cater for the literary taste of men like Shenstone and incidentally to advance his own career

Pope. Altick, Richard D. "Mr Pope Expands His Grotto " PQ, xxi 427-430

Pope's indebtedness for several favors to Richard Owen Cambridge

Reeve, Clara. See above, s v Fatherless Fanny.

Richardson. See below, Young, Pettit, AMERICAN LITERATURE, II, s v. Miscellaneous, Watters

Shebbeare, John. Foster, James R "Smollett's Pamphleteering Foe Shebbeare." PMLA, LVII 1053-1100

An account of the life of the original of Ferret in Sir Launcelot Greaves

Shenstone. Hughes, Helen S "Shenstone's Letters" PQ, XXI 405-409

Further account of MS material at Alnwick Castle and in the Wellesley College Library, with the text of two letters

Smart. Botting, Roland B. "Christopher Smart and the Lilliputian Magazine" ELH, IX 286-287

Adds a poem to the canon of Smart's writings

Brittain, Robert E "Christopher Smart's 'Hymns for the Amusement of Children'" Papers of the Bibliographical Soc of America, XXXV (1941) 61-65

See above, s v Gray, Botting, Merrick.

Smollett. Jones, Claude S Smollett Studies Berkeley and Los Angeles (Univ of Calif Pub. in English, IX, No 2)

Chapters on "Smollett and the Navy" and "Smollett and the Critical Review," with five appendices

Martz, Louis L. The Later Career of Tobias Smollett New Haven (Yale Studies in English, No 97)

Parker, Alice "Tobias Smollett and the Law" SP, XXXIX 545-558

A review of Smollett's experiences of prison and an analysis of his attitude towards the law and its punishments

See above, s v Shebbeare, John.

Steele. Blanchard, Rae "Richard Steele's West Indian Plantation" MP, XXXIX, 281-285.

Examines new data, chiefly bearing on financial transactions, from the archives at Bridgetown, Barbados ——— "Steeleiana. An Eighteenth-Century Account Book" SP, XXXIX 502-509.

New light on Steele's domestic history ——— "Additions to The Correspondence of Richard Steele" RES, XVIII, 466-470.

Sterne. Lehman, B. H. "Of Time, Personality, and the Author, a Study of Tristram Shandy: Comedy." Univ of Calif Pub in English, VIII (1941) 233-250

Explains and vindicates Sterne's "rendering of reality without moral . . . preoccupation" and the form of the novel as the appropriate vehicle of such a view.

Swift. Darnall, F. M. "Old Wine in New Bottles" So. Atl. Qu, XLI 53-63.

Denies Swift's misanthropy and discerns the exposition of "Utopian ideals" in Gulliver's Travels.

Davis, Herbert Stella, a Gentlewoman of the Eighteenth Century N. Y.

Gove, Philip G "Gildon's 'Fortunate Shipwreck' as Background for Gulliver's Travels." RES, XVIII 470-478.

Landa, Louis A. "A Modest Proposal and Populousness" MP, XL, 161-170.

Comments on A Modest Proposal as an ironic protest against the maxim that the people are the riches of a nation and traces the same point of view in other tracts by Swift Neumann, J. H. "Jonathan Swift and English Pronunciation" Quar Jour of Speech, xxviii 198-201.

Notes Swift's interest in pronunciation and discusses some of his practices

Ross, John F. Swift and Defoe: A Study in Relationship Berkeley (Univ of California Pub in English, vol. xi)

———"The Final Comedy of Lemuel Gulliver" Univ of Calif Pub in English, viii (1941) 175-196

Dissociates Swift from the Gulliver of the fourth voyage and contends that in its last three chapters Swift repudiates Gulliver's misanthropy

See above, s v Defoe, Ross

Thomson. Linck, Orville F. "Benevolism in the Works of James Thomson" Summaries of Doctoral Diss Northwestern Univ, ix (1941) 23-28

Mc Killop, Alan D. The Background of Thomson's Seasons Minneapolis

Wells, John E. "Thomson's Britannia: Issues, Attribution, Date, Variants" MP, xl 43-56

———"Thomson's Spring: Early Editions True and False" Library, n s, xxii 223-243

———"Thomson's Agamemnon and Edward and Eleonora—First Printings" RES, xviii 478-486

Walpole. Chase, Isabel W. Horace Walpole: Gardener Princeton

See above, s v Miscellaneous, Hazen

Young. Pettit, Henry J. "A History of Young's Night Thoughts" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses 1938 (1939), pp 42-45

———"The Text of Edward Young's Letters to Samuel Richardson" MLN, lvii 668-670

X NINETEENTH CENTURY

Miscellaneous. Abrams, Meyer H. "Romantic Theories of Poetry and Criticism" Harvard Univ Summaries of Theses. 1940, pp 331-334.

On the development of critical theory between Johnson's "Life of Pope" (1781) and Hazlitt's "On Poetry in General" (1818)

Bryant, William A. "Conceptions of America and Americans by the English Romantic Poets 1790-1850" Bulletin of Vanderbilt Univ, Vol XLII, No 11, pp 5-6 (abstract of diss)

Caldwell, J. R. "The Solemn Romantics" Univ of Calif Pub in English, viii (1941) 251-271

The notorious humorlessness of Wordsworth, Coleridge, Shelley, and Keats is the necessary result of "habits and attitudes of mind actively efficient in their serious and successful works"

Dykes, Eva B. The Negro in English Romantic Thought, or A Study of Sympathy for the Oppressed Washington, D. C.

Gohdes, Clarence. "British Interest in American Literature during the Latter Part of the Nineteenth Century as Reflected by Mudie's Select Library." Am Lit, xiii 356-362.

Graham, Walter "The Romantic Movement: A Selective and Critical Bibliography for the Year 1941." ELH, ix 1-35

Hudson, Arthur P. "Romantic Apologiae for Hamlet's Treatment of Ophelia" ELH, ix 59-70.

The criticism of Coleridge, Lamb, and Hazlitt, and its reflection in Christabel

Jones, Louis C. The Clubs of the Georgian Rakes N Y (Columbia Univ Studies in Eng and Compar Lit, No 157)

Knight, G Wilson The Starlit Dome Studies in the Poetry of Vision London, 1941

Essays on Wordsworth, Coleridge, Shelley, and Keats

Larrabee, Stephen A English Bards and Grecian Marbles the Relationship between Sculpture and Poetry, Especially in the Romantic Period N Y

Mayo, Robert D. "The Gothic Short Story in the Magazines" MLR, xxxvii 448-454

"An examination of the periodical literature of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries reveals that for twenty-five years before Blackwood's was established in 1817, the editors of English magazines had enlivened their pages with sensational fiction in both serial and short-story form, and that by 1810 the Gothic short story was a well-defined and familiar species of fiction" It is therefore unnecessary to derive it from early chapbooks of the Gothic school

Morrisette, Bruce A "Early English and American Critics of French Symbolism" Washington Univ Stud, New Series, Lang. and Lit, No 14, pp 159-180 (Shipley Festschrift)

Ratchford, Fannie E "Thomas J. Wise to John Henry Wrenn on Nineteenth Century Bibliography" Papers of the Bibliographical Soc. of America, xxxvi 215-228

Templeman, William D (ed) "Victorian Bibliography for 1941" MP, xxxix. 383-419

Udell, Sister Mary Gonzaga A Theory of Criticism of Fiction in its Moral Aspects according to Thomistic Principles Washington, D C, 1941 (Catholic Univ of America Philosophical Studies, xxxiii, Cath. Univ of Amer diss).

Wormley, Stanton L "The Poet Heine in Victorian England." Cornell Univ. Abstracts of Theses . . 1939 (1940), pp 41-44

Zylstra, Henry "E T. A Hoffmann in England and America" Harvard Univ . . Summaries of Theses . . 1940, pp 387-390

Arnold. Dudley, Fred A. "Matthew Arnold and Science." PMLA, LVII. 275-294.

Examines Arnold's use of the word science, his knowledge of physical science, and his wavering opinion of the place of scientific discipline in human life

Barnes, William. Jacobs, Willis D. "The Anglo-Saxon Tradition" Am. N&Q, i. 181-182

On Barnes's passion for words of Anglo-Saxon derivation

Blackwood's Magazine. Wardle, Ralph M " 'Timothy Tickler's' Irish Blood." RES, xviii. 486-490. See below, s.v Maginn.

Blair, William. Bald, R C (ed.) "An Opium-Eater in America" and "The Fratricide's Death." Aurora, N Y.

Reprints for the first time an essay and a poem by this precocious young Englishman

Bowring, John. Coleman, Arthur P "John Bowring and the Poetry of the Slavs" Proc Amer Philos Soc, LXXXV (1941) 431-459.

Account of a pioneer translator

Browning, E. B. Harlan, Aurelia B "Not by Elizabeth Barrett Browning." PMLA, LVII 582-585

Identifies the piece entitled "To Robert Lytton from Elizabeth Barrett Browning" (New Poems, 1914) as a tribute by Bulwer Lytton to Robert Browning

Shackford, Martha H "The Authorship of 'Aeschylus' Soliloquy" LTLS, March 21, 1942, p 144

Suggests that this fragmentary poem is the work of Elizabeth rather than Robert Browning

Browning, Robert. Cramer, M B "Browning's Reputation at Oxford, 1855-1859" PMLA, LVII 232-240

Attributes to Rossetti and to various groups of undergraduates under his influence an important part in fostering Browning's reputation

Lindsay, Jean S "The Central Episode of Browning's By the Fire-side" SP, XXXIX. 571-579

Relates this episode to events of 1847, the first year of the Brownings' residence in Italy, rather than to the period of their courtship

Rogers, William H. (ed) The Best of Browning N Y

Shackford, Martha H The Brownings and Leighton Wellesley, Mass

Smalley, Donald A "Sordello Its Significance for Browning's Career as a Poet" Harvard Univ. Summaries of Theses. 1939, pp 247-250

Smith, Fred M "Elizabeth Barrett and Browning's The Flight of the Duchess" SP, XXXIX 102-117

Argues that the poem owes much to the life and character of Miss Barrett and to her projected flight to Italy in 1845 Supplemented by "More Light on 'Elizabeth Barrett and Browning's The Flight of the Duchess,'" pp 693-695

Stoll, Elmer E "Browning's In A Balcony" MLQ, III 407-415

A critical analysis

See above, s v Browning, E. B., Shackford.

Byron. Erdman, David V "Lord Byron as Rinaldo" PMLA, LVII 189-231

On the rise and fall of Byron's ambition to shine as a political orator and the political apathy from which Lady Oxford tried to rouse him

Johnson, Edward D. H., "A Political Interpretation of Byron's Marino Faliero" MLQ, III 417-425

Believes that the play reflects English and Italian political affairs of 1820

Rice, Richard A. (ed) The Best of Byron N. Y

Wiener, Harold S L "A Correction in Byron Scholarship" MLN, LVII. 465-466.

A review in the Monthly Review of Sir William Gell's books on Greece was written by Francis Hodgson, not by Byron as has sometimes been stated

Campbell, Thomas. Duffy, Charles J "Thomas Campbell A Critical Biography." Cornell Univ. Abstracts of Theses . . . 1939 (1940), pp 28-30.

——— "Thomas Campbell and America" AmLit, XIII 346-355

Carlyle, Rubin, Joseph J. "Carlyle on Contemporary Style" MLN, LVII. 362-363

A quotation from Carlyle's "Corn-Law Rhymes" was included by Whitman among the "Press Notices" in the second issue of Leaves of Grass

Singer, Herman R. Thomas Carlyle's Religion. Its Sources, and Its Influence Upon His Work (Univ. of Calif abstract of diss.)

Coleridge, Hartley. Griggs, Earl L (ed.) Hartley Coleridge New Poems, Including a Selection from His Published Poetry London and N Y

Coleridge, S. T. Allen, N. B. "A Note on Coleridge's 'Kubla Khan'" MLN, LVII 108-113

"the composition of the poem is to be described as follows Lines 1-30 are what Coleridge had written down when he was interrupted, lines 31-36 represent his effort to continue the vision, and lines 37-54 are his comment on the loss of the vision"

Beach, Joseph W. "Coleridge's Borrowings from the German" ELH, ix 36-58.

Coleridge's reluctance to acknowledge his borrowings

Sanders, Charles R. Coleridge and the Broad Church Movement Studies in S T Coleridge, Dr. Arnold of Rugby, J. C Hare, Thomas Carlyle, and F. D Maurice Durham, N C.

Terrett, Dulany. "Coleridge's Politics, 1789-1810." Summaries of Doctoral Diss. Northwestern Univ, ix (1941) 29-33.

See above, s v Miscellaneous, Knight, below, s v Shelley, Cameron, Wordsworth, Wells

Dickens. Grubb, Gerald G "Dickens' Pattern of Weekly Serialization" ELH, ix. 141-156

On Dickens's pattern for serialization as it affected his own work and his policy as editor of several periodicals

Mabbott, T O "Authors Wanted" N&Q, CLXXXII. 168

Identifies a quotation in Marlin Chuzzlewit as coming from Tom Moore's "To the Hon W R Spencer"

McKenzie, Gordon "Dickens and Daumier." Univ of Calif Pub in English, VIII (1941). 273-298

A detailed comparison of Dickens and Daumier as caricaturists and satirists

Payne, Edward F. "Dickens's First Look at America" Dickensian, XXXVIII 7-12

Rolfe, Franklin P "More Letters to the Watsons" Dickensian, XXXVIII. 113-123, 161-166; 189-195.

Prints the text of unpublished letters now in the Huntington Library

Van Doren, Carl, "Had Charles Dickens an American Great-grandmother?" N&Q, CLXXXII. 304

Disraeli. Cline, C. L. "The Failure of Disraeli's 'Contarini Fleming'." N&Q CLXXXIII 69

A statement of the copies sold and the profits realized

——— "Disraeli at High Wycombe The Beginning of a Great Political Career." Univ. of Texas . . Studies in English, 1942, pp 124-144.

Drama. Biella, Arnold. "Additions and Corrections to the Bibliography of 19th Century British Drama " PQ, xxi 299-322

Much information from Leigh Hunt's Examiner, Tatler, London Journal, etc , supplementing Allardyce Nicoll's list

Ewing, Majl. "The Authorship of Some Nineteenth-Century Plays " MLN LVII. 466-468

Identifies the authors of fifteen plays listed under unknown authors in Nicoll's History of Early Nineteenth Century Drama

Nitchie, Elizabeth "The Stage History of Frankenstein " So. Atl. Qu , xli. 384-398

Data on 8 melodramas, 7 burlesques, and 4 moving pictures derived from the novel.

West, E J "From a Player's to a Playwright's Theatre: the London Stage, 1870-1890 " Quar. Jour. of Speech, xxviii. 430-436.

Galt. Lyell, Frank H A Study of the Novels of John Galt. Princeton (Princeton Stud in English, Vol 28). Printed by the offset process from a typescript.

Needler, G. H "John Galt, Dramatist " Univ. of Toronto Qu , xi 194-208.

Gissing. Daley, Norma L. "Some Reflections on the Scholarship of George Gissing " Classical Jour , xxxviii 21-30

Niebling, Richard F. "The Adams-Gissing Collection " Yale Univ Library Gazette, xvi 47-50

Hallam, Arthur. Motter, T H Vail. "Hallam's 'Poems' of 1830: A Census of Copies " Papers of the Bibliographical Soc of America, xxxv (1941) 277-280

Hardy. Farley, Philip J Pattern, Structure, and Form in the Novels of Thomas Hardy (Univ of Calif abstract of diss)

Purdy, Richard L "Hardy and Jowett " LTLS, Oct 3, 1942, p 487

Suggests that the letter received by Jude from the Master of "Biblioll" was a verbatim transcript of a letter Hardy himself had received from Jowett

Richards, Mary C. Irony in Thomas Hardy (Univ of Calif. abstract of diss)

Wagenknecht, Edward " 'Pessimism' in Hardy and Conrad." College English, iii 546-554

Argues that neither Hardy nor Conrad can be adequately described as a pessimist

Weber, Carl J The First Hundred Years of Thomas Hardy: 1840-1940 A Centenary Bibliography of Hardiana Waterville, Me

——— "Thomas Hardy and His New England Editors." NEQ, xv 681-699

——— "Hardy's Grim Note in 'The Return of the Native' " Papers of the Bibliographical Soc of America, xxxvi 37-45.

Gives a bibliography of editions of the novel and locates Hardy's note concerning the ending of the story

——— "Thomas Hardy Music " Music & Letters, xxiii 98-99

——— "Housman and Hardy—and Maine." Bull Maine Library Assoc., iii. 7-9

——— "From Belmont Hall to Colby." Colby Mercury, VII 85-93

On R. Owen's Hardy books

——— Thomas Hardy in Maine Portland, Me

——— The Thieves Who Couldn't Help Sneezing Waterville, Me (edition)

Winterich, John T (ed) The Return of the Native N Y.

Hazlitt. Robinson, Robert E William Hazlitt as Social Controversialist and Propagandist. (Univ of Calif abstract of diss)

Wardle, Ralph M "Outwitting Hazlitt" MLN, LVII 459-462

On Maginn's devices to continue his attacks on Hazlitt and at the same time avoid involving Cadell, London agent for Blackwood's, in a suit for slander

Hogg. Strout, Alan L "Miscellaneous Letters to, from, and about James Hogg" N&Q, CLXXXI (1941) 324-7, 352-9, CLXXXII 59-61, 142-144, 198-200, 215-218 (See also CLXXXIII 187-188)

Jeffrey. Daniel, Robert "Jeffrey and Wordsworth. the Shape of Persecution" Sewanee Rev., L 195-213

Jeffrey really admired Wordsworth's poems, but he derided the poet in public because the poems were not popular, because abuse is more readable than praise, and because his own talent was for making fun of others

Keats. Megibben, Katherine "The Poet Keats Has American Relatives" So Lit Mess, IV 354-356

An account of George Keats's life in America and a list of his living descendants

Thomas, Marion B "A Critical Edition of Otho the Great" Bulletin of Vanderbilt Univ, Vol XL, No 10 (1940), pp 22-23 (abstract of diss).

Van Ghent, Dorothy B Image-Types and Antithetical Structure in the Work of Keats (Univ of Calif abstract of diss)

Wells, Minnie E "The Eve of St Agnes' and 'The Legend of Britomartis'" MLN, LVII 463-465

On general and specific borrowings of Keats from FQ III

See above, s v Miscellaneous, Knight, below, s v Morris, Short

Kemble. Baker, Herschel C "John Philip Kemble" Harvard Univ. . . Summaries of Theses 1939, pp 232-234

Lamb. Birss, John H "Lamb on Revisions: An Uncollected Letter." Am N&Q, II. 83-84.

Prints a letter in which Lamb expresses disinclination to revise the Tales from Shakespeare

Daggett, G Harris "Charles Lamb's Interest in Dreams" College English, IV 163-170

Landor. Browne, Helen B. "Walter Savage Landor as a Literary Critic" Cornell Univ. Abstracts of Theses . . . 1939 (1940), pp 18-20

Peterson, Doris E "A Note on the Probable Source of Landor's Metellus and Marius." SP, XXXIX. 680-692.

Cervantes's tragedy of Numancia

Pfeiffer, Karl G "Landor's Critique of The Cenci." SP, XXXIX 670-679

Prints an unpublished letter of Landor's from the MS in the Huntington Library and traces the variations in Landor's enthusiasm for Shelley.

Lewes, George H. Doremus, Barnard D "George Henry Lewes: A Descriptive Biography" Harvard Univ Summaries of Theses . 1940, pp 337-340

Lewis, M. G. Peck, Louis F "The Life and Works of Matthew Gregory Lewis" Harvard Univ . Summaries of Theses 1939, pp 243-247

—— "M G Lewis and the Larpernt Catalogue" HLQ, v 382-384

Points out that six plays included in the Larpernt Catalogue without attribution of authorship are probably the work of Matthew Gregory Lewis

Lockhart. Strout, Alan L "Lockhart as Gossip New Letters to J W Croker" LTLs, Oct 17, 1942, p 516, Oct 31, p 540

Maginn, William. Wardle, Ralph M "William Maginn and Blackwood's Magazine" Harvard Univ . Summaries of Theses . 1940, pp 379-382

See above, s v Hazlitt, Wardle

Meredith. Hall, Serena G. George Meredith's Prose Fiction in the Light of His Theory of Comedy (Boston Univ. abstract of diss)

Mayo, Robert D "The Egoist and the Willow Pattern" ELH, ix 71-78

The significance of the porcelain pattern not only in the name of Sir Willoughby Pattern but in the larger design of the book

—— "Sir Willoughby's Pattern" N&Q, CLXXXIII. 362-363

Mill. Von Hayek, Frederick A (ed) The Spirit of the Age [by] John Stuart Mill Chicago.

Moore. Jordan, Hoover H "A Critical Study of Thomas Moore" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses 1937 (1938), pp 24-26

Morris. Short, Clarice E "The Poetic Relationship of John Keats and William Morris" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . . . 1941, pp 51-53

Finds considerable influence of Keats on Morris.

Oliphant. Buckingham, Minnie S "The Use of Religious Elements in the Fiction of Margaret Wilson Oliphant" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . . 1938 (1939), pp 23-25

Pater. Law, Helen H "Pater's Use of Greek Quotations" Trans and Proc Am Philological Assoc LXXII (1941) xxxv-xxxvi

Rogers. Firebaugh, Joseph J "Samuel Rogers and American Men of Letters" AmLit, XIII 331-345

Rossetti, Christina. Belloc, Elizabeth "Christina Rossetti" Catholic World, CLV. 674-678

Rossetti, D. G. Sanford, John A "Dante: Rossetti. Pre-Raphaelitism: A Study in the Early Poetry of Dante Gabriel Rossetti" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . . 1937 (1938), pp 37-39

Ruskin. Angus, Douglas R "Wordsworth and Other Influences on the Development of Impressionism in Ruskin's Modern Painters" Ohio State Univ Abstracts of Doctors' Diss, No. 35 (1941), pp. 3-7

Dolk, Lester. "The Reception of Modern Painters" MLN, LVII 621-626
Argues that the work was looked upon with critical favor at the time of publication

Fain, John T., Jr "A Study of John Ruskin's Political Economy." Bulletin of Vanderbilt Univ., Vol XLI, No. 10 (1941), pp 22-23 (abstract of diss)

- Hagstotz, Hilda The Educational Theories of John Ruskin Lincoln, Neb
 Hogan, Charles B "The Yale Collection of the Manuscripts of John Ruskin" Yale Univ Library Gazette, xvi 61-69
- Scott, Parsons, Coleman O "Scott's 'Letters on Demonology and Witchcraft'. Outside Contributors." N&Q, CLXXXII 156-158, 173-174
 Quotes letters in which correspondents offer corrections, etc, and includes data on translations and on the reception of the book
- "Journalistic Anecdote about Scott" N&Q, CLXXXIII 339-340
- Shelley, Beall, Chandler B "A Tasso Quotation in Shelley." MLQ, II (1941) 609-610
 Finds that the quotation in the Defence of Poetry was taken from Serassi's Vita di Torquato Tasso (1785) rather than from the writing of Tasso himself
- Cameron, Kenneth N "The Social Philosophy of Shelley." Sewanee Rev, I 457-466
 A vindication of its sound foundation, its earnestness, and its permeating all Shelley's serious poetry
- "Shelley vs Southey. New Light on an Old Quarrel" PMLA, LVII. 489-512
 Traces Shelley's animus against Southey (from 1817 onwards) to an article in the Quarterly (January 1817) which Shelley read as defamatory to himself and attributed to Southey, and identifies Southey as the "viperous murderer" of Adonais
- "Shelley and Achilles" MLQ, III 287-295
 On the indebtedness of the Laon and Cythna story in The Revolt of Islam to Peacock's poem
- "Shelley and the Conciones Ad Populum" MLN, LVII 673-674
 On the indebtedness of Swellfoot the Tyrant to Coleridge's work
- Cherubini, William "Shelley's 'Own Symposium': The Triumph of Life" SP, xxxix. 559-570
 An interpretation of the fragment which views it as Shelley's "declaration of independence from the problems of the world and his first attempt to deal with the newly important problem of achieving communication with God"
- Grabo, Carl H., and Freeman, Martin J (edd) The Reader's Shelley Selections, with Introduction, Bibliography, and Notes N. Y.
- Jones, Frederick L. "Shelley and Spenser." SP, xxxix 662-669
 Notes the influence of Spenser in various poems and correlates these with journal references to Shelley's reading of Spenser
- Jordan, John E "Wordsworth and The Witch of Atlas." ELH, ix. 320-325.
 Sees in Shelley's poem a clever mockery of the thesis advanced by Wordsworth in Peter Bell
- Rivers, Gertrude B "A Study of the Poetical Vocabulary of Percy Bysshe Shelley" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . . . 1939 (1940), pp. 38-40.
 See above, s v Miscellaneous, Knight, Landor, Pfeiffer.
- Southey, Coon, Arthur M. "Southey and Marston" LTLS, Jan 31, 1942, p. 55
 On the probable source in Shakespeare rather than in Marston of Southey's remark about Hartley and Derwent.

Stevenson. Moore, John R "Stevenson's 'Catriona'." N&Q, CLXXXIII 36-38
Traces the name and something of the character of the heroine to Kate Drummond, a Highland girl with whom the young Stevenson fell in love

Tennyson. Bernstein, Ethel "Victorian Morality in The Idylls of the King." Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses 1939 (1940), pp 15-17

Eidson, John O Tennyson in America Athens, Ga.

Harrison, Thomas P, Jr "Tennyson's Maud and Shakspeare" SAB, xvii 80-85

On the influence of Hamlet, Romeo and Juliet, and Lear on the poem

Mooney, Emory A, Jr "Tennyson and Modern Science" Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . 1937 (1938), pp 30-32

Motter, T H Vail "When Did Tennyson Meet Hallam?" MLN, LVII 209-210

Cites passages from In Memoriam in support of the date April, 1829

——— "Hallam's Suppressed Allusion to Tennyson" PMLA, LVII 587-589.
The lines omitted by A H Hallam's father from the "Sixth Fragment" in the Remains do not refer, as the elder Hallam must have supposed they did, to Tennyson and his sister

Paden, W D Tennyson in Egypt: A Study of the Imagery in His Earlier Work Lawrence, Kan (Univ of Kansas Pub, Humanistic Ser, No 27)

Yohannan, J D "Tennyson and Persian Poetry" MLN, LVII 83-92

On Tennyson's knowledge of and indebtedness to Persian poetry in translation and in the original

Thackeray. Boll, Ernest. "The Author of Elizabeth Brownrigge A Review of Thackeray's Techniques" SP, xxxiv 79-101

Evidence for Thackeray's authorship

Cline, C L "Thackeray and the Morning Chronicle" LTLS, Dec 19, 1942, p. 619

Further support for the attribution of a review of Coningsby to Thackeray.

Metzdorf, Robert F "Titmarsh's Spectacles" LTLS, Nov 21, 1942, p 571.

Ray, Gordon N "Thackeray and France" Harvard Univ. Summaries of Theses . 1940, pp 353-356

Scudder, Harold H "Thackeray and N P Willis" PMLA, LVII 589-592.
Identifies Willis as the original of John Paul Jefferson Jones (Vanity Fair, ch xv)

Trollope. Allen, Hope E "The Text of Trollope" LTLS, Apr 4, 1942, p 180
Further comment on the name "Gazebee" in Dr Thorne

Booth, Bradford A (ed.) The Tireless Traveler: Twenty Letters to the Liverpool Mercury, by Anthony Trollope, 1875 Berkeley, Calif, 1941

Tinker, C. B. "The Text of Trollope's Phineas Redux" RES, xviii 86-88
Observations on the emendations proposed by R W Chapman, based on a MS of the novel in the author's possession Mr Chapman also clarifies his position

Wade, Allan. "The Text of Trollope" LTLS, Jan 10, 1942, p 24.
Notes on the text of Framley Parsonage

Webb, Marsh, George L "A Forgotten Cockney Poet—Cornelius Webb " PQ, xxi 323-333

Wilson, John. Strout, Alan L "The Recreations of Christopher North, 1842." N&Q, CLXXXII 314-315, CLXXXIII 69-71

Shows the relation of the essays to Wilson's contributions to Blackwood's, some of the essays are composite

Wordsworth. Broughton, Leslie N (ed) Some Letters of the Wordsworth Family, Now First Published, with a Few Unpublished Letters of Coleridge and Southey and Others Ithaca (Cornell Studies in English, xxxii)

——— The Wordsworth Collection Formed by Cynthia Morgan St John and Given to Cornell University by Victor Emanuel A Supplement to the Catalogue Ithaca, N Y.

Burton, Mary E The One Wordsworth Chapel Hill

On the revisions in The Prelude

Cameron, Kenneth "Wordsworth, Bishop Doane and the Sonnets on the American Church " Hist. of the Protestant Episcopal Church, xi 83-91

New letters from Bp George Washington Doane's diary and a record of friendship

Fogle, Stephen F Wordsworth and Herder A Study in Comparative Ideas. Urbana (Univ of Illinois abstract of diss)

Harkins, Everett M "Literary Criticism by William Wordsworth " Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . 1941, pp 42-44

Healey, George H. (ed.) Wordsworth's Pocket Notebook. Ithaca.

Logan, James V "England's Peril and Wordsworth " Sewanee Rev., L 446-456

Parallels between England's present plight and Wordsworth's interpretation of her danger during the Napoleonic wars.

Miles, Josephine Wordsworth and the Vocabulary of Emotion Berkeley and Los Angeles (Univ of Calif. Pub. in English, xii, No 1).

Pattee, Alice E "The White Doe of Rylstone by William Wordsworth A Critical Edition " Cornell Univ Abstracts of Theses . 1937 (1938), pp 33-36.

Ryan, Calvin T. "The Child in Wordsworth's Poetry " So Atl Qu , xli. 192-198

Wordsworth is the first poet to make childhood the subject of serious poetry

Trilling, Lionel "Wordsworth's Ode: Intimations of Immortality " Eng Inst. Annual, 1941, pp 1-28.

Offers an interpretation which denies that the ode is a farewell to the poetic power

Wells, John E "Wordsworth's To the Queen, 1846 " PQ, xxi. 415-419

The history of the poem which was the subject of one of T J Wise's forgeries ——— " 'Lyrical Ballads,' 1798 " LTLS, Jan 17, 1942, p 36.

On the cancel leaf G₁ apparently spurious, described by T J Wise

See SECTION III, s v Maclean; also above, s v. Miscellaneous, Knight, Shelley, Jordan, Jeffrey, Daniel,

XI CONTEMPORARY LITERATURE

Miscellaneous. Alspach, Russell K. A Consideration of the Poets of the Literary Revival in Ireland, 1889-1929. Phila (portion of Univ of Penna diss)

Beck, Warren "Poetry between Two Wars" Virginia Qu Rev, xviii. 359-374

"Perhaps the fate of this poetry . . . will one day be attributed not only to external events but partly to the addiction of poets themselves and critics to a modern sin, a superstitious deference to the specializations of psychology and the social sciences"

Buck, Philo M, Jr Directions in Contemporary Literature N. Y
Contains chapters on Aldous Huxley and T S Eliot

Endicott, N J "The Novel in England between the Wars" Univ of Toronto Qu, xii 18-31

Schorer, Mark "The Chronicle of Doubt" Virginia Qu. Rev, xviii 200-215
An account of the dilemma of the contemporary novelist, explaining the relative emptiness of the work of Joyce, Huxley, D H Lawrence, and Mrs Woolf

Weygandt, Cornelius "The Lies about Life in Modern Letters" [Univ of Penna] General Magazine and Hist Chron, xlii 259-267.

Barker, Granville. See below, s v. Housman, White

Beerbohm. Smith, Logan P "Sir Max Beerbohm" Atl Mo, clxx 88-90

Benson. See below, s v Housman, White

Blunt. See below, s v. Housman, White.

Bridges. Guérard, Albert, Jr Robert Bridges: A Study of Traditionalism in Poetry. Cambridge, Mass

Butler, Samuel. Holt, Lee E "Samuel Butler's Rise to Fame" PMLA, lvii 867-878

Traces the growth of Butler's reputation from his death to 1920 Butler attained recognition as a scientific writer sooner than as a literary artist.

Chesterton. Feeney, Leonard "The Metaphysics of Chesterton" Thought, xvii 22-36

Miller, L G "The Wild Knight Chesterton the Poet" Catholic World, clv 68-74.

Conrad. Gee, J A "The Final Typescript of Book III of Conrad's Nostramo" Yale Univ. Library Gazette, xvi. 80.

Gordon, John D, Jr "Joseph Conrad: His Development as a Novelist from Amateur to Professional." Harvard Univ . . . Summaries of Theses. 1939, pp 237-239.

Hall, James N "My Conrad" Atl. Mo, clxix 583-587.

See above, SECTION x, s v Hardy, Wagenknecht

Davidson, John. Applejoy, Petronius. "A View of John Davidson against a 'Nineties Background" Catholic World, cliv. 552-561.

Drama. Smith, Winifred "Mystics in the Modern Theatre" Sewanee Rev, c 35-48.

Eliot, T. S. Graham, James C. "The Critical Theories of T S. Eliot and I A. Richards" Summaries of Doctoral Diss., Univ of Wisconsin, vi. 283-286

See above, s v Miscellaneous, Buck.

Forster, E. M. Trilling, Lionel. "E M Forster." Kenyon Rev, iv 160-173

An appreciative essay

Housman. Beall, Chandler B "Housman, Dehmel and Dante" MLN, LVII 211.

On the sources and analogues of More Poems, VII

Clemens, Cyril "A E Housman at Cambridge" Dalhousie Rev, XXII 321-325.

Haber, Tom B "The Influence of the Ballads in Housman's Poetry" SP, XXXIX. 118-129

White, William, Carter, John, and Bald, R C "A E Housman, An Annotated Check-List Additions and Corrections." Library, n s, XXIII 31-44

Deals mainly with American editions and with material which has appeared since the original check-list was published in The Library, n s XXI

White, William (ed) The Parallelogram, The Amphisbaena, The Crocodile, by A E. Housman Los Angeles, 1941 (privately printed)

———"Copies of A Shropshire Lad" Pub Weekly, CXXXIX (1941) 2361

———"A E Housman's Riddle A Shropshire Lad, LXIII" Mark Twain Qu, iv (1941) 3-4, 21-23

———"Concerning A E Housman" Am N&Q, I (1941). 131-132

Prints letters to Housman from A C Benson and Granville-Barker

———"A E Housman on Blunt and Kipling" N&Q, CLXXXI (1941). 301

———"A Shropshire Lad in America" Am. N&Q, II 38-40

On the American editions

See SECTION X, s v Hardy, Weber

Huxley, Aldous. Tindall, W. Y. "The Trouble with Aldous Huxley" Am Scholar, XI 452-464

See above, s.v. Miscellaneous, Buck.

Joyce. Prescott, Joseph "Homer's Odyssey and Joyce's Ulysses" MLQ, III 427-444

On influence of the Odyssey on Joyce

Kipling. Mabbott, T O. "Kipling and Runes." N&Q, CLXXXIII 260-261

See above, s v Housman, White

Magee, John. Hagedorn, Hermann Sunward I've Climbed: The Story of John Magee, poet and soldier, 1922-1941 N. Y.

Biography of a young poet and member of the R A.F, recently killed.

Novel. Frierson, William C The English Novel in Transition, 1885-1940 Norman, Okla

Shaw. Dunkel, Wilbur D. "George Bernard Shaw." Sewanee Rev, I. 255-262

Stephens. Saul, George B "Brief Observations on Frost and Stephens" News Letter of the College English Ass'n, Vol IV, No 6 (Oct)

Strachey, Lytton. Clemens, Cyril Lytton Strachey. Webster Groves, Mo.

Tagore. Das, Taraknath "Rabindranath Tagore, Poet and Patriot" Thought, XVII 105-118

Webb, Mary. Pitfield, Robert L. "The Shropshire Lass and Her Goitre: Some Account of Mary Meredith Webb and Her Works" Annals of Med. Hist, 3rd ser, iv 284-293

Wells, H. G. Sykes, W J "Is Wells also among the Prophets?" Queen's Quar, XLIX 233-245

Whibley, Charles. Altick, Richard D "Toryism's Last Stand Charles Whibley and his 'Musings without Method'" So Atl Qu, xli 297-312

Woolf. Darches, David Virginia Woolf Norfolk, Conn.

Derbyshire, S H "An Analysis of Mrs Woolf's To The Lighthouse" College English, III 353-360

Mellers, W H "Virginia Woolf The Last Phase" Kenyon Rev, iv. 381-387
Minimizes the importance of her later work

Wilson, James S "Time and Virginia Woolf" Virginia Qu. Rev, xviii 267-276

Yeats. Baker, Howard "Domes of Byzantium" Southern Rev, vii 639-652
Traces some of the significant images of Yeats's later work to his earliest poems

Blackmur, R P. "Between Myth and Philosophy: Fragments of W B Yeats" Southern Rev, vii 407-425

"Yeats commonly hovered between myth and philosophy, except for transcending flashes, which is why he is not of the greatest poets"

Burke, Kenneth "On Motivation in Yeats" Southern Rev, vii 547-561.

Davidson, Donald "Yeats and the Centaur" Southern Rev, vii 510-516.

Criticizes Yeats's dictum that "all art should be a Centaur finding in the popular lore its back and strong legs"

Gregory, Horace. "W B. Yeats and the Mask of Jonathan Swift" Southern Rev., vii 492-509.

Attributes to Yeats the ambition to play the rôle of Swift in twentieth-century Ireland

Jarrell, Randall. "The Development of Yeats's Sense of Reality" Southern Rev, vii 653-666.

Hating the world in which he lived, Yeats first tried to ignore it, then acknowledged himself beaten by it, and finally managed to accept it as one phase of an inexorable historical cycle

Matthiessen, F O "The Crooked Road." Southern Rev, vii 455-470

On Yeats's poetic development

Mizener, Arthur "The Romanticism of W. B. Yeats" Southern Rev., vii 601-623

"Yeats was, to the end of his career, a poet of the romantic '90's and . . . the greatness of the later poetry is a kind of greatness inherent in the '90's attitude"

Ransom, John C "The Irish, the Gaelic, the Byzantine" Southern Rev, vii. 517-546.

On the irrelevance of the scientific spirit to poetry

Schwartz, Delmore "An Unwritten Book." Southern Rev., vii 471-491.

Outlines problems in the understanding of Yeats and his poetry

Tate, Allen. "Yeats's Romanticism: Notes and Suggestions." Southern Rev, vii. 591-600

Maintains that Yeats's later poems do not absolutely depend on his system of mythology for understanding

Warren, Austin "Religio Poetae" Southern Rev, VII 624-638

On Yeats's need of religion and the beliefs in which he sought satisfaction of that need

Zabel, Morton D "The Thinking of the Body. Yeats in the Autobiographies." Southern Rev, VII 562-590

On Yeats's sense of the poet's responsibilities and his shaping of his own life to fulfil them

See SECTION III, s v Olson

AMERICAN LITERATURE

By THOMAS H JOHNSON

I GENERAL

Adams, Raymond (comp). "Research in Progress" AL, XIII 417-422, XIV 77-81, 165-167, 314-316

American Imprints Inventory. Prepared by the Historical Records Survey of particular localities, under the Community Service Division of the Work Projects Administration (Mimeographed)

[Arkansas] No 39. A Check List of Arkansas Imprints, 1821-1876. Little Rock.

[California] No 31 A Check List of California Non-Documentary Imprints, 1833-1855. San Francisco.

[Kentucky]. No 38 Supplemental Check List of Kentucky Imprints, 1788-1820 Louisville [Misnumbered 25]

[Massachusetts] No 40 A Check List of Massachusetts Imprints, 1801 Boston.

——— No. 45 A Check List of Massachusetts Imprints, 1802 Boston.

[Michigan] No 52 Preliminary Check List of Michigan Imprints, 1796-1850. Detroit

[Nebraska] No. 26. A Check List of Nebraska Non-Documentary Imprints, 1847-1876. Lincoln

[New Mexico] No. 25. Check List of New Mexico Imprints and Publications, 1784-1876. Imprints, 1834-1876, Publications, 1784-1876. Detroit, Mich.

[Tennessee]. No. 32. A Check List of Tennessee Imprints, 1793-1840. Chicago, Ill.

[Utica, N. Y] No. 36. A Check List of Utica Imprints, 1799-1830. Chicago, Ill.

[Washington] No 44. A Check List of Washington Imprints, 1853-1876. Seattle.

[Wisconsin]. No. 23 A Check List of Wisconsin Imprints, 1833-1849. Madison.

——— No. 24. A Check List of Wisconsin Imprints, 1850-1854. Madison.

——— No. 41. A Check List of Wisconsin Imprints, 1855-1858. Madison.

——— No 42. A Check List of Wisconsin Imprints, 1859-1863. Madison.

America's Lost Plays. Princeton, N. J. Vols. xvii-xx

XVII. DeMille, Henry C. The Plays of Henry C DeMille Written in Collaboration with David Belasco Edited by Robert H Ball (1941)

XVIII. Belasco, David The Heart of Maryland and Other Plays Edited by Glenn Hughes and George Savage (1941)

XIX. Campbell, Bartley. The White Slave and Other Plays Edited by Napier Wilt (1941).

XX. Daly, Augustin Man and Wife and Other Plays Edited by Catherine Sturtevant.

Blair, Walter Horse Sense in American Humor from Benjamin Franklin to Ogden Nash Chicago

Interpretive study

Beers, Henry P. (comp). Bibliographies in American History: Guide to Materials for Research New York

Second edition, with some 4000 additional titles

Berrey, Lester V, and Van den Bark, Melvin (comps) The American Thesaurus of Slang New York

Some 800 pages of text, recording and codifying current American usage

Blanck, Jacob Merle Johnson's American First Editions New York

First published in 1929, this fourth edition lists nearly 200 authors and some 10,000 titles from Freneau to Steinbeck, and has been checked for new items and data

Boggs, Ralph S (comp.). "Folklore Bibliography for 1941" SFQ, vi. 11-68.

Bond, Donald F, and Tucker, Joseph E (comps). "Anglo-French and Franco-American Studies. A Current Bibliography." RR, xxxiii 132-156.

Coad, Oral S "The First Century of the New Brunswick Stage Part II. From the Civil War to 1871." Jour Rutgers Univ. Libr, v. 78-89 ["Part I From the Revolution to the Civil War." v. 15-36 (1941).]

Colby, Elbridge Army Talk: A Familiar Dictionary of Soldier Speech Princeton

Curti, Merle "The American Scholar in Three Wars." JHI, iii. 241-264.

The Revolutionary, Civil, and World wars produced "very few of our greatest pieces of literature"

A Dictionary of American English on Historical Principles. Edited and compiled by Sir William A. Craigie, and James R. Hulbert. Chicago.

Published now through Part xvii, down to and including the word "snow"

Dorson, Richard M "America's Comic Demigods." Amer. Scholar, x. 389-401.

Eich, Louis M. "The Stage Yankee." Quar. Jour. Speech, xxvii. 16-25 (1941). English Institute Annual 1941. See below, iv, s v Whitman, Bradley.

Farrell, James T "Literature and Ideology." Coll. Eng, iii. 611-623

Flanagan, John T. (comp.). "A Bibliography of Middle Western Farm Novels." Minn. Hist, xxiii 156-158.

———"The Middle Western Farm Novel." Minn. Hist, xxiii. 113-125.

Forbes, Allyn B. (comp.). "A Bibliography of New England, 1941." NEQ, xv. 200-217.

Frenz, Horst "The German Drama in the Middle West" AGR, VIII 15-17, 37 (June).

Gleason, Elsie G "Newspapers of the Panhandle of Oklahoma, 1886-1940." Chronos. Okla, XIX. 141-161 (1941).

Grainer, James A (comp) Latin American Belles-Lettres in English Translation: A Selective and Annotated Guide Washington, D. C.

Greever, Garland "Aspects of Individualism in American Literature" Personalist, XXIII 353-368.

Haney, Gladys J. "Paul Bunyan Twenty-Five Years After" J A F L, LV 155-168.

Extensive bibliography, pp 157-168

Heflin, Woodford A, Dobbie, Elliott V K, and Treviño, Salomon N. "Bibliography" [of Linguistics] AS, XVII 59-63.

Isaacs, J F. "The Negro in the American Theatre." Theatre Arts, XXVI 494-526.

Historical and critical appraisal

Kain, Richard M "The Literary Reputation of Turgenev in England and America" Madison Quar, II. 14-23

Leary, Lewis "First Theatrical Performance in North America" Amer N&Q, II 84.

On June 24, 1567, at the Spanish mission near Tequesta (Miami), Florida

Lewis Theophilus "The Frustration of Negro Art" Catholic World, CLV. 51-57.

Lomax, Alan and Cowell, Sidney R (comps) American Folk Song and Folk Lore: A Regional Bibliography New York.

McMurtrie, Douglas C, "Early Printing in Wyoming" Papers Bibl Soc. Amer., XXXVI. 267-304.

From the beginning (1863) to 1870 ——— Louisiana Imprints, 1768-1810; in Supplement to the Bibliography in "Early Printing in New Orleans." Hattiesburg, Miss.

Merwin, Fred W., and Luxon, N. N. (comps). "An Annotated Bibliography of Journalism Subjects in American Magazines, August, September and October, 1941." Jour Quar XVIII 414-421 (1941).

Morehouse, Clifford P. "Origins of the Episcopal Press from Colonial Days to 1840" Hist. Mag. Prot. Episc. Church, XI. 201-318.

A full study, with an index

Nuhn, Ferner. The Wind Blew from the East: A Study in the Orientation of American Culture. New York.

Perceptive studies, especially of Henry Adams, T. S. Eliot, and Henry James Odum, Gertrude G, and Spivey, Herman E. "Southern Literary Culture. An Annotated Bibliography for 1941." So. Atlantic Bul., VII. 14-20.

Odell, George C D. Annals of the New York Stage. Vol. XIII: 1885-1888.

Sketches of Ada Rehan, John Drew, Dion Boucicault, Lillian Russell, Otis Skinner, Robert Mansfield, E. H. Sothorn, and many others

Paine, Gregory, Leary, Lewis, et al (comps.). "Articles on American Literature Appearing in Current Periodicals." AL, XIII 452-460, XIV. 107-116, 198-209, 342-359.

Pearce, Thomas M "American Traditions and Our Histories of Literature" AL, XIV 276-284

Literary origins of Indian material

Peckham, Howard H (comp) Guide to the Manuscript Collections in the William L. Clements Library Ann Arbor, Mich

Includes letters by Allston, Howells, Simms, Whittier, and other authors

Powers, Alfred. "Chronicle of Western Books Published in 1941" Oregon Hist Quar, XLIII 63-81.

Pritchard, John P Return to the Fountains. Durham, N C.

Evidence and evaluation of the influence of Aristotle and Horace upon Bryant, Poe, Emerson, Thoreau, Hawthorne, Longfellow, Lowell, and other more recent critics Rourke, Constance The Roots of American Culture and Other Essays New York.

Significant studies of American traditions intended as segments for a History of American Culture

Saunders, D A. "Social Ideals in the McGuffey Readers." Public Opinion Quar, v. 579-589

Seifert, Lester W. J "Pennsylvania-German Dialect Literature." AGR, VIII. 26-27, 36 (April); 30-33 (June).

Spell, Jefferson R. "Hispanic Contributions to the Early Theatre in Philadelphia" HR, ix 192-198 (1941)

Taylor, Walter F. The Economic Novel in America. Chapel Hill, N. C.

Wester, Dixon. "The Hero and the American Artist." So Atlantic Quar., XII. 275-287.

Some of the dilemmas of the nineteenth century were posed under the guise of heroes and hero worship

Wegelin, Oscar. "Six Early Western Imprints." N. Y. Hist. Soc. Quar. Bul., XXV 73-76 (1941)

Newly recorded California, Iowa, and Colorado items of the mid-nineteenth century

Weiss, Harry B. "Samuel Wood & Sons, Early New York Publishers of Children's Books" Bul N Y. Public Lib., XLVI 755-771.

Preliminary checklist, pp. 762-771

Winton, Harry N M. "A Pacific Northwest Bibliography, 1941." Pacific Northwest Quar, XXXIII. 187-203.

Wood, Ralph (ed) The Pennsylvania Germans Princeton, N. J

Chapters on social, religious, educational, and literary aspects, each contributed by a specialist, brief bibliographies Zucker, Adolf E et al (comps) "[Anglo-German] Annual Bibliography [for 1941]." AGR, VII. 41-48 (April).

II. SEVENTEENTH AND EIGHTEENTH CENTURIES

Miscellaneous. Baginsky, Paul B (comp) German Works Relating to America 1493-1800 A List Compiled from the Collections of the New York Public Library New York.

Some 1500 titles, reprinted with revisions from Bul N Y Public Lib, 1938-1940

Bowes, Frederick P. The Culture of Early Charleston [S C] Chapel Hill, N C.

Brief study, from 1670 to the Revolution

Colwell, W A See Germanic, II, s v. Wieland.

Jantz, Harold S "German Thought and Literature in New England, 1620-1820." JEGP, xli 1-45

McDonald, Gerald M "Unrecorded Numbers of the New-York Gazette" Bul N Y. Public Lib, xlii 685-688.

Eighteen issues of 1726, 1731-1733

McKay, George L A Register of Artists, Engravers, Booksellers, Bookbinders, Printers and Publishers in New York City, 1633-1820 New York

Reprinted with additions from Bul N Y Public Lib, 1939-1941

Miller, Perry "Declension in a Bible Commonwealth" Proc Amer Antiq. Soc., li 37-94

Morgan, Edmund S "Light on the Puritans from John Hull's Notebooks." NEQ, xv 95-101

—— "The Puritans and Sex" NEQ, xv. 591-607.

Seeber, Edward D "The French Theatre in Charleston in the Eighteenth Century," S C Hist and Geneal Mag, xlii 1-7 (1941)

Shipton, Clifford K (comp) Biographical Sketches of Those Who Attended Harvard College in the Classes 1713-1721. Vol vi of Sibley's Harvard Graduates Boston

Indispensable biographical and bibliographical guide for the period and subjects covered, fully indexed

Waldo, Lewis P The French Drama in America in the Eighteenth Century and Its Influence on the American Drama of that Period, 1701-1800. Baltimore.

Wheeler, Joseph T "Reading Interests of Maryland Planters and Merchants, 1700-1776." Md. Hist. Mag., xxxvii 26-41.

Wolf, Henry B "Chaucer in Colonial America." Amer. N&Q, ii 71-72.

The rarity of eighteenth-century American references to Chaucer

Wroth, Lawrence C. "The First Press in Providence. A Study in Social Development" Proc. Amer Antiq. Soc., li 351-383

Yarmolinsky, Avrahm. "Studies in Russian Americana: V. The Eighteenth Century." Bul. N. Y. Public Lib, xlii 374-378, 451-457.

Discussion and check list of books concerning America published in Russia

Adams. Forbes, Allyn B. (ed.) "Abigail Adams, Commentator." Proc. Mass. Hist. Soc., lxvi. 126-153.

Twelve letters, dealing mainly with public events in the year 1808.

Breintnall. Tolles, Frederick B. "A Note on Joseph Breintnall, Franklin's Collaborator" PQ, xxi 247-249

Evidence that Breintnall became a free thinker in his later years.

Brown. Warfel, Harry R. "Charles Brockden Brown's First Published Poem" Amer. N&Q, i 19-20

Byrd. Johnston, Rebecca (ed) "William Byrd Title Book" Va Mag Hist. and Biog, xlix 37-50, 174-180, 269-278, 354-363 (1941), L 169-179, 238-263. Concluded

Woodfin, Maude H (ed) Another Secret Diary of William Byrd of Westover, 1739-41, With Letters and Literary Exercises, 1696-1726 Richmond, Va.

Decoded and collated by Marion Tinsling, the material covers the 26 years following the period of Byrd's first published (1941) "Diary"

Dickinson. Andrews, Charles M. "God's Protecting Providence A Journal of Jonathan Dickinson" Fla Hist Quar, xxi 107-126

Dwight. Cuninghame, Charles E. Timothy Dwight, 1752-1817. A Biography New York

First full-length biography, well documented

Edwards. Wright, Conrad "Edwards and the Arminians on the Freedom of the Will" Harvard Theol Rev, xxxv. 241-261.

Elliot. Adams, Elizabeth L. "James Elliot's Offering to the Muses" More Books, xvii 291-292

Published at Greenfield, Mass., in 1798

Franklin. Adams, Randolph G. "A Passy Passport." Jour Rutgers Univ. Lib, v 5-8 (1941).

An item from Franklin's press in Passy, France

Boyd, Julian P. "Dr. Franklin Friend of the Indians" Jour Franklin Inst, ccxxxiv 311-330

Chinard, Gilbert. "Looking Westward." Jour Franklin Inst, ccxxxiv. 1-16. Franklin as a consistent advocate and prophet of westward expansion

Cohen, I Bernard (ed) Benjamin Franklin's Experiments A New Edition of Franklin's "Experiments and Observations on Electricity." Cambridge, Mass., 1941

Critical analysis of Franklin as philosopher in science

——— "Benjamin Franklin and Aeronautics." Jour Franklin Inst, ccxxxiii. 101-128 (1941)

Conway, Eleanor. "Dr. Abeloff's Franklin Collection" N. Y. Hist Soc Quar Bul, xxvi. 65-66

Crane, Verner W. "Franklin's Political Journalism in England." Jour. Franklin Inst, ccxxxiii. 205-224

Analysis of the character and significance of a newly discovered body of Franklin's editorial journalism Farrand, Max. "Self-Portraiture: The Autobiography" Jour. Franklin Inst., ccxxxiii. 1-16.

Hoffman, Robert V "New Jersey in the Revolutionary Scene" Americana, xxxvi. 22-66

Contains an account of the relation between Franklin and his son William, the Toiy governor of New Jersey

Knollenberg, Bernhard "Benjamin Franklin—'Philosophical Revolutionist'." Jour Franklin Inst., ccxxxiii 517-523.

Millikan, Robert A. "Benjamin Franklin as a Scientist" Jour Franklin Inst, ccxxxii 407-423 (1941)

Mulder, Arnold. "Benjamin Franklin Teacher of Composition" Coll Eng, iii. 480-486.

Pepper, George W "Molding the Constitution." Jour Franklin Inst., ccxxxiii. 413-434.

Franklin's service in the Constitutional Convention

Pitt, A. Stuart "The Sources, Significance, and Date of Franklin's 'An Arabian Tale'." PMLA, lvii. 155-168.

A review of possible sources in Locke, Addison, Pope, Thomson, Buffon, and Milton

Read, Conyers "Dr. Franklin as the English Saw Him." Jour Franklin Inst., ccxxxiii 105-133

Spiller, Robert E "Benjamin Franklin: Student of Life" Jour Franklin Inst, ccxxxiii 309-329.

Analysis of Franklin's pragmatism

Van Doren, Carl "Concluding Paper" [in "Meet Dr Franklin" series] Jour Franklin Inst, ccxxxiv 415-429.

Warren, Joseph. "Trusts for Accumulation of Income. The Wills of Benjamin Franklin and Peter Thellusson" Proc Mass Hist. Soc, lxvi 346-356

Woodward, Carl R. "Benjamin Franklin Adventure in Agriculture" Jour. Franklin Inst, ccxxxiv 207-228

Wroth, Lawrence C "Benjamin Franklin The Printer at Work" Jour. Franklin Inst, ccxxxiv. 105-132.

Freneau. Leary, Lewis. "Father Bombo's Pilgrimage" Pa Mag. Hist. and Biog, lxvi. 459-478.

First publication of Freneau's portion of the "novel" he wrote at Princeton with H H Brackenridge —— "The Log of the Brig Rebecca, October 15-November 7, 1779" Jour Rutgers Univ. Lib, v. 65-70.

Freneau's day-by-day account of his voyage to the Canary Islands

—— "Philip Freneau on the Cession of Florida." Fla. Hist. Quar, xxi. 40-43.

An uncollected poem of his later years

—— "Philip Freneau's Captain Hanson" Amer N&Q, ii. 51-52.

Hamilton. Aly, Bower The Rhetoric of Alexander Hamilton New York, 1941. Rhetorical analysis, confined to the Poughkeepsie speeches

Hopkinson. Gegenheimer, Albert F. "An Unpublished Letter of Francis Hopkinson to George Washington." AL, xiv. 308-310.

Jefferson. Bullock, Helen D. "The Papers of Thomas Jefferson." Amer. Archivist, iv. 238-249 (1941).

The location and preservation of Jefferson MSS and related material

Marraro, Howard W. "Four Versions of Jefferson's Letter to Mazzei." Wm. and Mary Coll Quar. Hist Mag, xxii 18-29

Mayo, Bernard (ed) Thomas Jefferson and His Unknown Brother Randolph; Twenty-eight Letters Exchanged between Thomas and Randolph Jefferson . . . during the Years 1807 to 1815 . . . , Charlottesville, Va.

Peden, William H Some Aspects of Jefferson Bibliography. A Paper Read Before The Bibliography Society of America [May 29, 1940] Lexington, Va [1941]

Roberts, John G (ed). "An Exchange of Letters between Jefferson and Quesnay de Beaurepaire" Va Mag Hist and Biog, L. 134-142.

Three Jefferson letters written in Paris, 1787-1789

Keith. Kirby, Ethyn W George Keith, 1638-1716 New York.

Biography

Ladd. Leary, Lewis "A Forgotten Charleston Poet Joseph Brown Ladd, 1764-1786" Americana, xxxvi 571-588

Paine. Abel, Darrel "The Significance of the Letter to the Abbé Raynal in the Progress of Thomas Paine's Thought" Pa. Mag. Hist and Biog, LXVI. 176-190

Gibbens, V. E "Tom Paine and the Idea of Progress." Pa. Mag. Hist. and Biog, LXVI 191-204.

Landin, Harold W. "Some Letters of Thomas Paine and William Short on the Nootka Sound Crisis" Jour Mod. Hist, xiii. 357-374 (1941).

Palmer, R. R "Tom Paine Victim of the Rights of Man." Pa Mag Hist. and Biog, LXVI. 161-175

Wecter, Dixon. "Hero in Reverse" Va Quar Rev., xviii. 243-259.

Sewall. Dykema, Karl W. "Samuel Sewall Reads John Dryden" AL, xiv. 157-161.

Taylor. Warren Austin "Edward Taylor's Poetry. Colonial Baroque." Kenyon Rev, iii. 355-371 (1941).

Taylor must be accounted "the best American poet before Bryant."

Weems. Bryan, W. A. "The Genesis of Weems' Life of Washington." Americana, xxxvi. 147-165.

Woolman. Darlington, Mary E. "A Woolman Document." Jour. Rutgers Univ. Lib, v. 61-62.

Records of a Woolman deed, dated August 9, 1762.

Spiller, Robert E. "John Woolman on War." Jour. Rutgers Univ. Lib., v. 60-91 (1941)

First publication of a MS on war

Whitney, Janet. John Woolman: American Quaker. Boston.

Biography

III. NINETEENTH CENTURY, 1800–1870

Miscellaneous. Bailey, James O. "An Early American Utopian Fiction" AL, xiv 285–293.

Adam Seaborn's Symzonia, 1820, was "an earnestly written novel of adventure," not a burlesque

Carpenter, Frederic I. "The Genteel Tradition: A Re-Interpretation" NEQ, xv. 427–443

Cowie, Alexander. "The Vogue of the Domestic Novel 1850–1870." So Atlantic Quar., xli 416–424

Dichter, Harry, and Shapiro, Elliott. Early American Sheet Music: Its Lure and Its Lore, 1768–1889 New York.

Describes over 600 pieces, extensive bibliography

Duffy. See ENGLISH, x, s.v. Campbell.

Eidson. See ENGLISH, x, s.v. Tennyson.

Firebaugh, Joseph T. "Samuel Rogers and American Men of Letters" AL, xiii. 331–345.

Especially Irving, Cooper, Halleck, Ticknor, and Prescott

Gudde, Erwin G. "An American Version of Munchausen." AL, xiii 372–390

Four editions, perhaps by Fessenden

Hellman, Hugo E. "The Influence of the Literary Society in the Making of American Orators." Quar Jour. Speech, xxviii 12–14

As exemplified in Webster, Clay Calhoun, Phillips, Henry, Lincoln, and Douglas Maddox, Notley S. "Literary Nationalism in Putnam's Magazine, 1853–1857." AL, xiv 117–125

Its editorial policy toward native writers was cordial

Mott, Frank L. "Facetious News Writing, 1833–1883." Miss Valley Hist Rev, xxix 35–54

Stern, Madeleine B. "The House of the Expanding Doors Ann Lynch's Soirées, 1846." N. Y. Hist, xxiii 42–51

Many of the well-known New York literati spent evenings at Miss Lynch's Wellek, René. "The Minor Transcendentalists and German Philosophy." NEQ, xv. 652–680.

Bronson Alcott, George Ripley, Theodore Parker, Orestes Brownson, and Margaret Fuller

Wilson, J. B. "Anecdotes of Brook Farm." NEQ, xv. 320–331

Suggests institutions on which Brook Farm was in part patterned Zylstra, Henry. "A Mid-Nineteenth Century Dutch View of American Life and Letters." PMLA, lvii. 1108–1136.

Everhardus Jan Potgieter (1807–1875), poet, author, critic, was keenly interested in the American literary scene.

Alcott. Adams, Elizabeth L. "Louisa Alcott's Doomed Manuscript." More Books, xvii. 221–222.

A letter, January 28, 1874, from Miss Alcott to her publisher, which may explain the non-appearance of a work planned for publication in 1864

Audubon. McDermott, John F "Audubon's 'Journey up the Mississippi' " Jour Ill State Hist Soc , xxxv 148-173

Discussion of a version published in 1829

Weeks, Mangum "On John James Audubon " So Atlantic Quar , xli 76-87.

Backus. Jones, Louis C "Henry Backus, the Saugerties Bard " N Y Hist , xxiii 139-148

Sketch of a colorful minstrel who wandered the Hudson and Mohawk valleys Brownson. Cook, Thomas I , and Leavelle, Arnaud B "Orestes A Brownson's The American Republic." Rev of Politics, iv 77-90.

Ryan, Thomas "Brownson Speaks of England " Catholic World, cliv 426-429.

Discusses possible causes for his antipathy to the British Empire

Bryant. Hubbell, Jay B "A New Letter by William Cullen Bryant " Ga Hist Quar , xxvi 288-290

To Israel Keech Tefft of Savannah, April 27, 1849

Calvert. Hagge, C. W "G H Calvert's Translations from the German." MLN , lvii 282-284

Cooper. Davidson, Levette J "Letters from Authors." Colo Mag., xix. 122-126

Includes a brief letter from Cooper to Gen Winfield Scott, January 3, 1849

Crockett. Dorson, Richard M "Davy Crockett and the Heroic Age." SFQ, vi 95-102

Day. Weiss, Harry B. "Mahlon Day, Early New York Printer, Bookseller and Publisher of Children's Books " Bul N. Y Public Lib , lxxv. 1007-1021

DeForest. McIntyre, Clara F "J W. DeForest, Pioneer Realist " Univ of Wyoming Pubs , ix. 1-13

Emerson. Index to Early American Periodical Literature 1728-1870 Part 4 Ralph Waldo Emerson 1803-1882 New York

A project of the New York University Libraries An important adjunct to any final Emerson listing Balseiro, José A See Spanish, v, s.v Miscellaneous.

Matthews, Joseph C "Emerson's Knowledge of Dante " Univ of Texas . . Studies in English, 1942, pp 171-198.

Mowat, R B "The England Emerson Saw from Americans in England " Christian Science Mon , xxxiv 8 (May 2).

Nye, Russel B "Emerson in Michigan and the Northwest " Mich. Hist. Mag., xxvi. 159-172.

Stovall, Floyd "The Value of Emerson Today " Coll Eng , iii. 442-454.

Strauch, Carl F. "The Background for Emerson's 'Boston Hymn' " AL, xiv 36-47.

—— "Emerson at Lehigh " Lehigh Alumni Bul., xxix. 15-16.

Two hitherto unpublished Emerson letters.

Fiske. Powell, Lawrence C "John Fiske—Bookman." Papers Bibl. Soc. Amer., 221-254 (1941).

Examines Fiske's collection that is now a part of the library of the University of California at Los Angeles

Fuller. Madison, Charles A "Margaret Fuller. Transcendental Rebel" Anthrac Rev., II 422-438

Schultz, Arthur R. "Margaret Fuller—Transcendentalist Interpreter of American Literature." MDU, xxxiv 169-182

Stern, Madeleine B The Life of Margaret Fuller. New York.

Fictional biography, based on extensive study

Greeley. Lillard, Richard G. "Hank Monk and Horace Greeley" AL, xiv. 126-134.

Hastings. Hastings, George E "Sally Hastings (1773-1812), Poet and Pioneer." Americana, xxxvi. 301-415.

Sally Hastings published verses and a journal at Lancaster, Pa., in 1808

Hawthorne. Astrov, Vladimir "Hawthorne and Dostoevski as Explorers of the Human Conscience" NEQ, xv 296-319

Blair, Walter "Color, Light and Shadow in Hawthorne's Fiction" NEQ, xv 74-94.

Doubleday, Neal F. "Hawthorne's Satirical Allegory" Coll. Eng., III. 325-337

Foster, Charles H. "Hawthorne's Literary Theory." PMLA, LVII 241-254

Howe, M. A. DeWolfe "The Tale of Tanglewood" Vale Rev., XXXII 323-336.

Discussion of "Tanglewood" as a place name

Turner, Arlin. "Hawthorne and Reform" NEQ, xv 700-714.

Wright, Nathalia. "Hawthorne and the Praslin Murder." NEQ, xv. 5-14.

The celebrated French crime of 1847 contributed to the background of The Marble Faun

Lincoln. Angle, Paul M. "Four Lincoln Firsts." Papers Bibl. Soc. Amer., xxxvi. 1-17.

Bibliographical data regarding three of Lincoln's better known addresses

Basler, Roy P. "The Authorship of the 'Rebecca' Letters" Abraham Lincoln Quar., II. 80-90.

Jordan, Philip D. "Some Lincoln and Civil War Songs" Abraham Lincoln Quar., II. 127-142.

Longfellow. Englekirk, John E. "Notes on Longfellow in Spanish America." Hisp., xxv. 295-308.

Ullmann, S. "Composite Metaphors in Longfellow's Poetry." RES, XVIII. 219-228.

White, George L., Jr. "Longfellow's Interest in Scandinavia during the Years 1835-1847." SS, xvii, 70-82.

Lowell. Altick, Richard D. "Was Lowell an Historical Critic?" AL, xiv. 250-259.

Bail, Hamilton V. "Harvard's Commemoration Day July 21, 1865." NEQ, xv. 256-279.

An account of the exercises on the day when J R Lowell read his famous ode Beatty, Richmond C James Russell Lowell Nashville, Tenn.

Critical appraisal

Gibbs, Lincoln "A Brahmin's Version of Democracy." Antioch Rev, I, 50-62

A discussion of Lowell's sagacity and idealism

Melville. [anon] "Melville and His Public." Amer. N&Q, II 67-71.

Newspaper accounts of Melville's lectures, Jan 9-Feb 20, 1858

Ashley, Clifford W "A Possible Verse Parody of Moby-Dick" Amer N&Q, II 62-63.

Davis, Merrell R "The Flower Symbolism in 'Mardi'" MLQ, II 625-638 (1941)

Duffy, Charles "Toward the Whole Evidence on Melville as a Lecturer" Amer N&Q, II, 58

Lloyd, Francis V, Jr "Melville's First Lectures" AL, XIII 391-395.

In Lawrence, Mass, and in Concord, N H, November, 1857

Mills, Gordon "The Significance of 'Arcturus' in Mardi" AL, XIV 158-161

Myers, Henry A "Captain Ahab's Discovery. The Tragic Meaning of Moby Dick" NEQ, xv 15-34

Thorp, Willard "Did Melville Review The Scarlet Letter?" AL, XIV 302-305

Waggoner, Hyatt H. "A Possible Verse Parody of Moby-Dick in 1865." Amer N&Q, II, 3-6

Miller. Jantz, Harold S. "Samuel Miller's Survey of German Literature, 1803" GR, XVI 267-277 (1941).

Summary of his Brief Retrospect of the Eighteenth Century (1803), with an estimate of its significance

O'Brien. Wolfe Francis "Fitz-James O'Brien in Ireland and England, 1828-1851." AL, XIV 234-249.

Parkman. Wade, Mason Francis Parkman, Heroic Historian. New York.

Interpretive and significant study

Peabody. Roberts, Josephine E. "Elizabeth Peabody and the Temple School" NEQ, xv. 497-508.

Poe. The Raven and Other Poems Reproduced in Facsimile from the Lorimer Graham Copy of the Edition of 1845 with the Author's Corrections New York.

Published for the Facsimile Text Society, with an introduction by Thomas O Mabbott

Adams, Percy G "Poe, Critic of Voltaire" MLN, LVII 273-275

Astrov, Vladimir. "Dostoevsky on Edgar Allan Poe" AL, XIV 70-74

An appreciative Dostoevsky article on Poe, written in 1861

Bailey, James O. "Sources of Poe's Arthur Gordon Pym, 'Hans Pfaal,' and Other Pieces." PMLA, LVII 513-535

Cooke, Alice L "The Popular Conception of Edgar Allan Poe from 1850 to 1890," Univ of Texas Studies in English, 1942, pp 145-170.

Culver, Francis B. "Lineage of Edgar Allan Poe and the Complex Pattern of the Family Genealogy" Md Hist. Mag, XXXVII 420-422

Hutcherson, Dudley R. "Poe's Reputation in England and America, 1850-1909." AL, xiv. 211-233.

Mabbott, Thomas O. "'Poe' on Intemperance," N&Q, cxxxix. 34-35.

——— "Poe's Tale, 'The Lighthouse' " N&Q, clxxxii. 226-227

Reprint, with comments, of a seldom printed, unfinished tale

Miller, F. DeWolfe "The Basis for Poe's 'The Island of the Fay' " AL, xiv. 135-140.

"Olybrius" [Thomas O. Mabbott]. "Poe and the Artist John P. Frankenstein." N&Q, clxxxii. 31-32.

Ostrom, John W. "Two 'Lost' Poe Letters." Amer N&Q, i, 68-69 (1941).

——— "Two Unpublished Poe Letters," Americana, xxxvi. 67-71

Written to Hiram Hanes, editor of the Virginia Star, in 1836 and 1840

Pittman, Diana. "Key to the Mystery of Edgar Allan Poe" So Lit Messenger, iv [treated under sub-headings as follows] 'The Landscape Garden,' pp. 19-24, 'Ebony Shadow Series Metzengerstein,' pp. 81-85, 143-149, 'The Two Ravens,' pp. 149-157, 'Poe's "The Raven",' pp. 157-168

Schubert, Leland, "James William Carling. Expressionist Illustrator of 'The Raven,'" So. Lit Messenger, iv. 173-181

Wilson, Edmund "Poe as a Literary Critic" Nation, clv. 452-453

Worthen, Samuel C. "A Strange Aftermath of the Mystery of 'Marie Roget' (Mary Rogers)" Proc. N. J. Hist. Soc., lx. 116-123

Prescott, W. H. Charvat, William. "Prescott's Political and Social Attitudes." AL, xiii. 320-330

Disclosed as a staunch Federalist-Whig and a Unitarian

Ripley. Schulz, Arthur R., and Pochmann, Henry A. "George Ripley Unitarian, Transcendentalist, or Infidel?" AL, xiv. 1-19.

Simms. Morris, J. Allen "The Stories of William Gilmore Simms" AL, xiv. 20-35.

A canon of 58 stories by Simms, listed chronologically

Spafford. Boyd, Julian P. "Horatio Gates Spafford [1778-1832]. Inventor, Author, Promoter of Democracy." Proc. Amer. Antiq. Soc., li. 279-350

Recently available documents establish Spafford as an inventor of consequence, and identify him as magazine editor and contributor, and as author of an early romance, The Mother-in-Law or Memoirs of Madam de Morville, Boston, 1817, previously credited to a non-existent Maria-Ann Burlingham

Sparks. Stearns, Malcolm, Jr. "The Utopian College of Jared Sparks." NEQ, xv. 512-515.

Letter from Sparks to President Kirkland in 1825.

Stowe, H. B. Beeton, Mayson, M. "Mr. Beeton and 'Uncle Tom'." London Times Lit. Supp., No. 2109, p. 331 (July 4).

Mrs. Stowe's complacency over the pirating of her novel in England

Taylor. Frenz, Horst. "Bayard Taylor and the Reception of Goethe in America." JEGP, xli. 121-139.

Taylor's equipment for his projected Goethe biography

Thoreau. Deevey, Edward S, Jr "A Re-Examination of Thoreau's 'Walden'." Quar Jour Biology, xvii 1-11.

He may "with justice be called the first American limnologist "

McGill, Frederick T "Thoreau and College Discipline" NEQ, xv 349-353.
Thoreau as an undergraduate was a conformist

Thomas, William S "Thoreau as His Own Editor." NEQ, xv 101-103
Revisions in his tribute to his brother

Ticknor Guillén, Jorge "George Ticknor, Lover of Culture" More Books, xvii 359-375

Timrod. Cardwell, Guy A., Jr (ed). The Uncollected Poems of Henry Timrod Athens, Ga

Ninety-five poems, many taken from letters, daybooks, and periodicals

Parks, Edd W (ed). The Essays of Henry Timrod Athens, Ga.
Using less known and newly available material, presents Timrod as critic and prose writer

Very. Bartlett, William I Jones Very Emerson's "Brave Saint" Durham, N. C.

Very as mystic and minor poet A large number of his poems are here printed for the first time

White. Weidner, Paul R (ed). "The Journal of John Blake White [1781-1859]." S. C. Hist and Geneal. Mag , xlii 55-71, 99-117, 169-186 (1941); xliii. 35-46, 103-117, 161-174 (1942)

Concluded

Whittier. Emerson, Donald E "Whittier, Woolman's Journal, and Caroline Neagus" Bul. Friends' Hist Assoc , xxx 74-79 (1941)

Delavan, Wayne "Whittier Promoted Free Kansas" Aerend, xii. 81-86 (1941)

Quynn, Dorothy M and William R "Barbara Frietschie" Md Hist Mag , xxxvii 227-254, 400-403

A collection of evidence in the Barbara Frietschie controversy

Shackford, Martha H "Whittier and Some Cousins." NEQ, xv 467-496
Hitherto unpublished letters

Willis. Scudder, Harold H "Thackeray and N P Willis" PMLA, lvii 589-592.

Woodworth. S. Taft, Kendall B " 'Scenes of My Childhood', A Comment " AL, xiii. 410-411

IV. NINETEENTH CENTURY, 1870-1900

Miscellaneous. Allen, George. "Two Pennsylvania-Dutch Poets." AGR, viii. 10-12, 34 (August); 10-12, 37 (Sept)

A study of the dialect poets Henry Harbaugh and Henry Lee Fisher

Dickason, David H. "The American Pre-Raphaelites," Art in America, xxx. 157-165.

Gohdes, Clarence. "British Interest in American Literature During the Latter Part of the Nineteenth Century as Reflected in Mudie's Select Library " AL, XIII. 356-362

Jones, Malcolm B. See FRENCH, IV, s v Zola.

Richardson, Lyon N. "Men of Letters and the Hayes Administration" NEQ, xv. 110-141

Heretofore unpublished letters

Adams, Glicksberg, Charles I. "Henry Adams Reports on a Trades-Union Meeting" NEQ, xv. 724-728

At St. James's Hall in London, March 26, 1863

Mitchell, Stewart. "Henry Adams and Some of His Students" Proc. Mass. Hist. Soc., LXVI. 294-312

Revealing comments on Adams in recent years from some of his students

See above, I, s v Nuhn.

Aldrich, T. B. Cowie, Alexander. "Indian Summer Novelst" NEQ, xv. 608-621.

Belasco. See above, I, s v America's Lost Plays.

Bellamy, Madison, Charles A. "Edward Bellamy, Social Dreamer" NEQ, xv. 444-466.

Bierce, Braddy, Haldeen. "Trailing Ambrose Bierce" Amer. N&Q, I, 5-6, 20 (1941).

———"Ambrose Bierce and Guy de Maupassant." Amer. N&Q, I, 67-68 (1941).

Boyesen, White, George L., Jr. "H. H. Boyesen. A Note on Immigration." AL, XIII. 363-371.

Brooks, Hochmuth, Marie. "Phillips Brooks." Quar. Jour. Speech, XXVII. 227-236 (1941).

Brooks' effectiveness as an orator

Campbell. See above, I, s v. America's Lost Plays.

Clemens. Republican Letters. Edited by Cyril Clemens, Webster Groves, Mo. Letters contributed to the Chicago Republican during 1868

Anon. "Letters to James Redpath from Samuel L. Clemens" Mark Twain Quar., v. 1921.

Branch, Edgar M. (ed.). Mark Twain's Letters in The Muscatine Journal. Chicago

Five letters, 1853-1855

Brownell, G. H. "A Question as to the Origin of the Name, 'Mark Twain'." Twainian, I, 4-7 (Feb.)

Carter, Paul. "Mark Twain and War." Twainian, I, 1-3, 7 (Mar.)

Clemens, Cyril. "Mark Twain's Washington in 1868." Mark Twain Quar., v. 1-16.

Newspaper correspondence from Washington.

Davidson, William E. "Mark Twain and Conscience." Twainian, I, 1-3

DeVoto, Bernard. Mark Twain At Work. Cambridge, Mass.

Three essays dealing with Mark Twain as literary artisan.

Ferguson, DeLancey. "Mark Twain's Comstock Duel. The Birth of a Legend" AL, xiv 66-70

Leisy, Ernest E. "Mark Twain and Isaiah Sellers" AL, xiii 398-405

The discovery of two Captain Sellers letters in the New Orleans True Delta for 1859

Powell, Lawrence C. "An Unpublished Mark Twain Letter" AL, xiii 405-407.

To Sir John Adams of Glasgow, Dec 5, 1898

Roberts, Harold "Sam Clemens Florida Days" Twainian, i, 4-6 (Mar)

The influence of John A. Quarles on Clemens

Tidwell, James N. "Mark Twain's Representation of Negro Speech," AS, xvii 174-176

Vogelback, Arthur L. "The Prince and the Pauper A Study in Critical Standards" AL, xiv 48-54.

von Hibler, Leo. "Mark Twain und die deutsche Sprache" Anglia, lxxv 206-213 (1940)

Cooke. Allen, John D. Philip Pendleton Cooke Chapel Hill, N. C.

Brief interpretive study

Daly. See above, i, s. v. America's Lost Plays

DeMille. See above, i, s. v. America's Lost Plays

Dickinson. Connors, Donald F. "The Significance of Emily Dickinson" Coll. Eng, iii. 624-633

Stresses her dependence upon introspection

Field. Davidson, Levette J. "Eugene Field Items" Amer N&Q, i. 37-38 (1941).

Establishes the date of Field's first book

Fiske. Commager, Henry S. "John Fiske An Interpretation" Proc. Mass Hist. Soc, lxxvi 332-345.

Flower. Dickason, David H. "Benjamin Orange Flower, Patron of the Realists." AL, xiv. 148-156

Flower was editor of the Arena from 1889 to 1909

Foster. DeVoto, Bernard. "Stephen Foster's Songs." Harper's Mag, No. 1093, pp 109-112

Hayne. McKeithan, Daniel M. "A Correspondence Journal of Paul Hamilton Hayne" Ga. Hist Quar, xxvii 249-272

Herne. Waggoner, Hyatt H. "The Growth of a Realist: James A. Herne." NEQ, xv. 62-73.

Herne's interest in science influenced his development as a dramatist

Howard. Halline, Allan G. "Bronson Howard's The Amateur Benefit." AL, xiv 74-76

Discusses a recently discovered typescript copy of the play.

Howells. Arms, George. "The Literary Background of Howell's Social Criticism." AL, xiv 260-276

James, H. Blackmur, R P "The Sacred Fount " Kenyon Rev , iv 328-352.
Critical appraisal of The Sacred Fount

Frierson, William C The English Novel in Transition Norman, Okla
Chap viii "Henry James's Vision of the Experimental Novel "

See above, i, s v Nuhn.

Durham, Frank M "Henry James' Dramatization of His Novels " Bull of the Citadel (Charleston, S C), vi, No 4, 51-64

James, W. In Commemoration of William James, 1842-1942 New York

A symposium of sixteen addresses, most of which are here published for the first time by Julius S Bixler, George S Brett, John Dewey, Walker H Hill, Edwin B Holt, Henry James, Horace M Kallen, Jacob R Kantor, Victor Lowe, Eugene W Lyman, Arnold Metzger, Dickinson S Miller, Charles Morris, Ralph B Peiry, Herbert W Schneider, and Donald C Williams

Aldrich, Elizabeth P (ed) As William James Said A Treasury of His Works. New York

Includes several heretofore unpublished drawings by W J Good

Ament, William S "William James as a Man of Letters " Personalist, xxiii 199-206.

Bixler, Julius S "Two Questions Raised by William James's Essay on 'The Moral Equivalent of War'." Harvard Theol Rev , xxv 117-129

Also included in In Commemoration , see above, s v

Buchler, Justus. "The Philosopher, the Common Man and William James," Amer. Scholar, xi 416-426

Edman, Irwin "William James 1842-1942 " Nation, cliv 67-68

Lyman, Eugene W. "William James: Philosopher of Faith." Jour. Rel , xxii. 233-250.

Also included in In Commemoration , see above, s v

Jewett. Anon "A Letter by Sarah Orne Jewett." Colby Mercury, vii 82-83
To Mrs Sarah Holland, dated August 26, [1901]

Jordan. Dickason, David H "David Starr Jordan as a Literary Man." Ind Mag. Hist , xxxvii 345-358

Lanier. Webb, Richard, and Coulson, Edwin R. Sidney Lanier. Poet and Prosodist. Athens, Ga

Two essays analyzing Lanier's work, influence, and reputation

Miller. Gohdes, Clarence. "Some Letters of Joaquin Miller to Lord Houghton." MLQ, iii, 297-306

Written between 1873 and 1878

Norris. Marchand, Ernest Frank Norris: A Study Stanford, Calif.

Critical estimate of a neglected author.

Peirce. Weiss, Paul. "Charles Saunders Peirce " Sewanee Rev., L. 184-192.
Brief survey of the career of the founder of American pragmatism.

Whitman. Beck, Maximilian. "Walt Whitman's Intuition of Reality." Ethics, lxxx. 14-24.

Bradley, Sculley. "The Problem of a Variorum Edition of Whitman's Leaves of Grass" Engl. Inst. Annual, New York, pp 129-157

Carpenter, Frederic I. "Walt Whitman's 'Eidolon'." Coll. Eng, III 534-545.

Fausset, Hugh l'Anson Walt Whitman Poet of Democracy New Haven.

Popular study based on published sources

Hubach, Robert R "Three Uncollected St Louis Interviews of Walt Whitman" AL, xiv 141-147.

From St Louis newspapers in 1879

Molinoff, Katherine. "Walt Whitman at Smithtown" Long Island Forum, iv 179-180, 182-184 (1941)

——— Whitman's Teaching at Smithtown, 1837-1838 New York.

Brief monograph

Naumburg, Edward, Jr "A Collector Looks at Walt Whitman" Princeton Univ Lib Chron, III 1-18 (1941).

Rubin, Joseph J "Tupper's Possible Influence on Whitman's Style" Amer. N&Q, I. 101-102 (1941).

——— "Whitman as a Dramatic Critic" Quar Jour Speech, xxviii 45-49.

On Whitman's editorials in the Brooklyn Eagle

Smith, Fred M "Whitman's Debt to Carlyle's 'Sartor Resartus'" MLQ, III. 51-65.

Concerning its influence on Leaves of Grass.

Spiegelman, Julia "Walt Whitman and Music." So. Atlantic Quar, xli 167-176.

Starr, William T. "Jean Giono and Walt Whitman" FR, xiv. 118-129.

Story, Irving C. "The Structural Pattern of Leaves of Grass" Pacific Univ. Bul., xxxviii 2-12.

Stovall, Floyd. [On Whitman's Calamus poems] Princeton Univ Lib. Chron, III. 68-69.

Swayne, Mattie. "Whitman's Catalogue Rhetoric" Univ of Texas . . . Studies in Eng, No. 412, pp 162-178.

The catalogue is presented as an essential part of Whitman's poetic form

Winwar, Frances [Grebamer, Frances Winwar]. "Whitman's Calamus Poems" Princeton Univ. Lib. Chron, III. 66-68.

V. CONTEMPORARY

Miscellaneous. Agnew, Janet M. (comp.). A Southern Bibliography: Biography 1929-1941. Baton Rouge, La.

Fourth section of A Southern Bibliography

Adams, J. Donald "Reviewing and Criticism." Annals Amer. Acad. Pol. and Soc. Science, ccxix 145-150

Part of a symposium on "The Press in the Contemporary Scene"

Deats, Ruth Z. "Poetry for the Populace Trends in Poetic Thought in American Popular Magazines." Sewanee Rev., I. 374-388.

Deleth, August "America in Today's Fiction" Publ. Weekly, CXXXIX, 1820-1825 (1941)

Brief comment on regionalism, with a selective bibliography

Deutsch, Babette. "Religious Elements in Modern Poetry" Menorah Jour, XXIX 21-48 (1941)

Geismar, Maxwell Writers in Crisis The American Novel Between Two Wars New York.

The changing attitude and art of American novelists during the past two decades

[Georgia Bibliography] Atlanta Junior Members Round Table of American Library Association Georgia Author Bibliography 1900-1940 Atlanta, Ga.

Hall, Dorothy "The Function of Literature" Antioch Rev, I 388-397 (1941).

Standards of form and values as measured by contemporary writers

Kazin, Alfred. On Native Grounds. An Interpretation of Modern American Prose Literature New York

Informed critical record of modern American literature, dealing especially with the novel and its interpretation of American life

Kunitz, Stanley J and Haycraft, Howard (eds) Twentieth Century Authors A Bibliographical Dictionary of Modern Literature New York

Supersedes Kunitz's Living Authors (1931) and Kunitz and Haycraft's Authors Today and Yesterday (1933)

Marchman, Watt (comp) "Florida Bibliography, 1941" Tequesta, I 65-70.

Moore, Marianne "The Dial. A Retrospect." Partisan Rev., IX 52-58.

Reminiscences of literary activity in the 1920's.

Rosenberg, Harold "The Profession of Poetry, or Trails through the Night for M. Maritain" Partisan Rev, IX 392-413.

Discussion of developments in modern poetic theory

Smith, Winifred "Mystics in the Theatre" Sewanee Rev., L. 35-48.

Robert Sherwood, Ernest Hemingway, and Eugene O'Neill

Tate, Allen, and Bishop, John P (eds and comps). American Harvest Twenty Years of Creative Writing in the United States New York.

Stories, essay, and poems written during the past two decades, with emphasis on craftsmanship.

Thompson, Lawrance. "Background for Modern Poetry." Antioch Rev, II 90-102.

Wood, Clement. "Stocktaking American Poetry, 1942." So. Lit Messenger, IV 106-111

Anderson. Anderson, Sherwood Sherwood Anderson's Memoirs. New York. Further recollections, which supplement Anderson's A Story-Teller's Story

Blackmur. Baker, Carlos "R. P Blackmur A Checklist" Princeton Univ. Libr Chron., III 99-106.

Bromfield. Derienbacher, Merle (comp.). "Louis Bromfield: A Bibliography," Bul. Bibl, XVII 112, 141-145.

Brooks. Wellek, René. "Van Wyck Brooks and a National Literature" Amer Prefaces, vii 292-306

Cabell. Brewster, Paul G "Jorgen and Figures of Earth and the Russian skazki" AL, xiii, 305-319

Crane, Stephen. Lucky, Robert E "Apreciación del poeta Stephen Crane" Revista Iberoamericana, v 317-343.

With translations into Spanish verse

Eliot, T. S. See above, i, s v Nuhn

Winters, Yvor. "T. S. Eliot. The Illusion of Reaction" Kenyon Rev., iii, 1-30 (1941)

Faulkner. Daniel, Robert W (comp). A Catalogue of the Writings of William Faulkner New Haven, Conn

Frost. Thompson, Lawrance Fire and Ice. The Art and Thought of Robert Frost New York

Analysis of Frost as a man

Jeffers. White, William "Uncollected Poems of Robinson Jeffers." Amer N&Q, i, 149-151.

Three poems written by Jeffers in 1905-1906

Markham. Clemens, Cyril (ed) Edwin Markham Number Mark Twain Quar, iv. passim (1941).

Reminiscences and appreciations by Irving Bacheller, George S Viereck, and others

Moore. Burke, Kenneth "Motives and Motifs in the Poetry of Marianne Moore" Accent, ii 157-169

O'Neill. Norwood, Gilbert "The Art of Eugene O'Neill." Dalhousie Rev, xxi. 143-157 (1941).

Porter. Warren, Robert P "Katherine Anne Porter (Irony with a Center)" Kenyon Rev, iv 29-42

Robinson. Burns, Winifred "Edwin Arlington Robinson in the Hands of the Reviewers," Poet Lore, xlviii 164-175.

Contains a bibliography (pp 171-175) of reviews of each of his volumes

Dauner, Louise "Avon and Cavender Two Children of the Night" AL, xiv 55-65.

—— "Vox Clamantis: Edwin Arlington Robinson as a Critic of American Democracy." NEQ, xv. 401-426.

Doyle, John R "The Shorter Novels of E A Robinson." Bull. of the Citadel (Charleston, S. C), vi No. 4, 3-18.

Walsh, William T. "Some Recollections of E A. Robinson." Catholic World, clv. 522-531.

Includes some Robinson letters

Williams, Alice M. "Edwin Arlington Robinson, Journalist," NEQ, xv. 715-724.

Santayana. Howgate, George W. "The Essential Santayana" Mark Twain Quar., v. 7-18.

Knickerbocker, William S "Figaro Among the Philosophers George Santayana" Sewanee Rev, L. 250-265 (1941).

Terzian, Shohig "Santayana at Harvard, 1882-1912" Mark Twain Quar, v. 3-6

Stein. Pearson, Norman H "The Gertrude Stein Collection" Yale Univ. Libr Gaz., xvi 45-47

Presented by Carl Van Vechten to the Yale University Library.

Tate. Thorp, Willard. "Allen Tate A Checklst" Princeton Univ Libr. Chron, iii 85-98

Wilson. Fless, Edward. "Edmund Wilson: Art & Ideas" Antioch Rev, i 356-367 (1941)

Wolfe. Baker, Carlos. "Thomas Wolfe's Apprenticeship" Delphian Quar, xxiii 20-25 (1940)

Collins, Thomas L. "Thomas Wolfe" Sewanee Rev, i 487-504.

Kauffman, Bernice (comp) "Bibliography of Periodical Articles on Thomas Wolfe" Bul Bibl., xvii. 162-165.

FRENCH LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE

BY H. CARRINGTON LANCASTER

I. LINGUISTICS

Armstrong, E. C. "Old-French Le chief d'une montagne." MLN, LVII. 496-500.

——— "Yet Again the Açoparts." MLN, LVII 485-486

Cf. MLN, LVII 252-259, 690-694

Bevans, C A The Old French Vocabulary of Champagne. Part of a University of Chicago dissertation.

Bronssard, J F Louisiana Creole Dialect. Baton Rouge.

Gray, L. H "Six Romance Etymologies" RR, xxxiii. 157-163.

Includes bis, fief, Montmartre, pour, travailler.

Grégoire, Henri "Encore at toujours les Achoparts." MLN, LVII. 691-694.

Cf. MLN, LVII 252-259, 485-486, 690

Hatcher, Anna G Reflexive Verbs, Latin, Old French, Modern French Baltimore

Levi Della Vida, G "Encore Anc. Fr. Açopart 'Ethiopien'" MLN, LVII, 690-691, 694

Cf. MLN, LVII 252-259, 485-486, 691-694.

Livingston, C. H. "Etymologies of Old French reechier and English rack." MLN, LVII. 631-638.

Malkiel, Yakov. "Old French soutif "solitary." MLQ, iii. 621-646.

Muller, H F. "The Beginnings of Fixed French Word Order." MLN, LVII 546-552.

Powell, J. D. The Position of the Subject Pronoun in the Perlesvaus, the Queste del Saint Graal, and the Conqueste de Constantinople Part of a University of Chicago dissertation.

Rice, C. C. "Romance Etymologies." Lang, xviii. 39.

Pre-Roman tauna*, Lyonesse tona, South French launa

Roberts, W. A. French in the West Indies New York

Spitzer, Leo. "Anc. Fr. Açopart 'Ethiopien'" MLN, lvii. 252-259, 486.

Cf. MLN, lvii. 485-486, 690-694

———"Chez Vandamme sont venus" MLN, lvii. 103-108

———"Fr. mitani 'The middle,' 'the half'" MLN, lvii. 356-358

———"Mihieu and ambience. an Essay in Historical Semantics" Philosophy and Phenomenological Research, iii. 1-42.

——— See ENGLISH, SECTION I

II. MEDIEVAL LITERATURE (INCLUDING PROVENÇAL)

Miscellaneous. Heft, David. Proverbs and Sentences in Fifteenth-Century French Poetry. Part of a New York University dissertation.

Jones, C. M. "The Conventional Saracen of the Songs of Geste." Speculum, xvii. 201-225.

Krappe, A. H. "The Land of Darkness" PQ, xxi. 334-346.

Lewent, Kurt. "Father and Son in Provençal Poetry" MLN, lvii. 534-541.

Livingston, C. H. "L'Origine 'lignagère' des Chansons de geste. Lettre inédite de Joseph Bédier écrite en 1913." RR, xxxiii. 319-335.

Quynn, Dorothy M., and Snellgrove, H. S. "Slandorous Comedies at the University of Orleans in 1447" MLN, lvii. 185-188.

Snellgrove, See above, last item

Steiner, Arpad. "Florentine Influence at Avignon in 1365." Catholic Historical Review, xxvii, no. 4, 1-7.

Alain Chartier. Hoffman, E. J. A. C., His Work and Reputation New York.

Amadas et Ydoine. Krappe, A. H. "A. et Y" MLR, xxxvii. 367-371.

Chanson de Roland, la. Edited by Gardner, Woods and Hilton. Boston.

Hatcher, Anna G. "Tense-Usage in the R" SP, xxxix. 597-624.

Charles d'Orléans. Françon, Marcel. "Les Refrains des rondeaux de Ch. d'O" MP, xxxix. 259-263.

Chrétien de Troyes. See GERMAN, SECTION II, Hartmann von Aue

Nitze, W. A. "Who Was the Fisher King? A Note on Haliuoties" RR, xxxiii. 97-104

Faits des Romains. Levy, Raphael. "Le Vocabulaire des F. des R" MLQ, iii. 205-219

Gerbert de Montreuil. Stanton, Amida. G. de M. as a Writer of Grail Romance. an investigation of the date and more immediate sources of the continuation of Perceval. Part of a University of Chicago dissertation.

Giraldus Cambrensis. See GENERAL SECTION

Girbert de Mes. Silver, Maurice. G. de M., according to MS. B. Columbia dissertation.

Hue de Rotelande. Livingston, C. H. "Manuscript Fragments of a Continental French Version of the Roman d'Ipomedon" MP, xl. 117-130

Marie de France. Holmes, U. T., Jr. "A Welsh Motif in M.'s Guigemar " SP, xxxix 11-14

Robert de Boron. Nitze, W. A. "The Home of R de B " MP, xl 113-116

Roman d'Alexandre. The Medieval French R. d'A, iv. Armstrong, E. C. and Foulet, A., Le Roman du Fier de Gades d'Eustache, v. Armstrong, E. C., and Agard, F. B., Version of Alexandre de Paris: Variants and Notes to Branch II Princeton Edwards, Bateman "An Aesopic Allusion in the R d'A " Studies in Honor of F. W. Shipley, pp. 95-99.

Roman de la Rose. Rand, E.-K. "The Metamorphosis of Ovid in Le Roman de la Rose." Studies in the History of Culture—the Disciplines of the Humanities (Menasha), pp. 103-121.

Roman de Toute Chevalerie. Agard, F. B. "Anglo-Norman Versification and the R de T. C." RR, xxxiii 216-235.

Rudel. Frank, Grace. "The Distant Love of Jaufré R " MLN, lvii 528-534

Saint Denis. Liebman, C. J., Jr. Etude sur la vie en prose de S. D. Geneva, N. Y.

Villon. Cons, Louis. "Five Notes on the Text of V " MLN, lvii 526-527

Wace. Blenner-Hassett, R. and Magoun, F. P. "The Italian Campaign of Behn and Brenne in the Bruts of W. and Lawman " PQ, xxi 385-390

III. LITERATURE FROM 1500 TO 1800

Miscellaneous. Baldensperger, F. "La première relation intellectuelle de David Hume en France; une conjecture." MLN, lvii. 268-271.

Hume's relations with Lévesque de Pouilly.

Caldwell, N. W. French in the Mississippi Valley, 1740-50. Urbana, Ill.

Carnus Juliette "L'Evolution de la notion d'évidence au xviii^{me} siècle chez les écrivains français " FR, xv. 487-492.

Clements, R. J. Critical Theory and Practice of the Pléiade Cambridge, Mass.

Cohen, G. "Un Recueil de farces inédites du xvi^e siècle " MLN, lvii. 520-526.

Duhamel, Roger. "La Femme dans les lettres françaises " Le Canada français, xxix 538-546, 624-635.

Hallowell, R. E. The Fortune of the Roman Elegists, Propertius and Tibullus, in Sixteenth-Century France with Special Reference to Ronsard Abstract of a University of Ill dissertation.

Lancaster, H. C. Adventures of a Literary Historian. Foreword by C. I. Silin, Introduction by Louis Cons. Baltimore.

Previously unpublished material on Ronsard, seventeenth-century drama, and Brieux.

——— A History of French Dramatic Literature in the Seventeenth Century. Part v: Recapitulation (1610-1700) Baltimore.

Peyre, Henri. Le Classicisme français. New York

Seeber, E. D. Choix de pièces huguenotes (1685-1756). Publiées d'après les manuscrits originaux recueillis par Alexandre Crottet, avec une Notice, une Introduction et un catalogue de la collection Crottet. Bloomington, Ind.

——— "The French Theatre in Charleston in the Eighteenth Century" The South Carolina Historical and Genealogical Magazine, XLII 1-7.

Stewart, J. H. France, 1715-1815 A Guide to Materials in Cleveland Cleveland

Swigert, B. H. The Americas as Revealed in the Encyclopédie Urbana, Ill

Waldo, L. P. The French Drama in America in the Eighteenth Century and Its Influence on the American Drama of That Period, 1701-1800 Baltimore.

Zeek, C. F. "The Great Writers of the Siècle de Louis XIV How Much Did They Owe to Their King?" FR, xv 412-420.

Beys. Protzman, M. I. Les Illustres Fous of Charles B with a Brief Account of the Author and His Works Baltimore

Bodin. Dean, Leonard F. English, vii s v Miscellaneous.

Boileau. Miller, J. R. B en France au dix-huitième siècle Baltimore

Boisrobert. Lancaster, H. C. "B's Vraye Didon. a Reply." RR, xxxiii 72-73.

Bordelon. La Harpe, Jacqueline de L'abbé L. B et la lutte contre la superstition en France entre 1680 et 1730. Berkeley.

Bossuet. Gilbert, Dorothy L. and Pope, Russell "The Animadversions of Bishop B upon the Quakers and Quietistes" PMLA, LVII 105-115

Brueys, see below, Jourdan.

Cazotte. Shaw, E. P. Jacques C (1719-1792). Cambridge, Mass

Colin Bucher. Hutton, James. "Germain C. B. and Girolamo Angeriano" MLN, LVII 260-264

Crosnier. Zdanowicz, C. D. "Jean C." MLN, LVII 245-252.

Desportes. Beall, C. B. "Un écho de Guinicelli dans Philippe D" MLN, LVII 429-431.

Diderot. Charles, Mary L. The Growth of D.'s Fame in France from 1784 to 1875. Bryn Mawr dissertation

Dieckmann, Herbert "Bibliographical Data on D" Studies in Honor of F. W. Shipley, pp 181-220

Krakeur, L. G. "La Jeunesse de D.: quelques précisions" PMLA, LVII 133-139.

See below, Rousseau, Havens

Du Bellay. See below, Ronsard.

Fénelon. Facticeau, B. A. "An Unpublished Mémoire of F." PMLA, LVII. 116-132

Fréron. Prator, C. H. "E - C. F. in the Light of Variants in the Text of His Lettres sur quelques écrits de ce temps" MLQ, III 105-118.

Genlis. Rowbotham, A. H. "Madame de G. and Jean-Jacques Rousseau." MLQ, III. 363-377.

Gomberville. Wadsworth, P. A. The Novels of G., a Critical Study of Polesandre and Cythérée New Haven.

Jourdan. Coffey, Sister Loyola Maria. Adrien J.'s Susanna (1653), a Critical Edition of the Latin Text with a Study of the Play and Its Influence on Brueys's Gabinie (1699). Baltimore.

La Fontaine. Hutton, James. "La Fontaine, Le Rat et l'Huître." RR, xxxiii. 26-31.

Molière. Saintonge, P, and Christ, R. W Fifty Years of Molière Studies, a Bibliography, 1892-1941. Baltimore.

Scherer, J. "Sur le sens des titres de quelques comédies de M " MLN, LVII 407-420.

Tucker, J. E "The Eighteenth-Century English Translations of M " MLQ, III. 83-103.

Montaigne. Françon, Marcel. "La démocratie de M " MLN, LVII 82

Torrey, N L. "M and Democracy " MLN, LVII 81

Montesquieu. Chinard, Gilbert "Montesquieu' Historical Pessimism " Studies in the History of Culture: the Discipline of the Humanities (Menasha), pp. 161-172.

Price, E H. "Voltaire and M.'s Three Principles of Government." PMLA, LVII 1046-1052

Pascal. Chinard, G. "Notes sur une pensée de P." MLN, LVII 510-519

Nitze, W A "P and the Medieval Definition of God." MLN, LVII. 552-558
See below, Voltaire, Waterman.

Racine. Lapp, J. C "The Traité des passions and R." MLQ, III 611-619.

Ronsard. See above, Lancaster, Adventures

Silver, Isidore "R and Du Bellay on Their Pindaric Collaboration " RR, XXXIII. 3-25

Rousseau, J.-B. Whallon, A J, Jr. "An Unpublished Letter from J -B R to d'Argental." MLN, LVII. 652-655.

Rousseau, J.-J. Havens, G R "R's First Discourse and the Pensées Philosophiques of Diderot." RR, XXXIII 356-359.

Schinz, Albert "Les Dangers du cliché littéraire: le Dr. Johnson et J -J R." MLN, LVII 573-580.

See above, Genlis.

Sewall, R B "An Early Manuscript Translation of R's Second Discours " MLN, LVI. 271-273

Sévigné. Baldensperger, F. "L'Heureux Paradoxe de Madame de S., sa continuité de culture." RR, XXXIII 32-40

Vauvenargues. Vial, F "V. et Voltaire " RR, XXXIII 41-57

Voltaire. Adams, P. G. "Poe, Critic of V." MLN, LVII 273-275.

Frank, Grace "V. to Mazzuchelli " MLN, LVII 355-356

Letter of June 4, 1762

Gaudin, Lois S Les Lettres anglaises dans l'Encyclopédie. New York.

Grubbs, H A. "V. and Rime." SP, XXXIX. 524-544.

Maestro, M. T. V. and Beccaria as Reformers of Criminal Law. New York.

Oake, R. B. "Political Elements in Criticism of V. in England, 1732-1747." MLN, LVII. 348-354.

Philips, Edith "Madame du Châtelet, V. and Plato." RR, XXXIII. 250-263.

Pike, R. E. "V.: Le Patriot Insulaire." MLN, LVII 354-355

An English reference to a play by V, probably Tancredè.

See above, Montesquieu and Vauvenargues.

Waterman, Mina "V and Firmin Abauzit." RR, XXXIII. 236-249.

——— V, Pascal and Human Destiny. New York.

IV. LITERATURE FROM 1800 TO THE PRESENT (INCLUDING PROVENÇAL)

Miscellaneous. Amiel, J. H. "Réalisme et positivisme, divergences entre l'esthétique positiviste et l'esthétique réaliste." RR, xxxiii 105-112.

Brodin, Pierre. Les Ecrivains français de l'entre-deux-guerres Montreal.

Cohen, G. Lettres aux Américains, problèmes actuels. Montreal.

Coindreau, M. E. La Farce est jouée. Vingt-cinq ans de théâtre français, 1900-1925. New York.

Cooper, Clarissa B. Twentieth-Century Women Poets in France; a Critical Bibliography New York.

Duhamel, Roger See above, last section.

Guérard, Albert. The France of Tomorrow Cambridge, Mass.

Hatzfeld, H. A. "Discussion sur le naturalisme français." SP, xxxix 696-726

Houghton-Brunn, Mme E. "Notes critiques sur le surréalisme." Le Canada français, xxix 346-361

Leland, Marine. "La Vie intellectuelle au Canada français." FR, xv 375-384

Marion, Séraphin. Les Lettres canadiennes d'autrefois Tome III. Ottawa

Morrisette, B. A. "Early English and American Critics of French Symbolism." Studies in Honor of F. W. Shipley, pp 159-180.

Picard, Roger. "'Obscurisme' et clarté dans la littérature française." FR, xvi 107-114

Roche, A. V. "Le Régionalisme provençal, l'Allemagne et l'idée latine." Le Canada français, xxix 362-379.

Schinz, Albert. "L'Année littéraire mil-neuf cent quarante et une" MLJ, xxvi. 256-265.

Spire, André "Poétique Technique-Corset et Technique-Armature." FR, xv 29-35

Travers, Seymour "Criticism of Romanticism in Dramatic Parodies." FR, xv 211-223

Weingarten, J. A. Modern French Dramatists, a Bibliography New York.

Arbaud, Joseph d'. Roche, A. V. "Modern Provençal Literature and J. d'A." Books Abroad, xvi 131-134.

Balzac. Ciani, W. L. An Introduction to a Critical Edition of Le Secret des Ruggieri Part of a University of Chicago dissertation Dargan, E. P., and Weinberg, B. The Evolution of B.'s Comédie humaine. Chicago.

Forest, H. U. "Le Rôle du déterminisme dans la Comédie humaine de B." RR, xxxiii. 264-274.

Wilson, Rachel. Variations in Le Curé de Tours Part of a University of Chicago dissertation.

Bazin, René. Gelson, Sister Mary A. An Analysis of the Realistic Elements in the Novels of R. B. Catholic University dissertation

Bernard, J.-J. Rhodes, S. A. "Jean-Jacques B." Books Abroad, xvi. 134-138.

Brieux. See above, last section, Lancaster, Adventures.

Buchon. Amiel, J. H. "Un Précurseur du réalisme. Max B." MLQ, III. 379-390.

Claudé. Spitzer, Leo "A Linguistic and Literary Interpretation of C's Ballade" FR, xvi. 134-143

Cocteau. Fowle, Wallace "Tragedy in the Plays of C" FR, xv. 463-467

Curel. Schuyler, W. M. *The Genesis and Evolution of C's *Ame en folie Part of a University of Chicago dissertation and MP, xxxix. 295-302

Flaubert. Seznec, Jean "Science et religion chez F. d'après les sources de la Tentation de Saint-Antoine" RR, xxxiii. 360-365

France. Anatole. Kennett, W. T. E. "The Theme of Penguin Island" RR, xxxiii. 275-289

Gide. Lynes, Carlos, Jr. "Northern Africa in G's Writings" PMLA, lvii. 851-866.

Peyre. Henri "André G. et les problèmes d'influence en littérature" MLN, lvii. 558-567.

Giraudoux. LeSage, Laurence "Jean G., Prince des précieux" PMLA, lvii. 1196-1205

Green. Lehner, Frederick "Julien G." FR, xv. 385-394

Hugo. Josephson, Matthew. Victor H., a Realistic Biography of the Great Romantic Garden City.

Moore. O. H. "How Victor H. Created the Characters of Notre-Dame de Paris" PMLA, lvii. 255-274

O'Connor. Sister Mary I. *A Study of the Sources of Han d'Islande and Their Significance in the Literary Development of Victor H.* Catholic University dissertation.

Rabinovitz. A. L. "H's Bancroft and Le Message de Grant" MLN, lvii. 648-652

Jouffroy. See below, Sainte-Beuve, Smith

Lenormand. Sheffer, E. J. "An Autobiographical Notice of H.-R. L." FR, xv. 501-504.

Maritain. Raïssa. Sylvestre, Guy. "Une poétesse mystique." Le Canada français, xxx. 30-35

Maupassant. Fellows, Otis. "M.'s Apparition, A Source and a Creative Process." RR, xxxiii. 58-71.

Mauriac. Arvin, N. C. "François M." Sewanee Review, l. 362-373.

Mérimée. Healy, D. M. "A Note on M.'s Correspondence" MLN, lvii. 198-205.

Proust. Brée, Germaine. "Une Etude du style de P. dans 'Les Plaisirs et les jours'." FR, xv. 401-409.

Levy. Sylvia N. "P.'s Realistic Treatment of Illness" FR, xv. 324-329, 421-424.

Messières. René de. "Un document probable sur le premier état de la pensée de P : Mystères par Fernand Gregh." RR, xxxiii. 113-131.

Régnier. H. de. Sylvestre, Guy. "Arcades Ambo" Le Canada français, xxix. 109-120.

Renan. Craig, H. S., Jr. "An Unpublished Letter of Ernest R." MLN, lvii. 275-278.

Letter to Anatole France of Dec. 28, 1891

Feuillerat, A. "Renan et Luzel." MLN, LVII 482-483

Correction of the preceding item

Jaspar, M.-H. Le Génie libéral de la France. Essai sur Ernest R. New York
Retté. Cornell, W. K. Adolphe R (1863-1930). New Haven

Sainte-Beuve. Craig, H. S., Jr. "S-B and Alfred de Vigny." Modern Language Forum, xxvi. 187-192

Frederick, Edna C. "The Critic and the Cult of Art. Further Observations" RR, xxxiii 385-387.

Criticism of W M Frohock in RR, xxxii 379-388

Smith, Horatio. "S-B. on Science and Human Nature Jouffroy, Le Play, Proudhon" MLN, LVII 592-602

Stendhal. Alciatore, Jules. "S et Lancelin." MP, XL 71-102.

Smith, Maxwell. "S., Hyphen-Mark in the History of French Fiction" FR, xv. 44-49

Vigneron, Robert. "Deux Pamphlets milanais de S" MP, XL. 171-200

Verhaeren, Randall, H. F. "Whitman and V—Priests of Human Brotherhood" FR, xv. 36-43.

Verneuil. Kurz, Harry. "Louis V" FR, xv 228-230.

Viélé-Griffin. Sylvestre, Guy. "Arcades Ambo" Le Canada français, xxix. 109-120.

Vigny. See above, Sainte-Beuve, Craig.

Zola. Jones, M. B. "L'Attaque du moulin in American Translation." MLN, LVII. 207-208

——— "Two American Z. Forgeries" FR, xvi 24-28.

Niess, R. J. "Z's La Joie de vivre and la Mort d'Olivier Bécaille." MLN, LVII. 205-207.

Wenger, Jared. "The Art of the Flashlight. Violent Technique in Les Rougon-Macquart." PMLA, LVII. 1137-1159.

ITALIAN LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE

By EDWIN B. WILLIAMS

I. LINGUISTICS

Hall, Jr., Robert A. "Bibliography of Sardinian Linguistics." Ital, XIX. 133-157.

——— "Initial ts in Italian zolfo and zuppa." Ital, XIX 52-55.

Geographical study of the spread of ts from dialects.

——— "Latin -ks- in Italian and Its Dialects." Lang, XVIII 117-124.

Study of geographical distribution of the phenomena shows that -ks->-ss-[s] in central and southern Italy and -sci-[ʃ] in northwestern Italy. Standard Italian has borrowed forms with -sci-

——— The Italian Questione della Lingua (An Interpretative Essay). Chapel Hill, N. C. (Univ. of North Carolina Stud. in the Rom. Lang. and Lit, VI).

——— "The Significance of the Italian Questione della Lingua " SP, x 1-10

The debates on the Questione della Lingua are a reflection of the problems connected with the rise of standard Italian but not a cause of that development. The Questione now a dead issue as linguistic unification is an accomplished fact.

Kahne, Henry and Renée. See General (East European), s.v. Turkish.

Mezzacappa, Antonio L. "The Preposition a < ab and its Use in La Divina Commedia." PMLA, LVII 327-342.

Many constructions cannot be explained with a < ad and efforts to explain them thus have led to errors in interpretation.

Spitzer, Leo. "Ancora corcubaldo 'veste corta'." Ital, XIX 42.

——— "Trevigiano denti spaisi 'denti allegati' " Ital, XIX 168.

Treves, Marco. "Maniera, the History of a Word " Marsyas, I 68-88.

II LITERATURE

1 GENERAL

Miscellaneous. Magoun, Jr, Francis P. "Il Gioco del Calcio Fiorentino " Ital, XIX 1-21.

Oliver, Revilo P. "The Italian Renaissance." Progress of Medieval and Renaissance Studies in the United States and Canada, Bull. No. 16. 27-36.

Bibliography. Fucilla, Joseph G. "Bibliography of Italian Studies in America." Ital, XIX. 28-31, 61-66, 111-117, 164-167.

——— "Recent Literature of the Renaissance. Italian." SP, XXXIX. 426-437.

——— Universal Author Repertoire of Italian Essay Literature New York, 1941.

2 THIRTEENTH AND FOURTEENTH CENTURIES

Bartolo. Sheedy, Anna T. Bartolus on Social Conditions in the Fourteenth Century New York. (Columbia Univ. Stud. in Hist., Economics, and Public Law, No. 495)

Calvalcanti. Bird, Otto. "The Canzone d'Amore of Cavalcanti According to the Commentary of Dino del Garbo " Mediaeval Studies, III. 117-160.

Dante. Bianchini, Angela L. "Ancora della stella nell'uso dantesco " Ital, XIX. 56-60.

Collins, Thomas L. "Freedom and Necessity in the Divine Comedy " Personalist, XXIII. 62-70.

Fehr, Joseph C. "The Universality of Dante." South Atlantic Monthly, XLI. 68-75.

Johnston, Oliver M. "Dante and Honorius of Autun " Stanford Stud. in Lang. and Lit., 1941. 96-98.

Shaw, J. E. " 'Per l'altre' Convivio, III, xiv, 15." MLN, LVII 580-584.

An argument in favor of the common reading.

Spitzer, Leo. "Speech and Language in Inferno XIII." Ital, XIX. 81-104.

Sturzo, Luigi. "Modern Aesthetics and the Poetry of the Divine Comedy" Thought, xvii 412-432.

Tucker, Dunstan. "Dante's Love for the Church." Orate Fratres, xvi 61-68

See ENGLISH VI, Chaucer, s.v. Dilts.

See ENGLISH XI, Housman, s.v. Beall.

Guinicelli (Guido) See FRENCH III, Desportes, s.v. Beall.

Petrarch. Bayley, C. C. "Petrarch Charles IV, and the 'Renovatio Imperii'." Speculum, xvii. 323-341.

Petrarch's attachment to Charles IV explained as based on hopes of realization of the triple revival of Rome, of Italy, and of the Empire.

Françon, Marcel. "Sur l'Influence de Pétrarque en France aux xv^e et xvi^e siècles." Ital, xix 105-110.

Mommsen, T. E. "Petrarch's Conception of the 'Dark Ages'." Speculum, xvii. 226-242

This secular notion appeared originally among Petrarch and his contemporaries

Wilkins, Ernest H. "The Separate Fifteenth Century Editions of the Triumphs of Petrarch." Library Quarterly, xii. 748-751.

3. FIFTEENTH, SIXTEENTH AND SEVENTEENTH CENTURIES

Miscellaneous. McDowell, John H. "Some Pictorial Aspects of Early Commedia dell'Arte Acting" SP, xxxix. 47-64

Rotunda, D. P. Motif-Index of the Italian Novella in Prose. Bloomington, Indiana. (Indiana Univ. Pub. Folklore Series, No. 2)

Limited chiefly to the novella in prose of the Cinquecento

Bandini (Francesco). Kristeller, P. O. "An Unpublished Description of Naples by Francesco Bandini." RR, xxxiii 290-306.

Text and study.

Bembo. Fife, Hilda M. "Gli Asolani by Pietro Bembo. A Translation with an Introduction." Cornell Univ. Abstracts of Theses . . . 1941, pp 39-41.

Bernardino de Siena (San). Gumbinger, Cuthbert. "St. Bernardine of Siena, the Popular Preacher." Franciscan Studies, xxiii 12-34.

Boiardo. Grillo, Giacomo. Two Aspects of Chivalry: Pulci and Boiardo. Boston.

Bruno (Giordano). Pelligrini, Angelo M. "Giordano Bruno and Oxford." Huntington Library Quart., v. 303-316.

Singer, Dorothy W. "The Cosmology of Giordano Bruno (1548-1600)." Isis, xxxiii. 187-196.

Machiavelli. Gilbert, Allan H. Machiavelli, The Prince and Other Works Including Reform in Florence, Castruccio Castracani, On Fortune, Letters, Ten Discourses on Livy. Chicago, 1941.

Translations, introduction, and notes

Singleton, Charles S. "Machiavelli and the Spirit of Comedy." MLN, lvii. 585-592.

Minturno (Antonio Sebastiano). Weinberg, Bernard "The Poetic Theories of Minturno." Studies in Honor of Frederick W. Shipley (Washington Univ Stud.—New Series—Lang. and Lit, No 14), St Louis, Mo 101-129

Porta (Giambattista della). See ENGLISH VII, Shakespeare, s.v. Gordon.

Pulci. See Boiardo, above.

Sadoletto (Giacomo). Weber, Bernerd C "The Views of Cardinal Sadoletto on Education" Mod Lang. Jour, xxvi. 452-454.

Sannazzaro. See SPANISH IV, Gálvez de Montalvo, s v Fucilla

Scaligero. Weinberg, Bernard "Scaliger Versus Aristotle on Poetics" MP, xxxix 337-360

Tasso. Beall, Chandler B. La Fortune du Tasse en France. Eugene, Oregon (Univ of Oregon Monograph Stud in Lit and Phil, No 4).

Olschki, Leonardo. "La Lettre du Tasse sur la France et les Français" RR, xxxiii 336-355.

See ENGLISH VII, Spenser, s v Beall.

See SPANISH IV, Martín de la Plaza, s v Beall.

4 EIGHTEENTH, NINETEENTH AND TWENTIETH CENTURIES

Miscellaneous. Mascioli, Frederick. "Anti-Roman and Pro-Italic Sentiment in Italian Historiography" RR, xxxiii 366-384

Moore, Olin H "Did L. B. Alberti Write the Istoriella Amorosa fra Leonora de' Bardi e Ippolito Buondelmonte?" Ital, xix, 49-51.

Richards, Paul L "The Italian Historical Novel as Influenced by English Gothic Fiction, 1820-1840" Harvard Univ Summaries of Theses, 1939, 277-280

Sforza, Carlo "From Mazzini to Croce" Books Abroad, xv. 395-401.

Torrielli, Andrew J. "Italian Opinion of the United States as Revealed by Italian Travellers, 1850-1900." Harvard Univ Summaries of Theses, 1940, 426-432.

Vittorini, Domenico "Realism during the Romantic Age" Ital, xix 158-163.

Borgese. Roditi, Edouard "G. A. Borgese." Sewanee Review, xlx, 57-68.

Carducci. Smith, William F. A Bibliography of Critical Material on Giosuè Carducci. Colorado Springs, Col

Partially descriptive bibliography of critical material published from 1858 to 1940

Cicognani, Bruno. Bergin, T. G. "Bruno Cicognani" Ital, xix. 22-25.

Croce (Benedetto). Rosso, Anthony C. "Benedetto Croce as a Critic of Pierre Corneille" Univ. of Pittsburgh . . . Abstracts of Theses, xvii 335-338.

Da Ponte (Lorenzo). Marraro, Howard R. "An Unpublished Letter of Lorenzo Da Ponte." Ital, xix. 26-27.

Foscolo (Ugo). Mandra, Raymond. "Catullus and Foscolo." Classical Outlook, xix. 38-40.

Marenco (Leopoldo). Sandri, Luigi Domenico. "Il Teatro di Leopoldo Marenco." [Univ. of Calif] Programme of the Final Examination for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy, no pagination (abstract of diss.)

SPANISH AND PORTUGUESE LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE

BY EDWIN B. WILLIAMS

I LINGUISTICS

Miscellaneous. Keniston, Hayward. "Notes on Research in the Spanish Spoken in the United States." Amer Council of Learned Societies Bulletin No. 34 (March, 1942) 64-67.

Levy, Bernard "Libros de sinonimia española" HR, x 285-313

Nararro Tomás, Tomás "The Linguistic Atlas of Spain and the Spanish of the Americas" Amer. Council of Learned Societies Bulletin No 34 (March, 1942) 68-73.

Etymology. Rice, Carlton C "Romance Etymologies." Lang, xviii. 39-40.

Lyonese tona, Sp espita, and Ptg rilhar.

Spitzer, Leo "In-ossicare" RFH, iii 271-272

Lexicography. Hauptmann, O. H. "A Glossary of The Pentateuch of Escorial Biblical Manuscript I j 4" HR, x 34-46

Lexicology. Castro, Américo "La palabra titere" MLN, lvii 505-510.

Gillet, Joseph E. "Dona Bisodia and Santo Ficelo" HR, x. 68-70.

Keniston, Hayward "Notas Léxicas I. Ant Esp *aorar 'agorar' II Antiguo Español *auto 'apto,' *auteza 'apteza.' III. Espanol antiguo aves aves-sadas 'malos agujeros' IV. Latín Vulgar *Mucculum +-acho > espanol muchacho" RFH, iv. 67-70

Kiddle, Lawrence B. "Índice de americanismos comentados por el Doctor Rodolfo Lenz en su obra, La oración y sus partes" Hisp, xxv. 333-342.

Spitzer, Leo. "Raza del sol" HR, x. 64-66

Morphology. Spitzer, Leo "Paralelos catalanes y portugueses de ello" RFH, iii. 272

Phonology. Hawkins, William B "Flight from Assimilation and Trial and Error in Spanish Linguistics" HR, x 273-284

Navarro Tomás, Tomás. "Rasgos esenciales de las vocales castellanas." PQ, xxi. 8-16

Syntax. Bull, William E. "New Principles for Some Spanish Equivalents of to be" Hisp, xxv 433-443

Hatcher, Anna G "The Use of a as a Designation of the Personal Accusative in Spanish." MLN, lvii 421-429

Sánchez y Escribano, F, and Spaulding, Robert K "El uso de ustedes como sujeto de la segunda persona del plural." HR, x 165-167

In Spain, Spanish-America, and the Philippines

Spitzer, Leo. "Notas sintáctico-estilísticas a propósito del espanol que." RFH, iv. 105-126; 253-265.

Versification. Bailiff, L. D. "Some Aspects of Synaloepha and Hiatus." Mod Lang. Forum, xxiii (1938). 132-136.

—— "Binary Synaloepha" Mod Lang Forum, xxiv (1939). 177-189.

—— "Hiatus in Spanish Poetry." Mod Lang. Forum, xxv (1940). 133-

——— "Synaloepha with Three Vowels." Mod. Lang. Forum, xxv (1940). 75-81.

Clarke, Dorothy C. "The Spanish Octosyllable" HR, x 1-11.

Perfected in Spain in the fifteenth century but came from Provençal through Galician-Portuguese

——— "The copla real" HR, x. 163-165.

——— "The Fifteenth Century 'Copla de pie quebrado'" HR, x 340-343

——— "El verso esdrújulo antes del siglo de oro" RFH, iii 372-374.

Hilborn, Harry W. "Calderón's agudos in Italianate Verse" HR, x. 157-159. See V below, Miscellaneous, s v. Ramelli.

Word Formation. Malkiel, Yakov. "Some Contrasts between Verbal Derivations in Spanish and Portuguese." Univ. of Wyoming Pubs, ix 53-67.

Portuguese archaic and more flexible.

II. GENERAL

Miscellaneous. Castro, Américo "Lo Hispánico y el Erasmismo" RFH, iv. 1-66.

Denslow, Stewart. "Don Juan and Faust." HR, x. 215-222.

Elías, Alfredo. "Los fecundos y los semiestériles" Hisp, xxv 325-432.

Hilton, Ronald (ed.). Handbook of Hispanic Source Materials and Research Organizations in the United States (Foreword by Herbert I Priestly). Toronto.

Mapes, Erwin K. "Ralph Emerson House" PQ, xxi 3-7.

Morley, S. Griswold. "Pozos de nieve." MLN, lvii. 541-546.

Ornstein, Jacob "La misoginia y el profeminismo en la literatura castellana." RFH, iii 219-232.

——— "Misogyny and Pro-Feminism in Early Castilian Literature." MLQ, iii. 221-234.

Same as article above

Bibliography. "Bibliography of the Works of Alfred Coester." Hisp, xxv. 268-271.

"Bibliografía." RFH, iii. 291-309; 399-416, iv. 191-205, 295-309.

Grismer, Raymond L. New Bibliography of the Literatures of Spain and Spanish America (Including Many Studies on Anthropology, Archaeology, Art, Economics, Education, Geography, History, Law, Music, Philosophy, and Other Subjects). Vol. iii. Ba-Biblio; Vol iv: Biblio-Byz. Minneapolis.

III. LITERATURE BEFORE 1500

Miscellaneous. Darby, George O. S. "Ibn Wahshiya in Mediaeval Spanish Literature" Isis, xxxiii. 433-438.

Alfonso X. Causey, James Y. "A Cultural Study of the Agricultural Terms in the Works of Alfonso X." Summaries of Doctoral Diss., Univ. of Wisconsin, vi. 321-322.

Cid. Northup, George T. "The Poem of the Cid Viewed as a Novel." PQ, xxi. 17-22.

Juan Manuel. Nykl, A. R. "Arabic Phrases in El Conde Lucanor." HR, x. 12-17.

Leyendas Troyanas. Rey, Agapito and Solalinde, Antonio G. Ensayo de una Bibliografía de las Leyendas Troyanas en la Literatura Española. Bloomington. (Indiana Univ Publications, Humanities Series No 6).

Lucena (Luis). Ornstein, Jacob "A Critical Study of Luis de Lucena and his Repetición de amores" Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ of Wisconsin, v. 282-283

Reynosa (Rodrigo de). Gillet, Joseph E "Coplas de unos tres pastores Attributed to Rodrigo de Reynosa" PQ, xxi 23-46.

Paleographical edition with introductory study and notes

Sancho II de Castilla (Cantar de). Prado, Miguel Ángel "Estudio comparado de las derivaciones eruditas y populares del Cantar de Don Sancho II de Castilla" Abstracts of Diss, Stanford Univ, 1941-42, xvii 68-70.

Santillana (Marqués de). Sánchez y Escribano, F "Santillana y la colección de Refranes, Medina del Campo, 1550" HR, x. 254-258

Setenario. Vanderford, Kenneth H "El Setenario y su relación con las Siete Partidas." RFH, iii. 233-262.

IV. LITERATURE FROM 1500-1700

Miscellaneous. Buchanan, Milton A. Spanish Poetry of the Golden Age. Toronto.

Fucilla, Joseph G "Poesía Española (Manuscript 756 of the Biblioteca Nacional Matritense)" PMLA, lvii 370-403

The article includes a list of first lines, text of hitherto unknown poems and variants of poems already in print

Green, Otis H. "Studies on the Literature of the Spanish Renaissance, 1929-1941" Progress of Medieval and Renaissance Studies in the United States and Canada, Bull. No. 17. 35-48.

Bibliography. Barrett, Linton L, and Leavitt, Sturgis E "Recent Literature of the Renaissance Spanish" SP, xxxix 440-468.

Alcalá Yáñez y Ribera. Childers, James W A Study of Sources and Analogues of the cuentos in Alcalá Yáñez' Alonso, mozo de muchos amos." (part of Univ. of Chicago diss.).

Calderón. Dorsey, Viola M "Autos sacramentales of Calderón de la Barca: An Expression of the Culture of Spain's Golden Age." Abstracts of Diss., Stanford Univ., xvi 105-107

See I above, Versification, s.v. Hilborn.

Casas (Bartolomé de las). Hanke, Lewis "La controversia entre Las Casas y Sepúlveda en Valladolid, 1550-1551." [Revista] Universidad Católica Bolivariana, viii. 65-97.

Castro (Guillén de). Salinas, Pedro "La espada y los tiempos de la vida en Las mocedades del Cid" MLN, lvii 568-573.

Cervantes. Buchanan, M. A. "Cervantes and Lope de Vega: Their Literary Relations." PQ, xxi. 54-64.

Castro, Américo. "Los prólogos al Quijote" RFH, iii. 313-338.

—— "The Prefaces to Don Quijote." PQ, xxi, 65-96.

See English viii, Miscellaneous, s.v. Knowles.

Wallen, Bonnie J "Lope de Vega's Use of Moorish Ballad Material." Washington Univ Abstracts of Theses, vi 185-186.

Wilson, William E. "A Note on La moza de cántaro." HR, x. 71-72.

See Cervantes, above.

V. LITERATURE SINCE 1700

Miscellaneous. Balseiro, José A El Vigía Ensayos Tomo III San Juan de Puerto Rico.

Essays on Romanticism, Bécquer, Hostos, Emerson, Azorín

Brown, James R An Aspect of Realism in Modern Spanish Drama The Concept of Society Chicago (portion of Univ of Chicago diss)

Brown, M Gordon "Las actividades culturales en la España de la post-guerra" Hisp, xxv 61-65

Duffey, Frank M. "Juan de Grimaldi and the Madrid Stage (1823-1837)" HR, x 147-156.

Grimaldi's aid, advice, and influence

Jiménez, Juan Ramón "Crisis del espíritu en la poesía española contemporánea (1899-1936)" Revista del colegio mayor de Ntra Sra. del Rosario, xxxvii 277-293.

Ramelli, Mattie M. "The Polimetria of Spanish Romantic Poets" Abstracts of Diss, Stanford Univ., xiv 72-73

Rogers, Paul P. "Grub Street in Spain" Hisp, xxv. 39-48.

Alas (Leopoldo). Bull, William E. "The Naturalistic Theories of Leopoldo Alas" PMLA, lvii 536-551

Alas' naturalism different from French naturalism, was not based on the analogy of nineteenth century science

—— "The Liberalism of Leopoldo Alas." HR, x 329-339.

Analysis leaves little liberalism to be found —— "Clarín. An Analytical Study of a Literary Critic" Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ of Wisconsin, vi 318-319.

Bermúdez de Castro (Salvador). Samuels, Daniel G. "La poesia de Salvador Bermúdez de Castro." Rev. Hisp. Mod, vii. 215-230.

Casona (Alejandro). Castellano, Juan R. "Alejandro Casona—Expatriado español." Hisp, xxv 49-54.

Feijóo. Corbató, Hermenegildo. "Feijóo y los españoles americanos" Rev Iberoamer, v. 59-70

Feijóo's appreciation of Spanish American genius

Forner (Juan Pablo). Laughrin, Sister M Fidelia "Juan Pablo Forner as a Literary Critic." [Catholic Univ.] Final Examination . . for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy, no pagination (abstract of diss)

Guillén (Jorge). Pleak, Frances A. The Poetry of Jorge Guillén, Including Some Translations (Introduction by Américo Castro) Princeton

—— "The Poetry of Jorge Guillén" Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ. of Wisconsin, vi. 326-327.

Lorca (Federico García). del Río, Ángel, Rosenbaum, Sidonia C. and de

Onís, Federico (eds.) Federico García Lorca (1899-1936). Vida y obra—Bibliografía—Antología Obras inéditas—Música popular. New York, 1941.

A collection of reprints from the Revista Hispánica Moderna.

Meléndez Valdés. Colford, William E. Juan Meléndez Valdés A Study in the Transition from Neo-Classicism to Romanticism in Spanish Poetry New York, N. Y.

Pereda. Eoff, Sherman. "Pereda's Realism: His Style" Studies in Honor of Frederick W. Shipley (Washington Univ. Stud—New Series—Lang and Lit, No 14), St. Louis, Mo 131-157

Sanchez, Joseph "Ideological Index of the Works of José Maria de Pereda" Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ. of Wisconsin, v 283-284

Pérez Galdós. Berkowitz, H Chonon. "Galdós and the Generation of 1898" PQ, xxi. 107-120

Carranza, Matilde "El pueblo visto a través de los Episodios nacionales" Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ. of Wisconsin, v 280-281

Casaldueño, Joaquín "El desarrollo de la obra de Galdós" HR, x 244-250

Rodríguez Rubí (Tomás). Smith, W. F. "Contributions of Rodríguez Rubí to the Development of the alta comedia." HR, x 53-63

Salinas (Pedro). Arce, Margot and Rosenbaum, Sidonia C. "Pedro Salinas: Bibliografía." Rev. Hisp. Mod, vii 69-73

del Río, Angel, "El poeta Pedro Salinas Vida y obras" Rev. Hisp. Mod., vii. 1-32.

Spitzer, Leo. "El conceptismo interior de Pedro Salinas" Rev. Hisp. Mod, vii. 33-69.

Valdés. MacDonald, Sister M. Eileen "Satire in the Novels of Palacio Valdés." Univ. of Southern Calif. Abstracts of Diss, 1942, 39-42

VI. LITERATURE IN SPANISH AMERICA

Miscellaneous. Adams, Eleanor B. and Scholes, France V "Books in New Mexico." New Mex Hist Rev., xvii 226-270.

Amner, Floyd D Hispano-American Culture Studied through Hispano-American Literature (An Interpretative Study) Granville, Ohio.

Arrom, José Juan. "La Poesía Afro-cubana" Rev. Iberoamer., iv. 379-411.

Berumen, Alfredo. "Concerning Mexican Poets." Books Abroad, xvi. 259-263.

Chart, Ira E. "Critical Opinions on the 'supuesto andalucismo' in America." Mod. Lang Forum, xxvii 28-33.

Drake, Ruth H. "Sketches on Community Manners and Customs in the Cauca Valley of Colombia as Found in Costumbrista Writers." Washington Univ Abstracts of Theses, v. 182.

Erickson, Martin E. "Guatemala, asilo de escritores hispano-americanos," Rev. Iberoamer., v. 115-120.

——— "Three Guatemalan Translators of Poe." Hisp., xxv. 73-78, Domingo Estrada, Guillermo Hall, and María Cruz.

Espinosa, Aurelio M. "An Extraordinary Example of Spanish Ballad Tradition in New Mexico" Stanford Stud. in Lang and Lit, 1941. 28-34

—— "Miscellaneous Materials from the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico" PQ, xxi 121-127

Fitts, Dudley (ed) Anthology of Contemporary Latin-American Poetry Norfolk, Conn

Contains biographical and bibliographical notes

Fogelquist, Donald F. "The Figure of Pancho Villa in the Corridos of the Mexican Revolution" Univ of Miami Hispanic-American Studies, No 3, 9-22. Coral Gables, Florida

—— "The Figure of Pancho Villa in the Literature of the Mexican Revolution" Summaries of Doctoral Diss, Univ of Wisconsin, vi 322-324

García-Prada, Carlos "De hispanoamericanismo literario" [Revista] Universidad Católica Bolivariana, viii 210-223.

—— "De hispanoamericanismo literario" Hisp, xxv 284-294.

Same as article above

Johnson, Harvey L. "Nuevos datos para el teatro mexicano en la primera mitad del siglo xvii: referencias a dramaturgos, comediantes y representaciones dramáticas." RFH, iv. 127-151.

Jones, Willis K. "'La Gringa' Theme in River Plate Drama." Hisp, xxv 326-332.

Knedler, Jr., J. W. "The Girl without Hands: Latin-American Variants" HR, x. 314-324.

Kurz, Harry "The Americas through the Opera-Glass" Hisp, xxv 131-140.
Notes on contemporary Spanish American drama.

Leary, Lewis, See American, i

Leonard, Irving A. "Best Sellers of the Lima Book Trade, 1583." Hisp. Amer. Hist. Rev, xxii. 5-33.

Marchant, Alexander, Shelby, Charmain, and Englekirk, John E (eds). Investigations in Progress in the United States in the Field of Latin American Humanistic and Social Science Studies (Preliminary Edition). Washington, D. C.

Moore, Ernest R. "Mexican Literature." Encyclopedia Americana, 1941, xviii 784-790.

Nichols, Madaline W. The Gaucho Cattle Hunter, Cavalryman, Ideal of Romance. Durham, N. C.

Peiser, Werner. "El humanismo en la literatura mexicana." Rev Iberoamer., iv. 359-378.

Rubio, David. "La cultura en la Colonias Españolas de América" [Revista] Universidad Católica Bolivariana, viii. 276-289.

Sas, Louis F. "The Spirit of France in Argentina." FR, xv. 468-477

Schons, Dorothy. "Negro Poetry in the Americas." Hisp, xxv. 309-319.

Sedgwick, Ruth. "The Land Question Enters Mexican Literature" Hisp, xxv. 395-398.

Steck, Francis B. "Early Mexican Literature." Hispanic American Essays in Commemoration of James Alexander Robertson, Chapel Hill, N. C., pp. 39-66

Swain, James O. "Costa Rican Mystics." Hisp, xxv, 79-84 Brenes-Mesén, García-Monge, Omar Dengo, and Rogelio Sotela

Torres-Rioseco, Arturo. The Epic of Latin American Literature. New York, N. Y.

Contains a chapter on Brazilian literature

Yancey, Myra L. "Some Mexican Writers and their Pseudonyms." HR, x 347-349

Anon. "Five Mexican Poets." Panorama (Washington, D. C.), No. 21, pp. 14-18.

See I, Lexicology, s.v. Kiddle

See AMERICAN LITERATURE, s.v. Longfellow, Englekirk

See v, Feijóo, s.v. Corbató.

Bibliography. "Bibliografía hispanoamericana." Rev. Hisp. Mod., vii 152-169; 320-362.

Chase, Gilbert. Bibliography of Latin American Folk Music. Washington, D. C.

Dossick, Jesse J. "Bibliography of Mexican Notes and Articles Appearing in . . . PMLA (1884-1941)." Mexicana Rev., ii. No. 1, p. 21

——— "Doctoral Dissertations on Mexican Topics Accepted by Universities in the United States." Mexicana Rev., ii. No. 2, pp. 3-17

Granier, James A. Latin American Belles-Lettres in English Translation (A Selective and Annotated Guide). Washington, D. C.

——— "Recent Articles of Bibliographical Interest." Inter-Amér. Biblio Rev., ii. 19-23, 85-89; 137-141.

Hespelt, E. Herman. "A List of Articles and Reviews on Mexican Subjects Appearing in Hispania." Mexicana Rev., ii. No. 2, pp. 18-21

——— "Progress in Providing the Bibliographical Background for Spanish American Studies." Hisp, xxv. 272-283

Jones, C. K. A Bibliography of Latin American Bibliographies. 2d ed. Washington, D. C.

Revised and enlarged with the assistance of James A. Granier

Leavitt, Sturgis E. "Theses Dealing with Hispano-American Language and Literature." Hisp, xxv. 204-208.

Moore, Ernest R. "Dos notas de bibliografía mexicana." Abside (México), vi. 454-459.

Bibliographical descriptions and notes on a manuscript copy of Fray Juan Guerra's Arte de lengua mexicana, dated Guadalajara, 1754, discovered in the Cornell Univ. Library, and the first foreign novel published in Mexico, Johann Michael Konrad's Granelli Bonelli issued anonymously as Bianina (Mexico, 1835).

——— "Catálogo razonado de obras anónimas y pseudónimas mexicanas." Divulgación Histórica (México), iii. 530-537, 582-589.

Contains proof of authorship, location in libraries, and bibliographical references.

——— "Estudios bibliográficos en preparación." Rev. Iberoamer., v. 199–201.

——— "Mexican Bibliographies." Inter-Amer. Biblio. Rev., II 73–80.

——— "Notas bibliográficas sobre la prensa insurgente." Boletín de la Sociedad Chihuahuense de Estudios Históricos, IV. 104–114.

Contains additions to the descriptions of Genaro García and J. M. Miquel y Verges and new data on the founding of the press in Durango, Chihuahua, Chilapa, Tepetzotlán, and Tixtla.

——— "Anónimos y seudónimos hispanoamericanos." Rev. Iberoamer., v. 179–197.

Contains an index by countries and includes Brazil.

Pane, Remigio U. "A Selected Bibliography of Latin-American Literature in English Translation." Mod. Lang. Jour., XXVI 116–122.

Sullivan, Carmel. "Recent Latin American Publications." Inter-Amer. Biblio. Rev., II 23–29, 89–95, 141–146.

See II, Bibliography, s.v. Grismer.

Andrade (Olegario V.). Granier, James A. "Hugo y Andrade." Rev. Iberoamer., v. 87–102.

Arévalo Martínez (Rafael). Lopes, Alberto R. "Rafael Arévalo Martínez y su Ciclo de Animales." Rev. Iberoamer., IV 323–331.

Argüello (Santiago). Moore, E. R., Reid, J. T., and Warner, R. E. "Bibliografía de Santiago Argüello." Rev. Iberoamer., v. 427–437.

Asunción Silva (José). García-Prada, Carlos. José Asunción Silva Prosas y Versos. Mexico.

Selected texts, introduction, and notes.

Balbuena (Bernardo de). Van Horne, John. "Algunos documentos relacionados con Bernardo de Balbuena." Hisp., XXV. 322–325.

Batres Jáuregui (Antonio). Erickson, Martin E. "Antonio Batres Jáuregui: Guatemalan Critic." Hisp., XXV. 343–350.

Blanco-Fombona. Green, Otis H. "Blanco-Fombona, Pérez Galdós, and Leopoldo Alas." HR, x. 47–52.

Blanco-Fombona's use of material from the novels of Galdós and Alas.

Carrera Andrade (Jorge). Salinas, Pedro. "Registro de Jorge Carrera Andrade." Rev. Iberoamer., v. 285–294.

Darío (Rubén). Fay, Elot G. "Rubén Darío in New York." MLN, LVII. 641–648.

Parish, Helen Rand. "El camino de la muerte. (Estudio psicológico del tema de la muerte en las poesías de Rubén Darío)." Rev. Iberoamer., v. 71–86.

de Greiff (León). García-Prada, Carlos. "La fuga inefable hacia Ulalume." Rev. Iberoamer., v. 439–445.

Frias (Heriberto). Moore, Ernest R. "Heriberto Frías and the Novel of the Mexican Revolution." Mod. Lang. Forum, XXVII. 12–27.

González Prada. Garro, J. Eugenio. "Manuel González Prada." Rev. Hisp. Mod., VII. 193–214.

Guiraldes (Ricardo). Stanford, G. Alonzo. "A Study of the Vocabulary of Ricardo Guiraldes's Don Segundo Sombra." Hisp., XXV. 181–188.

Gutiérrez Nájera. "Manuel Gutiérrez Nájera—Obras inéditas recogidas de periódicos de México." Rev. Hisp. Mod., vii 132-151

Mapes, E. K. "Manuel Gutiérrez Nájera Obras inéditas" Rev. Hisp. Mod., vii. 291-319

Hernández-Catá, Alfonso. Balseiro, José A. "Alfonso Hernández-Catá." Rev. Iberoamer., iv. 37-48.

Hostos. Parrish, Robert T. "A Study of the Personality and Thought of Eugenio María de Hostos." Summaries of Doctoral Diss., Univ. of Wisconsin, vi. 324-326.

See v, Miscellaneous, s.v. Balseiro

Isaacs. Naranjo M., Enrique "Alrededor de María. (Eco de una controversia)." Rev. Iberoamer., v 103-108.

Mistral (Gabriela). Fergusson, Erna "Gabriela Mistral" Inter-Amer. Monthly, i 26-27.

Motolinía. See iv above, s.v. Toribio de Benavente.

Ortiz-Vargas (Alfredo). Ortega, Joaquín "A Colombian Poet in New Mexico" New Mex. Quart. Rev., xii. 179-181.

Palma (Ricardo). Stowell, Ernest. "The Legal Profession in the Tradiciones peruanas of Ricardo Palma." Washington Univ. Abstracts of Theses, v. 189-191.

——— "Ricardo Palma and the Legal Profession." Hisp., xxv. 158-160.

Roa Barcena (José María). Rosaldo y Hernández, Renato. D. José María Roa Bárcena—Vida y Obras. Urbana, Ill (Univ. of Illinois diss. abstract)

Salterain y Herrera (Eduardo de). Warren, Virgil A. "Eduardo de Salterain y Herrera, como Novelista" Rev. Iberoamer., iv. 351-357.

Subercaseaux (Benjamin). Alegría, Fernando "Chile o una loca geografía." Rev. Iberoamer., v. 109-114.

Torres (Luis Llorens). Duffy, Kenneth "Luis Llorens Torres, Poet of Puerto Rico." Univ. of Pittsburgh . . . Abstracts of Theses, xvi 89-95.

Varona (Enrique José). González, Manuel P. "A propósito de un libro sobre Varona." Rev. Hisp. Mod., vii 73-78.

VII. PORTUGUESE

Miscellaneous. Allen, Jr., Joseph H. D. "Portuguese Studies in the United States." Hisp., xxv. 94-100.

The present state of Portuguese studies in the United States, including textbooks and translations

Berrien, William. "The Future of Portuguese Studies." Hisp., xxv. 87-93.
Problems, fields, and opportunities for research.

Della Vida, G. Levi. "A Portuguese Pilgrim at Mecca in the Sixteenth Century." The Moslem World, xxxii. 283-297.

Gates, Eunice J. "Problems in Research Dealing with Portuguese and Brazilian Studies." Hisp., xxv. 151-157.

Particularly book collections in U S libraries and series of new editions in Portugal and Brazil.

Schapiro, Meyer "A Note on an Inscription of the Cathedral of Santiago de Compostela" Speculum, xvii 261-262

Brazilian. Driver, David Miller The Indian in Brazilian Literature. New York, N Y.

Lopes, Albert R "The Modern Brazilian Novel" New Mex Quart. Rev, xii 18-24.

Mention is made of Machado de Assis, Euclides da Cunha, Graça Aranha, Veríssimo, Fontes, Amado, Lins do Rego, Gilberto Freyre, and others

See vi, Miscellaneous, s v Torres-Rioseco

Linguistics. Allen, Jr, Joseph, H D "Again C1L tēpidus, Span Port. tabio" HR, x 258-259.

Kany, C E "A Note to Portuguese and Brazilian Spelling" Hisp, xxv 320-321.

Roberts, Kimberley S Orthography, Phonology and Word Study of the Leal Conselheiro. Philadelphia (Univ of Penna. diss)

Rogers, Francis M. "The Pronunciation of the Madeira and Azores Dialects as Compared with Standard Portuguese." Harvard Univ Summaries of Theses, 1940, 414-417.

Russo, Harold J. Morphology and Syntax of the Leal Conselheiro. Philadelphia (Univ of Penna. diss)

Spitzer, Leo "Ptg rilhar 'to gnaw'" HR, x 344-345

—— "Estudios etimológicos." Anales del Instituto de Lingüístico, Universidad Nacional de Cuyo, i. 30-69

Williams, Edwin B. "Portuguese and Brazilian Spelling" Hisp, xxv. 189-193.

See i, Morphology, s v Spitzer.

See i, Word Formation, s.v. Malkiel.

Castilho (Antônio Feliciano de). Ornstein, Jacob. "Castilho e as suas Adaptações portuguesas de Molière" Hisp, xxv. 415-418

Crônica Troyana. Jaffé, Erwin. "A Treatment of Certain Aspects of Galician as Found in the Crônica Troyana." Harvard Univ Summaries of Theses, 1939, 268-270.

Galvão (Duarte). Nykl, A R. Cronica Delrey Dom Affonso Hamrriquez. Cambridge, Mass

Gil Vicente. Joiner, Virginia and Gates, Eunice J. "Proverbs in the Works of Gil Vicente." PMLA, lvii 57-73

Gil Vicente was the first peninsular dramatist to make conscious thematic use of proverbs

Pinto (Fernão Mendes). Nykl, A. R. "Algumas Observações sobre as Línguas Orientais Citadas na Peregrinação de Fernão Mendes Pinto" Petrus Nonius, iii. 181-188.

GERMANIC LANGUAGES AND LITERATURES

BY HENRY W NORDMEYER

I LINGUISTICS

Miscellaneous. Hand, W. D. A Dictionary of Words and Idioms Associated with Judas Iscariot. A compilation based mainly on material found in the Germanic languages (Univ of Calif. Pub in Mod Philol, xxiv, no 3, pp vi, 289–356) Berkeley

Malone, Kemp. "Some Linguistic Studies of 1939 and 1940" MLN, LVII. 123–148.

Twaddell, W. F. "Phonemics." MDU, xxxiv. 262–268

Old Germanic Dialects

(Except Old English)

Echols, J. M. "An Old Saxon Ghost-Word." MLN, LVII. 639–640 [tiēdan]

Joos, Martin. "Statistical Patterns in Gothic Phonology." Lang, xviii 33–38

——— "Statistical Studies in Gothic Phonology." Univ. of Wisconsin Summaries of Doctoral Dissertations, vi 305–307

Larsen, Henning, and Williams, C. A (edd.) Scandinavian Studies Presented to George T. Flom by Colleagues and Friends. (Illinois Studies in Lang. and Lit, Vol. xxix, no. 1) Urbana. [See entries under contributors' names]

Lehmann, W. P. "The Germanic Dental Preterite and the dh-Determinative." Univ. of Wisconsin Summaries of Doctoral Dissertations, vi 307–309.

——— "The Indo-European dh-Determinative in Germanic." Lang, xviii 125–132.

Mezger, Fritz. "The Formation of OHG diorna, OS thiorna, Goth widu-wairna, and OE niwerne." MLN, LVII. 432–433.

——— "Gothic hwaiwa 'how'." JEGP, xli 508–509

——— "A Semantic Study of scritan in the Hildebrandslied, Line 63" GR, xvii 94–98.

——— "The Verbal Type faran in Germanic." Lang, xviii 223–225.

Sturtevant, A. M. "Old Norse Philological Notes. Phonology and Shift of Gender." Scandinavian Studies . . . Flom, pp. 49–53.

Williams, C. A. "Biographical Sketch." Scandinavian Studies . . . Flom, pp. 9–15.

Modern Scandinavian Languages

Einarsson, Stefán. "Terms of Direction in Modern Icelandic" Scandinavian Studies . . . Flom, pp. 37–48.

Elmqvist, A. L. "The Superlative of Adjectives with mojlig in Swedish." SS, xvii 83–84.

——— "The Use in Swedish of the Superlative of Adjectives in the Manner of the Type in summo monte." SS, xvii. 43–44.

Haugen, Einar. "Analysis of a Sound Group: sl and tl in Norwegian." PMLA, LVII. 879–907.

Dialect atlas research, comprising also the other Scandinavian languages

——— Norwegian Word Studies Vol I The Vocabularies of Sigrd Undset and Ivar Aasen (504 pp) Vol II The Vocabularies of the Old Norse Sagas and of Henrik Wergeland (536 pp) Madison, Wis [Mimeographed]

——— "On the Consonant Pattern of Modern Icelandic." Acta Linguistica, III. 98-107

——— "On the Stressed Vowel Systems of Norwegian" Scandinavian Studies . . Flom, pp 66-78

Johnson, W G "American Loanwords in American Swedish." Scandinavian Studies . Flom, pp 79-91.

Lists some 800 words, notes on inflection of nouns, verbs, and adjectives

Lindroth, Hjalmar "Notes and Additamenta to Blondal's Islenzk-Donsk Orðabok" Scandinavian Studies . . Flom, pp 32-36

Soderback, Martin "Types of Redundancy in Swedish." SS, XVII 66-69

German and Dutch

Barnouw, A J "Intervocalic -d- in Standard Dutch." GR, XVII 81-93

Basilus, H A "A Note concerning the Origin of Uvular r in German." MLQ, III 449-455

Boesche, A W. "As to Terminology and Treatment of the German Subjunctive" MDU, XXXIV. 371-377.

[Ed.] "A Symposium on Pennsylvania-German Studies" AGR, VIII. III 28-29.

Frey, J W. A Simple Grammar of Pennsylvania Dutch. Clinton, S C

Hornaday, C L "Striking Uses of Negation in German." GR, XVII. 67-71.

Kozumplik, W A The Phonology of Jacob Ayer's Language, Based on His Rhymes. Univ of Chicago diss [Lithoprinted]

Kurrelmeyer, W. "The Etymology of Dragoon" PMLA, LVII 421-434

——— "German Lexicography. Part VIII" MLN, LVII 163-173

Military terms from Wallhausen, L-V (cf PMLA, LVI 1305)

Lange, Eva B. "A Middle High German Benedictine Rule: MS. Wilhering, Austria, No 14 (Columbia Univ diss) Latrobe, Pa

Description of the MS, its phonology, vocabulary, and style, determination of dialect (Mid. Bav), brief bibliography, diplomatic transcript (pp 93-166).

Morgan, B. Q "On the Teaching of the Subjunctive in German" MDU, XXXIV 284-287

Moulton, W. G. Swiss German Dialect and Romance Patois. Language, Supplement, XVII, no. 4. (October-December, 1941).

Mueller, W. J. "Observations on the Position of the Reflexive Pronoun in the German Sentence." MDU, XXXIV. 93-101

Schirokauer, Arno "Öwer Kopp un Wunnen." MLN, LVII. 264-268.

"Über Anhöhen und Weiden," a Schleswig idiom preserving wun(ne) in Low German.

——— "Zur Geschichte des Artikels im Deutschen" [Cont'd and concl'd] MDU, XXXIV. 14-22.

Rise, use, and disuse of the article reflecting factors of Geistesgeschichte.

——— See SECTION II, Eighteenth and Early Nineteenth Centuries, s v Grimm. Spitzer, Leo. "Schadenfreude" MDU, xxxv 357-361

II. LITERATURE

Miscellaneous. Nolte, F O. Art and Reality Lancaster, Pa

Thoughtful discussion (188 pp) of many pertinent questions, culminating in a definition of art as the supreme form of human experience and, thus, of reality Draws extensively also on German literature ——— "Imitation as an Aesthetic Norm" Studies in Honor of Frederick W Shipley (Washington Univ. Studies, n s, Lang and Lit, no 14) St Louis.

O'Connor, Sister Mary Catharine The Art of Dying Well (Columbia Univ. Studies in English and Comp Lit, No 156) N Y

Seidlin, Oskar "Georg Brandes, 1842-1927" JHI, III. 415-442

Sketches the intellectual climate of Brandes' mechanistic, positivistic world, delineates his position in it as a fighter for freedom and "bearer of light"

Tomlinson, W. E. "In Memoriam Alois Brandl" GQ, xv 110-111.

Travis, James. "The Relations between Early Celtic and Early Germanic Alliteration" GR, xvii 99-104

Weigand, Hermann J "The Two and Seventy Languages of the World" GR, xvii. 241-260

SCANDINAVIAN COUNTRIES

Old Norse

Blondal, Sigfús "The Óttar Birthing Episode: A Debated Problem in the Heimskringla." Scandinavian Studies . . Flom, pp 54-56

Hermannsson, Halldór "Vinland Voyages." Le Nord, III. 129-137.

Hollander, Lee M "Arnórr, Thórdarson Jarlaskáld and His Poem 'Hrynhent'." SS, xvii 99-109

Krappe, A H "The Dog King" SS, xvii 148-153.

——— "Parallels and Analogues to the Death of Órvar Odd" SS, xvii. 20-35.

Larsen, Henning "Notes on the Phoenix" JEGP, xli 79-84.

Problem of relation between ON and OE manuscripts

Larsen, Henning, and Williams, C. A See Old Germanic Dialects.

Magoun, F. P., Jr. "Norman History in the 'Lay of the Beach' (Strandar ljóð)." MLN, LVII. 11-16.

Malone, Kemp "Auður and Gullbrá and Skeggi." Scandinavian Studies . . . Flom, pp. 57-65.

——— "Grendel and Grep" PMLA, LVII. 1-14.

Correspondences (Saxo Grammaticus) suggest Scandinavian origin also of fabulous material in Beowulf

Metzenthin, E. M. Die Lander- und Volkernamen im altisländischen Schrifttum. Bryn Mawr, Pa., 1941 [Planographed.]

Mezger, Fritz. "A Note on the Meaning of 'Hveim er fúss er fara,' Føð Skírnis 13, 2." SS, xvii. 154-155

Not, "Wen zum Ziel es zieht" (Genzmer), but "Wer bereit ist zu sterben"

Mitchell, Phillip M See Eighteenth and Early Nineteenth Centuries, s.v. Miscellaneous.

Sturtevant, A. M. "Some Poetic Synonyms of Prose Words in the Elder Edda" SS, xvii. 114-115.

Wood, F. T. "Grimnismál 33." SS, xvii. 110-113.

Modern Scandinavian Literatures

Benson, A. B. "Gustavus III in the Librettos of Foreign Operas." Scandinavian Studies . . . Flom, pp. 92-105

Dahlstrom, C. E. W. L. "Theomachy. Zola, Strindberg, Andrejev." SS, xvii. 121-132

Einarsson, Stefán "Five Icelandic Novelists." BA, xvi. 254-259.

G. Gunnarsson, G. Kamban, G. G. Hagalín, H. K. Laxness, K. Guðmundsson

Gustafson, Alrik. " 'A Dream Worth Dying For—' The Price of Freedom in Vilhelm Moberg's Recent Novels " Am.-Scand. Rev., xxx. 296-307.

—— "Some Early English and American Strindberg Criticism." Scandinavian Studies . . . Flom, pp. 106-124.

Haugen, Einar. See Modern Scandinavian Languages

Koht, Halfdan "Nordahl Grieg " Am.-Scand. Rev., xxx. 32-40.

Larsen, Henning "Glossaries to Asbjornsen's Huldreeventyr." Scandinavian Studies . . . Flom, pp. 145-150.

Lowrie, Walter A Short Life of Kierkegaard. Princeton.

Monroe, N. Elizabeth The Novel and Society. Chapel Hill, N. C., 1941

Includes discussions of Sigrid Undset and Selma Lagerlof

Sturtevant, A. M. "Notes on Tegnér's Poetry " SS, xvii. 140-147.

—— "Esaias Tegnér's Poem 'Till H. M. Konung Karl IV Johan' An Appreciative Analysis " SS, xvii. 36-42.

Swanson, C. A. "An Ibsen Theater in Paris: Lugné-Poe and the Théâtre de l'Œuvre " SS, xvii. 133-139.

Swenson, D. F. (tr.). Kierkegaard's Concluding Unscientific Postscript. Introduction and Notes by Walter Lowrie. Princeton, 1941.

Tegen, Gunhild. "Karin Boye in Memoriam." Am.-Scand. Rev., xxx. 240-243.

—— "Gosta Carlberg, Young Swedish Novelist " BA, xvi. 123-128.

Thompson, Lawrence. "Fredrika Bremer as a Critic of American Literature." Edda, xli. 166-177.

Tillich, Paul. "Kierkegaard in English." Am.-Scand. Rev., xxx. 254-257.

Brief presentation of fundamentals of existential philosophy.

Uppvall, A. J. "The Floral Element in the Poetical Works of Karlfeldt." Scandinavian Studies . . . Flom, pp. 125-144

Tables of floral terms used by the poet, pp. 139-144.

White, George L., Jr. See AMERICAN, Section III, s. v. Longfellow.

Wiley, N. L. "Oehlenschläger's Amleth." SS, xvii. 1-19.

Zucker, A. E. "Goethe and Ibsen's Button-Moulder." PMLA, LVII 1101-1107.

Ibsen's conception of immortality in the light of Faust, Pt II, 9981 ff (Panthalis)

GERMANY AND THE NETHERLANDS

Miscellaneous. Butler, R. D'O. The Roots of National Socialism N Y

Hohlfeld, A. R. "Umlaut und Reim Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte und Theorie des deutschen Reimes." MDU, xxxiv. 210-222; 391-414

Krebs, Gerhard. "Moeller van den Bruck: Inventor of the 'Third Reich' " Amer Pol Sci. Rev, xxxv 1085-1105

German and Dutch to 1500

App, A. J. "Roswitha Puts Love into Drama " The Magnificat, LXX 226-231, 281-285.

Bang, Carol K. "Emotions and Attitudes in Chrétien de Troyes' Erec et Enide and Hartmann von Aue's Erec der Wunderære " PMLA, LVII 297-326

Fuhrmann, Otto W. "The Modern Conception of Gutenberg " Papers Bibl Soc. Amer, xxxv 1-16

Hammer, William "Albrecht von Eyb, Eulogist of Bamberg " GR, xvii 3-19.

Haraszti, Z. "The Ship of Fools and Other Early Books " More Books, xvii 183-212.

Heffner, R-M. S. "Zum Weissenburger Katechismus " II JEGP, xlii, 194-200

Study of sound shift and vocalism of WK compared with Isidor confirms Murbach origin.

Heffner, R-M S., and Petersen, Kathe A Word-Index to Des Minnesangs Fruhling. Univ of Wisconsin [Mimeographed]

Lists and parses all words occurring in the text of MF (Vogt), 4th ed (1923)

Heller, E. K. "Vindication of Heinrich von dem Turlin, Based on a Survey of His Sources " MLQ, iii 67-82

Henel, Heinrich. "Die Eheschliessung im Ruodlieb " GR, xvii 20-24

Nordmeyer, Henry W. "Minnesangforschung und Psychologie." MDU, xxxiv. 274-279

Riordan, J L "Additional Notes to a Spruch of Der Marner " MLQ, iii. 605-610 [To be cont'd]

Schirokauer, Arno "Der Eingang des Lorscher Bienensegens." MLN, LVII. 62-64.

Weidman, R. H. "A Gloss on Goeli 2. 10 and 3 29." MDU, xxxiv 280-283

Zieglschmid, A. J. F. "The Hutterian Chronicle." AGR, VIII. IV. 18-25. [Five illustrations.]

Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries

Miscellaneous. E., J. "The Art of Dying " [Ars moriendi, Nuremberg, ca. 1510] More Books, xvi. 163-164.

Ayrer. Kozumplik, W. A. See Section I, German and Dutch.

Cysat. Evans, M Blakemore. "Renward Cysat: Von der allten Tutschen oder Landtsprach " MDU, xxxiv 269-273

Erasmus. Appelt, T C Studies in the Contents and Sources of Erasmus' Adagia, with Particular Reference to the First Edition, 1500, and the Edition of 1526 Univ of Chicago diss [Planographed]

Geiler. M, M "Sermons about the Ship of Fools " More Books, xvi 19.

Hager. Bell, Clair H. "Georg Hager's Meisterlieder-Sammlungen." GR, xvii 25-30.

Luther. Slater, J E "Luther's Attitude toward Philosophy " Univ. of Pittsburgh Abstracts of Theses, etc, xvii 373-381

Paracelsus. Sigerist, H E. (ed.). Four Treatises of Theophrastus von Hohenheim called Paracelsus Tr with introductory notes by C L Temkin, G Rosen, G. Zilboorg, H E Sigerist Baltimore, 1941.

Zwingli. Cunz, Dieter. Ulrich Zwingli. Aarau (Switzerland)

Eighteenth and Early Nineteenth Centuries

Miscellaneous. Anderson, E A "German Romanticism as an Ideology of Cultural Crisis." JHI, ii 301-317.

Beach, J W See ENGLISH, Section x, s.v Coleridge.

Briefs, G A "The Economic Philosophy of Romanticism " JHI, ii. 279-300.

Closs, August. "Wurzeln der Romantik bei Herder " MLQ, ii. 611-618.

Denslow, Stewart "Don Juan and Faust Their Parallel Development and Association in Germany, 1790-1850 " Univ. of Virginia Abstracts of Dissertations, 1941, pp 23-27.

Hagge, C W. See AMERICAN, Section III, s v Calvert.

Lovejoy, A O. "The Meaning of Romanticism for the Historian of Ideas." JHI, ii 257-278

Mitchell, Phillip M. Old Norse-Icelandic Literature in Germany, 1789-1849. With a Critical Bibliography Univ. of Illinois diss (abstract)

Price, Lawrence M. "The Works of Fielding on the German Stage, 1762-1801 " JEGP, xli. 257-278

Translations and adaptations, in print and on the stage, by Stefame d J, v Klein, Eckert, Colman-Bode, Poinset-Gotter, Steffens, Heufeld, Beck, with bibliographical and other detail

Schultz, A R See AMERICAN, Section III, s.v. Fuller, Margaret.

Selden, Elizabeth China in German Poetry from 1773 to 1833 (Univ. of Calif Pub. in Mod Philol., xxv, no 3, pp. x, 141-316.) Berkeley.

Sketches 18th century attitude as a foil to Unzer's "Elegie" (1773) which "humanized" the Chinese, discusses late Romanticism, Goethe, Ruckert (Schw-King, 1833), analyzing the German response to the romantic appeal of Chinese themes and motifs Bibliography (pp 307-312), Index.

von Simson, O. G. "Philipp Otto Runge and the Mythology of Landscape " Art Bulletin, xxiv, 335-350.

Viereck, Peter. Metapolitics: From the Romantics to Hitler. N. Y. 1941.

Wagner, Lydia E. "Caroline Schlegel, 1763-1809: A Study of Personal Adjustment to Social Life and Scientific Development " Psychiatry: Journal of the Biology and Pathology of Interpersonal Relations, v 203-208

Weigand, Hermann J. "Recent Studies of Germany's Classical Heritage " SP, xxxix. 580-595.

The shifting conception of Greece in the German mind (Winckelmann, Holderlin, Nietzsche, George), and the less obvious factors spelling its significance, critically examined

Wonderley, A. W. "The Origins of Pessimism in German Literature of the Early Eighteenth Century " Univ. of Wisconsin Summaries of Doctoral Dissertations, vi. 316-318

See ENGLISH, Section x, s.v. Wordsworth, Dorothy.

Bürger. Gudde, E. G. See AMERICAN, Section III, s.v. Miscellaneous.

Dünnehaupt. Kozumplik, W. A. "Johann Dunnehaupt's Jacob A Unicum " GR, xvii. 31-38

Eichendorff. Coogan, D. F., Jr. "The Themes of Eichendorff's Lyric Poetry " Univ. of Wisconsin Summaries of Doctoral Dissertations, vi 304-305

Skidmore, W. E. Eichendorff's Weltanschauung as Revealed in His Language Univ. of Illinois diss. (abstract).

Goethe. Baldensperger, F. "Goethe Historien littéraire " MLN, lvii 500-505

Denslow. See Spanish, II, s.v. Miscellaneous.

Engel-Janosi, Friedrich. "Goethes Stellung in der Geschichtschreibung." MDU, xxxiv 362-370.

Feise, Ernst. "Zwei Goethestudien (Pater Brey—Sesenheimer Lieder) PMLA, lvii. 169-181.

Gemeinhardt, L. E. "The Dramatic Structure of Goethe's Götter, Helden und Wieland." JEGP, xli 345-348.

Gerhard, Melitta. "Chaos und Kosmos in Goethe's Hermann und Dorothea " MDU, xxxiv. 415-424.

Gode-von Aesch, A. "Makarie." MDU, xxxiv 31-33

Not from Greek makar, "blessed," but from S. Italian makkaria, "calm "

Gudde, E. G. "Goethes Luciane und Tinette von Reizenstein " MDU, xxxiv. 28-30.

Hohlfeld, A. R. "Wortindex zu Goethes Faust." MLN, lvii. 483-485. [Cf Prof. J. A. Walz's review, ibid, pp. 288-291]

Hungerford, E. B. Shores of Darkness. N. Y., 1941.

"Goethe's Helena," pp 240-291

Ittner, R. T. "Werther and Emilia Galotti." JEGP, xli 418-426

Sees an inner parallelism between Emilia's and Werther's suicides, using Prof. Weigand's interpretation of the former (JEGP, xxviii, 467 ff.) and stressing Werther's remorse.

Jockers, Ernst. Soziale Polarität in Goethes Klassik. Philadelphia.

Qualities of Adel and Bürgertum in juxtaposition enhancing Goethe's classicism by social values in three stages: Iph, Eg, Tasso; WM, HD, Nat. T, Wahlv

Kurrelmeyer, W. "Kaulbach's Illustrated Edition of Goethe's Reineke Fuchs, 1846." MLN, lvii. 59-61.

Robinson, V. W. "Goethe's Allegorical Prologues and Those by His Predecessors and Contemporaries." Mod. Lang. Forum, xxvi 193-199.

Rose, Ernst See Nietzsche.

Slochow, Harry. "Goethe and Rilke Contemporary Revaluations." Accent, II. 204-213.

(1) Reaffirms present-day value of Faust, Pts I & II, (2) analyzes Rilke's God conception

Walz, John A. "A Guide to the Future" PMLA, lvi 1324-1334.

Zucker, A. E. See Modern Scandinavian.

See Mann.

See AMERICAN, Section IV, s. v. Taylor.

Grimm. Schirokauer, Arno. "Spatromantik im Grimmschen Wörterbuch" GQ, xvii 204-213.

Belated Romanticism found in the very conception of the DWb, illustrations

Herder. Clark, R. T., Jr. "Herder's Conception of 'Kraft'" PMLA, lvii 737-752

Wolff, H. M. "Der junge Herder und die Entwicklungsidee Rousseaus." PMLA, lvii 753-819.

Herder's final realization that history can be written "only with ideas," resulted from a dialectic attitude toward Rousseau, here traced in detail

Jean Paul. Berend, Eduard. "Jean Pauls Gedichte" PMLA, lvii 182-188.

——— "Zu Jean Pauls Kampaner Tal." MLQ, III 445-448

——— "Die Namengebung bei Jean Paul." PMLA, lvii 820-850

Hartwig, Hellmut A. A. Jean Paul Friedrich Richters Verhältnis zur Romantik Univ. of Illinois diss. (abstract)

Kleist. Furst, Norbert. "Kleist's 'Erfindung'." MLN, lvii 278-280.

——— "The Structure of Kleist's Plays" GR, xvii 48-55.

——— "Kleist's 'Unsichtbares Theater'" MLN, lvii 457-458

Weigand, H. J. "Das Vertrauen in Kleists Erzählungen." MDU, xxxiv 49-63, 126-144

Integrated critique of the stories, reanalyzed seriatim (Kohlhaas).

Lenz. Gemeinhardt, L. E. "Lenz's Menalk und Mopsus: A Totengespräch" GR, xvii 112-116

Lessing. Roedder, Edwin. "Lessing's Nathan der Weise auf der englischen Bühne." MDU, xxxiv 235-240.

Detailed synopsis and critique of the N. Y. performance of March 11, 1942 (Piscator).

Möser. Wolff, H. M. "Rousseau, Moser und der Kampf gegen das Rokoko." MDU, xxxiv 113-125.

Rousseau's social protest given significance in Germany by Wieland's rococo, the battle of Sturm und Drang joined by Moser.

Schelling. Bolman, F. de W., Jr. (tr.) Schelling: The Ages of the World. N. Y.

Schiller. Gerhard, E. S. "Schillers 'Die Götter Griechenlands'" GQ, xv 86-92

Hewett-Thayer, H. W. "An Unrecorded Portrait of Schiller." [1 pl.] GR, xvii 105-111.

Kaufmann, F W Schiller, Poet of Philosophical Idealism Oberlin, Ohio
 Krumpelmann, J T "Schiller and Saint Joan of Arc" MDU, xxxiv 159-168

Schultz, Arthur R "Schiller and the Literature of Travel" Univ of Wisconsin Summaries of Doctoral Dissertations, vi 313-315

Schlegel, A. W. Lazenby, Marion C The Influence of Wieland and Eschenburg on Schlegel's Shakespeare Translation (Johns Hopkins Univ diss 1941) Baltimore

Schlegel, Dorothea. Zeydel, E H "An Unpublished Letter of Dorothea Schlegel to Ludwig Tieck" GR, xvii 56-61

Dated Vienna, April 15, 1829, text and interpretation

Schlegel, Friedrich. Zeydel, E. H "Notes on Friedrich Schlegel's Lucinde" JEGP, xli 152-162

Schmid, Price, Lawrence M Christian Heinrich Schmid and His Translations of English Dramas 1767-1789 (Univ of Calif Pub in Mod Philol, xxvi, no 1, pp x, 1-122) Berkeley

Critical account (pp 1-86) of the life-work of the "Giessener" Schmid as a "purveyor of literature," based on meticulous research and admirable judgment Bibliographies, Notes, Index, five illustrations

Tieck. Matenko, Percy "Tieck and His Austrian Friends" GR, xvii 117-131

Eight hitherto unpublished letters from Vienna libraries, 1813-1839, interpretation

Wieland. Colwell, W A "The First English Translation of Wieland's Oberon" PMLA, lvii 576-582

By James Six, published in Deutsches Museum, 1784

Zschokke. Albrecht, Erich "Heinrich Zschokke's Version of the Founding of Maryland" AGR, viii. vi 15-16, 34

Nineteenth Century

Miscellaneous. Brown, Thomas K Young Germany's View of Romanticism N. Y., 1941. [Priv ed]

Kollman, E C "Characteristics of Austrian Literature" MDU, xxxiv 307-317.

Büchner. Rosenberg, P "Problems in Translation with Reference to Dantons Tod." GQ xv 19-27.

Critical examination of renderings by Dunlop (1927) and Spender & Rees (1939)

Droste-Hülshoff. Bosselmann-Franzen, Amalie "Die Judenbuche von Annette von Droste-Hülshoff. Eine Analyse." MDU, xxxiv 1-13.

Fontane. Zieglschmid, A. J F "Truth and Fiction and Mennonites in the Second Part of Theodor Fontane's Novel Quint The Indian Territory" Mennonite Quarterly Review, October, 1942, 24 pp.

Freiligrath. Wittke, Carl "Freiligrath and Heinzen." MDU, xxxiv 425-435

A "by-product" of a Heinzen life in preparation, based on unpublished letters

Grillparzer. Burkhard, Arthur (tr) The Golden Fleece: A Dramatic Poem in Three Parts Yarmouthport, Mass

Grun. Shelley, P A "Anastasius Grun and Charles T Brooks" PMLA, LVII 586-587

A hitherto unpublished letter from Grun to Brooks, dated Oct 28, 1855

Gutzkow. Rathje, G G "Gutzkow's Debt to George Sand" JEGP, XLI 291-302

Detailed report and comment on the one-sided relationship

Hebbel. Ittner, R T "Comments on Hebbel's Use of Dreams" GQ, xv 193-199

Wagner, A M "No Slip of the Pen in Hebbel's Herodes und Mariamne" [LI 1130 ff] JEGP, xli 370-371

Heine. Feise, Ernst "Typen Heinscher Ballade" MDU, xxxiv 153-156

—— "Form and Meaning of Heine's Essay 'Die Nordsee'" MDU, xxxiv. 223-234

Salinger, Herman. "The Riddle of the 'Kinderball' in Heine's Bader von Lucca" MDU, xxxiv 145-152

Silz, Walter "Heine's Synæsthesia" PMLA, LVII 469-488

Keller. Fleissner, Else M "Die kunstlerische Bedeutung des Zufalls bei Gottfried Keller" GR, xvii 261-272.

Reichert, Herbert W Studies in the Weltanschauung of Gottfried Keller Univ of Illinois diss (abstract)

Seidlin, Oskar "Eine Stilanalyse" [Romeo und Julia a d D] GQ, xv 12-18

Ludwig. Atkins, Stuart. "Many Misunderstood Passages" GQ, xv 134-146

Boschenstein, H "Zum Aufbau von Otto Ludwig's Zwischen Himmel und Erde" MDU, xxxiv 343-356

Morike. Reichard, J R. "Thematic Development in Eduard Morike's Lyric Poetry" Univ of Wisconsin Summaries of Doctoral Dissertations, vi 311-313

Nietzsche. Bluhm, Heinz "Some Aspects of Nietzsche's Earlier Conception of Art and the Artist" MDU, xxxiv 23-27.

—— "Nietzsche's Religious Development as a Student at the University of Leipzig" JEGP, xli 490-507.

Hazelton, Roger "Was Nietzsche an Anti-Christian?" Journal of Religion, xxii. 63-88

Parkes, H B The Pragmatic Test: Essays in the History of Ideas San Francisco, 1941

Includes one on Nietzsche

Rose, Ernst "Goethes 'Chorus Mysticus' als Anregung für Nietzsche und Rilke" GR, xvii 39-47

Potgieter. Zylstra, Henry "A Mid-Nineteenth Century Dutch View of American Life and Letters." PMLA, LVII 1108-1136

Sealsfield. Arndt, Karl J "New Light on Sealsfield's Cajutenbuch and Gesammelte Werke." JEGP, xli. 210-222.

Prints and explains a recently discovered letter from H Erhard to S, of Sept 1845.

Krumpelmann, J. T. "Charles Sealsfield's Americanisms" AS, xvi 26-31, 104-111.

Wiley, N. L. "Charles Sealsfield as a Realist." MDU, xxxiv 295-306
Illustrates "Sealsfield's noble contempt of realism"

Recent and Contemporary

Miscellaneous. Buck, P. M., Jr. Directions in Contemporary Literature N. Y. Treats, z a, Hauptmann, Hitler, and Mann.

Closset, F. "Young Dutch and Flemish Writers" BA, xvi 142-144

Hofrichter, Ruth Three Poets and Reality: Study of a German, an Austrian, and a Swiss Contemporary Lyricist New Haven.

Carossa, Weinheber, Steffen, each in his reaction to a seemingly disintegrating world patient waiting for the dawn, subconscious welcoming of doom, faith in a message Bibliography

Kollman, E. C. See Nineteenth Century, s v Miscellaneous.

Kuehnemund, Richard "German Prophets of Doom and Hope" JIII, iii. 443-447.

Pinthus, Kurt "Culture inside Nazi Germany." The American Scholar, ix. 483-498.

Radkey, Jakoba B. "Stromungen und Bewertungen deutscher Literatur von 1920 bis 1930" Univ. of Wisconsin Summaries of Doctoral Dissertations, vi 309-311.

Schumann, D. W. "Motifs of Cultural Eschatology in Post-Expressionistic German Poetry" MDU, xxxiv 247-261.

——— "Enumerative Style and Its Significance in Whitman, Rilke, Werfel." MLQ, iii 171-204

Viereck, Peter See Eighteenth and Early Nineteenth Centuries, s v Miscellaneous.

Weiskopf, F. C. "Fear under the Shiny Armor: A Report on Nazi Literature" Accent, iii 14-17

Bahr, Collins, Ralph S. "Hermann Bahr's Die Mutter, a Play of Decadence" GR, xvii. 62-66.

Carossa, Hofrichter, Ruth. See Miscellaneous.

Dehmel. Beall, C. B. "Housman, Dehmel and Dante." MLN, lvii 211 [Cf. PMLA, lvi. 1318]

Ernst. Semmler, Fritz. Charakter und Charakterisierung in den Novellen von Paul Ernst im Lichte der Psychologie von Ludwig Klages. New York Univ. diss. (abridgment).

Fallada. See Hauptmann.

Frenssen. Albrecht, Udo. "Frenssens Spiel mit der Sprache." GQ, xv. 147-156.

George. Steiner, Herbert. Begegnung mit Stefan George Aurora, N. Y.

Valhope, C. N., and Morwitz, Ernst (tr.) Stefan George: Poems. N. Y.

Hauptmann. Ellis, Frances H. "Literary Symbolism in Hauptmann's Novel Im Wirbel der Berufung." MDU, xxxiv. 326-332.

Gaede, W. R. "Gerhart Hauptmanns Fragment 'Die Burgerin'." GR, xvii. 197-211.

Reprint of rare text, well-informed if partial identification of models, circumstances

- Heuser, F. W. J. "Hauptmann's Germanen und Römer." GR, xvii. 174-196
- Klemm, F. A. "Genesis—Thanatos in Gerhart Hauptmann" GR, xvii. 273-281.
- "The Dead-Hand Motive as a Phase of Gerhart Hauptmann's Romanticism." MLQ, ii. 619-624
- Milch, Werner "Gerhart Hauptmann's Youthful Memories" BA, xvi. 139-141
- Reichart, W. A. "Iphigenie in Delphi" GR, xvii. 221-237.
- Genesis, synopsis, analysis, synthesis of H's latest drama (1941), copious quotations
- Slochower, Harry "Hauptmann and Fallada Uncoordinated Writers of Nazi Germany" Accent, iii. 18-25
- Squires, P. C. "Hauptmann's Der Ketzer von Soana." GR, xvii. 212-220.
- A psychoanalytic appreciation
- Wahr, F. B. "Theory and Composition of the Hauptmann Drama" GR, xvii. 163-173.
- Perspectives of origin and structure.
- Weigand, H. J. "Auf den Spuren von Hauptmanns Florian Geyer (I)" PMLA, lvii. 1160-1195.
- "A Close-Up of the German Peasants' War" Transactions of the Connecticut Academy of Arts and Sciences, xxxv. 1-32
- Ludwig, Paula. Meyer, Erika M. "Paula Ludwig" GR, xvii. 282-287.
- Mann, Brennan, Joseph G. Thomas Mann's World. N. Y.
- Lawson, Marjorie "The Transposed Heads of Goethe and of Mann." MDU, xxxiv. 87-92.
- Spann, Meno "Der Josephroman in Thomas Manns Gesamtwerk." PMLA, lvii. 552-571.
- Miegel, Woodbridge, Margaret. Key-Words in the Language of Agnes Miegel. Univ. of Illinois diss. (abstract)
- Morgenstern, Wirth, Otto "Christian Morgenstern" MDU, xxxiv. 64-79.
- Pohl, Reichart, W. A. "Gerhart Pohl and His Work" MDU, xxxiv. 80-86
- Rilke, Fairley, Barker. "Rainer Maria Rilke An Estimate." Univ. of Toronto Quarterly, xi. 1-14.
- Furst, Norbert. "Rilke's Translations of English, French, and Italian Sonnets." SP, xxxix. 130-142.
- Lemont, Jessie (tr.) Rainer Maria Rilke Poems. N. Y.
- Peters, H. F. "Rilke—Rodin A Correction" MLN, lvii. 9-10.
- Salinger, Herman. An Index to the Poems of Rainer Maria Rilke: Gesammelte Werke and Späte Gedichte. Madison, Wis
- "Rilke's Opening Lines." MLN, lvii. 1-9.
- Schumann, D. W. See Miscellaneous.
- Slochower, Harry. See Goethe.
- Schnitzler, Zeydel, E. H. "Can We Rely on Translations?" MLJ, xxv. 402-404.
- Points to tell-tale errors in Pierre Loving's rendering of "Literatur"
- Steffen, Hofrichter, Ruth. See Miscellaneous.

Stehr, Richter, F. K. "Der vergleichende Ausdruck in Stehr's Heiligenhof." MDU, xxxiv 318-325.

——— "Hermann Stehrs Kunstlernovellen" JEGP, xli 444-450

Wassermann, Blankenagel, J. C. The Writings of Jakob Wassermann Boston

Weinheber, Hofrichter, Ruth See Miscellaneous.

Werfel, Schumann, D. W. See Miscellaneous.

Americana Germanica

Allen, George "Two Pennsylvania-Dutch Poets. Part I, Henry Haibaugh, Part II, Henry Lee Fisher" AGR, vii vi. 10-12, 34, ix 1 10-12, 37

Arndt, K. J. "The First Wabash Song" [by George Rapp, 1814] Indiana Magazine of History, xxxviii 80-82

[Ed] "Otto Paul Schinnerer, 1890-1942" MDU, xxxiv 436

Fife, R. H. "In Memoriam Otto Paul Schinnerer" GR, xvii 312-314

Hagedorn, Hermann "Julius Holz, American" [1856-1941]. AGR viii iv 4-5, 32

Holt, F. O. "Charles M. Purin" MDU, xxxiv. 207-209.

Jantz, H. S. See AMERICAN, Section II

Klein, Walter C. Johann Conrad Beissel, Mystic and Martinet, 1690-1768 Philadelphia

Prahl, A. J. "The Hagerstown Almanack: A Venerable Maryland Institution" AGR, viii v 7-10.

Schreiber, Theodore. "Pioneer Educator in Utah The Story of Karl Gottfried Maeser" AGR, viii iv. 15-17.

Schueler, Herbert "In Memoriam Frank Mankiewicz" GQ, xv. 2-4

Seifert, L. W. J. "Pennsylvania-German Dialect Literature." AGR, viii iv 26-27, 36, v 30-33.

Sharpe, D. R. Walter Rauschenbusch. N. Y.

Tappert, T. G., and Doberstein, J. W. (tr.) The Journals of Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, Vol. I. Philadelphia

Ulke, Titus "My Memories of Carl Schurz." AGR, viii iii. 30-31 [With portrait by H. Ulke]

Wood, Ralph (ed.). The Pennsylvania Germans Princeton.

Prepared by several authors; chapters on journalism by R. Wood, on literature by H. H. Reichard, on the language by A. F. Buffington.

Zieglschmid, A. J. F. "The Hutterians on the American Continent." AGR, viii. iii 20-24.

Zucker, A. E. "Otto Heller—In Memoriam." JEGP, xli. 398-399.

——— "Natural Selection and German-American" Society for the History of the Germans in Maryland, Twenty-fifth Report, pp. 7-12

——— "Die Abendschule, 1853-1940. A Pioneer Weekly." AGR, viii. iii. 14-17

III. BIBLIOGRAPHICAL

Baginsky, P. B. German Works Relating to America, 1493-1800. N. Y.

Books Abroad, Vol. xvi. Univ. of Oklahoma

A quarterly comment on foreign book publications topically arranged.

[Ed] "Books the Nazis Banned" Bulletin of the N Y Public Library, XLVI, 945-948

E.g. Heine's Buch der Lieder, Schiller's Wilhelm Tell

[Ed] "Charles M. Purin—Publications" MDU, xxxiv 288-289

[Edd] "Bibliography of the Publications of George T. Flom, 1899-1941" Scandinavian Studies Flom, pp 16-31

Einarsson, Stefán "Publications in Old Icelandic Literature and Language, 1939-1940" SS, xvii 45-65

Critical account, topically arranged with running commentary

Graham, W (ed) The Romantic Movement A Selective and Critical Bibliography for the Year 1941 "ELH", ix 22-26 (German), 29-30 (Scandinavian)

Lists foreign and American books, articles, and significant reviews, comments by the compilers R. T. Ittner and W. G. Johnson, and by E. H. Zeydel Gumpert, Martin. "German Literature" New Int Year Book, pp 235-236.

Gustafson, Alrik. "Danish Literature"; "Swedish Literature." New Int Year Book, pp 163-164, p 634

Haugen, Einar "Norwegian Literature" New Int Year Book, pp 485-486.

Heuser, F. W. J. (ed). First Editions of the German Romantic Period in American Libraries N. Y.

Kaufmann, F. W. "Germanic Languages and Literatures." American Year Book, pp 886-889

Concise reports on selected items

Kunstmann, J. G. "Recent Literature of the Renaissance." [Bibliography.] D. Germanic Languages SP, xxxix 394-426

Lane, George S. "Indo-European Linguistics Germanic" American Year Book, pp 909-910

Rapp, Franz "Eine Handbibliothek zur deutschen Theatergeschichte" MDU, xxxiv 183-191

With characterizing remarks

Rosenberg, R. P. "Bibliographies for Hebrew Translators" Jewish Forum, xxv (Dec), n p)

Seidlitz, Oskar. "Neue Literatur zur Romantik" MDU, xxxiv. 241-246

Springer, Otto A Working Bibliography for the Study of German and Germanic Philology. Univ. of Pennsylvania [Mimeographed]

Comprehensive representation of non-literary aspects

Thomson, S. Harrison Progress of Medieval and Renaissance Studies in the United States and Canada Bulletin No 16 (1941). No 17

Zucker, A. E. (ed) "Annual Bibliography" [for 1941, formerly "Anglo-German Bibliography," published by the JEGP] AGR, viii iv. 41-48 [Compiled by H. A. Pochmann, B. Q. Morgan, L. M. Price, W. A. Reichart, H. R. Warfel]

Lists (1) 234 titles of American and foreign articles and books (incl. some reviews) dealing with literary relations between German- and English-speaking countries and groups (Penn. German), (2) 103 projects, unpublished studies, etc.

TEXTBOOKS RECEIVED 1942

- English* Bachlor, Joseph M. and Henry, Ralph L. American Thinking and Writing New York D. Appleton-Century Co. Pp. xxii+566. $2.25
- Gates, Theodore J. and Wright, Austin. College Prose Boston. D. C. Heath and Co. Pp. viii+565. $2.00.
- Greever, Garland and Jones, Easley S. The Century Handbook of Writing, 4th Edition. New York. D. Appleton-Century Co. Pp. xvii+364. $1.35.
- Haber, Tom B. A Writer's Handbook of American Usage. New York Longmans, Green and Co. Pp. viii+152. $1.00.
- McCallister, James Maurice. Purposeful Reading in College New York. D. Appleton-Century Co. Pp. v+170. $1.25.
- French*. Bond, Otto F. Deuxième Étape Basic French readings Books six to ten bound together Boston D. C. Heath and Co. $1.60.
- France, Anatole. Le Livre de Mon Ami Edited by J. Heywood Thomas. Oxford Basil Blackwell. Pp. xx+184. 6s.
- France, Marie de. Fables. Edited by A. Ewert and R. C. Johnston. Oxford Basil Blackwell. Pp. xxi+88. 6s. 6d.
- Fraser, W. H., Squair, J. and Parker, Clifford S. Revised Elementary French Grammar. Boston D. C. Heath and Co. Pp. xvii+410. $1.80.
- Heredia, José-Maria de. Les Trophées Cambridge: University Press, and New York: The Macmillan Co. Pp. xv+96
- La Chanson de Roland*. Edited by Rosalyn Gardner, W. S. Woods and H. H. Hilton, Jr. Boston: Ginn and Co. Pp. xviii+241. $3.00
- Edited by F. Whitehead. Oxford. Basil Blackwell. Pp. xx+171. 7s. 8d.
- Richardson, Henry Brush. Outline of French Grammar with Vocabularies. New York: D. Appleton-Century Co. Pp. vii+92. $.90.
- Ritchie, R. L. Græme and Simons, Claudine I. Essays in Translation from French Cambridge. University Press, and New York: The Macmillan Co. Pp. x+405. $4.50. (1941).
- French Passages for Translation. Cambridge: University Press, and New York. The Macmillan Co. Pp. viii+169. $1.35.
- Rostand, Edmond. Cyrano de Bergerac. Edited by H. Ashton. Oxford: Basil Blackwell. Pp. x+237. 7s. 6d.
- Turgeon, Frederick King. French Review for Reading Knowledge. New York: D. Appleton-Century Co. Pp. vii+164. $1.25.
- Verlaine, Paul. Sagesse. Cambridge: University Press, and New York. The Macmillan Co. Pp. xii+50. $1.00.
- Voltaire. Candide. Edited by O. R. Taylor. Oxford Basil Blackwell. Pp. xi+106. 6s.
- German*. Goedsche, C. R. Sag's auf deutsch! A first book for German conversation. New York F. S. Crofts & Co. Pp. xiii+134. $1.50.
- Hagboldt, Peter. Graded German Readers. Books one to five alternate bound together. Boston: D. C. Heath and Co. $1.40.
- and Kaufmann, F. W. Deutsch zur Anfänger An inductive presentation of minimum essentials. Revised edition. Boston: D. C. Heath and Co. Pp. vii+272. $1.60.

- Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von. Die Leiden des jungen Werthers (sic). Edited by E. L. Stahl. Oxford: Basil Blackwell. Pp. xxxii+169. 6s.
- . Poems. Selected by James Boyd. Oxford: Basil Blackwell. Pp. xi+212. 7s. 6d.
- Hoffman, E. T. A. Der goldene Topf. Ein Märchen aus der neuen Zeit. Edited by W. F. Mainland. Oxford: Basil Blackwell. Pp. xxix+103. 6s. 6d.
- Hofmannsthal, Hugo von. Der Tor und der Tod. Edited by Mary E. Gilbert. Oxford: Basil Blackwell. Pp. xxx+26. 3s. 6d.
- Lenz, Harold F. H. Scientific German for Intermediate Students. New York: W. W. Norton and Co. Pp. 247. $1.85.
- Seidlin, Oskar. Der goldene Apfel. Eine Erzählung für die Jugend. Edited by Ann Elizabeth Mensel. New York: F. S. Crofts & Co. Pp. x+189. $1.35.
- Vesper, Will. Tristan und Isolde: Parzival. Edited by Hans Jaeger and Bernhard Ulmer. New York: Henry Holt and Co. Pp. xxiii+193. lxxvi. $1.40.
- Wernher der Gartenære. Meier Helmbrecht. Edited by Charles E. Gough. (German Mediaeval Series, Section A, Vol. II). Oxford: Basil Blackwell. Pp. xxxv+117. 6s.
- Japanese. Yamagiwa, Joseph K. Modern Conversational Japanese. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co. Pp. xii+240. $2.50.
- Portuguese. Carter, Henry Hare. Contos e anedotas brasileiros. A graded Portuguese reader. Boston: D. C. Heath & Co. Pp. xviii+241. $1.48.
- Kany, Charles E. and de Figueiredo, Fidelino. Elementary Portuguese Conversation. Boston: D. C. Heath & Co. Pp. vi+56. $.36.
- Spanish. Brett, Lewis Edward and Kurz, Harry. Intermediate Spanish Grammar and Readings. New York: D. Appleton-Century Co. Pp. xiv+524. 2.85.
- Castillo, Carlos and Sparkman, Colley F. Graded Spanish Readers. Books six to ten bound together. Boston: D. C. Heath and Co. $1.52.
- Diaz-Valenzuela, O. The Spanish Subjunctive. Philadelphia: David McKay Co. Pp. vi+75. $.75.
- Grismer, R. L. A Brief Spanish Grammar for Beginners. New York: The Macmillan Co. Pp. xiv+180. $1.50.
- Hall, Guillermo and Oñate, José D. First Spanish Graded Reader with emphasis on Spanish-American culture. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell Co. Pp. x+196. $1.40.
- Jones, Willis Knapp and Barr, Glenn R. Resumen Gramatical con Ejercicios. Boston: D. C. Heath and Co. Pp. vi+128. $.60.
- . Un Verano en México. Boston: D. C. Heath and Co. Pp. x+252. $1.40.
- Kany, Charles E. Spoken Spanish for Flying Cadets and Our Armed Forces. Boston: D. C. Heath and Co. Pp. xiii+183. $1.00.
- Naciones Bajo Las Armas*. Edited by P. Villa Fernández. New York: Dryden Press. Pp. xii+185. $1.40.
- Pittaro, John M. Unidad de Repaso. A bridge between Primer and Segundo Curso de Español. Boston: D. C. Heath and Co. Pp. v+74.
- Schoenrich, Edwin. Concise Charted Spanish Grammar. New York: N. E. H. Hubbard and Co. Pp. 255.
- Stover, Frances Porter. Encanto de México. New York: The Macmillan Co. Pp. ix+103. $1.25.
- Whittem, Arthur F., Andrade, Manuel T., and Rivera, Guillermo. Spanish Commercial Correspondence. Revised edition. Boston: D. C. Heath and Co. Pp. vi+273. $1.72.

RETROSPECT AND PROSPECT

By FREDERICK MORGAN PADELFORD, President of the Association

FORTY-FOUR years ago I first attended a meeting of the Modern Language Association. That was upon the advice of Professor Albert S Cook, who remarked that since at Charlottesville I would be seeking a post for the following year it would be well to meet the men in the profession. From the point of view of the market place it was not a paying investment, for one glance at my boyish countenance was apparently enough to satisfy the most indiscriminating employer that my services would be costly at any price. In every other respect, however, the venture did pay, for I then became aware that, youth and ignorance to the contrary, I had become a member of a nation-wide guild of scholars

That was long before the days of Group meetings, and all the papers were presented in general sessions. The committee had generously allowed me a place on the program and I read—not without trepidation in the presence of such formidable scholars as Von Jagemann, Gudeman, Grandgent, Hempl, and Gayley—a paper on “Old English musical terms.” The instruments were illustrated with wash drawings made by my roommate, Charles G. Osgood. Thus early our scholarship was a cooperative enterprise. In those days every paper was discussed, an ordeal that I had awaited with some apprehension. When mine was mercifully handled by Professors Baker, Bright, and Greene—all of the Johns Hopkins University—I felt a sense of gratitude that a half century has not erased.

All told, there were twenty-three papers. Two of them I remember distinctly. One was by Professor Grandgent on “From Franklin to Lowell, a century of New England pronunciation,” in which with inimitable humor, the author, laying aside his manuscript, read sentimental eighteenth-century love letters as they would have been pronounced by Benjamin Franklin. The other was on “Experiments in translating Anglo-Saxon poetry,” in which the enthusiastic linguist threw back his head and chanted his translation of Beowulf in stentorian tones that would have shaken the rafters of the stoutest mead-hall. The unexpected laughter that greeted this performance completely baffled the bard.

The total membership of the Association for 1898 was 509, and in spirit there were two associations, for the Central Division had its own officers and held its own meetings. The attendance at Charlottesville was almost strictly confined to members from the Atlantic seaboard and was probably well under one hundred. This made for informality and intimacy. For two graduate students from Yale the high points of the meeting were a leisurely afternoon trip through the pleasant countryside to Monticello, and a gracious dinner in the hospitable home of Professor and Mrs. Harrison. The serenity and mellowness of the University quite won our hearts and a purely casual inquiry by Professor Kent as to my future raised the naive hope that the University of Virginia would deem it desirable to insert a bit of unpolished rock from the Maine coast into its academic structure. Little did I then dream that I would spend my life in helping to build a university on the remote western shore.

The early constitution of the Association provided that "The object of this Association shall be the advancement of the study of the Modern Languages and their Literatures." It was therefore quite in accord with the declared purpose of the Association that one session was devoted to a report of the so-called Committee of Twelve, "appointed (a) to consider the position of the Modern Languages (French and German) in Secondary Education, (b) to examine into and make recommendations upon methods of instruction, the training of teachers, and such other questions connected with the teaching of the Modern Languages in the Secondary Schools and the Colleges as in the judgment of the Committee may require consideration."

In line with this activity, at the corresponding meeting of the Central Division, held at the University of Nebraska, the President, Professor C. Alphonso Smith, addressed the members on "The Work of the Modern Language Association of America." In this address he traced briefly the steps by which the modern languages had gained recognition in American schools and colleges, overcoming the prejudice entertained against them because of the prestige of Latin and Greek and demonstrating their practical and cultural value. In this connection he recalled the sympathetic support received from science departments, for "during the second meeting of the Modern Language Association of America (1884), a Committee from the Society of Naturalists of the Eastern United States presented the following resolution: 'That the Society of Naturalists of the Eastern United States, recognizing the great importance of a thorough knowledge of Modern Languages, especially of French and German, to students of Natural History, regard it as a hopeful sign that a Conference of Professors in this department is now assembled at Columbia College, and hereby express their hearty sympathy with this work'." That was in 1884. During that decade and the following the modern languages came into their own.

It was in my freshman year that French and German gained honorable recognition on the Colby College campus. From a remote past there had been a public exercise known as "Senior Orations with Junior Parts." This exercise was held in the Baptist Church because of its large seating capacity. —We took our culture seriously in the nineties. The Junior Parts were merely orations spun from the inner resources of the participants, but the Senior Orations furnished the real feast, the pièces de resistance. Traditionally there were two of these orations, assigned to the two seniors who stood first and second in rank. The first orator delivered his own translation of a Latin oration turned into Greek, the second orator, his version of a Greek oration turned into Latin. Now in the spring of 1893, the insistence of the recently appointed Professor of Modern Languages—a German from the University of Kiel—won the concession that there should be two more senior orations, assigned to the two men who stood third and fourth in the class, one to be French turned into German, and the other German turned into French. Of course the supremacy of Greek and Latin was not to be questioned, but it was something for the modern tongues to be heard from the same platform.

During the first decade and a half in the present century the modern languages were increasingly studied, and enjoyed growing public favor. It was only a question of which should prosper the more, French or German, and there existed a rivalry which for the most part was healthy and controlled. French enjoyed a cultural recognition that dated from the seventeenth century, but German found its advocates in our German-American citizenry and in a generation of American scholars in the various disciplines who had received their graduate training in the German universities.

Then came the World War and German fell into a disfavor from which it had only partly recovered when the present war began. With naïve insularity the American people first took the attitude that they would show their scorn for Germany by refusing to learn her language. Then when the war venom had somewhat spent itself, the internal conditions of Germany were such that she no longer was making the significant scientific and cultural contributions that had given her prestige for half a century or more. Scholars themselves found little that was significant as they scanned the thinning pages of the German periodicals. As a consequence, French profited at the expense of German. There was also an appreciable increase in the study of Spanish, and to a lesser degree of Italian.

In the meantime, the years from 1900 to 1930 saw an unprecedented expansion in the study of English. The graduate schools were taxed to train enough men and women to meet this demand. English seemed to be the fair-haired child in the academic world.

The years from 1931 to 1941, however, witnessed something of a decline in the relative standing not only of the modern languages and literatures, including English, but of all the humanistic disciplines. This shift was the result of many factors. One, of course, was the amazing strides that, as the result of our inventive genius, were made in mechanics and in all branches of engineering, and which for the time tended to distort values, confusing ends and means, the intrinsic and the extrinsic. Surrounded with mechanical gadgets, and increasingly dependent upon them for our creature comforts and our practical efficiency, we were inclined to take a mechanistic view of life. Another factor was the vast and complex social changes taking place in the world, which occasioned a swing to the social sciences—economics, political science, and sociology. How effectively these disciplines can direct such changes remains to be seen, but the past decade has certainly seen them in the saddle. A third factor was the lowering of the norm of academic intelligence which resulted from the policy of keeping all boys and girls in school until a certain age and the desire of parents to give their children a college education, regardless of interest or ability. It is axiomatic that the more we reduce the mean of academic intelligence, the more the humanities will be neglected in favor of manual and vocational skills and techniques.

During the current year the humanities have suffered a still further eclipse because of the war. Those students who have not already entered the Service or the war industries are emphasizing courses related to the war effort. Some alarmists foresee the end of the traditional American college and of non-technical education. I cannot share this pessimistic view. I think we have every reason to believe that our people will wish to return to normal ways of living as soon as possible after the war is ended, and that our youth will flock back to our colleges and universities as soon as they are released from the Service.

But that the humanities, which have been on trial for several years, will continue to be on trial after the duration, can hardly be doubted. Such organizations as the American Historical Society, the American Philosophical Society, Phi Beta Kappa, and our own organization all recognize the seriousness of the situation and are seeking ways and means to influence public opinion in favor of humanistic studies. Such being the case, the future welfare of English and the modern foreign languages as disciplines would seem to be a proper subject to discuss at this time.

I recognize, of course, that such a discussion is outlawed by a strict interpretation of our Constitution. We have seen that in the earlier days the Modern Language Association was concerned in part with the problem of instruction and the training of teachers. By 1929, however, the Association had come to feel that as an organization it no longer needed to stress such matters and consequently reworded Article II of its Constitution to read: "The object of the Association shall be the advancement of research in the modern languages and literatures." Since that time the programs have been restricted to research. Such ancillary organizations as the American Association of Teachers of French, the Secondary Education Board, and the College English Association—to name but three—which have taken over the problems of curriculum and teaching that once concerned the Association as such, are allowed to meet in conjunction with the Association but not to encroach upon the time reserved for the Association's own programs.

The Association, however, cannot afford to be snuffy and to ignore these problems of teaching, because its own welfare is involved. If the languages and literatures were to suffer a partial eclipse, the Association would suffer in exact proportion. That the Association is aware of this is evident from its own willingness to violate its Constitution as shown by the authorization of the "Commission on Trends in Education," which has already sponsored two admirable publications. Perhaps one might put up a case for the constitutionality of this commission by arguing that since the object of the Association is the advancement of research, it is legitimate for the Association to defend the jobs which make research workers possible.

So I feel some assurance that the Association will not take me to task for giving my views on a subject of such immediate concern to all of its members. Before doing so, however, may I pause for a moment to survey in retrospect the impressive achievements of our Association in its self-appointed task of furthering research. Our members constitute an army of workers who have been pursuing scholarly studies in all of the modern languages and in all the periods of the literatures involved. In American literature, a relatively new field, our scholarship is, as would be expected, preeminent, in English literature we far surpass England herself in the volume of research in every period, and while some of the work is superficial, or pedestrian, much of it is of highest quality. One has but to summarize the contributions of American scholars to our knowledge of Chaucer, Spenser, Shakespeare, Milton, Dryden, Johnson, Wordsworth, and a host of lesser men to realize how large a share of the best scholarship in the field of English letters has been the work of Americans.

In Germanics, scholarship in German-American literary relations is, naturally, outstanding in the United States. But a glance at the production in bibliographies, surveys and monographs, in such fields as philology, the later Middle Ages, the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and especially in the eighteenth century and the Romantic period, will show what fruits scholarship in Germanics has brought forth in this country.

In the Romance field, our scholars have made linguistic studies now regarded as fundamental to the history of French, Provençal, Spanish, Italian, and Rumanian; and these theoretical formulations have been accompanied by scores of carefully edited texts. In the province of literary history the investigations have frequently reached a high level and in Hispanic literary history our scholars have made the most voluminous contribution of any nation, and perhaps the most valuable in its aggregate worth.

What would the men who, somewhat timidly and somewhat on the defensive, founded the Association sixty years ago have thought if they could have foreseen the fruits of their action, the extent of the annual bibliographies of the members, which require well over one hundred pages in the official publication, and the number and character of the journals issued in America. All honor, then, to the Association for its fine past.

But the past does not secure the future, and we are all aware of an increasing concern for the status of languages and literatures as academic subjects. We have witnessed the melancholy decline of Latin and Greek, and we wonder if a like fate awaits modern foreign languages and English. Are they also to be shoved to the wall? This brings us back to our main subject.

So far as English composition and foreign languages as tool subjects are concerned, I think we have nothing to fear. English composition will always be required because the practical need for it is so great. Society cannot get along without it and will insist that it be well taught. To be sure, in the past the study of the modern foreign languages, even as tool subjects, has met with a good deal of opposition, but that has been because of our insularity. Since physically and culturally the United States has been the most isolated of nations, we have never really felt the need of knowing these languages. Save for the Mexicans, whose culture has only recently interested us, we have no neighbors who speak a different tongue, and we have been so absorbed in the material conquest of a rich continent that we have had little time or inclination seriously to concern ourselves with the affairs of other peoples. But that era is gone forever, and as a nation we shall inevitably play a greatly increased rôle in international affairs.

The teachers of foreign languages may well take heart, for however dark the momentary outlook, when this war is over foreign languages will be regarded as a necessary part of training, with both business and diplomacy putting a premium upon proficiency in them. Moreover, economic and political relations inevitably pave the way for cultural relations, as all history teaches. It will be to the immediate advantage of these disciplines that, through the various foreign language societies, such careful study of teaching techniques has been made in recent years.

But what of the study of literature? Is it to be discarded as Latin and Greek before it? I believe that while the situation is extremely grave, the answer to that question lies entirely with us. If the study of literature should come to occupy a very subordinate place in the curricula of our colleges and universities, and of our secondary schools as well—and there is danger that this may take place—we teachers of literature would be to blame. We could not honestly lay our defeat to the changing social order or the absorption of the age in things mechanical. We hold in our hands the best cards in the scholastic pack, we are rich in trumps, and if we haven't sense enough to play them, we shall have no one but ourselves to blame if the game is lost.

In saying that we hold the trump cards I mean exactly that, I mean that, human nature being what it is, there is no other subject in the curriculum that can make an appeal comparable to that of literature, if only it is properly presented. If our courses in literature are failing to attract students, it is not because of any fundamental changes in society, it is because our teaching, for some reason, is ineffective. A fresh survey of the subject will, I think, make this apparent.

Broadly speaking, courses in literature embrace (1) the study of literary history and (2) the experiencing of literature. Sometimes these activities are carried on independently of one another; sometimes they are fused. Neither one can be neglected by a department that appreciates its responsibility.

Literary history is an important, indeed an essential, branch of history. It deals with the thought of the race as men have consciously sought to give it, or have unconsciously succeeded in giving it, permanent and beautiful expression. Thus the funeral oration of Pericles was consciously written with this end in mind, the Gettysburg Speech achieved it without premeditation or artistic awareness. The two addresses alike became immortal.

Literary history, like any other branch of history, may concern itself with minute and highly detailed studies of a phenomenon or of an occurrence that falls within its field. Thus it may deal with problems of authorship, text, language, metrics, sources, interpretation, and the like, studies that are legitimate, and in fact necessary. In its broader aspects, however, literary history seeks to interpret phenomena as a part of the chain of human experience. Men and schools are studied with reference to the times which produced them and the prevailing climate of opinion, and then in turn with reference to their impact upon succeeding generations. Thus to interpret Emerson, one must know the physical characteristics of New England, understand the social, economic, and religious mores of the predominately middle-class Calvinistic folk who inhabited it, and be versed in the German transcendental movement, and to appreciate the influence which Emerson exerted upon his own and succeeding generations, one must be able to trace the changes which his doctrines effected in the American sense of values and outlook, disentangling his influence from those which stemmed from other sources. In other words, the problem is to determine what Emerson did to the American scene. It is a task that calls for wide learning, balanced judgment, and delicate insight.

To put it differently, the centre of interest may be a literary phenomenon—a writer, a school of writers, or a literary type—or it may lie outside of the literary phenomenon, which is studied only as an aid to the interpretation of something else. Thus one may study the Puritan writings for the light that they throw on Puritanism, as Professor Haller has actually done in his admirable volume. As a matter of fact, studies of this latter sort are destined to receive increasing attention because of the shift of emphasis in the study of history itself from political to social phenomena. The fences that once separated scholars trained in history from those trained in literature have been coming down, and the two groups are found working harmoniously in the same garden. To recognize this, one need but recall Parrington's Main Currents, Professor Ralph H. Gabriel's The Course of American Democratic Thought, Professor Thomas F. Crane's Italian Social Customs in the Sixteenth Century and Dr. Louis Wight's Middle-class Culture in Elizabethan England. The techniques employed are essentially the same: the assembling and ordering of data and the formulating and testing of hypotheses, processes which require the most delicate and refined powers for correct analysis, and breadth and comprehensiveness of understanding for synthesis.

The study of literary history can therefore be justified on the same grounds as the study of political and social history. It can be adequately defended purely on the ground that it satisfies the very human desire to know. In that sense it has an intrinsic value, without reference to an end beyond itself. But as a branch of the history of culture, it has great extrinsic value as well, for it helps to supply that knowledge of the past and of the mind of man without which any attempt to understand present-day society or to direct its course is futile. To be sure, our knowledge of the past never fully explains the present because the present is always so enormously complex that some factors escape detection, even so, such knowledge as we have is indispensable to the solving of current problems.

In one very important respect, however, literary history differs in its ends from other branches of history: it prepares one for the understanding, realization, and enjoyment of literature itself. It helps to prepare one to experience literature. This brings us to a consideration of the study of literature as literature.

However desirable the study of literary history, it is by no means so fundamental as the study of the literature itself. Too often in our schools and colleges it is offered as a substitute, or as a partial substitute. No such substitution is possible, however, for literature studied and experienced as literature has an absolutely unique service to perform in our system of education. No other subject can possibly take its place. This unique service is nothing less than the training and discipline of the feelings.

The feelings play an essential part in the infinitely varied situations which confront the individual, both those which concern him alone and those which involve his relations to others. If the judicial faculty and the feelings are equally developed, they correct and complement each other and the result is a finely balanced personality, but if on the one hand, the feelings are crude and coarse, or, on the other hand, capricious or unrestrained through lack of discipline, the judgment itself is not to be trusted. Life is a constant series of adjustments, and one's happiness and influence are directly proportioned to his attitudes as determined by the harmonious cooperation of disciplined judgment and disciplined emotions.

As a distinguished American philosopher has written, "Education of the feelings, which both requires and makes possible acquaintance with an increasingly wide variety of feelings, brings about the development of the capacity to discriminate among feelings—the capacity to discern among them differences, likenesses, and other relations of which we were before unconscious. Discrimination or discernment is commonly described as the capacity to ‘tell the difference,’ and this is substantially correct. But more accurately it is the capacity not so much to tell as to notice a difference and, indeed, not exclusively a difference but equally a likeness or other relation to which persons not having had the sort of education now under consideration would be blind.

“Only a moment’s reflection is needed to perceive how essential a part of the education of a complete man, and how important not only to the sensibilities but often even to the happiness of those with whom he comes in contact, is this capacity in him to distinguish nuances of feeling more subtle and relationships between them less obvious than those which spontaneously thrust themselves upon everyone . . . This sensitiveness and capacity for fine discrimination alone makes possible the intuitive apprehension of another’s temperament and a sympathetic insight into his scheme of values, his motives, his problems, his ideals and aspirations, or in general into the meaning or the puzzle which life presents from his unique point of view. It is thus the indispensable foundation for tactful dealing with others and for accurate appreciation of the endless variety of human relationships and human situations.”¹

In defining the man fully established in the virtues, Aristotle says that such a man will feel the right emotion and just the right degree of emotion under all circumstances. One needs only to have this stated, to agree with it. No society is commendable, indeed no society is safe, if the feeling-dimensions of its citizens are undeveloped or subject to caprice. In a democracy, of all societies, where the health of the nation is the health of the average citizen, disciplined emotional life is absolutely necessary for the national well being.

The intellect and the emotions are constantly acting and reacting upon each other, and one plays as large a part in life as the other. Yet the surprising thing is that we build our educational programs primarily upon intellectual education and assume that the emotional life will take care of itself. Of course this is nonsense. To be sure, the home and the Church play a part in this education of the feelings, but increasingly the responsibility for the rounded training of youth is placed upon the schools.

Such being the case, provision for this training of the feelings, this discipline of the emotions, this maturing of the sentiments must be found in the teaching of literature. Literature is able to satisfy the emotions because it gratifies that insistent desire for adventure, that eager thrust into the unknown and unrealized, which, compounded of both thought and feeling, is one of the most fundamental of human urges. This craving for fresh experience is with man from the first dawn of consciousness until the last spark of life flickers into ashes. To this end literature "ransacks the ages, spoils the climes." Such is the power of the imagination that we react to the characters and situations encountered in reading, to the things said and done, as if we were meeting them in real life. They become a part of the very texture of our experience. We bid farewell to Calypso, turn our frail craft seaward and smite the sounding furrows; we shoulder aged Priam and fight our way through the flaming gates of Troy, we see Matilda gathering flowers on the farther bank of the stream or Beatrice sweetly smiling beyond the cruel flames, we ponder with Hamlet whether it is best to be or not to be, we pour the molten metal upon the mad crowd beneath the cathedral walls; we look down from the magic mount upon the life of the valley.

¹ C. J. Ducasse, “Are the Humanities Worth Their Keep?”, The American Scholar, vi (1937), 462–463.

Our everyday living tends to fall into a routine in which we fail to see the import of the things that we do, the beauty that surrounds us, the potentialities of the lives that we touch. But literature quickens our appreciation and understanding, and liberates us. It brings out the values of life by placing it against a proper background. It sorts and rearranges these values, thrusting aside the trifling and the ephemeral, and exalting the significant and the permanent. It makes us aware that things seemingly of great moment may count for little or nothing, and that things apparently of little moment may be fraught with the greatest consequence.

We need not concern ourselves with the age-old debate over the question of whether the end of literature, as one of the fine arts, is merely to delight, to teach and delight, or to teach through delight. It is enough for our purpose to recognize that the proper reading of it does enlarge one's experience, sharpen his perceptions, and refine his feelings.

I have said the proper reading, because literature as often taught and studied does not produce these results. By the proper reading I mean the actual experiencing of a piece of literature—be it poetry, drama, novel, or story—whereby, through the imagination, one makes the experience portrayed his own. As Professor A. C. Bradley expressed it in his first Oxford lecture, "An actual poem is the succession of experiences—sounds, images, thoughts, emotions—through which we pass when we are reading as poetically as we can."² These printed characters arranged before us on a white page are not a poem, they are not the "Ode to the West Wind," they are but symbols of what a poet once thought and felt in a moment or a period of intense living, but such is the recreative power of the imagination that it can transform these symbols into life again; or perhaps it would be more accurate to say the imagination can pass through the gateway of these symbols into a living experience. The Ode exists, then, only when some one is experiencing it

² A. C. Bradley, Oxford Lectures on Poetry (Macmillan, 1926), p. 4.

To enable young people to experience literature, to enable them to live vicariously in a world of vivid thoughts and emotions from which they return to what—for want of a better term—we call actual life more wise, more just, more gentle, more humane, is the highest use to which the teaching of literature can be put. As a recent writer has happily expressed it, literature is “worthy of study because human beings need the finest values other human beings have to give”³

Literary history is, as I have tried to say above, a perfectly legitimate, indeed, an important field of academic study, but it is not to be confused with the experiencing of literature. Both fall within the province of departments of literature, but they are different activities and require different approaches and techniques. We must not lose sight of the fact that just as one may be thoroughly schooled in theology and yet know nothing of religion as a personal experience, so one may know a vast deal about a piece of literature and yet not really know it, because he has never experienced it. Thus one may be thoroughly familiar with the life of Coleridge, may be versed in English prosody, may have read volumes on the Romantic Movement, may have traversed all the long and fascinating road to Xanadu, and yet may never have entered the magic realm, never seen the stately pleasure dome, never gazed into the measureless caverns. But so far as our students are concerned, the supremely important thing is that they enter and see.

If literature is to be a living experience for students, how is this end to be secured? What further is required than that we assign the books to be read, trust that they will take, and turn to our research with a free conscience. Alas! there is no such royal highway, for it is only when a lad is really ready for it that he can experience literature. If his reading were to be confined to the strictly contemporary scene there would be less for us to do, for to a considerable degree he would already be oriented in the society out of which that reading sprang, but if the literature derives from some earlier period—and certainly we wish to liberate him from the narrow confines of the present—then the strangeness of time and place and language must be overcome. The reader must first come to feel at home in a new society where differences of custom and perhaps of speech hinder his recognition of the essential kinship of humanity. Thus if he is to read the Canterbury Tales he must first become familiar with strange manners and dress and modes of life, to say nothing of archaic language, before he is prepared to be one of the goodly company of the pilgrims. Again, if he is to read Jane Austen he must acquire something of the spirit of the time and feel not too self-conscious or critical in a society of satin hose and ostrich plumes, where ladies and gentlemen converse in genteel Johnsonian periods, before he can enjoy what Meredith has declared to be the most perfect expression of the comic spirit in English. Even the reading of modern literature often requires preliminary adjustments before the student is ready to enjoy it. For example, he is not prepared to read Swann's Way until he knows something of Proust's philosophy and in imagination at least accepts the thesis that the present lives in the past and the past in the present in a way to a degree not commonly recognized and that the real in human personality is discovered in flashes of memory. Then for most of the literature of the past there is the need of working through critical notes that explain allusions, clarify language, and otherwise elucidate the text.

³ Thomas Clark Pollock, The Nature of Literature (Princeton Press), 1942, p. xiii.

It is the office of the teacher to see that the student is thus prepared to experience any given piece of literature; it is equally his office to see that the student actually does experience it. Too often it happens that the preparation is mistaken for the end or that the two activities are so confused that the student is given no opportunity, much less encouragement, to enjoy the great adventure. It requires abandon and it does not suffer interruption. I am satisfied that the principal reason why so many college students shy away from what they call the "classics" and look back with distaste upon their high school training in English is that they never really lived the literature assigned them. They never got sufficiently away from notes to lose themselves in the play, the poem, or the story. It is like preparing all the plans and specifications for a house but never building it; or like constructing the scenery, making the costumes, learning the lines, but never giving the play.

To help the student to experience the literature requires both sensitiveness and resource. The instructor is responsible for bringing two minds together, and he must be able so to lend himself to the literature under consideration that the student finds in him the reflection of that which he is reading. For the moment, he embodies the thoughts and emotions of the original and thereby adds a warmth and intensity. To this end it is most important that the instructor be able to read aloud so sympathetically that the written page comes to life in the very tones of his voice. So essential is this that one who cannot thus read has no business to attempt the teaching of literature. He may be able to teach literary history or linguistics or criticism, but he cannot teach literature.

After a student has thus experienced literature, the instructor has yet to contribute a most valuable service, for the student is then prepared, and usually eager, to discuss what he has read with some one whose judgment he respects and whose companionship he enjoys. Here is the congenial occasion for reviewing that which has been read, analyzing the experiences portrayed, their sincerity and truth to life, their social, ethical, and spiritual implications, and the effectiveness of their presentation. The contribution of the instructor at this stage will be exactly proportioned to his sensibilities, his insight into character, his knowledge of life, his aesthetic maturity. He interprets life to the living. This does not mean that he takes the centre of the stage and puts on a show or that he obtrudes his personality, for his opinions are likely to be more valued if they are sought rather than gratuitously presented. But his whole personality comes into play and reveals itself far more completely than in the teaching of any other subject. His students partake of his life, he not only gives them ideas, but he gives them himself.

Surely it is not out of place on such an occasion as this to dwell upon these pedagogical details, for if it is the responsibility of teachers of literature in school and college to mold the sentiments, to establish the attitudes, to train the feelings of a whole generation of young people, then it is of supreme moment that we know how to handle the job. Perhaps we have been only partly aware of what is at stake. Perhaps our modesty or the apathy that results from an oft-repeated task has made us more or less insensible of the importance of what we are doing. But we hold a key position and our responsibility is very great. Certainly if the teaching is what it should be there is no subject in the curriculum to rival ours in its appeal, for it does not merely deal with life, it is life.

We have that for which men are longing, even though they may be only partly aware of it, or not aware of it at all. For we must not forget that by nature man is imaginative rather than practical, and that he pays to the practical only so much heed as the harsh necessities of life force upon him. It is popular in certain quarters to speak of literature as an escape from life. No, it is not an escape from life, it is an escape into life. It is an escape from a mechanized world which spells death to the human spirit, into a free world where the human spirit can expand. Once a student has entered this world he knows its value and he knows the road which leads to it.

The sum of the whole matter is this: the study of literary history, revealing what man has thought and felt in the past and illuminating the present, should commend itself to all students of an inquiring and philosophical type of mind. The study of literature per se is universal in its appeal. Together, literary history and literature present an offering of unparalleled attractiveness.

A member of this Association has recently drawn up for the Commission on Trends in Education a very able defense of the study of literature. It is hard to see how the case could be more eloquently and convincingly stated. But it is my considered opinion that this document will do its greatest service to the members of the Association themselves by giving us a new realization of our high calling and our social responsibility. After all, who else will be convinced of its validity? College presidents and deans, our colleagues, superintendents and principals of schools, editors of educational journals? They all have their own firsthand experience in literature courses to check against it, and I fear many of them will be conscious of a great disparity between theory and practice. On a recent date there were in the United States 3,407,331 college graduates twenty-five years of age or older. To this number may be added a few hundred thousand under that age. Almost all of these graduates had three years of English in high school and at least one year in college, and most of them had some exposure to foreign literatures. What have they to say about the value of their study of literature? If a majority feel that it was a rich experience, we need have no fears. If they do not feel so about it, then it is time for us to find out why.

At this particular stage in the national life, it is peculiarly incumbent upon us to live up to the full measure of our responsibility as teachers of literature. Thousands of young men now in our classes will shortly be drawn into the great struggle. Are we fortifying their spirits, are we giving them something real to take with them? The other day one of my friends who was on a train from Portland to Seattle chanced to be seated with a young draftee from the University of Oregon en route to Camp Lewis. The lad was reading the Oxford Book of English Verse. Somebody had done something for that lad.

On the other hand, in these days of feverish unrest, we should not forget that we are scholars as well, and that when our day's teaching has been done and our war tasks have been performed, it is our duty in calmness of spirit to return to our libraries and to carry on our research, which, if it be well done, is not for a day but for all time.

Frederick Morgan Padelford
1875-1942

ON December 3, 1942, in Pasadena, Dean Frederick M. Padelford, President of the Modern Language Association for 1942, died suddenly of coronary thrombosis. He was on his way to preside at the annual meeting of the Association which was to have been held in New York. His death imposes a grave and irreparable loss upon American humanistic education and scholarship. It falls unhappily at a moment when our humanistic culture, in its present peril, can least spare the kind of support and service to which Dean Padelford devoted his whole life.

Frederick Morgan Padelford was born of a clerical family, in Haverhill, Massachusetts, on February 27, 1875. He attained to the degree of B.A. at Colby College in 1896, and of Ph.D. at Yale in 1899.

His three years at Yale under the training of the late Albert S. Cook were highly significant in the shaping of his career. In the graduate study of those days teacher and student were usually on intimate and informal terms with one another, and perhaps the best teaching went on through personal and unprescribed association. Cook had brought back from Germany the severe scientific discipline in the study of literature which English, just then coming into its own, sorely needed for substantial qualification among the Liberal Arts. But such discipline, though essential, Cook administered as a lesser part of the whole subject. He used it, and taught others to use it, without compromise in the service of humanistic appreciation in the largest sense, an appreciation through imagination, emotion, and intellect, convertible into living and fertile personality.

Instinct with such ideas and their corollaries, and abounding with a youthful enthusiasm which never ebbed, Padelford went, a newly fledged doctor, to the University of Idaho, and after two years, in 1901, to the University of Washington, where he spent the remaining forty-one years of his life. He saw the University's registration grow from 600 students to 14,000. In this expansion he played a determinant part. But into the institution's less visible and more essential growth, its standards, its culture, its ideals, he infused his energies and projected his counsel unsparingly. Whether as administrator, teacher, or scholar, he deployed his powers with equal balance and effect.

All this service has been illuminated with his characteristic gay and buoyant spirit, and warmed by reflection from the genial hearth of his family where hundreds of students and friends have found cheer and comfort.

Frederick Morgan Padelford
1875-1942

With all else he found time and energy for service to his city and community. He served as a trustee of the Seattle Public Library, and of the Art Museum, and was at one time President of the Art Institute.

From academic and civic bounds his influence, through his inspired students and writings, has gone forth into all the regions of English literary scholarship. Honors and calls to other institutions have followed one another, but these were not the matter of his quest.

His talents as administrator, teacher, and scholar were tempered in rare balance, unless indeed we should think of them as but three manifestations of one talent. He loved affairs, not with ambition or a taste for intrigue, but with something of the same gust that he satisfied in golf or handball, or in the contest with nature in hunting, or cruising, or mountain-climbing. It was a game. But the stakes were in terms of service rendered. He bore his part with patience, tact, humor, sympathy, fair generosity. His quiet pointing of the real issue often settled the dust of prolonged and confused discussion. No struggling, or even negligible, aspirant ever felt himself neglected or ignored by the Dean, or went out unblessed by his compassion. But his allegiance to high standards of honest culture were none the less unexceptional and steady. Without seeming to fight, he won. Or, if he lost, he did not give up, but rose cheerfully again to the everlasting issue, and came through somehow without enemies.

In like manner his whole personality went into his teaching—his warmth, his drollery, his sympathy, his keen and accurate search for a student's real potential, his careful nurture of such powers by the particular means of literature—all with a single clear conception before him of the happier and more effective person which that student might, with his help, turn out to be. Fitting it is that his last utterance, his Presidential Address, published in this issue, should embody his reason of faith in the study of literature and his doctrine of the art of teaching it.

He understood young people by a kind of divination, partly because he never forgot the common frustrations and dissatisfactions, as well as the joys, of his own youth; and partly because an unfailing abundance of youth welled up in his own irrepressible nature. It was thus that he met the exhausting demands of his last year, and took his very end easily in his stride.

Padelford's performance as a scholar expressed his whole nature as much as did his teaching or his part in affairs. The Bibliography of his writings, running to nearly ninety items, published in the December number of The Modern Language Quarterly (pages 519-524), tells the story. The dates of these items show how unremitting were his inquiries. About one third of them are concerned with Edmund Spenser, and illustrate how his interest concentrated on this poet more and more with the years. His studies in Spenser were principally occupied with the ideas that entered into the composition of Spenser's poetry—theological, political, philosophical, and social—with Spenser's part in the tradition of chivalry and his affinity with the thought and temper of the Renaissance. But Padelford could on occasion take off his coat and descend to wrestle with a date or a text, to "settle hoti's business" or a statistical matter of vocabulary.

Nearly a third of the list treats of other Elizabethan and Tudor poets, especially Wyatt and Surrey. The rest of the titles range through various fields. Among other works in the list are his translations from Plutarch, Basil, and Scaliger, on the art and effect of poetry (1902, 1905), his edition of Early Sixteenth Century Lyrics (1907), his edition of Surrey (1920, revised 1928). For more than a dozen years he has lavished his knowledge, skill, and energy upon the Variorum Edition of Spenser's Works, both as one of the General Editors, and as Special Editor of Books I (1932) and III (1934) of the Faery Queen, and, with others, of Books VI and VII (1938). It would be impossible to describe or measure his generous share in this laborious project.

Perhaps his most conspicuous feat as a scholar was his discovery in 1932 of the lost translation, certainly by Spenser, of the pseudo-Platonic dialogue Axiochus, of which no copy had been seen or accurately described by a Spenserian scholar for nearly two hundred years. This text Padelford recognized, reclaimed, and identified in an exhaustive edition (1934).

Lastly, just before his death, he completed and prepared for press the Spenser Allusion Book, originally proposed and sponsored by the Spenser Group in this Association, and carried forward under the editorship of the late Ray Heffner. For this book Padelford has supplied a long and detailed prefatory essay on the influence of Spenser before 1700. There is a present hope and possibility that this book may appear as one of the volumes in the Variorum Edition.

As a scholar Padelford was strict, sceptical, untiring, tolerating no research for mere research's sake. He never suffered from the scholar's melancholy which is emulation. His most highly specialized work was never cloistered and irrelevant to life. He was a humanist in the best sense, whose humanism transcended the bounds of academic specialism, and drew into its sunny scope men and women of all types and followings, business, politics, art, the professions, and not least of all, hundreds of inconspicuous people who were notable for character or quality, or for humor in any sense old or new.

C. G. O.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

THE Secretary, under date of 30 December, 1942, records as his formal report the following five items:

1. The Supplement of 1941 and the four quarterly numbers of PMLA, Vol. LVII (including in the Supplement and June and December issues the Meetings and Acts of the Executive Council)

2. Of the 21 books named in the cancelled Program (page 3) the 7 issued in 1942 and the 4 planned as forthcoming.

[To these may now be added "Old English Glosses," by Professor Herbert Dean Meritt General Series]

3. A grant of $50 00 from the income of the Research Fund to the American Dialect Society.

4. Membership in the Association totalling 3945 (in 1941, 4304), a loss of 359 members. All members are in good standing. The 39 Honorary Members are not included, nor are some 430 subscribing libraries.

5. No grant received—The total for 1935-42 remains $65,515 00. Proceeds from books in 1942 exceeded $4300.00 (in 1941, $2000 00).

The loss in membership comes chiefly from the fringe of those who join for a year or two under the influence of a local Annual Meeting. Actually the loss from nonpayment of dues was 100 members fewer than in 1941, but the cancellation of the Annual Meeting cut short the usual inflow of new members.

Apart from this we have sustained the loss by death of two Honorary Members, Michele Barbi and Robert W Chambers, and of 25 members, among whom (for the second time) is our President, Dean Padelford, whose Presidential Address and Vita are printed above. Other members widely known and deeply regretted are Louis Cons, Herbert E. Greene, Ray L. Heffner, Henry B. Hinkley, Ernst H. Mensel, Josiah H. Penniman, William F. Thrall, and Kenneth G. T. Webster. By resignation, chiefly in January, we have lost 108 members (6 in 1941, 87 in 1940). The October 1st loss of 452 was largely reduced by 183 reinstatements, and the access of 115 new members (with 41 more for 1943).

The Association has been represented on the following occasions:

At the Séance inaugurale de l'Ecole libre des hautes Etudes, New York, N Y, by Professor Frédéric Ernst of New York University February 14

At the Centenary Celebration of the American Oriental Society in Boston and Cambridge, Massachusetts, by Professor F. N. Robinson of Harvard University April 7-10

At the Twenty-Fifth Annual Meeting of the American Council on Education in Chicago, Illinois, by Professor Robert Herndon Fife of Columbia University

May 1-2

At the One Hundredth Anniversary of Hollins College, Virginia, by Professor Carl Y. Connor of Sweet Briar College

May 31-June 1

At the Inauguration of Harry Noble Wright as President of the College of the City of New York by Professor George O. Curme of White Plains, New York

September 30

At the Institute of Inter-American Affairs in Boston University by Professor J. D. M. Ford of Harvard University

December 4

As Chairman of the Editorial Committee, the Secretary reports.

1. The March and June, 1943, issues of PMLA have been sent to the printers, and all accepted papers have been prepared for printing. These suffice to fill Volume LVIII but no more.

2. The distribution of the 63 articles in Volume LVII is as follows: American Literature 3 papers, 43 pages; Celtic 1 paper, 7 pages; Comparative Literature 1 paper, 30 pages; English before 1600, 17 papers, 270 pages; English after 1600, 16 papers, 312 pages; French 8 papers, 108 pages; Italian, Spanish and Portuguese 5 papers, 112 pages; Germanic 11 papers, 308 pages.

3. The Editorial Committee has revised and greatly improved its list of some 400 consultants, whose prompt and thorough reports are of immeasurable aid.

As Chairman of the Program Committee, the Secretary reports:

1. Cancellation of the Annual Meeting on December 5th was made by unanimous direction of the Advisory Committee of the Executive Council (see PMLA, LVII, 593), in compliance with a direct request (November 30th) to the Association made by the Office of Defense Transportation.

2. No certain announcement can yet be made regarding the next Annual Meeting, except that under our Constitution it should be Eastern.

3. To the body of some 350 officers and committeemen the Program Committee expresses gratitude for their prompt and helpful cooperation under unusual difficulties.

The Association in 1918, under date of Armistice Day, cancelled the Annual Meeting because of a threatened coal shortage. Difficulty of transportation is again the determining cause of cancellation.

PERCY W. LONG, Secretary

TREASURER'S REPORT

SUMMARY OF FUNDS, SEPTEMBER 30, 1942 AND 1941, AND COMPARISON

	Sept 30, 1942	Sept 30, 1941	Increase
General Funds
Permanent Fund
Investments (at book value)	$ 49,013 04	$ 48,566 29	$ 446 75
Cash	238 55	10 67	227 88
Current Account—Cash	724 56	2,514 67	1,790 11*
Total	$ 49,976 15	$ 51,091 63	$1,115 48*
Monograph Funds
Endowment Fund
Investments (at book value)	$ 22,841 08	$ 22,652 43	$ 188 65
Cash		37 56	37 56*
Current Account—Cash	67 57	42 67	24 90
Total	$ 22,908 65	$ 22,732 66	$ 175 99
Research Funds
Endowment Fund
Investments (at book value)	$ 10,473 52	$ 10,343 41	$ 130 11
Cash	26 42	75 24	48 82*
Current Account—Cash	609 95	2,164 53	1,554 58*
Total	$ 11,109 89	$ 12,583.18	$1,473.29*
Rotograph Funds
Invested Fund
Investments (at book value)	$ 4,959 51	$ 4,959 51
Cash	40 49	40 49
Current Account—Cash	2,714 65	2,433 21	$ 281 44
Total	$ 7,714 65	$ 7,433 21	$ 281 44
Emergency Fund—Cash	$ 31 65	$ 1,014 44	$ 982 79*
Revolving Book Fund—Cash	$ 235 28	$ 2,487.59	$2,252 31*
Joint Photostat Service—Cash	$ 849.73	$ 841 98	$ 7 75
Variorum Shakespeare—Cash	$ 5,208 26	$ 5,166 02	$ 42 24
Carnegie Shakespeare Grant—Cash	$ 8,500 49	$ 7,159 57	$1,340 92
General Book Fund—Cash	$ 614 83	$ 358 24	$ 256 59
Trends in Education—Cash	$ 1 99	$ 1.99
Council Fund—Cash	$ 357 89		$ 357.89
Total	$107,509.46	$110,870 51	$3,361 05*

FUND RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS FOR THE YEAR ENDED SEPTEMBER 30, 1942

A CURRENT ACCOUNT

BALANCE, October 1, 1941

$ 2,514 67

RECEIPTS

Membership Dues
Life Memberships	$ 192 00
Annual Memberships	17,157 11	$17,349 11
	<hr/>
Library Subscriptions		2,264 75
Sale of Advertising Space		2,585 20
Income on Investments
Permanent Fund (less service charges $78 80)	$ 1,489 30
Monograph Endowment Fund	1,071 81
Research Endowment Fund	378 73
Rotograph Invested Fund	133 70	3,073 54
	<hr/>
Sales
PMLA	$ 413 79
Reprints	105 28
Monographs	504 47
Research Fund Publications	19 85
Revolving Fund Books	508 38
Variorum Shakespeare	1,312 50
General Series Books	1,985 21
Council Fund Books	162 20	5,011 68
	<hr/>
Collected for Other Societies		554 80
Miscellaneous
Grants from American Council of Learned Societies	$ 5,600 00
Subsidies by Authors of Books	400 00
Subscriptions to Rotograph Fund	1,650 00
Return of 1940 and 1941 Advances, Various Funds	2,198 31
Sundry	621 27	10,469 58
	<hr/>
Total Receipts		41,308 66
		<hr/>
Total		$43,823.33

DISBURSEMENTS

Quarterly PMLA (four numbers and paper stock)		$12,641 32
Administrative Expenses
Salaries
Secretary and Editor	$ 4,000 00
Treasurer	2,500 00
Clerical Staff	3,475 32
Total Salaries	$ 9,975.32
Postage and Telephone	753 99
Supplies and Express	250 03
Office Printing	141 17	11,120 51
Miscellaneous Expenses
Executive Council Meeting	$ 944 82
Committee Expenses	617 31
Officers' Travelling Expenses (annual meeting)	176 54
Audit of Treasurer's and Trustees' Accounts	225 00
Treasurer's Bond and Local Insurance	125 22
American Council of Learned Societies	75 00
American Council on Education	10 00
Circular and Program (annual meeting)	1,294 77
Refund and Exchange	42 97
Contribution to Council Fund	100 00	3,611 63
Collections Remitted to Others		559 14
Funds Transferred
Dues from Life Memberships to Managing Trustee	$ 192 00
A C L S Grants to General Book Fund	3,600 00
A C L S Grant to University Press	2,000 00
Subsidies from authors to General Book Fund	200 00
Subsidies to Research Fund publication	200 00
Advances for account of Emergency Fund, 1942	623 31
Transfer 2% of 1941 Membership Dues to General Book Fund	382 16
Miscellaneous.	76 33
Income on Investments
Monograph Endowment Fund	1,071 81
Research Endowment Fund	378 73
Rotograph Invested Fund	133 70
Rotograph Fund Subscriptions	1,650 00
Sales
Emergency Fund—40% Sales of PMLA	165 52
Monograph Current Account—Books	504 47
Research Current Account—Publications	19 85
Revolving Book Fund—Books	508 38
Carnegie Shakespeare Grant—Variorum Shakespeare	1,312 50

General Book Fund—Books	$ 1,985 21
Council Fund—Books	162 20	$ 15,166 17
Total Disbursements		$43,098 77
BALANCE, Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942		$ 724 56

NOTE Advances for account of various funds to be returned to Current Account ($1,298 12) of which $623 31 was advanced this year

B MONOGRAPH CURRENT ACCOUNT

BALANCE, October 1, 1941		$ 42 67
RECEIPTS:
Interest on Bank Balance	$ 1 12
Income on Investments	1,071 81
Sales of Monographs	504 47	1,577 40
Total		$ 1,620 07

DISBURSEMENTS:

Manufacturing	$904 21
Advertising	85 00
Distribution	15 17
Editorial Assistance	8 31
Transferred to Monograph Endowment Fund	39 81
Return of 1940 Advance—To Current Account	500 00	1,552 50
BALANCE, Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942		$ 67 57

C. RESEARCH CURRENT ACCOUNT

BALANCE, October 1, 1941		$ 2,164 53
RECEIPTS:
Interest on Bank Balance	$ 18 60
Income on Investments	378.73
Sales of Research Fund Publications	19 85
Subsidies from Authors	200 00	617 18
Total		$ 2,781 71

DISBURSEMENTS:

Manufacturing	$ 296 76
Advertising	25 00
Grants Distributed	1,850 00	2,171.76

BALANCE, Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942	$ 609.95
---	-----------

D. EMERGENCY FUND

BALANCE, October 1, 1941	$ 1,014 44
RECEIPTS:
40% of Office Sales of PMLA	165 52
Total	$ 1,179 96

DISBURSEMENTS

Return of 1940 and 1941 Advances—To Current Account		$ 1,148 31
BALANCE, Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942	. .	$ 31 65

NOTE Advances from Current Account $900 00 to meet bills during 1940 and 1942 to be paid to Current Account in 1943

E REVOLVING BOOK FUND

BALANCE, October 1, 1941	..	$ 2,487 59
--------------------------	----	-------------

RECEIPTS

Interest on Bank Balance	$ 7 45
Sales of Revolving Fund Books	508 38	515 83
Total	...	$ 3,003 42

DISBURSEMENTS

Manufacturing	2,219 19
Advertising	80 00
Distribution	62 24
Income from Sales—To Authors	406 71	2,768 14
BALANCE, Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942		$ 235 28

F. ROTOGRAPH CURRENT ACCOUNT

BALANCE, October 1, 1941	$ 2,433.21
------------------------------------	-----	-------------

RECEIPTS

Subscriptions to the Rotograph Fund	$ 1,650 00
Interest on Bank Balance	9 64
Income on Investments	133 70	1,793 34
Total		$ 4,226 55

DISBURSEMENTS

Purchase of Photographic Reproductions	$ 1,232 24
Administration	51.45
Advertising	228 21	1,511 90
BALANCE, Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942		$ 2,714 65

G JOINT PHOTOSTAT SERVICE

BALANCE, October 1, 1941	$ 841.98
------------------------------------	-----	-----------

RECEIPTS:

Interest on Bank Balance	7 75
------------------------------------	-----	------

BALANCE, Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942 . .		$ 849.73
---	--	-----------

H VARIORUM SHAKESPEARE

BALANCE , October 1, 1941	.	.	.	$ 5,166 02
----------------------------------	---	---	---	-------------

RECEIPTS

Interest on Bank Balance				42 24
--------------------------	--	--	--	-------

BALANCE , Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942				$ 5,208 26
---	--	--	--	-------------

I CARNEGIE SHAKESPEARE GRANT

BALANCE , October 1, 1941				$ 7,159 57
----------------------------------	--	--	--	-------------

RECEIPTS

Interest on Bank Balance		$ 48 42
Sales of Variorum Shakespeare		1,312 50	1,360 92

Total				$ 8,520 49
-------	--	--	--	-------------

DISBURSEMENTS

Advertising				20 00
-------------	--	--	--	-------

BALANCE , Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942				$ 8,500.49
---	--	--	--	-------------

J GENERAL BOOK FUND

BALANCE , October 1, 1941				$ 358 24
----------------------------------	--	--	--	-----------

RECEIPTS

Interest on Bank Balance		$ 2 40
Grants from A C L S and M L A		4,182 16
Sales of General Series Books		1,985 21	6,169 77

Total				$ 6,528 01
-------	--	--	--	-------------

DISBURSEMENTS

Manufacturing		$ 4,015 55
Advertising		160 00
Distributing		113 13
Income from Sales—to Authors		124 50
Transfer of Grants to Presses		950 00
Return of 1941 Advances—to Current Account		550 00	5,913 18

BALANCE , Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942.				$ 614 83
--	--	--	--	-----------

K. TRENDS IN EDUCATION

BALANCE , October 1, 1941				$ 1 99
----------------------------------	--	--	--	---------

BALANCE , Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942				$ 1 99
---	--	--	--	---------

NOTE Advances from Current Account $398 12 to meet bills in prior years to be paid to Current Account in 1943.

L COUNCIL FUND

RECEIPTS

Interest on Bank Balance	$	7	65
Contributions		2,317	00
Sales		162	20
Total	$	2,486	85

DISBURSEMENTS

Manufacturing	$	2,083	43
Advertising		45	53
		2,128	96

BALANCE, Under Control of Treasurer, September 30, 1942	$	357	89
---	----	-----	----

ACCOUNTANTS' CERTIFICATE

Executive Council of The Modern Language Association of America

We have made an examination of the cash receipts and disbursements of your Treasurer in charge of current funds of the Association in relation to the accompanying statements thereof for the year ended September 30, 1942

In our opinion, the accompanying Exhibits A to L, inclusive, set forth the Treasurer's cash receipts during the year as recorded, his disbursements during the year, and the cash balances in the respective funds under his control at September 30, 1942

HASKINS & SELLS
Certified Public Accountants

New York, November 30, 1942

REPORT OF THE AUDITING COMMITTEE

THE Auditing Committee met on December 19, 1942, in the offices of the Secretary and Treasurer of the Association. The reports of the year ending September 30, 1942 as presented by the Treasurer were found to be correct and are certified herewith by the Committee. The detailed examination of the vouchers was done by Haskins and Sells, Certified Public Accountants, New York, N Y. The Committee wishes to express its appreciation of the devoted and competent work carried out by the Treasurer.

(signed) PHILIP M. PALMER, Chairman
 HARCOURT BROWN
 ROBERT R. CAWLEY

TRUSTEES' REPORT

M. PERMANENT FUND

SECURITIES ON DEPOSIT WITH THE UNITED STATES TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK
SEPTEMBER 30, 1942

Face Value	Bonds	Book Value
$ 3,000 00	Ann Arbor Railroad Company, First Mortgage 4% Bonds, due July 1, 1995, interest payable January 1, April 1, July 1, and October 1	$ 2,395 50
2,500.00	Chicago, Terre Haute & Southeastern Railway Company, Income Mortgage 5% Bonds, due December 1, 1960, interest payable March 1 and September 1.	2,043 75
1,000 00	International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, 5% Debenture Bond, due February 1, 1955, interest payable February 1 and August 1	972 50
2,000 00	Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, General Mortgage 4% Bonds, due March 1, 1975, interest payable March 1 and September 1.	1,575 00
10,000 00	New York Central Railroad Company, Refunding and Improvement Mortgage 5% Bonds, Series "C," due October 1, 2013, interest payable April 1 and October 1.	9,110 94
1,066 67	Prudence Securities Corporation, Collateral Trust Cumulative Income 5½% Bonds, Series "A," due May 1, 1961, interest payable May 1 and November 1 Registered	747 01
875 00	Realty Associates Securities Corporation, Guaranteed Sinking Fund 5% Income Bond, due October 1, 1943, interest payable January 1 and July 1 Stamped Registered	842 50
2,000 00	Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, Inc., Debenture 3% Bonds, due July 1, 1964, interest payable January 1 and July 1	2,090 00
9,000 00	United States War Savings Bonds, Series "G," 2½%, dated October 1, 1941, due October 1, 1953, registered at 100 net, interest payable April 1 and October 1	9,000 00
3,450 00	United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds, due September 15, 1948, interest payable March 15 and September 15	3,598 78
1,000 00	United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds, due March 15, 1960/55, interest payable March 15 and September 15	1,030 01
3,000.00	Virginia & Southwestern Railway Company, First Consolidated Mortgage 5% Bonds, due April 1, 1958, interest payable April 1 and October 1.	2,707 50
8,000 00	Western Pacific Railroad Company, First Mortgage 5% Bonds, Series "A," due March 1, 1946, interest payable March 1 and September 1.	7,976 00

Bond and Mortgage

799.95	Participation certificate in bond of Langham Corporation for $849,233 91, secured by mortgage on premises 135 Central Park West, due November 15, 1948, interest at 1½%, payable May and November 15. Guaranteed by the Prudence Company.	799.95
--------	--	--------

Par Value

Stocks

40 shares of Wheeling Steel Corporation $5 Cumulative Convertible Prior Preferred stock (no par value) and 20 shares of Common stock (no par value).

$47,691 62

$49,013.04

REPORT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS FOR THE YEAR ENDED SEPTEMBER 30, 1942

RECEIPTS·

	Principal	Income
Balance carried forward from 1941 report	$ 10 67
From the Treasurer—Life Membership payments	192 00
From the United States Trust Company of New York
For the sale of $7,400 United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds, due September 15, 1952/50	7,966 56
Accrued interest on above		$ 9 25
For the sale of $1,000 United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds, due September 15, 1953/51	1,062 19
Accrued interest on above		6 75
Second payment of 1% representing distribution on allowed claim under plan of reorganization for Prudence Company for Prudence Langham Bond and Mortgage	7 13
Income on Investments
Ann Arbor 1st 4% Bonds		120 00
Chicago, Terre Haute & Southeastern Mortgage 5% Bonds		125 00
International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation 5% Debenture		50 00
Participation Certificate 1½% in Bond of Langham Corporation		12 00
New York Central 5% Bonds		500.00
Prudence Securities Corporation 5½% Income Bonds		21 34
Realty Associates Securities 5% Bond		26 26
Socony-Vacuum Oil 3% Debentures		60 00
United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds		86 26
United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds		28 74
Virginia & Southwestern Railway 5% Bonds		150 00
United States War Savings Bonds, Series "G," 2½%		112 50
Wheeling Steel Corporation $5 Cumulative Convertible Prior Preferred Stock		200 00
Wheeling Steel Corporation Common Stock		60 00
	$ 9,238 55	$1,568 10

DISBURSEMENTS

	Principal	Income
To the Treasurer, income on investments		$1,489 30
To the United States Trust Company of New York
For the purchase of $9,000 United States War Savings Bonds, Series "G," 2½%, dated October 1, 1941, due October 1, 1953, registered at 100 net, interest April 1 and October 1	$9,000 00
For services rendered in safekeeping of securities, collection of income, etc., for the Permanent Fund Monograph Endowment Fund, Research Endowment Fund, and Rotograph Fund (their charge being 2½% of the income collected)		78 80
	<hr/> $9,000 00	<hr/> $1,568 10
Total Receipts	$9,238 55	$1,568 10
Total Disbursements	9,000 00	1,568 10
	<hr/>	<hr/>
Cash Balance on deposit with United States Trust Company of New York	$ 238 55
	<hr/>	<hr/>

N MONOGRAPH ENDOWMENT FUND

SECURITIES ON DEPOSIT WITH THE UNITED STATES TRUST COMPANY
OF NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 30, 1942

Face Value	Bonds	Book Value
$ 2,000 00	Ann Arbor Railroad Company, First Mortgage 4% Bonds, due July 1, 1995, interest payable January 1, April 1, July 1, and October 1	$ 1,597 00
2,500 00	Chicago, Terre Haute & Southeastern Railway Company, Income Mortgage 5% Bonds, due December 1, 1960, interest payable March 1 and September 1.	2,043 75
1,000 00	International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, 5% Debenture Bond, due February 1, 1955, interest payable February 1 and August 1	972 50
11,000 00	New York Central Railroad Company, Refunding and Improvement Mortgage 5% Bonds, Series "C," due October 1, 2013, interest payable April 1 and October 1	10,050 94
533 33	Prudence Securities Corporation, Collateral Trust Cumulative Income 5½% Bonds, Series "A," due May 1, 1961, interest payable May 1 and November 1. Registered	386 01
2,900 00	United States War Savings Bonds, Series "G," 2½%, dated October 1, 1941, due October 1, 1953, registered at 100 net, interest payable April 1 and October 1	2,900.00
900 00	United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds, due March 15, 1960/55, interest payable March 15 and September 15.	936.11
2,000 00	Virginia & Southwestern Railway Company, First Consolidated Mortgage 5% Bonds, due April 1, 1958, interest payable April 1 and October 1.	1,805 00

Bonds and Mortgages

959 37	Participation certificate in bond of Krim Far Realty Corporation for $94,500, secured by mortgage on premises S/W Corner Avenue Y and East 19th Street, Brooklyn, New York, due August 15, 1942, interest at 4½%, payable February 15th quarterly Guaranteed by Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company	959 37
1,190.40	Participation certificate in bond of Wolcott Holding Corporation for $38,262 48, secured by mortgage on premises 36-06 31st Avenue, Long Island City, due April 27, 1943, interest at 4½%, payable January 27th quarterly Guaranteed by the Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company	1,190 40
<hr/>		<hr/>
$24,983 10		$22,841 08
<hr/>		<hr/>

REPORT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS FOR THE YEAR ENDED SEPTEMBER 30, 1942

RECEIPTS.

	Principal	Income
Balance carried forward from 1941 report	$ 37 56
From the Treasurer—For investment	39 81
From the United States Trust Company of New York
For the sale of $2,200 United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds, due September 15, 1952/50	2,368 44
Accrued interest on above		$ 2 75
For the sale of $400 United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds, due December 15, 1953/51	424 88
Accrued interest on above		2 70
Payment on account of principal of Krim Far Mortgage	3 81
Payments on account of principal of Wolcott Mortgage	25 50
Income on Investments
Ann Arbor 1st 4% Bonds		80 00
Chicago, Terre Haute & Southeastern Mortgage 5% Bonds		125 00
International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation 5% Debenture		50 00
Participation Certificate 4½% in bond of Krim Far Realty Corporation		39 43
New York Central 5% Bonds		550 00
Prudence Securities Corporation 5½% Income Bonds		10 66
United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds		25 88
United States War Savings Bonds, Series "G," 2½%		36 25
Virginia & Southwestern Railway 5% Bonds		100 00
Participation Certificate 4½% in bond of Wolcott Holding Corporation		49 14
	<hr/>	<hr/>
	$2,900 00	$1,071 81
	<hr/>	<hr/>

DISBURSEMENTS.

	Principal	Income
To the Treasurer, income on investments		$1,071 81
To the United States Trust Company of New York
For the purchase of $2,900 United States War Savings Bonds, Series "G," 2½%, dated October 1, 1941, due October 1, 1953, registered at 100 net, interest payable April 1 and October 1	$2,900 00
	<hr/>	<hr/>
	$2,900 00	$1,071 81
	<hr/>	<hr/>
Total Receipts . . .	$2,900 00	$1,071 81
Total Disbursements	2,900 00	1,071 81
	<hr/>	<hr/>

O. RESEARCH ENDOWMENT FUND

SECURITIES ON DEPOSIT WITH THE UNITED STATES TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK,
SEPTEMBER 30, 1942

Face Value	Bonds	Book Value
$ 4,000 00	New York Central Railroad Company, Refunding and Improvement Mortgage 5% Bonds, Series "C," due October 1, 2013, interest payable April 1 and October 1.	$ 3,644 37
2,400 00	United States War Savings Bonds, Series "G," 2½%, dated October 1, 1941, due October 1, 1953, registered at 100 net, interest payable April 1 and October 1	2,400 00
4,000 00	United States of America 3½% Treasury Bonds, due June 15, 1949, interest payable June 15 and December 15	3,912 50
500 00	United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds, due March 15, 1960/55, interest payable March 15 and September 15	516 65
<hr/>		<hr/>
$10,900 00		$10,473 52
<hr/>		<hr/>

REPORT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS FOR THE YEAR ENDED SEPTEMBER 30, 1942

RECEIPTS:

	Principal	Income
Balance carried forward from 1941 report	$ 75 24
From the United States Trust Company of New York:
For the sale of $1,000 United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds, due September 15, 1952/50.	1,076 56
Accrued interest on above		$ 1.25
For the sale of $1,200 United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds, due December 15, 1953/51	1,274 62
Accrued interest on above		8.10
Income on Investments.
New York Central 5% Bonds . . .		200 00
United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds		14 38
United States of America 3½% Treasury Bonds		125 00
United States War Savings Bonds, Series "G," 2½%		30.00
	<hr/>	<hr/>
	$2,426 42	$378.73
	<hr/>	<hr/>

DISBURSEMENTS:

	Principal	Income
To the Treasurer, income on investments		$378 73
To the United States Trust Company of New York.
For the purchase of $2,400 United States Savings Bonds, Defense Series "G," 2½%, dated October 1, 1941, due October 1, 1953, registered at 100 net, interest payable April 1 and October 1	$2,400 00
	$2,400 00	$378 73
Total Receipts	$2,426 42	$378 73
Total Disbursements	2,400 00	378 73
Cash Balance on deposit with United States Trust Company of New York	$ 26 42

P. ROTOGRAPH INVESTED FUND

SECURITIES ON DEPOSIT WITH THE UNITED STATES TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK,
SEPTEMBER 30, 1942

Face Value	Bonds	Book Value
$4,650.00	United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds, due March 15, 1960/55, interest payable March 15 and September 15.	$4,959 51

REPORT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS FOR THE YEAR ENDED SEPTEMBER 30, 1942

RECEIPTS

	Principal	Income
Balance carried forward from 1941 report	$40 49
From the United States Trust Company of New York
Income on Investments
United States of America 2½% Treasury Bonds ..		$133 70
	$40.49	$133 70

DISBURSEMENTS:

	Principal	Income
To the Treasurer, income on investments.		$133 70
Total Receipts ..	$40 49	$133.70
Total Disbursements		133 70

Cash Balance on deposit with United States Trust Company of New York.	$40 49
---	---------	------

Respectfully submitted,
LEROY E. KIMBALL
GEORGE H. NETTLETON
WILLIAM A. NITZE
Trustees

ACCOUNTANTS' CERTIFICATE

Executive Council of The Modern Language Association of America

We have made an examination of the cash receipts and disbursements of the Trustees in charge of the permanent funds of your Association in relation to the accompanying statements thereof for the year ended September 30, 1942, and have obtained a confirmation from the custodian respecting securities held for account of the Trustees at September 30, 1942

In our opinion, the accompanying Exhibits M to P, inclusive, set forth the Trustees' cash receipts during the year as recorded, their disbursements during the year, and the securities and cash in the respective funds under their control at September 30, 1942

HASKINS & SELLS
Certified Public Accountants

New York, November 30, 1942

BUDGET FOR 1943

ESTIMATE OF EXPENDITURES

For Publishing PMLA	$ 8,000 00
For Mandatory Transfers.
To the Emergency Fund (40% Sales of PMLA)	100 00
For Administration
Secretary	4,000 00
Treasurer	2,500 00
Clerical Assistance	2,860 00
Postage and Telephone	500 00
Supplies and Express	250 00
Office Printing	150 00
For Miscellaneous Purposes
American Council of Learned Societies	75 00
American Council on Education	10 00
Committee Expenses .	300 00
Program	500 00
Bond	25 00
Public Audit	225 00
Total	$19,495 00

ESTIMATE OF RECEIPTS:

From Membership Fees	$14,000 00
From Library Subscriptions to PMLA .	2,200.00
From Advertising	1,600 00
From Income of Permanent Fund . .	1,500 00
From Sales of Back Numbers of PMLA .	250 00
Total	$19,550 00

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PHOTOGRAPHIC REPRODUCTIONS

By Professors THOMAS R. PALFREY and ROBERT H. WILLIAMS, Co-chairmen

ON this the twentieth anniversary of the establishment of what was originally called the Rotograph Fund, it seems appropriate to recall certain details in the history of our series of photographic reproductions. There is gratifying evidence that the Fund's contribution to research in the field of modern languages has far exceeded even the most sanguine expectations of the original committee.

For the original establishment of the Fund and its support during the earlier years of its existence, the Association owes a debt of gratitude to the foresight and generosity of librarians and a considerable number of individual scholars and publishers who were willing to contribute the sizeable fee of twenty-five dollars from which no immediate or personal returns were to be expected. The photographic process then in use was slow and expensive; in the records of early years it is not unusual to find grants of one or two hundred dollars for a single item. Requests for reproductions came in a haphazard way from a few individuals working in highly specialized fields. Approval was generally limited to requests for unique manuscript texts or extremely rare printed works. As a further restriction, preference was given to requests for material unobtainable in this country.

With the comparatively recent development of microfilm equipment, it became apparent that our service could and should expand. The cost of reproduction by the newer method was reduced to approximately one-tenth of the cost by the older method. Furthermore, our list of subscribers had gradually increased so that a considerable sum had been accumulated from the difference between income and expenditure. As a consequence it became possible to liberalize our policy as to selection of material to include manuscripts and rare books in this country as well as abroad, certain rather extensive collections of printed and manuscript material, runs of periodicals and even recent dissertations unobtainable on interlibrary loan. The more recent accessions listed in the last cumulation of our holdings, published a year ago, include an increasing number of items of general, rather than special, interest and value.

It is hoped that military priorities will not compel the suspension of distribution to our subscribers of annual dividends of 2,000 frames of microfilm. In spite of the fact that this offer, inaugurated in 1940, has greatly increased and complicated the Committee's work—entailing, as it does, much copying, bookkeeping, checking and correspondence—the extra burden has been cheerfully assumed by the co-chairmen who have been gratified by the enthusiastic appreciation shown by our subscribers and by the increasing utilization of microphotography in research by members of the Association. It is unfortunate, however, that a major portion of the additional work had to fall on the staff of the Library of Congress at a time when war-time demands were already overtaxing the resources of that institution. It is even possible that some of the economies effected by new photographic techniques may have to be allocated to the administration of our series.

During the past twenty years the names of well over two hundred individuals and institutions have appeared at various times in our annual lists of subscribers. Of the 65 subscribing institutions listed for 1942, many have been regular subscribers for years, some since the year the Fund was established. That we have maintained the same number of subscribers in 1942 as in 1941, if not precisely the same ones, indicates widespread recognition of the value of the service we are rendering and augurs well for the future of the collection.

As was to be expected, the extraordinary circumstances of the past year have curtailed the number of reproductions acquired. We have added 58 titles totalling 10,895 frames,—which represents the lowest amount of material reported for five years. The total number of titles in the collection as of January 1, 1943, comes to 799, consisting of 73,666 sheets of rotographs and 109,729 frames of microfilm. It should be noted that a certain number of the rotographs are being transferred to microfilm. Eventually it is hoped that all rotographs will be available in microfilm for distribution as dividends and to facilitate storage and loans, but until this has been accomplished we are extending our offer of a choice between the usual 2,000 frames of duplicate film and microfilm reproductions of 500 sheets of rotograph material, with the option of dividing orders between the two types of material in the proportion of four to one.

Until communications with the continent of Europe can be resumed, we shall be obliged to draw mainly upon materials located in the Western Hemisphere. The Committee will welcome proposals for photographing manuscripts, rare books and periodicals in this country which are not available on interlibrary loan and which would be of permanent value to our collection.

List of Subscribers for 1942 to the Fund for the Photographic Reproduction of Manuscripts and Rare Printed Books.

Brown University	Hunter College
Bucknell University	University of Illinois
University of Buffalo	Indiana University
University of California	University of Iowa
(all divisions, two subscriptions)	Johns Hopkins University
Catholic University of America	University of Kansas
University of Chicago	University of Michigan
University of Cincinnati	Middlebury College
City College, New York	University of Minnesota
University of Colorado	University of Missouri
Columbia University	Mount Holyoke College
Connecticut College for Women	Newberry Library
Cornell University	New York Public Library
Dartmouth College	New York University
University of Delaware	Northwestern University
Duke University	University of Notre Dame
University of Florida	Oberlin College
University of Georgia	Ohio State University
Goucher College	University of Oklahoma
Harvard University	Pennsylvania State College
Haverford College	University of Pennsylvania

Princeton University
University of Rochester
Rutgers University
St. John's University
Sarah Lawrence College
Smith College
University of Southern California
Stanford University
Swarthmore College
Syracuse University
Temple University
University of Tennessee

University of Texas
University of Toronto
Vassar College
University of Virginia
University of Washington
Wayne University
Wellesley College
Wesleyan University
Western Reserve University
Williams College
College of Wooster
Yale University

[65]

COMMITTEE ON RESEARCH ACTIVITIES

Information Concerning Its Services

By Professor HOWARD LOWRY, Secretary

PREVIOUS statements of the work of this committee are to be found in the PMLA Supplements of 1935, and 1937 to 1941. These include directions to Groups or members who may wish to avail themselves of its services.

The routine work of the Committee consists in making small grants in aid of research and in securing larger grants in aid of publication. These are listed annually in the Secretary's Report. Under its auspices the Association issues its General Series, now containing fifteen volumes, and participates in joint publications with University Presses, now totaling twenty-two volumes. At its meeting of February 13-14 the Committee will consider applications that were presented by November, 1942. Those who wish to apply in 1943 should address the Secretary of the Association for aid either in publication or in research. At its October meeting the Committee will review applications made on or before July 1.

The Committee has been greatly assisted in its work by the advice it has received from experts in various fields who have, without remuneration, carefully examined and reported on projects or manuscripts submitted. Such outside assistance has been and will be necessary if the standards of publication in the General Series and with cooperation of University Presses are to be maintained. The Committee tries to bear in mind its responsibility to the Association and to the American Council of Learned Societies.

The Committee notes with pleasure the following projects of various sections or groups of the Association reported to it during the past three months.

American Literature: Publication of the periodical, American Literature.

Celtic Literature: Has under consideration the compilation of an index or glossary to Stokes and Strachan's Thesaurus Palaeohibernicus.

Comparative Literature III. Publication of annual bibliography in Modern Language Quarterly.

English III: Proposed volume of Chaucer's Minor Sources.

English VIII Bulletin, A Johnsonian News Letter, edited by Professor J. L. Clifford, of Lehigh University

English X Symposium, The Reinterpretation of Victorian Literature, by various members under chairmanship of Professor Joseph E. Baker, of the University of Iowa, almost ready for publication

French V Annual bibliography of publications and works in progress dealing with eighteenth-century French literature, distributed at meetings of the group.

French VI Bibliography of materials in nineteenth-century French literature available in Western Hemisphere

German III New subject-matter index for forty-nine volumes of Goethe's letters in the Weimar edition

Spanish I Old Spanish Dictionary, manuscript ready for publication

Spanish IV Preparation of Diccionario Americano, in collaboration with Committee on Co-ordination of Research of the Instituto Internacional de Literatura Iberoamericana. The dictionary will list and explain, as a special feature, as many as possible of the words and expressions peculiar to Spanish America

General Topics VII Publication of accumulated annual bibliographies of the group on "The Relations of Literature and Science"

General Topics IX A finding list of the mottoes of imprese.

North American French Language and Literature. A critical edition of the best French Canadian Folk Songs, collected by Dr. Marius Barbeau, of the National Gallery, Ottawa.

The report of its Sub-committee on Fair Play in Research is appended

REPORT OF THE SUB-COMMITTEE ON FAIR PLAY OF THE COMMITTEE ON RESEARCH ACTIVITIES OF THE MODERN LANGUAGE
ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA

The Sub-Committee on Fair Play has attempted to discover whether there is a possibility of arriving, at least approximately, at a consensus of opinion on the question: What is fair play in research, and what is not? The Committee felt that there was considerable uncertainty on such matters as the following.

I Doctoral Dissertations

- (a) How long may a graduate student whose subject of investigation has been announced, and approved by his department, reasonably "reserve" that subject as his own? Three years? Six? Indefinitely?
- (b) Is the recognition of any such prior lien desirable? Should rival investigations on the same subject be
 - (1) permitted without prejudice?
 - (2) encouraged?

II Work in Progress (M. H. R. A.)

- (a) Should the fact that a projected dissertation has been announced in Work in Progress, in any other scholarly journal, or in any publication by a M. L. A. group, modify the answers to the above questions? If so, how?
- (b) Should announcements of other kinds of scholarly projects in Work in Progress establish a prior lien? If so, in what sense? and for how long?

III Unpublished Work, Especially MS Theses Accepted for Degrees

- (a) Is a University, Library, or author justified in forbidding access to such work by duly qualified scholars?
- (b) Are any of them justified in throwing obstacles in the way of its use, with due acknowledgment, as if it were a published book?

IV Privately Owned First Hand Documents

Is it possible to express the consensus of scholarly opinion as to the rights of owners of such materials, and as to their responsibilities towards those who are competent to make scholarly use of them?

V Reviews in Learned Journals

Are editors of learned journals, in cases where a review (or a passage in a general review of a field) is decidedly condemnatory, under obligation to give the author of the book a chance to submit a brief reply to the adverse criticism for publication (a) in the same issue? (b) in the next? (c) in any?

The Sub-Committee on Fair Play did not send out a general questionnaire, but addressed its inquiries only to those professors and scholars who have had long experience in research and in the guidance of research, and to whom research is a major interest. The total number to whom we sent letters of inquiry was fifty-four, seventeen in Germanics, eighteen in Romance Languages, and nineteen in English, distributed throughout the larger Universities of the country. Nearly ninety per cent of these scholars responded (almost twice as many as would have replied to a general questionnaire), and the replies were so detailed and specific that they clearly indicated a decided interest in our problems. It seems to us that the following opinions represent the views of the preponderant majority of research scholars. It seems to us that it would be to the interest to graduate students, professors of graduate students, and the scholarly world as a whole, to give thoughtful consideration to these principles.

Question I. The only question on which there proved to be considerable difference of opinion, and no strong majority on either side, was the "reservation" of subjects under investigation for doctoral dissertations. There was, however, unanimous agreement that no subject should be considered "reserved" indefinitely, and only seven out of fifty respondents maintained that as long a period as six years should be allowed,—one of the seven even going so far as to say, "Three years for reservation is decidedly too short, six years may be too short a time for a man who is obliged to discontinue his studies for financial reasons."

Eighteen of the respondents thought three years a reasonable time for "reservation." But thirteen maintained that there should be no "reservation" whatever. As to the parallel question, numbered Ib, there was approximately the same division of opinion. It is perhaps significant that most of those who voted in favor of "reservation" stated no reasons, and seemed to accept the procedure as if it were traditional and did not require review or defense; whereas many of those against "reservation" set forth their reasons.

Twenty-four were in favor of permitting rival investigations, holding that the risk of serious duplication would be slight. In such cases of concurrent investigations, those in charge should encourage frank and friendly correspondence between the investigators.

Both among those who voted for "reservation" and those who voted against it, there were some who felt that no strict rule covering all cases could be arrived at. Each case should be considered by itself, and settled on the basis of common sense and common decency.

In view of the fact that there is no definite majority on either side of the questions concerning "reservation," your Committee makes no recommendations regarding this matter. In its opinion, however, there is at present a stronger trend against taking the principle of "reservation" for granted or as obviously sound than there used to be.

Question II. To this question, an overwhelming majority, although they regard Work in Progress as a very desirable, indeed necessary instrument of scholarly progress, reply with an emphatic "No "

Question III. There is a strong preponderance of opinion (nearly four to one) that manuscript theses (whether A. M. theses or Ph.D.) accepted by universities and deposited in their libraries, should be made accessible to duly qualified scholars just as if they were published books, and may be used by such scholars with due acknowledgment and reference in the same manner as published books are used.

One professor mentioned the possible danger of plagiarism from granting free access to unpublished dissertations, but himself admitted it to be, on the basis of actual experience, negligible. He enclosed a letter from the reference-librarian of his University, which has always granted free access to such dissertations and theses, and which has not experienced any "flagrant misuse" of such freedom. When the author of such a dissertation or thesis is actively engaged on the preparation of a book on the subject in the very near future, a library may properly grant access to his manuscript only upon the user's agreement to respect and acknowledge the author's priority.

In short, A. M. theses and Ph. D. dissertations are publicly available "contributions to knowledge," but it is unethical for a scholar to draw substantial contributions from them, with or without acknowledgment, if the library in which he finds them advises him that the author expects to publish an article or a book on the subject in the near future.

Question IV. The greatest difficulty encountered has been with regard to Question IV,—Use of First-Hand Documents. Inquiries to collectors as a rule go unanswered. The best opinion on this matter seems to be summed up in the following quotations from a letter from Professor James M. Osborn to Professor Bernbaum . . . "collectors and dealers are owners of property, and a scholar must consider it as a property relationship. It is unfortunately true that in such matters the public good cannot be invoked; here as elsewhere in property relationships the legal position leaves little room for ethics."

"The place where I believe ethics does enter is in the cases where documents are owned by an institution, especially a university library and "reserved" for use by their own members. In some instances documents have been reserved with no specific student in mind but kept merely for future generations who may inhabit the local ivied walls. If your committee could promulgate some rules of fair play to cover such cases, I believe it would perform a service to scholarship. In my own view, all documents in public institutions should be open to the use of the public. Of course, if someone is editing a document he should have the right to publish it first, but in the meantime other people should not be prohibited from referring to it or even basing conclusions on it."

Question V. A slight majority of those answering this question favors giving the authors a chance to rebut, some a chance in the same issue as the unfavorable criticism, more in the next issue. Some would leave this problem to the discretion of the editor.

One respondent remarks: "It will in my opinion be a great pity if your results confirm people in the desire to answer their reviewers. That is pure silliness in practically all cases. A prejudiced and unfair reviewer betrays himself and can be left at that!"

After pondering these opinions, your Committee feels that this is a problem that may safely be left to the editors of the learned journals. We do not believe that the journals, as at present conducted, refuse an author an opportunity to reply within a reasonable time to a review against which he can raise a substantial objection.

ERNEST BERNBAUM
WILLIAM KURRELMeyer
E. B. WILLIAMS

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION ON TRENDS IN EDUCATION

By HENRY GRATTAN DOYLE, Chairman

LIKE previous reports, this is an informal report by the Chairman of the Commission rather than a formal report adopted by the Commission. The opinions expressed are therefore those of the Chairman as an individual member.

The activity of the year is represented by the completed report on Literature in American Education, which, after careful consideration and the benefit of criticism from the members of the Commission and of the Executive Council, has been approved and authorized for publication in its final revised form. The actual writing of the report has been done by Professor Howard F. Lowry of Princeton University, to whom the Commission and the Association stand indebted for generous service.

The publication of Literature in American Education completes the first phase of the work of the Commission, as formulated during the first year of its life and announced in the Chairman's Report for 1940, namely "a formulation of the values and objectives of linguistic and literary studies." The subsequent phases were to have been devoted to studies as to the feasibility of attaining these objectives, revision of our statements, if necessary, in the light of these studies, and efforts to make our program effective. At the same time, it was the purpose of the Commission to work in cooperation with other groups, such as Phi Beta Kappa, the American Council of Learned Societies, the National Council of Teachers of English, the Association of College Teachers of English, the Classical groups, and others interested in the humanities, and Mr. Lowry and the Chairman were designated to act informally as a committee to stimulate discussion of the study of languages and literatures. (Something has been achieved in this last area, but without involving the Commission as such.)

Under present conditions, it seems to be impossible to carry out our program as originally outlined. Education at all levels is so affected by the war that any of the studies originally contemplated—even if it were possible to make them—would quickly have little but academic interest. Obviously they must be set aside for more favorable times. On the other hand, our two reports, on language and literature, are not affected to the same degree. They stand as “confessions of faith” in the human, social, democratic, and educational values of our fields. This is fortunate, not only because we sadly need something of the sort as a sheet-anchor in unfavorable seas, but because of the hope we cherish that they are a justification of the Commission’s existence and a proof that it has worked at the task set for it to do.

At the same time, no one can be satisfied with the conditions that now confront us. As I pointed out in my report last year, two dangers beset the study of languages and literatures, with consequent duties incumbent upon all those who think as we do about the importance of those studies. One is the duty of “keeping the lights of civilization burning,” as a “service to humanity, secondary only to the military and economic defense of the rights of humanity to ‘life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness’,” to quote the words of my last report. The other is to oppose the domination of American education by those whose “openly expressed contempt for content-knowledge, as illustrated by their use of such phrases as ‘mere information,’ ‘mere content-knowledge,’ even ‘mere literacy,’” clearly expose them as foes of our educational faith.

These dangers, these duties, are even more pressing now than a year ago. The effect of the war upon the whole field of the humanities, and indeed upon liberal education itself, is now cataclysmic in its proportions. Some university presidents tell us that we must reconcile ourselves to the fact that “liberal education is one of the casualties of the war,” but there is more of positive faith in President Conant’s words in his latest annual report:

Personally I have not the slightest doubt that the liberal arts will survive the war. Indeed, the chances favor a period of renewed vigor once the war is won. Those who are so fearful about the future of the liberal arts tradition manifest a surprising lack of faith in the vitality of this tradition. Conceivably the humanistic studies cannot weather a period of hibernation while we win the war. But if that is so, the war will be the proximate, not the real cause of their demise. What is much more probable is a new period of growth and evolution. The extent and speed of this rehabilitation will depend on the imagination and statesmanship of those who now teach the liberal arts.

At the risk of being accused of adopting one of the less objectionable words from the educationist jargon, President Conant’s words present a “challenge.” How to meet it is a problem not for us alone, but for all believers in the humane tradition. It is my own hope that it will be met. Our Commission, its members, and the members of the Association as a whole will, I am sure, work in cooperation with all similar groups to make that “new period of growth and evolution” a reality. For the individual, it means that he must work harder than ever, keep an open mind, be alert as to ways in which his own field can contribute to the winning of the war and the assurance of a just and lasting peace. With meetings “out,” probably “for the duration,” the fate of the humanities depends more than ever upon the work of the individual scholar and teacher.

I do not admit that this is or needs to be "hibernation," as President Cozzani calls it, for the liberal arts and humanistic studies, but it certainly does mean adaptation. First things must be put first, but we will be pardoned if from time to time we remind our countrymen that the humanistic tradition is one of the things we are supposed to be fighting for, and that its chief enemies have long been those who precipitated the slaughter. Contempt for books and bookish men, denunciations of "intellectualism," praise of the "blessings of illiteracy," the physical and moral destruction of great universities, the enslavement of science and learning to the service of barbarous political ends—are characteristic of the things we fight. Unfortunately some of them are also characteristic of the things we fight, and mean to fight (I am speaking here for myself, at least), in American education.

This has been admirably brought out by Professor V. A. McCrossen in his article "How Totalitarian Is Our Education?" published in the Association of American Colleges Bulletin for October, 1942. I cannot too strongly commend this article to the members of the Association. They should read it, and see to it that parents, and members of boards of education—not to mention college presidents and trustees—also have an opportunity to read it. (It might even make an impression on superintendents of schools or Professors of Education.) Professor McCrossen has made an exhaustive study of totalitarian pronouncements on education. He shows how closely they correspond, even in phraseology, to denunciations by certain American educationists of the "traditional," "aristocratic," "clerical" type of education known as liberal arts. The quotation from Mein Kampf which I have borrowed from Mr. McCrossen to use in the foreword of Literature in American Education is representative. "The fault with German education in the last century is that it produced men who liked books." Rereading of What the High Schools Ought to Teach and other obscurantist educational pronouncements of the pre-Pearl Harbor period in the light of Professor McCrossen's article is an interesting experience.* "The first of these totalitarian movements in education," Professor McCrossen

* One of the chief criticisms of this document, aside from its almost complete indifference to the above-average boy or girl in our schools, is its failure to recognize that the United States does not exist in an international vacuum. But just as its strictures on the importance of organized teaching of mathematics and science in our schools have been demolished by events, so the obscurantist attitude of its sponsors about foreign languages must be feeling the same pressure from reality. Dr. Floyd W. Reeves, Director of the American Youth Commission, in his speech "Youth and the Future" at the 1942 meeting of the American Council on Education (Educational Record, July, 1942) after mentioning the "four important needs" stressed in What the High Schools Ought to Teach (i.e., reading, work experience, "social studies," and "personal problems") said: "Personally, I would add a fifth area of education to those emphasized in Youth and the Future (another Youth Commission publication). I would include international relations. In this field I would emphasize economic history and economic geography. I would teach the relationship of natural resources and industrial development to war and peace. I would include a study of the governments of other nations. Above all, I would have youth learn about the psychology of the people of other nations, their literature, their art, and folkways, and the relations between their ways of life and the means whereby they live. Only in this way can youth be prepared to play well their part in a world that must be rebuilt." (Italics ours.)

This is progress in two years (1940 to 1942) even though Dr. Reeves characteristically says nothing about foreign languages, or how all this is to be done while educationists continue sen tells us, "was a trend away from the cultural and traditional to the 'practical' . . . the 'modern' . . . There was bitter criticism against the old school because it did not prepare for 'practical' living. Youth, together with its educator abettors, demanded to be taught in the schools something that would enable it to get a job; it also demanded that what was taught should be easy . . . There was a vicious attack against . . . literature and languages, philosophy, pure mathematics and pure science, and all history except contemporary social and economic history." (Compare "Vicious Aspects of the Ninth Grade," in What the High Schools Ought to Teach.) And later "Excursions to industrial plants, to commercial centers, to farms, to governmental agencies, and many types of extra-curricular activities, pushed academic learning into the background . . . In both countries (Germany and Russia) a fringe of 'ultra-progressives' is now demanding, quite logically, the complete abolition of the schools. Since schools have been joined with everyday, adult activity, why have schools at all?" . . . "Hitler in Mein Kampf states that 'the individual should be taught only what is of positive benefit to him and the community . . . The values of subject-matter should be limited to its relation to present-day living'." And so on, even to remarks about "mere" intellectualism, and "mere" knowledge, from the educational genius who produced Mein Kampf. (Professor McCrossen's study, by the way, is documented.)

The parallels are so obvious that we need not belabor the point. We have the same educational philosophy to fight abroad and at home. This should help us to take heart when some half-educated Professor of Education attacks "mere knowledge," calls for "education for real life," denounces the "aristocratic" liberal arts, or, like the "jerkwater" teachers' college president described to me by one of our members at the Indianapolis meeting, announces that "we mean to utilize the war to get rid of foreign language study in American schools."

Fortunately there are many educationists who think otherwise. For instance, Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, in his radio address on "Town Meeting of the Air," November 26, 1942, said:

It is clear that we should not ignore the fact that we need generalists as well as specialists to win a war and to organize a peace. The study of foreign languages, of history and philosophy and religion and literature, of the fine arts, of sociology, economics, geography, and government—the development of leaders grounded in the disciplines of the humanities—these leaders we need in wartime as in peacetime, and these leaders are the special product of the liberating arts.

Indeed, we have many allies among enlightened Professors of Education, and the percentage of enlightenment is probably far greater than the noisy pronouncements of the obscurantists and the members of the "lunatic fringe" among educationist their open or secret campaign against foreign languages. Spanish teachers throughout the country can tell interesting stories of ridiculous efforts by "social studies" teachers to teach "Good Neighbor" courses without the slightest knowledge of Spanish or Portuguese or how to pronounce them, not to mention knowledge of the "psychology, literature, art, folkways, ways of life and means whereby they live" of the "Good Neighbors" they presumptuously sought to interpret. At least Dr. Reeves seems to have waked up, belatedly it is true, to the world in which we live.

would lead us to think. We ought to be—and are—eternally grateful for Professors of Education like I L Kandel, a member of our Commission, and W C Bagley, and others, who have fought our fight in their own profession for many years.

I have referred above to the necessity for being alert to opportunities to bring our subjects to bear upon problems of the war and the postwar period. Here the teacher of foreign languages has for the time being an advantage over his colleagues in English. The development of “intensive language courses” for military and civilian use, under the leadership of the American Council of Learned Societies, and the new realization of the importance of “area studies,” in which essential language training is combined with background studies in geography, culture, economics, history, and politics, such as the Washington Inter-American Training Center program to which I have been devoting myself, create many opportunities for forward-looking and adaptable foreign language specialists, which unfortunately do not exist for the English teacher. The Intensive Language Program of the American Council of Learned Societies, under the inspiration of Waldo G Leland and the leadership of Mortimer Graves and J. M. Cowan, has been markedly successful, and the Washington Inter-American Training Center has had its modest triumphs also. Both have had the cooperation of the armed forces.

The tendency in some quarters to regard the Army and Navy as guilty of shortsightedness regarding the importance of foreign language abilities in winning the war, while perhaps true in the past and likewise perhaps justified by the omission of any reference to foreign language training in recent educational programs put out by the Army and Navy, has not been borne out in my experience. I would personally rather see the fate of liberal arts, the humanities, or the content-subjects in the hands of military men than those of some educationists. Witness the marked omission of any mention of foreign languages—in spite of Commissioner Studebaker’s sympathetic attitude toward them—in the much-publicized “Victory Corps” program. (The most amusing thing, however, is to see educationist foes of content-subjects “going all out” for mathematics, physics, and science in general, subjects which only two years ago were included with foreign languages, English, and history among the “vicious aspects of the ninth grade” in What the High Schools Ought to Teach, while mathematics was being denounced as 75 per cent or even 90 per cent “non-functional” in high schools as late as July, 1942. Perhaps they may yet “go all out” for foreign languages.)

A few instances of the awareness of the armed forces to foreign languages may be in point. Over two years ago Lieutenant General H. H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Forces, gave a strong impulse to the study of Spanish by Air Corps officers and inspired the formation of the Army and Navy Spanish Project. Many officers in both services are studying Spanish or Portuguese in classes maintained by the Washington Inter-American Training Center. Both services have developed cooperative relations with the Intensive Language Program of the American Council of Learned Societies, and students who have completed courses in the unusual languages are placed in one government service or another immediately upon completion of the courses. The Office of Censorship, Chief Postal Censor, is apparently always on the lookout for persons trained in foreign languages. The Special Services Division, Services of Supply, through its Education Branch has developed recordings and texts for teaching some thirty or more languages to soldiers in the Army, some of which were used during the invasion of North Africa (See Time for January 25, 1943, page 43.) The Armed Forces Institute has language programs under way, and training programs involving the use of foreign languages, common or unusual, are rapidly being developed by the Special Training Division, Services of Supply, the Provost Marshal General's Office, and other branches of the two services. In short, the Army and Navy are awake, or waking up, to the importance of foreign languages in a "contracted world," as some educationists are calling it—a phrase that, together with their fondness for referring to the "Air Age" may be the first signs of their awakening, too. A record of the language competence of every man inducted into the service is now kept, and there is reason to believe that these competences will not be allowed to go to waste if the opportunity comes to use them.

Meanwhile, from various parts of the country come reports of elimination of foreign languages from school programs by unthinking, blind, or prejudiced school principals, superintendents of schools, and other administrators. Too often these officers are merely obeying, consciously or unconsciously, the dictates of an inferiority complex growing out of their own ignorance of foreign languages. Yet they are unfortunately in a position to make their prejudices effective. Narrowmindedness and lack of vision prevail in too many school situations. As I have frequently said, if a man who through "dumbness" or lack of opportunity had failed to learn to swim went around denouncing the teaching of swimming, or refused to allow swimming to be taught in "his" schools, the public would know how to deal with him. Yet schoolmen of the same type are dealing with foreign languages on precisely that basis in too many American towns and cities. It is for us to make the public aware of the need for foreign languages and the reasons behind the instinctive opposition of many educationists, if we are to see improvement in the situation. What has happened to mathematics, formerly damned along with foreign languages by obscurantists and ignoramuses who happened to be in a position to direct educational policies, and now fostered by the same men under the pressure of needs made obvious in spite of their attempts to decry them, may well happen with foreign languages once the same pressures are applied. Prejudice and lack of vision must ultimately yield to common sense. In this work of enlightenment the armed forces, I repeat, are likely to be our greatest allies.

In one other field, that of postwar rehabilitation, languages must likewise find support, as Louis Adamic has pointed out in a recent issue of his bulletin, Two-Way Passage. Arguing for adequate use of our immigrant groups, he tells us that "One of the most important qualifications for people who will go abroad as relief and rehabilitation executives and field workers will be the ability to speak the language of the countries to which they will go. Educators and teachers, for instance, will have to know them perfectly. The same goes for many executives and administrators, and, of course, for translators, interpreters, and public-relations people. . . . The sooner this is realized by Governor Lehman's office and by educational institutions the better. Again, there is no time to lose. . . ." I am loth to believe that a man of Governor Lehman's intelligence and experience will fail to realize this, but there is of course the danger that his program, like those of other agencies, may fall into the hands of Professors of Education temporarily out of a job.

But we should not argue for our subjects only because of their obvious "practical" values. That would be a violation of our democratic faith and of our belief in Christian civilization. This is ably brought out in several recent articles, among them Robert A. Hume's "Shall We Be More Practical?" (School and Society, January 2, 1943). We must stand firm for what Abraham Flexner, in a noteworthy article published in Harper's some years ago, called "the usefulness of useless knowledge," following a line of thought put forth by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes nearly fifty years before (quoted at the end of my report for 1939, PMLA, LIV, 1355). "The mere fact," says Flexner, "that they bring satisfaction to an individual soul bent upon its own purification and elevation is all the justification they need. And in justifying them, without any reference whatever, implied or actual, to usefulness, we justify colleges, universities, and institutes of research."

Another American leader of thought, Charles A. Beard, tells us that "Without the literature and the arts which keep alive imagination and aspiration, which reflect taste and give enjoyment, industry would be on a low level and government would partake of the culture of the barracks. Without the ethical and esthetic aspirations reflected in the great literature of the race—embodying its funded and accumulating wisdom—government, industry, and even the 'fine' arts would be without form, spirit, and force. Uncontrolled by ethics and esthetics, the practical arts may destroy civilization. . . ." And again, Sir Wilmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, in an address on "Education and Democracy" delivered at the 1939 annual meeting of the American Council on Education, said: ". . . Herodotus, speaking of the Athenians, remarked 'how excellent a thing is equality among men.' It is excellent, but it is not enough unless it is strongly imbued with respect for excellence in the things of the spirit, unless it should rise above the belief that civilization is no more than an elaboration of the apparatus and machinery of existence, but requires that there shall be free scope for activities which—by 'practical' standards—are useless, but which are significant precisely because they are not inspired by utilitarian motives, but spring from a disinterested passion for beauty and truth, from the possession of powers whose exercise is its own reward."

If we must accept, even foster, for a time, the "culture of the barracks" we do so willingly, even gladly, for the sake of the larger good and for the preservation of the ideals of which Sir Wilmott Lewis speaks—"equality that is strongly imbued with respect for the things of the spirit," "civilization that is more than an elaboration of the apparatus and machinery of existence."

REPORT OF THE DELEGATES TO THE AMERICAN COUNCIL OF LEARNED SOCIETIESBy Professor GEORGE SHERBURN, Delegate

DURING the present year the American Council of Learned Societies, preoccupied with its useful and significant rôles in the war effort, has nevertheless continued its recognition of scholarship as practiced in the humanities by granting subsidies for certain books that will eventually be available for members of the Modern Language Association and others interested in literary scholarship. It has also continued its very stimulating examination into the essential nature and proper function of humane studies. The central personal force behind this work and all the work of the Council has been that contributed by the founder and director of the organization, Dr. Waldo G. Leland, and as a token of their appreciation of two decades of distinguished labors on his part, the constituent societies of the Council presented to him at the last annual meeting of the body (January 30, 1942) a testimonial volume containing research articles by members of each of the twenty-one societies. The volume is entitled Studies in the History of Culture. the Disciplines of the Humanities (Menasha, 1942), and it well presents a commendable cross-section of research efforts in the various fields patronized by the Council. The volume is an occasion of very special pride to the Modern Language Association, since the Secretary of the Association was its begetter, promoter, and editor.

CANCELLATION OF THE 1942 ANNUAL MEETING

The Association, meeting in Indianapolis, Indiana, on December 30, 1941, directed the Executive Council (PMLA, lvi, 1379) to cancel the Annual Meeting "if advisable." On March 28, 1942, the Executive Council, meeting in New York, N. Y. (PMLA, lvii, 593) confirmed a meeting at the Hotel Astor to be held on December 29-31, but empowered its Advisory Committee later to alter this decision "in case of serious need." For information we relied on the Science Committee of the National Resources Planning Board, writing from the Executive Office of the President. This committee represents the National Research Council, the American Council of Learned Societies, the American Council on Education, and the Social Science Research Council

In late August, and again on November 21, this Committee informed us that meetings of all the societies involved were desirable, and that the Office of Defense Transportation was "unwilling to advise against the holding of meetings or even to say that in its opinion the holding of such meetings is not in the public interest." Meanwhile, on November 20, the Division of Traffic Movement (of the O D.T) informed the National Resources Planning Board that "we have requested a postponement of all meetings which would require traveling at that [the Christmas holiday] period." This information reached our Executive Office on November 25.

On November 28, in Washington, your Secretary consulted personally the President of the American Council on Education and the Director of the American Council of Learned Societies. They were of the opinion that a localization of the meeting would suffice.

The following correspondence ensued.

(1)

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

OFFICE FOR EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT

Washington, D. C

The Office of Defense Transportation

JOSEPH B. EASTMAN, Director

November 30, 1942

File 612-9

DR. PERCY W LONG

Secretary of the Modern Language

Association of America

100 Washington Square East

New York, N. Y.

DEAR DR LONG:

The attention of this office has been directed to the convention which the Modern Language Association of America has scheduled for New York on December 29-31 of this year

As you know, the military transportation demands being placed on the carriers are increasing rapidly, and it has recently been necessary for the Office of Defense Transportation to issue an order "freezing" passenger schedules and prohibiting the operation of extra sections of trains. Special trains to sporting events have been discontinued for the duration, and every effort is being made by the Office of Defense Transportation, the Association of American Railroads, and the individual carriers to discourage travel which is not essential to the war effort.

The travel conservation program is far flung and will shortly encompass every state in the union. It will involve not only travel by rail, but travel by bus and private automobile as well.

Since many of the members of the Modern Language Association of America would naturally travel by common carriers and would thereby be placing an additional burden on the carriers that are now so busy meeting the transportation requirements of our military program, I am wondering if you and your other officers would consistently consider canceling your convention for 1942. I am not trying to evaluate the significance or the importance of this convention, rather, I am looking at the situation purely from a transportation angle, with the knowledge that we must expend every effort to curtail travel not intimately connected with the war effort if we are to meet the primary obligations which we have to our armed forces. Any action that you may take in the interest of conserving transportation will not be precedent-setting as hundreds of other meetings and events already have been called off for the duration in order that transportation or other vital factors might be saved for war purposes.

Your sympathetic consideration of this request will be appreciated, as it is only through such action that we can avoid the ultimate imposition of rigid control over our transportation systems.

Very truly yours,
(signed) H. F. McCarthy, Director
Division of Traffic Movement

(2)

THE MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION

100 Washington Square East
New York, N. Y.

December 2, 1942

MR. H. F. MCCARTHY, Director
Division of Traffic Movement
Office for Emergency Management
Executive Office of the President
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. MCCARTHY:

On receipt (Nov. 25) of a copy of your letter to L. K. Frank (Nov. 20), we placed on our printed Program cover the statement "Primarily for members in and near New York, N. Y." Very few (up to 50) would come from beyond Philadelphia and New Haven. They would not travel on weekends. The Program is to be mailed this weekend.

Since the problem is purely transportation, I hope our localization of the meeting meets your request. It would be a heavy blow to us to cancel outright. If you nevertheless request complete cancellation, I feel certain that our officers will comply

In haste,
(signed) PERCY W LONG, Secretary

(Sent air mail, special delivery, in the morning)

(3)

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT
OFFICE FOR EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT
Washington, D C

The Office of Defense Transportation
Joseph B Eastman, Director

December 9, 1942
File 612-9

Mr PERCY W LONG, Secretary
The Modern Language Association of America
100 Washington Square East
New York, N Y.

DEAR MR LONG

Thank you for your letter of the 2nd with further reference to your meeting

The action which you have taken to discourage travel to the meeting which you originally contemplated is appreciated. We hope this action will meet your requirements

Very truly yours,
(signed) H F MCCARTHY, Director
Division of Traffic Movement

Meanwhile our meeting had been cancelled on December 5th by unanimous vote of the Advisory Committee

The week-long delay of Mr. McCarthy's reply was not the sole factor involved. Over 60 members had written to the Executive office, advocating cancellation. Many of these considered a localized meeting to be inadequately representative. Finally came word of the sudden death of our President, Professor Padelford, from thrombosis, on December 2nd (not caused by the crisis). The Programs were due to be mailed; if issued uncanceled they would confirm the meeting with scant time for a subsequent notice of cancellation. Some 400 replies from the Old Guard showed a scant 50 planning to attend.

Since the decision to cancel, only one adverse criticism of this action by the Advisory Committee has come to the Executive Office.

DISPOSITION OF BUSINESS

(See Acts of the Executive Council, page 1384)

In lieu of a Business Meeting the Secretary announces:

1. The annual reports of the Secretary, Treasurer, Auditing Committee, and Trustees are printed on pages 1349-1364. Action on them is deferred until the next Business Meeting of the Association.

2. The informational reports of the Committee on Photographic Reproductions, the Committee on Research Activities, the Commission on Trends in Education, and the Delegates to the American Council of Learned Societies are printed on pages 1365-1378.

3. The mailed Ballots (260 recorded) have been held by the Executive Council to constitute a valid election, by which the following were elected members of the Executive Council for the term ending December 31, 1946:

ALBERT W. ARON, University of Illinois, Germanic

ALBERT C. BAUGH, University of Pennsylvania, English

ORIE W. LONG, Williams College, Germanic

Eleven late ballots, if counted, would not have changed the election. All have accepted.

4. The Committee on Nomination of Officers, Dean Edwin B. Williams, Chairman, Professors Finley M. K. Foster, Virgil B. Heltzel, Bayard Q. Morgan, and William L. Wiley reported as follows:

This is to officially inform you that the Committee on Nominations of the MLA, appointed by President Padelford, has nominated the following candidates for office:

Professor Rudolph Schevill, Univ. of Calif., President

Professor Robert H. Fife, Columbia Univ., 1st Vice-Pres.

Professor Raymond D. Havens, Johns Hopkins Univ., 2nd Vice-Pres.

Professor Sturgis E. Leavitt, Univ. of N. C. MLA delegate to the ACLS

EDWIN B. WILLIAMS

Chairman, Committee on Nominations

The Executive Council, on behalf of the Association, accepted this report and declared these officers instated. All have accepted.

5. The Committee on Resolutions, President Ernest H. Wilkins, Chairman; Professor George H. Danton, and Dr. James G. McManaway, reported that it had no resolutions to offer.

SPECIAL REGIONAL MEETING OF THE MODERN LANGUAGE
ASSOCIATION (ENGLISH DIVISION), DECEMBER 29, 1942,
IN CLEVELAND, OHIO

UPON call by the Department of English of Western Reserve University a special regional meeting of the English Division of the Modern Language Association was held at 2 30 P M , Tuesday, December 29, 1942, in Thwing Hall on the University campus Professor Finley M. K. Foster presided.

The following papers, originally scheduled for the national meeting of the Association, were read and discussed

- 1 "Walt Whitman in Hungarian Literature," Joseph Remenyi, Western Reserve
- 2 "Medieval Characteristics of Sackville's Writings," Sarah Ruth Watson, Fenn.
3. "Milton and War," James Holly Hanford, Western Reserve
- 4 "Wordsworth and the Facts of Life," George W. Meyer, Western Reserve
(Read, in Mr Meyer's absence, by Professor J. DeLancey Ferguson)

It was voted to form a committee for arranging a similar meeting next year providing the national meeting is again cancelled. Professor James Holly Hanford was appointed chairman of this committee

Number present 50 (representing Akron, Baldwin-Wallace, Fenn, Kent, Miami, and Western Reserve)

HARLAN W. HAMILTON, Secretary

[Printed in recognition of commendable initiative —Ed]

ACTS OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

(Continued from PMLA, LVII, 1206)

I. Under date of December 18, 1942, the Advisory Committee recommended the following actions, which were taken in unanimous mail ballot by the Council:

1. That, as in the case of Professor Marden (1932), an obituary notice of Professor Padelford (with photograph) be issued in PMLA.

2. That the revised 1943 Budget be approved, with the provision that the Council shall, at about February 15, decide whether a Council meeting can be managed without prohibitive expense

3. That the mailed Ballots received prior to December 30 shall constitute an election to the Council.

4. That the Secretary be authorized to print in the Supplement the usual reports, deferring vote on acceptance till the next Business Meeting

5. That, since the Committee on Resolutions reports it will offer none, the resolution prepared by the Committee on Research Activities, be referred back to that Committee for incorporation in its report, as coming most appropriately from that body.

6 That the next Annual Meeting be Eastern (as the Constitution provides), and be tentatively assigned to New York City in the Christmas holidays of 1943, preferably at the Hotel Astor.

7. That Sections and Groups in 1943 secure papers as normally for a Program but with short abstracts, that, if there is no meeting, these be issued in a pamphlet like the Program, but that, if at a late date a meeting is definitely called, these be converted into the usual Program. (From a suggestion of Professor E. B. Place)

8. That two letters be soon issued: (a) One to all members (with the January dues bills), explaining the steps which led to the cancellation of the 1942 meeting, and encouraging members (singly and in Groups) to continue their research activities. (b) One to officers and advisory committees of Sections and Groups, encouraging them to continue research, especially as provided under 7 above.

9. That the names of uniformed members in Government service be distinguished with a flag in the List of Members.

II. The 1943 Council by mail ballot under date of January 15, 1943, elected as its 1943 Advisory Committee Professors Albert C. Baugh, Robert Herndon Fife, and Christian Gauss

PERCY W. LONG, Secretary

PHILOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION OF THE PACIFIC COAST

First Session

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27, AT 10 00 A M

Meeting of the Executive Committee (1 30-10 00 A M)

Report of the Secretary-Treasurer

Appointment of Committees

Reading and Discussion of Papers (S Griswold Morley, Chairman)

1 "Monuments of Dying Paganism" (two tapestries in American museums)
Paul Friedlander, University of California, Los Angeles

2 "Stage Devices in Shakespeare's Handling of Time" Allison Gaw, University of Southern California

3 "Oscar Wilde and the Victorians" Percy H Houston, Occidental College

4 "The 'Esplumoir Merlin'" William A Nitze, University of California, Los Angeles

5 "Rilke in English" H F Peters, Reed College (Read by title)

Second Session

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27, AT 2:00 P M

(Three Sections)

AMERICAN LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE SECTION

Room 144, Royce Hall

ERNEST L MARCHAND, Chairman

6 "John W De Forest, Satirist of Political Craft and Graft in the 1870's"
William S Ament, Scripps College.

7 "Moncure D Conway Critic and Humanitarian" Frank Gees Black, University of Oregon.

8 "The Fight at Mussel Slough in Fact and Fiction" Benjamin S Harrison, University of Redlands

9 "The Theme of a Decaying House, as Treated by Hawthorne and by Edna Ferber" Caroline Mattingly, University of Redlands.

10 "Bryant and Whitman" Lawrence E Nelson, University of Redlands.

11 "Did Emily Dickinson Have a Lover?" Nina Willis Walter, University of Southern California

LINGUISTIC SECTION

ALFRED K. DOLCH, Chairman

12. "Samuel Johnson: Dictator of the English Language." Harold B. Allen, San Diego State College

13 "A Dynamic System of Phonetic Representation." Howard B. Garey, University of California, Los Angeles.

14 "Origin of Portuguese alguém, ninguém, outrém, and of their equivalents in Spanish." Yakow Malkiel, University of California, Berkeley.

15. "Gothic beidan, bidjan, and Related Words" Clarence Paschall, University of California, Berkeley

- 16 "A New Philological Approach to TAO" Hans N. von Koerber, University of Southern California

ROMANCE LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE SECTION

WILLIAM LEONARD SCHWARTZ, Chairman

- 17 "Dante and Mirrors" H. D. Austin, University of Southern California
 18. "Feijóo a Liberal in Eighteenth-Century Spain" Hermenegildo Corbató, University of California, Los Angeles
 19 "Contes-à-rire in Old French Literature" M. S. Crawford, University of Southern California
 20 "Balzac and de Custine." F. J. Crowley, Univ. California, Los Angeles
 21 "Dante's Notion of Attraction Compared to That of Adelard of Bath" Marie-Louise Dufrenoy, University of California, Berkeley

INFORMAL DINNER AND SMOKER

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27, AT 7 00 P M

- 22 President's Address Cowboy and Gaucho Fiction, by S. Griswold Morley, University of California, Berkeley.

Third Session

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 28, AT 9 30 A M

(Three Sections)

JOINT MEETING OF THE CLASSICAL ASSOCIATION OF THE PACIFIC STATES and of the Classical Section of the

PHILOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION OF THE PACIFIC COAST

OLIVER CURTIS CRAWFORD, Chairman

- 23 "Plato's Theory of Poetry: A Re-examination" Joseph W. Angell, Pomona College
 24. "The Earliest Printed Commentary on Ovid's Amores" Frederick Mason Carey, University of California, Los Angeles
 25 "On the Meaning of 'Αμάρψς.'" Arthur Patch McKinlay, University of California, Los Angeles.
 26. "The Successor of Speusippus." Philip Merlan, University of Redlands, and of Scripps College.
 27. "Cicero as Semanticist." Dorothea Clinton Woodworth, University of California, Los Angeles.
 28 "Falterings in Horace's Lyric Muse" W. H. Alexander, University of California, Berkeley.

ENGLISH SECTION

PERCY H. HOUSTON, Chairman

29. "Anthony Trollope on the Old Drama" Bradford A. Booth and Hugh G. Dick, University of California, Los Angeles.

30 "Play-writing Activity at York, 1415-1425 " M G Frampton, Pomona College (Fifteen minutes)

31. "William Godwin's Conception of Man's History." Hubert C Heffner, Stanford University (Read by title)

32 "Sir John Suckling and the Witty Tradition " Charles S Holmes, Pomona College.

33 "The Sociology of Critics of Restoration Drama " Frank Louis Johnson, San Diego State College

34 "Arthur Hugh Clough in America " Frederick Mulhauser, Jr, Pomona College

35 "Robert Southey's Defense of Charles Lamb " Louis Wann, University of Southern California

36 "The Classics in the Poetry of A E Housman " William White, Whitman College (Read by title)

GERMAN SECTION

BAYARD QUINCY MORGAN, Chairman

37 "A Contribution to the Interpretation of Rilke's Fourth Duino Elegy " Kurt Bergel, Deep Springs College

38 "The Contemporary German Stage " William W. Melnitz, University of California, Los Angeles.

39. "The Popularity of Marmontel on the German Stage " William W. Melnitz, University of California, Berkeley

40. "Karl Gutzkow und die Universität seiner Zeit " Franz Schneider, University of California, Berkeley.

41 "Martin Opitz and His Edition of the Annolied " Frederick R. Whitesell, University of California, Berkeley.

42. "Die grossen Marionetten in Kleists Dramen " Rolf Liffman, University of California, Los Angeles (Read by title)

43. "Social Themes in G. A. Burger's Poetry " O Paul Straubinger, University of California, Los Angeles (Read by title)

The first session was called to order Friday morning by President S Griswold Morley The Secretary made a brief report The President announced the appointment of the following committees:

Social: F H Reinsch, G O Arlt, F M Carey, M Ewing, M A Zeitlin.

Nominating: B Q Morgan (chairman), Ch C McCown (2 years), A. P. McKinlay (3 years).

Auditing: W A Nitze, L M. Price.

Resolution: W. L. Schwartz, L. M. Price.

The reading and discussion of papers followed, about 90 persons being in attendance

At the annual dinner the Auditing Committee reported its approval of the Treasurer's books The Committee on Resolutions expressed the warm admiration of the members of the Association for the work and the personality Professors George M. Calhoun, Ray Lorenzo Heffner, and Clifton Price, who died in 1941.

The report of the Nominating Committee was presented by Prof B Q Morgan, and the vote of the Association was cast for the following officers

President: Herman F Frankel.

Vice-Presidents: Raymond D Hariman, Frank H Reinsch

Secretary-Treasurer: F. W Strothmann.

Executive Committee Gabnel D Bonno, D P Rotunda, Sophus K Winther, Celeste Turner Wright.

Attendance at all sessions was seriously influenced by transportation difficulties. With few exceptions, only the members living in the Los Angeles region were able to attend the meeting.

The Secretary-Treasurer now reports a total membership of 295, as against 313 for last year. Since the printing of the last list of members, 17 new members have joined the Association, as against 9 resignations, and the dropping of 23 members for delinquencies in dues. The Association lost three members by death.

The financial summary follows

RECEIPTS.

Balance on hand, Dec 1, 1941	.	.	.	$ 501 87
Dues paid by members	1,324 58
				<hr/>
Total Receipts	.	.	.	$1,826 45

DISBURSEMENTS.

Refunded to members	..	.	$ 14 30
To MLA			889 22
To APA	.	.	156 53
Expenses		.	270 40
Cash on hand	.	.	40 22
Balance in bank	.	.	455.78
			<hr/>
Total	.	.	$1,826 45

F. W. STROTHMANN, Secretary-Treasurer

SOUTH ATLANTIC MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION

As the result of a poll, conducted early in October, 58 members voted to hold this year's annual meeting while 203 voted to cancel it. By this time, however, the programs for all groups and sections had already been prepared. Accordingly, it was decided to print the program, together with an abstract of each paper listed thereon, in the South Atlantic Bulletin for December, 1942.

The program follows

ENGLISH SECTION

Chairman, W. L. Halstead, University of Miami, Co-Chairman, Roy P. Basler, Alabama State Teachers College (Florence)

1. "Reade, Mill and Zola: A Study of the Character and Intention of Charles Reade's Realistic Method" Lewis F. Haines, University of Florida

2. "A Forgotten Charleston Poet: Joseph Brown Ladd, 1774-1786" Lewis A. Leary, Duke University

3. "E. K. or Who Was E. K.?" Raymond Jenkins, Catawba College.

4. "Seventeenth Century Literature and the Idea of Progress" Gwynne H. Daggett, University of New Hampshire (formerly at University of Florida)

5. "Timrod's Ode (with a quartet to sing the Ode to the tune used at Magnolia Cemetery)" Reed Smith, University of South Carolina

6. "Reports by Committee Chairman on the General Problem of Coordinating the Teaching of English on the High School, College, and Graduate School Levels"

A. 'The Teaching of English in High School.' Reed Smith, University of South Carolina

B. 'The Teaching of English in College.' William P. Cumming, Davidson College

C. 'The Teaching of English in Graduate School.' John D. Wade, University of Georgia

WILLIAM PATTERSON CUMMING, Secretary

FRENCH AND ITALIAN SECTION

Chairman, C. Maxwell Lancaster, Vanderbilt University, Vice-Chairman, Nancy Stewart, Mercer University

1. "Vico's Defense of the Humanities" William Paul Dismukes, Univ. of Miami

2. "Some Aspects of the Modern French Novel" H. M. Acton, Howard College.

3. "James' Criticism of French Literature" Eliot G. Fay, The Citadel

4. "A Comparative Study of the Romantic Novel in France, Spain, and England" William C. Zellars, Louisiana College

5. (Title not given: Discussion of a Twentieth Century French Author) Sidney L. McGee, Tennessee Polytechnic Institute.

6. (Title not given: Some Aspect of Modern French Literature) Lorraine Pierson, Alabama College.

JEAN AUTRET, Secretary

GERMAN SECTION

Chairman, F. W. Bradley, University of South Carolina

- 1 "The Poetry of Arno Holz" A. S. Berghauer, Furman University
- 2 (Title of paper to be sent) Robert M. Browning, Wake Forest College
- 3 "Schiller Der Karlsschuler" John H. Brunjes, Jr., University of North Carolina
- 4 "The Present Status of Research in the Pennsylvania Dutch Dialect" J. William Frey, Presbyterian College

WILLIAM CARY MAXWELL, Secretary

SPANISH SECTION

Chairman, Melissa A. Cilley, Agnes Scott College

- 1 "A Cuban Gone with the Wind: Cecilia Valdés" M. Gordon Brown, Georgia School of Technology
- 2 "Spanish Conversation for Children and for Adults" W. C. Zellars, Louisiana College
- 3 "Roberto Brenes-Mesén, a Transplanted Mystic." Laura Jean McAdams, Western Carolina Teachers College.
- 4 "The Conference on the Teaching of Spanish and Portuguese, Held at Ann Arbor under the Auspices of the Education Division of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs" Sturgis E. Leavitt, University of North Carolina

PAUL T. MANCHESTER, Secretary

GENERAL SESSION

Chairman, Frederick L. Jones, Mercer University

- 1 "Presidential Address" Frederick L. Jones, President of the South Atlantic Modern Language Association
- 2 "Address by Guest Speaker." Albert C. Baugh, University of Pennsylvania
- 3 "Report of the Committee on the Status and Promotion of the Humanities" Thomas B. Stroup, University of Florida, and James Osler Bailey, University of North Carolina

JOHN A. STRAUSBAUGH, Secretary

The University of South Carolina has graciously renewed its invitation to hold the next annual meeting on its campus. Tentatively, the date for it is November 26-27, 1943. The officers elected during the 1941 meeting will carry on for 1943.

During the year the South Atlantic Bulletin published a report on "The Status of the Humanities" by Thomas B. Stroup of the University of Florida. It inaugurated a new series on Source Materials for the Study of Southern Literary Culture, in which the following articles appeared in 1942: "The Charleston College Library" by Miss Virginia Rugheimer of Charleston College and Guy A. Cardwell of Tulane University; "The Charleston Library Society" by the same authors, and "The Library of Alexander S. Salley of Columbia, South Carolina," by Richard Beale Davis of the University of South Carolina. Of general interest were articles on The Julius Rosenwald Fund by Edwin F. Embree, President of the Fund; Inter-American Education in War Time by Edgar J. Fisher of the Institute of International Education, the Pierpont Morgan Library by George K. Boyce of that institution, the Vanderbilt University Press by John Pomfret, Dean of the Graduate School at Vanderbilt University, "Cultural Activities in Spain" by Gordon Brown of the Georgia School of Technology, the Summer School for South Americans held at the University of North Carolina, by Sturgis E. Leavitt of the University of North Carolina, and the "South Atlantic Quarterly, The First Forty Years," by Charles Richard Sanders of Duke University. Worthy of particular mention was "Southern Literary Culture: An Annotated Bibliography for 1941" by Herman E. Spivey of the University of Florida.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

November 20, 1941–November 25, 1942

RECEIPTS.

Balance on hand, November 19, 1941	$ 663 26
Membership dues November 20, 1941–November 25, 1942	404 00
	<hr/>
	$1067 26

DISBURSEMENTS.

To South Atlantic Bulletin	$300 00
Other expenses	194 83
	<hr/>
	$494 83	494 83
		<hr/>
Balance on hand, November 25, 1942		$ 572 43

JOHN A. STRAUSBAUGH, Secretary-Treasurer

LIST OF MEMBERS
OF THE
MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA

(Corrected to March 2, 1943)

HONORARY MEMBERS

(The roll dates from July 13, 1893)

	Elected		Elected
AMADO ALONSO	1940	OTTO JESPERSEN	1904
Buenos Aires, Argentina		Lundehave, Helsingør, Denmark
FERNAND BALDENSPERGER	1931	DANIEL JONES	1936
The Sorbonne		University of London
GIULIO BERTONI	1939	HERMANN AUGUST KORFF	1940
Reale Università degli Studi, Rome		University of Leipzig
SIR EDMUND CHAMBERS	1922	EUGEN KUHNEMANN	1906
Bovey Combe, Beer, Devon, Eng		University of Breslau
VITTORIO CIAN	1926	ABEL LEFRANC	1913
University of Turin		Collège de France
GEORGES CIROT	1926	FERDINAND LOT	1927
University of Bordeaux		The Sorbonne
GUSTAVE COHEN	1940	DANIEL MORNET	1939
Yale University		Université de Paris, Paris
SIR WILLIAM A CRAIGIE	1922	LORENZ MORSBACH	1926
Oxford, Eng		University of Göttingen
BENEDETTO CROCE	1909	RAMON MENÉNDEZ PIDAL	1910
Naples, Italy		University of Madrid
GUSTAV EHRLSMANN	1939	ALFRED W POLLARD	1916
Dürerstrasse 6, Hamburg-Othmar-		British Museum, London
schen, Germany		MARIO ROQUES	1926
OLIVER ELTON	1939	Ecole des Hautes Etudes, Paris
293 Woodstock Rd, Oxford, Eng		JOSEPH SCHICK	1940
ARTURO FARINELLI	1930	University of Munich
University of Turin		EDWARD SCHROEDER	1913
MAX FORSTER	1935	University of Göttingen
University of Munich		PERCY SIMPSON	1939
LUCIEN FOULET	1932	27 Old Road, Highfield, Oxford, Eng
Paris, France		SAMUEL SINGER	1940
WALTER WILSON GREG	1923	University of Berne
Standlands, Petworth, Sussex, Eng		DAVID NICHOL SMITH	1940
SIR H J C GRIERSON	1932	Oxford University
University of Edinburgh		PEDRO HENRIQUEZ-UREÑA	1940
PAUL HAZARD	1936	Buenos Aires, Argentina
Collège de France, Paris		KARL VOSSLER	1926
JOHANNES HOOPS	1933	University of Munich
University of Heidelberg		MAURICE WILMOTTE	1934
ALFRED JEANROY	1914	Bruxelles, Belgium
University of Paris		HENRY CECIL WYLD	1930
		Oxford University

Life Members and Emeritus Members are indicated by ❖ Members in the Armed Forces are indicated by 🇺🇸

- Abbot, William Richardson, Prof Eng, Coll of Charleston, Charleston, S C
- Abbott, Charles David, Dir of Libraries, Univ of Buffalo, Buffalo, N Y [Lockwood Memorial Lib]
- Abrahamson, Ernest L, Tutor, St John's Coll, Annapolis, Md
- Abrams, Meyer Howard, Instr Eng, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [383 Harvard St]
- ❖ Abramson, (Mrs) Muriel Morris, 4800 Drexel Blvd, Chicago, Ill
- Adam, F O, Jr, Assoc Prof Spanish, La Poly Inst, Ruston, La
- ❖ Adams, Arthur, Prof Eng and Librarian, Trinity Coll, Hartford, Conn
- ❖ Adams, Edward Larrabee, Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1850 Washtenaw Ave]
- Adams, George C S, Asst Prof Rom Langs, W Georgia Coll, Carrollton, Ga [Stewart Hgts]
- 🇺🇸 Adams, Henry Hitch, 2000 Day St, Ann Arbor, Mich [Ensign, U S N R]
- Adams, Henry Welch, Assoc Prof Eng, Alabama Poly Inst, Auburn, Ala
- Adams, John R, Prof Eng, San Diego State Coll, San Diego, Calif
- Adams, Joseph Quincy, Director, Folger Shakespeare Lib, Washington, D C
- Adams, Martin Ray, Prof Eng, Franklin and Marshall Coll, Lancaster, Pa [582 School Lane]
- Adams, Nicholson Barney, Prof Spanish, Univ of N. C, Chapel Hill, N C [Route 3]
- Adams, Raymond William, Prof. Eng, Univ of N C, Chapel Hill, N C
- ❖ Adams, Warren Austin, 325 Second St, St Petersburg, Fla
- Adkins, Nelson Frederick, Asst Prof Eng, Washington Square Coll, N. Y Univ, New York, N Y [19 Christopher St]
- Adolf, Helen, 6807 Lawnton Ave, Phila, Pa
- Agard, Frederick Browning, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [182 Prospect Ave]
- Ahern, Agnes Madeleine, Head French Dept, St Joseph Coll., West Hartford, Conn
- Ahlstrom, Alvida, Chairman Dept For. Langs, State Teachers Coll, La Crosse, Wis [1803 King St]
- Aiken, Mrs. Janet Rankin, Eng. Dept., Columbia Univ, 421 W 117 St, New York, N. Y.
- Albrecht, Otto Edwin, Asst Prof French Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [463 W Ellet St, Mt Airy]
- Albrecht, William Price, Asst Prof Eng, Bucknell Univ Jr Coll, Wilkes-Barre, Pa [36 Oak St, Forty Fort]
- Alciatore, Jules, 4813 46 St, N W, Washington, D C
- Alden, Donald Hitt, Instr Eng, Los Angeles Cty Coll, Los Angeles, Calif
- Alden, Douglas William, Asst Prof French, Texas Tech Coll, Lubbock, Tex [Box 82]
- Alden, Henry, Instr Eng, Grinnell Coll, Grinnell, Ia [1333 Broad St]
- Alderman, William E, Dean Lib Arts, Head Eng Dept, Miami Univ, Oxford, Ohio [Bonham Rd]
- Alderson, William L, Eng Dept, A and M Coll of Tex, Coll Sta, Tex
- Aldridge, Alfred Owen, Instr Eng, Univ of Buffalo, Buffalo, N Y [55 W Windspear Ave]
- Alewyn, Richard, Assoc Prof German, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y
- Alexander, Dorothy, 88 Morningside Dr, New York, N Y
- Alexander, Henry, Prof Eng, Queen's Univ, Kingston, Ont, Canada
- Alexis, Joseph E. A., Prof and Chairman Dept Mod Langs, Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [1811 Pershing Rd]
- 🇺🇸 Alleman, Gellert Spencer, Instr Eng, Lehigh Univ, Bethlehem, Pa (On leave Providence Rd, Wallingford)
- Allen, Don Cameron, Assoc Prof Eng, Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md. [Gilman 325]
- Allen, Gay Wilson, Assoc Prof Eng, Bowling Green State Univ, Bowling Green, Ohio
- Allen, Harold Byron, Asst Prof Eng, San Diego State Coll, San Diego, Calif
- Allen, Hope Emily, Kenwood, Onerda, N Y
- Allen, Joseph Heatley Dulles, Jr, Instr French, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [704 W California Ave]
- ❖ Allen, Morse S, Assoc Prof Eng, Trinity Coll, Hartford, Conn [3 Fern St]
- Allen, Ned Bliss, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Delaware, Newark, Del
- Allen, Robert Joseph, Asst Prof Eng, Williams Coll, Williamstown, Mass
- Allison, Tempe Elizabeth, Chairman Eng Dept., San Bernardino Valley Jr. Coll., San Bernardino, Calif

- ❖ Almstedt, Hermann Benjamin, Prof and Chairman Dept. Germ Langs, Univ of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [302 Westmount Ave]
- Alonso, Antonio, Asst Prof Spanish, George Washington Univ, Washington, D C.
- Alphonsus, Mother Mary, Rosemont Coll, Rosemont, Pa
- Alspach, Russell K, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [132 Bennett Hall]
- Altenheim, Margarete Reckling, Instr German, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y. [454 Ft Washington Ave]
- Altick, Richard D, Instr Eng, Franklin and Marshall Coll, Lancaster, Pa [18 Race Ave]
- Altrocchi, Rudolph, Prof and Chairman Dept Italian, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [Box 443, Wheeler Hall]
- Alyea, Dorothy C (Mrs E T), Instr Creative Poetry, Adult Education School, Montclair, N J [77 Highland Ave]
- Amann, Paul, 66 West St, Northampton, Mass
- Ament, William S, Prof Eng, Scripps Coll, Claremont, Calif
- Ames, Russell Abbot, Tutor Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y.
- Amiel, J Henri, Assoc Prof and Chairman Dept Mod Langs, Loyola Univ of the South, New Orleans, La
- Amos, Flora Ross, Prof Eng, Wilson Coll, Chambersburg, Pa
- Amy, Ernest F, Prof Eng, Ohio Wesleyan Univ., Delaware, Ohio [28 Forest Ave]
- Anderson, Chas D, Assoc Editor College, The Macmillan Co, 60 Fifth Ave, New York, N Y
- Anderson, George Kumler, Assoc Prof Eng, Brown Univ, Providence, R I
- Anderson, Karl O E, Instr Eng, Cornell Univ., Ithaca, N Y [3 Reservoir Ave]
- Anderson, Marcia Lee, Instr Eng, Beaver Coll, Jenkintown, Pa [Box 59]
- Anderson, Marjorie, Assoc Prof Eng, Hunter Coll., New York, N Y [135 E 74 St]
- Anderson, Paul Bunyan, Prof. Eng and Chairman Div. Lang and Lit, Otterbein Coll, Westerville, Ohio [99 N West St]
- Anderson, Ruth L, Prof Eng, Central Coll, Fayette, Mo.
- Andersson, Theodore, Assoc Prof. Rom Langs, Wells Coll, Aurora, N Y.
- Andrews, Albert LeRoy, Asst Prof German, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y
- Andrus, Lawrence Russell, Examiner, Board of Examinations, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [Faculty Exch]
- Angelica, Mother, Prof Eng, Our Lady of the Lake Coll Lib, San Antonio, Tex
- Angell, Joseph W, Instr Eng, Pomona Coll, Claremont, Calif
- ❖ Anibal, Claude E, Prof Rom Langs, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio [1329 Wyandotte Rd, Grandview]
- ❖ App, Austin J, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Univ. of Scranton, Scranton, Pa
- Appelt, E P, Prof German, Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y [240 Cobb Terrace]
- Appelt, Theodore C, Prof. German, Concordia Teachers Coll, River Forest, Ill [1123 Monroe Ave]
- Arbib-Costa, Alfonso, Prof Emer Rom Langs, The City Coll, New York, N Y. [P O Box 63, Allenhurst, N J]
- Arce, Jose M, Prof Span., Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H [P O Box 102]
- Archer, Jerome W, Instr Eng, Marquette Univ., Milwaukee, Wis [1341 W. Wisconsin Ave]
- Arends, Charles Clifford, Prof. Speech, Elmhurst Coll, Elmhurst, Ill.
- Arial, J M, Prof. Eng, Columbia Coll, Columbia, S C
- Arlt, Gustave O, Prof and Chairman Dept German Lang and Lit, U. of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif.
- Armour, Richard Willard, Prof Eng., Wells Coll, Aurora-on-Cayuga, N Y
- Arms, George Warren, Asst Prof Eng, Mary Washington Coll, Fredericksburg, Va [1407 Winchester St]
- ❖ Armstrong, Edward C, Prof French Lang, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J. [26 Edgehill St]
- Armstrong, Ray Livingstone, Instr Eng, Pine Manor Jr. Coll, Wellesley, Mass [36-A Brook St]
- Arnaud, Leonard Ellison, Asst. Prof Rom Langs, Brooklyn Coll, Brooklyn, N Y. [135 Parsons Dr, Hempstead, L I]
- Arnavon, Cyrille, Visiting Prof French, Univ. of Buffalo, Buffalo, N Y.
- Arndt, Karl John Richard, Asst Prof German, Louisiana State Univ., Univ., La
- Arnold, Mrs Agnes N, Teacher French and Spanish, Paul Jr H S, Washington, D C [3740 Jenifer St, N. W.]

- Arnold, Mrs Dorothy McSparran, Asst Prof Eng, Asst Dean, Wash Sq Coll, N Y U, New York, N Y
- Arnold, Frederic Kappeler, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn [48 Wyllys Ave]
- Arnold, Harrison Heikes, Prof Span, Div Span. and Italian, Pennsylvania State Coll, State College, Pa [519 Holmes St]
- Arnold, Mrs John W, Spanish Teacher, Baton Rouge Sr H S, Baton Rouge, La [2578 Washington Ave]
- Arnoldson, (Mrs) Louise G, Prof French, Montana State Univ, Missoula, Mont
- Aron, Albert W, Prof and Head German Dept, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill
- Arroyo, Justa, Instr Spanish, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [39 West St]
- Arthos, John, Instr Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [101 Winchell House]
- Artin, Edward, Editorial Staff, G and C. Merriam Co, 47 Federal St, Springfield, Mass
- Artinian, Artine, Asst Prof French, Bard Coll, Annandale-on-Hudson, N Y
- Arvin, Neil Cole, Prof French, Univ. of Rochester, Rochester, N Y.
- Ashby, Nanette M, Assoc Prof Eng, New Mexico State Teachers Coll, Silver City, N M
- Ashby, Stanley Royal, Prof Eng, Univ of Maine, Orono, Me.
- Ashcom, Benjamin Bowles, Assoc Prof Spanish, Wayne Univ, 4841 Cass Ave, Detroit, Mich
- Ashford, William Ray, Prof French and Span, Kenyon Coll, Gambier, Ohio
- Ashton, John William, Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans
- Ashton, Madeline, Asst Prof and Chairman Dept. For Langs, Univ of Kansas City, Kansas City, Mo [5301 Charlotte St]
- Atkin, Ernest George, Prof French, Univ of Florida, Gainesville, Fla.
- Atkins, Stuart, Instr. and Tutor German, Harvard Univ., Cambridge, Mass [2119 St. Paul St, Baltimore, Md]
- Atkinson, Dorothy F, Instr Eng, Univ. of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho [551 S. Hill Ave, Pasadena, Calif.]
- Atkinson, Geoffroy, Prof Rom Langs, Amherst Coll, Amherst, Mass.
- Atkinson, Thomas Prater, Head For Lang. Dept, Ala Poly Inst, Auburn, Ala [378 N College St]
- Atwood, Elmer Bagby, Instr Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Main Bldg, 1806]
- Aubin, Robert Arnold, Asst Prof Eng, N J. Coll for Women, New Brunswick, N J [12 Suydam St]
- Auerbach, Erich, Prof Rom Phil, Istanbul Univ, Istanbul-Bebek, Arslanlıkönak, Turkey
- Aurner, (Mrs) Nellie Slayton, Prof Eng, Univ. of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [303 Lexington Ave]
- Austin, Herbert Douglas, Prof Italian and French, Univ of Southern Calif, Los Angeles, Calif [3551 Univ Ave]
- Avery, Emmett Langdon, Asst Prof Eng, State Coll of Washington, Pullman, Wash [Box 67, Coll Sta]
- ❖ Aydelotte, Frank, Dir, Inst for Advanced Study, Princeton, N. J
- ❖ Ayer, Charles Carlton, Prof Emer Rom. Langs, Univ of Colorado, Boulder, Colo. [Community Hospital]
- ❖ Ayres, Harry Morgan, Prof Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [Philosophy Hall]
- Babb, Lawrence, Instr. Eng, Michigan State Coll, E. Lansing, Mich
- Babcock, Robert Witbeck, Assoc Prof Eng, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich [1705 Hill St]
- Bach, Matthew G, Asst Prof German, Hunter Coll., New York, N Y [485 Central Park W]
- Bachman, Albert, Prof French and Head Rom Lang Dept, Gettysburg Coll, Gettysburg, Pa [325 N. Stratton St]
- Backenstoss, Ross Elwood, Jr, Instr For Langs and Lits, Univ of Maryland, College Park, Md [3114 Quebec Pl, N W, Washington, D C]
- Bacon, Wallace A., Instr Eng, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. [609 Hill St]
- Bader, Arno L, Asst Prof Eng, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich.
- Baer, Lydia, Asst Prof German, Swarthmore Coll, Swarthmore, Pa.
- Baer, William Bush, Dean, Univ Coll. of Arts and Pure Science, New York Univ., Univ Hgts, New York, N. Y.
- Baerg, Gerhard, Prof German, DePauw Univ, Greencastle, Ind.
- Baginsky, Paul B., Instr German, Brooklyn

- Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Brooklyn, N Y
- Bagley, Charles Rutherford, Prof French, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H
- Bagster-Collins, Jeremy Felix, Instr. Eng, Finch Jr Coll, 52 E 78 St, New York, N Y.
- Bailey, James Osler, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of N C, Chapel Hill, N C [Box 414]
- Bailey, Margery, Assoc Prof Eng, Stanford Univ, Calif [559 Kingsley Ave, Palo Alto]
- Bailey, Robert Gano, Instr Rom Langs, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn [Box 219, Wesleyan Sta]
- Bailhache, Mrs Marjorie Stuart, Head For Lang Dept, Galeo H S, San Francisco, Calif [32 Fifth Ave]
- Baird, James Richard, Eng Dept, Univ of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn [1330 Thirtieth St, N W, Washington, D C]
- Baird, Theodore, Samuel Williston Prof Eng, Amherst Coll, Amherst, Mass [Shays St]
- Bakeless, John, Major, Genl Staff Corps, 2717 War Dept, Washington, D C.
- Baker, Carlos Heard, Asst Prof Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [210 More St]
- Baker, John Milton, 56 Ford Ave, Oneonta, N Y
- Baker, Joseph Ellis, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [311 Brown St]
- Baker, Louis Charles, Prof Mod Langs, Lawrence Coll, Appleton, Wis [220 S Morrison St]
- ❖ Baker, Ray Palmer, Prof Eng, and Head Dept. Arts, Science, and Business Administration, Rensselaer Polytechnic Inst, Troy, N Y [36 Locust Ave]
- Baker, William C, 223 W Pershing St, Salem, Ohio
- Bald, R. C, Prof Eng, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y [Goldwin Smith Hall]
- Balerston, Katherine Canby, Assoc Prof Eng Lit, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass [Hallowell House]
- Baldwin, Thomas Whitfield, Prof Eng, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [607 W Iowa St]
- Bale, Christian E, Head Eng Dept, Concordia Coll, Moorhead, Minn [1433 9th St, S, Fargo, N D]
- Ball, Cecil Ravenscroft, Asst. Prof. Eng, Univ of Maryland, Coll Park, Md. [Box 325]
- Ball, Margaret, Prof. Eng, Mt Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass [Faculty House]
- Ball, Robert Hamilton, Asst Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y [75 Summit Rd, Pt Washington]
- Ballinger, Richard Henry, Lieut (jg), U S N R, Active duty, Eng Dept, Hist and Gov, U S Naval Acad, Annapolis, Md [201 Duke of Gloucester St]
- Bally, Georges, Assoc Prof French, Vanderbilt Univ, Nashville, Tenn [Vanderbilt U Campus]
- Balseiro, Jose A, Barceloneta, Puerto Rico
- Bandy, William Thomas, Asst Prof French, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [2150 West Lawn Ave]
- Bang, Carol K (Mrs A F), 5307 Spring Lake Way, Baltimore, Md
- Bangs, Archie Roy, Prof Germ Lang, Trinity Coll, Hartford, Conn [24 Montclair Drive, W Hartford]
- Banks, Lucy Young, Asst Prof Eng, Mississippi State Coll for Women, Columbus, Miss [204 S 7 Ave]
- Banks, Theodore Howard, Asst Prof Eng, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn [28 Lawn Ave]
- Barba, Preston Albert, Prof German, Muhlenberg Coll, Allentown, Pa.
- Barbour, Frances M, Assoc. Prof Eng, Normal Univ, Carbondale, Ill [718 S Normal Ave]
- Barja, Cesar, Prof Spanish, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif
- Barker, Joseph Edmund, Prof and Chairman Dept Rom Langs, Sweet Briar Coll, Sweet Briar, Va
- Barlow, Joseph W, Prof and Chairman Dept Spanish and Portuguese, Washington Sq Coll, N. Y U, New York, N Y.
- Barnason, Charles F, Prof and Chairman Dept Mod Langs, Northeastern Univ, Boston, Mass [122 Downer Ave, Hingham]
- Barnett, George Leonard, Eng Staff, U S Naval Trng Sch, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [1232 E Wythe St]
- ❖ Barney, Winfield Supply, Prof and Head Rom. Lang. Dept, Woman's Coll, U of N. C, Greensboro, N C [300 Tate St]
- Barnhart, Clarence L, Dictionary Editor, Scott, Foresman and Co, 623 S Wabash Ave, Chicago, Ill
- ❖ Barnicle, Mary Elizabeth, Instr Eng, N. Y. U, Wash Sq Coll, New York, N. Y.

- Barnouw, Adriaan Jacob, Queen Wilhelmina Prof, Germ Langs Dept, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Barnstorff, Hermann, Asst Prof German, Univ of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [505 Rollins St]
- Barnum, George Silk, Chairman Dept. French and Spanish, Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, N J. [Wagener House]
- Barr, Mary-Margaret H, 112 Carnegie Ave, East Orange, N J
- Barrett, Linton Lomas, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans [117 Frank Strong Hall]
- Barrs, James T, 14 State St, Randolph, Mass
- Bartelmez, Erminnie, 5638 Kenwood Ave, Chicago, Ill
- Barthold, Allen Jennings, Prof and Head Dept Rom Langs, Lehigh Univ, Bethlehem, Pa [30 Coppée Hall]
- Bartholomew, Ruth L, Paine Coll, Augusta, Ga
- Bartlett, Adeline Courtney, Asst Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [88 Morningside Dr]
- Bartlett, Phyllis B, Asst Prof Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y
- Bartlett, William Irving, Prof Eng, Roanoke Coll, Salem, Va [601 Cornwallis Ave]
- Barton, Francis Brown, Prof and Chairman Rom Langs Dept, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn.
- Bascom, Mother Marion, Instr Eng, Maryville Coll, St Louis, Mo
- Baseheart, Katherine, Teacher French and Spanish, Owensboro Sr H S, Owensboro, Ky [518 E Fourth St]
- Bashe, Edwin J, Head Eng Dept, St Mary-of-the-Woods Coll, St Mary-of-the-Woods, Ind [Box 62B, R R 1, W Terre Haute]
- Basilus, Harold A, Assoc Prof and Chairman German Dept., Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich.
- Baskett, Wm Denny, Prof. Mod Langs. Central Coll, Fayette, Mo.
- Basler, Roy P, Head Prof Eng, State Teachers Coll, Florence, Ala. [1001 Jackson Rd]
- Bass, William W., Assoc Prof Eng, Carson-Newman Coll, Jefferson City, Tenn [Box 343]
- Batchelder, Meritt Clare, Asst Prof Eng, American Univ, Washington, D C [4837 Alton Pl, N. W]
- Bates, Arthur Seymour, 2nd Lt., U S. Army, Box 2601, Washington, D C
- Bates, Blanchard W, Instr French, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [3 Evelyn Pl]
- Bates, Madison Clair, Prof Eng, Univ of Newark, Newark, N J
- Battenhouse, Roy W, Asst Prof Church Hist, Vanderbilt Univ, Nashville, Tenn
- Battles, Ford Lewis, Capt, Headquarters, Sixth Air Force, APO #825, c/o Postmaster, New Orleans, La.
- Baudin, Maurice, Assoc Prof French, New York Univ, New York, N Y [Cambridge Ct, 86 St, Jackson Hgts, L I, N Y]
- Bauer, Henri F, Chairman Mod Lang. Dept, Borough Hall Div, St John's Univ, Bklyn, N Y [On leave Off of War Info, N Y C, Apt. 6E, 26 E 10 St, N Y C]
- ❖ Baugh, Albert Croll, Prof Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [Box 1, College Hall]
- Baugh, Nita Scudder, (Mrs Albert C. Baugh), 4220 Spruce St, Phila, Pa.
- Baughan, Denver Ewing, Prof Eng, East Carolina Teachers Coll, Greenville, N C
- ❖ Baum, Paul Franklin, Prof Eng, Duke Univ, Durham, N C [Duke Sta]
- Baumann, Carl L, Assoc Prof German, Pomona Coll, Claremont, Calif [459 W. 11 St]
- Bausch, Frieda B, Prof. Mod Langs, Sterling Coll, Sterling, Kans
- Bayerschmidt, Carl Frank, Asst Prof German, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y.
- Baym, Max I, Instr Rom Langs, Grover Cleveland H S [1560 E 18 St, Brooklyn, N Y]
- Beach, Constance Louise, Assoc Prof Eng, Texas State Coll for Women, Denton, Tex [1113 Oakland Ave]
- Beach, Joseph Warren, Prof Eng, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [1801 University Ave, S E]
- Beach, Leonard B, Asst Prof Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio [26 E. Schreyer Pl]
- Beal, George Denton, Jr, Editor, The Bulletin Index Magazine, 6659 Woodwell St, Pittsburgh, Pa
- Beale, Robert Cecil, Prof. Eng, Hampden-Sydney Coll, Hampden-Sydney, Va
- Beall, Chandler Baker, Prof Rom. Langs, Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore
- Beall, Florence Gray, Assoc Prof Eng, Kent State Univ., Kent, Ohio [338 E. Main St.]

- Beardsley, Wilfred Attwood, Prof and Chairman Rom. Langs Dept, Goucher Coll, Baltimore, Md
- Beardwood, Jane, Prof Mod Langs, State Teachers Coll, Shippensburg, Pa [415 Millers Lane, Wynnewood]
- Beattie, Arthur H, Asst Prof French, Univ of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho
- Beattie, Lester Middleswarth, Assoc Prof Eng, Carnegie Inst of Tech, Pittsburgh, Pa.
- ❖ Beatty, Arthur, Prof Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [1824 Vilas Ave]
- Beatty, Frederika, Asst Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y. [501 W 113 St]
- Beatty, Joseph Moorhead, Jr, Prof Eng, Goucher Coll, Baltimore, Md [308 Thornhill Rd, Homeland, Baltimore]
- Beatty, Richmond Croom, Assoc Prof Eng, Vanderbilt Univ, Nashville, Tenn [Box 130 Calhoun Hall]
- ❖ de Beaumont, Victor, Prof French Lang and Lit, Univ of Toronto, Toronto, Canada [73 Queen's Park]
- Becerra, Rafael A, Instr Rom Langs, The City Coll, New York, N Y [21 Fifth Ave, Pelham]
- ❖ Becker, Ernest Juhus, 220 W Landale St, Baltimore, Md
- Becker, Harold Wilham, Instr, Navy Yard Electricity, Mare Island Trainee Sch, 126 Benson Ave, Vallejo, Calif
- Becklund, Luther N, Eng Dept, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex
- ❖ Beckwith, Martha Warren, 2700 Piedmont Ave, Berkeley, Calif
- Beckwith, Wilham Hunter, Prof French, Dir, Div. Humanities, Hofstra Coll, Hempstead, N Y.
- Bédé, Jean-Albert, Assoc Prof French, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y. [44 E. 9 St]
- Beeler, Madison S, Instr German, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif. [1567 Scenic Ave]
- Bégué, Armand G, Instr. Rom Langs, Brooklyn Coll, Bklyn, N Y [21 Claremont Ave, N Y C]
- Belcher, Fannin S, Jr., Prof. Drama, West Virginia State Coll, Institute, W Va [Box 150]
- ❖ Belden, Henry Marvin, Prof Emer Eng, Univ of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [811 Virginia Ave.]
- Bell, Alexander, Asst Master Mod Langs, Deacon's School, Peterborough, Eng [98, Lincoln Rd., Peterborough, Northants]
- Bell, Clair Hayden, Assoc Prof German, Univ of Calif, Berkeley, Calif
- Bell, Howard James, Jr, Assoc Prof Eng, Bradley Coll, Peoria, Ill [106 N Glenwood Ave]
- Bement, Newton S, Asst Prof French, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [715 S. Forest]
- Bendiner, Mrs Carol Foulks, Instr Spanish, Temple Univ, Philadelphia, Pa [Box 247]
- ❖ Benham, Allen Rogers, Prof Eng, Univ. of Washington, Seattle, Wash
- Bennett, Charles Hodges, Research Assoc Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [2741 Yale Sta]
- Bennett, Jack Arthur Walter, Fellow, Queen's Coll, Oxford, Eng [c/o British Information Services, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N Y]
- Bennett, Mrs Josephine Waters, Instr Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [501 W 113 St]
- ✉ Bennett, Roger E, Private, U S Army Signal Corps Reserve [c/o J W Bennett, 501 W 113 St, New York, N Y]
- Benson, Adolph B, Prof German and Scandinavian, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn
- Bentley, Gerald Eades, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [Faculty Exch]
- ❖ Berdan, John Milton, Emily Sanford Prof Eng Lit, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [1914 Yale Sta]
- Berend, Eduard, 21A, Avenue de Miremont, Geneva, Switzerland
- Berg, Margaret Louise, French Dept, Geneva Coll, Beaver Falls, Pa
- Bergel, Alice R, Instr, Deep Springs Coll, Deep Springs, Calif
- Bergel, Lienhard, Instr German, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y [45-11 171 St]
- ❖ Bergeron, Maxime L, Prof. Rom Langs, The City Coll, New York, N Y [511 W 146th St]
- Bergethon, K Roald, 335 80 St, Brooklyn, N. Y.
- Bergin, Thomas Goddard, Prof Rom. Langs, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y
- Berkowitz, H Chonon, Prof Spanish, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [4145 Mandan Crescent]
- ✉ Bernard, Jules Eugène, 1st Lt, War Dept, Tank-Automotive Center, Detroit, Mich [Apt 408, 11810 Ohio]
- ❖ Bernbaum, Ernest, Prof. Eng., Univ. of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. [406 W. Illinois St.]

- Berneck, Mrs Julia Cluck, 2 Maple Ct, Roxbury, Mass
- Berrett, Donald S, Instr German, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [R R 3]
- Berrien, William, Rockefeller Foundation, Rm 5500, 49 W 49 St, New York, N Y
- Berringer, Ralph William, 1517 Anza St, San Francisco, Calif
- Bethel, John P, General Editor, Merriam-Webster Dictionaries, G and C Merriam Co, 47 Federal St, Springfield, Mass
- ❖ de Béthune, Baron François, Bibliothèque de l'Université, Section de philologie romane, Place du peuple, Louvain, Belgium
- Bethurum, Dorotohy, Prof Eng, Connecticut Coll, New London, Conn [141 Mohegan Ave]
- Betteridge, Harold Thomas, Asst Lect German, London School of Economics and Political Science, Univ of London, London, Eng
- Betz, Gottlieb Augustus, Asst Prof Germ Langs and Lits, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [1116 Amsterdam Ave]
- 🏠 Betz, Siegmund A E, Asst Prof Eng, Lindenwood Coll, St Charles, Mo
- Bevans, Caleb Arundel, 4817 36 St, N W, Washington, D C
- Bevington, Merle M, Asst Prof Eng, Duke Univ, Durham, N C. [Box 4803]
- Beyer, Charles Jacques, Assoc Prof French on the Mrs J T Jones Foundation, Univ of Buffalo, Buffalo, N Y.
- Beyer, Lynn, Asst Prof Eng, Lawrence Coll, Appleton, Wis
- Biaggi, Zelmira, Instr Spanish, Connecticut Coll, New London, Conn
- 🏠 Biddison, Philip, Pvt, 907 Engineer's Hdqts, Co AF, March Field, Riverside, Calif
- Bieghler, Edward Wilson, Head Dept. For Langs, State Teachers Coll, Indiana, Pa
- Bihl, Josef Konrad Ludwig, Asst Prof Mod. Langs, U of Detroit, Detroit, Mich [16244 Dexter]
- Billetdoux, Edmond W, Dept Rom. Langs, Rutgers U, New Brunswick, N. J. [Box 29]
- Bingham, Alfred Jepson, Asst Prof French, Brown Univ., Providence, R I
- Bird, C Wesley, Assoc Prof French and Italian, Fresno State Coll, Fresno, Calif
- Bird, Wm Ernest, Dean of Coll, Western Carolina Teachers Coll, Cullowhee, N C
- Bishop, David Horace, Dean Faculty, Head Eng Dept., Univ. of Mississippi, University, Miss.
- Bishop, Morris G, Prof Rom Langs, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y [903 Wyckoff Rd]
- Bissell, Clifford Hershey, Asst Prof French, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [1509 Euclid Ave]
- Bissell, Philip T B, 629 S Main St, Geneva, N Y
- Bjornstad, William B, Instr Eng, Colorado State Coll, Fort Collins, Colo [643 Remington St]
- Black, Frank Gees, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore
- Black, Matthew Wilson, Prof Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [College Hall]
- Blair, Isabel Luella, Instr Latin, Packer Collegiate Inst, Brooklyn, N Y [307 W 11 St, N Y C]
- Blair, John Fries, Asst Prof Eng, Moravian Coll and Theol Sem, Bethlehem, Pa
- Blair, Thomas Marshall Howe, Instr Eng, Kent State Univ, Kent, Ohio
- Blair, Walter, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Blake, Charles Harvey, 45 Wall St, New York, N Y
- Blake, George Horace, Asst Prof Mod. Langs, Marietta Coll, Marietta, Ohio
- Blanc, Agnes, Instr French, Wright Jr Coll, Chicago, Ill [415 Fullerton P'kway]
- Blanchard, Frederic Thomas, Prof Eng, Univ. of California at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif [4400 Cromwell Ave]
- Blanchard, H D, Lt (jg), Dept For Langs, U S Naval Acad, Annapolis, Md
- Blanchard, Harold Hooper, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Tufts Coll, Medford, Mass [32 Calumet Rd, Winchester]
- Blanchard, Rae, Prof Eng, Goucher Coll, Baltimore, Md
- ❖ Blankenagel, John Charles, Prof German, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn. [214 High St]
- Blankner, Frederika, Prof Mod Langs, Marymount Coll, Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N Y; Prof. Philosophy, Roerich Acad of Arts, Carnegie Hall, N. Y C
- Blatz, Rev. Frederick W., Grad Stud Eng, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [904 Clinton St]
- Blegen, Anne Helene, Asst Prof. Rom Langs, St. Olaf Coll, Northfield, Minn.
- Bliss, Isabel St John, Prof Eng Lit, Western Coll, Oxford, Ohio
- Bloch, Bernard, Asst Prof Linguistics, Yale Univ., New Haven, Conn [Yale Grad Sch.]

- Blodgett, Eleanor Dickinson, Asst. Prof Eng, Hofstra Coll, Hempstead, N. Y [77 St Paul's Rd, N]
- Bloomer, Louis A, S J, Prof Eng, Rockhurst Coll, Kansas City, Mo [5225 Troost Ave]
- Bloomfield, Leonard, Sterling Prof Linguistics, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn.
- ❖ Bloomfield, Morton Wilfred, 1501 Chomedy St, Montreal, Que, Canada
- Bluhm, Heinz Siegfried, Asst Prof German, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn
- ❖ Blume, Albert M. K., 206 Olive St, Meriden, Conn
- Blume, Bernhard, Prof and Head German Dept, Mills Coll, Calif
- Boas, Louise Schutz (Mrs R P), Assoc Prof Eng, Wheaton Coll, Wheaton, Mass
- Boddy, Margaret Pearse, Eng Teacher, Winsor School, Pilgram Rd, Boston, Mass
- Bode, Carl, Asst Prof Eng, Keuka Coll, Keuka Park, N. Y
- Boege, Frederick William, The Lindens, Roslyn, N Y
- Boening, Hans, Instr German, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich
- ❖ Boesche, Albert Wilhelm, Prof Emer German, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y. [Forest Home Dr]
- Boeschstein, Hermann, Asst Prof. German, University College, Toronto, Canada
- Boggs, Ralph Steele, Prof. Spanish, Univ of N C, Chapel Hill, N C
- Bogorad, Samuel Nathaniel, Instr Eng, Northwestern Univ., Evanston, Ill [1936 Orrington Ave]
- Bogumil, Mrs Lucia Bonilla, Instr Rom Langs, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y. [185 Claremont Ave]
- Bohm, Erwin Herbert, Prof For. Langs, Coll of the Ozarks, Clarksville, Ark.
- Boland, Rev Edward P, Vicar, St Mary's of-the-Isle, Newport, R I [12 William St]
- Bolek, Rev. Francis, St Francis H S., Athol Springs, N. Y.
- Bolinger, Dwight L, Washburn Univ. of Topeka, Topeka, Kans
- Boll, Theophilus Ernest Martin, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [312 Bennett Hall]
- Bolton, Joseph Sheldon Gerry, Head Eng Dept, Skidmore Coll, Saratoga Springs, N. Y
- Bolwell, Robert W, Prof Am Lit., George Washington Univ., Washington, D C.
- Bond, Donald Frederick, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Bond, Mary Salmon (Mrs Lewis A), Instr Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [4550 Connecticut Ave, Washington, D C
- Bond, Otto Ferdinand, Prof Teaching French and Chairman French and Spanish Langs in the Coll, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [5307 Univ. Ave]
- ❖ Bond, Richmond Pugh, Prof Eng, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C
- Bond, William Henry, 719 Madison Ave, York, Pa
- Bondy, Louis J, Prof French, St Michael's Coll, Univ of Toronto, Toronto, Canada
- Bonfante, Julian, Dept Mod Langs, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [13 Olden Ave]
- Bongiorno, Andrew, Asst Prof Eng, Oberlin Coll, Oberlin, Ohio [19 N Park St]
- Bonner, Willard Hallam, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Buffalo, Buffalo, N Y [3425 Main St]
- Bonno, Gabriel, Prof French, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [426 Wheeler Hall]
- ❖ Bonschur, Margaret Powers, Grad Stu Rom Phil, Radcliffe Coll, Cambridge, Mass [89 Pinckney St, Boston]
- Booker, John Manning, Prof Eng, Univ. of N C, Chapel Hill, N C ["Senlac"]
- Boorsch, Jean, Assoc Prof French, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [316 Hall of Grad Studies]
- Booth, Bradford A, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ. of Calif at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif
- Borden, Charles E, Asst Prof German, Univ. of British Columbia, Vancouver, B. C, Canada
- Borgese, Giuseppe Antonio, Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [1224 E 57 St]
- Borglum, George P, Assoc Prof and Chairman French Dept, Russell Sage Coll, Troy, N Y [75 Pinewoods Ave]
- ❖ Borgman, Albert Stephens, Prof. Eng, N. Y Univ, University Heights, New York, N Y.
- Borish, Murray Eugene, 3818 Davis Pl., N W, Washington, D C.
- Borland, Lois Bertha, Chairman Div. Langs and Lit, Western State Coll, Gunnison, Colo
- Bosano, Gabriella, Prof. Italian, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass.
- ❖ Bossard, Samuel B, Instr German, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J. [99 Alexander St.]

- Bosshard, Henry Morant, Prof German Lang and Lit, Clark Univ, Worcester, Mass [33 St Elmo Rd]
- Bostetter, Edward Everett, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash [1305 E 43 St]
- Botting, Roland Bassett, Assoc Prof Eng, Washington State Coll, Pullman, Wash [700 Pine St]
- Boughner, Daniel C, Asst Prof Eng, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [101 Univ Hall]
- Bouise, Oscar A, Prof. Eng, Xavier Univ, New Orleans, La [1920 Law St]
- Bourgoin, Louise M, Assoc Prof French Lang and Lit, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [231 Elm St]
- Bourgoin, Marie-Jeanne, Asst Prof French, Mt Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass
- Bourland, Caroline Brown, Prof Emer Spanish, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [40 Commonwealth Ave, Boston]
- Bowe, Forrest, Chairman For Lang Dept, St John's Univ, School of Commerce, Bklyn, N Y
- ❖ Bowen, Edwin Winfield, Prof Latin, Randolph-Macon Coll, Ashland, Va
- Bowen, Lansdon H, Instr French, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [301 Indiana Ave]
- Bowen, Ray Preston, Prof and Head Dept Rom. Langs, Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore [2271 Birch Lane]
- Bowen, Willis Herbert, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Univ. of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [2141 A St]
- Bowers, Lieut Fredson Thayer, U S N R, 1515 34th St, N W, Washington, D C.
- Bowers, R H, Instr Eng, St Petersburg Junior College, St Petersburg, Fla
- Bowie, Theodore Robert, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Skidmore Coll, Saratoga Springs, N Y.
- Bowling, William Glasgow, Assoc Prof Eng, Washington Univ., St. Louis, Mo
- Bowman, Edgar Milton, Head Dept. Rom Langs, Randolph-Macon Woman's Coll, Lynchburg, Va.
- Bowman, Francis Ezra, Instr. Eng, Univ. of Rochester, Rochester, N. Y [241 Antlers Dr. Brighton]
- 📖 Bowman, Richard Stearns, Instr Humanities, Cooper Union, Cooper Sq, New York, N Y. [On leave c/o Dr K. M. Bowman, Univ of Calif. Med. Schl., San Francisco, Calif]
- 📖 Bowman, Walter Parker, 4302 North Charles St., Baltimore, Md
- Bowyer, John Wilson, Prof Eng, Southern Methodist Univ, Dallas, Tex
- Boyce, Benjamin, Head Eng Dept, Univ of Omaha, Omaha, Neb [5612 Jackson St]
- Boyce, Margaret M., Head Readers' Div, Wellesley Coll. Lib, Wellesley, Mass [Clafin Hall]
- Boyce, William Cosway, Instr Eng, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Boyer, C Valentine, Dean Coll of Arts and Letters, Head Eng Dept, Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore.
- Boyd, Clark E, Instr Eng, Mo School of Mines and Metallurgy, Rolla, Mo
- Boys, Richard C, Instr. Eng, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1205 S Forest Ave]
- ❖ Boysen, Johannes Lassen, Prof Germanic Langs, Univ. of Texas, Austin, Tex [Box 1510, University Sta]
- Bozard, John Fallaw, Prof Eng, Dean Instruction, Limestone Coll, Gaffney, S C
- 📖 Braddy, Haldeen, 1313 Sycamore St, Commerce, Tex.
- Bradford, Eugene Francis, Director of Admission, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N. Y.
- Bradford, George W, Asst Prof Eng, Coll of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio [501 Soybolt Ave]
- Bradley, Edward Sculley, Prof Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [730 Vernon Rd, Mt Ary, Phila]
- Bradley, Francine Brustlein (Mrs Lyman R. Bradley), 51 Charles St, New York, N Y.
- Bradley, Francis Wright, Dean, Coll. of Arts and Science, Head Dept Mod Langs, Univ of S C, Columbia, S. C. [719 Bull St]
- ❖ Bradley, Lyman Richard, Assoc Prof. German, Washington Sq Coll, N Y Univ, New York, N Y
- Bradley, Margaret Margaret, 88 Morning-side Dr, New York, N Y.
- ❖ Bradner, Leicester, Assoc Prof Eng, Brown Univ, Providence, R I
- Bradsher, Earl L., Prof. Eng and American Lit, La State Univ, New Orleans, La. [3657 Park Dr, Baton Rouge]
- Bradsher, Emily Satterfield, Grad Stud. Eng, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa. [3415 Walnut St]
- Brady, Caroline Agnes, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ of Calif, Berkeley, Calif
- Brady, Leslie S, Instr. Rom. Langs, New York Univ, Univ Hgts, New York, N. Y. [1600 Metropolitan Ave, Bronx]

- Branch, Leonora, Assoc Prof Eng, Mt Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass [Hooker House]
- Branchi, Eugene Camillus, P O Box 1950, Santiago, Chile, S A
- Brandenburg, Alice Stayert, Instr Eng, Southern Methodist Univ, Dallas, Tex
- ❖ Brandon, Edgar Ewing, Emeritus Prof Rom Langs, Miami Univ, Oxford, Ohio
- Brashear, Minnie M, Asst Prof Eng, Univ. of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [906 Hillcrest]
- Braswell, William, Asst Prof. Eng, Purdue Univ., Lafayette, Ind.
- Braun, Sidney D, Instr Rom. Langs, Yeshiva Coll, New York, N Y [167 W 88 St]
- ❖ Braun, William Alfred, Prof Germanic Langs and Lit, Barnard Coll Columbia Univ, New York, N. Y.
- Brawner, James Paul, Asst. Prof Eng, West Virginia Univ, Morgantown, W Va. [420 Beverly Ave]
- ❖ Brede, Alexander, Jr., Asst. Prof Eng, Wayne Univ., Detroit, Mich [529 Hawthorne St, Royal Oak, Mich]
- Bredvold, Louis I, Prof Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [2034 Norway Rd]
- Brée, Germaine, Assoc Prof French, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa.
- Breitenbach, H L, Prof. German, Elmhurst Coll, Elmhurst, Ill [179 S. Kenilworth Ave]
- Brendemuhl, Gabriella Clara, Eng Dept, State Teachers Coll, La Crosse, Wis
- Brenes, Dalai, Instr. Spanish, Central Y M.C.A. Coll., 19 S La Salle St, Chicago, Ill.
- Brennan, John Harold, Judge of Circuit Court, 1st Judicial Circuit of West Virginia, Wheeling, W. Va [Box 249]
- Brennecke, Ernest, Jr., Asst Prof Eng, Columbia Univ., New York, N. Y [312 School of Business]
- Brenner, Clarence Dietz, Asst. Prof French, Univ. of California, Berkeley, Calif. [Box 61, Wheeler Hall]
- Brenton, Esther, 2841 Hulman St, Terre Haute, Ind.
- Brett, Lewis Edward, Asst. Prof. Rom. Langs., Queens Coll., Flushing, N. Y. [178-21 Kildare Rd, Jamaica]
- Brewer, Ann Eliza, Asst. Prof. French, Brenau Coll., Gainesville, Ga.
- Brewer, Edward Vere, Assoc. Prof. German, Univ. of California, Berkeley, Calif [4305 Bayview Pl]
- Brewer, Rose Sharp, Chauman Eng. Dept., San Angelo Coll, San Angelo, Tex [1511 Austin St]
- Brewer, Wilmon, Great Hill, Hingham, Mass
- Brewster, Dorothy, Asst Prof Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Brewster, Hughes, Lect German, Stanford Univ, Calif [Box 11]
- ❖ Brewster, William Tenney, Prof Eng, Barnard Coll, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Brezina, Gabriele von Munk, Rockford Coll, Rockford, Ill
- ❖ Brickett, Elsie F, Prof Eng, Judson Coll, Marion, Ala [Box 214]
- Bridgers, John E, Jr, Assoc Prof Eng, Woman's Coll, Univ of N C, Greensboro, N C.
- Briggs, Harold E, Instr Eng, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [Folwell Hall]
- Briggs, Margaret B, 28 Arrandale Ave, Greck Neck, L I, N Y.
- Brightfield, Myron F, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [1592 Euclid Ave]
- Brinkley, Roberta Florence, Prof. Eng, Goucher Coll, Baltimore, Md.
- ❖ Bristol, Edward N, Henry Holt and Co, 257 Fourth Ave, New York, N. Y.
- Brittain, Robert Edward, Instr Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y
- Brock, Marianne, Eng Dept, Mount Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass.
- Brodeur, Arthur Gilchrist, Prof Eng. and Germanic Philology, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif. [2711 Shasta Rd]
- Brodin, Pierre E, Prof and Dir of Studies, Lycée Français de New York, 3 E. 95 St, New York, N. Y
- Broeker, Hugo, Prof. and Head German and French Depts, Quincy Coll, Quincy, Ill.
- ❖ Bronk, Isabelle, Prof Emeritus French Lang and Lit, Swarthmore Coll., Swarthmore, Pa.
- Bronson, Bertrand Harris, Assoc. Prof Eng, Univ. of California, Berkeley, Calif. [415 Wheeler Hall]
- ❖ Bronson, Thomas Bertrand, Asst. Head Master Emeritus, Lawrenceville Sch., Lawrenceville, N. J. [2535 Rudge Rd., Berkeley, Calif.]
- 📖 Bronstein, Arthur Jordan, Instr. Speech, Queens Coll., Flushing, N Y. [c/o Meltzer, 300 Central Park, W., N. Y. C.]
- ❖ Brooke, C. F. Tucker, Prof. Eng, Yale

- Univ , New Haven, Conn [243 Hall of Grad Studies]
- Brooke, C Vyncr, 186 Waverley St , Ottawa, Ont , Can
- Brooks, A Russell, Prof Eng , A and T Coll , Greensboro, N C
- Brooks, Cleanth, Jr, Assoc Prof Eng Lit , Louisiana State Univ , University, La
- Brooks, Frances Eleanor, Grad Stud , Radcliffe Coll , Cambridge, Mass [166 Plymouth Rd , Newton Highlands]
- Brooks, John Lee, Assoc Prof Eng , Southern Methodist Univ , Dallas, Tex [3440 Haynie Ave]
- ❖ Brooks, Neil Conwell, Prof German, Univ. of Illinois, Urbana, Ill
- Brooks, Richard Albert Edward, Asst Prof Eng , Vassar Coll , Poughkeepsie, N Y
- ❖ Broughton, Leslie Nathan, Prof Eng , Cornell Univ , Ithaca, N Y [931 N. Tioga St]
- Brower, Reuben Arthur, Asst Prof Greek and Eng , Amherst Coll , Amherst, Mass [45 Dana St]
- ❖ Brown, Arthur C. L , Prof Eng , Northwestern Univ , Evanston, Ill [625 Colfax St]
- ❖ Brown, Beatrice Daw (Mrs. Carleton Brown), Asst Prof Eng , Connecticut Coll , New London, Conn [52 Thames St]
- ❖ Brown, Calvin S , Prof Mod Langs , Univ of Mississippi, University, Miss
- ✎ Brown, Calvin S , Jr , Assoc Prof Eng , Univ of Georgia, Athens, Va (On leave with U S Signal Corps 824 S Ivy St , Arlington, Va)
- Brown, Charles Barrett, Assoc Prof. Rom Langs , Vanderbilt Univ , Nashville, Tenn.
- ✎ Brown, E K , Prof Eng , Cornell Univ , Ithaca, N Y
- ❖ Brown, Frank Clyde, Prof Eng , Duke Univ., Durham, N C
- Brown, Harcourt, Prof French, Brown Univ , Providence, R I
- ❖ Brown, Harold Gibson, Assoc Prof Eng , Univ of Mississippi, University, Miss [Box 125]
- Brown, Herbert Ross, Prof Eng , Bowdoin Coll , Brunswick, Me.
- Brown, Huntington, Assoc Prof. Eng., Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. [Folwell Hall, 215]
- Brown, John D. M , Prof. and Head Eng Dept , Muhlenberg Coll , Allentown, Pa. [1620 Walnut St]
- Brown, Joseph, Jr , Prof For. Langs , Univ. of Connecticut, Storrs, Conn [Box 792]
- Brown, Lydia, 45 Vine St , Roxbury, Mass
- Brown, M Gordon, Assoc Prof Mod. Langs , Ga School of Tech , Atlanta, Ga
- Brown, Paul Alonzo, Asst Prof Eng , Temple Univ , Phila , Pa
- Brown, R Morrison, Instr. Eng , Carson Long Inst , New Bloomfield, Pa
- Brown, Reginald Francis, Instr Spanish, Dartmouth College, Hanover, N H.
- Brown, Thomas K , Jr , Asst Prof German, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila , Pa [226 Dickinson Ave., Swarthmore]
- Brown, Wallace Cable, Chairman Eng Dept , Univ of Kansas City, Kansas City, Mo
- ✎ Browne, James R, Lt., USNR (c/o Bureau of Naval Reserve, Navy Dept., Wash D C)
- Bruce, Dorothy Hart (Mrs Harold Bruce), The Women's Faculty Club, U of Calif , Berkeley, Calif
- Bruchesi, Jean, Under-Secretary of the Province of Québec, Canada [Secrétariat de la Province, Québec, P Q]
- Bruel, Andrée, Assoc Prof French, Wellesley Coll , Wellesley, Mass [55 Leighton Rd]
- Bruerton, Courtney, 10 Remington St , Cambridge, Mass
- Brugmans, Henri L , Dept Rom Langs , Cornell Univ , Ithaca, N Y.
- Brun, Richard, Instr. Spanish, Washington Sq Coll , N Y. U , New York, N Y. [1576 Unionport Rd , Parkchester, Bronx]
- ❖ Bruner, James Dowden [Address unknown]
- Brunjes, John Henry, Jr, Asst Prof Mod. Langs , The Citadel, Charleston, S. C.
- ❖ Bruns, Friedrich, Prof German, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis
- ❖ Brush, Murray Peabody, Headmaster, California Prep Sch , Ojai, Calif
- Bryan, William Frank, Prof Eng , Northwestern Univ , Evanston, Ill [1907 Orrington Ave]
- Bryant, Donald Cross, Asst. Prof. Eng , Washington Univ , St Louis, Mo
- ❖ Bryant, Margaret M , Asst Prof Eng , Brooklyn Coll , Bedford Ave and Ave. H, Bklyn, N. Y.
- Bryne, Eva Alice Worall, 372 Church Lane, Germantown, Phila , Pa
- Buchanan, Milton Alexander, Prof Italian and Spanish, Univ of Toronto, Toronto, Canada
- Buchner, Margaret Louise, Asst Prof. Mod Langs , Winthrop Coll , Rock Hill, S C.
- Buck, Philo Melvyn, Jr , Prof. and Chairman Comparative Lit. Dept , Univ. of Wisconsin

- sin, Madison, Wis [1852 Summit Ave]
- Buckham, Laura Tyler, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Sweet Briar Coll, Sweet Briar, Va
- Buckingham, Leroy Howland, Instr Humanities, Cooper Union Inst, Cooper Sq, New York, N Y
- ❖ Buckingham, Mary H, Boston, Mass [96 Chestnut St]
- Buckingham, Minnie Sue, Eng Teacher, Chicago Teachers Coll, 5748 Dorchester Ave, Chicago, Ill
- Buckle, Rev. Boniface, Eng Dept, Holy Cross Prep Sem, Dunkirk, N Y.
- Bucks, Dorothy S, Asst Prof Eng and Humanities, Geo Williams Coll, Chicago, Ill [5315 Drexel Ave]
- Buell, Llewellyn Morgan, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif
- Buffington, Albert Franklin, Asst Prof Langs, Univ of New Hampshire, Durham, N H [10 Bagdad Rd]
- ❖ Buffum, Douglas Labaree, Prof Rom Langs, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [60 Hodge Rd]
- Buford, Albert Hunter, Grad Stud and Fellow, U of N C, Chapel Hill, N C [P O Box 794]
- Buhler, Curt F, The Pierpont Morgan Lib, New York, N Y [33 E 36 St]
- Bujala, Mrs Bernadine, Instr French, U of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, Sask, Can
- Buka, Ruth, Prof German, Elmira Coll, Elmira, N Y
- Bull, William Emerson, Instr Rom Langs, Washington U, St Louis, Mo
- Bullard, Donald A, Dept Mod Langs, Georgetown Univ, Washington, D C
- ❖ Bullock, Walter L I, Prof Italian Studies, U of Manchester, Manchester, 13, Eng
- Bundy, Murray Wright, Prof Eng, Head of Dept, State Coll of Washington, Pullman, Wash
- Burch, Charles Eaton, Prof Eng Lit, Howard Univ, Washington, D C
- Burckhardt, Sigurd, 679 Colusa Ave, Berkeley, Calif
- Burgevin, Leshe Gale, Prof Eng Lit & Drama, Mt Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass [3 Brockway Lane]
- Burgum, Edwin Berry, Assoc Prof Eng, New York Univ, Wash. Sq Coll, New York, N Y
- ❖ Burke, Redmond Ambrose, 4219 West End Ave., Chicago, Ill
- Burkhard, Arthur, 12A Fairwell Pl, Cambridge, Mass
- Burkhard, Oscar Carl, Prof German, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn
- Burner, Jarvis, Asst Prof Spanish, Kan State Teachers Coll, Pittsburg, Kan
- ❖ Burnett, Arthur W, Henry Holt and Co, 257 Fourth Ave, New York, N Y
- ❖ Burnham, Josephine May, Prof Eng, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan [1652 Mississippi St]
- Burns, J Anderson, Prof and Head Eng Dept, John Marshall Coll of Law, 136-25 39th Ave, Flushing, N Y
- Burns, Wayne, Instr Eng, Miami Univ, Oxford, Ohio [404 E Church St]
- Burrows, Dorothy Moore, Prof and Head Eng Dept, MacMurray Coll for Women, Jacksonville, Ill [Colonial Inn]
- Bursley, Philip E, Asst Prof French, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [917 Oliver Ave]
- Burt, Arthur K, Instr Eng, The City Coll, Convent Ave and 139 St, New York, N Y
- Burton, Katherine, Asst Prof Eng, Wheaton Coll, Norton, Mass
- Burton, Mary E, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Louisville, Louisville, Ky
- Bush, J N. Douglas, Prof Eng, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [3 Clement Circle]
- Bush, Jarvis Elhott, Instr Eng, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio [1835 Rebyburn Rd]
- ❖ Bush, Stephen Hayes, Prof and Head Dept Rom Langs, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa
- Bushee, Alice Huntington, Prof Emer Spanish, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass [129 Great Rd, Woonsocket, R I]
- Bushnell, Nelson Sherwin, Asst Prof Eng., Williams Coll, Williamstown, Mass
- ❖ Busse, Adolf, Prof Emeritus German, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [635 Riverside Dr]
- Bussom, Thomas Wainwright, Prof Rom. Langs, Wesleyan Univ., Middletown, Conn
- Butler (Rev.) Patrick N, Prof Eng, St. Norbert Coll, West De Pere, Wis
- Butterfield, Lyman H, Asst Prof Eng, Franklin and Marshall Coll Lancaster, Pa. [914 State St]
- Byam, Edwin Colby, Prof Mod. Langs, Univ. of Delaware, Newark, Del.

- Byrne, Carlton E, Instr German, Stanford Univ, Calif [2281 Byron St, Palo Alto]
- Cabeen, David Clark, Editor, 170 W 74 St, New York, N Y
- Cabell, James Branch, Author, 3201 Monument Ave, Richmond, Va
- Cadwalader, John, Lieut (jg), U S N R., Instr Eng, Hist, and Gov, U S Naval Acad, Annapolis, Md
- Cady, Frank William, Prof Eng, Middlebury Coll, Middlebury, Vt [57 South St]
- Cain, H Edward, Assoc Prof Eng, Catholic Univ of America, Wash, D C [D-204 Prince George's Gardens, Hyattsville, Md]
- Calbick, Gladys S, Prof Spanish, Milwaukee-Downer Coll, Milwaukee, Wis
- Calder, Grace J, Instr Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [435 W 119 St]
- Caldwell, Robert Atchison, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark [539 Whitham]
- Callaghan, Mother Cecily, Head Eng Dept, San Francisco Coll for Women, San Francisco, Calif [Lone Mt]
- Calvert, William J, Jr, Assoc Prof Eng, State Teachers Coll, Jacksonville, Ala
- Camden, Charles Carroll, Instr Eng, The Rice Inst, Houston, Tex
- Cameron, Alice, Chairman Dept Mod Langs, Maryland Coll for Women, Lutherville, Md.
- Cameron, Kenneth Neill, Instr. Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind
- ❖ Cameron, Kenneth Walter, Instr Eng, State Coll of the Univ of N C, Raleigh, N C [213 Cox Ave]
- Campbell, Lily B, Prof. Eng, Univ of California at Los Angeles, Calif [310 Bentley Ave]
- Campbell, Mary Elizabeth, Asst Prof Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [453 Mt. Auburn St, Watertown, Mass]
- ❖ Campbell, Oscar James, Prof Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [609 Philosophy Hall]
- Campbell, T Moody, Prof and Head German Dept, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill. [1456 Wesley Ave]
- Canby, Henry Seidel, Lecturer Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [Clinton, R F D, Conn]
- ❖ Canfield, Arthur Graves, Prof Emeritus Rom. Langs., Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. [2104 Dorset Rd.]
- Canfield, Delos Lincoln, Asst. Prof Spanish, Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y
- Cannon, Lee Edwin, Prof and Chairman Dept Mod Langs, Hiram Coll, Hiram, Ohio
- Caplan, Harry, Prof and Acting Head Classics Dept, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y. [121 Goldwin Smith Hall]
- Cappell, Edith, Instr German, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y. [1034 Van Nest Ave, Bronx, N Y C]
- Cappon, Alexander P, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Kansas City, Kansas City, Mo
- Carden, Sam P, Prof Rom Langs, Berry Coll, Mount Berry, Ga
- Cardew, Robert H, Instr Rom Langs, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Cardwell, Guy A, Jr, Asst Prof Eng, Tulane Univ, New Orleans, La
- Carey, Elisabeth, Assoc Prof Eng, Michigan State Normal Coll, Ypsilanti, Mich
- Cargill, Oscar, Assoc Prof. Eng, Washington Sq Coll, N. Y Univ, New York, N Y [593 Upper Mountain Ave, Upper Montclair, N J]
- Carlson, C Lennart, Asst Prof Eng, Colby Coll, Waterville, Me [Box 183]
- Carlson, Karl Henning, Prof Eng, Elmhurst Coll, Elmhurst, Ill
- Carlton, Ainsley M, 315 Georgetown Ave, San Mateo, Calif
- Carlton, Sylvia, Teacher, Girard Coll, Phila, Pa
- Carmichael, Katherine Kennedy, Dean of Women, Eng Teacher, Western Maryland Coll, Westminster, Md [Box 93]
- Carmody, Francis James, Assoc Prof French, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [463 Wheeler Hall]
- ❖ Carnahan, David Hobart, Prof French Emeritus, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. [808 S Lincoln Ave]
- Carnes, Hugh Byron, Prof Spanish, Tulane Univ, New Orleans, La [Gibson Hall]
- Carpenter, Frederic Ives, 120 Juniper Rd., Belmont, Mass
- Carpenter, Millington Farwell, Assoc. Prof. Eng, Univ. H S., Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa
- ❖ Carr, Muriel Bothwell, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. [Folwell Hall]
- Carrière, Joseph Médard, Assoc. Prof. Rom Langs, Univ of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va [Box 1383]
- Carrigan, Rev. Edward, S. J., Eng. Dept,

- Loyola Univ, 6525 Sheridan Rd, Chicago, Ill
- Carson, William Glasgow Bruce, Assoc Prof. Eng, Washington Univ, St Louis, Mo
- Carter, Boyd G, Acting Head Dept Rom and Classical Langs, Coe Coll, Cedar Rapids, Iowa
- Carter, William Hoyt, Jr., Mass Inst of Tech, Cambridge, Mass [123 Oxford St]
- ❖ Cary, Esther Celia Talbot, Prof French, Connecticut Coll. for Women, New London, Conn. [190 Hempstead St]
- ✉ Casady, Edwin R, Asst Prof Eng, Brown Univ, Providence, R. I (Lt, U S N R)
- Casaldauero, Joaquín, Visiting Prof Spanish, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis
- ❖ Case, Arthur Ellicott, Prof Eng, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [713 Ingle-side Ave]
- Cashin, Lillian Emmette, Prof Eng and Comp Lit, Fisk Univ, Nashville, Tenn
- Casis, Lila Mary, Prof Rom Langs, Univ. of Texas, Austin, Tex [308½ W 15 St]
- ✉ ❖ Caskey, John Homer, Prof Eng, Ohio Univ, Athens, Ohio [On leave Capt, Chemical Warfare Service, U S Army]
- Cast, Gottlob C, Prof. German, Lawrence Coll, Appleton, Wis [925 E Franklin St]
- Castellano, Juan R, Assoc Prof Rom. Langs, Vanderbilt Univ, Nashville, Tenn
- Castiglione, Salvatore Joseph, Instr Italian, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [320 W L Harkness Hall]
- Castillo, Carlos, Assoc Prof Spanish, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Castro, Américo, Prof Mod. Langs and Lits, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N. J. [143 Pat-ton Ave]
- Cattell, James L, Head Mod Lang. Dept, Purdue U, Lafayette, Ind [118 S 9th St]
- Caulfeild, Ruby van Allen, Prof Mod Foreign Langs, Mississippi State Coll. for Women, Columbus, Miss. [Box 1034]
- Cavallo, Agatha, Dean of Women, Instr. Span and French, Herzl Jr Coll, 3711 Douglas Blvd, Chicago, Ill, Ext Lect. Span, Calumet Center, Indiana U, E Chicago, Ind
- Caviness, George Lewis, Prof Mod Langs, Atlantic Union Coll, South Lancaster, Mass
- Caviness, L. L, Head Dept. Biblical and Mod Langs, Pacific Union Coll, Angwin, Calif.
- Cawley, Robert Ralston, Assoc. Prof Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N. J [180 Prospect Ave]
- Cayley, Harry Greer, Asst Prof Eng, N J State Teachers Coll, Upper Montclair, N J
- Célières, André, Asst Prof French, Boston Univ, Boston, Mass
- Cerf, Barry, Prof Lit, Reed Coll, Portland, Ore [6705 32nd Ave, S E]
- Chalmers, Gordon K, President, Kenyon Coll, Gambier, Ohio
- Chalmers, Mrs Gordon Keith, Cromwell House, Gambier, Ohio
- ❖ Chamberlin, Willis Aiden, Prof Emer Mod Langs, Denison Univ, Granville, Ohio
- Chambers, Frank McMinn, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Colorado Coll, Colorado Springs, Colo [On leave 3730 17th St, N. E., Washington, D C]
- ❖ Chandler, Frank Wadleigh, Prof Eng and Comp Lit, Dean Coll of Liberal Arts, Univ. of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio [323 Warren Ave]
- Chapman, Alfred K, Asst Prof Eng, Colby Coll, Waterville, Me [P O Box 155]
- Chapman, Coolidge Otis, Prof Eng, Coll of Puget Sound, Tacoma, Wash [3402 N 25 St]
- ❖ Charles, Arthur M, Prof German, Earlham Coll, Richmond, Ind.
- Charles, Mary Lane, Head Mod Lang Dept, Wilmington Coll, Wilmington, Ohio [46 Henley Rd, Richmond, Ind.]
- Charvat, William, Asst. Prof Eng, Washington Sq Coll, N. Y U, New York, N. Y
- ❖ Chase, Ella Adeline Busch (Mrs Charles E Chase), The Croydon Hotel, 616 Rush St, Chicago, Ill
- Chase, George Holden, Grad Asst German, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind.
- ❖ Chase, Gertrude, Prof Eng, Wells Coll, Aurora, N. Y. [16 Prescott St, Newtonville, Mass]
- Chase, Isabel Wakelin (Mrs Stephen), 3429 Oakdale Ave, Houston, Tex
- Chase, Stanley P, Prof Eng Lit. Bowdoin Coll, Brunswick, Me [254 Maine St]
- de Chasca, Edmund Villela, Wittenberg Coll, Springfield, Ohio
- ❖ Chaytor, Rev H J, Univ. Lect. French, St. Catherine's Coll, Cambridge Univ., Eng
- Chazin, Maurice, Asst Prof and Chairman Dept. Rom. Langs, Queens Coll., Flushing, N Y.

- ❖ Cheever, Louisa Sewall, Assoc Prof. Eng. Lang and Lit, Retired, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [75 Dryads Green]
- Chester, Allan Griffith, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [Bennett Hall]
- Chew, Samuel Claggett, Prof Eng Lit, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa [The Library]
- Chew, Samuel P, Jr, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla
- Cheydeur, Frederic D, Prof French, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison Wis [Bascom Hall]
- ❖ Child, Clarence Griffin, Prof Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa [Merion, Pa]
- Child, Ruth Carpenter, Instr Eng, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass
- ❖ Childs, Francis Lane, Prof Eng, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H
- Chiles, James Alburn, Prof Mod Langs, Wofford Coll, Spartanburg, S C [510 Hampton Dr]
- Chinard, Gilbert, Prof French Lit, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [93 Mercer St]
- Choquette, Charles A, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Colgate Univ, Hamilton, N Y [Preston Hill Rd]
- ✉ Chrétien, Charles Douglas, Lieut, U S. Naval Reserve, Naval Communication Service, Rm 3647, Navy Dept, Washington, D C.
- Christensen, Glenn J, Asst Prof Eng, Lehigh Univ, Bethlehem, Pa.
- Christian, Mildred Gayler, Assoc Prof Eng, H Sophie Newcomb Mem Coll, New Orleans, La [6316 Freret St]
- Christy, Arthur Edward, Instr Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N. Y [606 Philosophy Hall]
- Church, Howard Wadsworth, Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla
- Churchill, Irving Lester, Head Eng Dept, Coe Coll, Cedar Rapids, Iowa
- Ciley, Melissa A, Asst Prof Spanish, Agnes Scott Coll, Decatur, Ga.
- Cioffiari, Vincent, Rom. Langs, Hunter Coll, Evening Session, New York, N Y [66 Croton Ave., Ossining]
- Clapp, Edwin Roosa, Prof Eng, Univ of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah
- Clapp, Harold L., Assoc. Prof. Rom Langs, Grinnell Coll., Grinnell, Iowa
- Clapp, Sarah Lewis Carol, Assoc Prof Eng, Louisiana State Normal Coll, Natchitoches, La. [106 Cypress Lane]
- Clark, Donald B, Teaching Fellow Eng, Geo Washington Univ, Washington, D C [Lisner 500, G W U]
- Clark, Donald L, Assoc Prof Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [301 Business Bldg]
- Clark, Edward Murray, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla [Faculty Exchange]
- Clark, Eleanor Grace, Assoc Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, Park Ave and 68 St, New York, N Y [315 E 68 St]
- Clark, Evert Mordecai, Prof Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [University Sta]
- Clark, Harry Hayden, Prof Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [734 Seneca Pl]
- Clark, Joseph D, Prof Eng, N C. State Coll, Raleigh, N C [15 Furches St]
- Clark, M Elizabeth, Instr Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [490 Riverside Ave, Trenton, N J]
- Clark, Robert Thomas, Jr, Prof and Head Dept Germanic Langs Louisiana State Univ, University, La [On leave 263 Dwight St, New Haven, Conn]
- Clark, Roy B, Head Eng Dept, Eastern Ky State Teachers Coll, Richmond, Ky [249 Sunset Ave]
- Clark, Ruth Elvira, Assoc Prof French, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass
- Clark, William Smith, 2nd, Prof Eng, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Clarke, Dorothy C, 944 Arlington Ave, El Cerrito, Calif.
- Clarke, S Elizabeth, Assoc Prof French and Spanish, Meredith Coll, Raleigh, N. C
- Clawson, William Hall, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ Coll, Toronto, Canada
- Clements, R. J, Instr Rom Langs, Harvard Univ., Cambridge, Mass [116 Holden Green]
- Clifford, James Lowry, Asst Prof. Eng, Lehigh Univ, Bethlehem, Pa
- Clough, Wilson O., Prof. Eng., Univ. of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyo.
- Clubb, Merrel Dare, Head Eng. Dept, Okla. A and M Coll, Stillwater, Okla [507 Duck St]
- Coad, Oral Sumner, Prof. and Head Eng. Dept, N. J Coll for Women, New Brunswick, N J [House R, Douglas Campus]
- Cobb, Lillian, Prof. and Head Dept Foreign Langs, Northern Illinois State Teachers Coll, DeKalb, Ill [322 Augusta Ave]
- Coburn, Kathleen H, Lect Eng Lit, Victoria Coll, Univ. of Toronto, Toronto, Can.

- Coe, Ada May, Assoc Prof Spanish, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass
- Coenen, Frederic Edward, Asst Prof German, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C [407A E Franklin St]
- Coffin, Charles Monroe, Prof Eng, Kenyon Coll, Gambier, Ohio
- Coffin, Harrison Cadwallader, Prof Greek, Chairman Lit Div, Union Coll, Schenectady, N Y [1023 Park Ave]
- Coffin, Robert P Tristram, Pierce Prof Eng, Bowdoin Coll, Brunswick, Me [44 Harpswell St]
- ❖ Coffman, Mrs Beitha Reed, Assoc Prof German Emeritus, Simmons Coll, Boston, Mass [274 Brookline Ave]
- ❖ Coffman, George Raleigh, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Univ of N C, Chapel Hill, N C.
- Cohen, Rubin, Tutor Rom Langs, Brooklyn Coll., Brooklyn, N Y [8201 19 Ave]
- Cohn, Fritz L, Instr German, Ext Div, Univ of Calif, Berkeley, Calif [2235 Jefferson Ave]
- Cohn, Hilde D, Instr German, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa
- Coindreau, Maurice Edgar, Assoc Prof Mod Langs, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [413 1903 Hall]
- ❖ Colburn, Guy Blandin, Prof For Langs, Fresno State Coll, Fresno, Calif
- Colby, Ralph, Assoc Prof Eng, Oregon State Coll, Corvallis, Ore
- ❖ Coleman, Arthur Prudden, Lect East European Langs, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [505 Philosophy Hall]
- Coleman, Helen Mary, Prof French, Coll of St Elizabeth, Convent, N J [Box 187]
- Coleman, Rufus Arthur, Assoc Prof Eng, Montana State Univ, Missoula, Mont.
- Coleman, Sarah Embry, Prof Rom Langs, Knox Coll, Galesburg, Ill
- Coleman, William Harold, Prof Eng, Bucknell Univ, Lewisburg, Pa [133 S 13 St]
- ❖ Collier, Elizabeth Brownell, Asst Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [400 Clinton Ave, Bklyn]
- Colligan, Francis James, Cultural Relations, American Embassy, Quito, Ecuador
- ❖ Collins, Francis W, 1 Governor St, Ridgefield, Conn.
- Collins, Ralph L, Instr Eng, Indiana Univ., Bloomington, Ind
- Collins, Ralph Stokes, Assoc Prof German, Maryville Coll, Maryville, Tenn. [208 Elm St]
- Colman, Charles Wilson, Assoc French, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [212 Lincoln Hall]
- ❖ Colville, William T, Carbondale, Pa
- ❖ Colwell, William Arnold, 15 Brompton Rd, Garden City, N Y
- Combs, Homer Carroll, Instr Eng, Northwestern Univ, Univ Coll, Waid Memorial Bldg, Chicago, Ill
- ❖ Comfort, William Wistar, President Emeritus, Haverford Coll, Haverford, Pa
- ❖ Compton, Alfred D, Prof Eng, The City Coll, 17 Lexington Ave, New York, N Y
- Congleton, James Edmund, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Florida, Gainesville, Fla [Box 84 Lang Hall]
- ❖ Conklin, Clara, Prof Emeritus Rom Langs, Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb
- Conklin, George Newton, Instr Eng, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich [12850 Woodward Ave, Highland Park]
- Conklin, Paul S, Prof Eng, Hanover Coll, Hanover, Ind
- Conley, Percy Herbert, Prof Eng, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn [116 Mt Vernon St]
- Conner, Frederick William, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Florida, Gainesville, Fla [Box 2073, Univ Sta]
- Connolly, Francis Xavier, Chairman Eng Dept, Fordham Coll, New York, N Y [2979 Marion Ave]
- Connolly, Reverend Terence L, S J, Chairman Dept Eng, Boston Coll Grad School, Chestnut Hill, Mass
- Connor, Carl Yoder, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Sweet Briar Coll, Sweet Briar, Va.
- Connors, Donald Francis, Asst Prof and Head Eng Dept, School of Education, Fordham Univ, New York, N Y. [108 Lyons Rd, Scarsdale]
- ❖ Conrow, Georgiana, Asst Prof French, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Constans, Antony, Head French and Italian Dept, Birmingham-Southern Coll, Birmingham, Ala
- Coogan, Daniel Francis, Jr, Instr German, Ripon Coll, Ripon, Wis [405 Howard St]
- Coogan, Marjorie D, Instr Eng, Barnard Coll, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y. [Milbank Hall]
- Cook, Hulet H, Asst Prof French Lit, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind
- Cook, Leroy James, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H
- Cooke, Mrs. Alice Lovelace, Asst. Prof. Eng,

- Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Box 1924 Univ Sta]
- Cooke, John Daniel, Prof Eng, Univ of Southern California, Los Angeles, Calif [1136 S Dunsmuir Ave]
- Cooke, Paul John, Asst Prof Eng, Mundelein Coll, Sheridan Rd at the Lake, Chicago, Ill
- Cool, Charles Dean, Prof Spanish, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [1921 Keyes Ave]
- Cooley, Franklin DeLany, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Maryland, College Park, Me
- Coolidge, Lowell William, Asst Prof Eng, Coll of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio [625 E Univ St]
- Coon, Arthur M., Asst Prof Eng, Beloit Coll, Beloit, Wis
- Cooper, Anna Pearl, Prof Emer Eng, George Washington Univ, Washington, D C [1028 Connecticut Ave]
- ❖ Cooper, Lane, Prof Eng Lang and Lit, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y
- Copans, Simon, French Dept, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Copeland, Thomas Wellsted, Asst Prof Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [1566 Yale Sta]
- Corbató, Hermenegildo, Asst Prof Spanish, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif [2012 Manning Ave]
- Corbière, Anthony S., Prof Rom Langs, Muhlenberg Coll, Allentown, Pa [814 N 21 St]
- ❖ Corley, Ames Haven, Prof Rom Langs, Williams Coll, Williamstown, Mass [c/o Dr T E Brett, 178-21 Kildare Rd, Jamaica, N Y]
- Cornelius, Roberta Douglas, Prof Eng, Randolph-Macon Woman's Coll, Lynchburg, Va
- 📖 Cornell, Kenneth, Instr French, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [c/o Prof R T Hill, 439 Yale Sta]
- ❖ Cornelson, Charles Arthur, Washington, D C [3041 Sedgwick St, N W]
- Cornu, Donald, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash
- Cornwell, Irene, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Geo Washington Univ, Washington, D C [2126 Connecticut Ave]
- Corrier, Constantine, Jr, Grad Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [1209 Edmonds Ave, Drexel Hill]
- ❖ Corwin, Robert Nelson, Prof German, Yale Univ., New Haven, Conn. [247 St Ronan St]
- Cosentini, John Walter, Asst Prof French, St John's Univ, 75 Lewis Ave, Brooklyn, N Y [144-03 71 Ave, Flushing]
- Costanzo, Joseph B., French and Spanish, Columbia Grammar School, 5 W 93 St, New York, N Y [425 Riverside Dr]
- Cotten, Lyman A., Instr Eng, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C [Hooper Lane]
- Cottier, Hamilton, Lect Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [P O Box 209]
- Coulter, Vincil Carey, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Univ of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyo
- Courtines, Pierre, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y
- Cousins, Clarence Edwin, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [1030 E College St]
- Coutinho, Afranio, Editor, Selecoes do Reader's Digest, Prof, School of Philosophy, Bahia-Brazil [230 Park Ave, (2314), New York, N Y]
- Cowan, J Milton, Asst Prof German, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [East Hall E 124]
- Cowden, Merle Chandler, Prof German, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N Y [Box 246]
- Cowden, Roy William, Prof Eng, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Cowdrick, Ruth Elizabeth, Asst Prof French, Maryville Coll, Maryville, Tenn
- Cowie, Alexander, Asst Prof Eng, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn
- Cowley, John, 207 Everett St, New Haven, Conn
- Cowper, Frederick Augustus Grant, Prof Rom Langs, Duke Univ, Durham, N C [1017 Dacian Ave.]
- Cox, Edward Godfrey, Prof Eng, Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash
- Cox, Ernest Haynes, Dean and Prof Eng, Blue Mountain Coll, Blue Mountain, Miss
- ❖ Cox, John Harrington, Prof Emeritus Eng Philology, West Virginia Univ, Morgantown, W Va [34 Campus Driveway]
- Craig, G Armour, Instr Eng, Amherst Coll, Amherst, Mass [29 Taylor St]
- Craig, George Dundas, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [451 Wheeler Hall]
- ❖ Craig, Hardin, Visiting Prof Eng, Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C
- Craig, Horace Sydney, Jr, Instr French, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif
- Craig, J Forest, Asst Prof Eng., Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio

- Craine, C. P., Jr, Instr Eng, Univ. of Detroit, Six Mile Rd and Livernois, Detroit, Mich.
- Cramer, Maurice Browning, Lect Eng, Princeton Univ., Princeton, N J [44 Vandeventer Ave]
- Crane, Christina A., Instr French, Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore [1186 Ferry St]
- Crane, F D., Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [Univ Ext]
- Crane, Milton, Instr. Eng, Coll of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va
- Crane, Ronald Salmon, Prof Eng, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [Faculty Exchange]
- Crane, William G., Asst Prof Eng, The City Coll, Convent Ave and 139 St, New York, N Y.
- Crangle, Charles L., Instr. Eng, Saint Anselm's Coll, Manchester, N H
- Craver, Arthur William, Prof Eng, Miami Univ, Oxford, Ohio
- Crawford, Bartholow Vincent, Prof Eng, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [208 Richards St.]
- Crawford, Charlotte Elizabeth, Assoc. Prof. Eng, Dillard Univ, New Orleans, La
- Crawford, Mary Sinclair, Prof French, Dean of Women, Univ of Southern Calif, Los Angeles, Calif
- Creanza, Joseph, Assoc. Prof and Chairman Dept. Mod Langs, Central Y M C A Coll, 19 S LaSalle St, Chicago, Ill.
- Creek, Herbert LeSourd, Prof Eng, Purdue Univ, Lafayette, Ind.
- Creighton, Aileen (Mrs James A.), Corpus Christi Jr Coll, Corpus Christi, Tex
- Creighton, A J., Prof French, Loras Coll, Dubuque, Iowa [Keane Hall]
- Crighton, Lucille, Teacher Eng, Gulf Park Coll, Gulfport, Miss. [1716 East Beach]
- Crisafulli, Alessandro S., Instr Rom Langs, Catholic U. of America, Wash, D C.
- Critchett, Alice Blake, Asst. Prof French, Mt. Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass.
- Crittenden, Walter M., Asst. Prof. Eng, Temple U., Phila., Pa. [1510 N. Broad St]
- Crocker, S F., Assoc. Prof Eng, Chairman Humanities Gen. Course, West Virginia Univ, Morgantown, W. Va.
- Crofts, F. S., F. S Crofts and Co., 101 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y.
- ❖ Croll, Morris William, Prof. Eng. Lit., Princeton Univ., Princeton, N. J.
- Cromwell, Otelia, Prof. and Chairman, Dept Eng., Miner Teachers Coll., Washington, D. C. [1815 13 St., N. W.]
- Cronin, Grover J., Jr, Instr Eng, Fordham Univ, New York, N. Y
- Crooks, Esther Josephine, Prof Spanish, Goucher Coll, Baltimore, Md
- Crooks, Hélène M., Instr Rom Langs, Randolph-Macon Woman's Coll, Lynchburg, Va
- Crosby, Ruth, Assoc Prof. Eng, Univ of Maine, Orono, Me [Box 245]
- Cross, Ephraim, Asst Prof Rom Langs, The City Coll, New York, N Y [1840 Andrews Ave, Bronx]
- Cross, Wilbur Lucius, Dean Grad School, Sterling Prof Eng, Emeritus, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [24 Edgehill Rd]
- Croushore, James Henry, Grad Stud Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [87 Lake Pl]
- Crow, Charles Rohrer, Jr, Instr Eng, Univ. of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa [210 Earlham St]
- Crow, Martin Michael, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [6 Niles Rd]
- Crowder, Richard, Instr Eng, Purdue Univ, W Lafayette, Ind [Univ Hall]
- Crowley, Francis Joseph, Assoc Prof French, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif
- ❖ Crowne, Joseph Vincent, 221 S 45 St, Philadelphia, Pa
- Cru, Jean Norton, Assoc Prof French, Williams Coll, Williamstown, Mass. [Park St]
- Culhane, Eugene Kenedy, S J., Instr. French and German, Brooklyn Prep School, 1150 Carroll St, Brooklyn, N Y.
- Cumberland, Robert William, Instr Eng, The Cooper Union, Cooper Sq, New York, N. Y. [61 Hillcrest St, Great Kills, Staten Island]
- Cumming, William Patterson, Prof Eng, Davidson Coll., Davidson, N. C. [Box 327]
- Cummings, Hubertus Maurice, Prof. Eng, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- ❖ Cunliffe, John William, Prof Eng and Director Emeritus, School of Journalism, Columbia Univ., New York, N Y.
- Cunz, Dieter, Instr Mod Langs, Univ. of Maryland, College Park, Md. [P.O. Box 133]
- ❖ Curme, George Oliver, 11 Murchison Pl., White Plains, N. Y.
- Curry, Kenneth, Instr. Eng., U of Tenn, Knoxville, Tenn. [1600 Melrose St.]
- Curry, Walter Clyde, Head Eng. Dept., Vanderbilt Univ., Nashville, Tenn.
- Curtin, Frank Daniel, Asst. Prof Eng, St.

- Lawrence Univ , Canton, N Y [5 Maple St]
- ❖ Curtis, Ford E , Assoc Prof Eng , Univ of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa [507 Glen Arden Dr]
- ❖ Curtis, George Bartlett, Assoc Dean, Lehigh Univ , Bethlehem, Pa [516 Broadhead Ave.]
- Curtiss, George C , Prof Eng , Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y
- Curtiss, Joseph Toy, Asst Prof Eng , Yale Univ , New Haven, Conn [760 Yale Sta]
- ❖ Curts, Paul Holroyd, Prof German, Wesleyan Univ , Middletown, Conn
- Cuthbertson, Lulu Lee, Head For Lang Dept and Registrar, Pueblo Jr Coll, Pueblo, Colo [1832 Lake Ave]
- Cuthbertson, Stuart, Head Dept Mod Langs and Lits , Univ of Colorado, Boulder, Colo.
- Cutright (Mrs) Gladys Pennington, Prof Spanish, Beaver Coll , Jenkintown, Pa
- Cutts, Cecilia, Prof Eng , Wenatchee Jr. Coll , Wenatchee, Wash [6011 31 Ave, N E, Seattle]
- Cuyler, Rev Cornelius Mohler, S S , St Charles' Coll , Catonsville, Md
- Daggett, Malcolm Daniel, Instr and Tutor Rom Langs , Harvard Univ , Cambridge, Mass [Elhot House E-14]
- Dagley, Cynthia Ruby, Lexington, Ky [4 Richmond Ave]
- Dahl, Curtis, Grad Stud Eng , Yale Univ , New Haven, Conn [2706 Yale Sta]
- Dahl, Leif Christopher, Prof French, Westminster Coll , Fulton, Mo
- Dahlstrom, Carl E W L , Assoc Prof Eng , Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1304 Horman Court]
- Dahme, Mrs. Lena F , Asst Prof German, Hunter Coll , 68 St. and Park Ave , New York, N Y [324 W. 101 St]
- Dale, George Irving, Prof Rom Langs , Cornell Univ , Ithaca, N Y.
- Daley, Arthur Stuart, Lt , Academic Dept , The Infantry Sch , Ft. Benning, Ga.
- Dana, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Prof , Cambridge Sch of Drama, 105 Brattle St , Cambridge, Mass.
- Daniel, Robert Norman, Dean, Furman Univ , Greenville, S. C.
- Daniells, Roy, Head Dept Eng , Univ of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Canada
- Daniels, Earl, Assoc. Prof Eng , Colgate Univ , Hamilton, N Y [35 Payne St.]
- Daniels, R Balfour, Chairman Div. Cultural Arts, Univ of Houston, Houston, Tex
- ❖ Danton, George Henry, Prof German, Union Coll , Schenectady, N Y [College Grounds]
- Dantzer, L L , Univ of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky
- 🏠 Darby, George Odell Switzer, Lt , U S N R. [4703 Amherst Rd , College Park, Md]
- Darden, Frances Kirkpatrick, Instr. Eng , Tex State Coll for Women, Denton, Tex [Apt C, Palm Ct , Waco]
- Dargan, Henry McCune, Prof Eng , Dartmouth Coll , Hanover, N. H
- Davenport, William H , Asst Prof. Eng Lang and Lit , Univ of Southern Calif , Los Angeles, Calif
- Davidson, Frank, Assoc Prof Eng , Indiana Univ , Bloomington, Ind [415 Ballantine Rd]
- Davidson, Harold Matthew, Prof French, Hillsdale Coll , Hillsdale, Mich [190 Oak St]
- ❖ Davidson, Levette Jay, Prof Eng Lit , Univ of Denver, Denver, Colo
- 🏠 Davidson, Lloyd Johnston, Instr. Eng , Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Davidson, Mabel, Assoc Prof Eng , Randolph-Macon Woman's Coll , Lynchburg, Va. [879 Dearing St]
- Davis, Arthur Kyle, Jr , Prof Eng , Univ of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va [Box 1151 Univ Sta]
- Davis, Arthur L , Prof. German, Washington Coll , Chestertown, Md.
- Davis, Charles Rexford, Asst Prof Eng , Rutgers Univ , New Brunswick, N J
- Davis, Mrs Dorothea v Harjes, Chairman Mod Lang Dept , Chicago Teachers Coll , 6800 Stewart Ave , Chicago, Ill
- ❖ Davis, Edwin Bell, Prof Emer. Rom Langs , Rutgers Univ , New Brunswick, N. J [35 Huntington St]
- Davis, Harold Hess, Assoc Prof. Eng , Pomona Coll , Claremont, Calif
- ❖ Davis, Henry Campbell, Prof Eng Lang. and Rhet , Univ of S. C., Columbia, S C [1 University Campus]
- Davis, Herbert John, President, Smith Coll , Northampton, Mass
- Davis, J Cary, Assoc Prof Langs , So. Ill Normal Univ , Carbondale, Ill
- Davis, Joe Lee, Asst. Prof Eng , Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Davis, John Frank, Assoc Prof. Span , La. Poly Inst., Ruston, La.

- Davis, Marie, Instr Mod Langs, Fla State Coll for Women, Tallahassee, Fla
- ❖ Davis, Milton Cornwell, Lansdowne, Pa [63 W Plumstead Ave]
- Davis, Richard Beale, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of South Carolina, Columbia, S C [1518 Deans Lane, Kilbourne Park]
- Davis, Rose Mary, Prof Eng, Moravian Coll for Women, Bethlehem, Pa [87 W Church St]
- Davis, Ruby, Prof Eng, Earlham Coll, Richmond, Ind
- Davis, William Hawley, Prof Eng, Editor, Stanford Univ Press, Stanford Univ, Calif [686 Mayfield Ave]
- Davis, William Rees, Dean Div Letters and Arts, Prof and Head Dept, Whitman Coll, Walla Walla, Wash [116 Stanton St]
- Davison, Edward, Prof Eng, Dir Witter's Conference in Rocky Mts, Univ of Colorado, Boulder, Colo
- Dawson, Giles E., Folger Shakespeare Lib, Washington, D C
- Dawson, M Elizabeth, Instr Eng, Lindenwood Coll, St Charles, Mo
- ❖ Day, Cyrus Lawrence, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Delaware, Newark, Del
- Dean, Leonard F., Asst Prof Eng, Tulane Univ, New Orleans, La
- Dean, Ruth Josephine, Asst Prof French Lang and Lit, Dir Two-Unit Plan, Mt Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass
- DeArmond, Anna Janney, Instr Eng, Univ. of Delaware, Newark, Dela [6334 Sherwood Rd, Phila, Pa]
- Decker, Clarence R., Prof Eng, President, Univ of Kansas City, Kansas City, Mo
- Dedeck-Hery, Venceslas Louis, Asst Prof. Rom Langs, The City Coll, New York, N Y [200 Cabrin Blvd]
- Deferrari, Harry A., Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Catholic Univ of America, Washington, D C.
- De Filippis, Michele, Assoc Prof Italian, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [Faculty Club]
- De Forest, John Bellows, Assoc. Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Vermont, Burlington, Vt [327 S Prospect St]
- ❖ Degeler, Alida, Prof Mod Langs, Carroll Coll., Waukesha, Wis
- DeJongh, William Frederick Jekel, Asst Prof French, Univ of New Mexico, Albuquerque, N M
- de La Harpe, Jacqueline, Assoc Prof French, Univ of Calif, Berkeley, Calif.
- DeLand, Graydon S., Dept Mod Langs, Denison Univ, Granville, Ohio
- Delano, Lucile Kathryn, Head Dept Rom Langs, Queens Coll, Charlotte, N C
- Delattre, André B., Asst Prof French Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich
- Delattre, Pierre, Univ of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla
- De Morelos, Leonardo Calderón, Instr Mod Langs, Loyola Univ, New Orleans, La
- DeMotte, Grace, Asst Prof Eng, Oklahoma A and M Coll, Stillwater, Okla [1015 W Sixth Ave]
- Dempster, German (Mrs Arthur J.), 5757 Kenwood Ave, Chicago, Ill
- Denkinger, Emma Marshall, Assoc Prof Eng, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass [21 Eastman Circle]
- Dennis, Dorothy Warner, Assoc Prof French, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass
- Dennis, Leah Augusta, Assoc Prof Eng, Alabama Coll, Montevallo, Ala
- Deptula, Szymon St., Instr Polish and Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Ext Div, 623 W State St, Milwaukee, Wis
- Derby, J Raymond, Prof Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, O [123 W Jeffrey Pl]
- Derrick, Leland Eugene, Prof Eng, Southwest Tex State Teachers Coll, San Marcos, Tex [Box 570]
- De Vane, William Clyde, Prof Eng, Dean Yale Coll, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [87 Trumbull St]
- ❖ D'Evelyn, Charlotte, Prof Eng Lit, Mt Holyoke Coll, So Hadley, Mass
- De Vito, Anthony J., Instr Rom Langs, Catholic Univ of America, Wash, D C
- Dexter, Elise F., Asst Prof German, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y
- Dey, William Morton, Prof Rom Langs, Univ of N C, Chapel Hill, N C
- Dick, Hugh Gilchrist, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Calif At Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif [310E Royce Hall]
- Dickason, David H., Dept Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind
- Dickinson, L E., Assoc Prof Eng, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich
- Dickman, Adolphe-Jacques, Prof and Chairman Dept Mod and Classical Langs, Univ of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyo
- Dickson, Arthur, Prof Eng, The City Coll, New York, N Y [275 Central Park West]
- Dieckmann, Herbert, Asst Prof. Rom Langs, Washington Univ., St Louis, Mo. [1041 Bompert Ave., Webster Groves]

- Diekhoff, John Siemon, Asst Prof Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y
- Diez, Max, Assoc Prof German, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa
- Diggs, Alice, 3020 Auchentoroly Terrace, Baltimore, Md
- Diller, George Ellmaker, Asst Prof French, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H [3 Lary St, Norwich, Vt]
- Dillingham, Louise Bulkley, Head Mistress, Westover Sch, Middlebury, Conn
- Dillon, Myles, Prof Gaelic and Irish Hist and Lit, U of Wis, Madison, Wis
- Dinamarca, Salvador, Instr Rom Langs, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y [15 Remsen St]
- Dingus, Leonidas Reuben, Head Dept Mod Langs, Transylvania Coll, Lexington, Ky
- Dirks, Hellmut George, Prof German, Duquesne Univ, Pittsburgh, Pa [3246 Shadyway Dr, Bientwood Villa, Pittsburgh 10]
- Dismukes, William Paul, Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Miami, Coral Gables, Fla [3633 Harlan St]
- Disque, Elwood John, Instr German, Bucknell Jr Coll, Wilkes-Barre, Pa [80 Birch St]
- Ditchy, Jay K, Head French Dept, Tulane Univ, New Orleans, La
- Dix, George Evertson, Jr, Gordonsville, Va
- Dixon, Raymond Ephraim, Prof and Head Dept Eng, Virginia Military Inst Lexington, Va [406 Parade]
- Dobberfuhr, William A, Prof German, Concordia Coll, St Paul, Minn [305 N Griggs St]
- Dobbie, Elliott Van Kirk, Asst Prof Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [Philosophy Hall]
- Dodds, John Wendell, Prof Eng, Stanford Univ, Calif [450 El Escarpardo]
- Dodson, Sarah Clara, Instr Eng, Univ. of Texas, Austin, Tex [709 W 25th St]
- Dolch, Alfred Karl, Assoc Prof German, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif
- Dollard, William A S, Instr Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [1410 Wood Rd, Apt MB, Park Chester, Bronx]
- Donahue, Charles James, Asst. Prof Eng, Fordham Univ, New York, N Y [Keating Hall]
- Donald, Dorothy, Asst Prof Spanish, Monmouth Coll, Monmouth, Ill
- Donoho, William Stanton, Assoc Prof Eng, Tex State Coll for Women, Denton, Tex [Box 3835, T.S.C.W. Sta]
- Donohue, James J, Prof Eng, Loras Coll, Dubuque, Iowa [Keane Hall]
- Doran, Madeleine, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis
- Doremus, Robert Barnard, Instr Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [919 Oakland Ave]
- Dorian, Donald Clayton, Asst Prof Eng, N J Coll for Women, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N J [115 N Fourth Ave, Highland Park]
- ❖ Doty, George Lewis, Prof Rom Langs, Santa Monica Jr Coll, Santa Monica, Calif [130A Palisades Ave]
- D'Ouakil, Basile Gabriel, Chairman Mod Lang Dept, Fordham Coll, New York, N Y [505 9 St, Bklyn]
- Doubleday, Neal Frank, Instr Eng, Univ of Connecticut, Storrs, Conn [Star Route]
- Douds, John Boal, Head Eng Dept, Albright Coll, Reading, Pa [1323 N 14 St]
- Doughty, Howard N, Jr, Instr Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [39-01 44 St, Long Island City, N Y]
- Douglas, Kenneth N, Asst Instr French, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [325 William L Harkness Hall]
- Dow, Blanche Hinman, Chairman Dept Foreign Langs, N W Mo State Teachers Coll, Maryville, Mo [928 College Ave]
- ❖ Dow, Louis Henry, Tuck Prof French, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H
- Dow, Neal, Instr Rom Langs, Duke Univ, Durham, N C [Duke Univ Sta]
- Dow, Robert Bruce, Asst Prof Eng, Wash Sq Coll, N Y U, New York, N Y
- Dowlin, Cornell March, Asst Prof Eng, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [6800 N. 11 St]
- Downer, Alan Seymour, Instr. Eng, Wells Coll, Aurora, N Y
- Downes, Carl S., Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif [127 N Cliffwood Ave, W Los Angeles]
- ☞ Downs, Lenthil H, Sgt, 48th Gen Hospital, Camp Rucker, Ala
- Downs, Lynwood Gifford, Asst Prof German, U of Minn, Minneapolis, Minn
- Doyle, Henry Grattan, Prof Rom Langs, Dean Columbian Coll, George Washington Univ, Washington, D C
- ❖ Draper, John William, Prof Eng, West Virginia Univ, Morgantown, W Va
- Dreitzler, Bernita, Head Eng Dept, Findlay Coll, Findlay, Ohio
- Drennon, Herbert, Dean Grad School, Head

- Eng Dept, Miss State Coll, State Coll, Miss
- Dreps, Joseph Antone, Assoc Prof French and Span, Hastings Coll, Hastings, Neb
- Dreyfus, Norman J., S J, Asst Prof and Dir Eng Dept, St Louis Univ, St Louis, Mo
- Drumm, Francis A., Prof Eng, Holy Cross Coll., Worcester, Mass
- Drummond, Robert Rutherford, Prof German, Univ of Maine, Orono, Me
- DuBois, Arthur Edwin, Assoc Prof Eng, Duquesne Univ, Pittsburgh, Pa
- Dudley, Fred A., Prof and Head Eng Dept, Morehead State Teachers Coll, Morehead, Ky [506 College Blvd]
- ❖ Dudley, Louise, Prof Eng, Stephens Coll, Columbia, Mo
- Duffy, Charles, Asst Prof Eng, La State Univ, Baton Rouge, La [Allen Hall]
- Dufour, Alfred Emmanuel, Assoc Prof. Mod Langs, The Citadel, Charleston, S. C [The Citadel Sta]
- Dugdale, Clarence Eugene, Head Dept Langs, La State Normal Coll, Natchitoches, La [100 Cypress Ave]
- Dumas, Marie Frances, Asst Prof Eng, Univ. of Georgia, Athens, Ga [Georgian Hotel]
- Dunbar, Howard H., Instr Eng, Washington Square Coll, N. Y. U., New York, N. Y [737 East Bldg]
- Duncan, Edgar Hill, Instr Eng, Vanderbilt Univ, Nashville, Tenn
- Duncan, Maude Helen, Instr French, Temple Univ., Philadelphia, Pa
- Dunham, Gertrude Helen, Instr. German, Boston Univ P A L, Boston, Mass [27 Garrison St]
- Dunkel, Wilbur Dwight, Prof Eng, Univ of Rochester, Rochester N Y [125 Commonwealth Rd]
- Dunlap, George A., Head Eng Dept, Williamsport-Dickinson Jr Coll, Williamsport, Pa
- ✠ Dunlap, Samuel Rhodes, Lt (jg), USNR, U. S Navy Pre-Flight Sch, Iowa City, Ia [522 N Linn St]
- Dunn, Charles William, Fellow in the Humanities, Rockefeller Foundation [c/o A. D. Campbell, 51 Pinckney St., Boston, Mass]
- Dunn, Esther Cloudman, Chairman Eng. Dept, Smith Coll., Northampton, Mass. [82 Massasoit St]
- Dunn, Joseph, Prof Celtic and Portuguese Langs, Catholic Univ, Washington, D. C. [206 Park St, New Haven, Conn]
- Dunn, Thomas Franklin, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Drake Univ, Des Moines, Iowa
- ❖ Dunn, Waldo H., Prof Eng, Scripps Coll, Claremont, Calif [825 College Ave]
- Dunn, William P., Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [215 Folwell Hall]
- Durand, G. Harrison, Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, Yankton Coll, Yankton, S. D
- Dureau, Agnes Marie Emile, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio
- Durel, Lionel Charles, Head Rom Dept, Chairman French Dept, Newcomb Coll, Tulane Univ, New Orleans, La
- Durfee, Joseph, Assoc Prof and Head Dept. Eng, Davis and Elkins Coll, Elkins, W. Va
- Durham, Willard Higley, Prof Eng, U of Calif, Berkeley, Calif [610 Woodmont Ave]
- Durick, Jeremiah K., Prof Eng, St Michael's Coll, Winooski Park, Vt [305 E Allen St]
- Durling, Dwight L., Asst Prof Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N. Y [42 Bayview Terr, Manhasset, N. Y]
- Dykema, Karl Washburn, Eng Dept, Youngstown Coll, Youngstown, Ohio
- Dykes, Mattie M., Assoc Prof Eng, N. W. Mo State Teachers Coll, Maryville, Mo [611 N Buchanan]
- ❖ Dyson, Helen C., College Teacher Eng, La Crosse State Teachers Coll, La Crosse, Wis [1815 King St]
- Eagleson, Harvey, Assoc Prof Eng, Calif. Inst of Technology, Pasadena, Calif
- Eaker, J. Gordon, Prof Eng, Kans. State Teachers Coll, Pittsburg, Kans [120 W. Jackson St]
- ❖ Eastman, Clarence Willis, Prof German Lang and Lit. Amherst Coll, Amherst, Mass
- Eaton, Esther May, Head Mod Lang Dept., Garden City H. S., Garden City, N. Y [122 Stratford Ave]
- Eaton, Helen Slocomb, Linguistic Research Assoc, Internatl Aux. Lang Assn, 420 Lexington Ave, Rm. 2450, New York, N. Y
- Eaton, Horace Ainsworth, Prof. and Head Eng. Dept., Syracuse Univ, Syracuse, N. Y. [332 Ostrom Ave]

- Eaton, John Wallace, Prof German, U of Mich Ann Arbor, Mich [305 Univ Hall]
- Ebaugh, Mrs Bessie Monroe, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Houston, Houston, Tex [1910 Kirby Dr]
- Eberle, Gerald Joseph, Asst. Prof Eng, Loyola Univ, New Orleans, La
- Eby, Edwin Harold, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash
- d'Eça, Raul, Assoc Portuguese, Geo Washington Univ, Washington, D C [2700 Que St, N W]
- Eccles, Mark, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [2 Roby Rd]
- Eckelman, Ernest Otto, Prof. Germanic Langs and Lit, Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash [3042 E Laurelhurst Dr]
- Eddy, Nelson W, Asst Prof Spanish, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1117 S State]
- Edel, Marie Louise, Instr Eng Lit, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass. [6A Shepard House]
- Edelman, Nathan, Tutor French, The City Coll, New York, N Y [210 W. 107 St]
- Edgerly, Stuart, Instr Eng and Hist, Mass Inst. of Tech, Cambridge, Mass [Sudbury, Mass]
- Edward, Brother C, French Dept, Manhattan Coll, New York, N Y.
- Edwards, Aubrey C, 2nd Lieut, Army Air Corps, Advanced Bombardier Sch, San Angelo, Tex [920½ S Abe St]
- Edwards, Bateman, Head Dept. Rom Langs, Washington Univ, St Louis, Mo
- Edwards, Murray French, Prof German, Va. Mil. Inst, Lexington, Va [Box 786]
- van Eerden, Albert, Asst. Prof German, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [8 College Rd]
- Eggers, Graydon Poe, Prof Eng, Appalachian State Tchrs. Coll, Boone, N C [405 Stanbury Circle]
- ❖ Ehrensperger, Edward Charles, Head Dept. Eng, Univ of South Dakota, Vermillion, S D [304 Canby St]
- Ehrlich, Godfrey, Asst. Prof German, U. of Syracuse, Syracuse, N. Y [1318 Madison St.]
- Eichengreen, William Ambach, Grad Stud Rom Langs, Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md [Esplanade Apts, 2-C]
- Eickmann, Walter Theodore, 5306 Fairview Terr., West New York, N. J
- Eidson, John Olin, Asst Prof Eng, Univ. of Georgia, Athens, Ga [Box 778]
- Eifert, Rudolph A, Prof German, California Concordia Coll, Oakland, Calif
- Eilenberg, Jeanette Helen, Instr German, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Brooklyn, N Y [330 W 72 St, N Y C]
- Einarsson, Stefan, Assoc Prof Eng, The Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md
- ❖ Eisenlohr, Berthold August, Prof Emer. German, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio [Derby Hall]
- Elcock, Helen Elizabeth, Assoc Prof Eng., Kansas State Coll of Agri and Applied Science, Manhattan, Kans
- Elder, Lucius Walter, Prof Comp Lit, Knox Coll, Galesburg, Ill [1740 N Cherry St]
- Eldredge, Frances, Instr Eng, Connecticut Coll. for Women, New London, Conn [5608 Kenwood Ave, Chicago, Ill]
- Elias, Robert Henry, Instr Eng, Asst. Hist, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa. [3651 Walnut St]
- Eliaison, Norman E, Prof Eng, Univ. of Florida, Gainesville, Fla
- Elledge, Scott Bowen, Instr Eng, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y [316 Fall Creek Dr]
- Ellinger, Esther Parker, Baltimore, Md [12 W. 25 St]
- Elliott, Albert Pettigrew, Prof Eng, Southwestern La Inst, Lafayette, La [301 Dunreath St]
- ❖ Elliott, George Roy, Prof Eng Lit, Amherst Coll, Amherst, Mass [23 Orchard St]
- Ellis, Mrs Frances H, Asst. Prof German, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind
- Ellis, Milton, Prof and Head Dept Eng, Univ of Maine, Orono, Me
- Ellison, Lee Monroe, Dir Dept Eng, Texas State Coll for Women, Denton, Tex. [Box 2575, S C. W Sta]
- Elmqvist, Karl Erik, Asst Prof Eng, A and M Coll, College Station, Tex [On leave: P O Box 1110, Washington, D C]
- Elsasser, Albert, Asst Prof. Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [128 Broadmead]
- Elson, John James, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn.
- Embry, Joe Otis, Instr Rom Langs, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. [205½ Folwell Hall]
- Emery, Clark Mixon, Instr Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind.
- Emery, John Pike, Instr Eng, Univ. of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans. [1532 Massachusetts St.]

- ❖ Emperor, John Bernard, Prof Eng, Univ. of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn.
- Emsley, Bert, Asst Prof Speech, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Engelbarts, Rudolf, Cataloguer, Librarian, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif [1626 Malcoln Ave]
- Englekirk, John, Prof and Head Spanish Dept, Tulane Univ, New Orleans, La
- English, James Henry, Prof and Head Dept Rom Langs, Grove City Coll, Grove City, Pa [405 Woodland Ave]
- Engstrom, Alfred Garvin, Instr French, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C [11 Cobb Terrace]
- ✉ Ennis, Lambert, Asst Prof Eng, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [200 Dempster St]
- Eno, Arthur L, Treas, Société Historique Franco-Américaine, Boston, Mass [45 Merrimack St, Lowell]
- Entwistle, William James, King Alfonso XIII Prof Spanish Studies, Univ. of Oxford, Oxford, Eng [12 Fyfield Rd]
- Eoff, Sherman H, Asst Prof Spanish, Washington Univ, St Louis, Mo
- Erdman, David Vorse, Instr Eng, Olivet Coll, Olivet, Mich
- von Erhardt-Siebold, Erika (Mrs), Assoc Prof Eng, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Erhorn, Walter K G W, Instr German, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y [963 E 17 St]
- Ernst, Adolphe B., Assoc Prof German, Ext Div, U of Wis, Madison, Wis
- Ernst, Carola Leone, Prof French and Chairman French and Italian, Connecticut Coll, New London, Conn. [772 Williams St]
- Ernst, Frédéric, Prof French, N Y Univ, Washington Square Coll, New York, N Y.
- Ernst, Rudolf H, Prof Eng, Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore [1841 Sunset Dr]
- Erskine, John, 540 Park Ave, New York, N Y
- Erwin, Edward Jones, Prof Eng, Davidson Coll, Davidson, N C
- Espinosa (Capt) Aurelio Macedonio, Jr, Apt 114-21, U. S Military Acad, West Point, N Y
- Espinosa, Aurelio Macedonio, Prof and Exec. Head Rom Langs Dept, Stanford Univ, Calif
- Essa, Robert Newyia, Grad Stud Rom Langs, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [Beverly Hills Plantation, R F D 2, Box 27, Alachua, Fla]
- Esser, Robert Herman, Grad Asst German, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Estrich, Robert Mark, Asst Prof Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Etiemble, René, Asst Prof French, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [Faculty Exchange]
- Evans, Frank B, III, Instr Eng, Tulane Univ, New Orleans, La
- ✉ Evans, G Blakemore, 45 Crestview Rd, Columbus, Ohio
- Evans, M Blakemore, Prof German, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Evans, Oliver Wendell, Teaching Fellow Eng, Vanderbilt Univ, Nashville, Tenn
- ✉ Evans, Walter Bennett, Instr Hist, Grand Rapids Sr H S, Grand Rapids, Minn [c/o N K Evans, Sandstone, Minn]
- Evans, Willa M, Asst Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [501 W 113 St]
- Everett, Edward Simpson, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1421 Harpst St]
- Everett, Virginia Thornton, Asst Prof Eng, Westminster Coll, New Wilmington, Pa
- Eves, Charles Kenneth, Instr Eng, The City Coll, New York, N Y [90 Morning-side Dr]
- Evins, Samuel Carroll, Head Eng Dept, Tennessee Wesleyan Coll, Athens, Tenn
- Ewing, Boyd Ross, Jr, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Washington and Lee Univ, Lexington, Va [Box 62]
- Ewing, Majl, Asst Prof Eng, Univ. of California at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif
- Ewing, S Blaine, Jr, Asst Prof Eng, Washington and Jefferson Coll, Washington, Pa
- Eyler, Clement Manley, Dean and Prof Eng, Milligan Coll, Tenn [On military leave 3336 Mt. Pleasant St, Washington, D C]
- Facteau, Bernard Anthony, Chairman Dept Rom Langs, Coll of Mt St Vincent, New York, N Y
- Fagin, N Bryllion, Assoc Eng, Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md
- Fain, John Tyree, Jr, Asst Prof. Eng, Ala. Poly Inst, Auburn, Ala [P O Box 213]
- Fairchild, Arthur Henry Ralph, Chairman Dept Eng, Univ of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [10 Glenwood Ave, South]
- Fairchild, Hoxie Neale, Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y. [464 Riverside Dr]
- Fairfield, Erle, Prof. Mod. Langs, Univ of

- Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa. [1023 E End Ave, Wilksburg, Pa]
- Fales, Frederick Faxon, Asst Prof Rom Langs, New York Univ, Univ. Hgts, New York, N Y
- Falk, Robert Paul, Instr Eng, Mich State Coll, E Lansing, Mich
- Falls, William Franklin, Prof French, Univ of Maryland, College Park, Md
- Famads, Jose, Prof Portuguese, Instituto Britannia and Colegio Pedro II, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, S A [404 W 115 St, New York, N Y]
- Faries, Randolph, 2d, Instr Eng, The City Coll, 23rd St and Lexington Ave, New York, N Y
- ❖ Farley, Frank Edgar, Prof Eng Lit, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn
- ❖ Farley, Malcolm Fisk [Address Unknown]
- Farné, George Dormer, Instr Rom Langs, Lehigh Univ, Bethlehem, Pa. [28 Coppée Hall]
- Farnham, Willard Edward, Prof Eng, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif
- ❖ Farnsworth, W O, Kensington, Md.
- ❖ Farr, Hollon Augustine, Assoc. Prof Emer German, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [16 Prospect St, Athol, Mass]
- Farrison, W Edward, Eng Dept, North Carolina Coll, Durham, N C.
- du Faur, Curt von Faber, Lect German, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [72 Sparks St]
- ❖ Faurot, Albert A, 649 Poplar St, Terre Haute, Ind
- ❖ Faust, Albert Bernhardt, Prof Emeritus German, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y [125 Kelvin Pl]
- Faust, Clarence H, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago, Ill. [Faculty Exchange]
- Faust, George Patterson, Instr. Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. [1203 Brooklyn Ave]
- Faverty, Frederic Everett, Assoc Prof Eng, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [1423 Judson Ave]
- Favreau, Alphonse Roland, Instr French, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1015 Church St]
- Fawcett, John H, Shipfitter, Moore Dry Dock Co, Oakland, Calif [1186 Glen Ave, Berkeley]
- Fay, Ehot G, Asst. Prof. Mod Langs, The Citadel, Charleston, S. C.
- Fay, Mary M, Assoc Prof. Rom Langs, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [115 E 92 St]
- Fay, Percival Bradshaw, Prof French, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [955 Mendocino Ave]
- Fehlau, Uland E, Instr German, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Fehling, Fred Louis, Assoc German, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [101 Schaeffer Hall]
- ❖ Feise, Ernst, Prof German, The Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md
- Fellheimer, Jeannette, 460 Humphrey St, New Haven, Conn
- Fellows, Otis Edward, Instr French, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Felps, Mrs Selety Catherine, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [2806 Austin]
- Fenton, Doris, Prof Eng, Beaver Coll, Jenkintown, Pa [621 Westview St, Mt. Airy, Phila]
- Feraru, Leon, Prof Rom Langs, Long Island Univ, Bklyn, N Y [154 President St, Lynbrook]
- Ferguson, John De Lancey, Prof Eng, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio [2869 Scarborough Rd]
- Fermaud, Jacques Albert, Instr Rom Langs, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [225 Folwell Hall]
- Fernberg, Babeth G, Grad Stud Comp Lit, Stanford Univ, Calif [143 Churchill Ave, Palo Alto]
- Ferrando, Guido, Chairman Italian Dept., Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Ferrell, Harrison Herbert, Prof German, West Virginia State Coll, Institute, W Va.
- Ferrin, Dana Holman, Vice-President, D Appleton-Century Co, Inc, 35 W 32 St, New York, N Y
- Fess, Gilbert Malcolm, Assoc Prof French, Univ of Missouri, Columbia, Mo. [1714 Wilson Ave]
- Feuillerat, Albert, Prof French Lit, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn
- Fichter, William L, Prof Spanish, Brown Univ, Providence, R I
- ❖ Ficke, Herman Styles, Prof Eng, Dubuque Univ, Dubuque, Iowa
- Ficken, Hilbert Theodore, Prof Mod Langs, Baldwin-Wallace Coll, Berea, Ohio [28 Thrd Ave]
- Fiedler, H G, Prof Emer German, Univ of Oxford, Oxford, Eng [The Lane House, Norham Rd]
- Fiedler, Leslie A, Instr Eng, Montana

- State Univ, Missoula, Mont [On leave:
903 16 St, Boulder, Colo]
- Fiertz, Mrs Gertrude Barnes, 42 Gaynor
Ave, Manhasset, L I, N Y
- ❖ Fife, Robert Herndon, Gebhard Prof.
Germ Langs and Lits, Columbia Univ,
New York, N Y.
- Filipowicz, Rev Wenceslaus J, Instr Polish,
St Mary's Coll, Orchard Lake, Mich
- Finch, David, Instr French, Columbus Univ
Jr. Coll, Washington, D C. [238 Maryland Ave, N E]
- ❖ Fine, Janet B, Teacher Eng, The Hart-ridge Sch, Plainfield, N. J [Bryn Mawr, Pa]
- Fineman, Hayim, Prof Eng, Temple Univ,
Phila, Pa
- Fink, Z S, Assoc. Prof Eng, Northwestern
Univ, Evanston, Ill [2735 Prairie Ave]
- Finney, Claude Lee, Prof Eng, Vanderbilt
Univ, Nashville, Tenn. [Golf Club Lane]
- Finney, Mrs Gretchen Ludke, 52 Ward Ave,
Northampton, Mass.
- Firor, Ruth A, Instr Eng, Evening Session,
Hunter Coll, New York, N Y
- Firth, John Loxley, Instr, Phillips Acad, Andover, Mass [Eaton Cottage, Phillips
Acad]
- Fisher, J Randolph, Chairman Div. Langs and Lits., Allen Univ, Columbia, S C
- Fisher, John H, Asst. Instr Eng, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [627 S 49 St]
- Fisher, Mrs Margaret T, Asst Prof Eng,
Butler Univ, Indianapolis, Ind
- ❖ Fiske, Christabel Forsyth, Prof. Emeritus
Eng, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y [72
S. Hamilton St]
- Fiske, Henry Metcalf, Head Mod Lang
Dept Emeritus, St. Paul's Sch, Concord,
N H [Hanover, Mass]
- Fitch, Girdler B, Prof and Head Dept Mod.
Langs, The Citadel, Charleston, S C.
- Fitts, Dudley, Phillips Acad, Andover, Mass
- ❖ Fitz-Gerald, John Driscoll, Prof Rom
Philology and Head Spanish Dept, Univ. of Arizona, Tucson, Ariz.
- FitzGerald, Susan, The Chapin Sch, Ltd.,
100 E End Ave, New York, N. Y [314 W.
92 St]
- Fitzhugh, Robert Tyson, Asst. Prof Eng,
Univ. of Maryland, College Park, Md [408
Montgomery St., Laurel]
- ❖ Fitz-Hugh, Thomas, Prof Latin, Univ of Virginia, University, Va
- Fivian, Euch A, Teaching Fellow German,
Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [40
Huron Ave]
- Flanagan, John Theodore, Asst Prof Eng,
Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn
[201 Woodlawn, St Paul]
- ❖ Flaxman, Seymour L, 100 Bennett Ave,
New York, N Y
- Fleischhauer, Wolfgang, Instr German, Ohio
State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Fleisher, David, Tutor Eng, The City Coll,
New York, N Y [180 Coburn Blvd]
- Fleissner, O S, Prof German, Wells Coll,
Aurora-on-Cayuga, N Y
- Fletcher, Baylis John, Prof Eng, Arkansas
A and M Coll, Monticello, Ark
- ❖ Fletcher, Edward Garland, Adjunct Prof,
Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [149
Concord St, Portland, Me]
- ❖ Fletcher, Jefferson Butler, Prof Comp
Lit, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y.
- Flng, Wentworth Dresser, Asst Prof Rom
Langs, Dir Phonetics Lab, Hamilton
Coll, Clinton, N Y.
- Flint, Frank Cudworth, Prof Eng, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H [4 W Wheelock St]
- Flitcroft, John Ehret, Head Eng Dept, Carroll Coll, Waukesha, Wis [214 E College
Ave]
- ❖ Flom, George T, Prof Emer Scand
Langs and Eng Phil, Univ of Illinois,
Urbana, Ill [P O Box 1886, Ft Myers, Fla]
- Flygt, Sten Gunnar, Instr German, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Flynn, S. Edward, 1 Dexter Rd, Wellesley, Mass
- Flynn, Rev Vincent Joseph, Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, Coll of St. Thomas, St
Paul, Minn
- Foelber, Elmer E, Prof Eng, Concordia
Coll, Fort Wayne, Ind [5 Central Dr.,
Concordia Coll]
- Foerster, Donald M., Eng Dept., The Citadel, Charleston, S C
- Foerster, Norman, Prof. Eng and Director
Sch of Letters, Univ. of Iowa, Iowa City,
Iowa [421 Woolf Ave]
- ❖ Fogg, Wendell Frederick, Teacher Eng,
Rindge Technical School, Cambridge,
Mass. [12 Madison St]
- ❖ Fogle, Stephen Francis, Asst Eng, Univ. of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. [204 Lincoln Hall]
- Foladare, Joseph, Assoc Prof Eng, Santa Barbara State Coll, Santa Barbara, Calif.
[722 S. Lake Ave, Pasadena]

- Foley, Louis, Prof Eng, Western State Teachers Coll, Kalamazoo, Mich. [1830 Oakland Dr]
- ✠ Forchheimer, Paul, 3500 Devonshire Dr, Baltimore, Md
- Ford, E Lee, Head Mod Lang. Dept, Centenary Coll, Shreveport, La [3202 Alexander St]
- ❖ Ford, J D M, Prof French and Spanish Langs., Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [9 Riedesel Ave]
- deFord, Sara Whitcraft, Instr Eng, Barnard Coll, New York, N Y
- Fore, Harry Franklin, Eng Dept, Univ of Omaha, Omaha, Neb
- Forest, H Ubald, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [The College]
- Forward, Kenneth, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb
- Foster, Charles Howell, Instr Eng, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [310 S Governor St]
- Foster, Dorothy, Prof Eng Lang and Lit, Mt Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass
- Foster, Edward, Instr Eng, Univ of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, Ala
- Foster, Finley Melville Kendall, Oviatt Prof Eng, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio
- ❖ Foster, Frances Allen, Prof Eng, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Foster, Genevieve W, Instr Eng, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa [417 Oak Lane, Wayne]
- Foster, James Ralph, Assoc. Prof Eng, Long Island Univ, Brooklyn, N Y [11 Rockwood Ave, Baldwin]
- Foster, Margaret, Instr Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Foulet, Alfred, Res Assoc Mod Langs, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N. J. [345 Nassau St]
- Fowler, Agnes, Asst Prof French, Miami Univ, Oxford, Ohio [15 S Main St]
- Fowlie, Wallace Adams, Asst Prof French, Yale Univ., New Haven, Conn [1248 Yale Sta]
- Fox, Paul, Lect Polish Lang and Lit, Northwestern Univ., Chicago, Ill [3221 W Diversey Ave]
- Frame, Donald Murdoch, Instr French, Columbia Univ., New York, N Y. [619 W. 113 St]
- Frampton, Mendal G., Prof Eng Lang., Pomona Coll, Claremont, Calif [927 Harvard Ave]
- Franchère, Hoyt C, Instr Eng, Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore [2 Friendly Hall]
- Francis, Mary Laura, Delmar, Del
- Francis, William Alvah, Dir Dept Eng, Texas Coll of Arts and Industries, Kingsville, Tex [Box 1322]
- Francis, W Nelson, Asst Prof Eng, Franklin and Marshall Coll, Lancaster, Pa [634 Race Ave]
- Francon, Marcel, Assoc Prof French, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [176 Widener Lib]
- ✠ Frank, Charles E, SP-47, Breezy Point, U S Naval Air Sta, Norfolk, Va.
- ❖ Frank, Grace (Mrs Tenney Frank), Non-resident Prof Old French Philology, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa [110 Elmhurst Rd, Roland Park, Baltimore, Md]
- Frank, John G, Asst Prof, Vanderbilt Univ, Nashville, Tenn
- Frankle, Eleanor, German Teacher, Mt Vernon Night School, Mt Vernon, N Y [8 E 4 St]
- Frantz, Adolf Ingram, Head Dept German, Bucknell Univ, Lewisburg, Pa [College Park]
- Frantz, Ray William, Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb. [2414 Calumet Ct]
- Fraser, Ian Forbes, Dir, Maison Française, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [215 M South Hall]
- Frauchiger, Fritz, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Univ of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla [Faculty Exchange]
- Frazier, Allegra, Prof Eng, Univ of Arizona, Tucson, Ariz
- Frederick, Anthony, S M, Assoc Prof Eng, St Mary's Univ, San Antonio, Tex
- Fredrick, Edna Caroline, Women's Coll, Univ of Delaware, Newark, Del
- Freed, Lewis, Instr Eng, Purdue Univ, West Lafayette, Ind [Univ Hall]
- Freeman, Maxwell M, Instr Eng, Milwaukee State Teachers Coll, Milwaukee, Wis. [2725 N Stowell Ave]
- Freeman, Stephen A, Prof and Dean French Sch, Middlebury Coll, Middlebury, Vt
- Freiday, George William, Jr, Head French Dept., Groton School, Groton, Mass [Hundred House, Groton School]
- Freienmuth von Helms, E E, Instr Germanics, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [Box 34, Wrightstown, Pa]

- Frein, Pierie Joseph, Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash [4317 15th Ave, N E]
- French, George Franklin, Instr French, Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass [Hidden Field]
- French, J Milton, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N J
- French, Reginald Foster, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Amherst Coll, Amherst, Mass
- French, Robert Dudley, Prof Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [1931 Yale Sta]
- French, Walter Hoyt, Asst Prof Eng, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y.
- Frenz, Horst, Instr Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [501 E University]
- Frescoln, Wilson Lysle, Asst Instr Rom Langs, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [R 3, Media]
- Freund, Max, Prof German, Rice Inst, Houston, Tex [2217 Bolsover Road]
- Frey, John R, Assoc German, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [215 Lincoln Hall]
- Frey, John William, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Presbyterian Coll, Clinton, S C
- Friederich, Werner P, Asst Prof German and Comp Lit, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C
- Friedl, Berthold C, 519 W 121 St, New York, N Y
- Friedlaender, Marc, Assoc Prof Eng, Womans Coll of Univ of N C, Greensboro, N C
- Friedland, Louis S, Editor, Scholars' Facsimiles and Reprints, 103 Park Ave, New York, N Y [452 Riverside Dr]
- Friedlander, Edgar, Hotel Broadway, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Friedman, Arthur, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Friedman, Rose L (Mrs S), Chairman Dept. Spanish, Tilden Tech H S, Chicago, Ill [4710 Drexel Blvd]
- Friend, Albert C, Instr Eng., The City Coll, 23 St. and Lexington Ave, New York, N Y [757 Madison Ave]
- Frierson, William C, Box 2013, University, Ala
- ❖ Fries, Charles Carpenter, Prof Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [2121 Wal-lingford Rd]
- Frohock, Wilbur M, Instr French, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [216 South Hall]
- Frost, George Loring, Prof Eng, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H. [Box 551]
- Frotscher, Lydia E, Prof and Head German Dept, H Sophie Newcomb Coll, New Orleans, La
- Fuchs, Edward A H, Prof German, Centre Coll, Danville, Ky
- Fucilla, Joseph G, Prof Rom Langs, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Fullington, James F, Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Funk, Charles Earle, Editor, New Standard Dictionaries, Funk and Wagnalls Co, 354 Fourth Ave, New York, N Y
- Funke, Erich, Prof and Head German Dept, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa
- Funnell, George Banks, Assoc. Prof French, Amherst Coll, Amherst, Mass [86 College St]
- Furnas, Philip William, Head Eng Dept, Guilford Coll, Guilford Coll, N C
- Furness, Clifton Joseph, Supervisor Academic Studies, New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, Mass [128 Lakeview Ave, Cambridge]
- Gaede, William R, Prof German, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y [1011 E 37 St]
- Gafford, Lucile, Instr Humanities, Wilson Jr Coll, Chicago, Ill [5605 Dorchester Ave]
- Gagey, Edmond McAdoo, Dept Eng, Bradford Jr Coll, Bradford, Mass [329 S Main St]
- Gaines, William Judson, Head Dept Rom Langs, U of Richmond, Richmond, Va.
- Gaiss, Aloysius Joseph, Asst Prof German, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1306 Kensington Dr]
- Gallacher, Stuart A, Instr German, Michigan State Coll, E Lansing, Mich [349 Univ Dr]
- Gallagher, Maurice, Instr Romanics, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [301 CH, U. of Pa., 34th and Woodland Ave]
- Galland, Joseph Stanislaus, Prof. Rom Langs, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Gallardo, José Miguel, Commissioner of Education, San Juan, P R
- Galway, Margaret, Asst Lect Eng, West-field Coll., Hampstead, London, N. W. 3, Eng
- Gamer, Helena M, Instr. Germanics, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Gamper, Anna Frieda, Prof. German, Mac-

- Murray Coll, Jacksonville, Ill [832 E State St]
- Gardiner, Rev. Harold C, S J, Literary Editor "America," 329 W 108 St, New York, N Y
- Gardner, Elizabeth Frances, 20 E 68 St, New York, N Y
- Gardner, Emelyn Elizabeth, Prof Eng, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich [4746 Second Blvd]
- Gardner, May Prof Rom Langs and Lits, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans [1200 Mississippi St]
- Gardner, William Bradford, Instr Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Lubbock Army Fly Sch, Lubbock, Tex]
- Gartland, Edith M, Prof Mod Langs, Teachers Coll of City of Boston, Huntington Ave, Boston 17, Mass [9 Merlin St, Dorchester Center]
- Gary, Franklin, Asst Prof Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [14 Alexander St]
- Gassner, John, Lect, Eng Depts of Hunter and Bryn Mawr Colls, Head Play Dept, Theatre Guild, N Y C [129 Dahill Rd, Bklyn]
- Gatch, Katherine Haynes, Asst Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [90 Morningside Dr]
- Gates, Clifford E, Prof German, Colgate Univ, Hamilton, N Y
- Gates, Eunice Joiner (Mrs W Bryan Gates), Asst Prof Spanish, Texas Technological Coll, Lubbock, Tex
- Gates, William Bryan, Prof Eng, Tex Tech Coll, Lubbock, Tex
- Gaudin, Albert, Instr Rom Langs, The City Coll, New York, N Y [184 Columbia Hgts, Bklyn]
- Gaudin, Mrs Lois S, Instr Rom Langs, Brooklyn Coll, Bklyn, N Y [184 Columbia Hgts]
- Gauss, Christian, Prof Mod Langs, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J
- Gaw, Allison, Prof Eng Lang and Lit, Univ of Southern Calif, Los Angeles, Calif [1924 N Las Palmas Ave]
- Geary (Rev) James A, Asst. Prof Celtic Langs, Catholic Univ of America, Washington, D C
- ❖ Geddes, James, Jr, Prof Emer Rom Langs, Boston Univ, Boston, Mass [39 Fairmount St, Brookline]
- Gee, John Archer, Assoc Prof Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [Clark Rd, Woodbridge]
- Geen, Elizabeth, Asst Prof Eng, Mills Coll, Oakland, Calif
- Gegenheimer, Albert Frank, Instr. Eng, Univ of Arizona, Tucson, Ariz
- Geismar, Arthur, Asst Prof German, Washington Sq Coll, N Y U, New York, N Y [72 Barrow St]
- Geissendoerfer, John Theodore, Assoc Prof German, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [223 Lincoln Hall]
- Geinehardt, Laurence Edwin, Asst Prof German, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn ["Arawana," Middletown]
- Genschmer, Fred, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Rose Polytechnic Inst, Terre Haute, Ind
- Genzmer, George Harvey, Assoc Eng, Bard Coll, Annandale-on-Hudson, N Y
- George, Albert J, 845 Ackerman Ave, Syracuse, N Y
- Gerald, Brother H, St Mary's Coll, Winoona, Minn
- Gergely, Emro J, Prof Eng, Coll of Chestnut Hill, Chestnut Hill, Phila, Pa.
- Gerhard, Melitta, 742 Yale Ave, University City, Mo
- ❖ Gerig, John Lawrence, Prof Celtic, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Germann, Edward H, Instr French, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N J [Box 95, Univ P O]
- ❖ Gerould, Gordon Hall, Prof Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [119 Fitz Randolph Rd]
- Gerriettes, John S, Instr Eng, Loyola Univ, Chicago, Ill [7228 S Park Ave]
- Gettmann, Royal A, Eng Dept, Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [216a Andrews Hall]
- Giamatti, Valentine, Asst. Prof and Chairman Dept Italian, Mt Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass [29 Silver St]
- Gianturco, Elho, 2844 Wisconsin Ave, Washington, D C
- Gibbs, Lincoln Robinson, Prof Eng, Antioch Coll, Yellow Springs, Ohio
- Gibbs, Paul T, Dept Eng, Washington Missionary Coll, Takoma Park, Md
- Gibson, Byron Hall, Head Dept Langs, Union Coll, Barbourville, Ky
- Gibson, Daniel Zachary, Asst Prof Eng, The Citadel, Charleston, S C
- ✉ Gibson, Delbert L, Lieut (jg), U S N.R [3900 4th St, Arlington, Va]
- Gibson, Evan K, Head Eng Dept, Seattle Pacific Coll, Seattle, Wash.

- Gibson, Martha Jane, Prof Eng, Talladega Coll, Talladega, Ala
- Giddings, Joseph Addison, Asst Prof Eng, South Dakota State Coll, Brookings, S. D [106 The Library]
- ❖ Giffin, Mary Elizabeth, Prof Eng, Lake Erie Coll, Painesville, Ohio
- Gifford, George Hussey, Prof Rom Langs, Tufts Coll, Tufts College, Mass [Box 52]
- ❖ Gilbert, Allan H, Prof Eng, Duke Univ, Durham, N. C. [516 Carolina Circle]
- Gilbert, Donald Monroe Prof Mod Langs, Albion Coll, Albion, Mich [506 N Superior St]
- Gilbert, Dorothy Lloyd, Asst Prof Eng, Guilford Coll, Guilford Coll, N. C.
- Gildersleeve, Virginia Crocheron, Dean Barnard Coll and Prof Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N. Y.
- Gill, Erma M, Asst. Prof Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [706½ W 23 St]
- ❖ Gillet, Joseph Eugene, Prof Spanish, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa
- Gilligan, Arthur Chew, Prof Rom Langs, Bowdoin Coll, Brunswick, Me [7A McKean St]
- Gilman, Margaret, Assoc Prof. French, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa
- 🏠 Gilman, Wilbur E, c/o Frank A Gilman, 127 Glen Ave, Amsterdam, N. Y.
- Gist, Margaret A, Eng. Teacher, Haddonfield H. S., Haddonfield, N. J [415 S. Van Pelt St, Phila, Pa]
- Gladding, Everett B, Apt 301, 3921 Pennsylvania Ave, S. E, Washington, D. C.
- Glascok, Clyde Chew, Prof Rom Langs, Univ. of Texas, Austin, Tex
- Glasgow, Ellen, Author, 1 W Main St, Richmond, Va.
- Glazier, Lyle Edward, 11 Irving St, West Medford, Mass
- Glenn, Sidney Erwin, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. [1008 W. Church St, Champaign]
- Gnudi, Martha Teach (Mrs Dante), 1372 Riverside Dr, New York, N. Y.
- ❖ Goddard, Eunice Rathbone, Assoc Prof. French, Goucher Coll, Baltimore, Md [Calvert Court Apts., Calvert and Thirty-first Sts]
- ❖ Goddard, Harold Clarke, Prof Eng, Swarthmore Coll, Swarthmore, Pa.
- Gode-von-Aesch, Alexander G. F, Asst Dir. Linguistic Research, Internatl Aux. Lang. Assn., New York, N. Y [410 E. 5 St, Mt. Vernon]
- Goedsche, Curt Rudolf, Asst Prof German, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [Fisk Hall 207]
- Goggio, Charles, Assoc. Prof Rom Langs, Univ. of Washington, Seattle Wash
- Goggio, Emilio, Prof Italian and Spanish, Univ of Toronto, Toronto, Ont
- ❖ Gohdes, Clarence L. F, Prof Eng, Duke Univ, Durham, N. C. [College Sta]
- Goldberg, Maxwell Henry, Asst Prof Eng, Massachusetts State Coll, Amherst, Mass [Old Chapel]
- 🏠 ❖ Goldman, Marcus Selden, Asst Prof Eng, U. of Ill, Urbana, Ill [230 W Michigan Ave]
- Golson, Eva Olivia, Asst Prof Eng, Alabama Coll, Montevallo, Ala
- Gonon, Isabelle Lawrence (Mrs Maurice), [Address Unknown]
- Goodale, Ralph Hinsdale, Prof Eng Lit, Hiram Coll, Hiram, Ohio
- Goodchild, Donald, Secy Grants in Aid, Amer. Council of Learned Societies, 1219 Sixteenth St, N. W, Wash, D. C.
- Goodloe, Jane Faulkner, Prof German, Goucher Coll, Baltimore, Md
- Goodman, Theodore, Assoc Prof Eng, The City Coll, New York, N. Y [20 W 84 St]
- Gordon, James D, 1530 East Upsal St, Philadelphia, Pa
- Gordan, John Dozier, Jr, Curator of the Berg Collection, N. Y Public Lib, 5th Ave at 42 St., New York, N. Y.
- Gordon, Lewis Hall, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Hamilton Coll, Clinton, N. Y.
- Gordon, Robert Kay, Prof Eng, Univ of Alberta, Edmonton, Canada
- Gordon, T. Agnes, Instr. Mod Langs and Lits., Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [State House Sta, Box 79]
- ❖ Gorman, Frank Thorpe, Princeton, N. J [142 Hodge Rd]
- Gorr, Adolph C, Instr German, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [110 York St, Camden, N. J]
- Gorrell, Robert M, Eng. Dept, Indiana Univ., Bloomington, Ind.
- Gorse, William John, Prof Mod. Langs, Syracuse Univ, Syracuse, N. Y [703 Livingston Ave]
- Gosser, Leo, Prof. Eng, Alabama Poly. Inst, Auburn, Ala
- Gottfried, Rudolf B., Instr. Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind
- ❖ Gould, Chester Nathan, Assoc Prof. Emer. German and Scand Lits., Univ. of

- Chicago, Chicago, Ill [Star Route, Box 23, W Palm Beach, Fla]
- Gove, Philip Babcock, Lt, U S N R, FARU, Fleet Air Wing 14, c/o Fleet Postmaster, San Diego, Calif
- Grabo, Carl H, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Grace, William J, Eng Dept, Fordham Univ, 233 Broadway, New York, N Y
- Graebel, Frederick John, Instr German, Coll of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio
- Graf, Otto Gotthold, Instr German, U of Mich, Ann Arbor, Mich [1339 White St]
- Graham, James W., Assoc. Dean and Prof. Eng, Pennsylvania Mili Coll, Chester, Pa
- Graham, Paul Gerald, Assoc Prof German, Smith College, Northampton, Mass. [5 Munroe St]
- Graham, Walter James, Prof Eng, Univ of Ill, Urbana, Ill [1208 W California St]
- Grammer, James Moses, Prof Eng, State Teachers Coll, Farmville, Va [Box 152]
- Grant, Jason Clifton, Jr, Assoc Prof Eng, Howard Univ, Washington, D C [1245 Jackson St, N E]
- Grael, George E, Asst Prof Eng, John Carroll Univ, Cleveland, Ohio [6006 Pear Ave]
- Gravely, William H, Jr, Instr Eng, U of Maryland, College Park, Md [4512 Hartwick Rd]
- Gravit, Francis West, Instr. Rom. Langs, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [Romance Languages Bldg]
- ❖ Gray, Charles Henry, Prof Emeritus Eng, Tufts Coll, Mass. [The Fairfax, 43rd and Locust Sts, W Phila, Pa]
- Gray, Clarence Jones, Instr Rom Langs, Queens Coll, 65-30 Kissena Blvd, Flushing, N Y [52 Roosevelt St, Garden City, L I]
- Gray, Philip Hayward, Jr, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [The Highlands, Route 2]
- ❖ Graydon, Joseph S, Attorney at Law, Cincinnati, Ohio [1616 Union Trust Bldg]
- Green, Andrew J., Instr Eng, La State Univ, Baton Rouge, La [2858 Morning Glory, Univ Gardens]
- Green, Boylston, Asst Prof Eng, Middlebury Coll, Middlebury, Vt. [105 S Main St.]
- Green, Herman J, Teacher For. Langs, Wm H. Taft H. S., New York, N. Y [730 Ft. Washington Ave]
- Green, Otis Howard, Prof. Rom Langs, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [Coll Hall]
- Green, Ruth N, 11717 Seelers Ave, Cleveland, Ohio
- Greene, Edward M, Prof and Head French Dept, Univ of S D, Vermillion, S D. [323 Lewis St]
- Greene, Ernest Roy, Prof Rom Langs, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H
- Greene, Guy Shepard, Prof Eng and Head Dept Eng and Speech, Iowa State Coll, Ames, Iowa [18 Beardshear Hall]
- Greene, Richard Leighton, Chairman Eng. Dept, Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y.
- Greenewald, Father Gerard M, Eng Dept, St Fidelis Seminary, Herman, Pa
- Greer, Clayton Alvis, Instr Eng, Texas A and M Coll, College Station, Tex [Box 31, Faculty Exchange]
- Greer, Louise, Route 1, Abingdon, Va
- Greet, William Cabell, Assoc Prof Eng, Barnard Coll, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Greever, Garland Gustavus, Prof Eng Lang and Lit, Univ of Southern Calif, Los Angeles, Calif [4132 Creed Ave]
- Gregg, Kate L, Prof Eng, Lindenwood Coll, St Charles, Mo
- Gregory, Brother, F S C, Instr Latin, De La Salle Inst, 160 W. 74 St, New York, N Y
- Grevenig, Gustave Valentin, Dir Dept Mod Langs, St Louis Univ, St. Louis, Mo
- Grew, James H, Instr French, Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass
- Grey, Lennox B, Prof Eng, Teachers Coll, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Griffin, Philip Philip, Lect Journalism, U of Calif, Berkeley, Calif [2701 Virginia St]
- Griffin, Wm J, State Teachers Coll, St. Cloud, Minn [612 Fifth Ave, S]
- Griffith, Barbara Jean, The Judson, 53 Washington Sq So, New York, N. Y
- Griffith, D D, Head Eng Dept., Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash
- ❖ Griffith, Helen, Prof. Eng, Mt Holyoke Coll, So Hadley, Mass [Woodbridge Terr.]
- Griffith, Reginald Harvey, Prof Eng, Univ. of Texas, Austin, Tex.
- Grigaut, Paul LeRoy, Assoc Prof Langs., Univ of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H.
- Griggs, Earl Leshe, Prof Eng., Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa
- Griggs, Marion Thurston, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Pennsylvania Coll for Women, Pittsburgh, Pa

- Grimes, Evie Margaret, Prof. French, Elmira Coll., Elmira, N. Y.
- Grimm, Charles, Assoc. Prof. Rom. Langs., Williams Coll., Williamstown, Mass.
- ❖ Grimm, Karl Josef, Prof. German Lang. and Lit., Gettysburg Coll., Gettysburg, Pa.
- ❖ Griscom, Acton, 135 79 St., North Bergen, N. J.
- Grismer, Raymond Leonard, Assoc. Prof. Rom. Langs., Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. [1401 E. River Rd.]
- Groben, Margaret Louise, Asst. Prof. German, H. Sophie Newcomb Memorial Coll., New Orleans, La.
- von Gronicka, André, Instr. German, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago, Ill. [6034 Stony Island]
- Groves, Owen G., Prof. Eng., Adelphi Coll., Garden City, N. Y.
- Grubb, Gerald Giles, Adjunct Prof. Eng., Univ. of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C. [207 Wateree Ave.]
- Grubbs, Henry Alexander, Asst. Prof. French, Princeton Univ., Princeton, N. J. [8 College Rd.]
- Grube, Frank W., Head Dept. Langs. and Lits., Iowa Wesleyan Coll., Mt. Pleasant, Iowa [c/o P. E. O. Memorial Lib., Iowa Wesleyan Coll.]
- Grueneberg, Elsa, Assoc. Prof. Mod. Langs., Park Coll., Parkville, Mo.
- Gruwell, Sallie Marvin (Mrs. Tom A.), Instr. Eng., Tulsa Central H. S., Tulsa, Okla. [1108 S. Rockford Ave.]
- Gudde, Edwin G., Assoc. Prof. German, Univ. of California, Berkeley, Calif.
- Guédenet, Pierre, Instr. French, Mt. Holyoke Coll., South Hadley, Mass.
- Guelich (Mis.) Ernestine Dewes, Instr. German, Hunter Coll., New York, N. Y. [860 Riverside Dr.]
- Guérard, Albert Joseph, Instr. Eng., Harvard Univ., Cambridge, Mass. [41 Bowdoin St.]
- Guérard, Albert Léon, Prof. General and Comp. Lit., Stanford Univ., Calif. [42 W. 58 St., N. Y. C.]
- Guest, Boyd, Asst. Prof. Eng., Mo. School of Mines, Rolla, Mo.
- Guillén, Jorge, Visiting Prof. Spanish, Wellesley Coll., Wellesley, Mass. [201 Weston Rd.]
- Guilloton, Vincent, Prof. French, Smith Coll., Northampton, Mass.
- Guinn, John A., Head Eng. Dept., Schreiner Inst., Kerrville, Tex.
- Guinotte, Marguerite, Asst. Prof. Rom. Langs., Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. [217 Harvard St., S. E.]
- Guiton, Jean W., Assoc. Prof. French, Bryn Mawr Coll., Bryn Mawr, Pa.
- Gulick, Sidney Lewis, Jr., Assoc. Prof. Eng., Mills Coll., Calif.
- Gullette, Cameron Charles, Assoc. Prof. French, Univ. of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. [228 Lincoln Hall]
- ❖ Gulliver, Harold Strong, Prof. Eng., Georgia State Woman's Coll., Valdosta, Ga.
- Gunvaldsen, Kaare Martin, Lect. Mod. Langs., Ontario Agric. Coll., Guelph, Ont., Canada.
- Gustafson, Alrik, Asst. Prof. Scand., Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn.
- Gustafson, Walter William, Prof. Eng., Upsala Coll., East Orange, N. J.
- ❖ Guyer, Foster Erwin, Prof. French, Dartmouth Coll., Hanover, N. H.
- Gwynn, Stanley Edward, Asst. Reference Librarian, Newberry Lib., Chicago, Ill. [60 W. Walton St.]
- Haden, Ernest F., Prof. French, McMaster Univ., Hamilton, Ont., Canada.
- Hadley, Frances Willard, Prof. Eng., Milwaukee-Downer Coll., Milwaukee, Wis.
- Hafkesbrink, Hanna, Prof. German, Connecticut Coll., New London, Conn.
- Hagboldt, Peter, Prof. Emer. German, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago, Ill. [5451 Woodlawn Ave., Hyde Park Sta.]
- Hagemann, Hans Heinrich, Asst. Prof. German, Univ. of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan.
- Hagen, Sivert N., Head Eng. Dept., Franklin and Marshall Coll., Lancaster, Pa.
- Hager, Frank L., Prof. Mod. Langs., Central Coll., Fayette, Mo. [204 Spring St.]
- Hagge, Carl W., Instr. German, Univ. of Calif. at Los Angeles, Calif.
- Hagstotz, Hilda B. (Mis. G. D.), Asst. Prof. Eng., Union Coll., Lincoln, Neb. [5108 Prescott]
- Hagstrum, Jean Howard, Instr. Eng., Northwestern Univ., Evanston, Ill. [4321 Halley Terr., S. E., Washington, D. C.]
- Haight, Gordon Sherman, Asst. Prof. Eng., Yale Univ., New Haven, Conn. [R. F. D. 1, Seymour, Conn.]
- Haines, Lewis Francis, Instr. Eng. Lang. and Lit., Univ. of Florida, Gainesville, Fla. [205 Language Hall]
- Hale, Charles Brockway, Prof. and Chairman, Dept. Eng., Univ. of Maryland, College Park, Md.

- Hale, Will Tahaferro, Prof. Eng, Indiana Univ., Bloomington, Ind [North Fee Lane]
- Hall, Amy Violet, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash [304 Engineering Hall]
- Hall, Florence, Thornton Township H S and Jr Coll, Harvey, Ill [On leave 1661 Crescent Pl, Washington, D C]
- Hall, Robert A, Jr, Asst Prof Italian, Brown U, Providence, R I [477 Hope St]
- Hall, Vernon, Jr, Instr. Eng, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H
- Haller, Wilham, Prof Eng, Barnard Coll, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Hallne, Allan G, Asst Prof Eng, Bucknell Univ, Lewisburg, Pa
- Halpert, Herbert Norman, Univ Fellow Eng and Folklore, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [819 W First St]
- Halstead, Frank G, Signal Corps, AUS [c/o Alderman Lib, U. of Va, Charlottesville, Va]
- Halvorson, Nelius O, Assoc Prof Eng, Iowa State Teachers Coll, Cedar Falls, Iowa
- Ham, Edward Billings, Asst Prof French, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Ham, Roscoe James, Prof German, Bowdoin Coll, Brunswick, Me
- Ham, Roswell Gray, President, Mt Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass
- Hamilton, Arthur, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [1109 W California Ave]
- Hamilton, C C, Asst Prof Eng, Michigan State Coll, E Lansing, Mich
- Hamilton, Lieut Daniel Lee, U S N R, Dept. For Langs, U S Naval Acad, Annapolis, Md [1102 Van Buren St, R F D 3]
- Hamilton, Harlan Ware, Assoc. Prof Eng, Univ of Akron, Akron, Ohio
- Hamilton, John Allen, 204 Wooster St, Marietta, Ohio
- Hamilton, Mrs Marie Padgett, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Arizona, Tucson, Ariz. [728 N. Cherry Ave.]
- ❖ Hamilton, Theodore Ely, Asst. Prof Rom Langs, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Hamm, Victor Michael, Assoc Prof Eng, Marquette Univ, Milwaukee, Wis. [3948 N. Stowell Ave]
- Hammond, Geraldine Elizabeth, Asst Prof Eng, Univ. of Wichita, Wichita, Kan [1602 N Holyoke]
- Hammond, Lansing Van der Heyden, Instr. Eng., Yale Univ., New Haven, Conn [1248 Yale Sta]
- Hand, F Elizabeth, Eng Teacher, Manasquan H S, Manasquan, N J [4 N Main St]
- Hand, Thomas J, 24 Willow St, Brooklyn, N Y
- Hand, Wayland D, Asst Prof German, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif [340-C Royce Hall]
- Handley, Flora Marie, Instr Eng, Southern Methodist Univ, Dallas, Tex
- Haney, John B, Assoc Prof German, Hofstra Coll, Hempstead, L I, N Y, [162 Hamilton Rd]
- ❖ Haney, John Louis, President and Prof Eng Philology, Central H S, Phila, Pa [6419 Woodbine Ave, Overbrook]
- Hanford, James Holly, Grad Prof Eng, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio
- Hangen, Eva C, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Wichita, Wichita, Kans [1843 N Lorraine]
- Hanhardt, Arthur Monroe, Asst Prof German, Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y. [749 Highland Ave]
- Hankins, Everett Morrison, Instr. Eng, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich
- Hankins, John Erskine, Prof. Eng, U of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans [805 Tenn St]
- Hanley, Evelyn Alice, Eng Dept, Hunter Coll, 695 Park Ave, New York, N Y. [82-64 170 St, Jamaica]
- ❖ Hanley, Miles, L, Prof Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [803 State St]
- Hannay, Neilson Campbell, Prof and Head Eng. Dept, Boston Univ, School of Religious Education, Boston, Mass [55 Horace Rd, Belmont]
- Hanson, Blair (Miss), Instr French and Spanish, Allegheny Coll, Meadville, Pa.
- ❖ Hanssen, Selby, 46th Gen Hospital, Ft Riley, Kans
- Harbage, Alfred Bennett, Prof Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa.
- Hard, Frederick, Prof Eng, Dean, Newcomb Coll, Tulane Univ, New Orleans, La.
- Hardaway, Richard Travis, Asst Prof. German, Queens Coll, Flushing, N. Y
- Hardison, Aura D, Instr. French, Univ. of Southern Calif, Los Angeles, Calif
- Harlan, Mrs Aurelia Brooks, Grad Stud Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y. [509 W. 121 St]
- Harlan, J. Lee, Jr, Grad. Stud. Eng, Colum-

- bia Univ, New York, N Y [509 W 121 St]
- ❖ Harlan, Mabel Margaret, Assoc Prof Spanish, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [804½ E 8th St]
- Harland, Frances Marguerite, Instr, Monmouth Jr Coll, Long Branch, N J [237 Norwood Ave]
- Harmon, Alice I, 1116 Fifth Ave S, Bozeman, Mont
- Harn, Edith Muriel, Prof German and Spanish, Agnes Scott Coll, Decatur, Ga.
- ❖ Harper, George McLean, Prof Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J, [36 Mercer St.]
- Harper, Queen Cox, Assoc Prof Eng, Kansas State Teachers Coll, Emporia, Kans [114 Neosho St]
- Harris, Alexander Logan, Prof Mod Langs and Lits, Hobart and William Smith Coll, Geneva, N Y
- Harris, Brice, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [40 Gregory Hall]
- ❖ Harris, Charles, Prof Ementus German, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio [2466 Kenilworth Rd, Cleveland Heights]
- Harris, Jesse W, Asst Prof Eng, So Ill Normal Univ, Carbondale, Ill
- Harris, Julia H, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Meredith Coll, Raleigh, N C
- Harris, Julian Earle, Assoc Prof French, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [Bascom Hall]
- Harris, Lynn H, Eng Dept, Stephen Coll, Columbia, Mo [1319 Anthony St]
- Harris, Paul Hyland, Dir New Florentine Collection, 65 Mt Auburn St, #5, Cambridge, Mass
- Harrison, Benjamin S, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Redlands, Redlands, Calif [1011 E Colton Ave]
- ❖ Harrison, John Smith, Prof and Head Dept. Eng, Butler Univ, Indianapolis, Ind [347 N Audubon Rd]
- Harrison, Joseph B, Prof Eng., Univ. of Washington, Seattle, Wash.
- Harrison, Thomas Perrin, Jr, Prof. Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Univ Sta]
- Harrold, Charles Frederick, Prof Eng, Michigan State Normal Coll, Ypsilanti, Mich [302 W Forest Ave]
- Harry, Philip Warner, Prof Rom. Langs, Franklin and Marshall Coll, Lancaster, Pa.
- ❖ Hart, Charles William, 2nd Lt., U S. Army [625 Lexington Pl, N E, Washington, D C]
- Hart, James David, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Calif, Berkeley, Calif [On leave 117 Prince St, Alexandria, Va]
- Hart, Mildred, Asst Prof Rom, Mather Coll, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio
- Hart, Walter Morris, Prof Eng, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [1401 LeRoy Ave]
- ❖ Hartley, Lt Lodwick C, Lt, USNR, O in C, Office of Naval Officer Procurement, N C State Coll, Raleigh, N C
- Hartman, Herbert Wadler, Jr, Assoc Prof Eng, Bowdoin Coll, Brunswick, Me [17 Belmont St]
- ❖ Hartmann, Alexander P, Asst Prof French and German, Univ of South Dakota, Vermillion, S D [323 N Pine St]
- Hartstall, Paul K, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [18 Schaeffer Hall]
- Hartzell, Carl, Asst Prof French, Franklin and Marshall Coll, Lancaster, Pa
- Harvey, S Wilcox, Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, Suffolk Univ., Boston, Mass [116 Tappan St, Brookline]
- Harvey, Mrs Sara King, Prof Eng., State Teachers Coll, Terre Haute, Ind [607½ S Center St]
- Harvitt, Helene, Assoc Prof Rom Langs., Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y. [1309 Carroll St]
- Harwood, Sprigg, Instr Eng, Southwestern Univ., Georgetown, Tex.
- Hassell, J. Woodrow, Jr, Virginia Poly Inst, Blacksburg, Va
- Hassold, Ernest C, Head Eng Dept, Liberal Arts Coll, Univ. of Louisville, Louisville, Ky. [Belknap Campus]
- Hastings, A. Louise, Instr and Research Worker, Eng, Indiana Univ., Bloomington, Ind
- Hastings, George Everett, Prof. Eng, Univ of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark. [210 W. Maple St]
- ❖ Hastings, Harry Worthington, Prof Eng, N Y State Coll. for Teachers, Albany, N. Y.
- Hastings, Hester, Adjunct Prof. Rom Langs., Randolph-Macon Woman's Coll, Lynchburg, Va.
- Hastings, Walter Scott, Prof Mod Langs, Princeton Univ., Princeton, N. J., [17 Sprngdale Rd]

- ❖ Hastings, William Thomson, Prof. Eng ,
Brown Univ , Providence, R I
- Hatcher, Anna Granville, Instr French,
Johns Hopkins Univ , Baltimore, Md
[1208 Bolton St]
- Hatcher, Harlan H , Prof Eng , Ohio State
Univ , Columbus, Ohio
- Hatfield, Henry C , Instr German, Williams
Coll , Williamstown, Mass [20 Hoxsey St]
- ❖ Hatfield, James Taft, Prof German Lang and Lit , Northwestern Univ , Evanston, Ill [1704 Hinman Ave]
- Hatfield, W Wilbur, Head Eng Dept , Chicago Teachers Coll , Chicago, Ill [211 W.
68 St]
- Hathaway, Baxter, Instr Eng , Montana
State Univ . Missoula, Mont [W Greenough Park, Route 2]
- Hathaway, Lillie Vinal, Asst Prof , German,
Hunter Coll , New York, N Y [404 Riverside Dr]
- Hatzfeld, Helmut A , Prof Rom. Langs ,
Catholic Univ , Washington, D C [4020
8 St., N E]
- Hauch, Edward F , Prof German Lang and Lit , Hamilton Coll , Clinton, N Y
- Haug, Ralph A , Instr Eng , Inst of Tech ,
Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn
[1857 Carroll Ave , St Paul]
- Haugen, Einar, Dept Scand Langs , Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [109 Bascom Hall]
- ❖ Havens, George R , Prof Rom Langs ,
Ohio State Univ , Columbus, Ohio
- Havens, Paul Swain, The President's House,
Wilson Coll , Chambersburg, Pa.
- ❖ Havens, Raymond Dexter, Prof. Eng ,
Johns Hopkins Univ , Baltimore, Md
- Haviland, Thomas P , Assoc Prof Eng , U. of Pennsylvania, Phila , Pa [Coll Hall]
- Hawk, Grace Ethel, Assoc Prof Eng Lit ,
Wellesley Coll , Wellesley, Mass [Fiske
House]
- Hawkes, James MacLellan, Faculty Instr.
and Tutor German, Harvard Univ , Cambridge, Mass. [Lowell F-22]
- Hawthorne, Manning, Instr. Eng , Univ of Maine, Orono, Me. [345 Stevens Hall]
- Hay, Fanny A , Head Eng Dept , Adrian
Coll , Adrian, Mich.
- ❖ Hayakawa, S. Ichiyé, Asst. Prof Eng ,
Illinois Inst of Tech , Chicago, Ill. [3300
Federal St]
- Haydn, Hiram Collins, II, Asst. Prof Eng ,
Woman's Coll. of Univ. of N. C., Greensboro, N. C. [1322 Madison Ave]
- Hayes, Albert McHarg, Asst Prof Eng ,
Bowling Green State U , Bowling Green, O
- Hayes, Francis Clement, Chairman Dept
For Langs , Guilford Coll , N C
- Hayes, George Passmore, Head Eng Dept ,
Agnes Scott Coll , Decatur, Ga
- Hayes, James J , Eng Dept , Oklahoma City
Univ , Oklahoma City, Okla
- Hazen, Allen Tracy, 62 E 87 St , New York, N Y.
- Heaton, Harry Clifton, Prof Rom Langs ,
N Y U , New York, N Y [Univ Hgts]
- Heffner, Hubert Crouze, Prof Dramatic Lit and Head Speech and Drama Dept , Stanford Univ , Calif
- Heffner, Roe-Mernill Secrist, Prof German, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [Bascom Hall]
- Hegeman, Daniel VanBrunt, Asst Prof
German, U of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky
- Heidbrink, Frederick Henry, Asst Dean and Assoc Prof Eng , Northwestern Univ ,
Evanston, Ill [3211 Thayer St]
- Heidler, Joseph Bunn, Prof Eng , Ohio
Univ , Athens, Ohio [76 Morris Ave]
- Heilman, Robert Bechtold, Asst Prof Eng ,
Louisiana State Univ , Baton Rouge, La
[2153 Lawndale Ave]
- Heinle, Otto L , Instr German, Univ Coll.,
Northwestern Univ , Chicago Campus,
Chicago, Ill [4105 N LcClaire Ave]
- Held, Colbert Colgate, Head and Instr
Speech Dept , Tarkio Coll , Tarkio, Mo
- Held, McDonald Watkins, Dept. Speech,
Miami Univ , Oxford, Ohio
- Heller, Edmund Kurt, Asst Prof German,
Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [403
Wheeler Hall]
- Hellersberg-Wendrimer, Anna (Mrs), Prof.
German, Manhattanville Coll , New York,
N Y.
- Helman, Mrs Edith Fishtine, Asst. Prof
Spanish, Simmons Coll , Boston, Mass [2
Autumn St]
- Helming, Vernon Parker, Asst Prof. Eng ,
Mass State Coll , Amherst, Mass [22 Hal-lock St]
- Heltzel, Virgil Barney, Prof. Eng., Northwestern Univ , Evanston, Ill.
- Hemelt, Francis Joseph, Assoc. Prof Eng.
Lang. and Lit , Catholic Univ of Amer,
‡ Washington, D C [340 Decatur St , N W.]
- Heminger, Laura E , Instr. Eng , Michigan
State Coll , E Lansing, Mich.
- Hemingway, Samuel Burdett, Prof. Eng ,
Yale Univ , New Haven, Conn.

- Hemminghaus, Edgar H., Instr. German, Hunter Coll., New York, N. Y. [701 West End Ave.]
- Hench, Atcheson L., Prof. Eng., Univ. of Virginia, University, Va.
- Hendricks, Walter, Prof. Eng., Head Dept. Lang. and Lit., Ill. Inst. of Tech., 3300 Federal St., Chicago, Ill.
- Hendrickson, Dean White, Asst. Prof. Eng., Western Maryland Coll., Westminster, Md. [37 Ridge Rd.]
- Hendrickson, Marion Vaux, Asst. Prof. Italian and French, Wheaton Coll., Norton, Mass. [435 W. 119 St., New York, N. Y.]
- Hendrix, Lance J., Prof. Eng., State Teachers Coll., Jacksonville, Ala.
- Hendrix, William Samuel, Chairman Dept. Rom. Langs., Ohio State Univ., Columbus, Ohio [423 W. Ninth Ave.]
- Henel, Heinrich, Prof. and Head German Dept., Queen's Univ., Kingston, Ont., Canada [148 Lower Albert St.]
- Henneberger, Olive, Eng. Dept., Brooklyn Coll., Bklyn., N. Y. [120 Kenilworth Pl.]
- Henry, Mellinger Edward, Retired Eng. Teacher, Dickinson H. S., Jersey City, N. J. [942 Edgewater Ave., Ridgefield]
- Henshaw, Millett, Assoc. Prof. Eng., St. Louis Univ., 221 N. Grand Blvd., St. Louis, Mo.
- Heras, Antonio, Prof. Spanish, Univ. of Southern Calif., Los Angeles, Calif. [618 W. 46 St.]
- Herbert, Thomas Walter, Adjunct Prof. Eng., Univ. of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C.
- Hermannsson, Halldor, Prof. Scandinavian Langs. and Lits., Cornell Univ., Ithaca, N. Y. [The Library]
- Herold, Amos Lee, 500 Riverside Dr., New York, N. Y.
- Herold, Rev. George, Prof. Eng. Lit., Providence Coll., Providence, R. I.
- Herr, Alan Fager, Instr. Eng., Tex. Tech. Coll., Lubbock, Tex. [2024 17 St.]
- Herrick, Marvin Theodore, Assoc. Prof. Eng., Univ. of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.
- Herrick, Raymond Morse, Prof. Eng., Union Coll., Schenectady, N. Y. [1003 Nott St.]
- Herriott, J. Homer, Chairman Dept. Spanish and Portuguese, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis. [Bascom Hall]
- Herrmann, Alfred, Asst. Prof. German, Brown Univ., Providence, R. I.
- Herron, Ima Honaker, Assoc. Prof. Eng., Southern Methodist Univ., Dallas, Tex. [3001 Univ. Blvd.]
- ❖ Hespelt, Ernest Herman, Prof. Spanish, Washington Sq. Coll., N. Y. U., New York, N. Y. [2226 Loring Pl.]
- Hess, John Ambrose, Prof. German, Ohio Univ., Athens, Ohio [45 Grosvenor St.]
- Hesse, Alfred William, Instr. Eng., Ellis Coll., Newtown Square, Pa.
- Hesse, Everett Wesley, Instr. Spanish and Portuguese, U. of Wis., Madison, Wis.
- ❖ Heuser, Frederick W. J., Prof. Germ. Langs. and Lits. and Director of Deutsches Haus, Columbia Univ., New York, N. Y. [423 W. 117th St.]
- ❖ Hewett-Thayer, Harvey Waterman, Prof. Mod. Langs., Princeton Univ., Princeton, N. J. [3 Evelyn Pl.]
- Hewitt, Frank L., Prof. and Head Eng. Dept., Robert Coll., Bebek P. K. 8, Istanbul, Turkey
- Hewitt, Theodore Brown, Prof. and Head Dept. German, Univ. of Buffalo, Buffalo, N. Y.
- Hewlett, James Howell, Prof. Eng., Centie Coll., Danville, Ky.
- Hiatt, Lulu Blanche, Prof. Rom. Langs., Union Coll., Lincoln, Neb. [On leave 508 W. 9th Ave., Winfield, Kans.]
- Hickerson, William Howard, Prof. Eng., Lake Erie Coll., Painesville, Ohio [115 Levan Dr.]
- Hicks, Arthur C., Chairman Eng. Dept., Western Wash. Coll. of Education, Bellingham, Wash.
- Hicks, John, Asst. Prof. Eng., Miami Univ., Oxford, Ohio [18 E. Vine]
- Hilberry, Clarence Beverly, Asst. Prof. Eng., Wayne Univ., Detroit, Mich. [424 W. Lewiston, Ferndale]
- Hilborn, Harry Warren, Prof. Rom. Langs., Acadia Univ., Wolfville, Nova Scotia, Canada [P. O. Box 10]
- Hildebran, Kathryn Belle, Assoc. Prof. and Chairman Dept. Mod. Langs., Western Maryland Coll., Westminster, Md.
- Hilen, Andrew R., Fellow Eng., Univ. of Washington, Seattle, Wash. [Box 24 Par-rington Hall]
- ✉ Hill, Archibald Anderson, c/o Jack Dalton, Ref. Librn., Alderman Lib., University, Va.
- Hill, Edith Abigail, Prof. Rom. Langs., Univ. of Redlands, Redlands, Calif. [14 Clifton Court]
- Hill, Edwin Arthur, Jr., Grad. Stud. Eng.,

- Columbia Univ, New York, N. Y [50 W 67 St]
- Hill, Eldon Cleon, Asst Prof Eng, Miami Univ, Oxford, Ohio [26 E Vine St]
- Hill, Grace Annie, Prof and Head French Dept, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich
- ❖ Hill, John M, Prof Spanish, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind.
- Hill, L Alfreda, Assoc Prof French, Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y [402 Anderson Hall]
- Hill, Mrs Mary A, Prof and Head Dept Eng, Northern Arizona State Teachers Coll, Flagstaff, Ariz [108 W Aspen St]
- ❖ Hill, Raymond Thompson, Assoc Prof French, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [439 Calhoun Coll]
- Hill, Rowland Merlin, Asst Prof Eng, The Citadel, Charleston, S C
- Hillebrand, Harold N, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [1005 W California St]
- ❖ Hilles, Frederick Whiley, Assoc Prof Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn. [1922 Yale Sta]
- Hillhouse, James T, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn
- Hilton, George Robert, Instr For Langs, Univ of Connecticut, Storrs, Conn
- Hilton, Ronald, Assoc Prof. Rom Langs, Stanford Univ, Calif
- Hilzheimer, Klaus, Head Drama Dept, Asheville Coll, Asheville, N C
- Hinchliff, Emerson, Instr Spanish, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y [708 Stewart Ave]
- Hinkle, George Henry, Asst Prof Eng, San Francisco State Coll, San Francisco, Calif. [123 Buena Vista Ave]
- Hintz, Howard W., Asst Prof Eng, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y.
- Hirsch, Hans E, Head Mod. Lang Dept, Prof. Hist., Elon Coll, Elon Coll, N C. [Box 336]
- Hoard, Seth Weeks, Instr Italian and Spanish, N Y. Inst for Education of Blind, New York, N Y. [999 Pelham Pkway]
- Hocking, Elton, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Hocking, George D, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Kenyon Coll, Gambier, Ohio
- ❖ Hodges, John Cunyus, Prof Eng, U of Tenn, Knoxville, Tenn [1908 White Ave]
- Hofacker, Erich, Assoc Prof German, Washington Univ, St Louis, Mo.
- von Hofe, Harold, Instr German, Univ of Southern Calif, Los Angeles, Calif
- Hoffherr, Fred G, Assoc Prof and Chairman French Dept, Barnard Coll, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Hoffsten, Ernest Godfrey, Prof Eng, Harris Teachers Coll, St Louis, Mo [17 West Swan Ave, Webster Groves]
- Hofrichter, Ruth J, Assoc Prof German, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Hogrefe, Pearl, Assoc Prof Eng, Ia State Coll, Ames, Ia [18 Beardshear Hall]
- ❖ Hohlfeld, Alexander R, Prof Emer German, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [1911 Vilas Ave]
- Holbrook, Newton D, III, Instr German, Univ of Delaware, Newark, Del [56 Sunset Rd]
- Hole, Allen D, Jr, Westtown School, Westtown, Pa
- ❖ Hollander, Lee M, Prof Germ Langs, U of Tex, Austin, Tex [3204 West Ave]
- Holloway, Emory, Prof Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y [1013 E 26 St, Bklyn]
- Holloway, Owen Ernest, Asst Lect Eng Lit, Fuad I Univ, Giza-Orman, Cairo, Egypt
- ❖ Hollowell, Bennet M, Prof Eng, Bradley Poly Inst, Peoria, Ill [216 Cooper St]
- Holmes, Charles S, Instr Eng, Pomona Coll, Claremont, Calif
- Holmes, Frederick William, Assoc. Prof Eng, Northeastern Univ, Boston, Mass [43 Lincoln St, Dedham]
- Holmes, Henry Alfred, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, The City Coll, New York, N Y. [460 Riverside Dr]
- Holmes, Stewart Walker, 59 Ripley St, Newton Centre, Mass
- Holmes, Urban Tigner, Jr, Principal Research Technician, Office of Strategic Services, 415 Winder Bldg (Dept of State, Wash, D C)
- Holske, Alan, Asst Prof German, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [210 Folwell Hall]
- Holst, Edward Demin, Instr Eng, Univ of Wisconsin Ext, Milwaukee, Wis [2534 N First St]
- Holt, Lee Elbert, Instr Eng, Union Coll, Schenectady, N Y [1057 Univ Pl]
- ❖ Holzkecht, Karl J, Assoc Prof. Eng, Wash Sq Coll., N Y U., New York, N Y.
- Holzmann, Albert William, Assoc. Prof German, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N. J.

- Hood, Thurman Losson, Assoc. Prof. Eng, Trinity Coll, Hartford, Conn
- Hooker, Edward Niles, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif [400 S Saltair Ave, Village Sta, Los Angeles]
- Hooker, K W., Instr Eng, Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y [291 Barrington St]
- ten Hoor, George John, Asst Prof Germanics, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- ❖ Hoover, Marjorie L (Mrs Andrew G), Asst Prof German, Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio [110 W. College St]
- Hoover, Meile M., Instr Eng, Columbia U, New York, N Y [50 Morningside Dr]
- Hopkins, Annette Brown, Prof Eng, Goucher Coll, Baltimore, Md
- Hopkins, Edwin Mortimer, Prof Eng, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans [1234 Mississippi St]
- Hopkins, Joseph Gerard Edward, Assoc Prof Eng, Coll of Notre Dame of Staten Island, Staten Island, N Y [152 67 St, Bklyn]
- Hopper, Vincent Foster, Asst Prof General Lit, School of Commerce, N Y. Univ, Wash Sq Coll, New York, N Y
- Horgan, Gertrude Marie, Instr Eng, Fontbonne Coll, St Louis, Mo [325 N Newstead]
- Horn, Robert Dewey, Assoc Prof Eng Lit, Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore [1825 Fairmount Blvd]
- Hornbeak, Katherine Gee, Assoc Prof Eng, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [Martha Wilson House]
- Hornberger, Theodore, Prof. Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex. [Box 1570, Univ Sta]
- Horne, Mark Daniel, Asst Prof. Eng, Loyola Univ, New Orleans, La [336 Hillary St]
- Horner, George Frederick, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C
- Hornstein, Lillian Herlands (Mrs George D), Instr. Eng, Washington Sq Coll., N Y. U, New York, N. Y [355 Riverside Dr, Apt 15W]
- Horsfield, Margaret B, Asst Prof. Rom Langs, Univ of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky
- Horton, Rod W, Instr Eng, N Y Univ, Univ Hgts, New York, N. Y.
- Hotchner, Cecilia Audrey, Instr. Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [903 Lincoln Pl, Bklyn]
- Hotson, Clarence Paul, Instr Eng, Norwich U, Northfield, Vt. [32 Union St]
- ❖ Hotson, J. Leslie, Prof. Eng., Haverford Coll, Haverford, Pa. [Eccleston, Md]
- Houck, Margaret, Asst. Prof Eng, Chico State Coll, Chico, Calif [783 E 8 St]
- Houghton, A A, Jr, Wye Plantation, Queenstown, Md
- Houk, Raymond A, 3781 Oliver St, N W, Washington, D C
- ❖ House, Ralph Emerson, Prof Spanish, U of Iowa, Iowa City, Ia [619 Brown St]
- ❖ Houston, Frances Hundley (Mrs Wilmer Willis), The Charlton, 902 Greenway Court, Norfolk, Va
- Houston, Percy H, Prof Eng, Occidental Coll, Los Angeles, Calif
- Houston, W, Head Latin, Asst Eng, Valley Forge Mil Academy, Wayne Pa [12 Caroline St, Ogdensburg, N Y]
- Houtchens, Lawrence II, Eng Dept, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [125 Lincoln Hall]
- Hovey, Alma Burnham, Assoc Eng, State Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [314 N Dubuque St]
- Hoving, Howard, Grad Stud Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N. Y. [83 Midland Ave, Wallington, N J]
- Howard, Averett, Instr Eng, Geo Wash Univ, Washington, D C [1 Scott Circle]
- Howard, Edwin Johnston, Prof Eng, Miami Univ, Oxford, Ohio [220 E Vine St]
- 🏠 Howard, Hubert Coleman, Instr Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Howard, Leon, Assoc. Prof Eng, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [1220 Elmwood Ave]
- ❖ Howard, William Guild, Prof Emer German, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [5 Cragie Circle]
- Howe, E Barton, 9 Judson St, Canton, N Y
- Howe, Howard C, 508 Madison St, Waukegan, Ill.
- Howell, Almonte Charles, Prof Eng, Univ. of N. C, Chapel Hill, N C [Box 363]
- Howell, Beatrice, Instr. Spanish, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass. [29 Dover Rd.]
- Howgate, George Washburne, Prof Eng, Wilmington Coll, Wilmington, Ohio [330 Douglass St]
- Hubbell, Jay Broadus, Prof Eng, Duke Univ., Durham, N C.
- Hubert, Merton Jerome, Prof. Rom. Langs, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Hubler, Edward Lorenzo, Assoc Prof Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N. J. [44 Vandeventer Ave]
- Hudson, Arthur Palmer, Prof. Eng, Univ. of N. C., Chapel Hill, N. C.

- Hudson, Hoyt Hopewell, Stanford Univ, Calif
- Hufman, Dorothy M, 3218 55 St, Woodside, L I, N Y
- Huganir, Kathryn, c/o Tex Tech. Coll, Lubbock, Tex
- Hughes, Arthur Howard, Dean of Coll, Asst Prof German, Trinity Coll, Hartford, Conn
- Hughes, Helen Sard, Prof Eng Lit, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass
- Hughes, Merritt Y, 150 N Prospect Ave, Madison, Wis.
- Hughes, Muriel J, Eng Dept, Univ of Vermont, Burlington, Vt
- Hughey, Ruth Willard, Asst Prof Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Hulbert, James Root, Prof Eng, U of Chicago, Chicago, Ill. [82 Fac Exch]
- Hulbert, Mary Vernam, Assoc Prof Emer Rom Langs, Skidmore Coll, Saratoga Springs, N. Y. [129 Circular St]
- Hull, Vernam Edward, Asst Prof Eng, N. Y. Univ, New York, N. Y.
- Hultzén, Lee S, Assoc Prof. Speech, Univ of Missouri, Columbia, Mo
- Hume, Robert A, Instr Eng., Purdue Univ, Lafayette, Ind
- Humphreys, Wilbert Ray, Prof Eng, U of Mich, Ann Arbor, Mich [2220 Angell Hall]
- Hunt, Theodore Brainerd, Prof. Eng Lang, Lafayette Coll, Easton, Pa
- Hunter, Edwin Ray, Head Eng. Dept, Maryville Coll, Maryville, Tenn [Maple Lane]
- Huntington, Christopher, St James, L. I., N. Y.
- Hunton, William Alphaeus, Asst Prof Eng, Howard Univ, Washington, D. C.
- Huse, William Woodman, Jr, Assoc Prof Eng, Calif. Inst of Tech, Pasadena, Calif
- Hustvedt, Sigurd Bernhard, Prof Eng, Univ. of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif [405 Hilgard Ave]
- Hutchins, Elizabeth, Assoc Prof Spanish, Blue Mountain Coll, Blue Mountain, Miss.
- ❖ Hutchins, Henry Clinton, Research Assoc. Eng., Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn. [137 Cottage St.]
- Huth, Mari Luise, Asst Prof German and Spanish, Guilford Coll, Guilford Coll, N. C.
- Hutton, James, Prof. Classics, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N. Y. [125 Goldwsm Smith Hall]
- ❖ Hyde, James Hazen, c/o Mr. Alan M. Wood, 111 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
- ❖ Hyder, Clyde Kenneth, Assoc. Prof Eng, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans [1306 E. 36 St, Kansas City, Mo]
- Hyer, Lorne D, Instr Eng, Irvington H S, Irvington, N J
- Hysham, Julia H, Assoc Prof Eng, Skidmore Coll, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.
- ❖ Iacuzzi, Alfred, Assoc. Prof. Rom Langs, The City Coll, 17 Lexington Ave, New York, N. Y.
- ✠ Iber, George Henry, U S Navy, Brooklyn, N. Y. [35 Clark St]
- ❖ Ichikawa, Sanki, Prof Eng Lang and Lit, Imperial Univ of Tokio, Tokio, Japan [25 Kitayamabushicho, Ushigome]
- Ilmer, Frida, 8651 Burnham Ave, Chicago, Ill
- Ilsley, Marjorie H, Assoc Prof French, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass
- Imbault-Huart, Yvonne, Assoc Prof French, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass
- Imbert, Louis, Asst Prof Span, Columbia U, New York, N. Y. [508 Hamilton Hall]
- Immerwahr, Raymond M, Translator, Fed Communications Commission, 1820 Kalamazoo Rd, Wash, D. C.
- Ingalls, Jeremy, Instr Eng Lit, Western Coll, Oxford, Ohio
- Ingenhuett, Arthur Hilmer, Instr German, Hunter Coll, New York, N. Y. [434 W 120 St]
- Ingersoll, Julia Day, Prof French, Rockford Coll, Rockford, Ill
- Internoscia, Donato, Asst Prof Spanish, Univ of Akron, Akron, Ohio [782 Carpenter St]
- Irvine, Mrs Annie S, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Tex, Austin, Tex [311 E 34 St]
- Irvine, Maurice Harold, Instr Eng, Geo Washington Univ, Washington, D. C. [4101 Maryland Dr, Brookmont, Md]
- Irvine, Wilham, Asst Prof. Eng, Stanford Univ, Calif [524 Gerona Rd.]
- Irving, T. B., Instr Span, U of Calif, Berkeley, Calif [Fac Club]
- Irving, William Henry, Prof. Eng, Duke Univ, Durham, N. C. [2707 Legion Ave]
- Irwin, John Scott, French Teacher, Madison Vocational School, Madison, Wis. [1207 W. Johnson St.]
- Irwin, William Robert, Instr Eng., Cornell Univ., Ithaca, N. Y. [511 E. Buffalo St]
- Istas, Helen R, Neb State Teachers Coll, Kearney, Neb. [3645 Washington, Lincoln]

- Ittner, Robert T, Asst Prof German, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [Kirkwood Hall]
- Jablonski, Bernard S, Prof French, John Carroll Univ., Univ Hgts, Cleveland, O
- ❖ Jack, William Shaffer, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [116 E Chestnut Hill Ave, Chestnut Hill, Phila]
- Jackson, Elizabeth Hope, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn
- Jackson, Joseph Francis, Prof and Head French Dept, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [802 S Lincoln Ave]
- 📖 Jackson, Kenneth Hurlstone, Assoc Prof Celtic, Harvard Univ., Cambridge, Mass [36 Hancock St, Lexington]
- Jackson, Ruth Goddard (Mrs W W), 2136 W. Summit, San Antonio, Tex
- Jackson, Ruth M., Dean of Women, Instr Eng, Simpson Coll, Indianola, Iowa [51 N. I St]
- Jackson, William Alexander, Assoc Prof Bibliography, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [Widener Lib]
- Jacob, Cary Franklin, 44 Pomeroy Terr, Northampton, Mass
- Jacobs, Wilhelmina, 50 E. Park St, E Orange, N J
- Jacobson, Anna, Assoc Prof German, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [315 E 68 St]
- Jaekel, Hilde, Head Mod Lang Dept, York Collegiate Inst, York, Pa [14 S Queen St]
- Jaeger, Hans, Lect German, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N J
- Jaeger, Julius Peter, Prof Eng, College of Puget Sound, Tacoma, Wash
- James, Thelma G, Asst Prof Eng, Wayne Univ, 4841 Cass Ave, Detroit, Mich
- Jameson, Grace Emily, Asst. Prof Eng, New Mexico State Coll, State Coll, N M.
- Jameson, Raymond D, Consultant Service, Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.
- Jameson, Russell Parsons, Prof and Head Dept French and Italian, Oberlin Coll, Oberlin, Ohio [162 S Cedar Ave]
- Jamison, Wylie M, c/o Bankers Trust Company, 501 Fifth Ave, New York, N Y
- Janiga, Rev. Ladislaus, St Mary's Coll, Orchard Lake, Mich
- Jannet, Francis LaMar, Prof. Eng, Hollins Coll., Hollins, Va
- Jansen, Wm Hugh, Instr Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind
- Jantz, Harold S, Asst Prof German, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [To Sept '43, 6 Academy St, Worcester, Mass]
- Jay, H H, Great Rd, Princeton, N J.
- Jeans, Fred Wilson, Instr Rom Langs, Amherst Coll, Amherst, Mass [86 College St]
- Jehle, Mimi Ida, Asst Prof German, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [215 Lincoln Hall]
- Jelliffe, R A, Eng Dept., Oberlin Coll, Oberlin, Ohio
- Jenkins, Raymond, Prof and Head Dept. Eng, Catawba Coll, Salisbury, N C
- Jenne, Edward Albert, Chairman Eng Dept, Concordia Coll, Milwaukee, Wis
- Jensen, Dana O, Asst Prof Eng, Washington Univ, St Louis, Mo
- ❖ Jensen, Gerard Edward, Prof Eng, Connecticut Coll, New London, Conn [51 Hall Ave]
- ❖ Jente, Richard, Prof and Head German Dept, Univ of N C, Chapel Hill, N C.
- Jesse, Bredelle, Asst Prof French, Univ. of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [810 Hillcrest Ave]
- Jessen, Mrs Myra Richards, Assoc Prof German, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa [The Library]
- Jobin, Antoine J, Asst Prof. French, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1110 White St.]
- Jockers, Ernst Wilhelm, Chairman Dept. German, U of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa
- John (Miss) Lisle Cecil, Instr Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [435 W. 119 St]
- Johnson, A Theodore, Prof Eng, Southwestern Coll, Memphis, Tenn
- Johnson, Carl L, Asst Prof French, U. of Oregon, Eugene, Ore
- Johnson, Cecile Juliette, Assoc Prof. French, Sweet Briar Coll, Sweet Briar, Va.
- ❖ Johnson, Edith Christina, Prof. Eng Comp., Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass [18 Washington St, Milton]
- Johnson, Edward F., Asst Prof Eng, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N. J [145 College Ave]
- Johnson, E Gustav, Instr Eng., North Park Coll., Chicago, Ill. [3225 Foster Ave]
- ❖ Johnson, Elizabeth F, Head Mod. Lang Dept, Winthrop Coll, Rock Hill, S. C.
- 📖 Johnson, Ernest Alfred, Jr., Ensign, U S N.R., Naval Air Base, Pensacola, Fla. [17 William St., Andover, Mass.]

- Johnson, Francis R, Asst. Prof Eng, Stanford Univ, Calif
- Johnson, Frank Louis, Asst Prof, San Diego State Coll, San Diego, Calif
- Johnson, Freida, Asst Prof Eng, Peabody Coll, Nashville, Tenn.
- Johnson, Harvey Leroy, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Johnson, Herman Patrick, Assoc Prof Eng Lit, Univ of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va [Box 1164 Univ Sta]
- Johnson, Mary Lynch, Assoc Prof Eng, Meredith Coll, Raleigh, N C
- Johnson, Mildred E, Dept Spanish, Univ of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [Niedermeyer Apts, Columbia]
- Johnson, Stanley, Instr Eng, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Johnson, Thomas H, Instr Eng, Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, N J
- Johnson, Walter Gilbert, Assoc Eng, Univ. of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [127 Lincoln Hall]
- Johnston, Marjorie C, Spanish Dept, Stephens Coll, Columbia, Mo [Box 708]
- ❖ Johnston, Oliver Martin, Emeritus Prof Romanic Langs, Stanford Univ, Calif [Box 1132]
- Johnston, Stuart Lynde, Instr Rom Langs, Univ. of Vermont, Burlington, Vt [71 S Willard St]
- Johnstone, Coragreen, Eng Teacher, Bennett Coll, Greensboro, N C.
- Joliat, Eugène, 3635 Ordway St, N. W., Washington, D C
- Jones, Claude E, Instr. Eng, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif [On leave U S N R]
- Jones, Frederick Lafayette, Prof Eng, Mercer Univ, Macon, Ga
- ❖ Jones, Frederick Mason, Prof Rom. Langs, Colgate Univ, Hamilton, N Y. [52 Maple Ave]
- Jones, Howard Mumford, Prof. Eng., Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass
- Jones, John Langdon, Instr Rom Langs, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [301 Coll Hall, 34 and Woodland Aves]
- Jones, Joseph Jay, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex. [2212 Longview St]
- Jones, Louis C, Asst. Prof Eng., N. Y. State Coll for Teachers, Albany, N. Y.
- Jones, Malcolm Bancroft, Asst Prof. Rom. Langs, Conn Coll. for Women, New London, Conn [23 Deshon St]
- Jones, Putnam Fennell, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ. of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa.
- Jones, Raymond Watson, Prof German, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H
- Jones, Richard Foster, Prof Eng, Washington Univ, St Louis, Mo
- Jones, Ruth E, [Address Unknown]
- Jones, Sarah Dowlin, Grad Stud Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [1011 Kerlin St, Chester]
- Jones, S Paul, 317 W 108 St, New York, N Y
- Jones, Virgil Laurens, Prof Eng, Univ of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark [728 W Maple St]
- ✶ Jones, W Powell, Assoc Prof Eng, Adelbert Coll, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio [Gates Mills]
- Jones, William Bristow, Head Eng Dept, Georgetown Coll, Georgetown, Ky
- Jordan, Brady R, Prof Rom Langs, Duke Univ, Durham, N C [Box 4883, Duke Sta]
- Jordan, Emil Leopold, Acting Head German Dept, N J Coll for Women, New Brunswick, N J
- Jordan, Gilbert J, Assoc Prof German, Southern Methodist Univ, Dallas, Tex
- ✶ Jordan, Hoover H, Ensign, USNTS, Baker Hall, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, O
- Jordan, Howard S, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Brown Univ, Providence, R I [Marston Hall]
- Jordan, John Clark, Prof Eng, Univ. of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark
- Jordan, Leah Elizabeth, Eng Teacher, Chester H. S., Chester, Pa [1111 Parker St]
- Josselson, Harry H, Instr Eng, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich [836 Pine, Wyandotte]
- Joughin, G(eorge) Louis, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [M B 2406, Univ Sta]
- Judson, Alexander Corbin, Prof Eng., Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [Union Bldg, Bloomington]
- Judy, Clinton K, Prof Eng Lang and Lit., Calif Inst of Tech, Pasadena, Calif. [1201 E. California St]
- Kaffan, Gabrielle Isabelle, Instr Eng., Mount St Mary Coll, Hooksett, N H.
- Kahane, Henry R, Assoc Span. and Ital., Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill
- Kahin, Helen Andrews, Instr Eng, Univ. of

- Washington, Seattle, Wash [Bellevue, Wash]
- ❖ Kahn, Ludwig W, 35 E 84 St, New York, N. Y.
- Kahrl, George Morrow, Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, Elmira Coll, Elmira, N Y
- Kain, Richard Morgan, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Louisville, Louisville, Ky
- Kalenich, Wayne, Deputy Chief of Acquisitions, Lib of Congress, Washington, D C. [314 A St, S E]
- Kalfayan, Armen, Prof French, Allegheny Coll, Meadville, Pa
- Kamman, William F, Prof and Head Dept. Mod Langs, Carnegie Inst of Tech, Pittsburgh, Pa [5711 Solway St]
- Kandel, I L., Prof Education, Teachers Coll, Columbia Univ., New York, N Y.
- Kane, Elizabeth Mary Anne, 291 New Park Ave., Hartford, Conn
- Kane, Reverend George L, Prof Eng, St Francis Xavier U., Antigonish, N S, Can
- Kane, Robert Joseph, Instr Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio [454 Alden Ave]
- Kann, Paul J, Instr Rom. Langs and Lits, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N. Y [Goldwin Smith Hall]
- Kannapell, Louise, Assoc Prof Eng and French, Nazareth Coll, Louisville, Ky
- Kanthlener, Henry F, Prof Rom Langs., Morningside Coll, Sioux City, Iowa
- Kapstein, Israel James, Asst Prof Eng, Brown Univ., Providence, R I [248 Morris Ave]
- Karraker, Oliver, Instr, Army Air Forces Tech Sch, Lincoln Air Base, 2545 "N" St, Lincoln, Neb
- Kasten, Lloyd A, Assoc Prof Spanish, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [Bascom Hall]
- Kaufmann, Friedrich Wilhelm, Prof and Head German Dept, Oberlin Coll, Oberlin, Ohio [176 W. College St]
- Kaun, Alexander S, Assoc Prof Slavic Langs, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif. [1431 LeRoy Ave]
- Kayser, Rudolf, German Dept., Hunter Coll, New York, N. Y [528 Riverside Dr]
- Kazin, Alfred, Tutor Eng, The City Coll, New York, N. Y [144 E 24 St]
- Keating, L Clark, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, The Geo Washington Univ, Wash, D C.
- Keefer, Mrs Lubov Breit, Instr Russian, Johns Hopkins Univ., Baltimore, Md. [3818 Tudor Arms Ave.]
- Keeler, Mother Laura, Prof Eng, San Francisco Coll for Women, Lone Mountain, San Francisco, Calif
- Keep, Robert Porter, Principal, Miss Porter's Sch, Farmington, Conn
- Kegel, Friedrich O, Gilgenburgerstr 38, Berlin-Friedrichshafen, Germany
- Kehlenbeck, Alfred Paul, Assoc Prof Mod Langs, Iowa State Coll, Ames, Iowa
- ❖ Keil, Gunther, Assoc Prof German, Hunter Coll, Kingsbridge Sta, New York, N. Y. [Stanwood, Mt Kisco, N Y]
- Keister, Don Adams, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Akron, Akron, Ohio
- Kellenberger, Hunter, Asst Prof French, Brown Univ, Providence, R I [111 Elton St]
- Keller, May Lansfield, Prof Eng and Dean, Westhampton Coll, University of Richmond, Va
- Kelley, Cornelia Pulsifer, Instr. Eng, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [808 S Lincoln St.]
- Kelley, Maurice Willyle, Asst Prof Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [32 Edwards Pl]
- Kellogg, Alfred L, Instr Eng, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y [112 Linn St]
- Kellogg, Joyce Louise, Instr. Eng, N J Coll for Women, New Brunswick, N. J.
- ❖ Kellogg, Robert James, 415 S Cedar St, Ottawa, Kans
- Kelly, Edith Louise, 9227 Venice Blvd, Palms Sta, Los Angeles, Calif.
- Kelly, John Alexander, Prof German, Haverford Coll, Haverford, Pa.
- Kelly, Mildred, Asst Prof Eng, La State Normal Coll, Natchitoches, La [107 Cypress St]
- Kelly, Nelle, Grad Stud Eng, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [252 Congress Ave, Lansdowne]
- Kelso, Ruth, Instr Eng, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [508 S Goodwin Ave]
- Kemp, Alice, Asst. Prof. Spanish, Allegheny Coll, Meadville, Pa.
- Kendall, Anne Means, Head Eng Dept., Concord Acad, Concord, Mass. [876 Beacon St, Newton Centre]
- Kendig, Perry Fridy, Instr Eng., Muhlenberg Coll., Allentown, Pa.
- Keniston, Hayward, Prof and Chairman Rom. Langs Dept., Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich.
- Kennedy, Arthur G, Prof. Eng. Philology, Stanford Univ, Calif. [435 Coleridge Ave, Palo Alto]

- Kennedy, Charles W., Eng. Dept., Princeton Univ., Princeton, N. J. [66 Battle Rd.]
- Kennedy, Milton Boone, Head Dept. Eng.; Chairman Div. Lang., Lit., and Arts, Kentucky Wesleyan Coll., Winchester, Ky.
- Kennedy, Ruth Lee, Assoc. Prof. Spanish, Smith Coll., Northampton, Mass. [36 Bedford Terrace]
- Kenyon, Herbert Alden, Assoc. Prof. Spanish, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. [2037 Norway Rd.]
- ❖ Kenyon, John Samuel, Prof. Eng. Lang., Hiram Coll., Hiram, Ohio
- Kercher, Cora E., Dept. Mod. Langs., Huntingdon Coll., Montgomery, Ala.
- Kern, Alexander Carl, Instr. Eng., Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis. [Crestwood, R. D. #2]
- ❖ Kern, Alfred Allan, Prof. Eng., Randolph-Macon Woman's Coll., Lynchburg, Va.
- Kern, Frank Jauh, 6233 St. Clair Ave., Cleveland, Ohio
- Kern, John Dwight, Prof. Eng., Temple Univ., Philadelphia, Pa.
- Kerr, Albert S., 1801 Key Blvd., Colonial Village, Arlington, Va.
- Kerr, Elizabeth M., Instr. Eng., Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. [303½ Folwell Hall]
- Kerr, Walter A., Prof. Mod. Langs., Univ. of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah
- Kessel, Marcel, Assoc. Prof. Eng., Univ. of Connecticut, Storrs, Conn.
- 📖 Ketcham, Rodney Kenneth, Prof. French, Geneva Coll., Beaver Falls, Pa.
- Kiddle, Lawrence Bayard, Assoc. Prof. Rom. Langs., Acting Head Span. Dept., Tulane Univ., New Orleans, La.
- ❖ Kies, Paul Philemon, Prof. Eng., State Coll. of Washington, Pullman, Wash. [214 Columbia Ave.]
- Kilby, Clyde S., Assoc. Prof. Eng., Wheaton Coll., Wheaton, Ill.
- Kilgour, Raymond Lincoln, Asst. Prof. Rom. Langs., Carleton Coll., Northfield, Minn. [107 Nevada St.]
- Kimball, LeRoy Elwood, Comptroller, N. Y. Univ., New York, N. Y. [100 Washington Square]
- King, Lauren A., Prof. Eng., Wheaton Coll., Wheaton, Ill.
- King, Lucile, Instr. Eng., Amarillo Coll., Amarillo, Tex.
- King, Rolf Egmont Percival, German Dept., Univ. of Rochester, Rochester, N. Y. [89 Meigs St.]
- Kingery, William Ray, 4915 W. Pine, St. Louis, Mo.
- Kirby, John P., Prof. Eng., Mary Washington Coll., Fredericksburg, Va. [Box 1483, Coll. Sta.]
- ❖ Kirby, Thomas Austin, Assoc. Prof. Eng., Louisiana State Univ., University, La. [Box 3453]
- ❖ Kirk, Rudolf, Assoc. Prof. Eng., Rutgers Univ., New Brunswick, N. J.
- Kirkconnell, Watson, Prof. Eng., McMaster Univ., Hamilton, Ont., Canada
- Kirkland, Edwin Capers, Assoc. Prof. Eng., Univ. of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn.
- Kirrmann, Ernest Nestor, Sr. Master German, Northfield Seminary, East Northfield, Mass. [5 Moody St.]
- Kitchel, Anna Theresa, Prof. Eng., Vassar Coll., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
- Kittel, Paula M., Asst. Prof. German, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.
- ❖ Klaeber, Frederick, Prof. Emeritus Comp. and Eng. Philology, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. [15 Chamberlainstr., Berlin-Zehlendorf West, Germany]
- Klanchar, Anthony J., Columbia Univ., New York, N. Y. [508 W. 114 St.]
- Klarmann, Adolf D., Asst. Prof. German, U. of Pennsylvania, Phila., Pa. [Hamilton Court, Apt. C401, 39 & Chestnut Sts.]
- ❖ Klein, David, Asst. Prof. Eng., The City Coll., New York, N. Y.
- Klein, John Frederick, Assoc. Prof. German, Univ. of Maine, Orono, Me.
- Klein, Manfred, Asst. Prof. German, Simmons Coll., Boston, Mass. [300 The Fenway]
- ❖ von Klenze, Camillo, Head German Dept., Coll. of the City of N. Y., Emeritus, Honorary Prof. Amer. Lit., Univ. of Munich, Emeritus [Kingscote Gardens, Apt. 1, Stanford Univ., Calif.]
- von Klenze, Henrietta (Mrs. C.), Kingscote Gardens, Apt. 1, Stanford Univ., Calif.
- Klett, Ada M., Asst. Prof. German, Vassar Coll., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
- Kline, Earl Kilburn, Prof. Mod. Langs., Brothers Coll., Drew Univ., Madison, N. J.
- 📖 Klitzke, Carl Paul, Res. Analyst, Off. of Chief Signal Officer, War Dept., Wash., D. C. [3229 Lee Blvd., Arlington, Va.]
- Klug, Mrs. Flora Buck, Instr. German, Brooklyn Coll., Bedford Ave. and Ave. H., Bklyn., N. Y. [1710 Ave. H.]
- Knappp, Lewis M., Assoc. Prof. Eng., Colorado Coll., Colorado Springs, Colo.

- Knedler, John Warren, Jr, Asst Prof Eng, N. Y. Univ, Univ Hgts, New York, N Y
- Knickerbocker, Kenneth Leshe, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Rhode Island Coll, Kingston, R I
- Knickerbocker, William Edwin, Prof and Head Dept Rom Langs, The City Coll, 139 St. and Convent Ave, New York, N Y.
- Knickerbocker, William Skinkle, Prof Eng and Editor, Sewanee Review, Univ. of the South, Sewanee, Tenn [257 S. 44 St, Phila, Pa]
- Knipp, George Walter, Instr Eng, U of Wis, Madison, Wis [1727 Regent St]
- Knoll, Samson B., P O. Box 2583, Stanford Univ, Calif.
- Knopp, Helen Louise, Teaching Asst German, U of Calif, Berkeley, Calif
- Knott, J Proctor, Prof French, Centre Coll, Danville, Ky
- ❖ Knott, Thomas A, Prof Eng, and Editor of Middle Eng Dictionary, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [5208 Angell Hall]
- Knowles, Edwin B, Jr, Instr. Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y
- ❖ Knowlton, Edgar Colby, Eng Dept, State Teachers Coll, La Crosse, Wis
- Knox, Guy Mortimer, Head Mod For Langs Dept, Piedmont H S, Piedmont, Calif [83 Lane Court, Oakland]
- Knudson, Charles Anthony, Prof and Head French Dept, Hamilton Coll, Clinton, N Y
- Knop, Ralph E, 389 Washington St, Norwichtown, Conn
- Kobel, Rev. Jerome, O F M CAP, Instr. Eng, Capuchin Seminary, Garrison, N. Y. [Glenclyffe, Garrison]
- ❖ Koch, Richard F, Mass Inst. of Tech, Cambridge, Mass
- Kocher, Paul H, Instr Eng, Univ. of Washington, Seattle, Wash
- Koella, Charles Emile, Asst Prof French, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. [709 S. State St]
- Koenig, Karl F, Asst Prof. German, Colgate Univ., Hamilton, N Y.
- Koenig, V Fiederic, Asst. Prof. French, Univ. of Arizona, Tucson, Ariz
- Koester, Leonard, Asst. Prof German, Univ. of Louisville, Louisville, Ky
- Kohler, Charlotte, The Virginia Quarterly Review, One West Range, Charlottesville, Va.
- ❖ Kolb, Philip, Lieut (jg), U.S.N R [630 N. E. Twenty-second Terr., Miami, Fla.]
- Kolbe, Hildegard, Instr German, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [509 W 110 St]
- Koller, Kathrine, Asst Prof Eng, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa [Dolgelly Apts]
- Konig, Selma S, Prof Mod Langs, State Teachers Coll, Peru, Neb
- Korsch, Mrs Hedda, Prof German, Wheaton Coll, Norton, Mass
- ❖ Kotz, Theodore Franklin, 10811 Lee Ave, Cleveland, Ohio
- Krakeur, Lester Gilbert, Instr Rom Langs, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y
- Krakovski, Meyer, Instr German, Los Angeles City Coll, Los Angeles, Calif [843½ Hyperion Ave]
- Kramer, Charles F, Jr, Assoc Prof Mod Langs, Univ of Maryland, College Park, Md. [Box 262]
- Kramer, Pauline K, Athenaeum, Pasadena, Calif
- Kreider, Paul V, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Kress, Mrs Margaret K, Instr Rom Langs, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex.
- Kretzmann, Edwin M J, Instr German, Brown U, Providence, R I [56 Olney St]
- Kreuzer, James R, Tutor Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y
- Kridl, Manfred, Visiting Lect. Comp Lit., Smith Coll., Northampton, Mass. [54 Belmont Ave]
- Krouse, Frank Michael, Instr. Eng, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich [13135 Corbett Ave]
- Krumpelmann, John Theodore, Asst Prof German, Louisiana State Univ, Univ, La. [1708 Cloverdale Ave, Baton Rouge]
- Krutch, Joseph Wood, Prof. Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [R.F.D. #2, Bethel, Conn]
- Krutzke, Frank A, Asst Prof Eng, Colorado Coll., Colorado Springs, Colo
- Kubler, Ernest A R., Prof & Head Dept Mod Langs., Coll. of Charleston, Charleston, S C [21 N Halifax Ave, Daytona Beach, Fla]
- Kuersteiner, (Mrs) Agnes D, Grad. Stu and Library Cataloger, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [1827 E. Third St]
- Kuhinka, Julius Victor, Prof Eng, Loyola Univ., Chicago, Ill [5121 W. Twenty-second Pl., Cicero]
- ❖ Kuhl, Ernest Peter, Prof. Eng., Univ. of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa
- Kuhn, Sherman McAllister, Assoc Prof

- Eng, Okla. A. and M. Coll, Stillwater, Okla [202 Park Dr]
- Kuhns, Jacob Grove, Instr Eng, Messiah Bible Coll, Grantham, Pa
- ❖ Kullmer, Charles Julius, Prof German, Syracuse Univ, Syracuse, N Y [868 Westmoreland Ave]
- Kummer, George, Instr Eng, Seton Hall Coll, S Orange, N J [15 Purchase St, Rye, N Y]
- Kummerle, Katharine E, First Asst Mod Lang Dept, Walton H S, 195 St and Reservoir Ave, New York, N Y [91 Vernon Ave, Mt Vernon]
- Kunstmann, John G, 5834 Stony Island Ave, Chicago, Ill
- ❖ Kurath, Hans, Prof Germ Langs and General Linguistics, Director of the Linguistic Atlas U. S and Canada, Brown Univ, Providence, R I
- Kurath, William, Prof German, Univ of Arizona, Tucson, Ariz.
- ❖ Kurrelmeyer, William, Prof German, Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md [1529 Linden Ave]
- Kurtz, John William, Asst Prof German, Oberlin Coll., Oberlin, Ohio [67 S Cedar St]
- Kurtz, Leonard P, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Univ. of Buffalo, Buffalo, N Y
- ❖ Kurz, Harry, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Queens Coll, 65-30 Kissena Blvd, Flushing, N. Y.
- Kuyper, Henri Abraham, Principal Translator, Dept of Agric, Washington, D C [415 S Adams St, Arlington, Va.]
- Lachmann, Vera Regine, Meredith School, Meredith, N. H
- Ladd, Jonathan B, Prof Mod Langs, Thiel Coll, Greenville, Pa [94 College Ave]
- Ladu, Arthur I, Prof. Eng, N C State Coll, Raleigh, N. C. [Box 5302 State Coll Sta]
- LaDu, Milan S, Chairman Dept Rom Langs, Syracuse Univ., Syracuse, N Y
- LaGrone, Gregory Gough, Instr. Romanic Langs, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [301 Coll Hall]
- ❖ Lahser, Conrad, Prof German, Greensboro Coll, Greensboro, N C
- Laird, Charlton, G, Acting Asst. Prof. Eng, Purdue Univ, Lafayette, Ind.
- Laird, Hilda Campbell, Asst Prof German, Queen's Univ., Kingston, Ont
- Lamont, William H. F, Assoc. Prof. Eng, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N. J.
- 🇺🇸 Lamson, Roy, Jr, Asst Prof Eng, Williams Coll, Williamstown, Mass [3615 O St, N. W, Washington, D C]
- Lancaster, Albert, Instr French and German, Virginia Military Inst, Lexington, Va
- ❖ Lancaster, H Carrington, Prof. French Lit, Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md
- Landa, Louis A, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Landis, Paul Nissley, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Ill, Urbana, Ill [609 W Oregon St]
- Landrum, Grace Warren, Dean Women and Prof Eng, Coll of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va.
- Lane, George Sherman, Assoc Prof Germanic and Comp Linguistics, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C [735 Gimghoul Rd]
- Lane, Ralph, 2651 16 St, N W, Washington, D C.
- Laney, Emma May, Assoc Prof Eng, Agnes Scott Coll, Decatur, Ga
- Lang, Mrs Bluma Renée, Asst Dir of Maison Française, Instr French, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [411 W 117 St]
- Lang, Rev. Edgar A, Catholic Univ of America, Washington, D C [55 W. Broadway South, Boston, Mass]
- Langdale, A Barnett, Chairman Eng Dept, Erasmus Hall H S, Bklyn, N. Y [862 Union St]
- Lange, Eva C (Mrs), Instr German, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [2790 Grand Concourse]
- Lange, H W. Victor, Assoc Prof German, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y
- Langford, Gerald, Assoc Prof Eng, Winthrop Coll, Rock Hill, S C. [Catawba Hall]
- ❖ Langley, Ernest F, Prof Rom Langs, Head Dept Mod Langs, Mass Inst. of Tech., Cambridge, Mass [Office 7-101]
- Langwell, Earl Frederick, Assoc. Prof. French, Univ of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Ind
- Lanier, Emilio Agunaldo, Asst Prof. Eng., Fisk Univ, Nashville, Tenn
- Lanza di Trabia, A. C, Asst Prof Rom. Langs, Connecticut Coll, New London, Conn. (On leave of absence)
- Larsen, Henning, Prof Eng, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [807 W Oregon St]
- Larwill, Paul Herbert, Prof Rom. Langs, Keyon Coll, Gambier, Ohio
- Lasher-Schlitt, Dorothy, Asst Prof German,

- Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y [1015 E 22 St]
- Lasley, Robert Law, Head Dept Eng, Morris Harvey Coll, Charleston, W Va [115 Brooks St]
- Laughlin, James, Editor, New Directions, Norfolk, Conn
- Laverty, Carroll D, Instr Eng, Agric and Mech Coll of Texas, College Station, Tex [Box 23, Fac Exch]
- ❖ Law, Robert Adger, Prof Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [2614 Salado St]
- Lawrence, Herbert L, 609 W 115 St, Apt 6A, New York, N Y
- ❖ Lawrence, William Witherle, Prof Emer Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y.
- Lazenby, Marion Candler, Camp Antelope, Coleville, Mono County, Calif
- ❖ Leach, Henry Goddard, Editor, The Forum, Trustee American-Scandinavian Foundation, 170 E 64th St, New York, N Y
- Leach, Mac Edward, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [Bennett Hall, Box 5]
- 📖 Learned, Henry Dexter, Prof French and Chairman Mod Lang Dept, Temple Univ, Phila, Pa
- Leary, Lewis, Asst Prof Eng, Duke Univ, Durham, N C
- Leavitt, Sturgis Elleno, Prof Span, Univ. of N C, Chapel Hill, N C
- Lecky, Eleazer, Asst Prof Eng Lang and Lit, Univ of Southern Calif, Los Angeles, Calif.
- LeClair, Robert Charles, Asst-Instr Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa
- LeCocq, John P, Head Rom Lang Dept, Drake Univ., Des Moines, Iowa
- Lederer, Max, Assoc Fellow, Consultant Service, Library of Congress, Washington, D C [1900 H St, N W]
- Lednicki, Waclaw, Visiting Lect, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [1640 Cambridge St]
- ❖ Le Duc, Alma de L, Asst. Prof French, Barnard Coll, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y.
- Leedy, Paul F, Asst. Prof. Eng, Bowling Green State Univ, Bowling Green, Ohio [316 S. Church St]
- Leekley, Thomas B, Instr Eng, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [3708 Sommers Ave, Drexel Hill, Delaware County, Pa.]
- Legner, Wolfram Karl, Asst. Prof. German, Geo. Wash. Univ, Wash, D. C.
- Lehane, Rev. J C, C M, DePaul Univ, 2244 N Kenmore Ave, Chicago, Ill
- Lehman, Della, Head Eng Dept, McPherson Coll, McPherson, Kans
- Lehmann, Ruth Preston (Mrs Winifred P), Markham Travelling Fellow, U of Wis, Madison, Wis [Box 588, Ithaca, N Y]
- Lehner, Frederick, Visiting Prof French and German, W Va State Coll, Institute, W Va
- Leineweber, C H, Chairman German Dept, American Univ, Washington, D C [5612 Edgemoor Lunc, Bethesda, Md]
- Leisy, Ernest Erwin, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Southern Methodist Univ, Dallas, Tex
- Leland, Lowell Pond, 216 Katahdin Ave, Millinocket, Me
- Leland, Miss Maime, Assoc Prof French, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [66 Massasoit St]
- Lemaitre, Georges E, Prof Romanic Langs, Stanford Univ, Calif.
- ❖ Lemke, Frederick Daniel, Prof. Eng, Heidelberg Coll, Tiffin, Ohio
- Lemke, Victor Jacob, Asst Prof. German, West Virginia Univ, Morgantown W Va
- Lennox, P J, Prof Eng Lit., Dean College of Letters, Catholic Univ of America, Washington, D C [1820 G St, N W]
- Leo, Ulrich, El Capitolio, Archivo del Estado, Valencia, Venezuela
- ❖ Leonard, Arthur Newton, Prof. German, Gates Coll, Lewiston, Me [12 Abbott St]
- Leonard, E Louise, Asst Prof French, Hood Coll, Frederick, Md
- Leonard, William Ellery, Prof. Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis
- ❖ Leopold, Werner F., Prof German and Linguistics, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [1409 Rosalie St]
- LeSage, Laurence, 1020 Fifteenth St, Boulder, Colo
- Leser, (Mrs) Hedwig G, Asst. Prof. German, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind. [420 Woodlawn Ave]
- Leslie, John Kenneth, Asst. Prof Rom. Langs, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Levensgood, Sidney Lawrence, Asst. Prof. Mod Langs, Princeton Univ., Princeton, N. J [Graduate College]
- Lévêque, André Camille, Asst Prof French, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [958 Waban Hill]
- Lever, Katherine, Travelling Fellow, Greek

- and Eng, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa [3051 Longshore Ave, Phila]
- ❖ Levi, Moritz, Prof Emer French, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [928 Olivia Ave]
- Levy, Babette May, Instr Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [600 West 116 St]
- ❖ Levy, Raphael, Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Baltimore, Baltimore, Md [3503 Denn-lynn Rd]
- Levy, Mrs Sylvia Narins, French Teacher, Washington Irving H S, New York, N Y [40 Irving Pl]
- Lewent, Kurt, 600 W 136 St, New York, N Y
- Lewis, B Roland, Prof. Eng, Dir The Shakespeare Lab, Univ of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah
- ❖ Lewis, Edwin Herbert, Prof Eng and Dean Faculty, Lewis Inst, 1951 W Madison St, Chicago, Ill
- Lewis, Wilmarth Sheldon, Farmington, Conn
- Lewison, Nora V, Instr Eng, Winona State Teachers Coll, Winona, Minn [Parkview Apts 104]
- Leyburn, Ellen Douglass, Asst. Prof Eng, Agnes Scott Coll, Decatur, Ga
- Lichtenstein, Vernon E, Assoc Prof Eng, Coe Coll, Cedar Rapids, Iowa
- Liebman, Charles J, Jr, 220 E 73rd St, New York, N Y.
- ❖ Lieder, Frederick Wilham Charles, Assoc. Prof German, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [18 Brown St]
- ❖ Lieder, Paul Robert, Prof Eng Lang and Lit, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [62 Kensington Ave]
- Liedke, Herbert R, Instr German, The City Coll., 138th St. and Convent Ave, New York, N Y
- Liepe, Wolfgang, Prof German, Yankton Coll, Yankton, S D [1008 Broadway]
- Lietzau, Lena Louise, Prof German, Lebanon Valley Coll, Annville, Pa
- Lievsay, John Leon, Instr. Eng, Stanford Univ, Calif
- Liffmann, Rolf N, Grad Stud German, U. of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif
- Lilly, Henry Tracy, Prof. Eng, Davidson Coll, Davidson, N C.
- Lincoln, Eleanor Terry, Asst Prof. Eng, Smith Coll., Northampton, Mass. [210 Elm St]
- ❖ Lincoln, George Luther, Instr Rom Langs, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass. [2000 Commonwealth Ave, Boston]
- Lincoln, Joseph Newhall, Assoc. Prof Spanish, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. [1005 Berkshire Rd]
- Lindahl, Lilly Esther Junia, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Knox Coll, Galesburg, Ill [347 S West St]
- Lindsay, (Miss) Jean Stirling, Instr Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [15 Claremont Ave]
- Lindsay, Julian Ira, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Vermont, Burlington, Vt [292 S Prospect St]
- Lingenfelter, Lynwood Samuel, Prof Eng Lit, State Teachers Coll, Millersville, Pa [112 N George St]
- ❖ Linn, Irving, Tutor Eng, The City Coll, New York, N Y [99 Marble Hill Ave]
- Linton, Calvin D, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Queens Coll, Charlotte, N C.
- ❖ Lipari, Angelo, Prof Italian, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn
- ❖ Liptzin, Sol, Assoc Prof German, The City Coll, New York, N Y
- Little, David Mason, Secretary to the University, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass. [Apthorp House, Linden St]
- Little, Thomas Alexander, Prof Eng, Walla Walla Coll, College Place, Wash.
- Little, Vivian, 107 E. 33 St, Baltimore, Md.
- Littlefield, Henrietta, Head German Dept, Amer Internat'l Coll, Springfield, Mass. [Oaks Hotel]
- Litz, Francis Edwards, Assoc Prof Eng, Catholic Univ of America, Washington, D C [304 Broxton Rd, Balt., Md]
- ❖ Livingston, Charles Harold, Prof Rom Langs, Bowdoin Coll, Brunswick, Me [76 Federal St]
- Livingstone, Leon, Asst, Div. Mod Langs, Brown Univ, Providence, R I
- Lloyd, Donald J, Grad Stud Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [39 Lynwood Pl]
- Lloyd, Francis Vernon, Jr, Head Lower School, Master in Eng, St Paul's School, Concord, N. H.
- Locke, Louis Glenn, Asst Prof Eng, Mary Washington Coll, Fredericksburg, Va [Woodstock, Va]
- Locke, William N, Instr. Rom Langs, Harvard Univ., Cambridge, Mass [73 Grozier Rd.]

- ❖ Lockert, Charles Lacy, Jr, Nashville, Tenn [General Delivery]
- Lockwood, Helen Drusilla, Prof Eng, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Loewenberg, Ernst L, Instr Mod Langs, Groton School, Groton, Mass
- Logan, James Venable, Jr, Asst Prof Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio [3088 Midgard Ave]
- Lograsso, Angeline H, Assoc Prof and Head Italian Dept, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa [The Library]
- Logue, Joseph Morgan, Asst Prof Eng, No. Tex State Teacher's Coll, Denton, Tex [603 W Sycamore]
- ❖ Loiseaux, Louis Auguste, Assoc Prof French (Retired), Barnard Coll, Columbia Univ, 119 St and Bway, New York, N Y
- 🏠 Long, E. Hudson, Instr Eng, Univ of Delaware, Newark, Del
- Long, Mary D, Prof. Eng, Sweet Briar Coll, Sweet Briar, Va
- Long, Mary McDonald (Mrs P W), Grad Stud Eng, N Y Univ, New York, N Y [123 Waverly Pl]
- Long, Orrie William, Prof German, Williams Coll, Williamstown, Mass
- ❖ Long, Percy Waldron, Prof Eng., Wash Sq. Coll, N Y U, New York, N Y
- Longaker, John Mark, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [Office of Admissions]
- ❖ Longden, Henry Boyer, Vice-President, DePauw Univ, Greencastle, Ind
- Longest, Christopher, Prof Spanish, Univ of Mississippi, Oxford, Miss
- Longsdorf, Kenneth Dwight, Tutor Eng, The City Coll, 17 Lexington Ave, New York, N Y. [429 Stockton Pl, Englewood, N J]
- Longueil, Alfred E, Assoc Prof Eng., U of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif [405 Hilgard Ave, W Los Angeles]
- Loomis, C Grant, Asst Prof German, U. of Calif, Berkeley, Calif. [400 Wheeler Hall]
- Loomis, Laura Hibbard (Mrs Roger S), Prof Eng Lit, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass [90 Morningside Dr, N. Y. C.]
- Loomis, Roger Sherman, Assoc. Prof. Eng, Columbia Univ., New York, N Y.
- Loose, Gerhard, Asst Prof German, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder, Colo
- Lopes, Albert Richard, Asst Prof. Mod Langs, Univ of New Mexico, Albuquerque, N. M.
- López-Morillas, Juan, Asst Prof Spanish and Portuguese, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [1324 Muscatine Ave]
- Loss, H, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Carleton Coll, Northfield, Minn [200 College Ave]
- ❖ Lotspeich, Claude Meck, Prof Comparative and Eng Philology, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Loudon, Eva, Assoc Prof Eng, Women's Coll, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N J
- Loveland, Winslow Harding, Prof Eng, Boston Univ, Boston, Mass [29 Lincoln St, Hyde Park]
- Lovell, John Jr, Asst Prof Eng, Howard Univ, Washington, D C [Box 95, Howard U]
- Lovering, Stella, Instl French, Los Angeles City Coll, Los Angeles, Calif [855 N Vermont Ave]
- Lowden, Eleanor, Prof Eng, Grinnell Coll, Grinnell, Iowa [1015 Eighth Ave]
- Lowery, Margaret Ruth, Prof Eng, N W Missouri State Teachers Coll, Maryville, Mo [118 W Sixth St]
- ❖ Lowes, John Livingston, Prof Eng, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [984 Memorial Dr]
- Lowet, Ralph, German Dept, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [1654 Massachusetts Ave]
- Lowry, Howard F, Prof. Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J
- Luciani, Vincent, Instr Rom Langs, The City Coll, 139th St and Convent Ave, New York, N Y
- ❖ Luebke, William Ferdinand, Prof Eng Lang, Univ of Denver, Denver, Colo [2076 S Fillmore St]
- Luker, Julia Eugenia, Head Eng Dept, McMurry Coll, Abilene, Tex [McMurry Sta]
- 🏠 Lumiansky, Robert Mayer, Capt, Instr Eng, U of N. C, Chapel Hill, N C. [Instl., Gunnery Dept, Armored Force Sch, Ft Knox, Ky]
- Lundeberg, Olav K, Assoc. Prof Rom Langs, Duke Univ, Durham, N. C
- Lunney, William J, O S A, Asst Prof. Mod Langs, Villanova Coll, Villanova, Pa
- ❖ Lussky, Alfred E, Prof and Head Dept German, Univ. of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark.
- Lussky, George Frederick, Prof and Head Dept Germanic Lang and Lit, Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore
- Lutz, Caroline Stookey, Prof Eng, West-

- hampton Coll , Univ of Richmond, Richmond, Va
- Lyell, Frank Hallam, Assoc Prof Eng , N C State Coll , Raleigh, N. C [224 Hawthorn Rd]
- Lyle, Marie C , Head Eng Dept , Arkansas Coll , Batesville, Ark
- Lynch, Kathleen M , Assoc Prof Eng Lit., Mount Holyoke Coll , South Hadley, Mass, [Jewett Lane]
- Lynes, Carlos, Jr , 400 E. 59 St , New York, N Y
- Lynn, Margaret, Prof Eng Lit , Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans [1224 Mississippi St]
- Lynskey, Winifred, Instr Eng , Purdue Univ , Lafayette, Ind [Union Club, Purdue Memorial Union, W Lafayette]
- Lyon, Albert E , Asst Prof Rom Langs , Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [2121 Chadbourne Ave]
- Lyon, John Henry Hobart, Assoc Prof Eng , Columbia Univ , New York, N Y.
- Lyon, Judson Stanley, Grad Stud Eng , Yale Univ , New Haven, Conn [84 Howe St]
- Lyons, Clifford P., Prof Eng , Chairman Div Lang and Lit , Univ of Florida, Gainesville, Fla
- ❖ Mabbott, Thomas Ollive, Assoc Prof Eng , Hunter Coll , New York, N Y [56 E 87 St.]
- MacAllister, Archibald Thomas, Asst Prof Italian, Princeton Univ , Princeton, N J. [41 Jefferson Rd]
- MacClintock, Lander, Assoc Prof Rom, Langs , Indiana Univ , Bloomington, Ind
- ❖ MacCracken, Henry Noble, President, Vassar Coll , Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Mack, Jesse Floyd, Prof Eng , Oberlin Coll., Oberlin, Ohio [168 E College St]
- Mack, W. Harry, Eng Dept , Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1057 Lincoln Ave]
- MacKay, Katharine, Prof. Eng , Wells Coll., Aurora, N. Y.
- MacKellar, Walter, Asst Prof Eng , N. Y Univ , New York, N Y. [Blauvelt, N. Y]
- Mackenzie, William Roy, Head Eng. Dept., Washington Univ., St. Louis, Mo
- MacLaggan, Catherine Fraser, Prof. and Head Dept. Foreign Langs , South Dakota State Coll., Brookings, S. D
- MacLean, Kenneth, Asst. Prof. Eng , Victoria Coll , Univ. of Toronto, Toronto, Canada [39 Roxborough Dr]
- 🏠 MacMillan, William Dougald, Capt , C.W.S., Chem Warfare Sch , Edgewood Arsenal, Md
- MacMinn, George R , Assoc Prof Eng., California Inst. of Tech , Pasadena, Calif
- MacNaughton, Jacquelin Adele, Instr. German, Hunter Coll , 695 Park Ave , New York, N Y [164 Rosedale Ave , Hastings-on-Hudson]
- MacPhail, Marion Louise, Assoc Prof Mod. Langs , Hood Coll , Frederick, Md.
- MacPherson, Harnet Dorothea, Asst Prof. Library Service, Columbia Univ , New York, N Y.
- Maddox, Nottley S , Monticello Coll , Godfrey, Ill
- Magoon, Marion W , Assoc Prof Eng , Mich State Normal Coll , Ypsilanti, Mich.
- ❖ Magoun, Francis Peabody, Jr , Prof Eng , Harvard Univ , Cambridge, Mass. [29 Reservoir St]
- Maguire, Rev. Dom John Raphael, O.S.B., Grad Stud Rom Langs , Johns Hopkins Univ , Baltimore, Md [St Anselm's Priory, Brookland, D C]
- Mahaffey, Pearl, Prof Mod Langs , Bethany Coll , Bethany, W. Va
- Mahieu, Robert Georges, Assoc. Prof French, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans. [1524 Vermont St]
- Mahr, August Carl, Prof. German, Ohio State Univ , Columbus, Ohio [2079 W 5th Ave]
- Maire, Raymond Ivan, Asst Prof French, Washington Square Coll , N Y. Univ , New York, N Y [44 W 10th St]
- Major, John C , Assoc. Prof. Eng Comp , Penn State Coll , State College, Pa
- Major, Mabel, Prof Eng , Texas Christian Univ., Fort Worth, Tex.
- Makosky, John Donald, Asst. Prof Eng , Western Md Coll , Westminster, Md. [35 Ridge Rd.]
- Malakis, Emile, Assoc Prof French Lit , Johns Hopkins Univ., Baltimore, Md. [Gilman Hall]
- Malkiel, Yakov, Lect Span. and Portuguese, Univ. of Calif , Berkeley, Calif
- Mallery, Richard D , Eng. Dept., New York Univ., Univ. Heights, New York, N. Y.
- ❖ Malone, Kemp, Prof Eng , Johns Hopkins Univ., Baltimore, Md.
- de Mangeleere, Rev Paul, S J., Prof French Lit , Boston Coll , Grad. School, Chestnut Hill, Mass.
- Mann, Albert, Prof. Rom. Langs , Wesleyan

- Univ, Middletown, Conn [130 Mt. Vernon St]
- Mann, Elizabeth L, Assoc Prof Eng, Adelphi Coll, Garden City, N. Y
- Manning, Charles, Asst Prof Eng, Centre Coll., Danville, Ky [Box 401]
- Manning, Clarence Augustus, Asst Prof East European Langs, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Manning, Richard C, Prof Latin, Kenyon Coll, Gambier, Ohio
- Mansfield, Luther Stearns, Asst Prof Eng, Williams Coll, Williamstown, Mass [Box 71]
- Manthey-Zorn, Otto, Prof German, Amherst College, Amherst, Mass
- Manwaring, Elizabeth Wheeler, Prof Rhet and Eng Composition, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass
- Mapes, Erwin Kempton, Prof Span, Univ. of Iowa, Iowa City, Ia [300 McLean St]
- Marburg, Helen, Assoc Prof French, Pomona Coll, Claremont, Calif
- Marcett, Mildred Elizabeth, Instr Eng, Washington Sq Coll, N. Y U, New York, N Y [25 E 11 St]
- March, Harold M, Asst Prof French, Swarthmore Coll, Swarthmore, Pa
- Marchand, Ernest L, Asst Prof Eng, Stanford Univ, Calif [2430 Cowper St, Palo Alto]
- Marchand, Leslie A, Instr. Eng, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N J.
- Marckwardt, Albert H., Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Marilla, Esmond Linworth, Instr Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Marni, Archimede, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Marraro, Howard R, Asst Prof Italian, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- ❖ Marsh, George Linnaeus, Ext Prof Emer Eng, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Marshall, Mary H, Colby Coll, Waterville, Me
- Marshall, Thomas F., 3rd, Head Dept. Eng, Valley Forge Jr. Coll., Wayne, Pa [Box 152, Paoli]
- Marshburn, J H., Chairman Dept. Eng., Univ of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla
- Martin, Grace Nealy, Instr German, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind. [605 S Fess Ave]
- Martin, John L, Asst Prof Spanish, Marshall Coll, Huntington, W. Va
- Martin, Melissa M, Prof. and Head Dept. Mod. Langs, Ore State Coll, Corvallis, Ore [2550 Monroe St]
- Martin, Rose Eleanor, Asst Prof Spanish, Middlebury Coll, Middlebury, Vt
- Martin, Willard E, Jr, Instr Eng, Boston Univ, Boston, Mass [14 Monument St, W Medford]
- Martínez-López, R, Dept Spanish and Portuguese, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis
- Martz, Louis Lohr, Instr Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [1050 Yale Sta]
- ❖ Marvin, Robert B, First Asst Mod Lang Dept, Alexander Hamilton H S, Bklyn, N Y [193 E 31st St]
- Mason, James Frederick, Prof Rom Langs and Lits, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y
- Matenko, Percy, Asst Prof German, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y [2601 Glenwood Rd, Apt 3F]
- Mather, Thomas Ray, Prof and Chairman Dept Eng, The College of Liberal Arts, Boston Univ, Boston, Mass [216 Prospect St, Belmont]
- Matheson, Belle Seddon, Assoc Prof Eng, Beaver Coll, Jenkintown, Pa [510 Berkeley Rd, Narberth]
- Matheus, John Frederick, Head Dept Rom Langs, West Virginia State Coll, Institute, W Va.
- Mathews, J Chesley, Asst. Prof Eng, Univ. of Texas, Austin, Tex. [2207 Main Bldg, U. of Tex]
- Mathison, John K, Instr Eng., Stanford Univ, Calif
- Matthews, William, Asst Prof Eng, Univ. of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif
- Mattingly, Caroline, Assoc. Prof Eng, Univ of Redlands, Redlands, Calif. [160 The Terrace]
- Maurer, David W, Assoc Prof. Eng., Univ of Louisville, Louisville, Ky.
- Mautner, Franz H, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Hobart and Wm. Smith Coll, Geneva, N. Y [445 Pulteney St.]
- Maxwell, Baldwin, Prof. Eng, Univ. of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa
- Maxwell, Sue, 604 8th Ave, W, Apt. C, Birmingham, Ala
- Maxwell, William Cary, Asst. Prof. German, Duke Univ., Durham, N C. [Box 4841]
- Mayer, Frederick P, Assoc Prof. and Chairman Eng Dept, Univ. of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa
- Mayfield, George Radford, Prof German, Vanderbilt Univ., Nashville, Tenn

- Mayo, Robert D, Eng Dept, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [Greenwood Inn]
- Mays, Alma, Instr Eng, State Teachers Coll, Memphis, Tenn
- McAdam, Edward L, Jr, Assoc Prof Eng, New York Univ, Univ Hgts, New York, N Y.
- McAllister, Quentin Oliver, Assoc Prof French and Spanish, Randolph-Macon Coll, Ashland, Va [500 N Center St]
- McAvoy, Harry F, III, Instr Eng, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich [14186 Strathmoor]
- McBeth, Mary Reid, Assoc Prof Eng, Indiana State Teachers Coll, Terre Haute, Ind [1905 N 8th St]
- McCabe, Edw S, Assoc Prof Eng, A and M. Coll, Stillwater, Okla [517 W Fifth St]
- McCain, Rea, Head Eng Dept, Bowling Green State Univ, Bowling Green, Ohio
- McCausland, Harriet Rosa-Lee, Teacher Eng, Palo Alto Sr H S, Palo Alto, Calif
- McCaw, Geneva Lee, 2728 Henry Hudson Pkwy, New York, N Y
- McClelland, George William, Provost, Prof. Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [College Hall]
- McClennen, Joshua, Instr Eng, U of Mich, Ann Arbor, Mich [1028 Martin Pl]
- McClure, Norman Egbert, Prof Eng, Ursinus Coll, Collegeville, Pa [30 6th Ave]
- McColley, Grant, Special Consultant, Inland Steel Co, 6511 S Blackstone, Chicago, Ill]
- McCorkle, Julia Norton, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ of Southern Calif, Los Angeles, Calif [4101 Budlong Ave]
- McCoy, John Franklin, Assoc. Prof. and Head Dept Mod Langs, Colby Coll, Waterville, Me [36 Morrill Ave]
- McCrimmon, Margaret Ferguson, Prof Rom Langs, Juniata Coll, Huntingdon, Pa.
- McCullough, Bruce Welker, Prof Eng, N. Y U, Wash Sq Coll, New York, N. Y. [56 N Monroe St, Ridgewood, N J.]
- McCutcheon, Roger Philip, Prof Eng, Tulane Univ., New Orleans, La [Gibson Hall]
- McDavid, Elizabeth Harris (Mrs Raven I McDavid, Jr), Eng Dept, Southern Ill Normal Univ., Carbondale, Ill [Box 91, S I. N U]
- McDavid, Raven Ioor, Jr, Visiting Fellow Linguistics, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn. [2835 Yale Sta]
- McDermott, John Francis, Asst. Prof. Eng, Washington Univ., St Louis, Mo.
- McDowell, Fred Peter Woll, Instr. Eng, Univ of Delaware, Newark, Del. [4840 Roosevelt Blvd, Phila, Pa]
- McDowell, John H, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [139 Vernon St]
- McDowell, Tremaine, Prof Eng, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [45 Barton Ave, S E.]
- McElderry, Bruce Robert, Jr, Assoc Prof Eng, State Coll of Washington, Pullman, Wash
- ❖ McElroy, Marion Tuttle (Mrs Ervin), 20 W Main St, Rockaway, N J
- McEuen, Daniel Carroll, Prof Eng, Grove City Coll, Grove City, Pa [509 Stewart Ave]
- McEwen, George Middleton, Instr Eng, Coll of Engineering, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1419 Henry St]
- McEwen, Mrs Marjorie Rickard, 106 Nevada St, Northfield, Minn
- McFarland, Mary Agnes, Head Eng Dept, Paris Jr. Coll, Paris, Tex. [125 Pine Bluff]
- McGallard, John C, Asst Prof Eng, State Univ. of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa
- McGee, Sidney Lamont, Prof and Head Mod Lang Dept, Tenn Poly. Inst, Cookeville, Tenn
- McGhee, Dorothy M, Prof and Head Rom. Langs Dept, Hamline Univ, St Paul, Minn
- McGill, Frederick Thomas, Jr, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ of Newark, Newark, N J [40 Rector St]
- McGillicuddy, Frances Lee, Southerland Jr H S, New York, N Y [435 W 119 St]
- McGinn, Donald J, Asst Prof Eng, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N J
- McGinnis, Myrta Ethel, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Fort Hays Kans State Coll, Hays, Kans
- McGlinchey, Claire, Instr. Eng, Hunter Coll, 695 Park Ave, New York, N. Y. [30 E 68 St]
- McGrail, Thomas Henry, Asst Prof, Eng, Univ of New Hampshire, Durham, N H [4 Church St, Dover]
- McGuire, Thomas Aloysius, Asst. Prof. French and Span, Michigan State Coll, E Lansing, Mich [640 Charles St]
- ❖ McHale, Carlos F, Author, 440 Riverside Dr, New York, N Y.
- McIntyre, Clara Frances, Prof Eng, Univ of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyo. [1406 Custer St.]

- McKay, Ruth Capers (Mrs Donald Cope McKay), 7040 Hampden Lane, Bethesda, Md.
- McKee, David Rice, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn [Box 149 Wesleyan Sta]
- McKee, Kenneth N, Asst Prof French, Wash. Sq Coll, N Y U, New York, N Y
- McKeehan, Irene Pettit, Prof Eng, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder, Colo
- McKeithan, Daniel Morley, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Univ Sta]
- ❖ McKenzie, Kenneth, Emer Prof Italian, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [9 Battle Rd]
- McKillop, Alan Dugald, Prof Eng, The Rice Inst, Houston, Tex.
- ❖ McKnight, George Harley, Prof Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- McKnight, William Albert, Instr Spanish, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C. [Box 183]
- McLaughlin, James Stanton, Asst Prof Eng, Oberlin Coll, Oberlin, Ohio [107 E College St]
- McLaughlin, Leo Plowden, S J, Instr. French, Brooklyn Preparatory School, 1150 Carroll St, Brooklyn, N Y
- McLaughlin, William Aloysius, Assoc Prof. Rom. Langs, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [813 Berkshure Rd]
- ❖ McLean, Charlotte Frelinghuysen, Montgomery Inn, 620 Montgomery Ave, Bryn Mawr, Pa
- McLeod, Malcolm, Prof and Head Dept. Eng, Carnegie Inst of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pa
- McLuhan, Herbert Marshall, Instr, St. Louis Univ, St Louis, Mo
- McManaway, James Gilmer, Asst. to Director, Folger Shakespeare Memorial Lib, Washington, D C
- McMaster, Helen (Mrs F.H.), Dept Lit and Lang, Sarah Lawrence Coll, Bronxville, N Y [23 Desmond Ave]
- McMillan, James B, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ. of Alabama, Univ, Ala [Box 1543]
- McMullen, Jennie M, Minneapolis, Minn [2256 W Lake of the Isles Blvd]
- McNeal, Thomas H, Prof Eng, East Tex. State Teachers Coll., Commerce, Tex.
- McNeir, Waldo Forest, Asst. Prof Eng, No Tex State Teachers Coll, Denton, Tex.
- McNerney, Robert F., Jr., Asst. Prof Spanish, Lehigh Univ., Bethlehem, Pa.
- McPhee, Marguerite Cameron, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [224 Andrews Hall]
- McQuiston, Raymer, Assoc Prof Eng, Ohio Univ, Athens, Ohio [48 Mill St]
- Mead, Douglass Sargeant, Prof Eng Lit, Pennsylvania State Coll, State College, Pa [617 Sunset Rd]
- ❖ Mead, William Edward, Prof. Emeritus Eng, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn [Haddam, Conn]
- Meech, Sanford Brown, Assoc Prof Eng, Ill Inst of Tech, Chicago, Ill [725 Foster St, Evanston]
- Meessen, Hubert J, Asst Prof German, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. [214 Folwell Hall]
- Meibergen, C R, General Post Office, Box 451, New York, N Y
- Melcher, Edith, Asst. Prof French, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass [14 Woodridge Rd]
- Melvin, Harold Wesley, Chairman Eng Dept, Dean of Students, Northeastern Univ, Boston, Mass [360 Huntington Ave]
- Melz, Fritz, Instr For Langs, Univ of Nevada, Reno, Nev [115 W. Tenth St]
- Mencken, H L, 1524 Hollins St, Baltimore, Md
- Mengers, Marie Christiansen, Grad Stud French, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [421 W 118 St]
- Menner, Robert James, Prof Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [531 Ellsworth Ave]
- Mensel, Ann Elizabeth (Mrs. Ernst E.), Assoc Prof German, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [262 Bridge St]
- Menut, Albert Douglas, Prof. Rom Langs, Univ of Syracuse, Syracuse, N. Y.
- Merceron-Corby, Marie Geneviève, Asst Prof French, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Merigold, Dorothy C (Mrs), Supervisor Teacher Training, Univ of Calif. at Los Angeles, Calif [1954 Greenfield Ave., Los Angeles]
- Meritt, Herbert Dean, Assoc Prof. Eng, Stanford Univ, Calif
- Merkel, Gottfried Felix, Assoc Prof and Head Dept Germanic Langs, Upsala Coll, E Orange, N J [248 Glenwood Ave]
- Merlino, Camillo Pascal, Prof. Rom. Langs., Coll Liberal Arts, Boston Univ, Boston, Mass.

- Merriam, Harold G, Prof Eng, Montana State Univ, Missoula, Mont
- Merrill, Robert Valentine, Asst Prof French, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Merrill, Walter McIntosh, Grad Stud Eng, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [41 Linnaean St]
- Mersand, Joseph L, Instr Eng, Boys H S, Bklyn, N Y [284 Montauk Ave]
- Mesick, Jane Louise, Dean, Simmons Coll, Boston, Mass
- Metcalf, George J, Asst Prof German, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [1418 E 57 St]
- ❖ Metcalf, John Calvin, Linden Kent Prof Eng Lit, Univ of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va [Rosser Ave]
- Métivier, Marguerite, Assoc Prof French, Wheaton Coll, Norton, Mass
- Metlen, Michael, German Dept, Loyola Univ, Rogers Park Campus, Chicago, Ill [4221 Broadway]
- Metzdorf, Robert F, Bibliographer, Curator, R B Adam Collection, Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y [Rush Rhees Lib]
- Meyer, Erika M, Asst Prof. German, Mt Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass
- Meyer, George Wilbur, Asst Prof Eng, Cleveland Coll, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio [3577 Normandy Rd, Shaker Hgts]
- ❖ Meyer, Heinrich, Instr German, Rice Inst, Houston, Tex
- Meyer, John H, Grad Stud French, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [5842 Stony Island Ave, Apt 4G]
- Meylan, Edward F, Asst Prof. French, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [Box 14, Wheeler Hall]
- Mezger, Fritz, Prof Germanic Phil, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa [Oak Hill Farm, Henderson Rd, Bridgeport]
- Mezzacappa, Antonio L, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Northeastern Univ, Boston, Mass
- ❖ Mezzoteio, Richard Francis, Chairman Mod Lang Dept, Hamden H. S., Hamden, Conn [124 Benham St]
- Michael, Wolfgang F, Asst Prof German, Chestnut Hill Coll, Chestnut Hill, Pa [Villa Nova, Pa]
- Michaud, Charles Regis, Instr For. Langs, U S. Naval Acad., Annapolis, Md [156 Prince George St]
- Micks, Wilson, Asst Prof French, Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y
- Miguéis, José Rodrigues, Assoc. Editor, Selecções do Reader's Digest [311 E 17 St, New York, N Y]
- Milano, Paul, Instr Rom Langs, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y [98-39 65 Rd, Forest Hills]
- Miles, Josephine, Instr Eng, Univ of Calif, Berkeley, Calif [2605 Haste St]
- ✉ Miles, Theodore, Instr Eng, Wayne U, Detroit, Mich [Adv Nav Trn School, Treasure Island, San Francisco, Calif]
- Mill, Anna Jean, Assoc Prof Eng Lit, Mt Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass
- Millar, Kenneth Charles, Copywriter, Montgomery Ward and Co, Chicago, Ill [4114 Clarendon Ave]
- Mullen, Rev Michael, Pastor, St Charles Methodist Church, St Charles, Iowa
- Miller, C William, Instr Eng, Univ of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va [#6 George Apt]
- Miller, Dawn Logan (Mrs James M Miller), Assoc Prof. Eng, Waynesburg Coll, Waynesburg, Pa
- Miller, Edmund Erskine, Univ of Maryland, Coll Park, Md [Creek Beeches, Old Powder Mill Rd, Hyattsville, Md.]
- Miller, Edmund Erskine, Univ of Maryland, Balti, Md [Creek Beeches, Old Powder Mill Rd, Hyattsville, Md]
- Miller, Edwin Haviland, Co H, 1301st Service Unit, New Cumberland, Pa [929 Sixth Ave, Bethlehem]
- Miller, Frances Schouler, Instr, Hobart and Wm Smith Colls, Geneva, N Y.
- Miller, James McDonald, Prof Eng, Waynesburg Coll, Waynesburg, Pa
- Miller, Joan Chaffe, Assoc Prof Eng, La. State Univ, University, La
- ❖ Miller, John Richardson, Assoc Prof French, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Miller, L Gardner, Instr French, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif [11414 Cashmere St, W. Los Angeles]
- Miller, (Mrs) Maria Tastevin, Prof French, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Miller, Minnie M, Head Mod Langs Dept, Kans State Teachers Coll, Emporia, Kans
- Miller, Richard R, French Dept, Hotchkiss School, Lakeville, Conn
- Miller, Victor Clyde, Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, Indiana State Teachers Coll, Terre Haute, Ind
- Miller, Walther Martin, Prof For. Langs, Valparaiso Univ, Valparaiso, Ind
- Miller, William Hubert, Grad Stud., Columbia Univ, New York, N. Y. [122 E. 82 St.]

- Miller, William Marion, Assoc. Prof Rom Langs, Miami Univ, Oxford, Ohio [Woodland Terrace]
- Millett, Fred Benjamin, Prof Eng, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn [Honors Coll, Wesleyan Univ]
- Millican, C Bowie, Assoc Prof. Eng, N Y Univ, New York, N Y, (On leave Major, Gen Staff Corps, U S Army [4309 N Pershing Dr, Buckingham, Arlington, Va.])
- Miligan, Burton, Instr Eng, Univ of Ill, Urbana, Ill [805 S First St, Champaign]
- Mills, Laurens Joseph, Assoc Prof Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [717 S High St, R R 3]
- Milwitzky, William, Supervisor Dept Mod Langs, Newark Board of Education, 48 N 10 St, Newark, N. J
- Mineka, Francis Edward, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ. of Texas, Austin, Tex. [2408 Main Bldg]
- Miner, Louie M, Asst Prof Eng, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y [130 Columbia Hgts]
- Minor, Ainslie B, Instr Spanish, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N. J [11 Cleveland Lane]
- Minton, Arthur, 17 Middagh St, Bklyn, N Y
- Mirrielees, Edith Ruth, Assoc Prof Eng. Lit, Stanford Univ, Calif [Box 926]
- Misrahi, Jean, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Grad School, Fordham Univ, New York, N. Y [Keating Hall]
- Mitchell, George Rankin, Instr Eng, Temple Univ, Phila, Pa
- Mitchell, Lee, Asst Prof Drama, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Mitchell, Mrs Pearl Beattie, Instr Eng, Arcadia Jr Coll., Arcadia, Calif.
- ❖ Mitchell, Robert McBurney, Prof Germ Langs and Lits., Brown Univ, Providence, R I [90 Congdon St]
- Mizener, Arthur M, 29 Audubon St, Rochester, N. Y
- Moehlenbrock, Arthur Henry, Instr German, Tulane Univ, New Orleans, La
- Moffatt, Lucius Gaston, Chairman School of Romanic Langs, Univ. of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va [P O Box 1373, Univ. Sta.]
- Mohl, Ruth, 20 Remsen St, Bklyn, N Y.
- Mohlenhoff, George B, Grad Stud. Eng, John Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md [205 Wendover Rd, Guilford, Balti]
- ❖ Mohme, Erwin Theodor, Prof. German, Univ of Southern California, Los Angeles, Calif
- Mohr, Franz Karl, Asst Prof German, Univ of Virginia, Univ, Va [Box 1016 Univ Sta, Charlottesville]
- von Mohrenschildt, Dimitri, Visiting Lect Russian Civilization, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H
- Moloney, Michael F, Instr Eng, Wright Jr Coll, 3400 N Austin Ave, Chicago, Ill
- Monaco, Marion, Instr French, Swarthmore Coll, Swarthmore, Pa
- Monk, Samuel Holt, Assoc Prof Eng, Southwestern Coll, Memphis, Tenn
- Monroe, N Elizabeth, Asst Prof Eng, Brooklyn Coll, Bklyn, N Y [34 Ridgeway Ave, St Cloud, W Orange, N J]
- Monroe, Robert E, Prof Rom Langs, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- du Mont, Francis Meyer, Head Dept Rom Langs, Pennsylvania State Coll, State College, Pa [439 W Park Ave]
- Montgomery, Clifford Marvin, Prof Rom. Langs., Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Univ Sta]
- Montgomery, Esther Dean, Instr. Eng, Lincoln H S, Lincoln, Neb [Apt 202, 501 S 13 St]
- Montgomery, Frances Kathleen, Asst. Prof Rom Langs, Univ. of Western Ontario, London, Canada [286 Piccadilly St]
- Montgomery, Franz Jackson, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [122 Folwell Hall]
- Mood, Robert Gibbs, Jr, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Wichita, Wichita, Kans
- Moody, Dorothy, Instr. Eng., Canal Zone Jr Coll, Balboa, Canal Zone [Box 261, Balboa Hgts]
- Mooney, Emory Aubert, Jr, Asst. Prof Eng, Newcomb Coll, Tulane Univ., New Orleans, La
- ❖ Moore, Carlisle, Asst Prof Eng, Mich. State Normal Coll, Ypsilanti, Mich [Lieut, (jg), U S S Thomas Jefferson, c/o Postmaster, N Y C.]
- Moore, Cecil Albert, Prof Eng, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [339 Mt. Curve Blvd., St. Paul]
- Moore, Charlotte, c/o No 84, 222 W. 4th St, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Moore, Mrs. E P., 519 Hamilton Ave, St. Louis, Mo
- Moore, Earl Austin, Prof Eng, Western Kentucky State Teachers Coll, Bowling Green, Ky. [1580 Normal Dr]

- Moore, Elise H, Asst Prof Eng, Miss State Coll for Women, Columbus, Miss
- Moore, Elizabeth Lowndes, Acting Head Mod Lang Dept, Meredith Coll, Raleigh, N C [1325 Market St Parkersburg, W Va]
- Moore, Ernest Richard, Asst Prof Span, Oberlin Coll, Oberlin, O [47 Morgan St]
- Moore, Fritz, Prof and Chairman Dept Mod Langs, Kansa State Coll, Manhattan, Kans
- Moore, Grace Edna, 59 Fairview Ave, Morrisville, Pa
- Moore, Jerome A, Prof For Langs, State Coll for Women, Denton, Tex [Box 3747, T S C W Sta]
- Moore, John Frederic, Asst Prof Eng, Connecticut Coll, New London, Conn
- ❖ Moore, John Richard, Ala Poly Inst, Auburn, Ala [Box 82]
- Moore, John Robert, Prof Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [611 S Jordan Ave]
- Moore, Maurice A, Jr, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of the South, Sewanee, Tenn
- Moore, Nancy, Asst Prof Eng, Butler Univ, Indianapolis, Ind [2933 N Pennsylvania St]
- ❖ Moore, Olin Harris, Prof Rom Langs., Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Moore, Robert E, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [2718 Yale Sta]
- ❖ Morand, Mrs. Ruth Shepard Phelps, c/o Messrs Morgan et Cie, 14 Place Vendome, Paris, France
- Morby, Edwin S, Instr Spanish, U of Calif, Berkeley, Calif [2949 Shasta Rd]
- ❖ More, Robert Pattison, Assoc. Prof German, Lehigh Univ., Bethlehem, Pa [1830 Main St]
- Morehouse, Andrew Richmond, Assoc Prof French, Yale Univ., New Haven, Conn [1543 Yale Sta]
- ❖ Morgan, Bayard Quincy, Prof German, Stanford Univ., Calif [703 Santa Maria Ave]
- ❖ Morgan, Charlotte E, Assoc Prof. Eng, Brooklyn Coll, Brooklyn, N. Y [1173 Bushwick Ave]
- Morgan, (Mrs) June J, 712 Neosho St, Emporia, Kans.
- 🏠 Morgan, Junius S, 23 Wall St., New York, N Y
- Morgan, Lawrence N., Prof Eng., Univ. of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla. [Faculty Exch.]
- Morgan, Rose Ruth, Assoc. Prof Eng, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans [1101 Missouri St]
- Morgan, Stewart S, Prof Eng, A and M Coll of Texas, College Station, Tex [Box 144 F E]
- Morize, André, Prof French Lit, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass. [145 Widener Library]
- Morley, Sylvanus Griswold, Prof Spanish, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [2635 Etna St]
- Morphopoulos, Panos P, Instr Rom Langs, The Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md
- Morrill, Dorothy Isabella, Prof Eng, Hood Coll, Frederick, Md
- ❖ Morris, John, Prof Germ Langs, Univ of Georgia, Athens, Ga [145 Mell St]
- Morris, Robert L, Instr Eng, Univ of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Ark
- Morrison, Florence Irene, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Butler Univ, Indianapolis, Ind [4628 Washington Blvd]
- Morrison, Lois Goddard (Mrs Dale Morrison), Trinity Univ, San Antonio, Tex
- Morrisette, Bruce Archer, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Washington Univ, St Louis, Mo
- 🏠 Morton, Clinton Orlando, U S Army (620 Monmouth Ave, Spring Lake, N J)
- Morton, Inez, Route 3, Bluff City, Tenn
- Moser, Gerald M, Master Langs, Oxford Acad, Pleasantville, N J [326 E 89 St, New York, N Y]
- 🏠 Moses, W R, c/o E S Petway, Windzor Dr, Nashville, Tenn
- 🏠 Moses, Walter L, 71st CA Regt (AA), Haines Point, Wash
- Mossner, Ernest Campbell, Assoc Prof Eng, Syracuse Univ, Syracuse, N Y [833 Univ Ave]
- Most, Ralph Christian, 3662 Frankford Ave, Phila, Pa
- Mott, Frank Luther, Director and Prof, Sch of Journalism, Univ. of Iowa, Iowa City, Ia [1400 Anthony St, Columbia, Mo]
- Motter, Thomas Hubbard Vail, 365 W 20th St, New York, N Y.
- Moulton, William Gamwell, Instr. German, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [81 Mansfield St]
- Mounts, Charles Eugene, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Florida, Gainesville, Fla [122 Ferndale Rd]
- Mounts, David Lee, Minister, Methodist Church, Banning, Calif [265 N Second St]
- Mowry, Charles E, Capt, U S Mil Acad West Point, N. Y.

- Mueller, Walter Julius, Instr. German, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y [Goldwin Smith Hall]
- Mueschke, Paul, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Mulhauser, Frederick L, Jr, Instr Eng, Pomona Coll, Claremont, Calif [1227 Dartmouth Ave]
- Mulhauser, Ruth, Instr., Hiram Coll., Hiram, Ohio
- Muller, Erich, Lect Mod Langs, Univ of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada
- Muller, Henri Francois, Prof Rom Philology, Barnard Coll, Columbia Univ., New York, N Y
- Muller, Herbert J, Dept Eng and Speech, Purdue Univ, Lafayette, Ind
- Muller, Leonard R, Asst. Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Miami, Coral Gables, Fla
- Muller, Otto, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, The City Coll, New York, N Y [69-40 Continental Ave, Forest Hills]
- Muller, Siegfried H, Instr German, Adelphi Coll., Garden City, N Y [3977 51 St, Woodside]
- Mullins, Marjorie, Head French Dept, Mary Inst, Washington Univ, St Louis, Mo [McMillan Hall]
- Mulloy, William J, Asst Prof German, Univ. of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif
- Munce, T. Edward, Jr, 2204 Chestnut St, Harrisburg, Pa
- ❖ Munn, James Buell, Prof Eng, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [58 Garden St]
- Murbach, Mrs Janet M, Prof French, Eastern Ky. State Teachers Coll, Richmond, Ky [338 Lancaster Ave]
- Murch, Herbert Spencer, Assoc Prof Eng, Princeton Univ., Princeton, N J [Class of 1903 Rooms, '03 Hall]
- ❖ Murdock, Kenneth Ballard, Prof Eng, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass. [416 Widener Lib]
- Murphy, Charles D, Asst Prof Eng, Univ. of Maryland, College Park, Md
- Murphy, Mallie John, National Geographic Society, Washington, D C
- Musser, Paul Howard, Dean of the Coll, Prof Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila., Pa [729 Bedford Pl, Merion]
- Mustard, Helen Meredith, Instr German, Randolph-Macon Woman's Coll, Lynchburg, Va
- ❖ Muyskens, John Henry, Asst Prof Phonetics, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. [230 Wildwood Ave]
- Myatt, Susie Elizabeth, Head Dept For Langs, McMurry Coll, Abilene, Tex [McMurry Sta]
- ❖ Myers, Rowland Mason, Instr French, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Lt, 502nd Coast Arty, Patterson, N J]
- Myers, Walter L, Prof Eng, Univ of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa [3245 Latonia Ave, Dormont]
- Myers, Weldon Thomas, Prof Eng, Converse Coll, Spartanburg, S C [251 N. Fairview Ave]
- Myhr, Ivar Lou, Asst Prof Eng, Hollins Coll, Va.
- Myrick, Arthur Beckwith, Prof Rom Langs and Lits, Univ of Vermont, Burlington, Vt [148 Summit St]
- Myrick, Kenneth Orne, Assoc Prof Eng, Tufts Coll, Medford, Mass [101 Allston St, W Medford]
- Myron, Herbert Benjamin, Jr, Prof French, Boston Univ, Coll of Liberal Arts, Boston, Mass [8 Plympton St, Cambridge]
- Myrvaagnes, Kaspar O, Asst Prof German, Alfred Univ, Alfred, N Y.
- Naeseth, Henriette C, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Augustana Coll, Rock Island, Ill
- Nagel, Elsa L, Instr German, U of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [1604 University Ave]
- Nagle, Ruth F, 170 Reservoir Road, Brookline, Mass
- Nagler, Alois M, Asst Librarian, Dept of Drama, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [204 Park St]
- Nance, Mrs Gusta B, Instr Comp Lit, Southern Methodist Univ, Dallas, Tex. [4136 San Carlos]
- Nangle, Benjamin Christie, Assoc Prof Eng., Yale Univ., New Haven, Conn [1492 Yale Sta]
- Nannes, Caspar Harold, Instr Eng, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N J
- ❖ Nason, Arthur Huntington, Prof. Eng. Emer, N. Y. Univ, New York, N. Y. [304 Brunswick Ave, Gardiner, Me]
- Nathan, Edward I, Bruselas 902, Col Mirador, Monterrey, Mexico
- Naumann, Walter, Prof Mod Langs, McPherson Coll, McPherson, Kans.
- Navarro, Tomás, Prof Spanish Phil, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y.
- Naylor, Louis Hastings, Assoc. Prof. Rom-Langs, Trinity Coll, Hartford, Conn
- Neale-Silva, Eduardo, Asst. Prof. Spanish,

- Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [Box 59 Bascom Hall]
- Nearing, Mrs Alice J, 1101 N 63 St, Phila, Pa
- Nearing, Homer, Episcopal Acad, Overbrook, Pa [1101 N 63 St, Phila]
- Neely, Mrs Julia, Box 559, Norman, Okla
- Neff, Emery E, Assoc Prof Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [Philosophy Hall]
- Nehring, Alfons A, Assoc Prof Comp Phil, Marquette Univ, Milwaukee, Wis [1712 N Prospect Ave]
- ❖ Neill, James Kerby, Asst Prof Eng, The Catholic Univ of America, Wash, D C
- ❖ Neilson, William Allan, President Emeritus, Prof Emeritus Eng Lang & Lit, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [Falls Village, Conn]
- 🏠 Neiman, Fraser, Instr Eng., Coll of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va [704 Blair Ave]
- Nelson, Augusta C, Editorial Asst, U of Minn, Minneapolis, Minn. [521 6th St, S E]
- Nelson, David T, Prof Eng, Luther Coll, Decorah, Iowa [409 High St]
- Nelson, Frank G, Norwegian Lecture Bureau, 2720 34 St, N W. Washington, D C [611 N 23 St, St. Joseph, Mo]
- Nelson, Iver N, Asst Prof Spanish, Univ of Calif, Coll of Agric, Davis, Calif
- Nelson, John Herbert, Prof Eng, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan
- Nelson, Lawrence E, Chairman Eng Dept, Univ of Redlands, Redlands, Calif [811 N University]
- Nelson, Rowland Whiteway, Asst Prof Eng, Washington and Lee Univ, Lexington, Va. [P O Box 632]
- Nelson, William, Teacher Eng, Morris H S, New York, N. Y [21-14 77 St, Jackson Hgts]
- Ness, Frederic W, Instr Eng and Hist, U S. Naval Acad, Annapolis, Md.
- Nethercot, Arthur Hobart, Prof. Eng, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [811 Central St]
- ❖ Nettleton, George Henry, Prof Eng, Yale U, New Haven, Conn [570 Prospect St]
- Neumann, Joshua H, Assoc. Prof Eng., Brooklyn Coll., Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N. Y. [340 Riverside Dr, N. Y. C.]
- Neumann, R, French Dept, Carthage Coll., Carthage, Ill. [Box 328]
- Neuse, Werner, Assoc. Prof. German, Middlebury Coll, Middlebury, Vt [21 South St]
- Newlin, Nicholas, Asst Instr Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [1804 Pine St]
- Newman, Evelyn, Chairman Div Lit and Langs, State Coll of Ed, Greeley, Colo
- Newstead, Helaine, Asst Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [118 E 93 St]
- Nichols, Charles Washburn, Assoc Prof Eng, U of Minn, Minneapolis, Minn
- ❖ Nichols, Edwin Bryant, Prof Rom Langs, DePauw Univ, Greencastle, Ind [707 E Seminary St]
- Nichols, Madaline W, Lect Spanish, Georgetown Visitation Jr. Coll, Washington, D C [211 Delaware Ave, S W]
- 🏠 Nicol, Theodore, Instr. Rom Langs, Stanford Univ, Calif [On leave U S Army]
- Nicolai, Martha, Asst Prof German, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y. [4 Jackson Ct]
- Nicolson, Marjorie Hope, Prof Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [Philosophy Hall]
- Niedert, George T, Outlook Dr, Noroton, Conn
- Niemeyer, Carl Anthony, Instr Eng, Herzl Jr. Coll, Chicago, Ill [6137 Kenwood Ave]
- 🏠 Niess, Robert Judson, Lt, 117 Paschal, San Antonio, Tex
- Nipp, Francis S, Instr Eng, Univ. of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [Andrews Hall 118]
- Nissen, Elizabeth, Asst. Prof. Rom Langs, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [2440 Blaisdell Ave]
- Nitchie, Elizabeth, Prof Eng, Goucher Coll, Baltimore, Md
- ❖ Nitze, William Albert, Prof and Head Dept Rom Langs, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [557 Kelton Ave, Westwood, Los Angeles, Calif]
- Nobbe, George, Assoc Eng, Asst. to the Dean, Columbia Coll, New York, N Y [R.D. 2, Westport, Conn]
- Nobbe, Susanne H (Mrs George), Asst Prof Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [R D. #2, Westport, Conn]
- Nock, Samuel Albert, Vice-President, Kansas State Coll, Manhattan, Kans
- Nolan, Edward Francis, Asst Prof Eng Presbyterian Coll, Clinton, S C. [c/o Mrs Perry Moore, E Maple St]
- Nollé, Alfred Henry, Dean of College and Prof. German, Southwest Texas State

- Teachers Coll , San Marcos, Tex [116 W. Matthews St]
- Nolte, Fred O, Prof German, Washington Univ , St Louis, Mo [6843 Kingsbury Blvd]
- Nordmeyer, George, Instr German, Yale Univ , New Haven, Conn [2070 Yale Sta]
- Nordmeyer, Henry W, Chairman German Dept , Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [2303 Lewanee Dr]
- Norman, Hilda Laura, Asst Prof Rom Langs , Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Norris, Edward Taylor, Instr Eng , Johns Hopkins Univ , Baltimore, Md
- Norris, Walter Blake, Prof Eng and Hist , U S Naval Academy, Wardour, Annapolis, Md
- North, William R, Chairman Eng Dept , State Teachers Coll , Lock Haven, Pa
- ❖ Northup, Clark Sutherland, Prof Eng , Cornell Univ , Ithaca, N Y [407 Elmwood Ave]
- ❖ Northup, George Tyler, Emer Prof Spanish Lit , Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [214 Avenida Cortez, La Jolla, Calif]
- Norton, Dan S, Acting Asst Prof Eng , Univ of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va [1707 Bruce Ave]
- Norton, Ethel C, Prof French and German, Judson Coll , Marion, Ala
- Norwood, Joseph Edwards, Prof Eng Lit , Univ of South Carolina, Columbia, S C [615 Pickens St]
- Norwood, Luella Fredericka, 406 Humphrey St , New Haven, Conn
- ❖ Noss, Mary Theodora, Prof French, Ohio Univ , Athens, Ohio [48 Univ Terrace]
- Nostrand, Howard Lee, Prof and Exec. Officer Rom Langs , Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash
- Notopoulos, James Anastasios, Asst Prof Greek, Trinity Coll , Hartford, Conn
- Noyes, E Louise, Head Eng Dept , Santa Barbara H. S , Santa Barbara, Calif [4 Victoria Court]
- Noyes, Gertrude Elizabeth, Asst Prof Eng , Connecticut Coll , New London, Conn [484 Montauk Ave]
- Noyes, Robert Gale, Assoc Prof Eng , Brown Univ , Providence, R. I.
- Noyes, Russell, Assoc Prof. and Chairman Eng Dept , Indiana Univ., Bloomington, Ind. [831 S High St]
- Nugent, Elizabeth M, Asst. Prof. Eng , Seton Hall Coll , Newark, N. J [240 E. 79 St., New York, N. Y.]
- Nugent, Homer Heath, Prof and Head Eng. Dept , Rensselaer Poly Inst , Troy, N Y. [6 Georgian Ct]
- Nunemaker, J Horace, Prof & Head Dept For Langs , State Coll of Washington, Pullman, Wash
- Nuzum, David Graham, Head Eng Dept , Potomac State School of W Va Univ , Keyser, W Va
- Nyabongo, Mis Virginia Simmons, Univ Fellow French, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison Wis [429 N Park St]
- Nye, Russel Blaine, Instr. Eng , Mich State Coll , E Lansing, Mich.
- Oake, Roger B , Instr Mod Langs , Princeton Univ , Princeton, N J
- Oakes, Catherine, Asst Prof Eng , Connecticut Coll for Women, New London, Conn [Knowlton House]
- O'Brien, Justin McCortney, Asst Prof French, Columbia Univ , New York, N Y [South Hall]
- O'Brien, Thomas L , S J , Instl Eng , Gonzaga Univ , Spokane, Wash
- O'Connell, Rev Thomas G V., S J , Instl Eng , Canisius Coll , Buffalo, N Y [Woodstock Coll , Woodstock, Md]
- O'Connor, Rev Eugene Joseph, S J , Head Eng Dept , Loyola Univ , New Orleans, La
- ❖ O'Connor, Norreys Jephson, 2357 Lambert Dr , Pasadena, Calif
- O'Daniel, Therman Benjamin, Assoc Prof Eng , Ft Valley State Coll , Ft Valley, Ga
- Odchrecht, August, Prof Mod Langs , Denison Univ , Granville, Ohio [Box 353]
- Odell, Ruth, Instr Eng , Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb
- ❖ O'Donnell, George Hugh Roe, Prof French and German, Russell Sage Coll , Troy, N Y.
- O'Donnell, William Gregory, Asst Eng , Yale School of Music, Yale Univ , New Haven, Conn [2195 Yale Sta]
- Odum, Gertrude Gilmer, Prof. Eng , Georgia State Womans Coll , Valdosta, Ga
- Oechler, William Franklyn, Teaching Fellow German, Harvard Univ , Cambridge, Mass. [18 Chauncy St]
- Oelschläger, Victor Rudolph Bernhardt, Instr Spanish, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [1311 W. Dayton St]
- Ogburn, Vincent Holland, Prof Eng. and Journalism, Eastern N M. Coll , Portales, N. M.

- Ogden, Henry V S, Instr Eng, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Ogden, John Deason, 3620 Hill Rd, Little Rock, Ark
- ❖ Ogden, Phillip, Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- O'Hara, Frank Hurburt, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Ohlmann, Gilbert S, Instr Eng, Univ of Louisville, Ky [1746 Deer Park]
- Olinger, Henry C, Assoc Prof French, School of Ed, New York Univ, New York, N Y [Pices 3]
- Oliver, Revilo Pendleton, Asst, Classics Dept, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [802 Ohio St]
- ❖ Oliver, Thomas Edward, Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [1004 W California Ave]
- ❖ Oliver, Walter, Textile Supt and Designer, Danielson, Conn
- Oller, Jack Ezra, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Juniata Coll, Huntingdon, Pa [1801 Mifflin St]
- ❖ Olmsted, Everett Ward, Emer Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [808 Mt. Curve Ave]
- Olmsted, Richard Hubbell, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Texas Coll of Mines, El Paso, Tex [811 McKelligon Ave]
- 🇺🇸 Olney, Clarke, Lieut Commr, U S N R, U S. Naval Acad, Annapolis, Md
- Olsen, M Ellsworth, Prof Eng, The Home Study Inst, 502 Flower Ave, Takoma Park, Washington, D. C
- Olson, Clair Colby, Chairman Eng Dept, Coll of the Pacific, Stockton, Calif
- Oman, William M, Manager, Coll. Dept, Oxford Univ Press, 114 Fifth Ave, New York, N. Y
- O'Neill, Rev Burke, S J, Prof Eng, Univ of Detroit, McNichols Rd at Livernois, Detroit, Mich
- O'Neill, E H., Dir, Biblio of Amer Lit., Fed Hist Records Survey, W P A, U of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [College Hall]
- O'Neill, Elmer Wesley, Jr, Instr French and Span, Wm Penn Charter Sch, Phila, Pa [5515 Wissahickon Ave, Germantown, Phila.]
- Ong, Walter J, S J, Instr. Eng., Acting Chairman Div Lang & Lit, Regis Coll, Denver, Colo
- de Onis, Federico, Columbia Univ, 435 W. 117 St, New York, N. Y.
- 🇺🇸 Opulente, Blaise John, Instr. Span, St John's Univ, Bklyn, N Y. [96 Schermerhorn St]
- Orbeck, Anders, Assoc Prof Eng, Michigan State Coll, E Lansing, Mich
- Ordon, Edmund, Instr Eng, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich
- Orians, G Harrison, Prof Eng, Univ. of Toledo, Toledo, Ohio [181 N Sefner Ave, Marion]
- Ortega, Joaquin, Dir, School of Inter-American Affairs, Prof Spanish, Univ of New Mexico, Albuquerque, N M [611 N. Guard Ave]
- Orwen, William Raymond, Jr, Grad Stud, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y. [90 Aberdeen St, Rochester]
- Osborn, Annie Marion, Instr Eng, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y [27 Sycamore Ave, Mt Vernon]
- ❖ Osborn, James M, Res Assoc Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [1914 Yale Sta]
- Osborn, Louise Brown, Head Eng Dept, Central H S, Evansville, Ind [Box 295, Newburgh]
- Osborne, Mary Tom, Asst Prof. Eng, N. Tex State Teachers Coll, Denton, Tex [Box 5631, N T S T C]
- Osborne, Nancy Fontaine, Grad Stud. French, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y. [Paces, Va]
- ❖ Osgood, Charles Grosvenor, Prof Emer. Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N. J [92 Stockton St]
- ❖ Osthaus, Carl Wilhelm Ferdinand, 1016 Tiverton Ave, Apt 205, Los Angeles, Calif.
- O'Sullivan, Mary Isabelle, Prof Eng, Rosemont Coll, Rosemont, Pa [4230 Otter St, Phila]
- Otis, William Bradley, Prof Eng Lang and Lit, The City Coll, 139 St and Convent Ave, New York, N Y
- ❖ Ott, John Henry, Prof Eng Lang. and Lit, Northwestern Coll, Watertown, Wis.
- Overman, Rev Conleth, Instr Eng, Passionist Preparatory Seminary, 7101 Natural Bridge Ave, St Louis, Mo
- Overton, C May, Asst. Prof Eng, S. D State Coll of A and M Arts, Brookings, S D.
- Owen, Carroll Hepburn, 69 Larchmont Rd, Buffalo, N Y
- Owen, John Isaac, Asst Eng, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill
- Owens, John Henry, Head For Lang. Dept.,

- Mich State Normal Coll , Ypsilanti, Mich [416 Pearl]
- ❖ Owings, Marvin Alpheus, Chairman Lang Div , Georgia Teachers Coll , Collegeboro, Ga. [166 Alabama St , Spartanburg, S C]
- Owre, Jacob Rus, Prof Spanish, Univ of Miami, Coral Gables, Fla
- Oyarzabal, Anita, Asst Prof Spanish, Wellesley Coll , Wellesley, Mass
- Pacey, William Cyril Desmond, Prof Eng , Brandon Coll , Brandon, Manitoba, Can.
- Paden, William Doremus, Asst Prof Eng , Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans
- Padín, José, Mod Lang Editor, D C Heath and Co , 285 Columbus Ave , Boston, Mass
- ❖ Page, Curtis Hidden, Gilmanton, N H
- Paine, Gregory, Prof Eng , Univ of N C , Chapel Hill, N C
- Pamter, Anna Mercy, Chairman Eng Dept , Northwest Missouri State Teachers Coll , Maryville, Mo [616 N Buchanan St]
- ❖ Palfrey, Thomas Rossman, Prof Rom Langs , Northwestern Univ , Evanston, Ill
- Palleske, Siegwalt O , Asst Prof Rom Langs , Miami Univ , Oxford, Ohio [216 E Church St]
- Palmer, Francis W , Prof and Head Eng Dept , Dean of Coll , Kansas Wesleyan Univ , Salina, Kans
- ❖ Palmer, Philip Mason, Prof German, Lehigh Univ , Bethlehem, Pa
- Palmer, Philip Motley, Asst Prof German, Univ. of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Panaroni, Alfred G , Assoc Prof Rom Langs , The City Coll , New York, N. Y.
- Pane, Remigio Ugo, Instr Rom Langs , Rutgers Univ , New Brunswick, N J
- Pap, Leo, Instr Span and Portuguese, Brown Univ , Providence, R I [249 Thayer St]
- Pape, Eulalie, Asst Prof Mod Langs , Central Coll , Fayette, Mo [Givens Hall]
- ❖ Park, Clyde William, Prof Eng , Coll of Engineering and Commerce, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Park, Mary Cathryne, Grad Stud Eng , Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila , Pa [610 E. 14 St , Chester]
- Park, Rosemary, Asst. Prof German, Conn Coll. for Women, New London, Conn.
- Parker, Alice, Assoc Prof Eng , Lindenwood Coll , St Charles, Mo [135 Anderson St]
- Parker, Clifford Stetson, Prof and Head Dept. Langs , Univ. of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H.
- ❖ Parker, Jack Horace, Instr Spanish, Indiana U , Bloomington, Ind [216 Deloraine Ave , Toronto, Can]
- Parker, James Treat, Asst Instr Hist , Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila , Pa [20 Grad House]
- Parker, Richard Alexander, Asst Prof Rom. Langs , N Y Univ , New York, N Y [University Heights]
- Parker, Roscoe Edward, Prof Eng , Univ. of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn
- ❖ Parker, William Ruley, Assoc Prof Eng , Ohio State Univ , Columbus, Ohio
- ❖ Parks, Edd Winfield, Assoc Prof Eng , Univ of Georgia, Athens, Ga [On leave 2nd Lt , Signal Corps, AUS, 305 B, Highland Halls, Arlington, Va]
- Parks, George B , Assoc Prof Eng , Queens Coll , Flushing, N Y
- Parlett, Mathilde Mayer, Eng Dept , Shorter Coll , Rome, Ga
- Parmenter, Clarence Edward, Prof Rom. Phonetics, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [Box 234, Faculty Exch]
- Parr, Johnstone, Instr. Eng , Univ of Alabama, University, Ala [Box 1915]
- Parrott, Thomas Marc, Prof Emer Eng , Princeton Univ , Princeton, N J [Box 53, Lawrenceville]
- Parry, John Jay, Prof Eng , Univ. of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [805 W Iowa St]
- Parsons, Coleman O , Instr , The City Coll , 23 St. and Lexington Ave , New York, N Y [414 W. 120 St]
- Parsons, Edward S , President Emeritus, Marietta Coll , Marietta, Ohio [Jaffrey, N H]
- Parsons, Olive Wrenchel, Tutor Eng , Indiana Univ , Bloomington, Ind [212 E Second St]
- Paschall, Clarence, Prof German, U of Calif , Berkeley, Calif [2800 Derby St]
- ❖ Patch, Howard Rollin, Prof Eng , Smith Coll , Northampton, Mass [4 Barrett Pl]
- ❖ Paton, Lucy Allen, Hotel Lafayette, 333 Commonwealth Ave , Boston, Mass.
- Patrick, J Max, Instr. Eng , Univ. of Buffalo, Buffalo, N. Y
- ❖ Patterson, Frank Allan, Prof Eng , Columbia Univ., New York, N. Y [Philosophy Hall]
- Patterson, Gordon Cummings, Assoc Prof Italian and Spanish, Univ. of Toronto, Toronto, Canada
- Patterson, Merrill Reeves, Hillyer Prof Eng, and Head Dept., Marietta Coll , Marietta, Ohio [509 Fourth St]

- Patterson, Warner Forrest, Assoc. Prof. French, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1003 Berkshire Rd]
- Pattison, Walter T, Assoc Prof Spanish, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn
- Paul, Harry Gilbert, Prof Eng, Univ. of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [713 W Oregon St]
- Paulsen, Wolfgang, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Southwestern, Memphis, Tenn
- Pawlowska, Harriet, Teacher Eng, Marshall School, Detroit, Mich.
- Peachy, Frederic, 24 Thomas St, Portland, Me
- Peacock, Leishman Arnold, Asst Prof, Penn State Coll, State Coll, Pa
- Peacock, Vera Louise, Head Lang. Dept, Southern Illinois State Normal Univ, 218 W Main St, Carbondale, Ill
- Peake, Charles Howard, Instr Eng, U of Mich, Ann Arbor, Mich [Angell Hall]
- Pearce, Helen, Prof Eng, Willamette Univ, Salem, Ore [267 N Winter St]
- Pearce, Thomas Matthew, Eng Dept, Univ. of New Mexico, Albuquerque, N M
- Pearson, Normal Holmes, Instr Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [39 Goodrich St]
- Peck, George A, Instr Eng, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich [4744 Second Blvd]
- Peck, Louis Francis, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn [2211 White Ave]
- Peckham, Harry Houston, Assoc Prof Eng, Ohio U, Athens, O [98 N Congress St]
- Peckham, John W, Lect French, Victoria Coll, Univ of Toronto, Toronto, Ont, Canada [Box 395, Aylmer, Ont]
- Peckham, Lawton P G, Assoc Prof French, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [Lincoln Hall]
- Peden, W H, Dept Eng. Lang and Lit, Univ of Maryland, College Park, Md.
- Peebles, Waldo Cutler, Prof and Chairman Dept German, Coll of Liberal Arts, Boston Univ, Boston, Mass [53 Morton St, Newton Centre]
- Peery, William Wallace, Asst Prof, Chairman Div Theatre Arts, Eng Lang & Lit, Mt Holyoke Coll, So Hadley, Mass [1 Park St]
- Pei, Mario A, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [35 Hamilton Pl]
- Peiser, Werner, Assoc Prof. Rom Langs, Loyola Univ, New Orleans, La. [6314 Clara St]
- Peikary, Charlotte H, Assoc Prof German, Washington Sq Coll, N Y U, New York, N. Y [107 University Pl]
- Pendleton, Charles Sutphin, Prof Teaching of Eng, George Peabody Coll. for Teachers, Nashville, Tenn
- Pendleton, John White, Asst. Prof Eng., Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y
- Penn, Dorothy, Head Mod Lang Dept, Drury Coll, Springfield, Mo
- Pennock, Emily C, Prof. Spanish, Carthage Coll, Carthage, Ill [37 N Adams]
- Penzl, Herbert, Asst. Prof German, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [223 Lincoln Hall]
- Peoples, Margaret H, Assoc Prof French, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [69 Prospect St]
- Peple, Edward Cronin, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Richmond, Richmond, Va [3308 Loxley Rd]
- Percival, Milton, Prof Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Perkins, Agnes Frances, Prof Rhet and Composition, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass [15 Roanoke Rd]
- Perkinson, Richard Henry, Asst Prof. Eng, Fordham Univ Grad School, New York, N Y [Keating Hall]
- Perl, Walter H, Academic Book Service, New York, N. Y. [256 W 70 St.]
- Perrin, Porter Gale, Assoc Prof Eng Comp, Colgate Univ, Hamilton, N Y [56 Payne St]
- Perry, Aaron Jenkins, Prof Eng, U of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Can [61 Home St]
- Perry, Henry Ten Eyck, Prof Eng, Univ. of Buffalo, Buffalo, N Y [51 Irving Pl]
- Perry, William Gilmer, Prof Eng, Dean General Subjects, Georgia Sch of Technology, Atlanta, Ga
- Pershing, James H, 520 Equitable Bldg, Denver, Colo
- Peters, H F, Instr German, Reed Coll, Portland, Ore
- Peterson, Frederick William, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. [3230 Angell Hall]
- Peterson, Otto P, Prof. German, The City Coll, New York, N Y [640 Riverside Dr]
- Petit, Herbert H, Instr Eng, John Carroll Univ, Cleveland, Ohio
- Pettit, Henry Jewett, Jr, Assoc Prof Eng. Lit., Univ. of Colorado, Boulder, Colo
- Petty, McKendree, Prof Rom Langs., Coll of Saint Teresa, Winona, Minn.
- Peyre, Henri M., Prof. French, Yale Univ., New Haven, Conn.

- Peyton, Myron A, Instr Spanish, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J
- Pfeiffer, J Alan, Instr German, Univ of Buffalo, Buffalo, N Y
- Pfeiffer, Frederick L, Asst Prof German, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [159 Montrose Pl, St Paul]
- Pfeiffer, Karl Graham, Asst Prof Eng, State Coll of Washington, Pullman, Wash [The Hillcrest 34]
- Pfeiler, William K, Assoc. Prof German, Univ. of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [1627 Woodsvlew]
- Pforzheimer, Carl H, Hidden Brook Farm, Purchase, N Y
- Pfund, Harry William, Assoc Prof German, Haverford Coll, Haverford, Pa [624 Overhill Rd, Ardmore]
- Phelan, Paul J, Instr Eng, Univ of Santa Clara, Santa Clara, Calif
- ❖ Phelps, William Lyon, Prof Emer Eng Lit, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [Box 1203]
- Philp, Brother Augustine, Eng Dept, Manhattan Coll, New York, N Y.
- Philppson, Ernst A, Asst Prof German, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1047 Olivia Ave]
- Philps, Edith, Prof French, Swarthmore Coll, Swarthmore, Pa
- Phillips, George Lewis, Asst Prof Comp Lit, Hofstra Coll, Hempstead, L I, N Y. [121 Fulton Ave]
- Phillips, William J, Dept Eng Lang and Lit, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [The Coll]
- Pierce, Marian Louise, Head Span Dept, Trinity Coll, Washington, D C [1210 Perry St, N E]
- Piercy, Josephine Ketcham, Instr Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [708 S. Ballantine Rd]
- ❖ Pierson, Lorraine, Head Dept Mod Langs, Alabama Coll, Montevallo, Ala
- Pinchbeck, Charles, Sr Mod Langs Master, Archbishop Tenison's Grammar School, Woodley, Berks, Eng ["Calgary," Reading Rd]
- Pinthus, Kurt, Lib of Congress, The Annex, Rm 170, Wash, D C.
- Pitcher, Seymour M, Asst Prof Eng, U of Iowa, Iowa City, Ia [415 S Summit St]
- Pitcher, Stephen L, St. Louis Pub Schools, 911 Locust St, St Louis, Mo. [7144 Washington Ave]
- Pitman, James H, Asst. Prof. Eng, Newark Coll of Engineering, Newark, N J. [23 Davidson St, Belleville]
- Pitt, Arthur Stuart, Instr Eng, Hist., and Gov, U S Naval Acad, Annapolis, Md [179 Prince George St]
- Pizzuto, Frank Laurel, Asst Prof Italian and Spanish, Suffolk Univ, Boston, Mass [105 Lexington St, E Boston]
- Place, Edwin B, Prof and Chairman Dept Rom Langs, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- 🏠 Plantz, Karl Heinz, Instr German, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio [On leave 1712 New Hampshire Ave, N W, Washington, D C]
- Pochmann, Henry August, Prof Eng, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis
- Poesse, Walter, Instr Spanish, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind
- Poggioli, Renato, Asst Prof. Rom Langs, Brown Univ., Providence, R I [Marston Hall]
- Pokrantz, Elsie, Instr German, Wilson Coll, Chambersburg, Pa [Gibson, Iowa]
- Pollock, Thomas Clark, Prof. and Chairman Dept Eng, Sch of Ed, New York Univ, New York, N Y [41 Fifth Ave]
- Pommer, Henry F, Grad Fellow Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [418 W School Lane, Germantown, Phila, Pa]
- ❖ Pope, Emma Field, Assoc Prof. Eng, Kansas Teachers Coll, Pittsburgh, Kan. [Harvard Hotel, 5714-22 Blackstone Ave, Chicago, Ill]
- ❖ Pope, Isabel, Grad Stud Rom Langs., Radcliffe Coll, Cambridge, Mass [99 Pinckney St, Boston]
- Pope, John Collins, Assoc Prof Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [993 Yale Sta]
- ❖ Pope, Paul Russel, Prof German, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y
- Pope, Willard Bissell, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Vermont, Burlington, Vt [100 Overlake Park]
- Porter, Katherine H, Assoc. Prof. Eng, Flora Stone Mather Coll, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio [11421 Mayfield Rd]
- 🏠 Porterfield, Allen Wilson, Prof German, West Virginia Univ, Morgantown, W Va. [286 Convent Ave, New York, N Y]
- Portnoff, George, Head Mod Lang. Dept., Arizona State Coll, Flagstaff, Ariz [203 W. Aspen]
- Posey, M. N, Prof. Eng, East Carolina

- Teachers Coll , Greenville, N C. [Box 94, E C. T C Sta]
- Posin, Jack Abraham, Asst Prof Russian, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Ia [102 Schaeffer Hall]
- Poteat, Mary, Instr Eng , Duke Univ , Durham, N C. [Coll Sta]
- Potter, Elmer B , Lieut , U S N R , Dept. Eng , Hist , and Gov., U S Naval Acad , Annapohs, Md [20 Southgate Ave]
- Potter, George Reuben, Assoc Prof Eng , Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [1151 Euclid Ave]
- ❖ Pottle, Frederick Albert, Prof Eng , Yale Univ., New Haven, Conn
- Potts, Abbie Findlay, Prof Dramatic Lit , Rockford Coll , Rockford, Ill
- ❖ Pound, Louise, Prof Eng Lang , Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [1632 L St]
- Powell, James Daniel, 703 N Nelson St., Arlington, Va
- Powell, Nellie Virginia, Prof Eng , Randolph-Macon Woman's Coll , Lynchburg, Va.
- ❖ Powell, William C, Asst Instr Eng., Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila , Pa [On leave Ensign, U S N R , 2449 Tunlaw Rd , N W , Washington, D C]
- Powell, Wilham Serey, Morris Memorial Hospital, Milton, W Va
- Power, Esther Melvina, Assoc Prof Eng , Southern Ill State Normal Univ , Carbondale, Ill
- Power, Mina Waterman (Mrs Thomas F., Jr) 2702 Wisconsin Ave., N W , Wash , D C
- Prahl, Augustus John, Assoc. Prof Mod Langs , Univ of Maryland, Coll Park, Md
- Prator, Clifford H , Jr , Instr French, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [111 Romance Langs Bldg]
- Pratt, John M, Asst Prof Eng , DePauw Univ , Greencastle, Ind [420 Anderson St]
- ❖ Pratt, Robert Armstrong, Asst Prof Eng , Queens Coll , Flushing, N Y [111-17 Martel Pl , Forest Hills]
- Pratt, Willis Winslow, Asst Prof Eng , Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Route 4, Box 302-P]
- Predmore, Richard L , Asst Prof Rom Langs , Rutgers Univ , New Brunswick, N J.
- Prentice-Rand, Frank, Prof and Head Dept. Langs. and Lits., Mass. State Coll , Amherst, Mass.
- Presta, Peter S , Instr Mod Langs , Univ of Detroit, Detroit, Mich
- Preston, W D , 1884 Grasmere Ave , East Cleveland, Ohio
- Preu, Angela Winifred, Instr Spanish and Italian, Coll of Chestnut Hill, Chestnut Hill, Phila , Pa
- Price, Erwin Hugh, Head Mod Lang Dept., Mississippi State Coll , State Coll , Miss
- Price, George R , Instr. Eng , Mich State Coll , E. Lansing, Mich.
- Price, Hereward Thumbleby, Prof Eng , Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1228 Olivia Ave]
- ❖ Price, Lawrence M , Prof German, Univ. of California, Berkeley, Calif. [1518 Hawthorne Terrace]
- ❖ Priest, George Madison, Prof Germ Langs and Lits , Princeton Univ., Princeton, N. J
- ❖ Pringle, Kenneth Ralph, Assoc Prof Eng , Kent State Univ., Kent, Ohio [410 W Mulberry St , Normal, Ill]
- Prior, Moody E., Assoc Prof Eng , Northwestern Univ , Evanston, Ill
- Privitera, Joseph F, Asst Prof Mod Langs , St. Louis Univ , St. Louis, Mo
- Prodoehl, Austin, Prof and Head German Dept , Birmingham-Southern Coll , Birmingham, Ala
- Protzman, Merle I , Prof. Rom Langs , Geo. Washington Univ , Washington, D C [2500 Eads St , S , Arlington, Va]
- Prouty, Charles Tyler, Asst Prof Eng , U. of Mo , Columbia, Mo [2138 California St , N W , Wash , D C]
- Provine, William Kolb, Asst Prof German, Tufts Coll , Medford, Mass.
- Pruhl, W Fletcher, 260 Maple St , Englewood, N. J
- Pucci, Dominic Louis, Head Spanish and Italian Dept , Wayne Univ , 4841 Cass Ave , Detroit, Mich
- Puckett, Hugh Wiley, Assoc. Prof German, Barnard Coll , Columbia Univ , New York, N Y
- Pugh, William Leonard, Prof. Eng , Wofford Coll , Spartanburg, S C [1052 Otis Blvd]
- Puhan, Alfred, 504 W. 110 St , New York, N Y.
- Pumpelly, Laurence, Prof. Rom Langs and Lits , Cornell Univ., Ithaca, N Y.
- Punderson, Dorothy Mary, Chief, Service Projects Section, N Y. A. of Minnesota [947 Portland Ave , St. Paul]

- Purcell, James Mark, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Marquette Univ, Milwaukee, Wis
- Purdy, Mary Martha, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Westminster Coll, New Wilmington, Pa.
- Purdy, Richard Little, Asst Prof Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [605 Berkeley Coll]
- ❖ Purin, Charles Maltador, Prof German Emeritus, Univ of Wisconsin in Milwaukee, Milwaukee, Wis [1006 E State St.]
- Pusey, William W., 3rd, German Dept, Washington and Lee Univ, Lexington, Va
- 📖 Putney, Rufus D S, 404 S Summit St, Iowa City, Ia [Lt, U S N R]
- Putter, Irving, Instr French and Span, U of Iowa, Iowa City, Ia [621 Brown St]
- Pyles, Thomas, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Maryland, Baltimore, Md [300 E 29 St]
- Qualia, Charles Blaise, Dept Rom. Langs, Texas Tech Coll, Lubbock, Tex
- 📖 Quinlan, Maurice James, Asst Prof Eng, St Joseph Coll, W Hartford, Conn [109 Divinity St, Bristol]
- Quinlivan, Frances M, Asst Prof Eng, Notre Dame Coll, So Euclid, Ohio [3381 Hollister Rd, Cleveland Hgts]
- ❖ Quinn, Arthur Hobson, Prof Eng, Univ of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa [401 Pembroke Rd, Cynwyd, Pa]
- 📖 Quian, John Francis, Boatswain, Sch for Communications Officers, Noroton Hgts, Conn
- Quintana, Ricardo Beckwith, Prof Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [Bascam Hall]
- Quirk, Rev Charles J, S J, Prof Eng, Loyola Univ of the South, New Orleans, La.
- Quynn, William Rogers, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Duke Univ, Durham, N C [Box 261, Coll Sta]
- Racca, Mrs Gina G, Dept Rom Langs, Connecticut Coll, New London, Conn
- ❖ Racer, Marion Milton, Instr Span, Sr H. S., Springfield, O. [608 N Wittenberg Ave]
- Raddin, George G., Jr, Humanities Dept, Cooper Union, Cooper Sq, New York, N. Y.
- Rael, Juan B, 574 Lasuent St., Stanford Univ, Calif
- Ramage, Ethel, Asst Prof Eng, Sweet Briar Coll, Sweet Briar, Va
- Ramey, Andrew Robert, Prof. Eng, Univ of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla
- Ramsay, Robert Lee, Prof Eng, U of Mo, Columbia, Mo [1320 Wilson Ave]
- Ramsey, Lenore P, Assoc Prof Eng, State Teachers Coll, Wayne, Neb
- Ramsland, Clement, Wayzata, Minn
- Rand, Mrs Marguerite C Waite, Instr Mod Langs, U of Maryland, Coll Park, Md
- Randall, Earle Stanley, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [Fisk 310]
- Randall, Helen Whitcomb, Asst Prof Eng, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [101 Prospect St]
- Randall, Randolph C, Prof Eng, Fenn College, Cleveland, Ohio
- Randel, William Peirce, Instr Rhetoric, Univ of Minnesota, St Paul, Minn
- Randolph, Mary Claire, Res Assoc Eng, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C [11 Cobb Terrace]
- Rankin, Daniel S, Eng Dept, St Mary's Manor, So Langhorne, Pa
- Ransom, Ellene, Ward-Belmont Coll, Nashville, Tenn
- Ransom, Harry Hunt, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Univ. Sta]
- Rapp, Franz, Theatre Collection, N Y Public Lib, Fifth Ave and 42 St, New York, N Y. [229 W 105 St]
- Rappeport, Leah, Asst Eng, Duke Univ, Durham, N C [Fac Apts, Rm 307, Box 694]
- Raschen, John Frederick Louis, Prof Mod Langs, U of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa.
- Raska, Francis J, French Teacher, Central H S, Philadelphia, Pa [4324 Pine St]
- Ratchford, Fannie, Librarian, The Wrenn Lib, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex
- Ratchiff, Anne Harrington (Mis Dillwyn F), The Homestead, Kew Gardens, N Y.
- 📖 Ratcliff, Dillwyn Fritschel, Asst Prof Rom Langs, U of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, O
- Rathborne, Isabel Elizabeth, Instr Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y. [88 Morningside Dr]
- Rathert, Fred H, Instr Eng, The City Coll, New York, N Y [135 W. 225 St]
- Ratti, Gino A, Head Dept Rom Langs, Dean Coll. Liberal Arts and Sciences, Butler Univ, Indianapolis, Ind
- Raven, Anton Adolph, Prof Eng, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N. H
- 📖 Ray, Gordon Norton, Widener Lib, Cambridge, Mass [Ensign, U S N R]

- Raymond, Frederic Newton, Prof Eng, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan
- Raymond, William Ober, Prof Eng Lit, Bishop's Univ, Lennoxville, Province of Quebec, Canada
- Raysor, Thomas M, Chairman Eng Dept, Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb
- ☞ Read, Allen Walker, Instr Eng, Ill Inst of Tech, Chicago, Ill [38 W 12 St, New York, N Y]
- Reber, John, Prof. Eng, Fordham Univ, New York, N Y [Keating Hall]
- Redinger, Ruby Virginia, Instr Eng, Fenn Coll, Cleveland, Ohio [2025 E 100 St]
- Reed, Carroll Edward, 302-B Highland Halls, Arlington, Va
- Reed, Lillian Espy, Asst Prof German, H Sophie Newcomb Memorial Coll, New Orleans, La
- Reed, William Howell, Prof German, Tufts Coll, Tufts College P O, Medford, Mass [Box 34]
- Reedy, Mrs Hilda Lawson, Asst Prof Eng, Lincoln Univ, Jefferson City, Mo
- Rees, Elnor Celyn, Head Lang Dept, Mark Keppel H S, Alhambra, Calif [505 N Alhambra Ave, Monterey Park]
- Rees, Thomas Ifor, H B M Consul General, Mexico City, Mexico [British Consulate General Apartado 96 bis, Mexico, D F]
- Reese, Helen R, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Wilson Coll, Chambersburg, Pa
- Reeves, John K, Asst Prof Eng, Skidmore Coll, Saratoga Springs, N Y
- ❖ Reeves, William Peters, Prof Eng Lang and Lit, Kenyon Coll, Gambier, Ohio
- Rehder, Helmut, Assoc Prof German, U of Wis, Madison, Wis [85 Bascom Hall]
- Rehor, Charles F, Asst. Prof Eng, Cleveland Coll, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio [167 Public Sq]
- Reichard, Joseph R, Instr German, Oberlin Coll, Oberlin, Ohio
- Reichart, Walter Albert, Prof German, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Reichenberger, Arnold, Dept Rom Langs, Ohio State Univ., Columbus, Ohio
- ❖ Reid, Elhsabeth, 1097 Rio Grande St, Pasadena, Calif.
- Reid, J Richard, Instr French, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass. [20 Shaler Lane]
- Reiff, Evan Allard, Head Eng Dept, Ottawa Univ, Ottawa, Kans.
- Reighard, Catherine F, Instr. Eng., Washington Sq. Coll, N. Y. U., New York, N. Y. [Room 737 East]
- Reilly, Joseph J, Librarian, Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [695 Park Ave]
- Reinhardt, (Mrs) Aurelia Henry, President, Mills Coll, Mills College, Calif
- Reinmuth, Harry Gilbert, Prof and Head Mod Lang Dept, Union Coll, Lincoln, Neb [4501 Calvert St]
- Reinsch, Frank Herman, Assoc Prof German, Univ of California at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif
- Remak, Henry H H, Instr Mod Langs, Indiana Univ Ext, Bloomington, Ind.
- Remenyi, Joseph, Asst Prof Comp Lit, Cleveland Coll, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio [10321 Ashbury Ave]
- ❖ Remy, Arthur Frank Joseph, Villard Prof Germ Philology, Columbia Univ, New York, N. Y.
- Renkenberger, Bertram A, Instr Rom. Langs, Ohio Univ, Athens, Ohio [16 N. May Ave]
- Resnikow, Sylvia, Asst. Prof For. Langs., North. Ill State Teachers Coll, DeKalb, Ill [205 Pine St]
- Reutinger, Otto W, 376 San Antonio St, San Diego, Calif.
- Rey, Agapito, Assoc Prof. Spanish, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind
- Reynard, Elizabeth, Asst. Prof Eng, Barnard Coll, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [460 Riverside Dr]
- Reynolds, George Fullmer, Prof Eng Lit, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder, Colo [1220 Grand View]
- Reynolds, Paul Everett, Asst Prof Eng, Northeastern Univ, Boston, Mass.
- Rhyne, Orestes P, Prof Mod Langs, Clemson Coll, Clemson, S C
- Rice, Carlton Cosmo, Prof Rom Langs, Catawba Coll, Salisbury, N C.
- ☞ Rice, James V, Instr Rom Langs, Ohio Univ, Athens, Ohio
- Rice, Richard Ashley, Prof Eng Lit, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass
- Rice, Warner Grenelle, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1305 Cambridge Rd.]
- Rich, Townsend, Asst Prof Eng., Michigan State Coll, E Lansing, Mich [Box 69]
- Richards, Frances, Eng. Dept, Western Kentucky Teachers Coll, 1340 College St., Bowling Green, Ky.
- Richards, Marguerite L., (Mrs N. W.), Asst. Prof French, Rutgers Univ, N J. Coll. for Women, New Brunswick, N J.

- Richards, Paul L, Head Dept Rom Langs, Lake Erie Coll, Painesville, Ohio [270 Avery Terr]
- Richardson, Dorothy, Instr Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y [3522 167 St]
- Richardson, Henry Brush, Assoc. Prof French, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn. [309 Hall of Grad Studies]
- Richardson, Lula McDowell, Head French Dept, Dickinson Jr Coll, Williamsport, Pa [401 Hawthorne Ave]
- Richardson, Lyon Norman, Asst Prof Eng, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio
- Richardson, Ruth, Asst Prof and Acting Head Dept Spanish, College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio [836 College Ave]
- Richardson, William Rittenhouse, Asst Prof Eng, Coll of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va [127 Richmond Rd]
- Richmond, W Edson, Grad Asst Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Richner, Theophilus G, Asst Prof French, Brothers Coll, Drew Univ, Madison, N J [606 W. 115 St, Apt. 32E, New York, N Y]
- Richter, Friedrich-Karl, Instr German and French, Ill Inst of Tech, Chicago, Ill [3300 S Federal St]
- Richter, Margaret Rose, 723 S Bronson Ave, Los Angeles, Calif
- Richter, Werner, Prof & Head Dept Philosophy, Elmhurst Coll, Elmhurst, Ill. [177 Virginia St]
- ❖ Riddell, Agnes Rutherford, Emeritus Prof Rom Langs, Wheaton Coll, Norton, Mass [106 Dundas St, N, Oakville, Ont, Canada]
- Riddle, Lawrence M, Prof French, Univ of Southern California, Los Angeles, Calif
- Ridenour, Harry Lee, Prof Eng, Baldwin-Wallace Coll, Berea, Ohio [147 Seminary St]
- Rideout, Blanchard Livingstone, Assoc Prof. Rom Langs. and Lits, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N. Y [110 Midway Rd]
- Riedel, F Carl, Instr Eng, The City Coll, 139 St., and Convent Ave., New York, N Y [3238 Kingsland Ave, Bronx]
- Righino, John Antoine, Prof For Langs, St Norbert Coll., West De Pere, Wis
- Riker, Charles Cook, Jr, Instr Eng, Eastman Sch. of Music, Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y [40 N Goodman St]
- Riley, Edgar Heisler, Assoc Prof Eng., Lehigh Univ, Bethlehem, Pa.
- Riley, Thomas Auraldo, Instr German, Bowdoin Coll, Brunswick, Me [25 Boody St]
- ❖ Rinaker, Clarissa, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [908 Nevada St]
- Ringler, William, Asst Prof Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [73 Nassau St]
- Riordan, John L, Teaching Asst German, Univ of Calif, Berkeley, Calif
- Ristine, Frank Humphrey, Prof. Eng Lit, Hamilton Coll, Clinton, N Y.
- Rivers, Louise, Asst Prof Eng, Wesleyan Coll, Macon, Ga
- Rivers, W Napoleon, Chairman Dept For Langs, Miner Teachers Coll, Wash, D C.
- Roach, William Joseph, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [College Hall]
- ❖ Robbins, Harry Wolcott, Prof Eng, Bucknell Univ, Lewisburg, Pa
- 🏠 Robbins, J. Albert, Jr, 800 Jackson St, N, St Petersburg, Fla
- Robbins, Russell Hope, 8 W. 13 St, New York, N. Y
- Robert, Adolphe, President of Association Canado-Américaine, Manchester, N H. [52 Concord St]
- Roberts, Donald A, Asst Prof Eng, The City Coll, 139 St, and Convent Ave, New York, N Y.
- Roberts, Eunice C, Head Mod Lang Dept, Eastern New Mexico Coll, Portales, N. Mex [201 S Charles St]
- Roberts, Graves B, Prof Spanish; Head For. Lang Dept, Southwestern La. Inst, Lafayette, La
- Roberts, John Griffith, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Lehigh Univ, Bethlehem, Pa
- Roberts, John Hawley, Prof Eng, Williams Coll, Williamstown, Mass
- Roberts, Marguerite, Asst Prof Eng, McMaster Univ, Hamilton, Ont, Canada
- Roberts, Murat Halstead, Assoc Prof. German, Univ. Coll and Grad School, N Y. Univ., Univ Hgts, New York, N Y [2-C Rivermere, Alger Court, Bronxville]
- Robertson, Charles Archibald, Prof Eng, Univ. of Florida, Gainesville, Fla.
- 🏠 Robertson, David Allan, Jr., Instr. Eng Barnard Coll, New York, N Y. [On leave-10 Perry St]
- Robertson, D W Jr., Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C.
- Robinson, Catherine Palmer, Dean of Residence, Mt. Holyoke Coll, S. Hadley, Mass.
- ❖ Robinson, Fred Norris, Prof Eng, Har-

- vard Univ , Cambridge, Mass [Longfellow Park]
- Robinson, Herbert Spencer, Head Eng Dept Coll of Paterson, Paterson, N J
- Robinson, Vern Wade, Instr German, Univ. of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif
- Roche, Alphonse Victor, Asst Prof Rom. Langs , Northwestern Univ , Evanston, Ill
- Rochedieu, Charles Alfred, Asst Prof French, Vanderbilt Univ , Nashville, Tenn
- Rockwell, Leo Lawrence, Dir School of Langs and Lits , Colgate Univ , Hamilton, N Y [49 Broad St]
- ❖ Rockwood, Robert Everett, Prof Rom Langs , Ohio State Univ , Columbus, Ohio [223 Derby Hall]
- Rockwood, Stanley Walker, Prof French and Spanish, Arkansas Coll , Batesville, Ark.
- Rodenbaeck, Louise, Prof and Head German Dept , Lake Erie Coll , Painesville, Ohio
- Roditi, Edouard Herbert, Instr Mod Langs , Univ. of Kansas City, Kansas City, Mo.
- Roe, Frederick William, Prof Eng , U of Wis , Madison, Wis [2015 Van Huse Ave]
- Roe, John Winans, Assoc Prof. For Langs , Ala Poly Inst , Auburn, Ala [Box 3]
- ❖ Roedder, Edwin Carl, Prof German Lang and Lit , The City Coll , 139 St and Convent Ave , New York, N Y
- Roellinger, Francis Xavier, Jr., Instr Eng , Oberlin Coll , Oberlin, O [124 Morgan St]
- Rogers, Carmen, Assoc. Prof. Eng , Fla State Coll for Women, Tallahassee, Fla
- Rogers, Elizabeth F, Prof Hist , Wilson Coll , Chambersburg, Pa.
- Rogers, Gretchen Louisa, Asst. Prof German, Geo Washington Univ., Washington, D. C. [2124 Eye St , N W]
- Rogers, Paul Patrick, Assoc. Prof Spanish, Oberlin Coll., Oberlin, O [525 E College St]
- Rogers, Robert Wentworth, Teaching Fellow Eng , Harvard Univ , Cambridge, Mass [7 Sumner Rd , Apt. 22]
- Rogers, Winfield H., Prof. and Head Eng. Dept , Woman's Coll., Univ of N C , Greensboro, N C.
- Rolfe, Franklin Prescott, Assoc Prof Eng , U. of Calif. at Los Angeles, Calif [310 A Royce Hall]
- Rollins, Cecil Augustus, Assoc Prof Eng , Colby Coll., Waterville, Me. [Gilman Hgts]
- Rollins, George Alcuin, Lecturer Eng , Sch. of Commerce, Northwestern Univ., McKinlock Campus, Chicago, Ill [6205 N. Paulina St]
- Rollins, Hyder Edward, Prof Eng , Harvard U. Cambridge, Mass [1 Waterhouse St]
- Romera-Navarro, Miguel, Prof Spanish Lang and Lit , Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila , Pa [College Hall]
- ❖ Root, Robert Kilburn, Prof Eng , Princeton Univ , Princeton, N J
- Root, Winthrop H , Assoc Prof. German, Wilhams Coll , Williamstown, Mass [68 South St]
- Ropp, Philip Hortenstine, [Address Unknown]
- Rose, Ernst Gottlieb Andreas, Assoc Prof German, N Y U , Washington Sq Coll , New York, N. Y [16 Ramapo Terr., Radburn, N J]
- Roseler, Robert O , Prof German, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [Bascom Hall]
- Rosenbach, A S. W , Philadelphia, Pa [2006 De Lancey St]
- Rosenberg, Eleanor, Grad Stu Eng , Columbia Univ , New York, N Y [245 W 104 St]
- Rosenberg, Ralph Philip, Lect German, Hunter Coll , Ext Div , New York, N Y. [601 W 113 St]
- Rosenblatt, Louise M, Asst Prof Eng , Brooklyn Coll , Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y [On leave 2901 18 St , N W , Wash , D C]
- Rosenfield, Mrs. Leonora Cohen, Instr. French, Brooklyn Coll , Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N. Y. [245 Hawthorne St]
- ❖ Rosenhaupt, Hans W. Instr German, Colorado Coll , Colorado Springs, Colo. (On leave in U S Army)
- Ross, Ernest Carson, Assoc. Prof Eng , Univ. of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla [763 Jenkins Ave]
- Ross, Harold, 528 Belleville Rd , Roanoke, Va.
- ❖ Ross, Malcolm Mackenzie, War Services Film Officer, Natl Film Board, Ottawa, Can
- Ross, Margaret L., Assoc. Prof Eng., Westhampton Coll , Univ. of Richmond, Richmond, Va.
- ❖ Ross, Richard Washburn, Lieut , For. Langs , U. S Naval Acad., Annapolis, Md
- Ross, Woodburn Overstreet, Assoc. Prof. Eng , Wayne Univ , Detroit, Mich. [302 Monterey, Highland Pk.]

- Rossberg-Leipnitz, Elizabeth, Prof German, Milwaukee-Downer Coll, Milwaukee, Wis
- Rosselet, Jeanne, Assoc Prof French, Goucher Coll, Baltimore, Md
- Rossi, Joseph, Asst Prof Italian, U of Wis, Madison, Wis [2230 Monroe St]
- Rotunda, D P, Prof Rom Langs, Mills Coll, Calif
- ❖ Roulston, Robert Bruce, Collegiate Prof German, Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md.
- Rouse, H Blair, c/o Dr. E H Roual, Orange, Va
- ❖ Routh, James, Prof Eng and Head Dept Langs, Univ of Georgia Jr Coll and Evening Sch, 162 Luckie St, Atlanta, Ga
- Rovillain, Eugene Etienne, Assoc Prof French, U of Mich, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Rowbotham, Arnold H, Assoc Prof French, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [Box 60, Wheeler Hall]
- Rowe, Charles Gilbert, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Iowa State Coll, Ames, Ia. [2408½ Knapp]
- Rowe, Kenneth Thorpe, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Rowland, Durbin, Assoc Prof Mod Langs, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- ❖ Rowland, Mary Zollkofer, Teacher French, Catonsville H S, Catonsville, Md [1118 St Paul St, Baltimore]
- Roy, Camille, Rector, Laval Univ, Quebec, Canada
- Rubel, Veré L, Asst Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y. [37 W 72 St]
- Rubin, Joseph Jay, Asst. Prof Eng, Pennsylvania State Coll., State College, Pa
- 🏠 Rudman, Harry, c/o Anker, 6 Willow St, Brooklyn, N Y.
- Rudolph, Earle Leighton, Asst Eng, Rice Inst, Houston, Tex
- ❖ Ruebhausen, Ella, Asst Prof. Emeritus German, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [1157 E 56 St]
- Ruet, Françoise, Asst Prof French, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass
- 🏠 Rugh, James Torrance, Jr, Lieut, U S.-N R. [4946 N Rock Sprng Rd, Arlington, Va]
- 🏠 Rulfs, Donald J., Assoc Prof Eng, Miss State Coll. for Women, Columbus, Miss [On leave Med Dept., 818 T D Bu, Camp Bowie, Tex]
- Rundle, James Urvin, Instr. Eng, Univ. of Missouri, Columbia, Mo.
- 🏠 Rushton, Urban Joseph Peters, Ensign, U S N R [942 26 St, Arlington, Va]
- Rusk, Ralph Leslie, Prof Eng, Columbia U, New York, N Y [445 Riverside Dr]
- Russell, Harry Kitsun, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C
- ❖ Russell, I(saac) Willis, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, Ala [1104 Riverside Dr]
- ❖ Russell, Jason Almus, Head Eng Dept, Dakota Wesleyan Univ, Mitchell, S D
- Russo, Frank Anthony, Instr Rom Langs, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave. H, Bklyn, N Y
- Rust, Mrs Isabel B, Prof Latin, State Teachers Coll, Wayne, Neb [715 Logan]
- Rust, James Darms, Instr Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [729 Hunter Ave]
- Rutledge, Leshe A, Instr Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [803 State St]
- Ryan, Rev Harold Francis, S. J., Grad. Stud. Eng, St Louis Univ, St Louis, Mo
- Ryland, Archie G, Prof French, Coll of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va [331 E Francis St]
- Ryland, Hobart, Head Dept. Rom Langs, Univ of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky.
- Rypins, Stanley I, Prof. Eng., Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave. and Ave. H, Bklyn, N Y.
- Sachs, Mrs Leonie F., Instr Span, Hunter Coll, 695 Park Ave, New York, N Y. [119 Payson Ave]
- Sacks, Norman P, Instr. Portuguese and Span, Univ of Hawaii, Honolulu, Hawaii [1951 Vancouver Drive]
- Sahlin, Nils Gosta, Prof. and Head German and Scand Dept., Russell Sage Coll, Troy, N Y.
- Saidla, Leo Erval Alexandre, Assoc Prof. Eng, Polytechnic Inst of Brooklyn, Bklyn, N Y [99 Livingston St]
- St. Clair, Foster York, Prof. and Head Eng Dept, Jamestown Coll., Jamestown, N D.
- Saintonge, Paul Frédéric, Prof French, Mt. Holyoke Coll., South Hadley, Mass [20 Park St]
- Sakouta, Vitaly Mathieu, Chairman Mod. Lang Dept, St John Prep. Sch, Bklyn, N Y [115 Stuyvesant Pl, St. George, S I, N. Y.]
- Sakowitz, Alexander Hirsch, Instr. Eng, Texas A. and M Coll, Coll. Sta, Tex. [2620 Riverside Dr., Houston]

- Salas, Manuel, Assoc Prof Spanish, N J Coll for Women, New Brunswick, N J
- Salditt, Barbara, Asst Prof German, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass
- Sale, William M, Jr, Assoc. Prof Eng, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y [309 The Parkway]
- Saleski, Else, Route 4, Scotsville, Va
- Saleski, Mary Agnes, Asst Prof Mod. Langs, St Lawrence Univ, Canton, N Y. [6 Mechanic St.]
- Salinger, Herman, Instr German, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [On leave 2nd Lt, Ground Sch, Lubbock Army Fly Sch, Lubbock, Tex]
- Salloch, William, 344 E 17 St, New York, N Y
- Salomon, Louis B, Instr Eng, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave. H, Bklyn, N Y
- Salter, F. Millet, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada
- Salvan, Albert Jacques, Instr Mod Langs, Brown Univ, Providence, R I
- Salvan, Jacques L, Asst Prof French, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich. [Camp Breckinridge, Morganfield, Ky]
- Salzman, Frances Klenett, Teacher Eng, Jr. High School 10, Long Island City, Queens, N Y [112-07 178 St, St Albans]
- Sampley, Arthur McCullough, Prof Eng, North Tex. State Teachers Coll, Denton, Tex [Box 5263, T C Sta]
- Sampson, Harriet, 50 E 67 St, New York, N Y
- Samuel, Irene, Instr Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y
- Samuel, Richard Herbert, Asst German, London School of Economics, Supervisor of German to St Catherine's and other Cambridge Colls, Cambridge, Eng [30, Tenison Ave]
- Samuels, Ernest, Instr Eng, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Sanchez y Escribano, Federico, Assoc Prof Spanish, Connecticut Coll, New London, Conn.
- Sánchez, José, Instr. Rom. Langs, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Sand, Norbert H, Jr. Instr Eng, Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md. [Box 1094, Gilman Hall]
- Sanderlin, George William, Prof. and Head Eng. Dept, Queens Col, Charlotte, N C.
- Sanders, Albert Godfrey, Prof Rom Langs, Millsaps Coll., Jackson, Miss.
- Sanders, C Richard, Asst Prof Eng, Duke Univ, Durham, N C [4783 Duke Sta.]
- Sanders, Gerald De Witt, Head Eng Dept., Mich State Normal Coll, Ypsilanti, Mich
- ❖ Sandison, Helen Estabrook, Prof Eng, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Sargent, Ralph Millard, Assoc. Prof Eng, Haverford Coll, Haverford, Pa
- Satterfield, Chester E, Head Eng Dept, Kent State U, Kent, O [114 Linden Rd]
- Saucier, Corinne L, Asst Prof Spanish, La. State Normal Coll, Natchitoches, La [530 Normal Ave]
- Sauerlander, Annemarie, Asst Prof German, Univ of Buffalo, Buffalo, N Y [The Campus, Main St]
- Saul, George Brandon, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Connecticut, Storrs, Conn
- de Sauze, Emile Blais, Director For Langs, Board of Education, Prof. French, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio [c/o Board of Education]
- Savage, David Jackson, Assoc Prof. Eng, Miss State Coll, State Coll, Miss [Box 72]
- Savage, Henry Lyttleton, Assoc. Prof Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N. J [210 Prospect St]
- ❖ Savage, Howard James, Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, 522 Fifth Ave, New York, N Y
- Savage, J E, Eng Dept, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y [520 E Buffalo]
- Saxe, Nathaniel Edgar, Head Dept For Langs, Washburn Municipal Univ, Topeka, Kans.
- Scanio, Vincent A, Instr. Italian, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Scanlan, Elizabeth Goepp, Instr Speech, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y [Manor Apts. Douglaston]
- Scenna, Anthony, Assoc Prof German, Amherst Coll, Amherst, Mass
- Schach, Paul, Instr. German, Albright Coll, Reading, Pa
- Schacht, Paul Lamb, Head Dept Eng, Capital Univ, Columbus, Ohio [2475 Bexley Park Rd]
- Schaffer, Aaron, Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex. [University Sta]
- Scharf, Carl, Instr. German, Hood Coll, Frederick, Md
- Schaut, Dom Quentin, O S B, St Vincent Coll. Lib, Latrobe, Pa.
- ❖ Schelling, Felix Emanuel, Prof. Emer. Eng.

- Lit, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila., Pa
[251 Claremont Ave., Mt Vernon, N Y]
- Schenck, Eunice Morgan, Prof French,
Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa [317
W Springfield Ave., Chestnut Hill, Phila.]
- Schenk, Philip Louis, Asst Prof Eng, U of Mich., Ann Arbor, Mich [743 Miller
Ave.]
- Schevill, Rudolph, Prof Spanish, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [1824 Arch St.]
- Schick, Joseph Schlueter, Prof Eng, State
Teachers Coll, Duluth, Minn
- Schier, Donald Stephen, Instr Lang and Lit, Ill Inst of Tech, Chicago, Ill [1951
W Madison St.]
- Schilling, Bernard N, Chairman Gen Humanities, Grinnell Coll, Grinnell, Ia. [1217
Park St.]
- Schilling, Dorothy C, Prof Eng, Arizona
State Teachers Coll, Tempe, Ariz
- Schindelm, Magdalene, Assoc Prof German,
Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass
- ❖ Schinz, Albert, Prof French Lang and
Lit, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila., Pa
- Schirmer, Mariele, Head Dept Mod For Langs, State Teachers Coll, Milwaukee,
Wis [942 N. 14th St.]
- Schirokauer, Arno, Res Fellow German,
Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [Box 147,
Woodmont]
- Schlatter, Edward Bunker, Prof Rom
Langs, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis
[3926 Paunack Ave.]
- Schlauch, Margaret, Prof Eng, N Y U,
Wash. Sq Coll, New York, N Y.
- Schlimbach, Alice, Asst Prof German, N J.
Coll for Women, New Brunswick, N J
- Schmelzer, Richard W, Asst Prof Eng,
Rensselaer Poly Inst, Troy, N Y
- von Schmertzling, Wolfgang, Instr German,
Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [18
Martin St.]
- Schmidt, Max L, Prof German, Coll of St.
Thomas, St Paul, Minn [50 S. Cretin
Ave., Apt 306]
- Schmidt, S. Edgar, Teaching Asst. German,
Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [659
Ensenada Ave.]
- Schmitz, R. Morell, Asst Prof Eng., Washington Univ, St Louis, Mo.
- Schnabel, Helene B M, Grad Stud German, New York Univ, New York, N Y.
[390 Wadsworth Ave.]
- Schneider, Elisabeth Wintersteen, Assoc.
Prof Eng, Temple Univ, Phila., Pa.
- Schneider, Franz, Assoc. Prof. German,
Univ. of California, Berkeley, Calif [1114
Euclid Ave.]
- Schneider, Heinrich, Assoc Prof German,
Cornell Univ., Ithaca, N Y [207 Delaware
Ave.]
- Schnerr, Walter J, Instr Mod Langs, Grinnell Coll., Grinnell, Ia
- Schneiders, Marie H, Asst Prof Germanic
Langs and Lits, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [8 Bedford Terr.]
- ❖ Schobinger, Else, Head Dept. Mod.
Langs, Harvard Sch for Boys, 4731 Ellis
Ave., Chicago, Ill
- Schoch, Caroline B, Prof German, Woman's Coll, Univ of N C, Greensboro, N C
- Schoedinger, Paul Siebert, Asst Prof Eng,
Univ of New Hampshire, Durham, N H
- Schoen-René, Otto, E, Instr and Tutor
Eng, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass
[10 Kenway St.]
- Scholl, Evelyn Harwood, Instr Eng, Michigan State Coll, E Lansing, Mich [413
Hillcrest Ave.]
- Scholz, Albert, Instr Mod Langs, St Louis
Univ, St Louis, Mo
- Schons, Dorothy, Asst Prof Rom. Langs,
Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex
- Schons, Emily, Prof and Head Mod Lang
Dept, Olivet Coll, Olivet, Mich
- Schradiack, Claire Strube (Mrs Henry E)
2845 N Calvert St, Baltimore, Md
- Schramm, Wilbur Lang, Prof Eng, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Ia [101 Univ Hall]
- Schreiber, Carl Frederick, Prof. German and Curator William A Speck Collection of Goetheana, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn
[65 Elmwood Rd.]
- Schreiber, S. Etta, Instr German, Hunter
Coll, New York, N. Y [2856 Webb Ave,
Bronx]
- Schreiber, William I., Prof German, Coll of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio
- Schubert, Leland, Eng. Dept., Madison Coll,
Harrisonburg, Va
- Schuberth, Doctor Otto, Head Dept. Mod.
Langs, Washington Missionary Coll, Takoma Park, Md
- Schuchard, Gottlieb Carl Ludolf, Assoc Prof
German, Washington Sq. Coll, N Y
Univ, New York, N Y [421 Riverside
Dr, Brooklake Park, Madison, N J]
- Schuchard, H K, Asst. Prof Mod Langs,
Coll. of Charleston, Charleston, S C
- Schultz, Arthur R, Post-Doctorate Fellow
Eng, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.
[1252 Sherman Ave.]

- Schultz, Hanns Stefan, Assoc Prof German, Skidmore Coll, Saratoga Springs, N Y
- Schultz, William Eben, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Illinois Wesleyan Univ, Bloomington, Ill
- Schulze, Henry H L, Assoc Prof Germ Langs and Lits, Columbia Univ, New York, N. Y [407 Hamilton Hall]
- Schulze, Ivan L, Prof Eng, Tex State Coll for Women, Denton, Tex [Box 3764, T.S.C.W. Sta.]
- Schuman, (Mrs) Ethel K, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Denver, Denver, Colo [2075 S High St.]
- Schumann, Detlev W, Assoc Prof Germanic Langs and Lits, Brown Univ, Providence, R I
- Schutz, Alexander Herman, Prof Rom Langs, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio [Derby Hall]
- Schuyler, Wilham Moorhouse, Asst Prof French and Italian, Univ of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Ind [1223 Woodward Ave, South Bend]
- Schwab, Walter H, Dept Mod Langs, Purdue Univ, Lafayette, Ind
- Schwabe, Ida, German Dept, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave. and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y
- Schwartz, Wilham Leonard, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Stanford Univ, Calif [667 Salvatierra St.]
- Scott, David Gallup, Instr Rom Langs, Lehigh Univ, Bethlehem, Pa [1702 Claverleaf St.]
- Scott, Florence R., Asst Prof Eng Lang and Lit, Univ of Southern Calif, Los Angeles, Calif
- Scott James Richardson, Instr Eng, Univ. of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, Sask, Can
- Scott, R Walker, Head Dept Rom Langs, Trinity Coll, Hartford, Conn
- Scott-Craig, Thomas Stevenson Kirkpatrick, Asst Prof Eng, Hobart Wm Smith Coll, Geneva, N. Y
- Scudder, Harold H, Prof Eng, Univ of New Hampshire, Durham, N H
- Scudder, Townsend, III, Asst Prof Eng, Swarthmore Coll, Swarthmore, Pa.
- Sealts, Merton M., Jr., Instr Eng, Univ of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [1440 W. Market St, Lima, Ohio]
- Seaman, Walter L., Asst. Prof Rom Langs, Muhlenberg Coll., Allentown, Pa. [427 N. 23 St.]
- Searles, Colbert, Prof Emer. Rom Langs, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn
- Seaver, Henry Latimer, Prof History, Mass Inst of Tech, Cambridge, Mass.
- Sebeok, Thomas A, Fellow Oriental Langs, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [Grad. Coll.]
- ❖ Secord, Arthur Wellesley, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [203 S Lincoln Ave.]
- Sedgwick, Ruth, Assoc Prof Span, Mt Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass
- Sedgwick, William Ellery, Stockbridge, Mass
- Seeber, Edward Derbyshire, Assoc Prof French and Italian, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [506 Ballantine Rd.]
- Seely, Frederick Franklin, Asst. Prof Eng, Allegheny Coll, Meadville, Pa
- ❖ Segall, Jacob Bernard, Prof and Head Dept Rom Langs, St John's Coll, Annapolis, Md
- Sehrt, Edward H, Prof German, Geo Washington Univ, Washington, D C [2811 35 St., N W.]
- Seidlin, Oskar, Asst Prof German, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [On leave with U. S Army]
- Seigler, Milledge Broadus, Lieut (j g), 1311 Arnette Ave, Durham, N C
- Seiver, George Otto, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [904 Ormond Ave, Drexel Hill, Pa.]
- Sell, Friedrich C, Asst Prof German, Mt. Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass
- Sellin, Henry S, Instr Eng., Brooklyn Coll, Evening Session, Bklyn, N Y [c/o Mehr, 955 Walton Ave.]
- Selmer, Carl, Assoc Prof German, Hunter Coll, 68th St and Park Ave, New York, N Y
- Senecal, (Rev) Lucien J, O S B, Prof French, St Benedict's Coll, Atchison, Kans
- Senn, Alfred, Prof Germanic Phil., Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [112 Penarth Rd, Bala-Cynwyd]
- Senob, Alice, Asst. Prof Eng, Utah State Agric Coll, Logan, Utah
- Sensabaugh, George Frank, Asst. Prof Eng, Stanford Univ., Calif [1585 College Ave, Palo Alto]
- Sérafon, Amélie Catherine, Prof. & Charman French Dept, Milwaukee-Downer Coll., Milwaukee, Wis

- Seronde, Joseph, Prof Rom Langs. and Lit , Yale Univ , New Haven, Conn
- Severs, Jonathan Burke, Prof Eng , Lehigh Univ , Bethlehem, Pa
- Sewall, Richard Benson, Asst Prof. Eng , Yale Univ , New Haven, Conn [1852 Yale Sta]
- Sexton, Meta Maria, Cataloger in charge Cavagna Collection, Univ of Ill , Urbana, Ill [112 W Hill St , Champaign]
- Seznec, Jean J, Assoc Prof Rom Langs , Harvard Univ , Cambridge, Mass [Widener 146]
- Shaabber, Matthias A, Assoc Prof Eng , Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila , Pa [Bennett Hall]
- Shackford, Martha Hale, Prof Eng Lit , Wellesley Coll , Wellesley, Mass [7 Midland Rd]
- Shaddock, Ada Jennings, Beaumont, Tex [2195 Calder]
- ❖ Shafer, Robert, Prof Lit and Fellow Grad Sch , Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio [Box 43, Campus Sta]
- Shaftel, Oscar H, Instr Eng , Queens Coll , Flushing, N Y
- 📖 Shannon, Edgar Finley, Jr , Lt (j g), U S N R , [12 Jordan St , Lexington, Va]
- ❖ Shannon, George Pope, Prof Eng , Univ of Alabama, University, Ala [Box 1452]
- Sharp, Robert Lathrop, Asst Prof Eng , Wheaton Coll , Norton, Mass
- Sharpe, Robert Boies, Assoc Prof Eng , Univ. of N C , Chapel Hill, N. C. [505 Pittsboro St]
- Shaver, Chester Linn, Asst Prof Eng , Oberlin Coll , Oberlin, Ohio [265 E College St]
- 📖 Shaw, Edward Pease, Instr French, U of Ill , Urbana, Ill [On leave c/o Mrs E P Shaw, 854 Linwood Ave , St Paul, Minn]
- Shaw, Esther Elizabeth, Prof. Eng , Hood Coll , Frederick, Md
- ❖ Shaw, James Eustace, Prof Italian and Spanish, Univ of Toronto, Toronto, Ont. [75 Walmer Rd]
- Shears, Lambert Armour, Instr German, Duke Univ , Durham, N C [College Sta , Box 262]
- Shedd, Karl Eastman, Chairman Mod Langs Dept , Mary Baldwin Coll , Staunton, Va [20 N Market St]
- Sheets, Sankey L , Prof Eng , Forman Christian Coll , Lahore, India
- Sheils, Edward Ellhott, Pleasant Hill, Ohio
- Sheldon, Mrs Esther K , Queens Coll , Flushing, N Y
- Shelley, Philip Allison, Prof and Head German Dept , Penna State Coll , State Coll , Pa [52 Glennland Apts]
- Shelly, Percy Van Dyke, Prof Eng , Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila , Pa [College Hall]
- Shelton, Whitford H , Head Dept Mod Langs , U of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa
- Shepard, Odell, Prof Eng , Trinity Coll , Hartford, Conn [67 Vernon St]
- ❖ Shepard, William Pierce, Prof Rom Langs , Hamilton Coll , Clinton, N Y
- Shepston, Howard F , 2912 Nash Pl , S E , Apt 1, Washington, D C
- ❖ Sherburn, George, Prof Eng , Harvard U , Cambridge, Mass [1 Waterhouse St]
- Sherman, Lester C , Sub-editor, Middle English Dictionary, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [5208 Angell Hall]
- Sherover, Max, Director, Linguaphone Inst , Rockefeller Center, New York, N Y.
- Sherrer, Grace Bussing, Assoc Prof Eng , Kent State Univ , Kent, Ohio
- Sherwin, Oscar, Instr Eng , The City Coll , 23 St and Lexington Ave , New York, N. Y.
- Sherwin, Proctor Fenn, Prof Eng , Knox Coll , Galesburg, Ill
- Sherwood, Merriam (Mrs M M S Mantz), Translating Bureau, Dept of State, Wash , D C.
- Shewmake, Edwin Francis, Alumni Prof Eng , Davidson Coll , Davidson, N C. [Box 504]
- Shields, Archibald Kenneth, Dept Mod Langs , Henry Holt and Co , 257 Fourth Ave , New York, N Y
- de Shields, Laura Belle, Prof French, Young Harris Coll , Young Harris, Ga
- Shine, Hill, Assoc Prof Eng , Maryville Coll , Maryville, Tenn [Route 5, Tuckaleechee St]
- Shipley, Frederick Cary, Instr Eng , The City Coll , New York, N. Y [64 Chestnut St , Dobbs Ferry]
- Shipley, Joseph T., Author and Editor, 29 W 46 St , New York, N Y.
- Shippin, Eliza Pearl, Instr Eng , Miner Teachers Coll , Washington, D. C. [1120 Columbia Rd , N W]
- Shockley, Martin Staples, Assoc. Prof. Eng., Univ of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla [714 Cruce St]
- 📖 Shoemaker, Alfred Lewis, Instr. German,

- Lafayette Coll, Easton, Pa (On leave U S Army)
- Shoemaker, William Hutchinson, Prof. and Chairman Dept Rom Langs and Lits, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans. [1726 Indiana St]
- Short, Clarence, Asst Prof Eng, Ft Hays Kans State Coll, Hays, Kans [308 W Sixth St]
- Short, Raymond W, Asst Prof. Eng, Sweet Briar Coll, Sweet Briar, Va
- Shortliffe, Glen, Lect French, Queen's U, Kingston, Ont, Can [81 College St]
- Shumway, Mary Q (Mrs Daniel B), Instr German, Shipley School, Bryn Mawr; Curtis Inst of Music, Phila, Pa [Gulph Rd, Bryn Mawr]
- Shurter, Robert L, Assoc Prof Eng, Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, Ohio
- Sibley, Agnes M, Instr Eng, Cottey Coll, Nevada, Mo
- Sickels, Eleanor, Instr Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y. [140-30 Sanford Ave]
- Sicre, Annette, Prof Span., North Central Coll, Naperville, Ill [321 N Center St]
- Siegel, Paul, Capt, 2nd Lt, 66th Gen Hospital, Ft Bragg, N C
- Silber, Gordon Rutledge, Asst. Prof. French and Italian, Union Coll, Schenectady, N Y [1237 Baker Ave]
- Silver, Isidore, Teacher Eng, Bronx Vocational H S, New York, N. Y. [175 Pinehurst Ave]
- Silverstein, Theodore, Lieut., Army Intelligence Air Force, No Africa [c/o Mrs T Silverstein, 5047 Virginia, Kansas City, Mo]
- ❖ Silz, Walter, Prof and Head German Dept, Swarthmore Coll, Swarthmore, Pa.
- Simmons, Ernest Joseph, Assoc Prof Eng and Slavic, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y.
- Simmons, Lucretia Van Tuyl, Head and Prof. German Dept Emerita, Pa. State Coll., State Coll, Pa [Glennland Apts]
- ❖ Simonds, William Edward, 205 Elmwood Ave, Ithaca, N. Y.
- Simpson, Claude M, Jr, Instr Eng, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [H-13 Kirkland House]
- Simpson, Grellet Collins, Assoc. Prof Eng, Randolph-Macon Coll, Ashland, Va.
- Simpson, Lurline V., Asst Prof Rom Langs, Univ. of Washington, Seattle, Wash.
- Sinclair, Gregg M., Prof Eng; Dir. Oriental Inst, Univ of Hawaii, Honolulu, Hawaii [3817 Lurline St]
- Sine, Edward W, Asst Prof. Eng, Univ of Buffalo, Buffalo, N. Y [Crosby Hall]
- Singer, Armand Edwards, Instr Rom Langs, West Virginia Univ, Morgantown, W. Va
- Singleton, Charles S, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, The Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md
- Singleton, Mack Hendricks, Instr. Rom. Langs, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y
- Singleton, Ralph H, Eng Dept, Oberlin Coll, Oberlin, Ohio [279 W College St]
- Sirich, Edward Hinman, Prof Rom. Langs, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn
- Sisson, Charles Alexander, Asst Prof Eng, Cooker Coll, Hartsville, S C [1205 Pine-wood Ave]
- ❖ Sisson, Louis Eugene, Prof Eng, Univ. of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans [1236 Louisiana St]
- Sisson, Sarah Trumbull, Assoc Prof Eng, Butler Univ, Indianapolis, Ind. [1805 Talbott St]
- Sister Agnes Rita, Prof German, The Coll of St. Catherine, St Paul, Minn.
- Sister Aloysia Marie, Prof Eng, Loretto Motherhouse, Nerinx, Ky.
- Sister Catherine Marie Lilly, O. P., Head Eng Dept, The Dominican Coll., San Rafael, Calif
- Sister Edith Marie, Asst. Prof. French, Coll. of Mt St Vincent, Mt St. Vincent-on-Hudson, N. Y.
- Sister Loyola Maria, Prof Rom Langs, Coll. of Chestnut Hill, Chestnut Hill, Phila, Pa
- Sister M. Baptista Klein, Instr Freshman Eng, Georgetown Visitation Convent, 1500 35 St, N W, Washington, D C.
- Sister M. Callista, R S M, Instr. Eng, St. Francis Xavier Acad, Vicksburg, Miss
- Sister M. Camillus, Prof German Lit, St Xavier Coll for Women, 4928 Cottage Grove Ave, Chicago, Ill
- Sister M. Charlotte Bonneville, Instr. Eng, Viterbo Coll, LaCrosse, Wis [815 S 9 St.]
- Sister M. Chrysantha, O.S.F., Teach. Eng., Coll. of Saint Francis, Joliet, Ill. [603 Taylor St]
- Sister M. Clement, Prof. Eng, Incarnate Word Coll, San Antonio, Texas
- Sister M.. Dominic, S S N D., Head Dept. Rom Langs, Coll of Notre Dame of Maryland, Balti., Md.

- Sister M. Honora, Marygrove Coll, Detroit, Mich
- Sister M. Ignatia, St Clare Coll, St Francis, Wis
- Sister M. Justinian, Principal, St Clare Academy, Sylvania, Ohio
- Sister M. Kevin, S S J, President, Nazareth Coll, Nazareth, Mich
- Sister M. Rosenda, O S F, Alverno Teachers Coll, 1413 S Layton Blvd, Milwaukee, Wis
- Sister M. St. Francis, Prof French, Regis Coll, Weston, Mass
- Sister Maria Ancilla, Assoc Prof Eng, St Joseph Coll, W Hartford, Conn.
- Sister Marian, Head Eng Dept, Immaculate Conception H S, 119 N. Franklin Ave, Washington, Pa
- Sister Marianna Gildea, R S M, Instr French, Coll of Misericordia, Dallas, Pa [901 Upshur St, N W, Brookland, D C]
- Sister Marie de Lourdes, Head Eng. Dept, Mt St Mary's Coll, 12001 Chalon Rd, Los Angeles, Calif
- Sister Marie Eugenie, Assoc Prof French, Trinity Coll., Washington, D C
- Sister Marie Philip Haley, Prof French, Coll of St Catherine, St Paul, Minn
- Sister Marie Pierre, R S M, Dept Rom Langs, Our Lady of Cincinnati Coll, Edgcliff, Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Sister Mariella Gable, Head Eng Dept, Coll of St Benedict, St Joseph, Minn.
- Sister Mary Alberta Savoie, Head Dept Mod Langs, Marymount Coll, Salina, Kans
- Sister Mary Aquinas Devlin, Head Dept Eng, Rosary Coll, River Forest, Ill
- Sister Mary Austin Cauvin, O P., Prof and Head Dept Mod Langs, Dominican Coll, New Orleans, La
- Sister Mary Berchmans, Head French Dept, Fontbonne Coll, St Louis, Mo
- Sister Mary Berchmans Dugan, Prof Eng Lit, Georgetown Visitation Jr Coll, 1500 35 St, Wash, D C
- Sister Mary Bernarda, Head Mod Lang Dept, Mundelein Coll, 6363 Sheridan Rd, Chicago, Ill
- Sister Mary Camille Bowe, Coll of Saint Teresa, Winona, Minn
- Sister Mary Ellen, Head German Dept, Trinity Coll, Washington, D C
- Sister Mary Ethelind, Head Eng Dept., Marylhurst Coll, Marylhurst, Ore.
- Sister Mary Eugenia, S S M D, Instr. French, LeClerc Coll, Belleville, Ill
- Sister Mary Eunice Mousel, Prof Eng, Briar Cliff Coll, Sioux City, Iowa
- Sister Mary Hilarine Seiler, C D P, Head Mod Lang Dept, Villa Madonna Coll, Covington, Ky [St Anne Convent, Melbourne]
- Sister Mary Immaculate, Instr Eng, St Mary's Coll, Notre Dame, Ind
- Sister Mary Imez Hanley, R S M, Eng Teacher, Mercy Coll, Detroit, Mich [8200 W. Outer Dr]
- Sister Mary James, Head Eng Dept, Mt Mary Coll, Milwaukee, Wis
- Sister Mary Jerome, O P, Prof Eng, Siena Hgts Coll, Adrian, Mich
- Sister Mary Leah, Instr Eng, St Mary of the Springs Coll, Columbus, Ohio
- Sister Mary Louise Beutner, Dir Eng Dept, Webster Coll, Webster Groves, Mo
- Sister Mary Loyola, Assoc Prof French, Mt Mary Coll, Milwaukee, Wis
- Sister Mary Rita (Lewis), Eng Teacher, Mt St Joseph Acad, Hamilton Hgts, W. Hartford, Conn
- Sister Miriam, Holy Cross Academy, 2935 Upton St, N W, Washington, D C.
- Sister Rose Anthony, Prof Eng, College of Mount St Joseph-on-the-Ohio, Mt. St Joseph, Ohio
- Sister Rose Dominic, The Saint Mary Coll, Xavier, Kans
- Sister St. Geraldine Byrne, Head Eng Dept, D'Youville Coll, Buffalo, N Y.
- Sister St. Helene, Head Eng Dept., Coll of Saint Catherine, St Paul, Minn
- Sister Sylvia Marie Boothby, Prof. & Dir. Eng Dept, Fontbonne Coll, St. Louis, Mo
- Sister Teresa Clare Goode, Head Spanish Dept, Nazareth Coll, Louisville, Ky.
- Sixbey, George Lawton, Asst Prof Eng, Marietta Coll, Marietta, Ohio
- Skard, Sigmund, Consultant in Scandinavian Culture, Library of Congress, Wash., D C.
- Skidmore, Mark, Prof. Rom Langs, Colorado Coll, Colorado Springs, Colo. [1424 Wood Ave]
- Skinner, Laurence Hervey, Prof Romanic Langs, Miami Univ., Oxford, Ohio [204 Bishop St]
- Skipp, Henry J, Asst Prof Mod. Langs., Denison Univ, Granville, Ohio
- Slattery, Rev. Joseph A, S J, Woodstock Coll, Woodstock, Md

- Slattery, Rev. Walter M, Union Beach, N. J.
- Sloane, Eugene Hulse, Asst Prof Eng. and Educa, Willmantic Sate Teachers Coll, Willmantic, Conn
- Small, B Mae, Asst Prof Eng, Northern Illinois State Teachers Coll, De Kalb, Ill
- ❖ Small, George William, Prof Eng, Univ of Maine, Orono, Me [On leave Colonel, Coast Artillery Corps, Ft. Monroe, Va]
- Small, Miriam Rossiter, Prof Eng, Wells Coll, Aurora-on-Cayuga, N. Y.
- ❖ Small, Samuel Asa, Prof Eng, Houghton Coll, Houghton, N. Y.
- Smalley, Donald, Asst Prof Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind
- Smalley, Vera Ethel, 3709 Monterey Rd, Baltimore, Md
- Smart, Walter Kay, Prof Eng, Sch of Commerce, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [721 Foster St]
- ❖ Smead, Jane Van Ness, Temple Univ, Phila, Pa
- Smiley, Joseph R, Assoc Prof French, N. Tex State Teachers Coll, Denton, Tex [T C. Sta]
- Smith, Andrew Cannon, S J, Dean, Chairman Eng. Dept., Spring Hill Coll, Mobile, Ala
- Smith, Anne Wharton, Instr French, Carson-Newman Coll, Jefferson City, Tenn
- ❖ Smith, Charles G, Prof Eng, Baylor Univ, Waco, Tex
- Smith, Mrs Cornelia Marschall, Baylor Univ, Waco, Tex
- Smith, C Ross, Asst Instr Eng, U of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [2034 DeLancey St]
- Smith, C Willard, Assoc Prof Eng, Bucknell Univ, Lewisburg, Pa [College Park]
- ❖ Smith, Dane Farnsworth, Assoc Prof. Eng, Univ of New Mexico, Albuquerque, N M [1809 E Roma Ave]
- Smith, Frederick Danesbury, Dean, Coll of Arts and Sciences, Southern Methodist Univ, Dallas, Tex.
- Smith, Fred Manning, Prof. Eng, West Virginia Univ, Morgantown, W Va
- Smith, Garland Garvey, Prof Eng, Emory Univ, Ga.
- Smith, Gordon Winslow, Asst Prof. Mod Langs, Colby Coll, Waterville, Me [25 Winter St.]
- Smith, Hallett D, Assoc. Prof. Eng, Williams Coll, Williamstown, Mass. [115 Park St.]
- Smith, Henry Lee, Jr., Instr. Eng, Brown Univ., Providence, R I [122 Elton St]
- Smith, Horatio, Prof French, Columbia Univ., New York, N. Y
- Smith, Hubert W, Asst Prof Eng, Indiana State Teachers Coll, Terre Haute, Ind.
- ❖ Smith, Hugh Allison, Prof Rom Langs, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [15 Prospect Ave]
- Smith, John Harrington, Asst Prof Eng, Washington Univ, St Louis, Mo [530 E. Essex, Kirkwood]
- Smith, LeRoy, Jr, Instr Eng, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [4244 Pine St]
- Smith, Madeleine M, Asst Prof. French, Southern Ill State Teachers Univ, Carbondale, Ill [718 S. Normal Ave]
- Smith, May B, Prof Eng, Berea Coll., Berea, Ky
- ❖ Smith, M Ellwood, Dean Lower Div, Oregon State System of Higher Education, Ore State Coll, Corvallis, Ore.
- Smith, Paul Edward, Asst Prof Eng, Univ. of Maryland, College Park, Md [6706 44th Ave, Univ Park, Hyattsville]
- Smith, Rebecca Washington, Prof. and Chairman Eng Dept, Texas Christian Univ, Fort Worth, Tex.
- Smith, Reed, Dean Grad School, Univ. of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C [330 Harden St]
- Smith, Robert Metcalf, Head Eng Dept, Lehigh Univ, Bethlehem, Pa
- ❖ Smith, Roland Mitchell, Eng Dept, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [501 Indiana Ave.]
- Smith, Russell Floyd William, Instr. German, Catawba Coll, Salisbury, N C
- Smith, S Stephenson, Rm 4507, RCA Bldg, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N Y.
- Smith, Stanley Astredo, Prof Rom Langs, Stanford Univ, Calif [20 E Camino Real, Redwood City]
- Smith, Warren D D., Jr., Asst. Prof Pub. Speaking, R I State Coll, Kingston, R I.
- Smith, Wilham Francis, Instr. Spanish, Tulane Univ, New Orleans, La.
- Smith, Winifred, Prof. Comp Lit, Head Div. Drama, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
- Smither, Nelle, 992 Lamar Ave., Memphis, Tenn
- Smyser, H M., Assoc. Prof. Eng, Connecticut Coll, New London, Conn. [269 Mohegan Ave]
- Snellings, Dorus Alvin, Prof Eng, S. W. Tex. Teachers Coll., San Marcos, Tex. [825 Elm St.]

- Snuggs, Henry Lawrence, Prof. and Head Dept Eng, Okla Baptist Univ, Shawnee, Okla [Faculty Exch]
- Snyder, Edward Douglas, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Haverford Coll, Haverford, Pa
- Snyder, Franklyn Bliss, Pres, Prof Eng, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Sokol, Anthony E, Assoc. Prof. German, Stanford Univ, Calif
- Solano, L F, Assoc Prof Rom Langs and Lits, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [173 Widener Lib]
- Soldner, Dora Minna, Assoc Prof German, Wheaton Coll, Wheaton, Ill
- Solum, Nora O, Assoc Prof Eng, St Olaf Coll, Northfield, Minn.
- Solve, Melvin T, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Univ of Arizona, Tucson, Ariz [3342 E Fifth St]
- Sondel, Bess Seltzer (Mrs H M), Instr Speech, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [2100 Lincoln Park West]
- Soto, Rafael Arcangel, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Lehigh Univ, Bethlehem, Pa. [1624 Millard St]
- Souers, Philip Webster, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Newcomb Coll, Tulane Univ, New Orleans, La
- South, Helen Pennock, Instr Eng, Washington Square Coll, N Y Univ, New York, N Y [226 E 12th St]
- Southard, Gordon Douglass, Instr. Spanish, Cranbrook School, Bloomfield Hills, Mich
- Southworth, James Granville, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Toledo, Toledo, Ohio [625 Virginia St]
- Sowers, W Leigh, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ. of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [422 Iowa Ave]
- Spagnoli, Dominic J, Instr Rom Langs, Brooklyn Coll, Bklyn, N. Y [837 E. 22 St]
- Spagnoli, John J, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N. Y.
- Spalding, Mary Doan, Prof Eng, Harris Teachers Coll, St Louis, Mo. [3664 Washington Ave]
- Spanhoofd, Arnold W, Prof German, [Sch. Foreign Service], Georgetown Univ, Washington, D C. [1624 Riggs Pl, N W]
- Spann, Meno, Asst Prof. German, Univ. of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa
- Spargo, John W, Prof. Eng, Northwestern Univ., Evanston, Ill
- Spaulding, Gordon, Assoc Prof Eng, Stockton Jr Coll, Stockton, Calif
- Spaulding, John Austin, Asst Prof For Langs, Pacific Univ, Forest Grove, Ore [1511 S W Market St, Portland]
- Spaulding, Robert Kilburn, Assoc Prof Spanish, Univ of Calif, Berkeley, Calif [368 60th St, Oakland]
- Speare, Morris Edmund, Chairman Eng Dept, St John's Univ, Bklyn, N Y [c/o Harvard Club, 27 W 44 St, N Y C]
- Speckbaugh, (Rev) Paul F, C PP S, Chairman Eng Dept, St Joseph's Coll, Collegeville, Ind
- Spell, Jefferson Rea, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Box 1698, Univ Sta]
- Spencer, Benjamin T, Prof Eng, Ohio Wesleyan Univ, Delaware, Ohio
- Spencer, Hazelton, Prof Eng, Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md
- Spencer, Theodore, Assoc Prof Eng, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [E-11 Eliot House]
- Spencer, William Gear, President, Franklin Coll, Franklin, Ind
- Sperber, Hans, Prof German, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio [228 Arden Rd]
- Speroni, Charles, Asst Prof Italian, U. of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif
- Speyer, Marian F, 1461 E. 17 St, Bklyn, N Y.
- Spiecker, Frank, Asst Prof German, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill
- Spiller, Robert Ernest, Prof Eng, Swarthmore Coll, Swarthmore, Pa [6 Whittier Pl]
- Spitzer, Leo, Prof Rom Langs, Johns Hopkins Univ, Baltimore, Md
- Sprau, George, Prof Eng, Western Mich Coll of Educa, Kalamazoo, Mich. [949 Walwood Pl]
- Springer, Otto, Prof Germ Langs, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa
- Sproull, Grace Mildred, Asst Prof French and Span, Western Ill State Teachers Coll, Macomb, Ill. [430 W. Adams St]
- Spurlin, Paul Merrill, Assoc Prof French, Louisiana State Univ., University Sta, Baton Rouge, La.
- Stagg, Ella McRae, Prof and Head Dept French and German, Atlantic Christian Coll, Wilson, N C.
- ❖ Stair, Bird, Prof Eng, The City Coll, New York, N. Y.

- Staley, Ethel M, Head For Lang Dept, West Chester State Teachers Coll, West Chester, Pa [26 W Union St]
- Staley, Ruth, Instr German, Virginia Jr Coll, Virginia, Minn [520½ Fifth St, S]
- Staley, Wren, Instr Eng., Natl Coll of Ed, Evanston, Ill [2525 Lincoln St]
- Stallbaumer, Virgil R, Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, Seton Hall Urban Div, 72 Central Ave, Newark, N J [528 High St]
- Stallknecht, Newton Phelps, Assoc Prof Philosophy, Bowdoin Coll, Brunswick, Me [82 Federal St]
- Stambler, Bernard, Instr Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind
- Stamm, Israel Solomon, 324th M P Co, Ft Devens, Mass
- Stanley, Oma, Asst Prof Eng, N Y Univ, Univ Hgts, New York, N Y [On leave 1569 Metropolitan Ave, N Y C]
- Stanton, Roger F, Asst Prof Eng, Calif. Inst of Tech, Pasadena, Calif
- ❖ Starck, Taylor, Assoc Prof German, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [32 Bowdoin St]
- Starnes, De Witt Talmage, Prof Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex
- Starr, Herbert Willmarth, 81 High St, Apt 3D, Germantown, Phila., Pa
- Starr, William T, German Dept, Gettysburg Coll, Gettysburg, Pa
- Starr, Wilmarth Holt, Asst. Prof Rom. Langs, Univ. of Maine, Orono, Me. [9 Stevens Hall]
- Starrett, Deane W, 6604 Minne Lusa Blvd, Omaha, Neb
- ❖ Stathers, Madison, Prof Rom. Langs, West Virginia Univ, Morgantown, W Va [236 Grand St]
- Staubach, Charles N, Instr Spanish, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. [824 Granger Ave]
- Stauffer, Donald Alfred, Assoc Prof Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N. J [302 Henry Hall]
- Staunton, Henry C F, Prof Eng, Univ. of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Ind
- Stearns, Bertha Monica, Prof Eng Lit, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass [Hallowell House]
- Stearns, Harold Everett, Jr, Asst Prof. Mod Langs, Carnegie Inst. of Tech, Pittsburgh, Pa [On leave Capt, Air Corps, Miami Beach, Fla]
- Stearns, Marshall Winslow, Instr Eng, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [1104 S Henderson St]
- Steckman, Lillian L, Asst Prof Eng, Russell Sage Coll, Troy, N Y
- Steel, Charles Archelaus, Asst Prof Eng, Rollins Coll, Winter Park, Fla
- Steel, Eric M, (Address Unknown)
- Steeves, Harrison Ross, Prof Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- Stegemeier, Henri G, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [Lincoln Hall 221]
- Stein, Arnold Sidney, Instr Eng, U of Minn, Minneapolis, Minn [1212 S E 8th St]
- Stein, Elizabeth Paula, Assoc Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, Park Ave and 68 St, New York, N Y
- Steiner, Arpad, Assoc Prof German, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [33-11 162 St, Flushing N Y]
- Steiner, Herbert, 35 W 75 St, New York, N Y
- Steiner, Olga, Teacher German, Hunter Coll., New York, N Y [175 Pinehurst Ave]
- Steinhauer, Harry, Prof German and French, Univ of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, Sask, Canada
- Stelter, Benjamin F, Prof Eng and Head Dept, Occidental Coll, Los Angeles, Calif [2042 Escarpa Dr]
- ❖ Stempel, Guido Hermann, Prof Emer. Comp Philology, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [723 S. Park, Ave]
- Stenberg, Theodore, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex
- ❖ Stepanek, Orin, Assoc Prof Eng and Slavonic Langs, Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [Station A]
- Stephens, George Robert, Assoc Prof Eng Lit., Dickinson Coll, Carlisle, Pa. [916 S. St Bernard St, West Philadelphia]
- Stephens, S D, Head Dept Eng, Univ of Newark, Newark, N J
- Stephenson, Robert C., Dept Rom. Langs, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [2848 Shoal Crest]
- Stern, Bernard H, Instr. Eng, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y
- Stern, Elizabeth-Vera Loeb, Asst Prof. Speech & Dramatics, Hunter Coll., 2 Park

- Ave, New York, N Y [1435 Lexington Ave]
- Stern, Madeleine B, Eng Teacher, Long Island City H S, Long Island City, N Y. [317 W 99 St, N Y C]
- Stetson, R H, Dept Psychology, Oberlin Coll, Oberlin, Ohio
- ❖ Stevens, Alice Porter, Assoc Prof Emeritus German, Mount Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass
- Stevens, Caroline Harris, Asst Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, 695 Park Ave, New York, N Y [The Carlyle, 35 E 76 St]
- Stevens, Charles H, Jr, Assoc Prof Rom. Langs, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N J [On leave Cultural Relations Asst, Amer Embassy, Mexico, D F]
- ❖ Stevens, David Harrison, Director for the Humanities, Rockefeller Foundation, 49 W 49th St, New York, N Y [160 N. Mountain Ave, Montclair, N J]
- Stevens, Ernest Nichols, Senior Editor, Editorial Dept, Ginn and Co, Statler Office Bldg, Boston, Mass
- Stevens, Henry Harmon, Yarmouth Port, Mass
- Stevens, Linton Cooke, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Michigan State Coll, E Lansing, Mich
- Stevenson, Allan H, Asst Prof Eng, DePaul Univ, Chicago, Ill [1362 E 54 St]
- Stevenson, A Lionel, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Southern Calif, Los Angeles, Calif [3971 Sutro Ave]
- Stevenson, Mary Lou, Asst Dir, Pa State Lib, State Dept of Public Instruction, 103 Education Bldg, Harrisburg, Pa [402 5th St, West Newton]
- Steward, Samuel Morris, Asst Prof Eng, Loyola Univ, Chicago, Ill [28 N Franklin St]
- Stewart, Allegra, Assoc Prof Eng, Butler Univ, Indianapolis, Ind [2621 College Ave]
- Stewart, Bain Tate, Instr Eng, Univ. of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn [1301 Laurel Ave.]
- Stewart, Frederic Walter, Editor, Amer. Council of Learned Socs, 1219 Sixteenth St, N. W., Washington, D. C.
- Stewart, George R, Jr, Assoc. Prof Eng, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [415 Wheeler Hall]
- ❖ Stewart, Morton Collins, Assoc Prof. German, Union Coll, Schenectady, N. Y.
- Stewart, Nancy A, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Mercer Univ, Macon, Ga [320 Orange St]
- Stewart, Randall, Prof Eng, Brown Univ, Providence, R I
- Stewart, William Kilborne, Prof Comp Lit, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H [13 Allen St]
- Stillman, Donald Gale, Asst Prof Eng, Bucknell Univ, Lewisburg, Pa
- Stillman, E Clark, C R B Educational Foundation Fellow, Brussels, Belgium [42 Park Ave, New York, N Y]
- Stillwell, Gardiner, Instr Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Stinson, Madeline Grace, Asst. Prof Rom Langs, Greensboro Coll, Greensboro, N C
- Stoakes, James Paul, Box 425, Russell, Ky
- Stobie, William George, Instr Eng, Univ of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [214 Jesse Hall]
- Stochholm, Johanne M, Assoc. Prof. Eng, Sweet Briar Coll, Sweet Briar, Va.
- Stockton, Grace, Teaching Asst German, Univ of Calif, Berkeley, Calif
- Stone, George Winchester, Jr, Asst Prof. Eng, George Washington Univ, Washington, D C.
- Stone, Howard, Instl Spanish, Univ of Santa Clara, Santa Clara, Calif [573 Washington St]
- Storer, Mary Elizabeth, Prof French, Beloit Coll, Beloit, Wis [836 College St]
- Storer, Walter Henry, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Vanderbilt Univ, Nashville, Tenn. [500 21st Ave, S]
- ❖ Storn, Martin W, Prof Rom Langs, Southwestern Coll, Memphis, Tenn
- Story, Irving Chellis, Head Eng Dept, Pacific Univ, Forest Grove, Ore
- ❖ Stoudemire, Sterling A, Assoc Prof. Span, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C
- ❖ Stout, George Dumas, Lubbock Army Fly Sch, Lubbock, Tex [2820 27 St.]
- Stovall, Floyd, Prof and Dir Eng, No Tex State Teachers Coll, Denton, Tex [Box 5165 T C Sta]
- Strain, Mary Adela, Prof Eng, Tennessee Coll for Women, Murfreesboro, Tenn
- Strathmann, Ernest Albert, Assoc Prof Eng, Pomona Coll, Claremont, Calif.
- Strauch, Carl Ferdinand, Asst Prof. Eng, Lehigh Univ, Bethlehem, Pa
- Strausbaugh, John Anthony, Assoc. Prof. Rom. Langs., Emory Univ., Ga.

- Strauss, Fannie Barth, Instr German, Mary Baldwin Coll, Staunton, Va
- Streeter, Harold W, Assoc Prof Mod. Langs, Lafayette Coll, Easton, Pa [800 Burke St]
- Strelsky, Katharine Anderson (Mrs N), Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Strelsky, Nikander, Asst Prof Russian and Comp Lit, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Stroebe, Lihan L, Prof and Chairman German Dept, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- Strong, Everett Fisk, Assoc Prof Mod Langs, Colby Coll, Waterville, Me. [2 Elm St]
- Strong, Mabel Evelyn, Instr. Eng, Univ. of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [219 Andrews Hall]
- Strong, Mary Louise, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Illinois Coll, Jacksonville, Ill. [1228 W College Ave]
- Strothmann, Friedrich W, Assoc Prof German, Stanford Univ, Calif
- Stroup, Thomas Bradley, Assoc Prof. Eng, Univ of Florida, Gainesville, Fla.
- Strout, Alan Lang, Prof Eng, Texas Tech. Coll, Lubbock, Tex [2512 21st St]
- Stubbs, Lucile, Assoc Eng, U of Washington, Seattle, Wash [325 Parrington Hall]
- Stuerm, Francis H, Instr German, Washington Sq Coll, N Y U, New York, N Y. [Apt 3-G, 165 Pinehurst Ave]
- Stull, Joseph Sibley, Instr Eng, Butler Univ, Indianapolis, Ind [R.R 14, Box 186c]
- Stunz, Arthur N, Assoc Prof Eng, Ashland Coll, Ashland, Ohio [525 Center St]
- Sturdevant, Winifred, Lect French, Barnard Coll, Columbia Univ, New York, N. Y
- Sturmer, Anna Marie, Assoc Prof Eng, Kansas State Coll, Manhattan, Kans.
- Sturtevant, Albert Morey, Prof Germ. Langs and Lits, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans [924 Louisiana St]
- Sturtevant, Ethel G, Asst. Prof. Eng, Barnard Coll, Columbia Univ, New York, N. Y.
- Sudermann, Jacob, Asst. Prof. German, Goshen Coll, Goshen, Ind.
- Suhl, Abraham, Instr German, The City Coll, New York, N. Y. [1120 Brighton Beach Ave, Bklyn]
- Sullivan, Edward D, Instr. French, Harvard Univ., Cambridge, Mass [10 Lancaster St]
- Sullivan, Frank, Asst Prof Eng, St Louis Univ, St Louis, Mo.
- Sullivan, Rev Paul David, S J, Asst Prof Eng, West Baden Coll, West Baden Springs, Ind
- Sullivan, Paul R, Instr Eng, Georgetown Univ, Washington, D C [Apt. 207, 1820 Clydesdale Pl, N W]
- Sumberg, Samuel L, Instr German, The City Coll, Convent Ave and 139 St, New York, N Y
- Summerell, Jane, Assoc Prof Eng, Woman's Coll of the U of N C, Greensboro, N C.
- Sundheim, Miss Borghild K, Assoc. Prof French, Macalester Coll, St Paul, Minn [1212 Powderhorn Terr, Minneapolis]
- Super, R H, Asst Prof Eng, Mich State Normal Coll, Ypsilanti, Mich [Munson Hall]
- Suriano, Josephine, Instr Eng, Washington Square Coll, N Y. Univ, New York, N Y [1525 W 7th St, Brooklyn]
- Sutcliffe, Emerson Grant, Prof Eng, Purdue Univ, Lafayette, Ind
- Svensen, James Kester, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla [Franklin House, U. of Okla]
- ❖ Swain, Barbara, Asst Prof Eng, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y.
- Swain, James O, Chairman Dept Rom. Langs, U of Tenn, Knoxville, Tenn.
- Swanson, Adolph Benjamin, Prof Rom. Langs, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Univ. Sta.]
- Swanson, Carl Alvin, Assoc. Prof Rom. Langs, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [Univ. Sta]
- Swartley, Stanley S, Prof. Eng Lang, Allegheny Coll, Meadville, Pa
- Swayne, Mattie, Assoc. Prof. Eng, West Texas State Teachers Coll, Canyon, Tex [Box 488]
- Swedenberg, Hugh Thomas, Jr., Asst. Prof. Eng, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif
- Sweeney, Rev. Paul J., Prof Eng, Xavier Univ., Evanston Sta., Cincinnati, Ohio
- Syford, Constance Miriam, 700 N 16 St., Lincoln, Neb.
- Sypher, F Wylie, Assoc Prof Eng, Simmons Coll, Boston, Mass [17 Newland St, Auburndale]
- Sypherd, Wilbur Owen, Prof Eng, U. of Delaware, Newark, Dela
- Syring, Rudolf Albert, Assoc Prof. German,

- Western Coll , Oxford, Ohio [505 E Chestnut St.]
- Tabor, Alice Post, Asst Prof German, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [1194 Cragmont Ave]
- Taeusch, Henry William, Prof Eng , Western Reserve Univ , Cleveland, Ohio [2233 S Overlook Rd , Cleveland Hgts]
- Taft, Frederick Lovett, Instr Eng , Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, Ohio [Univ Circle]
- Taft, Kendall B , Prof American Lit , Chairman Eng Dept , Central Y M C A Coll , 19 S LaSalle St , Chicago, Ill
- Taintor, Mary B , Assoc Prof French, Dickinson Coll , Carlisle, Pa [Box 125]
- Talamon, René, Assoc. Prof French, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1805 Hermitage Rd]
- Talbert, Ernest W , Asst Prof Eng , Duke Univ , Durham, N C
- Tamin, Marion, Lang Dept , Western Mich Coll of Educ , Kalamazoo, Mich [225 Woodward Ave]
- Tannenbaum, Samuel A , 601 W 113 St , New York, N Y
- Tate, Allen, Visiting Lect Eng , La State U , Baton Rouge, La [Monteagle, Tenn]
- ❖ Tatlock, John Strong Perry, Prof Eng , Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [1994 San Antonio Ave]
- ❖ Taylor, Archer, Prof German, U of Calif , Berkeley, Calif [Box 57, Wheeler Hall]
- Taylor, Edward Ayers, Prof Eng , Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash. [131 Parrington Hall]
- Taylor, George Coffin, Kenan Prof Eng , Univ of N C , Chapel Hill, N C [408 E Rosemary St]
- Taylor, Houghton Wells, Assoc Prof Eng , Western State Coll , Gunnison, Colo.
- Taylor, Pauline, Assoc Prof French, N. Y. Univ , Wash Sq. Coll , New York, N Y. [Butler Hall, Apt 14B, 400 W 119 St]
- Taylor, Rupert, Assoc Prof Eng , Clemson Coll , Clemson, S C
- Taylor, Walter Fuller, Head Dept. Eng , Mississippi Coll , Clinton, Miss
- Teagarden, Lucetta Jane, Res Asst Eng , Duke Univ , Durham, N. C [Coll Sta]
- Teague, Beatrice M , Head Dept Rom. Langs , MacMurray Coll , Jacksonville, Ill.
- Telfer, Wm Adams, Asst. Prof Eng , Miami Univ , Oxford, Ohio
- Temple, Ruth Z , Instr Eng , Wells Coll , Aurora, N Y
- Temple, William J , Asst Prof Speech, Brooklyn Coll , Bedford Ave. and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y
- Templeman, William Darby, Asst Prof Eng , Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill
- Tenney, Mary Alice, Chairman Eng Dept , Greenville Coll , Greenville, Ill
- Terrell, Horace C , Linfield Coll , McMinnville, Ore
- Thackaberry, Robert Eugene, Asst Prof Eng , Univ of Akron, Akron, Ohio
- ❖ Thaler, Alwin, Prof Eng , Univ of Tenn , Knoxville, Tenn [2115 Terrace Ave]
- Thalmann, Marianne, Prof German, Wellesley Coll , Wellesley, Mass. [5 Shepard House]
- Tharp, Charles Doren, Assoc Prof Eng , Univ of Miami, Coral Gables, Fla
- Tharp, James Burton, Prof Teaching of Foreign Langs , Ohio State Univ , Columbus, Ohio [115 Arps Hall]
- ❖ Thayer, Mary Rebecca, Prof Eng , Coll of Wooster, Wooster, O [346 E Bowman St]
- Thénaud, Franc, Assoc Prof Rom Langs , Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Thier, (Rev) A R , Head German Dept , Loras Coll , Dubuque, Iowa
- Thomas, Eleanor Walter, Assoc Prof Eng , Western Reserve Univ , Cleveland, Ohio [11421 Mayfield Rd]
- Thomas, Grace, Prof Eng , Mo Valley Coll , Marshall, Mo
- Thomas, Grace Agnes, Assoc Prof Eng , Elmira Coll , Elmira, N Y.
- Thomas, Harris Henderson, Instr. French, Phillips Exeter Acad , Exeter, N H [Williams House]
- ❖ Thomas, Roger, Archival Asst , Hall of Records, Annapolis, Md [Box 131]
- Thomas, William Andrews, Instr Eng , Univ. of Pennsylvania, Phila , Pa [4107 Locust St]
- Thompson, Albert Wilder, Assoc Prof. French, State Coll of Washington, Pullman, Wash [1905 "B" St]
- ❖ Thompson, Donald C , 2579 Herschel St , Jacksonville, Fla
- ❖ Thompson, Elbert N S , Prof Eng , Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [114 Univ. Hall]
- Thompson, Frank T , Head Eng Dept., Huntingdon Coll , Montgomery, Ala
- Thompson, Franklin McCown, Prof Portuguese, Instituto Pedagógico, Campina Grande, Paraíba, Brazil [Caixa Postal, 13]

- ❖ Thompson, Harold William, Prof Eng., Cornell Univ , Ithaca, N Y [Goldwin Smith Hall]
- Thompson, Karl Owen, Prof Eng , Case Sch Applied Science, Cleveland, Ohio
- Thompson, Lawrance, Asst Prof , Princeton Univ Lib , Princeton, N J
- Thompson, Stith, Prof Eng , Indiana Univ , Bloomington, Ind
- Thornton, Frances Clabaugh, Prof French, John B Stetson Univ , DeLand, Fla (207 W Univ Ave]
- Thornton, Hermann H, Prof French and Italian, Oberlin Coll , Oberlin, Ohio [294 Forest St]
- Thorp, Willard, Assoc Prof Eng , Princeton Univ , Princeton, N J [428 Nassau St]
- Thorpe, Claience De Witt, Prof Eng , Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- ❖ Thrall, Miriam Mulford, 234 Allen Lane, Phila, Pa
- Thurston, Marjorie Hagman, Asst Prof Rhetoric, Coll of Agric , Forestry & Home Economics, U of Minn , Minneapolis, Minn [3032 Emerson Ave , S]
- Tiller, Fritz, Civilian Instr German, U. S Mil Acad , West Point, N. Y.
- Tillett, Nettie S, Assoc Prof. Eng , Woman's Coll of Univ of N C , Greensboro, N C
- ❖ Tilley, Morris Palmer, Prof Eng , Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. [2213 Angel Hall]
- Tindall, William York, Asst Prof Eng , Columbia Univ , New York, N Y [606 Philosophy Hall]
- Tinker, Chauncey B, Sterling Prof Eng Lit , Yale Univ , New Haven, Conn. [1293 Davenport Coll]
- ❖ Tisdell, Frederick Monroe, Prof. Eng and Dean Emer Coll of Arts and Science, Univ of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [1316 Wilson Ave]
- Tobin, James Edward, Prof and Head Eng Dept , Fordham Univ Grad School, Keating Hall, Bronx, N Y
- ❖ Todd, Theodore Walter, 945 Matadero Ave , Palo Alto, Calif
- ☛ Todd, William Burton, Capt , Company "A," 12th Infantry, APO #4, Camp Gordon, Ga
- Tolles, Winton, Prof Eng , Washington Coll., Chestertown, Md [115 Maple Ave]
- del Toro, Julio, Asst. Prof Span , Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich.
- Torres-Rioseco, Arturo, Prof Spanish Amer. Lit , Univ. of Calif , Berkeley, Calif.
- Torrey, Norman Lewis, Prof French, Columbia Univ , New York, N. Y [Philosophy Hall]
- Toven, J Richard, Asst Prof Spanish, Washington Sq Coll , N. Y. U , New York, N Y [71 Vernon Pl , Mt Vernon]
- Towles, Oliver, Prof and Chairman French Dept , Washington Square Coll , N Y. Univ , New York, N Y
- Towne, Laura, 134-14 Franklin Ave , Flushing, N Y.
- Townsend, Francis Edward, Head Spanish Dept , Instr Education, Gonzaga Univ , Spokane, Wash [301 E Boone Ave]
- Townsend, Katharine B, Teacher Mod Langs , Orchard Park H S , Orchard Park, N Y
- Tracy, Clarence R , Lect Eng , Univ of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta, Can [11053 84th Ave]
- Travers, Seymour, Instr Rom Langs , The City College, 139 St. and Convent Ave , New York, N Y.
- Travis, James Richard, 3831 E 21st Pl , Tulsa, Okla.
- Treanor, Honoria Sapelo, Prof. French and Spanish, Ga State Woman's Coll , Valdosta, Ga
- Treille, Marguerite, Head Mod Lang Dept , Hood Coll., Frederick, Md
- Tremper, John Schrader, Asst Prof German, Lehigh Univ , Bethlehem, Pa
- Treviño, Salomon Narciso, Asst Prof Rom Langs , Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- Trilling, Lionel, Eng Dept , Columbia Univ , New York, N Y [Hamilton Hall]
- Trinsey, Anna Michels, (Mrs B B), Instr Eng , Hunter Coll , New York, N Y [414 E 52 St]
- Trowbridge, Hoyt, Assoc Prof Eng , Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore [205 Villard Hall]
- Trunz, Cecelia A , Asst German, St Joseph's Coll for Women, Bklyn, N Y [245 Clinton Ave]
- Tucker, (Rev) Dunstan, O S B., Head Eng Dept , St John's Univ , Collegeville, Minn
- ☛ Tucker, Joseph Eagon, Instr French, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.
- Tuckerman, (Mrs) Una Venable, c/o L. B. Tuckerman, Cosmos Club, Wash , D C
- Tuell, Annie Kimball, Prof Emer. Eng Lit., Wellesley Coll , Wellesley, Mass [23 Up-land Rd]
- Tull, Clyde, Prof. English Lit , Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, Iowa

- ❖ Tupper, Frederick, Prof Eng Lang and Lit, Univ of Vermont, Burlington, Vt
- Tupper, Fred Salisbury, Asst Prof Eng, Geo Washington Univ, Washington, D C [2320 N Vernon St, Arlington, Va]
- ❖ Tupper, James Waddell, Prof Eng Lit, Lafayette Coll, Easton, Pa
- Turgeon, Arthur C, Instr French, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich
- Turgeon, Frederick King, Assoc Prof. French, Amherst Coll, Amherst, Mass [1 Blake Field]
- Turk, Laurel Herbert, Prof Rom Langs, De Pauw Univ, Greencastle, Ind.
- ❖ Turk, Milton Haight, Prof Emer Eng. Lang and Lit, Hobart Coll, Geneva, N Y. [3122 Riverside Ave, Jacksonville, Fla]
- ❖ Turner, Albert Morton, Prof Eng and Comp Lit, Univ of Maine, Orono, Me. [154 College Ave]
- Turner, Alice Lucile, Dir Eng Dept, East Carolina Teachers Coll., Greenville, N C.
- Turner, C E, Asst Prof. Rom Langs, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N J
- 📖 Turner, Farron Evert, [Address Unknown]
- Turner, Henry Arlin, Asst Prof Eng, Louisiana State Univ, Univ, La [2137 Ferndale Ave, Baton Rouge]
- Turner, Percie Hopkins, (Mrs A. M.), Lecturer Eng, Univ of Maine, Orono, Me [154 College Ave]
- Turner, William Arthur, Grad Asst Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio [Derby Hall]
- Turrell, Charles Alfred, 2661 N W Lovejoy St, Portland, Ore
- Tuttle, Donald R, Assoc Prof Eng, Fenn Coll, Cleveland, Ohio
- Tutwiler, Carrington Cabell, Jr, Asst Prof Eng, Virginia Military Inst, Lexington Va [106 Myers St]
- Tuve, Rosemond, Assoc Prof Eng, Connecticut Coll, New London, Conn
- Tuveson, Ernest, Asst. Examiner, U S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C. [3121 38 St, N W]
- Twadell, William Freeman, Prof German, Univ. of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [81 Bascom Hall]
- ❖ Tweedie, W Morley, Prof. Eng Lang. and Lit, Mount Allison Coll., Sackville, N. B.
- Tynan, Joseph L, Assoc. Prof. Eng; The City Coll, New York, N. Y.
- Uhler, John Earle, Prof Eng, Louisiana State Univ, Univ, La [4527 Highland Rd, Baton Rouge]
- Ulmer, Bernhard, Asst Prof German, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [54 Maple St]
- Umbach, Herbert H, Asst Prof Eng, Valparaiso Univ, Valparaiso, Ind
- Umberger, Luella Myrle, Instr Lang Dept, Hershey Jr Coll, Lebanon, Pa [561 E Main St, Annville]
- Umphrey, George Wallace, Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash
- ❖ Underwood, Charles Marshall, Cambridge, Mass [152 Upland Rd]
- Underwood, Mrs Edna Worthley, Author and Translator, Correspondante de l'Institut, New York, N Y. [Box 54, Hamilton Grange Sta]
- Upham, Alfred Horatio, President, Miami Univ, Oxford, Ohio
- Utley, Francis Lee, Asst Prof Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio [165 E Beechwood Blvd]
- Vaccariello, Michele Angelo, Asst Prof. Rom Langs, Williams Coll, Williamstown, Mass
- Vail, Curtis C D, Prof Germanic Langs and Lits, Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash. [4552 52nd Ave, N E]
- 📖 Vaka, Paul Franklin Campbell, Hq & Hq Btry, 104 Div Arty, Camp Adair, Ore
- Valente, John, Asst. Prof Eng, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn., N. Y [552 W 114 St., N. Y. C]
- Valentin, Veit, Special Lect German History, Univ. Coll, Univ of London, London, Eng
- Vallerie, Josephine, Chairman Rom. Lang. Dept, Coll of New Rochelle, New Rochelle, N. Y [8 Union Ave., Norwalk, Conn]
- Vandiver, Edward Pinckney, Jr, Head Eng. Dept, Mary Baldwin Coll, Staunton, Va
- Van Doren, Mark, Asst. Prof. Eng., Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- ❖ Van Horne, John, Prof. Rom. Langs., Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [713 Pennsylvania Ave]
- Van Hulse, Camil, 1029 N Euclid, Tucson, Ariz.
- Van Keuren, Ernest C, Prof. Eng, Evansville Coll., Evansville, Ind.

- Van Lennep, William, Curator, Theatre Collection, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass
- Van Santvoord, George, Headmaster, Hotchkiss Sch, Lakeville, Conn
- Varney, Jeanne, Asst Prof French, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y. [501 Philosophy Hall]
- Varney, John, Instr Eng, Washington Sq Coll, N Y U, New York, N Y
- de Varon, Felicitas, Translator, Christian Science Pub Soc [38 Prospect St, Belmont, Mass]
- Vaughan, Herbert Hunter, Prof Italian, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [Box 24, Wheeler Hall]
- Vaughan, Joseph Lee, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va [304 Preston Ct Apts, Univ Sta]
- Veatch, Prudence Melvina, Eng. Teacher, Kensington H S, Buffalo, N. Y [1579 Huntington Ave]
- Velten, Harry de Veltheim, Assoc Prof German, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind.
- Veysey, Constance Southard, Instr Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N. Y. [25 Monroe Pl, Bklyn]
- Vezzetti, Anacleto Candida, Assoc Prof Italian, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [Haven House]
- Vial, Fernand, Assoc. Prof French, Fordham Univ Grad School, New York, N Y.
- Vickers, Miss D, Head Dept Langs, Southeastern La Coll, Hammond, La. [Apt A, 410 N Pine St]
- Viens, Claude Paul, Instr French, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [212 Lincoln Hall]
- Viereck, Margaret H, Editor and Author, 305 Riverside Dr, New York, N Y
- Victor, Karl, Prof German, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [7 Shady Hill Sq]
- Vignerass, Louis-André, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Maine, Orono, Me [9 N Stevens Hall]
- Vignerass, Pierre Robert, Prof French Lit, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill
- ❖ Viles, George Burridge, York Beach, Me. [P O Box 288]
- Viljoen, Helen Gill, Asst. Prof Eng, Queens Coll, Flushing, N. Y.
- Vincent, Howard P, Asst Prof Eng. Ill. Inst. of Tech, Chicago, Ill [4726 Greenwood Ave.]
- Virtanen, Reino, 716 S. Ivy St, Arlington, Va.
- Virtue, John Bernard, Asst Prof Eng, Univ. of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans
- Vittorini, Domenico, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa
- ✉ Vogel, Bertram, Translator, War Dept [1590 W 8 St, Bklyn, N Y]
- Voigt, Gilbert Paul, Prof American Lit, Wittenberg Coll, Springfield, Ohio
- Vollmer, Clement, Chairman Dept German, Duke Univ, Durham, N C [2114 Myrtle Dr]
- Von der Mühll, Emanuel, Asst Prof French, Wilson Coll, Chambersburg, Pa
- Vordtriede, Werner, Instr. Span, Rutgers Univ, New Brunswick, N J [Box 94]
- ❖ Vos, Bert John, Prof Emer German, Indiana Univ, Res Assoc German, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif. [911 N Sixth Ave, Tucson, Ariz]
- Vowles, Guy Richard, Prof German, Davidson Coll, Davidson, N. C. [Box 497]
- Vrooman, Alan Haswell, Instr Eng, Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, N H [Webster Hall]
- Wabnitz, William Seymour, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio [306 Swift Hall]
- Wack, George J, Prof German, Univ of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Ind.
- Wade, Gerald E, Univ. of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn
- Wade, Ira Owen, Prof French, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [31 Armour Rd]
- Wade, John Donald, Prof Eng; Dir Div. Lang and Lit, Univ. of Georgia, Athens, Ga.
- ❖ Wadepuhl, Walter, 6122 82 St, Elmhurst, L I, N. Y.
- ❖ Wadsworth, James Raymond, Asst. Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb. [3434 Orchard St]
- Wagenblass, John H, Lt (jg), USNR, Instr Dept Eng, Hist, and Gov't, U S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md. [179 Prince George St]
- Wager, Willis Joseph, 1218 Knickerbocker Ave, Mamaroneck, N. Y.
- Waggoner, Hyatt Howe, Instr Eng, Univ of Kansas City, Kansas City, Mo.
- Wagman, Frederick Herbert, 2141 Eye St, NW, Washington, D C.
- Wagner, Bernard Mathias, Prof Eng., Georgetown Univ, Washington, D. C.
- Wagner, Charles Philip, Prof. Rom. Langs,

- Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. [900 Lincoln Ave]
- Wagner, Lydia E, Instr Mod Langs, U of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [1980 Ryons St]
- Wahl, Charles, 19 Geneva Ave., Toronto, Ont., Canada
- Wahlgren, Erik, Asst Prof German and Scand., Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif [340 Royce Hall, U C L A]
- Wahr, Fred Burkhardt, Prof German, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [2024 Vine-wood Blvd]
- Waith, Eugene Mersereau, Instr Eng., Yale U., New Haven, Conn [110 Livingston St]
- Walcutt, Charles Child, Assoc Prof Eng., Univ of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla [Fac-ulty Exch]
- Waldron, John, Asst Prof Eng., School of Foreign Service, Georgetown Univ., Wash-ington, D C [1707 Rhode Island Ave]
- Wales, Julia Grace, Asst Prof Eng., Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.
- Walk, Francis Sidney, Instr Mod Langs., Lafayette Coll., Easton, Pa [215 McCart-ney St]
- Walker, Andrew Jackson, Assoc Prof Eng., Georgia School of Tech., Atlanta, Ga
- Walker, Franklin D., Prof Eng., Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore [204 Villard Hall]
- Walker, Isabel L., Instr Eng., Hunter Coll., New York, N Y [404 Riverside Dr]
- Wall, Vincent C., Instr Eng., Wayne Univ., Detroit, Mich
- Wall, Walter L., Instr German, Ohio State Univ., Columbus, Ohio [2026 Beverly Rd]
- Wallace, A Dayle, Assoc Prof Eng., Univ. of Omaha, Omaha, Neb
- Wallace, Donovan Cecil, Principal, Avon-more H S., Avonmore, Pa [323 Cambria Ave]
- Wallace, Paul A W., Prof Eng., Lebanon Valley Coll., Annville, Pa
- Wallace, Robert M., Instr Bus Eng., U of Alabama, University, Ala [Box 1481]
- Wallerstein, Ruth C., Asst Prof Eng., Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis
- Walley, Harold R., Prof Eng., Ohio State Univ., Columbus, Ohio
- Wallis, Lawrence Bergmann, Asst Prof Eng Lang and Lit., Mt Holyoke Coll., South Hadley, Mass [16 Park St]
- Walls, Francis Sidney, Asst Prof Mod Langs., The Citadel, Charleston, S C
- Walpole, Ronald N., Instr French, Univ of California, Berkeley, Calif [463 Wheeler Hall]
- Walsh, James P., Asst Prof Eng., Seton Hall Coll., South Orange, N J [28 Kilmer Dr., Short Hills, N J]
- Walten, Maximilian Graff, Asst Prof Eng., The City Coll., 139 St and Convent Ave., New York, N Y [Box 44]
- Walters, Raymond, President, Univ of Cin-cinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio
- Walton, Eda Lou, Assoc Prof Eng., Wash-ington Sq Coll., N Y U., New York, N Y [107 Waverly Pl]
- Walton, Loring Baker, Assoc Prof French, Duke Univ., Durham, N C [2235 Cran-ford Rd]
- ❖ Walz, John Albrecht, Prof Emer Geiman Lang and Lit., Harvard Univ., Cambridge, Mass [42 Garden St]
- Wangsness, Gina O., Instr German, Univ of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn [Folwell Hall 115]
- Wann, Louis, Prof Eng Lang and Lit., Univ of Southern Calif., Los Angeles, Calif [10570 Abbottson Rd]
- Ward, Charles Eugene, Assoc Prof Eng., Duke Univ., Durham, N C (Guess Rd., R D 2]
- Ward, Henry Gordon, Deputy Librarian, Univ of Liverpool, Liverpool, Eng [5 Rut-land Ave., Liverpool, 17] .
- Ward, Laura Adeline, Assoc Prof Eng., Hood Coll., Frederick, Md
- Ward, Robert Calvin, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Colgate Univ., Hamilton, N Y [8 Hamilton St]
- Ward, Mr Ruth Shifflette, Head Eng Dept., Amarillo Coll., Amarillo, Tex [2000 Hughes St]
- Wardle, Ralph Martin, Instr Eng., Cornell Univ., Ithaca, N Y [321 Ithaca, Rd]
- Ware, Lois Philip, Instr Eng., Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [2512 San Gabriel St]
- Warfel, Harry R., Prof Eng., Univ of Mary-land, College Park, Md [5601 42 Ave., Hyattsville]
- Warner, Gilmore, Assoc. Prof Eng Lang and Lit., Yankton Coll., Yankton, S D. [404 E 9 St]
- Warner, James H., Asst Prof Eng., Univ of Mich., Ann Arbor, Mich [Rm 3221, Angell Hall]
- Warner, Ralph E., Assoc Prof Rom Langs and Lits., Univ of Colorado, Boulder, Colo [312 Main Hall]
- Warren, Alba Houghton, Jr., 520 W. Mallory St., Pensacola, Fla

- Warren, Austin, Prof Eng, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa
- Warren, Virgil Alexander, Prof and Head Dept Mod Langs, Carson-Newman Coll, Jefferson City, Tenn [Box 72]
- ❖ Warshaw, Jacob, Prof and Chairman Dept Spanish, Univ of Missouri, Columbia, Mo [412 Stewart Rd]
- Warthen, George Saylor, Assoc Prof Eng, Gettysburg Coll, Gettysburg, Pa [35 W Broadway]
- Washburn, George Ellery, Prof Rom Langs, Boston Univ, Coll Lib Arts, Boston, Mass [21 Parker St, Lexington]
- Washburn, Harold Edward, Prof French, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H [28 E Wheelock St]
- Wasilfsky, Adolph M, Head German Dept, St Joseph's College, Emmitsburg, Md
- Wasserman, Earl Reeves, Assoc Eng, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill [129 Lincoln Hall]
- Watkins, Walter Barker Critz, Huntington Lib, San Marino, Calif [Athenaeum, 551 S Hill Ave, Pasadena]
- Watson, Ernest Bradlee, Prof Eng, Dartmouth Coll, Hanover, N H [13 S Park St]
- Watson, Eugene Payne, Librarian (Assoc. Prof Lib Science), La State Normal Coll, Natchitoches, La
- Watson, Harold Francis, Prof Eng, Chairman Div. Lang and Lit, Simpson Coll, Indianola, Iowa [1005 N C St]
- Watson, Sara Ruth, Instr Eng, Fenn Coll, E 24 St and Euclid Ave, Cleveland, Ohio
- ❖ Watt, Homer Andrew, Prof Eng, N Y Univ, Wash Sq Coll, New York, N Y. [19 Douglas Rd, Glen Ridge, N J]
- Watt, William W, Asst Prof Eng, Lafayette Coll, Easton, Pa [525 Hamilton St]
- Watters, Reginald Eyre, Instr Eng, Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash [Parrington Hall]
- Watts, George Byron, Prof French Lang and Lit, Davidson Coll, Davidson, N C
- Watts, Helena Brawley, Dean of College, Webber Coll, Babson Park, Fla
- Waxman, Samuel Montefiore, Prof Rom Langs and Lits, Boston Univ, Boston, Mass.
- Weary, Erica Hutchins, Instr Eng, Long Beach Jr Coll, Long Beach, Calif [Huntington Hotel, 1300 Ocean Blvd]
- Weatherly, Edward H, Asst. Prof Eng, Univ. of Missouri, Columbia, Mo
- Weaver, Bennett, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Webb, Albert M, Prof Rom Langs, Duke Univ, Durham, N C. [1017 W. Trinity Ave]
- Webb, Henry J, Instr Eng, Illinois Inst of Tech, Chicago, Ill
- Weber, Carl J, Roberts Prof Eng Lit, Colby Coll, Waterville, Me
- ☞ Weber, Kurt, Lt, 464 E 19 St, Bklyn, N Y (APO #4001, c/o Postmaster, N. Y. C.)
- Webster, Harvey C, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Louisville, Louisville, Ky [2300 Newberg Rd]
- Wecter, Dixon, Prof Eng, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Calif
- ❖ Weeks, Raymond, Prof (Retired) Rom Philology, Columbia Univ, New York, N. Y [Manakin, Va]
- Wehlre, Bro William O, S M, Head Eng Dept, Univ of Dayton, Dayton, Ohio
- Weiersheuser, William J, Asst Instr Germanics, Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [Wayne, Neb]
- Weigand, Hermann Johann, Prof German, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [Graduate School]
- Weimar, George Martin, Assoc Prof Eng and History, Stevens Inst of Technology, Hoboken, N J
- ☞ Weinberg, Bernard, Asst Prof French, Washington Univ, St Louis, Mo
- ☞ Weinberger, Adolph David, Instr German, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio [1466 Michigan Ave]
- Weiner, Seymour, 7 W 45 St, New York, N Y
- Weingarten, Samuel, Head Dept Humanities, Wright City Jr Coll, 3400 N Austin Ave, Chicago, Ill
- Weinreich, Marcel, Asst Prof For Lang and Lit, Univ of Puerto Rico, Rio Piedras, P R
- Weir, Eva, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Idaho, Southern Branch, Pocatello, Idaho
- Weisert, John Jacob, Instr German, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [912 John Jay Hall]
- Weisinger, Herbert, Instr Eng, Michigan State Coll, E Lansing, Mich [Morrill Hall]
- Weld, Arthur Francis, Jr, Instr Mod Langs, Brown Univ, Providence, R I [115 Hope St]
- Welker, John James, Asst. Prof Eng, West-

- ern Ill State Teachers Coll, Macomb, Ill [4135 Washington Blvd, St Louis, Mo]
- Wellek, René, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa
- Welles, Paul, Major French, Virginia Military Inst, Lexington, Va
- Welling, Corinne, Assoc Prof Eng, Butler Univ., Indianapolis, Ind [5202 Washington Blvd]
- Wells, Henry Willis, Assoc Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y
- ❖ Wells, John Edwin, Prof Emeritus Eng, Connecticut Coll for Women, New London, Conn [77 Vauxhall St]
- Wells, Minnie E, Instr Eng, Hood Coll, Frederick, Md
- Wells, Mitchell Preston, Assoc Prof Eng, North Tex State Teachers Coll, Denton, Tex.
- Wells, Staring Bailey, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N Y [303 San Gabriel Dr]
- Wells, William, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N C [3 Stacy Apt]
- Wence, Milford Edward, Instr Eng, Univ of Maine, Orono, Me
- Wendell, John P., Grad Stud Eng, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [The Hill School, Pottstown]
- Wendell, Richard G., Assoc Prof Eng, Iowa State Coll, Ames, Iowa [425 Welch Ave]
- Wenger, Christian N., Assoc. Prof Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1319 Olivia Ave]
- 🏠 Wenger, Jared, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [Boxwood Farm, R F D no 2]
- ❖ Wentworth, Harold, Asst Prof Eng, West Virginia Univ, Morgantown, W. Va [215 McLane Ave]
- ❖ Wernaer, Robert M., Cambridge, Mass [20 Prescott St.]
- Werner, Herman Oscar, Asst Prof Eng, Washington Coll, Chestertown, Md
- Werner, William L., Prof. Eng Lit, Pennsylvania State Coll, State College, Pa [217 E Beaver Ave]
- Wesenberg, Alice Bidwell (Mrs T G), Assoc Prof Eng, Butler Univ., Indianapolis, Ind [429 Buckingham Dr]
- Wesenberg, T Griffith, Prof Rom Langs., Butler Univ, Indianapolis, Ind [429 Buckingham Dr]
- West, Dorothy I., Prof. and Head Eng Dept, McKendree Coll, Lebanon, Ill. [806 S Second St, Champaign]
- Westfall, Alfred, Prof. Eng, Colorado Agricultural Coll, Fort Collins, Colo
- ❖ Weygandt, Cornelius, Prof Eng Lit, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa
- ❖ Wharey, James Blanton, Prof Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex
- Wheeler, Charles Francis, Assoc Prof, Acting Chairman Eng Dept, Xavier Univ, Cincinnati, Ohio [1836 Chase Ave]
- Wheeler, Harold Peyton, Assoc Prof Eng, Chicago Teachers Coll, Chicago, Ill [6854 Normal Blvd]
- Whicher, George Frisbie, Prof Eng, Amherst Coll., Amherst, Mass
- Whicher, Stephen E., Instr Eng, Univ. of Rochester, Rochester, N Y. [590 Averill Ave]
- Whidden, R. W., Asst Prof. Eng, Denison Univ, Granville, Ohio
- Whipple, John R., 84 Riverside Dr, New York, N Y
- Whitaker, Vergil K., Asst Prof Eng, Stanford Univ, Calif [to Aug '43 U S Indian School, Albuquerque, N M]
- White, Arthur Franklin, Assoc Prof Eng, Adelbert Coll of Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, Ohio
- White, Emile Margaret, Head Dept For. Langs, Pub Schs of Dist of Columbia, Wash, D C
- White, Florence Donnell, Prof French, Vassar Coll, Poughkeepsie, N Y
- White, Frederick Glover, Instr. Eng, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [7 Mercer Circle]
- 🏠 White, George L., Jr, Special Asst, Recruitment and Manning Organization of War Shipping Adminis, Dept of Commerce Bldg, Washington, D C
- White, Helen Constance, Prof Eng, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis
- ❖ White, Henry Adelbert, Prof Eng, Univ. of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb. [1718 S Twenty-sixth St]
- White, Irving H., Prof Eng, Boston Univ, Boston, Mass [27 Garrison St]
- White, Newman Ivey, Prof. Eng., Duke Univ, Durham, N C [803 Second St]
- White, Olive Bernardine, Prof Eng, Dean of Women, Bradley Poly Inst., Peoria, Ill
- White, Owen S., Assoc. Prof. and Head Eng Dept., Coll. of A and M Arts, Univ of Puerto Rico, Mayaguez, P. R. [Box 541]

- White, Wilham, U S Army Signal Corps, 847 7 St, Hermosa Beach, Calif
 Whitehall, Harold, Assoc Prof Eng and Linguistics, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind. [721 S Fess Ave]
 Whitesell, J Edwin, Asst Prof Eng, Mary Washington Coll, Fredericksburg, Va. [1110 Avenue C]
 ❖ Whiteside, Donald Grant, Prof Eng., Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave. and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y
 Whitfield, Francis James, Jr Prize Fellow, Soc of Fellows, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [Lowell House G-21]
 Whitford, Robert Calvin, Prof Eng, Long Island Univ, 300 Pearl St., Bklyn, N Y.
 Whiting, Bartlett Jere, Assoc Prof Eng, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass. [20 Prescott St]
 Whiting, Ella Keats, Prof Eng Lit, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass.
 Whiting, George Wesley, Instr Eng, Rice Inst, Houston, Tex.
 Whitmore, Katherine Reding (Mrs B G), Assoc Prof Spanish, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass (47 Belmont Ave)
 Whitney, Edward Allen, R F D 5, Augusta, Me
 ❖ Whitney, Lois, Assoc Prof Eng, Russell Sage Coll, Troy, N Y
 ❖ Whitney, Marian P, Prof Emeritus German, Vassar Coll [186 Edwards St, New Haven, Conn]
 Whitridge, Arnold, Prof History, Arts, and Letters, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [Calhoun Coll]
 ❖ Whitem, Arthur Fisher, Assoc Prof Rom Langs, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [11 Clement Circle]
 Whitten, Jennie A, Dept Foreign Langs., Illinois State Normal Univ, Normal, Ill
 Whitten, Olive McConnell (Mrs), Asst. Prof Eng, Texas State Coll for Women, Denton, Tex [Box 3902, T S C W]
 ❖ Whyte, John, Prof German, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y [657 E 26 St]
 Wichelns, Herbert August, Prof Public Speaking, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N. Y. [Goldwin Smith Hall]
 Wickham, Joseph F, Prof. Eng, Brooklyn Coll, Bklyn, N Y [The Grosvenor, 35 Fifth Ave, N Y C]
 Wicks, C Beaumont, Asst Prof Rom. Langs, Univ of Alabama, University, Ala [Box 1443]
 Widger, Howard De Forest, Prof Eng, Eastern Ill State Teachers Coll, Charleston, Ill [1109 Sixth St]
 ❖ Wiehr, Josef, Prof Emeritus German Lang and Lit, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass. [Johnson Rd, Andover]
 Wilcox, Alfred M, Asst Rom. Langs, Ursinus Coll, Collegeville, Pa
 Wilcox, Helen Barkeley, Instr Rom Langs, Univ of Maryland, College Park, Md [Prince Georges Garden, 120 Columbia Ave, Hyattsville]
 Wilcox, John, Assoc Prof Eng, Wayne Univ., Detroit, Mich
 Wilde, (Mrs) Jean T, Instr German, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [600 W. 161 St, Apt 9C]
 Wilder, Lester O., Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Rochester, Rochester, N. Y.
 Wildman, John Hazard, Instr Eng, Coll of Arts and Science, La. State Univ, University, La
 Wiles, A George David, Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, The Citadel, Charleston, S. C
 Wiley, Autrey Nell, Prof Eng, Texas State Coll for Women, Denton, Tex [110 W College Ave]
 Wiley, Margaret Lee, Prof Eng, E Tex. State Teachers Coll, Commerce, Tex. [2309 Mayo St.]
 Wiley, William Leon, Prof French, Univ of N. C, Chapel Hill, N C [412 Cameron Ave]
 ❖ Wilkins, Ernest Hatch, President, Oberlin Coll, Oberlin, Ohio
 Wilkinson, Clyde Winfield, 2108 Hartford Rd, Austin, Tex
 ❖ Will, Joseph Stanley, Prof. French, Univ. of Toronto, Toronto, Ont, Canada
 Will, Samuel Frederic, Prof French, Univ. of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.
 Willard, Oliver M, Instr Eng, Stanford Univ, Calif
 Willard, Rudolph, Prof Eng, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex [110 W 33 St]
 Willbern, Glen D, Asst. Prof Spanish, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind.
 Willey, Norman L, Assoc Prof German, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [801 Rose Ave]
 Williams, Arnold L, Instr. Eng, Mich. State Coll, E. Lansing, Mich [161 Gunson St]
 Williams, Blanche Colton, 605 W 113 St., New York, N. Y.

- Williams, Cecil B, Prof Eng, DePaul Univ, Chicago, Ill [1645 W 105th St]
- Williams, Charles Allyn, Prof German, Univ of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. [801 W Nevada St]
- Williams, Edna Rees, Asst Prof Eng Lang and Lit, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [Dickinson House]
- Williams, Edwin Bucher, Dean of Grad Sch, Prof Rom Langs, U of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [Bennett Hall]
- Williams, Edwin Eventt, Asst to Librarian, Harvard Coll, Cambridge, Mass [799 Concord Ave]
- Williams, Franklin B, Jr, Asst Prof Eng, Georgetown Univ, Washington, D C [On leave 9 Mechanic St, Port Jervis, N Y]
- Williams, Harry Franklin, Prof and Head Dept Mod Langs, Lincoln Memorial Univ, Harrogate, Tenn
- Williams, Mentor Lee, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich [1504 Marlboro Dr]
- Williams, Mother Margaret, R S C J, Assoc Prof Eng, Manhattanville Coll of the Sacred Heart, 133 St, and Convent Ave, New York, N Y
- Williams, Otho Clinton, Eng Dept, Reed Coll, Portland, Ore
- Williams, Ralph Coplestone, Prof French, Amherst Coll, Amherst, Mass
- Williams, Ralph Mehlin, Instr Eng Comp, Wellesley Coll, Wellesley, Mass [12 Avon Rd]
- Williams, Robert Haden, Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex
- ❖ Williams, Ronald Boal, Prof Rom Langs, Lake Forest Coll, Lake Forest, Ill [College Campus]
- Williams, Roswell Clinton, S J, Instr Eng, Rockhurst Coll, Kansas City, Mo [5225 Troost Ave]
- Williams, Stanley Thomas, Prof Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn [595 Whitney Ave]
- Williams, Weldon M, Asst Prof Eng, Kent State Univ, Kent, Ohio
- Williamson, Alexander Jardine, Assoc. Prof Rom. Langs, Haverford Coll, Haverford, Pa
- ❖ Williamson, Edward John, Prof Mod Langs and Lits, Hobart Coll, Geneva, N Y
- Williamson, George, Prof Eng, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago, Ill. [Faculty Exchange]
- Willibrand, W A, Assoc Prof Mod Langs, Univ of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla
- Willis, Raymond Smith, Jr, Asst Prof Spanish, Princeton Univ, Princeton, N J [10 Campbellton Circle]
- Willner, Ernest, Instr For Langs, Coll of Mt St Joseph-on-the-Ohio, Mt St Joseph, Ohio
- Wills, Mrs Mary Matheson, Prof Lang and Lit, Northern State Teachers Coll, Aberdeen, S D
- Willson, Lawrence Sidney, Instr Eng, Univ of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn [1618 Rose Ave]
- Wilmarth, Wilson Elery, Asst Prof Mod Langs, Bradley Poly Inst, Peoria, Ill
- Wilsey, Mildred, Asst Prof Eng, Wilson Coll, Chambersburg, Pa
- Wilson, Carroll A, c/o Guggenheim Bros, 120 Bway, Rm 3515, New York, N Y
- Wilson, Clotilde Marconmer, Asst Prof Rom Langs, Univ of Washington, Seattle, Wash
- Wilson, Elkin Calhoun, Asst Prof Eng, Cornell Univ, Ithaca, N Y [Westview Terr]
- Wilson, Frederick E, Asst Prof German, Duke Univ, Durham, N C [1020 Demerius St]
- Wilson, Harold Sowerby, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb [Andrews Hall 220]
- Wilson, Henry Lovejoy, Instr Eng, Univ of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho
- Wilson, James Southall, Dean Dept Grad Studies, Edgar Allen Poe Prof Eng, Univ of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va [Pavilion V, West Lawn]
- Wilson, John Harold, Assoc Prof Eng, Ohio State Univ, Columbus, Ohio
- Wilson, Lola E, Teacher Eng, Central H S, Duluth, Minn [1121 E 2nd St]
- Wilson, Miriam Elaine, Prof French, Park Coll, Parkville, Mo
- Wilson, Rachel, Prof French, Hollins Coll, Hollins Coll, Va
- Wilson, Robert Henry, Assoc Prof Eng, Southwest Texas State Teach Coll, San Marcos, Tex [109 Pickard St]
- Wilson, Willard, Chairman Eng Dept, Univ of Hawaii, Honolulu, T H
- Wilt, Napier, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [Faculty Exchange]
- Wimsatt, William Kurtz, Jr, Eng. Instr., Yale Univ., New Haven, Conn. [1786 Yale Sta]

- Wine, Celesta, Asst Prof Eng, Winthrop Coll, Rock Hill, S C [Box 153, R R #4]
- Winslow, Ola Elizabeth, Prof Eng, Goucher Coll, Baltimore, Md
- Winston, Alice, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans [1620 Massachusetts St]
- Winter, Calvert J, Assoc Prof Spanish, Univ of Kansas, Lawrence, Kans [1733 Massachusetts St]
- Winther, Sophus Keith, Prof Eng, U of Washington, Seattle, Wash
- Wirth, Otto, Lect. German, Indiana Univ, Ext Div, Calumet Center, E Chicago, Ind [5465 Everett Ave, Chicago, Ill]
- Wise, Claude Merton, Head Speech Dept, Louisiana State Univ, University, La
- Wisewell, George Ellas, Pottstown, Pa
- Witherspoon, Alexander Maclaren, Assoc Prof Eng, Yale Univ, New Haven, Conn. [604 Yale Sta]
- ❖ Withington, Robert, Prof Eng Lang. and Lit, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass
- Witt, Marion Winnifred, Asst Prof Eng, Hunter Coll, New York, N Y [90 Morningside Dr]
- Wittman, Nora E, Instr German, Pennsylvania State Coll, State College, Pa
- Wohlstetter, Mrs Albert, 200 W 108 St, Apt 18B, New York, N Y
- Wolf, Edwin, 2nd, Bibliographer, The Rosenbach Co, 1320 Walnut St, Phila, Pa
- Wolf, John Quincy, Jr, Southwestern, Memphis, Tenn
- Wolfe, Don Marion, Instr Eng, New York Univ., Univ Hgts, New York, N Y
- Wolff, Hans M, Instr. German, Univ of Texas, Austin, Tex
- Wolle, Francis, Prof Eng Lit, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder, Colo.
- ❖ Wood, Francis Asbury, Prof. Ementus Germ Phil, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago, Ill [549 Westbourne St, La Jolla, Calif]
- Wood, Gordon Reid, 2506 Cherokee Ave, Charleston, W Va
- Wood, Kathryn Louise, Instr French, Hollins Coll, Hollins Coll, Va.
- Wood, Paul Spencer, Chairman Div Lang and Lit, Grinnell Coll, Grinnell, Iowa [1509 Broad St]
- Wood, Warren W, Instr Eng, Central YMCA Coll, 19 S. LaSalle St, Chicago, Ill
- Woodbridge, Benjamin Mather, Prof Rom Langs, Reed Coll, Portland, Ore
- Woodbridge, Homer Edwards, Prof Eng Lits, Wesleyan Univ, Middletown, Conn [178 Cross St]
- Woodruff, Bertram Lawrence, 6701 Deary St, Pittsburgh, Pa
- Woodruff, Sara Elizabeth, Head Mod Lang Dept, Limestone Coll, Gaffney, S C
- Woods, Mary A, Prof Eng, State Teachers Coll, Springfield, Mo.
- Woodworth, Harriet Crandall, c/o American Embassy, London, Eng
- Woodworth, Mary Katharine, Asst Prof Eng, Bryn Mawr Coll, Bryn Mawr, Pa
- Woofter, Carey, Registrar, Glenville State Normal Sch, Glenville, W Va
- ❖ Wooley, Elmer O, Asst Prof German, Indiana Univ, Bloomington, Ind [318 S Henderson St]
- Woolf, Henry Bosley, Asst Prof Eng, Louisiana State Univ, Baton Rouge, La. [Box 8562, Univ Sta]
- Work, James Aiken, Assoc Prof. Eng, Wayne Univ, Detroit, Mich
- Workman, J D, Asst Prof German, U of Wis, Madison, Wis [2116 Keyes Ave]
- Worthington, Hugh S, Head Dept Rom Langs, Sweet Briar Coll, Sweet Briar, Va
- Wray, Edith Armstrong, Prof Eng, Ohio Univ, Athens, Ohio [74 Elmwood Pl]
- Wright, Austin, Asst. Prof Eng, Carnegie Inst of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pa
- Wright, Mrs Celeste Turner, Assoc Prof Eng and Chairman Div Langs and Lit, Univ of Calif, Coll of Agr, Davis, Calif
- ❖ Wright, Charles Henry Conrad, Prof Emer French Lang and Lit, Harvard Univ, Cambridge, Mass [9 Lowell St]
- Wright, Edith Armstrong, Asst, Order Dept, Brown Univ Lib, Providence, R I [490-D Angell St]
- Wright, Edwin Miner, Prof and Head Eng Dept, Bates Coll, Lewiston, Me. [11 Benson St]
- Wright, Mrs Elizabeth Cox, Asst Prof Eng, Swarthmore Coll, Swarthmore, Pa. [Moylan, Pa]
- Wright, Ernest Hunter, Prof Eng, Columbia Univ, New York, N Y [Philosophy Hall]
- Wright, H(arold) Bunker, Asst Prof Eng, Miami Univ, Oxford, Ohio
- Wright, Mrs Helen Post, Head Eng Dept, Daniel Baker Coll., Brownwood, Tex. [1421 Ave. C]
- Wright, Jean Gray, Prof French, West-hampton Coll, Richmond, Va

- Wright, Leavitt O, Prof Rom Langs., Univ of Oregon, Eugene, Ore
- Wright, Louis Booker, Research Prof Eng Lit, Henry E Huntington Library, San Marino, Calif
- Wright, Luella M, Asst Prof Eng, Univ of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa [B 3 Univ Hall]
- Wright, Margaret May, Asst. Prof For Langs, Cedar Crest Coll, Allentown, Pa.
- Wright, Walter Francis, Asst Prof Eng, State Coll of Washington, Pullman, Wash [1809 E St]
- Wunderlich, Eva Cornelia, Lit Div, Bennington Coll, Bennington, Vt [North Bennington]
- Wurtzbaugh, Jewel, Prof Eng, Univ. of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla. [Fac Exch]
- Wycherley, H Alan, Instr. Eng, Univ. of Baltimore, Baltimore, Md [221 W Lanvale St]
- Wyllie, John Cook, Dir. of Rare Books and MSS, Alderman Lib, Univ. of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va [Box 1235, Univ Sta]
- Wyman, Mary A, Assoc Prof and Chairman Eng. Dept, Hunter Coll, New York, N. Y [2475 Palisade Ave, Bronx]
- Yamagiwa, Joseph Koshimi, Instr Japanese, Univ of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich
- Yarnall, Howard E, Instr German, Pennsylvania State Coll, State Coll, Pa [121 S. Buckhout St]
- Yocom, Henry Wesley, Grad Stud Eng Lit, Univ of Pennsylvania, Phila, Pa [405 W. School House Lane, Germantown, Phila]
- Yoder, Samuel A, Asst Prof Eng, Wheaton Coll, Wheaton, Ill
- Yost, Calvin Daniel, Jr, Asst Prof Eng, Ursinus Coll, Collegeville, Pa. [33 Sixth Ave]
- Yost, George, Jr, Eng Dept., Univ of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa
- ❖ Young, Bert Edward, Prof Rom Langs, Indiana Univ., Bloomington, Ind [521 Kirkwood Ave]
- Young, Florence Ellen, Instr French, La State Normal Coll, Natchitoches, La.
- ❖ Young, Karl, Prof. Eng, Yale Univ., New Haven, Conn. [195 Everit St]
- ❖ Young, Mary Vance, Prof Emeritus Rom Langs, Mount Holyoke Coll, South Hadley, Mass. [42 Woodvale Ave, Gracelyn, Ashville, N C]
- ❖ Young, Ruth Elizabeth, Assoc Prof. Italian, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [55 Crescent St.]
- Zabel, Morton Dauwen, Prof and Chairman Eng Dept, Loyola Univ, Chicago, Ill [1100 Pratt Blvd]
- Zapata y Torres, Miguel, Assoc Prof Spanish, Smith Coll, Northampton, Mass [10 Langworthy Rd]
- Zawacki, Edmund, Lect. Polish, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis [56 Bascom]
- Zbieranska, Krystyna, Queen's Univ, Kingston, Ont, Canada
- ❖ Zdanowicz, Casimir Douglas, Prof French, Univ of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis
- Zeek, Charles Franklyn, Prof French and Head Dept Rom Langs, Vanderbilt Univ, Nashville, Tenn
- Zeeveld, W Gordon, Assoc Prof Eng, Univ of Maryland, College Park, Md [7009 Fordham Ct]
- ❖ Zeitler, Wilham Irving, 80 N Pearl St, Albany, N Y
- Zeitlin, Marion Albert, Assoc. Prof Spanish, Univ of Calif at Los Angeles, Calif
- Zelle, Joseph, Grad Stud Eng, Western Reserve Univ, Cleveland, O [1171 E 58 St]
- Zerner, Marianne, Instr German, Queens Coll, Flushing, N Y [76-35 113 St, Forest Hills, L I, N Y]
- ❖ Zeydel, Edwin Hermann, Prof and Head German Dept, Univ of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio [3439 Middleton Ave]
- Zieglschmid, A. J Friedrich, Assoc. Prof. German, Northwestern Univ, Evanston, Ill [Fisk Hall 206]
- Zalli, Frederick J, Instr French and Spanish, Hamden H S, Hamden, Conn [4 Walden St]
- 🏠 Zimansky, Curt A, Sgt, U S Army [1275 Grove St, Berkeley, Calif]
- ❖ Zinnecker, Wesley Daniel, Prof German Emeritus, New York, Univ, New York, N Y [4422 Thrd Ave]
- Zollinger, Mrs Anna R, Asst Prof German, Brooklyn Coll, Bklyn, N Y. [1069 E 18 St.]
- Zucker, Adolf Eduard, Prof German and Head Mod. Lang Dept, Univ of Maryland, College Park, Md
- Zucker, Louis Clement, Assoc. Prof Eng, Univ of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah
- Zunder, Theodore Albert, Asst Prof Eng, Brooklyn Coll, Bedford Ave and Ave H, Bklyn, N Y.
- Zylstra, Henry, Instr Eng., Calvin Coll, Grand Rapids, Mich [845 Wealthy St]

ROLL OF DECEASED MEMBERS

Evelyn May Albright, University of Chicago, April 1942
 Michele Barbi, University of Florence, October 1941 (Honorary Member)
 Robert Chapman Bates, Yale University, December 1, 1942
 Lucy Hamilton Carson, Montana State Normal College, July 7, 1941
 Robert W Chambers, University College, London, April 23, 1942
 Louis Cons, Harvard University, April 20, 1942
 Frank Carman Ewart, Colgate University, September 28, 1942
 John Roberts Fisher, College of William and Mary, April 10, 1942
 Mrs Sara Porter Fitzgerald, Fort Worth, Tex , November 10, 1941
 Herbert G Fiench, Cincinnati, Ohio, June 25, 1942
 Eugénie Galloo, University of Kansas, August 23, 1941
 Lucy Marie Gay, University of Wisconsin, March 24, 1942
 Herbert Eveleth Greene, Johns Hopkins University, September 3, 1942
 Sardis Roy Hadsell, University of Oklahoma, August 22, 1942
 Sada Annis Harbarger, Ohio State University, April 23, 1942
 Ray Lorenzo Heffner, University of Washington, February 23, 1942
 Henry Barrett Hinckley, Brattleboro, Vt , July 29, 1940
 William Savage Johnson, University of Kansas, December 15, 1942
 Paul Charles King, Washington University, May 17, 1942
 Armin Hajmin Koller, University of Illinois, May 17, 1942
 William D MacClintock, University of Chicago, April, 1936
 Ernst Heinrich Mensel, Smith College, September 6, 1942
 William Henry Murray, Dartmouth College, Jan 25, 1943
 Frederick Morgan Padelford, University of Washington, December 3, 1942
 N Burton Paradise, Yale University, April 1942
 Josiah Harmar Penniman, University of Pennsylvania, April 1941
 Otto Paul Schinnerer, Columbia University, November 7, 1942
 Alice Dorothea Snyder, Vassar College, February 17, 1943
 William Flint Thrall, University of North Carolina, October 1941
 Kenneth G T Webster, Harvard University, October 31, 1942
 George Heyman Wittkowsky, The City College, October 1, 1942
 Charles Baker Wright, Middlebury College, April 24, 1942

[32]

LIBRARIES SUBSCRIBING TO PMLA

- Aberystwyth, Wales National Lib of Wales
 Abilene, Tex. Hardin-Simmons Univ Lib
 Abo, Finland Abo Academy
 Adelaide, So Australia Barr Smith Lib ,
 Univ of Adelaide
 Akron, Ohio Bierce Lib , Univ of Akron
 Albany, N Y New York State Lib
 Albion, Mich Albion Coll Lib
 Albuquerque, N M Univ of New Mexico
 Lib.
 Algiers (Algeria), N Africa (Rue Michelet)
 Bibliothèque de l'Université
 Allahabad, India Univ of Allahabad Lib.
 Alliance, Ohio: Mount Union Coll Lib
 Alpine, Tex Sul Ross State Tchrs Coll Lib.
 Alton, Ill Monticello Coll Lib
 Alton, Ill. Shurtleff Coll Lib
 Alva, Okla Northwestern State Tchrs Coll.
 Lib
 Ames, Iowa Iowa State Coll Lib
 Amherst, Mass Amherst Coll Lib.
 Amherst, Mass Goodell Lib , Massachusetts
 State Coll
 Anderson, Ind Anderson Coll and Theol Seminary Lib
 Ann Arbor, Mich Gen Lib , Univ. of Mich
 Annville, Pa Lebanon Valley Coll. Lib
 Arkadelphia, Ark Henderson State Teachers
 Coll. Lib
 Arkadelphia, Ark Ouachita Coll Lib
 Athens, Ga Univ of Georgia Lib.
 Athens, Ohio Ohio Univ Lib
 Athens, W Va Concord State Teachers Coll
 Lib.
 Atlanta, Ga Atlanta Univ Lib.
 Auburn, Ala Ala Poly Tech Inst Lib
 Aurora, Ill Aurora Coll Lib
 Aurora, N Y Wells Coll Lib
 Austin, Tex Univ of Texas Lib.

 Baltimore, Md Enoch Pratt Free Lib.
 Baltimore, Md Goucher Coll. Lib
 Baltimore, Md Loyola Coll Lib
 Baltimore, Md Morgan Coll Lib
 Bangor, Great Britain The Lib , Univ Coll. of N. Wales
 Bangor, Me Bangor Public Lib
 Barboursville, Ky Union Coll Lib
 Barnesville, Ga Gordon Mili. Coll Lib
 Basel, Switzerland Universitätsbibliothek
 Beaver Falls, Pa : McCartney Lib , Geneva
 Coll. •
 Bellingham, Wash Western Washington
 Coll. of Educa Lib
 Belmont, N C Belmont Abbey Coll Lib
 Beloit, Wis Beloit Coll Lib
 Belton, Tex Mary Hardin-Baylor Coll Lib
 Bemidji, Minn State Teachers Coll Lib
 Benares, India Benares Hindu Univ Lib
 Bethany, W Va Bethany Coll Lib
 Bethlehem, Pa Lehigh Univ Lib
 Birmingham, Ala Birmingham-Southern
 Coll. Lib
 Birmingham, Eng (Ratcliff Place) The Reference Lib
 Bloomington, Ind Indiana Univ Lib
 Blue Mountain, Miss . Blue Mountain Coll
 Lib.
 Boise, Idaho Boise Jr Coll Lib
 Boone, N C Appalachian State Teachers
 Coll Lib.
 Boston, Mass Boston Univ Lib
 Boston, Mass Northeastern Univ Lib
 Boston, Mass Public Lib of the City of Boston
 Boston, Mass Simmons Coll Lib , 300 The Fenway
 Boulder, Colo Univ of Colorado Lib
 Bowling Green, Ohio Bowling Green State
 Univ Lib
 Bowling Green, Ky Western Kentucky
 State Teachers Coll Lib.
 Brandon, Manitoba, Canada Brandon Coll
 Lib
 Bridgewater, Va Bridgewater Coll Lib
 Bristol, Eng Bristol Univ Lib
 Bronx, N Y . Fordham Univ Lib
 Brookings, S D So Dak State Coll Lib.
 Brooklyn, N Y Bishop McDonnell H S
 Lib (260 Eastern Pkway)
 Brooklyn, N Y Brooklyn Coll Lib , (Bedford Ave. and Ave. H)
 Brooklyn, N Y Brooklyn Pub Lib.
 Brooklyn, N Y . Pratt Inst. Lib.
 Brooklyn, N. Y. St. John's Univ Lib
 Brooklyn, N. Y.: St. Joseph's Coll for Women Lib.
 Brownwood, Tex. Howard Payne Coll Lib.
 Brunswick, Me. Bowdoin Coll Lib
 Brussels, Belgium Alumni Club, Foundation
 Universitaire, (11, rue D'Egmont)
 Bryn Mawr, Pa Bryn Mawr Coll Lib
 Buckhannon, W. Va.. W. Va. Wesleyan Coll.
 Lib.

- Buffalo, N Y Univ. of Buffalo Lib.
 Burlington, Vt Univ. of Vermont Lib
- Calcutta, India Calcutta Univ. Lib. (Senate House)
 Cambridge, Mass Child Memorial Lib , (Harvard University) (Warren House)
 Cambridge, Mass Harvard Coll Lib.
 Cambridge, Mass Radcliffe Coll Lib
 Cambridge, Mass Widener Memorial Lib , (Harvard Univ)
 Cambridge Springs, Pa Alliance Coll Lib
 Canton, Mo Culver-Stockton Coll Lib
 Canton, N Y St Lawrence Univ Lib
 Canyon, Tex West Tex State Teachers Coll. Lib
 Cape Girardeau, Mo Southeast Missouri State Teachers Coll Lib.
 Cape Town, South Africa J W Jagger Lib , Univ of Cape Town, Rondebosch
 Carbondale, Ill Southern Illinois State Normal Univ. Lib.
 Carlisle, Pa . Dickinson Coll Lib
 Cedar Falls, Iowa Iowa St Teach Coll Lib
 Cedar Rapids, Iowa Coe Coll Lib
 Charleston, S C Coll of Charleston Lib.
 Charleston, S C Citadel Lib
 Charlotte, N C. Johnson C Smith Univ. Lib
 Charlotte, N C Queens Coll Lib
 Charlottesville, Va Alderman Lib., Univ of Va
 Cheney, Wash Eastern Wash Coll of Education Lib.
 Chicago, Ill Central Y M C A Coll Lib , (19 S LaSalle St)
 Chicago, Ill. Herzl City Jr Coll Lib
 Chicago, Ill Newberry Lib
 Chicago, Ill Univ of Chicago Libraries, Periodical Dept
 Chicago, Ill. Woodrow Wilson Jr. Coll Lib.
 Chickasha, Okla Oklahoma Coll. for Women Lib.
 Chidambaram, South India Annamalai Univ. Lib
 Cincinnati, Ohio Univ. of Cincinnati Lib
 Claremont, Calif . Claremont Coll Lib.
 Claremont, Calif Pomona Coll Lib.
 Clermont-Ferrand, France Bibl. Nat et Univ. de Strasbourg
 Cleveland, Ohio Cleveland Public Lib
 Cleveland, Ohio. Sisters Coll of Cleveland Lib.
 Cleveland, Ohio. Western Reserve Univ. Lib.
 Clinton, Miss.. Mississippi Coll. Lib
 College Park, Md.: Univ. of Maryland Lib.
- College Place, Wash Walla Walla Coll Lib
 College Station, Tex A and M Coll Lib
 Colombo, Ceylon Ceylon Univ Lib
 Colorado Springs, Colo Coburn Lib , Colorado Coll.
 Columbia, Mo Univ of Missouri Lib.
 Columbia, S C Univ of So Car. Lib
 Columbus, Ohio Capital Univ Lib
 Columbus, Ohio. Ohio State Univ. Lib
 Commerce, Tex East Texas State Tchrs. Coll Lib
 Concepcion, Chile, S A Escuela de Educacion, Casilla 287
 Concord, N H New Hampshire State Lib.
 Crawfordsville, Ind Wabash Coll Lib
 Cullman, Ala Sacred Heart Academy
 Cullowhee, N C . Western Carolina Teachers Coll Lib.
- Dacca, India Univ of Dacca Lib., (Ramna P O)
 Dallas, Pa . Coll of Misericordia Lib.
 Dallas, Tex . Southern Methodist Univ. Lib
 Davenport, Iowa: St. Ambrose Coll Lib.
 Davidson, N. C Davidson Coll Lib.
 Decatur, Ga Carnegie Lib., Agnes Scott Coll
 Decorah, Iowa Luther Coll Lib
 DeKalb, Ill No. Ill. State Teachers Coll. Lib.
 DeLand, Fla : John B Stetson Univ Lib
 Delaware, Ohio: Slocum Lib , Ohio Wesleyan Univ.
 Denton, Tex. North Texas State Teachers Coll Lib.
 Denton, Tex Texas State Coll. for Women Lib.
 Denver, Colo.: Regis Coll. Lib.
 Denver, Colo.: Univ of Denver Lib.
 Detroit, Mich Mercy Coll Lib
 Detroit, Mich : The Public Lib
 Detroit, Mich. Wayne Univ Lib.
 Dubuque, Iowa Loras Coll. Lib.
 Durant, Okla . Southeastern Teachers Coll. Lib
 Durham, N. H : Univ. of New Hampshire Lib.
 Durham, N C . Duke Univ. Lib.
 Durham, N C N C Coll for Negroes Lib.
- East Lansing, Mich.: Michigan State Coll. Lib.
 Easton, Pa.. Lafayette Coll. Lib.
 Edmond, Okla.: Central State Teachers Coll. Lib.

- Edmondston, Alta, Can Univ. of Alberta Lib
 Elizabethtown, Pa Elizabethtown Coll Lib
 Ellensburg, Wash Central Washington Coll. of Education Lib
 Elmhurst, Ill Elmhurst Coll Lib
 El Paso, Tex Coll of Mines and Metallurgy Lib
 Emmitsburg, Md Mt St Mary Coll Lib
 Emory University, Ga Emory Univ Lib
 Emporia, Kans Kansas State Teachers Coll Lib
 Ettrick, Va Va State Coll for Negroes Lib
 Eugene, Ore Univ of Oregon Lib
 Eureka, Ill Eureka Coll Lib
 Evanston, Ill Northwestern Univ Lib
- Farmville, Va State Teachers Coll Lib
 Fayette, Mo Central Coll Lib
 Fayetteville, Ark Univ of Arkansas Lib
 Firenze, Italy Libreria Internazionale Le Monnier
 Florence, Ala State Teachers Coll Lib.
 Forest Grove, Ore Pacific Univ Lib
 Ft Valley, Ga Board of Regents, Ft Valley State Coll
 Frankfurt, a M, Germany Bibliothek fur neuere Sprachen und Musik
 Frankfort, Ky Ky State Industrial Coll Lib
 Fredericton, N. B Univ of New Brunswick Lib
 Fresno, Calif Fresno State Teachers Coll
- Gainesville, Fla Univ of Florida Lib
 Galesburg, Ill Knox Coll Lib
 Garden City, N Y. Adelphi Coll Lib
 Godfrey, Ill Monticello Coll Lib
 Goodwell, Okla Panhandle A & M Coll Lib
 Goose Creek, Tex Robert E Lee Jr. Coll Lib
 Gor'kij, U S S R Bib Ke Industr Ins Ta, Im. Zhdanova, Universitetskaja 24
 Grand Forks, N D Univ of North Dakota Lib
 Granville, Ohio Denison Univ Lib
 Greeneville, Tenn Tusculum Coll Lib
 Greensboro, N C. Bennett Coll for Women Lib.
 Greensboro, N. C North Carolina Coll for Women Lib
 Greenville, N C. East Carolina Teachers Coll Lib
 Greenville, S C. Furman Univ. Lib
 Gunnison, Colo. Western State Coll. Lib
- Halifax, Nova Scotia Dalhousie Coll Lib
 Hamilton, N Y Colgate Univ Lib
 Hammond, La Southeastern La Coll Lib
 Hampden Sydney, Va Hampden Sydney Coll Lib
 Hanover, N H Dartmouth Coll Lib
 Hattiesburg, Miss Miss Southern Coll Lib
 Hattiesburg, Miss State Teachers Coll Lib
 Hickory, N C Lenoir Rhyne Coll Lib
 Highland Falls, N Y Lib, Ladycliff-on-Hudson
 Hollins, Va Cocke Mem Lib, Hollins Coll
 Honolulu, Hawaii Univ of Hawaii Lib
 Houghton, N Y Houghton Coll Lib
 Houston, Tex Univ of Houston Lib
 Houston, Tex Wm Rice Institute Lib
 Huntington, W Va Marshall Coll Lib
- Ikebukuro, Tokyo-Fu, Japan St Paul's Univ Lib
 Indianapolis, Ind Butler Univ Lib
 Indianapolis, Ind Indiana Central Coll Lib
 Indianapolis, Ind, Indiana State Lib
 Institute, W Va W Va State Coll Lib
 Iowa City, Iowa State Univ. of Iowa Lib
 Ithaca, N Y Cornell Univ Lib
- Jacksonville, Ill Illinois Coll Lib
 Jacksonville, Ill Pfeiffer Lib, MacMurray Coll
 Jamaica, N Y Queens Borough Public Lib, Periodical Division (89-14 Parsons Blvd)
 Jefferson City, Mo Lincoln Univ Lib
 Jefferson City, Tenn Carson Newman Coll Lib
 Jena, Germany Universitätsbibliothek
 Jenkintown, Pa Beaver Coll Lib
 Johannesburg, S Africa Johannesburg Public Lib.
 Johannesburg, So Africa Univ of the Witwatersand Lib (Milner Park)
 Johnson City, Tenn State Teach Coll. Lib.
 Jonesboro, Ark Ark State Coll Lib
- Kalamazoo, Mich Mandelle Memorial Lib, Kalamazoo Coll
 Kalamazoo, Mich Western Mich Coll of Educa Lib
 Kazanj, U S S R. Nauchn Biblioteke T. R Pri Kgu Chernyshevskaja Ul. 16, Wo Dwore
 Kiating, Szechuan, via Kunming, Yunnan, China Nat'l Wu-Han Univ Lib
 Kiel, Germany: Englische Seminar der Universität

Kilgore, Tex Kilgore Coll Lib
 Kingston, Ont Queen's Univ Lib
 Kingston, R I R I State Coll Lib
 Kingsville, Tex Texas Coll of Arts and Industries Lib
 Knoxville, Tenn Univ of Tennessee Lib
 Koln-Lindenthal, Germany Universitäts- u Stadt-Bibliothek, Langemarckplatz
 Königsberg, Germany Universitätsbibliothek

Lacey, Wash St Martin's Coll Lib
 La Crosse, Wis State Teachers Coll Lib
 Lafayette, Ind Purdue Univ Lib
 Lafayette, La Southwestern La Inst Lib
 Lake Charles, La John McNeese Jr Coll Lib
 Lake Forest, Ill Barat Coll of the Sacred Heart Lib
 Lancaster, Pa Franklin and Marshall Coll Lib
 Lantien, Hunan, China Natl Teachers Coll Lib
 Laramie, Wyo Univ of Wyoming Lib
 Las Vegas, N M New Mexico Normal Univ Lib
 Lawrence, Kans Univ of Kansas Lib
 Leningrad, U S S R. Bib-ka Akademii Nauk, Birshewaja Linija No 1
 Leningrad, S S S R · 1 Len Gos Ped Inst Industr Jazykov Ul Smoljnogo 3
 Leningrad 21—U S S R Leningradsk Industrialn Institut Kabinet Inostran Jazykov Sosnovka 1/3 Glavn Zdanije Komn 149/151
 Lenox, Mass Librarian, Shadowbrook
 Lewisburg, Pa Carnegie Lib, Bucknell Univ
 Lexington, Ky Univ of Kentucky Lib
 Lexington, Va Washington and Lee Univ Lib
 Liberty, Mo William Jewell Coll Lib
 Lincoln, Neb Univ of Nebraska Lib
 Lindsborg, Kans Bethany Coll Lib
 Logan, Utah Utah State Agric Coll Lib
 London, N W 1, Eng Bedford Coll for Women (Regent's Park)
 London, Ont · Univ of Western Ontario Lib
 Long Branch, N J Monmouth Jr Coll Lib
 Los Angeles, Calif Geo Pepperdine Coll Lib, 1121 W 79 St
 Los Angeles, Calif Los Angeles City Coll. Lib
 Los Angeles, Calif Los Angeles Public Lib
 Los Angeles, Calif Loyola Univ Students' Lib, 7101 W 80th St

Los Angeles, Calif Univ of Southern California Lib
 Los Angeles, Calif Wm Andrews Clark Memorial Lib
 Loudonville, N Y Siena Coll Lib
 Louisville, Ky Univ of Louisville Lib
 Lubbock, Tex Texas Tech Coll Lib
 Lynchburg, Va · Randolph-Macon Woman's Coll Lib
 Lynchburg, Va Lynchburg Coll Lib
 Lyon (Rhône) France Bibliothèque, Univ de Lyon
 Macon, Ga Candler Memorial Lib, Wesleyan Coll
 Madison, N J Drew Univ Lib
 Madison, Wis Univ of Wisconsin Lib
 Manchester, England The John Rylands Memorial Lib
 Manchester, England Victoria Univ Lib
 Manila, P I Univ of the Philippines Lib
 Marburg, Germany Universitätsbibliothek
 Marquette, Mich Northern Mich Coll of Ed Lib
 Marshall, Mo Murrell Memorial Lib, Mo Valley Coll
 Mars Hill, N C Montague Lib, Mars Hill Coll.
 Maryville, Tenn Lamar Memorial Lib, Maryville Coll
 McKenzie, Tenn · Bethel Coll Lib
 Medford, Mass Tufts Coll Lib
 Memphis, Tenn Cossitt Lib
 Memphis, Tenn Lemoyne Coll Lib
 Memphis, Tenn State Teachers Coll Lib
 Middletown, Conn Wesleyan Univ Lib.
 Milan, Italy Biblioteca Nazionale di Brera
 Milledgeville, Ga Georgia State Coll for Women Lib
 Milligan College, Tenn · Milligan Coll Lib
 Milwaukee, Wis Chapman Memorial Lib, Milwaukee-Downer Coll
 Milwaukee, Wis Marquette Univ, Johnston Hall Lib, (1131 W Wisconsin Ave)
 Milwaukee, Wis State Teachers Coll Lib
 Minneapolis, Minn Augsburg Seminary Lib.
 Minneapolis, Minn. Minneapolis Athenaeum Lib
 Minneapolis, Minn Univ of Minnesota Lib
 Missoula, Mont Univ of Montana Lib
 Montclair, N J State Teachers Coll. Lib.
 Montgomery, Ala. Houghton Lib, Huntingdon Coll
 Monticello, Ark Ark A and M Coll Lib.
 Montréal, P Q, Canada McGill Univ Lib.
 Moorhead, Minn · Concordia Coll Lib.

- Moorhead, Minn. State Teachers Coll Lib
 Morehead, Ky Johnson Camden Lib, Morehead State Teachers Coll
 Morgantown, W Va · West Va Univ. Lib.
 Morristown, N J Morris Jr Coll. Lib.
 Moscow, Idaho Univ of Idaho Lib.
 Moscow, U S S R · Mezhdunarodnaja Kniga, Kuznetzkij Most 18
 Moscow, U S S R. All Union Higher Inst for Technical Ed, Kolpatschnij per 5
 Moscow, U S S R · Wsesojusnaya Biblioteka, imeni V. I. Lenina, Ul. Marxa I Engelsa, 14
 Moscow, 19, U S S R. Fundam Biblioteka, Oon Akademii Nauk, Ulica Frunze 11
 Moscow, 9, U S S R Gos Centr Biblioteka, Inostrannoj Literatury, Stoleschnikov per 2
 Moscow, 25, U S S R Ins-t Mirovoj Literatury Im. M Gorkjogo, Krasnaja Ploščadj, Zdanie Istorich Muzeja
 Munchen, Germany Bayerische Staats-Bibliothek
 München, Germany Universitätsbibliothek
 Muncie, Ind Ball State Teachers Coll Lib
 Murray, Ky. Murray St Tchrs Coll. Lib
 Nacogdoches, Tex · Stephen F Austin State Teachers Coll. Lib, Nanking, China Natl Central Univ Lib
 Nashville, Tenn. A. and I. State Teachers Coll Lib.
 Nashville, Tenn. Fisk Univ Lib
 Nashville, Tenn. George Peabody Coll for Teachers Lib.
 Nashville, Tenn. Joint Univ Lib
 Natchitoches, La : Louisiana State Normal Coll Lib
 Newark, N J Pub Lib
 New Brunswick, N J New Jersey Coll for Women Lib.
 New Brunswick, N J Rutgers Univ. Lib
 Newcastle-upon-Tyne, England Armstrong Coll Lib.
 Newcastle-upon-Tyne 2, Eng · The Lib, King's Coll.
 New Haven, Conn. · Yale Univ Lib
 New London, Conn : U. S. Coast Guard Acad. Lib.
 New Orleans, La Brescia Coll. Lib
 New Orleans, La · Dillard Univ. Lib.
 New Orleans, La : Howard-Tilton Mem Lib
 New Orleans, La.: Ursuline Coll. Lib.
 New Orleans, La. · Xavier Univ. Lib.
 New Rochelle, N. Y. · Coll. of New Rochelle Lib.
 New York, N. Y. · Brearley School Lib., 610 E. 83 St.
 New York, N Y · Columbia Univ Lib
 New York, N Y Cooper Union Lib
 New York, N. Y Editors' Lib, American Book Co., 88 Lexington Ave.
 New York, N Y. Fordham Univ Lib, 233 Bway
 New York, N Y.: Fordham Univ Lib, Graduate Dept.
 New York, N Y.: Hunter Coll Lib, (695 Park Ave)
 New York, N Y · New York Public Lib, (5th Ave and 42nd St)
 New York, N Y. Washington Sq. Lib., N Y. U
 Norman Okla, Univ of Oklahoma Lib
 Northfield, Minn. St. Olaf Coll Lib
 Notre Dame, Ind Notre Dame Univ. Lib
 Oakland, Calif Coll of the Holy Names Lib.
 Oberlin, Ohio · Oberlin Coll Lib
 Okmulgee, Okla Okmulgee Jr. Coll, 8th and Muskogee
 Olivet, Mich Olivet Coll Lib
 Omaha, Neb · Creighton Univ Lib.
 Omaha, Neb · Duchesne Coll Lib
 Omaha, Neb. Municipal Univ of Omaha Lib
 Orono, Me. · Univ of Maine Lib
 Oxford, Eng The Taylor Lib
 Panama City, Fla. · Bay County H S Lib
 Paris, France British Inst of Univ. of Paris
 Paris, France Institut de Littérature comparée, Faculté des Lettres de l'Université, rue de la Sorbonne Parkland, Wash. · Pacific Lutheran Coll Lib.
 Peiping, China National Univ of Peking Lib
 Philadelphia, Pa Free Lib (Logan Square)
 Philadelphia, Pa Temple Univ Lib.
 Philadelphia, Pa · Univ of Pennsylvania Lib.
 Pine Bluff, Ark · Arkansas State Coll Lib.
 Pineville, Ky Pineville City School
 Pittsburg, Kans. · Kansas State Teachers Coll., Porter Lib.
 Pittsburgh, Pa : Carnegie Free Lib of Allegheny
 Pittsburgh, Pa Carnegie Lib, Periodical Room, (4400 Forbes St)
 Pittsburgh, Pa · Duquesne Univ Lib
 Pittsburgh, Pa.: Mt. Mercy Coll. Lib.
 Pittsburgh, Pa Univ Lib, Cathedral of Learning
 Princeton, N. J : Princeton Univ Lib.
 Providence, R I · Brown Univ Lib.
 Providence, R. I : Providence Public Lib., (Washington St)

- Providence, R I R.I Coll of Education Lib Pullman, Wash State Coll of Wash Lib.
- Quincy, Ill Quincy Coll Lib
- Radford, Va State Teachers Coll Lib
Raleigh, N C No Car State Coll Lib
Rangoon Burma Univ Lib, (University Estate)
Rennes, France Bibliothèque de l'Université
Richmond, Ind Earlham Coll Lib
Richmond, Ky Eastern Ky State Teachers Coll Lib
Richmond, Va Richmond Professional Inst, Coll of William and Mary
Richmond, Va Univ of Richmond Lib
Richmond, Va Virginia Union Univ Lib
Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico Univ of Puerto Rico Lib
Ripon, Wis Lane Lib, Ripon Coll
Rochester, Minn Jr Coll Lib, Coffman School Bldg
Rochester, N. Y. Rush Rhees Lib, Univ of Rochester
Rock Island, Ill Denkmann Memorial Lib, Augustana Coll, and Theol Seminary
Rostov N/Donu, U S S R Nauchn. Biblioteka Rgu Ul Engeljsa 64
Ruston, La Louisiana Poly. Inst. Lib
- Sacramento, Calif. California State Lib.
St Bonaventure, N. Y St Bonaventure Coll. Lib.
St Francis, Wis St Clare Coll Lib
St Louis, Mo St Louis Public Lib
St. Louis, Mo Washington Univ Lib
St Paul, Minn. Coll of St Thomas Lib.
St Paul, Minn Hamline Univ. Lib
St. Paul, Minn. Public Lib.
St Petersburg, Fla St. Petersburg Jr. Coll Lib.
Salem, Ore Willamette Univ Lib
Salcm, Va Roanoke Coll Lib
Salt Lake City, Utah Univ. of Utah Lib.
San Antonio, Tex.: San Antonio Pub. Lib
San Antonio, Tex Trinity Univ Lib
San Bernardino, Calif San Bernardino Valley Union Jr. Coll Lib.
San Francisco, Calif Pub Lib.
San Francisco, Calif Univ. of San Francisco Lib
San Jose, Calif State Coll Lib.
Santa Barbara, Calif. Santa Barbara State Teachers Coll. Lib.
Saratoga Springs, N Y.. Skidmore Coll. Lib.
Saskatoon, Sask, Can. Univ of Saskatchewan Lib.
- Schenectady, N. Y.. Eng. Dept, Union Coll
Scranton, Pa Marywood Coll Lib
Searcy, Ark Harding Coll. Lib.
Seattle, Wash. Public Lib, Periodical Dept.
Seattle, Wash Seattle Coll Lib
Seattle, Wash Seattle Pacific Coll Lib
Seattle, Wash Univ of Washington Lib.
Selinsgrove, Pa Susquehanna Univ Lib
Sewanee, Tenn Univ of the South Lib
Shanghai, (Chenju), Chna. Natl Chr-Nan Univ Lib.
Shawnee, Okla Okla Baptist Univ Lib
Sheffield, Eng The Library, The University
Shreveport, La St. Vincent's Lib
Sofia, Bulgaria, Bibliothèque de l'Université
Southampton, Eng Univ Coll Lib
So Orange, N J. Marshall Lib, Seton Hall Coll
Spokane, Wash Gonzaga Univ Lib
Stanford Univ, Calif Stanford Univ Lib.
State College, Miss Miss State Coll Lib.
State College, Pa Penn. State Coll. Lib.
Staunton, Va Mary Baldwin Coll Lib
Stellenbosch, S Africa Univ Lib
Stephenville, Tex John Tarleton Agric Coll. Lib Stillwater, Okla Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical Coll Lib
Stockton, Calif Coll of the Pacific Lib
Storrs, Conn Univ of Connecticut Lib.
Sturgis, S D St Martins Acad. Lib
Swansea, England Univ. Coll. of Swansea, Singleton Park
Swarthmore, Pa Swarthmore Coll Lib
Sydney, Australia, Fisher Lib, Univ of Sydney
Sydney, New South Wales Public Lib
Syracuse, N Y Syracuse Univ. Lib.
- Tacoma, Wash Coll. of Puget Sound Lib
Taihoku, Formosa, Japan Taihoku Imperial Univ Lib.
Takoma Park, D C W M C Lib
Talladega, Ala Savery Lib, Talladega Coll.
Tallahassee, Fla Fla State Coll for Women Lib
Tampa, Fla Univ of Tampa Lib
Tarkio, Mo Tarkio Coll. Lib.
Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.. Pellissier Lib, Marymount Coll.
Terre Haute, Ind.: Indiana State Teachers Coll. Lib.
Tiffin, Ohio Heidelberg Coll Lib.
Tokyo, Japan Coll of Lit, Imperial Univ.
Toledo, Ohio. Toledo Pub. Lib.

- Toledo, Ohio Univ of the City of Toledo Lib (2801 W Bancroft St)
 Tomsk, U S S R Nauchn Bib Ke Pri Tomskom Gos Uni Te Im Kujbysheva Timirjazewskij Pr 3
 Torino, Italy Bibl Nazionale Universitaria
 Toronto, Can Univ of Toronto Lib
 Toronto, Ont, Can Victoria Univ Lib, (Queen's Park)
 Triplicane, Madras, India Univ Lib, Senate House
 Troy, N Y Julia Patton Lib, Russell Sage Coll
 Tsunyi, Kweichow, China (Via Haiphong). Univ Lib, Natl Univ of Chekiang
 Tucson, Ariz Univ of Arizona Lib
 Tulsa, Okla Univ of Tulsa Lib

 University, Ala Univ of Alabama Lib
 Univ, La Louisiana State Univ Lib
 University, Miss Univ of Mississippi Lib
 Upland, Ind Taylor Univ Lib
 Upper Montclair, N J State Teachers Coll. Lib

 Valdosta, Ga Emory Jr Coll Lib
 Valparaiso, Ind Valparaiso Univ Lib
 Vancouver, B C Univ of British Columbia Lib
 Venezia, Italy Biblioteca, R. Istituto Sup Economia o Commercio
 Vermillion, S D Univ. of South Dakota Lib
 Victoria, Australia Central Lib, Univ of Melbourne, Carlton N 3
 Voronezh, U S S R. Voronezhsk Gos Universitet, Fundament, Biblioteka, Universitetsk UI

 Waco, Tex Baylor Univ. Lib
 Walla Walla, Wash Whitman Coll Lib
 Warrensburg, Mo Central Mo State Teachers Coll Lib

 Washington, D C American Univ Lib
 Washington, D C Catholic Univ of America Lib
 Washington, D C Dunbarton College of Holy Cross Lib
 Washington, D C Folger Shakespeare Lib, (East Capital St)
 Washington, D C Geo Washington Univ Lib
 Washington, D C Howard Univ Lib
 Washington, Pa Washington and Jefferson Coll Lib
 Waterloo, Ont, Can Waterloo Coll Lib
 Waterville, Maine Colby Coll Lib
 Waukesha, Wis Carroll Coll Lib
 Wellesley, Mass Wellesley Coll Lib
 Wellington, W 1, New Zealand Victoria Univ Coll Lib
 West Los Angeles, Calif Univ of California at Los Angeles, (405 Hilgard Ave)
 Weston, Mass Weston Coll Lib
 White Plains, N Y Good Counsel Coll Lib.
 Whittier, Calif Whittier Coll Lib
 Wilberforce, Ohio Carnegie Lib, Wilberforce Univ.
 Williamsburg, Ky Cumberland Coll Lib
 Williamsburg, Va College of William and Mary Lib
 Williamstown, Mass Williams Coll Lib
 Willimantic, Conn State Teachers Coll Lib
 Wilmore, Ky Asbury Coll Lib
 Winnipeg, Man, Canada United Coll Lib
 Winnipeg, Canada Univ of Manitoba Lib
 Winooski Park, Vt St Michael's Coll Lib
 Winston-Salem, N C Salem Coll Lib
 Winter Park, Fla Rollins Coll Lib.
 Wollaston, Mass Eastern Nazarene Coll Lib
 Wooster, Ohio Coll of Wooster Lib
 Worcester, Mass : Clark Univ Lib
 Worcester, Mass . Holy Cross Coll Lib.